Norman Gale.—CRICKET SONGS. By NORMAN GALE. Crown 8vo. linen, 2s. 6d.

Also a Limited Edition on Hand-made Paper, demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

Also a Small Edition on Japanese Paper, demy 8vo. 31s.

[In the press.]

Mr. Gale's rural poems have made him widely popular, and this volume of spirited verse will win him a new reputation among the lovers of our national game.

METHUEN & CO. 36, Essex-street, W.C.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

KATHARINE LAUDERDALE. By F. Marion Crawford. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"A most admirable novel, excellent in style, flashing with humour, and full of the ripest and wisest reflections upon men and women."

CRITICISMS on CONTEMPORARY THOUGHT and THINKERS. A Series of Essays selected from the Spectator. By RICHARD HOLT HUTTON, M.A. (London), Fellow of University College, London. 2 vols. Globe 8vo. 10s.

READINGS on the INFERNO of DANTE, chiefly based on the Commentary of Benvenuto da Imola. By the Hon. WILLIAM WARREN VERNON, M.A. With an Introduction by the Rev. EDWARD MOORE, D.D. Hon.D.Litt., Dublin, Principal of St. Edmund Hall, Oxford. In 3 vols. crown 8vo. 30s.

* Uniform with 'READINGS on the PURGATORIO of DANTE,' by the same Author.

ENGLISH PROSE. Selections, with Critical Introductions by various Writers, and General Introductions to each Period. Edited by HENRY CRAIK. In 5 vols. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. each volume. Vol. II. THE SIXTEENTH CENTURY to the RESTORATION.

TIMES.—"Supplies a distinct want in the study of English literature."
SCOTSMAN.—"The book is alike admirable, whether as a text-book for educational purposes, or as a prose anthology in which a man will wish to turn for the sake of culture and good reading."

Previously published:—

Vol. I. The FOURTEENTH to the SIXTEENTH CENTURY.

MACMILLAN'S THREE-AND-SIXPENNY SERIES.—NEW VOLUME.

ADVENTURES in MASHONALAND. By Two Hospital

Nurses, ROSE BLENNERHASSETT and LUCY SLEEMAN. Third Thousand. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

SPECTATOR.—"Emphatically a book to be read."

TIMES.—"It will, we are convinced, be widely read, and widely enjoyed."

ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.—"The adventures and hardships of these two brave ladies are extremely fascinating reading."

The ACTS of the APOSTLES. A Course of Sermons. By the late FREDERICK DENISON MAURICE. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

SPEAKER.—"These sermons are marked in a conspicuous degree by high thinking and plain statement."

TIMES.—"A volume of sermons for which the memory of Maurice's unique personal influence ought to secure a cordial reception."

MODERN PLANE GEOMETRY. Being the Proofs of the

Theorems in the Syllabus of Modern Plane Geometry, issued by the Association for the Improvement of Geometrical Teaching. By G. RICHARDSON, M.A., Second Master of Winchester College, and A. S. RAMSAY, M.A., Mathematical Master of Fettes College, Edinburgh. Globe 8vo. 3s. 6d.

SCOTSMAN.—"It is simply and clearly expounded, and forms a valuable connecting tissue between the ordinary Euclid and the text-books of the higher geometry.... It deserves a hearty welcome, and will no doubt soon be widely in use."

A TREATISE on HYDROSTATICS. By Alfred George Greenhill,

F.R.S., Professor of Mathematics in the Artillery College, Woolwich. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

A MANUAL of MICROCHEMICAL ANALYSIS. By Prof. H.

BEHRENS, of the Polytechnic School in Delft, Holland. With an Introductory Chapter by Professor JOHN W. JUDD, F.R.S. With 54 illustrations drawn by the Author. Crown 8vo. 6s.

MATERIALS for the STUDY of VARIATION. Treated with Special regard to Discontinuity in the Origin of Species. By WILLIAM BATESON, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 8vo. 21s. net.

SCIENCE GOSHIP.—"The new work by Mr. Bateson, just issued by Messrs. Macmillan & Co., is a first instalment, and will undoubtedly stand as a way-mark on the path to investigation of the origin of species."

'BRITANNIA' PHYSICS NOTE BOOK, with Spaces for the Pupil's Drawings of Experiments. 4to. boards, 5s. net.

LECTURES MARITIMES. For the Use of Naval Cadets on board H.M.S. "Britannia." By LÉON DELBOS, M.A., Instructor in French, H.M.S. "Britannia." Globe 8vo. 2s. net.

ELEMENTARY COMMERCIAL CLASS-BOOKS.—NEW VOLUME.

INTRODUCTION to COMMERCIAL SPANISH. By Leon

DELBOS, M.A., Instructor H.M.S. "Britannia." Globe 8vo. 3s. 6d.

ELEMENTARY CLASSICS.—NEW VOLUMES. Fott 8vo. 1s. 6d. each volume.

The TWENTY-FOURTH BOOK of the ILIAD. Edited, with

Notes, Introduction, and Vocabulary, by WALTER LEAP, Litt.D., late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, and M. A. BAYFIELD, M.A., Head Master of Christ College, Brecon.

SELECTIONS from QUINTUS CURTIUS. Adapted for the Use of Beginners. With Vocabulary, Notes, and Exercises. Edited by F. COVERLEY SMITH, B.A., Assistant Master in the High School, Nottingham.

FOREIGN SCHOOL CLASSICS.—NEW VOLUME.

COLOMBA. By Prosper Merimee. Edited, with Introduction

and Notes, by G. E. FASNACHT. Fott 8vo. 2s.

ENGLISH CLASSICS.—NEW VOLUME.

COWPER.—The TASK, Book IV. With Introduction and Notes

by W. T. WEBB, M.A., late Professor of English Literature, Presidency College, Calcutta. Globe 8vo. sewed, 1s.

MACMILLAN & CO. London.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

SECOND EDITION NEXT WEEK.

2 vols. 8vo. 82s.

LETTERS OF HARRIET COUNTESS GRANVILLE.

1810-1845.

Edited by her Son,

The Hon. F. LEVESON GOWER.

Athenæum.—"A book that will, we hope, be widely and enthusiastically read.... We can only conclude as we began, by saying that these volumes are most delightful."

Daily Telegraph.—"Essentially chatty in its character, and full of diversified incidents.... The book is full of anecdotes and always lively. Lady Granville is an admirable raconteur."

Westminster Gazette.—"There are not many collections of letters which, for vivacity, humour, keen insight, and happy descriptive touches, could compare with those of Harriet Countess Granville."

Truth.—"The collection of letters of Lady Granville is certainly the most entertaining and important work of the kind which has appeared since the Greville Memoirs. The book is full of capital and quite new stories about celebrated people, and both volumes are most delightful reading."

Times.—"The interest of Lady Granville's letters is not so much historical and political as personal, familiar, and social. She had humour, wit, and a frank and sunny nature, a keen insight into character, and a quaint and original turn of expression, which give rare zest to her correspondence. The great society of two worlds passes before her, and she seems to sit at her desk and comment on it with unfailing good nature, good sense, and mother wit."

SHARPS and FLATS: a Complete Revelation of the Secrets of Cheating at Games of Chance and Skill. By JOHN NKVIL MASKELYNE, of the Egyptian Hall. With 63 Illustrations and Diagrams. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"A work of extraordinary interest and value.... Mr. Maskelyne supports his statements by curious and striking anecdotes drawn from the rich storehouse of his personal experience among 'clubmen' and frequenters of public gaming tables."—Daily Telegraph.

PARLIAMENTARY GOVERN-

MENT in the BRITISH COLONIES. By ALPHEUS TODD, LL.D. C.M.G. Second Edition. Edited by his Son. 8vo. 30s. net.

SELECTED POEMS of the EARL of LYTON (OWEN MEREDITH). Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

* The volume is uniform with the New Editions of 'Lodde' and 'The Wanderer' recently issued. Several Poems are included that have not been hitherto published, and the author's daughter, Lady Betty Balfour, contributes an Introduction which deals with her father's work as a poet.

The STRESS and STRAIN of

ELASTIC SOLIDS (An INTRODUCTION to the MATHEMATICAL THEORY of). By BENJAMIN WILLIAMSON, D.Sc. D.C.L. F.R.S., Fellow and Senior Tutor of Trinity College, Dublin. Crown 8vo. 5s.

PAPERS and NOTES on the GLACIAL GEOLOGY of GREAT BRITAIN and IRELAND. By the late HENRY CARVILL LEWIS, M.A. F.G.S., Professor of Mineralogy in the Academy of Natural Sciences, Philadelphia, and Professor of Geology in Haverford College, U.S.A. Edited from his unpublished MSS., with an Introduction, by HENRY W. CROSSKEY, LL.D. F.G.S. 8vo. 21s.

PSYCHOLOGY, DESCRIPTIVE

and EXPLANATORY: a Treatise of the Phenomena, Laws, and Development of Human Mental Life. By GEORGE TRUMBULL LADD, Professor of Philosophy in Yale University. 8vo. 21s.

VERBA VERBI DEI: the WORDS of OUR LORD and SAVIOUR JESUS CHRIST. Harmonized by the Author of 'Charles Loder.' With an Introduction on the Different Periods in Our Lord's Life on Earth. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.

New York: 15, East 16th-street.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

IN THE PRESS,

THE

LIFE of JOHN CHURCHILL, DUKE of MARLBOROUGH,

TO THE ACCESSION OF QUEEN ANNE.

By General Viscount WOLSELEY, K.P.

2 vols. demy 8vo. with Portraits and Plans.

NOW READY,

The SECOND EDITION of the PRIVATE LIFE of NAPOLEON.

From the French of ARTHUR LEVY.

By STEPHEN LOUIS SIMON.

3 vols. demy 8vo. 2s.

"These valuable volumes are in every way well turned out; all we regret is the want of space to do them fuller justice. They will be in every historical library."—Speaker.

NOW READY,

WOMEN OF LETTERS.

By GERTRUDE TOWNSHEND MAYER.

2 vols. crown 8vo. 3s.

"Full of delightful gossip and anecdotes about very charming people, we can recommend the volumes to those who have a fraction of leisure to bestow on forming agreeable acquaintance in past centuries."—Pall Mall Gazette.

NEW NOVELS AT EVERY LIBRARY.

READY NEXT WEEK, THOROUGH.

By MARY A. M. MARKS,

Author of 'Masters of the World,' 'Dr. Willoughby Smith,' &c.

3 vols. crown 8vo.

NOW READY,

THE ROMANCE OF SHERE MOTE.

By PERCY HULBURD,

Author of 'In Black and White,'

3 vols. crown 8vo.

"Imaginative and refreshingly original."—Morning Post.
"A story of singular ingenuity and power—an album, so to speak, of brilliant character-sketches, graphic word-pictures, and trenchant epigrams."—Daily Telegraph.

NOW READY,

THE DAUGHTER OF THE NEZ PERCES.

By ARTHUR PATTERSON,

Author of 'A Partner from the West,' &c.

3 vols. crown 8vo.

NOW READY,

EVE'S APPLE.

By M. DEANE.

2 vols. crown 8vo.

"The book teems with thrilling incident and vivid description."—Daily Telegraph.

"Most admirably written, the style has the grace and ease which comes of care and thought. The author has placed a fascinating personality in the thick of an interesting period; Vivienne de Noctambus is a triumph of artistic creation."—Daily Telegraph.

READY IMMEDIATELY.

A NEW NOVEL BY RHODA BROUGHTON. A BEGINNER.

By the AUTHOR of 'NANCY,' 'COMETH UP AS A FLOWER,' &c.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S PUBLICATIONS.

NEW EDITIONS, EACH PUBLISHED
AT 3s. 6d.

The LAST of the BUSHRANGERS:

An Account of the Capture of the Kelly Gang. By FRANCIS AUGUSTUS HARR, P.M., late Superintendent of Victorian Police. With Illustrations. Third Edition. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

BENCH and BAR: Reminiscences of

One of the Last of an Ancient Race. By Mr. SERJEANT ROBINSON. With Appendix and Portrait of the Author. Fourth Edition. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

UNDER THE SPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MAJESTY.

Now ready, 6th Edition. 1 vol. royal 8vo. with the Arms beautifully engraved. 5s. 6d. bound, gilt edges.

LODGE'S PEERAGE and BARONET-

AGE for 1894. Corrected by the NOBILITY.

NEW WORK BY JOHN CORDY JEAFFERSON.

Now ready, in 2 vols. crown 8vo. 7s.

A BOOK of RECOLLECTIONS. By JOHN CORDY JEAFFERSON, Author of 'A Book about Lawyers,' 'A Book about Doctors,' &c.

"The book is readable enough, and full of pleasant gossip about men of letters and other celebrities, great and small, whom Mr. Jeafferson has known."—Times.

NEW NOVELS.

ORCHARD DAMEREL. By Alan

BY ALBEN, Author of 'A Fellow of Trinity,' &c. 3 vols.

"Taken altogether, the work is the strongest that has come from the author's pen, and does not gain its strength by any abandonment of the peculiar refinement which characterizes this writer's books. It is a thoroughly enjoyable story."—Evening Standard.

JANET DELILLE. By E. N. Leigh

FRY, Author of 'A Scots Thistle,' &c. 3 vols.

"We like 'Janet Delille' as a novel, and so reader will find his time wasted in perusing it, which cannot be said of most novels."—Glasgow Herald.

IN CUPID'S COLLEGE. By Mabel

MART, Author of 'Two English Girls,' 'From Harvest to Haytime,' &c. 3 vols.

"The writing is always bright and pleasant, the discipline is natural and characteristic, and some of the situations are exceedingly pathetic. In 'Cupid's College' is well above the average novel in tone, in feeling, and in writing."—Literary World.

HETTY'S HERITAGE. By Noel

DENR, Author of 'The Aftermath,' 2 vols.

"Has an interesting and well-constructed plot, while the number of personages is wisely limited to that necessary for its development."—Morning Post.

THE WHITE AIGRETTE. By Vin

TEGMENT, Author of 'Cathedral Halls,' 'Wrong on Both Sides,' &c. 3 vols.

"The 'White Aigrette' should find favour with the old ideal hunter of circulating libraries, however, and to such a one, if she still exist, we commend it."—Athenaeum.

The PRICE of a PEARL. By Eleanor

HULBURD, Author of 'Through Another Man's Eyes,' &c. 3 vols.

"The story is very pleasantly told, for the author has the knack of presenting from the most trivial details of her scheme in language that is always refined and telling."—Daily Telegraph.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

Now ready, in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

TO RIGHT THE WRONG. By Edna

LYALL, Author of 'Domovna,' 'We Two,' &c.

NEW ADDITION TO HURST & BLACKETT'S
THREE-AND-SIXPENNY SERIES.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

SIR ANTHONY. By Adeline Ser-

GEANT, Author of 'Casper Brooker's Daughter,' &c.

Uniform, each in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

NOVELS BY EDNA LYALL.

DOMOVNA: a Modern Englishman.

WE TWO. | IN THE GOLDEN DAYS.

KNIGHT ERRANT. | WON BY WAITING.

A HARDY NOBSEMAN.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S NEW NOVEL.

At all the Libraries, in 3 vols. post 8vo.

MARCELLA.

By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD,

Author of 'Robert Elsmere,' 'The History of David Grieve,' &c.

From the TIMES.—"Mrs. Humphry Ward again thrusts her hand into the hot fire of living interests. Perhaps from this reason not a page is insipid. Everywhere is fresh, bright 'actuality'; everywhere are touches of intimacy with the world which she describes."

MARCELLA. By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD.

Mr. FRANKRICK GREENWOOD in the PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"No adequate account of the merits of this novel can be given in a column of newspaper criticism. It is (or seems to me) the best book that Mrs. Ward has yet written; admirable in point of style, abounding in knowledge of her theme, finely dramatic in many places, exhibiting everywhere a deep and kindly acquaintance with human nature."

MARCELLA. By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD.

From the DAILY CHRONICLE.—"Marcella" is a singularly noble and impressive story. The book is characterized by profound seriousness, by prevailing sanity, by noteworthy imaginative intensity, by not less noteworthy literary skill and finish."

MARCELLA. By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD.

From the STANDARD.—"Marcella" is a much better novel than its immediate predecessor. There are some passages in the book so fine that they would well bear detaching to stand alone, on the strength of their own intrinsic merit or beauty."

MARCELLA. By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD.

From the DAILY NEWS.—"Marcella" is a noteworthy book. Robert Elsmere was the new attitude of the conscience towards religious belief. "Marcella" is the same thing in relation to the neo-democratism of our day and of the century. It is a book that is instinct with purpose all through. It had to be done, and consistently with that obligation, stupendously well done it is."

MARCELLA. By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD.

From the MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.—"In a word, 'Marcella' is artistically, beyond all dispute, her best novel. Inasmuch, moreover, as this book directly concerns itself with themes and problems which at the present day have all but extinguished a general interest in any other kind of politics, while it seems to have borrowed its lines and colours straight from the boundless store of real life, we are safe in predicting for 'Marcella' a popularity which will both command and outlast the season of its first appearance."

MARCELLA. By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD.

From the DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"There is no lack of 'reality' in the problems which Mrs. Humphry Ward discusses in her latest novel. It is, above all, a study of socialistic problems. Her book abounds in pictures of English scenery, etched in with much choiceness of epithet and style, and instinct with the graphic power of a real artist."

MARCELLA. By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD.

From the GLOBE.—"Mrs. Ward's new story is, from the literary point of view, the best she has yet written. It is a very clever piece of work—ambitious in scheme and finished in treatment. There is much in it that is novel, bright, and stimulating, and in general it marks a step forward in artistic capacity."

MARCELLA.

By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD.

3 vols. post 8vo. At every Library.

London:

SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place.

SATURDAY, APRIL 7, 1894.

CONTENTS.

DR. JESSOPP'S MESSAGE ...	435
SELECTIONS FROM DR. HAKE'S POETRY ...	435
THE WRITINGS OF WASHINGTON ...	437
WYTHAM'S SCRAMBLES IN THE ALPS ...	439
NEW NOVELS (Benedito Forgot; Dust before the Wind; Eve's Apple; She Shall be Mine! Dave's Sweetheart; The Raiders; Jim B.; A Study in Colour; Le Maquis) ...	440-441
BOOKS ABOUT SCOTLAND ...	441
SHORT STORIES ...	442
SCHOOL-BOOKS ...	443
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS ...	443-444
A GRAVE BY THE SEA; THE VESSELS "TERRY" IN CHAUVIN; MISS COLLET; PROF. ROBERTSON SMITH; COURT FERRIS; THE EPULINE ANCESTRY OF WASHINGTON; SALE; MRS. W. PITT BYRNE ...	445-446
LITERARY Gossip ...	447
SCIENCE—THE DISCOVERY OF AUSTRALIA; CHEMICAL NOTES; SOCIETIES; MENTIONS; Gossip ...	448-449
FINE ARTS—ANGLO-SAXON COINS; NOTES FROM RUSSIA; Gossip ...	450-451
MUSIC—THE WEEK; SIR ROBERT STEWART, MUS.D.; Gossip; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK ...	452-453
DRAMA—THE WEEK; Gossip ...	453-454

LITERATURE

Random Roaming, and other Papers. By Augustus Jessopp, D.D. (Fisher Unwin.)

DR. JESSOPP has written on many subjects, and is always entertaining. When he writes on historical matters, he never fails to be instructive as well; but he is not always so when he forsakes the past and gives his views on subjects which are hotly debated at the present. His paper entitled 'A Scheme for Clergy Pensions' is a case in point. It is, of course, a well-written and thoughtful essay, but for any practical purpose it is of very slight value. Such a scheme as Dr. Jessopp advocates could not be enforced except by Act of Parliament, and it is inconceivable that a Bill embodying Dr. Jessopp's proposals could ever pass either house of Parliament. It may do indirect good, however, by drawing attention to the unhappy condition in which many of the clergy find themselves when old age approaches. The Wesleyans, and we believe several other religious bodies, have funds out of which pensions are given to aged or decayed ministers. This cannot be brought about, so far as the Anglican Church is concerned, while the parochial endowments are in law the freehold of the incumbent.

In 'Hill-Digging and Magic' the author is at his best, for he has chosen a curious and little explored subject, and the reader will rise from the perusal of this paper knowing much of which he was before ignorant. It must have been difficult in the Middle Ages for a man of limited means to take care of his savings. There were, it is true, the Lombard and Genoese bankers, who dealt with princes, nobles, bishops, and the abbots of the greater monasteries, and as time went on there arose the Siennese-Roman firm of Chigi, with its hundred branches, which in later times supplied a Pontiff to the Holy See, who bore the name of Alexander VII.; but of what service were these great luxury-loving people to the pedlar, the yeoman, or the small shopkeeper, whose gains came not in by pounds, angels, or marks, but in penny dribbles, with perhaps an odd groat of profit on a very successful venture? How was their money stored? In some cases we suspect that the churchwardens took care of it in the parish chest, though if put to the proof of what we say we should not be very ready with an answer; but it is quite certain that as years rolled on, and guilds sprang up in every village, they acted as bankers for the guild-men. But there must have been many persons who belonged to no guild, some because they were of loose life and such as no guild would enrol, others because they were not on good terms with the aldermen, or because they were landless folk who had no settled place of abode. It was dangerous to carry specie on the person in those days. There were many Robin Hoods abroad, who had no scruples as to robbing the poor as well as the rich. To the weak the only course that was open, if they could not deposit their coin in the hands of some trustworthy neighbour, was to bury it in the earth. This is the explanation of the numerous hoards of coins which have turned up from time to time from the thirteenth century to the present day. We, of course, refer, not to the Roman treasures, which were probably concealed under other circumstances, but to the coins which have been buried in Christian times. Dr. Jessopp mentions many of these treasure finds; we could add materially to their number. The great hoards of stycas which were found at Hexham and Ullerskelf must be in the memory of every student of Saxon numismatics; then, too, there was the great Tealby find of pennies of Henry II., which were turned up some eighty years ago by a ploughman who went a little deeper than those who had gone before him. It is not possible to speak with certainty, but it seems probable that these last had been hidden away under the mud floor of a house. Their owner had died without revealing his treasure, and so there they had remained for over six hundred years, to become the property of a lord of the manor when George III. was king.

The strange thing is that the search for these buried treasures became a regular business. Dr. Jessopp tells us that in 1521 Sir Robert Curson had a licence from Henry VIII. to search for hidden treasures throughout the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk. What manner of man he was we know not, but he engaged to help him three scoundrels, who used the powers with which their master had invested them to squeeze money out of unfortunate persons who had found treasure or who were reputed to have done so. We cannot follow these evil people through their strange career. Magic was mixed up with it so freely that had not the discipline of the Church been in a very relaxed condition, they would certainly have found themselves cited before the ecclesiastical court of the diocese.

Hill-digging seems to have been a regular part of the business of treasure seeking, and those who were engaged in this profitable employment were in the habit of associating with themselves the neighbouring ecclesiastics as well as certain still more dubious personalities, that is to say notable fiends. In one case quoted by the author these spirits bore the names of "Oberion," "Inchubus," and "Andrew Malchus." We do not know what view these unearthly sprites took of the matter, but there is no doubt that the priests knew quite well that if their magical practices came to the ears of the bishop they would incur all the terrors of excommunication. Everybody in those days believed in magic, but certain of the clergy seem to have been especially addicted to its practice. We hear of them in various quarters saying mass over waxen images, in the hope of causing the death of enemies the figures were meant to represent, and performing other parodies of religious rites which it is not pleasant to think of. Holy water was often used in these magical incantations. Dr. Jessopp asks how it was procured. It does not follow that in every case it was supplied by the parish priests. There is good reason for believing that in pre-Reformation times the churches stood open during the day-time, so that it might have easily been taken unobserved from the stoup near the door.

The hills which these people dug into in search for treasure were, of course, sepulchral barrows. Dr. Jessopp furnishes strong confirmation of this. "I do not remember," he says, "a single instance of a sepulchral mound in Norfolk having been opened in the memory of man which did not afford unmistakable proof of having been entered and disturbed at some previous time." Our own experience confirms this so far as wide districts in two other counties are concerned.

Was it the custom in the Middle Ages to erect crosses on barrows for the sake of sanctifying them? The Lincoln episcopal visitation books of 1527 seem to afford evidence that it was. Some people had a notion that there was 3,000*l.* in gold and silver buried in a hill beside a cross near Kettering. It was kept in two pots, and "a man sprite and a woman sprite dyd kepe the said ij pottes." We need not say that this great treasure was never found. If it was there, the sprites were successful in the discharge of their trust. John Bale, the scurrilous Bishop of Ossory, in his 'Latter Examination of Mistress Anne Askewe,' classes "cross-diggers" with witches, sorcerers, charmers, enchanterers, soothsayers, devil-raisers, dog-leeches, and such like.

The sketch of "a fourteenth century parson" is decidedly vivid, but it must not be taken as a type of what the ordinary rural clergyman was like. John de Gurnay, Rector of Harpley in Norfolk, was, it seems probable from the name, a member of a great feudal house; he certainly was far better provided with this world's goods than some of his neighbours. From what Dr. Jessopp tells his readers, it would seem that John de Gurnay spent his income with discretion.

The Poems of Thomas Gordon Hake. Selected, with a Prefatory Note, by Alice Meynell. (Mathews & Lane.)

A POET'S originality of conceiving and treating his subjects may do but little towards winning for him a popular acceptance. Indeed, a too plentiful endowment of originality may prove a serious obstacle to that acceptance, while, on the other hand, such endowments of commonplace qualities as he shares with his contemporaries may be the most important of all the factors of his success—providing, of course, that he possesses the power of garnishing these with a fringe of literary ornamentation such as his commonplace readers do not themselves command. The case of Mrs. Hemans in England and the case of Longfellow in America seem to be especially in point. Perhaps, also, the case of Lamartine in France might be added. And in our own day it is not true that one or two English poets who really enjoy a wide popularity are indebted for it to the fact that their commonplace writing is in harmony with the commonplace atmosphere around them? And yet, in the long run, originality must needs survive the commonplace. For the original mind, however much it may be out of harmony with the special variety of commonplace thought which for the moment dominates the world, does still represent the mind of man in one of its facets; and if this facet is really an important one, it may be the mirror in which is reflected some hitherto unopened vista that will one day widen out before the mysterious path of the whole human race. All literature, like all science, is in the deepest sense provisional. Even the literature of the Greeks, which seems to us of to-day so fresh and so abounding with life, may yet have the seeds of dissolution within it. Wheresoever the passions and emotions that now vitalize the poetry of Greece have sprung not from the absolute and eternal sanctions of nature, but from sanctions that, howsoever high, are really born of convention (as, for instance, in Antigone's concern about burial rites), time has already eaten into the core of the work, and will continue to do so. If, as seems likely, man's story as the ruler of this planet has but just begun—if the civilization of modern Europe is based upon the same ideas of hereditary honour and dishonour, of rights apart from duties, &c., as the civilizations of Egypt and of Greece were based upon—much of that which, even in the momentary flight of twenty-five hundred or of three thousand years, has become a little the worse for wear may in three million years become really antiquated. Love and hate, generosity and revenge, enjoyment of light, and dread of the dark mystery of death, will no doubt be treated by the poets and prosemen of the far future who will look back upon Homer, Shakspeare, Walter Scott, and Tennyson as poets of the same epoch. But then will not their attitude towards the great human passions be so different that 'Locksley Hall' and the Iliad will be classed together as literature more antiquated in its temper and more obsolete than the Chinese novel 'The Two Fair Cousins,' which aroused the admiration of Carlyle?

Let this, then, be the great, the one consolation for the unrecognized original writer stifled by the dusty atmosphere of commonplace which is the very breath of the nostrils of certain most prosperous bards, who shall be nameless here. The original outlook upon nature and man, which keeps some unsuccessful poet in the shade, may be nearer to that of the poet of three million years hence than was the outlook of even Shakspeare. It is all a lottery, of course; but the original poet has at least a chance, while the commonplace poet will, in even a century, be as forgotten as the industrious worms whose egotistical views of the final cause of the poet's body are so uncomplimentary.

We have been led into these remarks by turning over the pages of the beautiful little volume before us, consisting of selections (made by one who is herself a finer poet than is generally supposed) from the poems of a remarkable writer who, as regards popular acceptance, seems to have suffered heavily from an excess of originality. Whether his outlook upon the world of nature and of man approaches nearer to that of the bard of three million years hence than the outlook of his own contemporaries we will not presume to guess; but certainly his outlook has been too entirely his own to allow of his securing that sympathy which is easily secured by less original writers.

This originality of conception and of treatment is, perhaps, more clearly seen in 'Madeline,' published in 1871 (and reviewed by Rossetti in the Academy), than in any of the poems of a more manageable nature given by Mrs. Meynell. It is here that the fascinating phenomena connected with sleep and with dreams are more specially dealt with by a poet who is also a biologist of learning and special knowledge. 'Madeline' is almost built up of startling lines such as this, descriptive of a sleeper weeping in his trance:—

Whose tears corrode the armour of his sleep.

And this, descriptive of the victim of a somnambulism of a peculiar kind:—

Trailing her soul alongside as her shade.

The poem, however, was too closely packed with startling lines, and too difficult in many other ways, for the general reader's digestion. Among later narrative poems 'The Actress,' again, is full of such lines as Champing with bridled hate the bit of doom.

Take, again, the poem called 'Ecce Homo!' No poet of our time, or perhaps of any other, save Dr. Hake would have thought of treating the subject of Christ healing the blind man as it is treated here:—

Christ loved him and his anguish soothed.

He took his hand, He gently smoothed

The seams upon his wrinkled brow:

"Tell Me what thou beholdest now."

"Men, dim as shaking trees, I see:

O Lord, I crave to look on Thee!"

Then said the Saviour, "Look afar."

The blind man raised his dazzled eyes.

"I see, Lord, above Thee a new-risen star,—

And beneath it a babe in a manger lies.

Heavy men, kneeling, their gifts prefer:

Frankincense, gold, and sacred myrrh.

Now a mother, a father, a babe softly sleeping

By waters that dream where the lotus bloom reigns;

Shadows of evening over them creeping;

The broad moon breaking o'er palm-bearing plains.

Where the ibis croaks and the jackal cries,

And pyramids point to the purpling skies."

He pauses, still he looks afar.

He still beholds the guiding star,

And dreamlight of a sacred river

O'er his lone eyes seems still to quiver.

Sudden, as if the distant air

Stripped the blue curtain from the skies,

He sees prophetic nature bare,—

When, as with far-off voice, he cries—

"Lo! a face to heaven in agony gleaming,

Stained of sorrow, but soil-less of sin,

Sweat that is blood breaking and streaming

From brows that are throbbing of anguish within,—

Praying for those that do strip Him and scourge

Him

As a cross on His quivering shoulders they place.

'Neath its burden He sinks while they mock Him,

they urge Him,

They crown Him with thorns, they spit in His face.

They are lifting Him, bruising Him, piercing Him, nailing Him

To the cross, that is dyed in a crimson flood.

See, the sun hides his head, see the vapour cavell-ing him.

Hark, the earth and the skies in the darkness

bewailing Him

Who dieth for those that are shedding His blood."

He starts, a hand is on his brow.

He looks at Christ in meek surprise,

Tears gather in his new-lit eyes;

"Tis He, the crucified!" he cries:

"Yea, I behold the Saviour now!"

The adoring people kneel around;

The healed one sinks on the hallowed ground,

Then goes his way in silence and in awe;

For his unsettled eyes had seen

The sight that from the first had been,

The sight that nature like a prophet saw.

It may be safely said, however, that the startling originality of treatment here would not be likely to find acceptance with the general reader. The same remark applies to 'The Snake Charmer,' a poem in which man's relation—at once mysterious and fantastic—towards the lower animals, is handled with a still more striking originality of touch. An old Indian snake-charmer, feeling upon him the hand of death, wanders into the jungle to die beside the familiar pool where many a deadly serpent has yielded to the spell of his flute:—

Weeds wave with white-flowered lily crops

Drink of the pool, and serpents bide

To the thin brink as noonday drops,

And in the froth-daubed rushes lie.

There rests he now with fastened breath

'Neath a kind sun to bask in death.

The pool is bright with glossy dyes

And cast-up bubbles of decay:

A green death-leaven overlies

Its mottled scum, where shadows play

As the snake's hollow coil, fresh shed,

Rolls in the wind across its bed.

Here he begins to play upon his flute, but the charmer's breath has lost its magic:—

His eyes are swimming in the mist

That films the earth like serpent's breath;

And now—as if a serpent himsed—

The husky whisperings of Death

Fill ear and brain—he looks around—

Serpents seem matted o'er the ground.

While Music swims away in death

Man's spell is passing to his slaves:

The snake feels on the charmer's breath,

The vulture screams, the parrot raves,

The lone hyena laughs and howls,

The tiger from the jungle growls.

Then mounts the eagle—flame-flecked folds

Belt its proud plumes; a feather falls:

He hears the death-cry, he beholds

The king bird in the serpent's thralls,

He looks with terror on the feed,—

And the sun shines through dripping blood.

'The deadly spell a moment gone—

Birds, from a distant Paradise,

Strike the winged signal and have flown,

Trailing rich hues through azure skies:

The serpent falls; like demon wings

The far-out branching cedar swings.

The wood swims round; the pool and skies

Have met; the death-drops down that cheek

Fall faster; for the serpent's eyes

Grow human, and the charmer's seek.

A gaze like man's directs the dart

Which now is buried at his heart.

The monarch of the world is cold:

The charm he bore has passed away:

The serpent gathers up its fold

To wind about its human prey.

The red mouth darts a dizzy sting,

And clenches the eternal ring.

'Pythagoras,' too—a poem in which the master, aroused from one of his long sleeps, wakes with the dawn of Christianity, and sees, as he wrongly thinks, the golden day at last—is like the work of no other poet.

Mrs. Meynell has done well, however, to give some of the poems of simpler motive among the allegories we have been alluding to; chief among these is, perhaps, 'The Blind Boy,' the best known among all Dr. Hake's poems. Apart from its mere poetical beauties, this poem derives a special interest from the fact that it was suggested by the pathetic story of the blind poet Philip Bourke Marston and his sister—that story which has been so beautifully told in prose by his friends Mrs. Moulton, Mr. W. Sharp, and Mr. Coulson Kernahan. No poem of Dr. Hake's shows more clearly than this his power of rich word-painting. In descriptions of nature, indeed, Dr. Hake is decidedly strong. The scenery of 'The Cripple' is full of life, and the poem, in a much simpler key than common with Dr. Hake, is full of pathos. Another poem of the simpler kind which we are glad to find here is 'Reminiscence,' where will be found a faithful description of the old manor house at Kelmscott immortalized by Mr. William Morris in 'News from Nowhere.' It was in this delightful place that Rossetti wrote 'Rose Mary,' and painted some of his best pictures; and it was here that some of Dr. Hake's best poems were written. The scenery of 'The Lily of the Valley' is also enriched by personal association. It faithfully paints Lord Ripon's former seat, Nocton, even to the famous clump of nine trees:—

There like nine brethren, Nature's own,
Nine trees within a circle stand,
And to a temple's shape have grown,
Each trunk a column tall and grand.
And, there, a raven-oak uprears
Its dome that whitens with the years.

The story is very touching and new, telling of the granddaughter of an aged woodman who, from sheer accident, was left during illness to die from want in his remote cottage. The child, having been told that Elisha was fed by the ravens, sallies out in quest of such succour, and, wandering towards the mansion, is taken charge of by the lady.

The quaint allegory 'Old Souls' is, of course, given. So is 'The Painter.' But 'Michael Angelo' is not here. Nor has Mrs. Meynell inserted any of the sonnets upon nature worship in 'The New Day,' written in the poet's eighty-third year. In tone these sonnets are decidedly advanced—advanced, perhaps, beyond any of our contemporary poetry—nature worship, from the evolutionist's point of view, being offered as a substitute for all the creeds from the earliest times to our own. It is remarkable, indeed, that the "advanced" attitude towards nature and towards man in his relation to nature is taken up not by the youngest group of living poets, but by the eldest. Compared with such writing as we get in 'The Snake Charmer' and 'The New Day,' our younger poets seem more affined to the Georgian poets than to the strange new movement at the end of the nineteenth century. Is it that nothing but keeping abreast of the scientific intelligence of the time will nowadays enable the poet to move in the present wave of thought? If so, the work of the poet in the future will be arduous.

The Writings of George Washington. Collected and edited by Worthington Chauncey Ford. 14 vols. (Putnam's Sons.)

ATTENTION was recently called to a statement from America that the aged Col. Burges Ball, the nearest kinsman of George Washington, earns his living by keeping a fruit-stall in Washington City. Along with this news comes the final volume of Mr. Ford's work, containing 112 pages on the genealogy of the Washington family. Such a combination of democratic indifference to hereditary dignity with intellectual interest in an example of hereditary power is among George Washington's bequests to America. Writing to Bryan, Lord Fairfax, January 20th, 1799, the last year of his life, Washington says:—

"Lady Huntingdon, as you may have been told, was a correspondent of mine;—and did me the honor to claim me as a relation, but in what degree, or by what connexion it came to pass, she did not inform me, nor did I ever trouble her Ladyship with an enquiry—The favorable sentiments which others, you say, have been pleased to express respecting me, cannot but be pleasing to a mind who always walked on a straight line and endeavored as far as human frailties, and perhaps strong passions would enable him, to discharge the relative duties to his Maker and fellowmen, without seeking by any indirect or left handed attempts to acquire popularity."

This, one of the few references to his own character in Washington's writings, was elicited by bitter attacks on him for his Federalist sympathies, especially in his own Virginia. In fact, during the last five years of his life Washington was more popular in England than in America. But the vituperation, which he alone fully records, was silenced by death. From his grave arose the Washington of familiar legend: the general who never won a great battle took his place among the renowned heroes of history; the object of republican odium was extolled as the ideal president; his birth, his infancy, were woven into a mythology; his tomb became a place of pilgrimage. That the veil which long hid the real Washington has been lifted is mainly due to himself. In his letters and manuscripts—nearly four thousand of which, beginning with the great collection of Sparks (1834-7), have come to light—his personal history, and the history of his country during his time, are more faithfully recorded than by any historian or biographer. Washington has thus become, in an historical sense, a fresh subject. And despite the increasing evidence that he was neither saint, military genius, nor infallible president, interest in him has steadily increased, and the investigators of to-day are less concerned with Washington's personality than with his impersonality, so to say: many minds acted in and through him, many causes and tendencies; inasmuch that there is a certain truth in two lines of an epitaph written for him by Thomas Rickman:—

Nor will thy Shade this portraiture condemn,
That great events made thee, and not thou them.

The study of Washington's genealogy has also been pursued largely because of its historical importance. For the hundred and fifty years preceding Washington's death the course of events in America was influenced by his ancestors. His great-grandfather was among the early civilizers of Virginia, and helped to suppress the first rebellion (Bacon's Rebellion) just a century before George Washington became leader of a revolution. The President's father first opened up the iron industries of the colony, and his half-brother, Lawrence, promoted explorations in the West. Every discovery in Washington genealogy appears to have brought to light some interesting detail of English or of colonial history.

"Mr. Sparks," says Mr. Ford,

"printed in his collection of Washington's 'Writings' upwards of twenty-five hundred letters, apart from his journals and memoranda. I have increased the number of letters to more than three thousand, and draw more freely on the diaries, farm journals, and plans of campaigns and army organization."

As about seven hundred letters and documents printed by Sparks are omitted from Mr. Ford's volumes, it will be seen that these represent a very large addition to accessible Washington literature. "The difficulty," adds Mr. Ford,

"lay principally in making a proper selection from the wealth of material found; one that would preserve a proper balance between the public and private acts of the man, so displaying his character more fully than has been done."

We own to misgivings about this principle of selection, and would rather have all of the intrinsically interesting letters without reference to any display of the man's character. Moreover, there is a youth as well as a manhood to be considered. The traces of Washington's early career are meagre enough. The first twenty years of his life are, in Mr. Ford's volumes, represented only in drafts of two brief notes to young friends, and the diary of a survey on some land of Lord Fairfax, 1747-8. But why not the note to "Dear Sally," mentioned by Washington Irving, and the acrostic and other poetical effusions; and the notes of reading, one of which ("in the Spectator read to 143") suggests the supervision of Lord Fairfax, a contributor to the Spectator? And why omit a letter so full of biographical interest as that of May 5th, 1749, to his half-brother Lawrence? In this letter the condition of the widow Washington's family is revealed: her eldest stepson was in the House of Burgesses at Williamsburg; her own eldest son unable to visit him on business because his "Horse is in very poor order to undertake such a journey, and is in no likelihood of mending for want of Corn sufficient to support him." The widow's properties and neighbours, and the many family cares that had fallen on the youth's shoulders at the beginning of his eighteenth year, are mentioned in the letter, which might fitly appear at the beginning of the fifty years covered by Washington's correspondence. These omissions suggest a suspicion that in "the wealth of material found" may remain letters of personal interest that might well have been substituted for some of those printed. In vol. xiv. (1798-9) nearly two hundred pages are occupied with military details and appointments, in preparation for a war with France which never occurred.

Nevertheless, Mr. Ford's industry has gathered, and his courage published without manipulation, letters representing the soldier and President as he was, thus enabling the historical student to check the bias of biographers. Already old in experience, at the age of twenty-two Washington was thrust into command of an expedition by the death of its commander, and, after many hardships, protested for himself and his comrades against the superior rank accorded Englishmen, who held commissions from the Crown, over Americans who knew the country and did the hard work. After Braddock's defeat, writing (August 2nd, 1755) to his brother Augustine, a bourgeois, who desired his presence at the capital (Williamsburg), Washington excuses himself on account of illness, and adds (i. 178):—

"I am so little dispirited at what has happened, that I am always ready and always willing to render my country any service that I am capable of, but never upon the terms I have done; having suffered much in my private fortune, besides impairing one of the best constitutions. I was employed to go a journey in the winter (when, I believe, few or none would have undertaken it), and what did I get by it? My expenses borne! I then was appointed, with trifling pay, to conduct a handful of men to the Ohio. What did I get by this? Why, after putting myself to a considerable expense, in equipping and providing necessaries for the campaign, I went out; was soundly beaten, lost them all!—came in and had my commission taken from me, or in other words my command reduced, under pretence of an order from home! I then went a volunteer with General Braddock, and lost all my horses and many other things; but this being a voluntary act, I ought not to have mentioned this; nor should I have done it, was it not to show that I have been upon the losing order ever since I entered the service, which is now near two years. So that I think I can't be blamed, should I, if I leave my family again, endeavour to do it upon such terms as to prevent my suffering (to gain by it being the least of my expectation)."

Coming from a patient man, of conservative temperament, there is in this private letter to a brother a potential Declaration of Independence, especially in its scornful words, "under pretence of an order from home!" In this connexion we may mention a foot-note in which, speaking of the selection of Washington by Congress (1775) as commander, Mr. Ford says (ii. 477):—

"Washington, it is recorded by John Adams (i. 173), was attending the sessions of Congress in military uniform—blue and buff. Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society, January, 1859. This action was, as Mr. Charles Francis Adams suggests, an announcement that his mind was made up, and as it were, an unconscious nomination of himself for a command."

This is on several accounts a rather discouraging foot-note. John Adams says nothing about blue and buff, and mentions Washington's appearance "in his uniform" as indicating the prevalent military spirit; and Adams's editor, Mr. C. Francis Adams, while seeing in the dress "his mode of expressing his conviction that the time for another sort of action had arrived, and that he was ready to take part even in that," does not intimate that Washington aspired to the leading part. And how does Mr. Ford know that the uniform he wore in Congress was blue and buff? It may have been such, but in Peale's portrait (1772) Washington's uniform is blue and red. Thomas Paine, in a letter to Jefferson, says that blue and buff was Washington's "undress uniform." The paper read before the Massachusetts Historical Society shows that blue and buff was the uniform of Washington's Virginia Regiment in the colonial war of 1756. There is little doubt that he wore in the Congress the dress he was accustomed to wear in the Virginia House of Burgesses, and, although it is not proved that this was blue and buff, blue and buff was worn by Washington soon after he took command at Cambridge. But the significance assigned to it by Mr. Ford is preposterous—in the literal sense of this word, putting before what should come after. Because Washington and his army wore them, these colours were adopted by the Whigs in England (Bell's 'Canning,' p. 77), became the livery of the Edinburgh Review, and were affected by revolutionary Radicals in London. But the uniform was originally worn in Virginia in the king's service, and the notion that Washington's dress in Congress was the determining thing may be dismissed along with the equally unhistorical fancy that his coat of arms, bars and mullets, originated the United States flag. Mr. Ford's enigmatic phrase "unconscious nomination of himself" looks like a survival of the jealousy with which certain Northern officers regarded the appointment of the Virginian; but, however this may be, the suggestion is contrary to the unpretentious character of the man who on June 18th, three days after his appointment, writes to his wife:—

"You may believe me, my dear Patsy, when I assure you in the most solemn manner, that so far from seeking this appointment, I have used every endeavour in my power to avoid it, not only from my unwillingness to part from you and the family, but from a consciousness of its being a trust too great for my capacity, and that I would enjoy more real happiness with you at home than I have the most distant prospect of finding abroad, if my stay were to be seven times seven years."

A dislike of public station marked his career. To a proposal to make him king he answers (May 22nd, 1782):—

"I am much at a loss to conceive what part of my conduct could have given encouragement to an address which to me seems big with the greatest mischiefs that can befall my country."

On his way to inauguration as President he writes to a friend that he feels like a criminal going to execution; his longing for release from office is the burden of many a letter, and the Federalists, as the last hope of their party, vainly tried to draw him from his retirement for a tour through the country and a third presidential term. Nothing but the peril of a threatened invasion induced him to consent once more to leave his beloved Mount Vernon.

Although, owing to his widowed mother's poverty, Washington had received no classical education, like that acquired by his father and his half-brothers in England at Apploby, he was carefully trained in English composition. The terseness and clearness of his style are well known, and these volumes will enhance his reputation by showing the large variety of subjects he had mastered. In these letters, in which an idle sentence can hardly be found, he has without historical purpose written the fifty years of history he largely made, and an equally unconscious autobiography. Here are recorded his early love and his disappointment, his flirtations, his domestic and farming life, the experiences and hardships that formed his typical American patriotism. Amid the clash of local interests and sectional rivalries he is always the American. Where his country is in peril, his passionate patriotism is ready to sacrifice not only old friendships (as with Jefferson, Randolph, Monroe), but also popularity in his own state. Nay, here are letters concerning Burgoyne (vol. vi.) and Asgill (vol. x.), showing that this personally just and fearless man might be driven by apprehensions for his country's safety to sacrifice even strict justice. He urges Congress to evade virtually the conditions on which Burgoyne had surrendered, which it did; and Capt. Asgill, though protected by the terms of Cornwallis's capitulation, was in a fair way to be executed in requital for the lynching of Capt. Huddy, when France interfered, declaring its honour involved. Although Congress assumed responsibility for these things, it was obedient to the commander. Washington's letters make these facts clear, as well as the purely patriotic nature of the occasional blots in the public career of a man great enough to be studied, and not ignorantly adored as

A faultless monster which the world ne'er saw.

Mr. Ford follows Sparks in subjoining letters or documents referred to in the text. But Sparks's volumes were accompanied by a biography which might be referred to for explanation of the letters. A critical biography of Washington, could a competent hand be found, might well accompany these handsome volumes, which must take their rightful place as the standard collection of his writings. Unfortunately, Mr. Ford's historical information and critical sense are not equal to his industry, and have left in his useful compilation serious errors. We point out some that may be not beyond remedy.

In the genealogical portion (xiv. 318–431), along with several original documents, those discovered by Mr. Henry F. Waters are necessarily copied, and duly credited; but a laurel is taken from this genealogist. After saying that Mr. Waters "took as a starting point the letters of administration which had been granted in England on the goods of Lawrence Washington of Virginia," Mr. Ford adds in a foot-note: "Sir Isaac Heard knew of these letters." After the publication of Mr. Waters's pamphlet there was found among the papers of the late Col. Chester a note of the said administration which he had never divulged; but if Mr. Ford has discovered in America what had eluded Baker and Sparks in their exploration of Sir Isaac's papers, he should have sufficient appreciation of his startling discovery to support it.

Mr. Ford (xiv. 390) says:—

"In Ann Cotton's account of Bacon's Rebellion, she wrote [from Virginia] to Mr. C. H. of Yardly, Northamptonshire, of 'one Col. Washington, him whom you have sometimes seen at your house.' Force, 'Historical Tracts,' i. This reference is of interest as giving a clue to the locality in England of the Washingtons. Lodge, 'Life of Washington,' i. 31."

If, instead of following Lodge, Mr. Ford had examined Ann Cotton's letter, he would have found that her reference was to the house of "Mr. C. H." in Virginia.

It is charged against Col. John Washington, the emigrant, that he "was active in the treacherous slaughter of the Indian chiefs—an act condemned by Governor Berkeley" (xiv. 390). But in July, 1893, the William and Mary College Quarterly published original documents proving Col. John Washington's entire innocence. On the same page it is said of the emigrant's first wife, whose name has not come down to us, that she is "known" to have crossed the ocean, &c. Yet the same Quarterly printed in April, 1893, proof that Col. John Washington was in Virginia as early as 1656, his twenty-second year, and there appears no certainty that he did not find his first wife there. On the next page John is given as the emigrant's eldest son, although his father's will proves him second to Lawrence. This is rectified in the chart, where, however, the three surviving children are all ascribed to the second wife, born Ann Pope. Yet Col. John Washington, while this wife was living, bequeaths to his daughter Ann "her mother's rings," &c., "which was her mother's desire"; and a possibility that Lawrence was also a child by the first wife is suggested by his father's provision that his wife "should have the bringing up of my daughter Ann Washington until my son Lawrence comes to age," &c. Lawrence was then (1677) old enough to be appointed an executor with the wife.

Of General Washington's maternal grandmother, who before her marriage with Col. Ball was the widow Mary Johnson, it is said that she is "believed to have been a Miss Montague." The only reference is: "Ball, 'The Maternal Ancestry and Nearest of Kin of Washington.'" In this pamphlet (1885) Capt. Ball says: "In my MS. is a pencil interlineation, made nearly fifty years ago, of the name 'Montague,' without explanation or reference to authority." But this is adduced by her kinsman in evidence that she was an English lady; whereas Mr. Ford's vague statement is likely to impart renewed life to the claim of the Montagues in Virginia, where no trace of the birth or burial of any such person has been found. No Montague tradition was heard of in 1789 when, on the death of Washington's mother, Col. James Ball made diligent search for her genealogy, but learned only that her mother "was an Englishwoman." On the same page it is said that in 1734-5 Augustine Washington "removed to an estate on the Upper Potomac, and later to a plantation" now called Mount Vernon. Mr. Ford has substituted "Ventures" for the legal word Venters in Augustine Washington's will, but we do not believe that he can extract from it an allusion to any estate of his on the Upper Potomac except that now known as Mount Vernon.

Washington's father died April 12th, 1743, and Mr. Ford (xiv. 427) dispatches his son Augustine on the same date, though the youth lived many years after in the family mansion in Westmoreland.

A note (i. 125) derives all of the Hon. William Fairfax's children from his first wife, Sarah Walker, his second, Deborah (Gedney) Clarke, Washington's friend, mother of the eighth Lord Fairfax, being quite ignored.

Mr. Ford prints (ii. 95) a love letter written by Washington from a distant camp to Mrs. George William Fairfax, September 12th, 1758. The young colonel, not yet married, need be accused of nothing worse than a flirtation, but a serious look is gratuitously given to the affair by the footnote, meant, perhaps, to relieve it. Mrs. Fairfax, while Sally Cary, is here said, on the authority of Constance Cary Harrison, to have been the object of Washington's "early and passionate love." But Mr. Ford need only have studied the opening letters of his first volume to know that the Cary story is incredible. Sally Cary lived near Williamsburg, and there is no evidence that Washington had even seen that place before her marriage, December 17th, 1748, N.S. In that (his seventeenth) year he was engaged in distant surveys, and had neither the means nor the time to mingle in fashionable society at the capital. Further, any early love affair with Miss Cary is proved impossible by a note to "Dear Friend Robin," certainly written soon after the marriage in Williamsburg:—

"My place of residence is at present at his lordship's, where I might, was my heart disengaged, pass my time very pleasantly as there's a very agreeable young lady lives in the same house (Col. George Fairfax's wife's sister). But as that only adding fuel to fire it makes me the more uneasy, for by often and unavoidably being in company with her revives my former passion for your Lowland Beauty; whereas, was I to live more retired from young women, I might alleviate [sic] in some measure my sorrows by burying that chaste and troublesome passion in the grave of oblivion or eternal forgetfulness," &c.

Thus the new Mrs. Fairfax, "the object of his early and passionate love," is barely alluded to as the sister of an agreeable lady (Mary Cary), who, however, cannot supplant his early passion for the Lowland Beauty. Another letter (i. 9), if the dates be considered, fairly identifies this beauty as Betsy Fauntleroy. In this he states his purpose "to wait on Miss Betsy, in hopes of a revocation of the former cruel sentence, and see if I cannot obtain an alteration in my favour." The date is May 20th, 1752, immediately after his return from the voyage with his brother Lawrence, on which he had started September 28th, 1751. The "former cruel sentence" must, then, have been passed some time before, and both Washington and Mrs. Fairfax may be relieved of all suspicion of having resumed at Belvoir an early attachment.

In conclusion, it is necessary to warn the student of American political history that, while he will find Washington's part of this work invaluable, and Mr. Ford's annotations generally useful, the latter do not always represent known facts. For example, the most important event in Washington's second administration was the commercial treaty with England, the unconditional ratification of which was opposed by the Secretary of State, Randolph. Mr. Ford tells the story of the despatches of Fauchet, intercepted by a British cruiser, and sent to the English Minister at Philadelphia, by whom, he adds, they were handed to Mr. Wolcott, Secretary of the Treasury (xiii. 87). But Mr. Wolcott, in a letter to Randolph of October 2nd, 1795, disclaimed all knowledge of any despatches save the one used against Randolph. Mr. Ford prints (xiii. 146) a letter (December 22nd, 1795) of Washington to Hamilton concerning Randolph's 'Vindication,' in which he angrily pronounces false the ex-Secretary's assertion that he was known by the President to have originally opposed the grant to Jay of power to negotiate a commercial treaty with Great Britain. Yet this opinion of Randolph, dated May 6th, 1794, is of Cabinet record, and though forgotten by Washington should have been remembered by his editor. However, Mr. Ford's candour and his large collection of letters enable a careful reader to check the occasional prejudices in the editorial notes, and make this work Washington's truest memorial and noblest monument.

Scrambles in the Alps. By E. Whymper. (Murray.)

THIS beautiful volume, complete in every detail as artistic and technical knowledge and sedulous care can make it, is the third and most perfect edition of the narrative of his share in the conquest of the Alps, first published by Mr. Edward Whymper twenty-three years ago, and reissued in part fifteen years ago as 'The Ascent of the Matterhorn.'

The original title, retained in this edition, is not, perhaps, the happiest that could have been chosen. "Scrambles" will hardly convey to the reader, accustomed to the formless void of some similarly named Alpine narratives, a correct idea of the carefully planned explorations above the snow-level, or the still more careful excursions among the problems that meet the man who can think as well as climb, which are embedded between daring adventures, perils, and disasters in Mr. Whymper's pages.

In the original scheme of his book Mr. Whymper followed Saussure and Forbes rather than the fashion of the day. He was not afraid to be serious. His is a narrative of travel and adventure, interspersed with vivid descriptions of strange scenery, scientific disquisitions, and much excellent advice on matters of mountain craft. Of these discussions, none has done better service in its time—or is still more useful—than the elaborate and crushing criticism of the views put forward by some eminent geologists with regard to the extent of glacier erosion and the origin of lake basins and moraines.

The advice given to would-be mountaineers is more called for each year as the number of intruders on the High Alps increases. English climbers, having opened for Europe its noblest playground, have a duty to fulfil in doing their best to prevent the Alps being used as a cemetery by suicides. Our countrymen are not less daring or foolhardy than their neighbours, and if our Alpine death-roll has been comparatively low, some of the credit is undoubtedly due to the clear and consistent preaching of Mr. Leslie Stephen, Mr. Whymper, and other leading members of the Alpine Club.

The warnings involved in the story of the Matterhorn, as brought up to date here, have inevitably grown with years. The tragedy which forms the climax of this volume showed once for all the care essential in the selection of all the members of a mountaineering party. Subsequent disasters on the same peak have emphasized the fact that mountain-climbing is a warfare in which skill consists chiefly in "a capacity for taking pains," and safety depends in great part on the absence of over-confidence. One particular lesson to be drawn from these misfortunes is the urgent necessity for some simple and generally recognized system of signalling between men on the mountains and those below. Had any such system been in use the most painful of the Matterhorn calamities need not have happened. This is a matter on which the Alpine Clubs of Europe should come to a speedy agreement.

The volume as a whole is, of course, in no sense novel. We pass on, therefore, from these general reflections, suggested by its republishing, to point out the principal differences and additions to be found in the present edition. The text is substantially the same as in the first issue, but has in most respects been brought up to date by revision and foot-notes. It is unlikely, however, that the mountain explorers of the future will agree with Mr. Whympers absolute disparagement of crampons or climbing-irons; and the remarks (pp. 151-2) on the inns and paths of the Italian valleys of Monte Rosa are no longer applicable. They are, indeed, although endorsed by a foot-note, qualified by Mr. Whympers himself in his new preface. Roads have lately been made up Val de Lys, Val d'Ayas, and Val Tournanche, and in these valleys and at Alagna holiday-makers driven out of Zermatt by the railway and the cheap-trippers may find sufficient comfort without crowd, and society free from snobs, at any rate from the British variety.

Appendices have been added, giving accounts of the various disasters of which the Matterhorn has been the scene. The story of the heroic death of Jean Antoine Carrel—one of Mr. Whympers companions in the Andes—from exposure and over-exertion in leading his party down the Breil ridge of the Matterhorn in a terrible storm in 1890, deserved even greater prominence. It is a splendid example of the exercise of the qualities of reasoned courage and unselfish devotion which have made the names of some half a dozen Alpine guides almost household words, and have given to guides as a class a reputation unfortunately not always deserved. The list of the climbers of the Matterhorn before 1880 is a more questionable addition. It has not the humour of fantastic spelling-puzzles which attaches to the prehistoric records of Mont Blanc, nor is it absolutely complete—not, perhaps, that that much matters to the world. In one case, at least, we notice sex has not been distinguished.

In the matter of illustrations the new edition is far the most desirable. Its woodcuts, compared to those in the earlier issues, are as artists' proofs to common impressions. The Doré drawing which served as a frontispiece to 'The Ascent of the Matterhorn' disappears unregretted. In its place we find several novelties, amongst them miniature portraits of Charles Hudson, Lord Francis Douglas, and Bieh, of Val Tournanche, and an exquisite drawing of the Ecorins, which reminds us of some of the best of Mr. Ruskin's mountain work. The newly engraved maps also are good of their kind. The statement that the portion of the chain of Mont Blanc included in the Dufour map was represented with the fidelity and thoroughness that characterized that survey as a whole is, however, not strictly accurate. It was one of the least satisfactory parts of the survey, and considerable corrections have since been made by the Federal staff under Col. Siegfried.

It might not be difficult to make sundry other minute criticisms on the strength of recent researches in Dauphiné and elsewhere. But it seems more to the point to emphasize the distinctive merits of the book and to congratulate the author on the good example he has set in giving his best to the public, regardless of considerations of time and cost. The success which has attended his endeavour should be a satisfaction as much to book-lovers as to lovers of the mountains.

NEW NOVELS.

Benefits Forgot. By Wolcott Balotier. 3 vols. (Heinemann.)

It would appear ungenerous to criticize in any unkind spirit the faults of this novel, for they are chiefly faults which might, but for the author's untimely death, very possibly have been corrected before the book was finally sent to press. They are principally a want of compression in the incidents, and especially in the conversations—much, for example, is detailed in rather dull dialogues which might well have been narrated in a few words—and the mistake of making too many centres of interest; for at least three sets of people are pursuing different courses, and hardly ever are there two consecutive chapters about the same set, so that a certain amount of confusion is the result. To get the adverse criticism out of the way, it must be added that Dorothy, one of the heroines, is rather a failure; by her vacillation and her misplaced severity, she estranges the reader's sympathies so much that doubts suggest themselves whether she ever really loves Philip. But apart from these faults the story is one of great interest. The character of Deed, the father, is an excellent piece of work. His acute sensitiveness and suspicions of ingratitude even in his best friends, after discovering Jasper's act of treachery, seem quite consistent with the free and open nature of the man as he had appeared before, and make a dramatic contrast to the opening scene; and Margaret's tender sacrifice of her prejudices in order to soothe his smarting sense of wrong is charmingly described. On these two the story chiefly hinges, but Philip as the genial Philistine and Jasper as the law-abiding scoundrel are both good. A special word of praise, however, must be reserved for Vertner and his wife; they are certainly the most lovable people in the book, and theirs, perhaps, are the only conversations of which we should like more. Finally, the book has an added interest in affording an insight into the life of half-civilized cities in the new parts of the States.

Dust before the Wind. By May Crommelin. 2 vols. (Bliss, Sands & Foster.)

THE pace at which Stella Morice descends the easy slope herself, and the way in which she sweeps her male admirers with her into depths of moral turpitude from which they apparently never recover, at any rate leave the reader in no sort of doubt as to the judgment to be passed on any of the characters in 'Dust before the Wind.' The sheep and the goats are clearly distinguishable to the most unpractised eye, nor is there any backsliding from the paths of corruption when the "passionate middle-class" Mrs. Morice has begun to gallop down them after the corruptly aristocratic Lord Middlesex, and to drag Gordon Muir after her. It is impossible not to feel that both the virtues and the vices represented in Miss Crommelin's new story are of a conventional and stagey order, with little freshness or reality about them. Even the innocent young daughters whom Stella wisely leaves to the care of the virtuous Mary Dawson live in an Arcadia decorated with limelight and pasteboard rather than sunshine and natural greenery. The discovery about her lover which occasioned Pansy's death is one which is really worn threadbare on the French and English stage, and, like the complication of Craigdarrock's former passion for her mother, is a device for which there has never been much excuse—in this case, perhaps, even less than usual. The book is written with a care and skill worthy of better materials than those of which the story is composed.

Eve's Apple. By M. Deane. 2 vols. (Bentley & Son.)

'EVE'S APPLE' is a pretty enough story of French aristocrats and others in the time of the Revolution. A clever girl, belonging to an impoverished family in the Bourbonnais, wrote one of the "Black Butterflies" which amused Paris a hundred years ago. It was a satire on the Revolutionaries, and attracted the notice of the authorities, whose suspicions fell on the brother of the literary damsel. To save him she has to tell a lie; and then to save herself from Cayenne she has to marry a worthy Republican colonel, whom she treats barbarously, thereby telling another lie. It must be confessed that she had some excuse for both of them—it is on the Revolution that the blame must be laid. Those were days of rapid developments; the gallant colonel had pledged himself to Isabeau three days before he was allowed to save Vivienne from a terrible fate by making a good citizen of her. The subsequent history of Vivienne is chequered, not to say tragic. In any case the story is bold in incident, and just a little too intense. Miss Deane has listened to the voice of the modern charmer, and indulged somewhat in the study of documentary humanity. But her readers will end by thanking her for an interesting romance.

She Shall be Mine! By Frank Hudson. 2 vols. (Ward & Downey.)

MR. HUDSON'S story is bustling, full of movement, and superficial. There is love-making in it, and horsemanship, and a villain, and a fusion of mystery. It does not challenge the critic, who has only to say that it will amuse the idle hour, and that if it is not deep or wide in interest, it is not inept. The author allows Mr. Dolan to describe some passages in his mildly adventurous life; to cry, "Go it, ye gods!" when his lady-love affronts him; and to recite some verses built of fragments of Gray's 'Elegy,' which one of his friends acclaims as "really—very—very good." The drama works up at the close to a hydrophobic climax, which to be appreciated needs but to be read.

Dave's Sweetheart. By Mary Gaunt. 2 vols. (Arnold.)

EVEN the "advanced women" of to-day would probably be prepared to admit that a story of wild and lawless mining life in Australia is an experiment which few feminine novelists could carry through with success. The necessary opportunities for rivalry with Mr. Bret Harte and his Californian dramas in miniature do not often present themselves to writers of the other sex. Miss (or Mrs.) Gaunt has, nevertheless, acquitted herself very creditably in her tale of Sergeant Sella's mistaken marriage with a feeble and helpless girl, absorbed in her ill-requited passion for Dave Anderson, a ruffianly murderer. The story of their adventures, of "Black Anderson's" flight, and the manner in which Jenny came by her death through her misplaced devotion to him is told with plenty of spirit and in a sufficiently vivid manner. The writer is lacking in the quick movement and concentrated force which best suit with lurid pictures of camp life on the outskirts of civilization. She tells her tale somewhat lengthily and with unnecessary reiteration, but she succeeds in making it interesting, and in giving an air of great reality to strange scenes and personages unfamiliar to English citizens who dwell at home at ease.

The Raiders: being some Passages in the Life of John Faa, Lord and Earl of Little Egypt. By S. R. Crockett. (Fisher Unwin.)

'LORNA DOONE' is a pleasant memory, and 'The Raiders' recalls 'Lorna Doone.' A Galloway story of the second decade of last century, it is told in the first person by Patrick Heron, the young laird of Iale Rathan, and records how he saved from the hill-gipsies his love, that was to be his bride, May Mischief. There is less about gipsies in it than the sub-title suggests, and fortunately, for Mr. Crockett's knowledge of things of Egypt appears to be as slender as was Scott's. Gipsies marry over the tongue here, as in another recent Scottish novel; they never did so in reality. Nor, converted or unconverted, would John Faa ever have counselled gaujoes (non-gipsies) to "fire at the gipsies," and let the smugglers be. There is abundance, however (indeed superabundance), of incident, for there are two distinct sieges and two distinct rescues, in both cases one too many. The local colour is true, and the dialect excellent; the hero is likeable, and the heroine lovable; and two at least of the subsidiary characters, Sammie and Eppie Tameon, are better than anything in the 'Stickit Minister.' Mr. Crockett has made a distinct advance on those earlier sketches, as one who from taking kodak snap-shots should devote himself seriously to portraiture. Only why did he not take more pains? Then he might have avoided a whole host of petty but irritating anachronisms. A Grotna Green marriage (by a Scotch girl too!) before 1754 is a patent absurdity; and we doubt whether in Galloway in George I.'s reign staring eyes would be likened to "tea-dishes," or falseness to "a deal door painted mahogany." We are almost as dubious as to eau-de-Cologne, hair-powder, "dry socks," a bell-tent, a knowledge of the bread-fruit, or the widespread use of potatoes. Still, slips such as these are trivial compared with the heinous offence of interlarding what professes to be a plain eighteenth century narrative with modern words, modern phrases, modern word-painting—"donkey," "crescendo," "pathos," "spontaneity," "sense of humour," "a happy inspiration," to "volunteer information," "screamed stridently," "soft-palmed plaudits," the "morning star turning white in a violet sky," "a weird wild world," "a wild whirl of drifting whiteness," "a kind of Circe's Inferno," &c. Mr. Crockett would do well to make a clean sweep of these in his next edition, and at the same time he might delete a very ancient "Dean Ramsay" on p. 274.

Jim B. By F. S. Carow. (Methuen & Co.)

THE first impression given by this book is that it is a parody of the traditional young lady's novel; for the hero is one of those terrible young prigs who might have got a first and rowed in his college boat, if he had only chosen—one for whom "women cared a great deal; they made overtures to him in season and out of season.... It was not merely that he was a handsome man.... [but] he took no advantage"; moreover, "the violin answered with sobbing chromatics," and the heroine "was in a state of extreme nervous excitement, almost hysteria, which was not this time the result of wine, but rather of that other cup which is perhaps still more intoxicating, from which she had just drunk so deeply." Nevertheless, in spite of a painful luxuriance of language and a lamentable crudeness in the presentation of the hero, there is so much that is good in the idea of the story and in some of the characters, that all notion of 'Jim B.' being a parody is dispelled. The tragedy is well conceived, and would be still more effective if any sympathy could be felt for the hero; while the vain and giddy heroine and the easy-going curate, with his vague views of religion, are very well drawn. On the whole, it is certainly a book worth reading, for its faults are more a subject for laughter than offence, and it has serious merit as well.

A Study in Colour. By Alice Spinner. "Pseudonym Library." (Fisher Unwin.)

THE author of this little book says that the idea of it sprang from a wish expressed by a friend, who said, "How I wish I knew the daily life of this strange people! What are their wants and cares, their joys and sorrows?" And no higher praise can be given to this story than to say that it fulfils its purpose. Very little probably is known here about the Creole inhabitants of the English West Indies; but this account of incidents in the lives of Justina, the faithful nurse, and of her coloured friends is quite calculated to give Englishmen a sympathetic understanding of their strange views of morality and of their childlike freshness. If anything, perhaps the stage is a little too crowded for so short a story, and yet some of those who have least to do with the main story—such as the garrulous washerwoman and her niece Angelina and the ill-fated Elita—could ill be spared. The most touching and effective scene is that of Justina's grief at the death of the baby; and her words may be quoted as resuming in the best possible way the Creoles' most natural attitude in looking at their own condition of life:—

"'Miasus, dear Miasus,' she sobbed at last. 'God help us both, but I worse off dan you. You hab husband; you go home one day; you see de blessed little Massa gain in heaven: but what is dere for me? Yes, Miasus,' in response to some murmured words, 'I know all dat. I know dey say we go up dere wid you just the same, but do you really tink dat, Miasus? Can you ehen wish dat for true? No, Miasus, I scarce b'lieve dat. I know we all God's children, so dey tell us in church, an' so I b'lieve, but—our ways are not your ways, nor our thoughts your thoughts. De black and de white like de two banks of a river. You may trow bridge ober, but nobber, nebber make de two one. I lub you true, but oh my Massa, my own dear little Massa, you now in one ob de many mansions ob de Lord, but I love you, my tredger! for ebber. Chance I see you far off one day, but is it likely in de blessed heaven you need your poor ole nurse?'"

Childish as are the notions and the language with which this outburst of grief is expressed, it would hardly be possible to conceive an unselfishness of love more sublime than this of the poor black woman, whose hopes of heaven are not for herself, but in order once more to see her lost darling; and yet at the end of the book it seems quite natural that she should go and live as the mistress of an old Irishman, who pays her ten shillings a week.

Le Masque. Par Gilbert Augustin-Thierry. (Paris, Armand Colin & Co.)

'LE MASQUE' is supposed to be a study in "the occult," and contains a good deal of Isis-worship, laid in the Paris of to-day; but as the story is told partly by the lunatic hero and partly by his "mad-doctor," who is still less sane, the study is rather of insanity than of the unknowable and the unknown. The style is imitated from the ancients—or from M. Anatole France.

BOOKS ABOUT SCOTLAND.

MR. WILLIAM ROBBIE, the author of Aberdeen: its Traditions and History (Aberdeen, Wyllie), would have done wisely perhaps to withhold the information that, "commencing in 1398, the burgh records are practically complete down to the present day, and are contained in 118 folio volumes, averaging about 600 pages each, all carefully written and collated [?], comprehending the proceedings of the Town Council, as well as those of the Baillie and Guild Courts." For learning this, and remembering also the many excellent publications of the two Spalding Clubs, old and new, one reasonably looks for something better than a compilation from Thom, Kennedy, Wilson, and Robertson—for a rival to Maxwell's 'Old Dundee,' or to the volumes of the "Historic Towns" series. A mere compilation, however, the present work is avowedly, and as such it may not be judged by a very severe standard. Still, Mr. Robbie should hardly have written that "by this time [1542] Henry VIII. had become anxious to throw off his allegiance to Rome," or suggested that William and Mary were members of the house of Hanover. For Montrose he should have gone to Mr. Gardiner; and Mr. Moir, his own townsman, might have warned him off from Blind Harry. His list of alumni omits Dr. Arbuthnot, Lord Lovat, "Ossian" Macpherson, David Mallet, Lord Monboddo, Sir James Outram, and Archbishop Sharpe; and the visits to Aberdeen of Rob Roy, Dr. Johnson, and Burns might well have received a word. At the same time his pages offer much that is interesting—nothing more so than the story of Peter Williamson, who was one of six hundred children kidnapped by Aberdeen merchants during 1740-5, and sold for slaves in the American plantations. They were God-fearing men, presumably, those merchants, men of the Thomas Trumbull type in 'Redgauntlet'; yet it strikes one as marvellous that the thing should have been possible so recently and in a city of not 15,000 inhabitants. The quarantine regulations of the sixteenth century were vigorous, for "if any infected persons arrived by sea or land, or if any inhabitant received or harboured them, the men were adjudged to be hanged and the women to be drowned." In parting we must strip the "Brave City" of its boast that St. Machar's "is the only cathedral in the kingdom which is built of granite." That used to be true, but it is true no longer since the building of Truro Cathedral.

The Backfriars of Perth: the Chartulary and Papers of their House, edited by Dr. Robert Milne (Edinburgh, Douglas), is a goodly quarto, containing upwards of one hundred and fifty charters and other documents, of dates ranging from 1241 to 1619. The Dominican "house" at Perth was founded, as we learn from the excellent introduction, by Alexander II. in 1231. Edward I. of England received in its churchyard the homage of the burghesses of Perth (1291); Robert III., from a platform erected on its "Gylden Herbar," beheld the clan battle of the North Inch (1398); and within its walls was enacted the "King's Tragedy," the murder of James I. (1437). In 1543, while the brethren were engaged in divine service, their doors were broken in by a rabble, and "the great ketill with the mete" was taken off the kitchen fire, and paraded about the town; sixteen years later Knox first delivered his "idolrous sermon" in the old church of St. John, and the house of the "Freir's Predicatoris" shared the fate of the other monasteries. So completely was it razed to the foundations that it is impossible now to identify its site. But Dr. Milne has reared to it a fine memorial. Paradoxical though it may sound, the merit of his volume lies largely in the fact that the papers composing it have no great outstanding interest; with scarcely an exception they are mere business documents—grants of lands, precepts of sasine, charters of alienation, and the like. Still there is not one of them that does not in some way illustrate medieval life; and to the genealogist the careful index of a dozen double-column pages is simply invaluable.

THE capacity of "the men of the Mearns" is proverbial, but it has its proverbial limitations; and Mr. James Inglis, in his very lively and readable reminiscences of Forfarshire—Our Ain Folk (Edinburgh, Douglas)—is a little biassed by natural piety in his estimate of the celebrated Disruption, and the part taken therein by his excellent father and other worthy ministers. Still it is fair to say that the very noble personality, both moral and physical, which is affectionately commemorated in these pages, seems to have been far superior to personal bitterness, and no doubt there were in the Free Kirk ranks many pastors as generous and disinterested as the

Rev. Robert Inglis of Edzell. One can understand the impression produced on a lad by the touching scene of the service in the open air at the manse door, described by the elder Mr. Inglis with an eloquence which leaves no doubt of the source from which the present writer derives his powers of description. These are utilized in many good scenes of rustic life in "the glen," such as the blanket washing, a grand occasion for the "lads and lassies to convene," and in many happy sketches of the natural beauties of the brins of Angus. By the way, is not the name Carleoch really derived from the situation of the lochs in the car or bend of the mountain, or from their size, like Gairloch, short loch, and not from the char in their waters, as the writer seems to think? The book is also meritorious in its delineation of the features of rustic life, much rougher and more individual even forty years ago than now, in what is still a remote and primitive district. We are introduced of course to the dominie, the butt of many a joke on the part of certain rebellious scholars; to the village poet, who noted the "lowly paths of ordinar' ilka day experiences" with "an obscurant o'"; to good old dames, like her who was electrified to find that "the Scarlet wumman (a rael bad yin)" was "on the ran-dan yet"; and of course to the minister's man. As a son of the manse our author has much to say on sermons. To exemplify the prevalence of common forms in the pulpit, he mentions the remark of one old worshipper, who, complaining of her advancing infirmities, "said 'she could only manage to stand throwe the minister's long prayers,' by resting on one leg during one half of the compendious supplications, and changing to the other leg during the second half. 'She aye kenned fit the prayer wis half done, an fin the time cam' 'ae cheenge legs,' as she put it; 'for,' she continued, 'aye fin he comes to the 'ingetherin' o' the Gentiles' I just cheenge ma fit.'"

No church stories are more frequent than those which involve "the bedral." One of this genus was shocked by the insertion of a stained-glass window. He looked for some time at the operations of the glaziers:—

"The minister, seeing John thus intently gazing, turned to him and said, 'Well, John, what is your opinion of our new window?' 'Well, sir,' was the reply, 'in my opinion they might hae been content wi' the glass as God made it.'"

There are, of course, some anecdotes in this considerable collection which one has seen before, but many are both fresh and forcible. None please us better than that of the writer's farewell from his excellent mother:—

"It was in no spirit of reproach, but in genuine, unaffected, loving concern, that stopping at the top of Dundas Street, under the shade of an over-arching yew tree, placing her thin worn hands on my broad young shoulders, and kissing me—the last kiss for many weary years—she said: 'Weel, Jamie, fear God, an' tak care o' yer claes, an' there's nae fear but ye'll get on.'"

It is pleasant to think that "eident" mother lived to see her best hopes realized.

SHORT STORIES.

A Grey Romance. By Mrs. W. K. Clifford. And Stories by Frank R. Stockton, H. D. Traill, D. S. Meldrum, Gilbert Parker, Frederick Greenwood, W. Earl Hodgson, and Erskine Gower. (Allen & Co.)—It is a growing practice of publishers to designate a book of collected short stories by the name of that one of them which is from the pen of the most distinguished, or at all events, to use a less invidious adjective, the most popular, of the collaborating authors. In the case before us Mrs. W. K. Clifford's clever tale, 'A Grey Romance,' occupies the post of honour and furnishes the title; but it fills forty-five pages only of a volume containing some three hundred. We do not say that this is unfair, for the book frankly proclaims its collective character on its cover, and the other names are all, or nearly all, "good" ones on the literary stock exchange;

but the prominence given to Mrs. Clifford's work is, perhaps, calculated to beguile the unwary purchaser who has acquired a taste for the wares of the author of 'Aunt Anne.' Having said so much, and having noticed the unlucky accident of a change of type in 'The Candidate for West Drum,' we have little but praise for the collection. Mrs. Clifford's writings are always original, and alight as her present contribution is, the tragedy-comedy played by the unromantic middle-aged barrister and the mature but personable occupant of the flat upstairs reveals several of her well-known qualities. She has a positive passion for heroes who are dingy without and dyspeptic within, but she certainly succeeds in making them interesting, if not attractive. The déroulement of this little "drama in drab" is skilfully worked up to, and in spite of its sadness it brings with it, as was doubtless intended, a certain sense of relief. Mr. Traill's story, which rejoices in the infelicitous title of 'Two Proper Prides,' is in some respects the ablest thing in the book. The doomed man Maurice Gambier is a fine fellow, and has our fullest sympathy. We have seen better work of Mr. W. Earl Hodgson's than 'The Candidate for West Drum,' which is over-ambitious, and at the same time deficient in the pellucidity and directness that distinguish the really successful conte; but Mr. Gilbert Parker's well-named study of a Yankee millionaire's love affair, 'At the Sign of the Eagle,' is exceedingly happy. That oddly assorted couple of commercial luminaries, Mr. John Vandewater and Mr. Stephen Pride, are touched off with masterly discrimination, and everybody at Craiguie (except those who were in love with her themselves) must have been delighted when the fair Julia Raglan fell into the arms of her stalwart Transatlantic adorer. But for pure unadulterated farce give us Mr. Frank Stockton's deliciously droll story of 'The Watchmaker's Wife.' The reader is forced to laugh aloud as its impossible but irresistible incidents unfold themselves in all their grotesqueness before his mental vision. And then there is Crimrose, that lifelike presentation of a perfectly selfish man, who shows himself for what he is at the very outset of the tale, and whose cowardice and greediness serve as an excellent foil to the pluck and disinterestedness of his fellow voyager. We have no intention of entering into the details of Mr. Stockton's jeu d'esprit, but we will say this, that it is a real pleasure and refreshment in these deadly-lively days to come across a writer whose humour is so fresh, so sparkling, and so wholesome. Next in merit to Mr. Traill's story we should place 'Young Genius,' by Mr. Frederick Greenwood. It is a terrible picture, luridly, yet most delicately drawn. Mr. Meldrum's 'Comedy of Courtship' is a piece of "gude Scots" workmanship, with just sufficient colour and movement to make it acceptable to the untutored Southron. Of the last contribution to the volume, an Australian tale by Mr. Erskine Gower, the less said the better.

The Copperhead, and other Stories. By Harold Frederic. (Heinemann.)—The quality of the novels sent over here lately by American authors has so often been a just subject of complaint that it is with all the more pleasure that Mr. Frederic's excellent collection of war stories may be welcomed. Not only are the stories he tells worth telling in themselves, but they are told simply and directly, without unnecessary padding to show a love of culture or a cosmopolitan taste. The title story, which takes up two-thirds of the volume, relates the troubles of a sturdy anti-abolitionist farmer in an exclusively republican community. The type which he illustrates, of a man with a gruff and curly exterior concealing a warm heart, is perhaps fairly familiar to the novel-reader; but a well-drawn figure like Farmer Beech, however old-fashioned, is never displeasing, especially when he takes part in the well-chosen and exciting scenes narrated in 'The Copperhead.' The merit of this story consists very largely in its vivid picture of the way in which every other interest paled before the intense party bitterness generated by the Civil War, though even that did not extinguish the sense of fair play, so that the abolitionist pariah becomes almost a hero to his village after the dastardly attack made on him by a few insignificant loafers, and the story ends satisfactorily with marriage and reconciliation. Besides the central figure, some of the minor characters—like the Irishman Hurley and Benaiah Hagadorn, the impudent free-lance—are well described. Of the other stories, 'The War Widow,' with its unexpected ending of peace and good-fellowship, is the best. It is rather a defect in the machinery of the book that all the stories are narrated in the first person; for as the narrator is evidently a different person on each occasion, and his personality is well defined in every story, the futile attempt which the reader at first makes to reconcile the narrator's various appearances tends to confusion. However, this is only a defect because all the stories are printed in the same volume, and, at worst, is not a very grievous fault.

"Humour is not always humour," as Mr. F. N. Connell paradoxically remarks, perhaps not without a side-glance at his own production, In the Green Park; or, Half-Pay Deities (Henry & Co.). The strained effort at humour which is kept up throughout his book, though occasionally successful, is very wearisome from its mere persistence: puns and the form of wit termed παρὰ προσδοκίαν are Mr. Connell's chief stock-in-trade, and one really feels sometimes that if an opportunity for a pun or for saying the unexpected had been omitted it would have been a relief, and have almost appeared a new form of wit. The ground plan of the book is neither very novel nor very ingeniously worked out. The author meets the gods of heathen mythologies in a club-room overlooking Piccadilly; Mars is a guardaman, Æsculapius a doctor living in Harley Street, and so on; but the opportunity of rivaling Lucian is wasted in accounts of unmeaning horseplay and foolish jokes more appropriate to costers than to the gods of Olympus. But after all they are probably introduced only as connecting links for the stories which each tells in turn. Some of these have merit, the best being 'Bar One,' though why a story of an erring barmaid should have been told by Diana is a mystery. Mr. Connell's method cannot be better exemplified than by taking a passage, literally at random, from the many pages of patter which serve to him for conversation. The conversation has turned on the last end of critics:

"What do you think happens?"
 "There's no knowing," he said.
 "Perhaps they never die!"
 "Except paper," he coughed.
 "It's as plain as print," I cried.
 "Not their writing?" he said.
 "No. But what happens to them in retribution," I said.
 "Then you guess it?" he said.
 "I do," I said.

Their fate may be left to the reader to discover.

Celui qui vient. Par Georges de Peyrebrune. (Paris, Paul Ollendorff.)—"M. de Peyrebrune" writes the vile "new French," with the words in the most provokingly wrong places, and imitates Villiers de l'Isle Adam, but has talent, though it is not displayed in the tale which stands first in this volume and gives it a name. The story of a lady of the world, who puts on in a freak the clothes of a nun who had been killed through her devotion to duty, and finds that she has imbibed the spirit of self-sacrifice from this "shirt of Nessus," is told with a fine fancy, as are the 'Lost Dog' story, directed against vivisection, and that which describes the last night of an old couple of starving poor. The last story in the book, which illustrates love in old age, is beautiful.

Le Roman de Génerette. Par Gustave Gueviller. (Paris, Calmann Lévy.)—This volume of short stories differs from the one just noticed in being fit for young people; but with the exception of the first two stories it is certainly not worth notice, and the first of all, which gives its name to the collection, though pretty, is namby-pamby. The second story, evidently based on fact, and a fact probably not uncommon, relates, with perfect taste, the mutual affection which unites two old ladies, their becoming bedridden, and how they send messages by a common friend, who conceals the death of the first, and in receiving the last message of the survivor is begged by her to conceal her death from her friend. The tale redeems the volume, and entitles it to notice.

SCHOOL-BOOKS.

The Sixth Book of the Iliad. Edited, with Notes, Introduction, and Vocabulary, by Walter Leaf, Litt.D., and M. A. Bayfield, M.A. (Macmillan & Co.)—The excellent little introduction winds up with a prominent clerical error. We are told, "It [the digamma] was in fact lost in all words beginning with α, excepting the diphthong οί." Yet ἰν οἴκῳ, v. 15, shows that the diphthong of οἴ ought also to be excepted. On v. 38, οἱ ἐν τῷ γὰρ οἱ ἀνθρώποις.....ἰβήρνυ is annotated as "dative [ethic] of the pronoun," though οἱ, v. 15, and εἰ, v. 24, are not annotated or given in the index. And then ethic dative! When will editors learn the meaning of the term! In the vocabulary ἰβήρνυ is given, but nothing is said anywhere about the middle voice, v. 3; while πῶρες is omitted. Mr. Bayfield's work is, however, satisfactory on the whole, and it is a good idea to bring Mr. Leaf's work within the reach of young students.

Bell's English Classics.—Selections from Pope's Works. With Introduction and Notes by K. Deighton.—Milton's Paradise Regained. With Introduction and Notes by K. Deighton.—Burke's Letters on a Regicide Peace. Letters I. and II. With Introduction and Notes by H. G. Keene. (Bell & Sons.)—As satisfactory editions for school use of these classics are already to be had, it is difficult to see any necessity for these publications of Messrs. Bell. They show a good deal of care, but as a rule the texts are over-annotated. Schoolboys are not such blockheads as the editors suppose, nor is the copious information provided always quite exact. In a Roman triumph the captives did not march "behind the victorious general," as Mr. Deighton supposes; nor is Mr. Keene correct in saying that Frederick the Great was "attacked by the combined armies of France and Germany at Rostach." Seeing that his annotations are copious, Mr. Deighton might have pointed out the pronunciation of Rome in 'The Rape of the Lock'; but he pays little attention to Pope's peculiarities as a metricist, and he ignores the principle of making an author his own interpreter. For example, instead of inserting an otiose remark on the 'Essay on Criticism,' "Vida, an Italian writer of Latin poetry, but, says Warton, 'by no means the most celebrated poet that adorned the age of Leo X.' " he might have shown from 'The Rape of the Lock' and Pope's letters to Walsh that the poet had read Vida. Again, the professor's notes are disjointed. For instance, there is a note on ombre to l. 55 (156) of the first canto of 'The Rape of the Lock,' and another à propos of l. 27 of the third canto. Nor is it wise to insert in a school-book such a dubious statement as that Catharine of Braganza introduced ombre into England. Most likely the Cavaliers who took refuge in the Spanish Netherlands brought it back with them at the Restoration.

Pitt Press Series.—Colomba. By Prosper Mérimée. Edited by A. R. Ropes.—Louis XI. Tragédie par Casimir Delavigne. Edited by H. W. Eve.—Die Deutschen Heldenwagen. Von

Gotthold Klee. Edited by H. J. Wolstenholme. (Cambridge, University Press.)—These editions are all good, more especially Mr. Eve's, the only objection to which is that some of it is rather over the heads of schoolboys. But we doubt the wisdom of choosing 'Colomba' as a text for boys, which Mr. Ropes has been forced to abridge, and therefore spoil. Mr. Wolstenholme somewhat falls into the error of Messrs. Bell's editors. Surely an intelligent lad does not need to be told what a griffin is, or what "lances couched" means; nor are Mr. Wolstenholme's translations invariably quite what they should be. For instance, at p. 75 he abandons the emphasis of "tausend gegen tausend," which is borrowed from Kudrun.

Pitt Press Shakespeare for Schools: A Midsummer Night's Dream. With Introduction, Notes, Glossary, &c., by A. Wilson Verity. (Cambridge, University Press.)—The Warwick Shakespeare: The Tragedy of Hamlet. Edited by E. K. Chambers. (Blackie & Son.)—Why nearly every publisher should insist on issuing editions of Shakespeare's plays for schoolboys is a mystery we do not pretend to fathom. So many competing volumes are not needed, and certainly cannot pay. Mr. Verity's edition is an excellent piece of work, however, although it will not supersede Mr. Aldis Wright's. Mr. Chambers's is also a respectable performance, but is it wise to assume that boys are familiar with 'Robert Elsmere'?

Advanced Texts: Das Deutsche Ordenland Preussen. By H. von Treitschke. Edited by W. S. Lyon. (Rivington, Percival & Co.)—German Chronicles of War, from Archenholtz's Geschichte des Siebenjährigen Krieges. Edited by Franz Lange, Ph.D. (Sonnenschein & Co.)—For a German Herr von Treitschke writes a lively style, but we cannot think the history of the Teutonic Knights is a subject well suited to the British schoolboy, who does not know enough of mediæval history to understand it. Nor do we consider the battles of the Seven Years' War a much happier selection; and Dr. Lange unnecessarily confuses boys by his use of German forms, writing, for instance, the Duke of Lothringen instead of the Duke of Lorraine, and "Roman-German Empress." Nor are his historical notes accurate. The indecisive encounter at Sheriffmuir becomes "the crushing defeat at Dunlaine." Nor is "Dunlaine" a solitary misprint; in the same note occurs "Lord Marishal." Mr. Lyon's map, although it shows how the Hohenzollerns have grown great by perpetually robbing their neighbours, is a poor thing, not creditable to Messrs. Rivington, and a German publisher would be ashamed of it.

The Elements of German. By F. H. Weisse. (Williams & Norgate.)—This is a sensible little book, and will help the British schoolboy in acquiring the difficult art of writing German; but instead of supplying words at the foot of the exercises, the compiler should have collected them in a vocabulary at the end of the volume.

German through English: Grammatical Readings. By A. Sonnenschein. (Sonnenschein & Co.)—This is as practical a help to the learning of the terrible German language as we have seen of late. Mr. Sonnenschein has wisely tried to teach the beginner to commence reading at once, and to pick up the necessary grammatical information as he goes along. This is quite feasible with intelligent pupils, but Mr. Sonnenschein would have been wise to content himself with a less copious vocabulary. Fewer words more frequently repeated would have facilitated the use of this volume.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

In Recollections of a Long Life (Hodder & Stoughton) the Rev. Dr. Stoughton gives a succinct account of his work as a Nonconformist minister, but tells more about the notable men with whom he was acquainted and the religious and social movements in which he took part than about himself. His first "call" was to Windsor, where he was ordained in 1833, long enough ago to be present at the funeral of William IV. and the Queen's coronation and wedding. His ten years' residence in the neighbourhood of the Court may have made him to some extent a courtier, and during the thirty-two later years of his ministrations in Kensington he enjoyed much more intimacy with fashionable people and Church dignitaries than was within reach of most other Dissenters. His tolerance of other creeds, however, in no way weakened his loyalty to the one in which he had been trained, and doubtless increased his useful influence as a pastor, while it favoured his intercourse with men like Dean Stanley, Dean Hook, Bishop Magee, and Archbishop Tait. About these, especially the first, and also about the late Earl of Shaftesbury, Lord Ebury, and many others famous in the religious world, his book contains interesting reminiscences, which, however, do not add much to our knowledge of their characters. The book is more simply written than the 'Ecclesiastical History of England,' in several large volumes, that is Dr. Stoughton's chief contribution to literature, and it affords welcome evidence of the kindly spirit in which, in his eighty-seventh year, he looks back on old friendships and on associations of which he is one of a very few survivors.

CANON BEECHY, the founder of Rossall School, has printed privately a pretty little volume about The Rise and Progress of Rossall School, in view of the jubilee of the school. Having regard to the title, there is certainly an unconscionable amount about the sayings and doings of the writer and his sons—about, for instance, the white satin testimonial which he gave the Queen when she visited Fleetwood, and his repartees to an admiral; still some complacency is perhaps, under the circumstances, excusable, as Canon Beechey seems to have done a great deal to promote the undoubted success of Rossall. The chief events in the history of the school, which appears to have been singularly uneventful, are detailed, and the author expresses his candid opinion on the different head masters who have governed it. Photographs of the founder, of the head master, and of the school contribute to the pleasant appearance of the volume, which is only marred by Mr. Beechey's frequent and erratic use of italics.

We have received two shilling handbooks to the Local Government Act: one entitled The Local Government Act of 1894: Ward, Lock & Bowden's Practical Guide to the Parish Councils Act, by Messrs. A. H. Graham and Spencer Brodhurst, and one published by Messrs. Routledge & Sons, and called A Handbook to the Local Government Act, 1894, by Messrs. Portland Akerman and Percy Ford. Both are accurate and well done, the first named one having the disadvantage of a bad title (for "Parish Councils Act" is neither the name of the Act nor descriptive of the greater portion of its contents), and the advantage of giving somewhat fully the portions of other Acts which are incorporated by reference—a thing which is much asked for by the uninstructed.

M. PAUL OLLENDORFF, of Paris, publishes a second series of Mon Séjour aux Tuileries, by the Comtesse Stéphanie de Tascher de la Pagerie, which is a very honestly written account of the Imperial Court between 1859 and 1865. It is not a particularly interesting book, though readable enough. The account of the death of the King of Westphalia, the last surviving brother of Napoleon the Great—which can be confirmed by the personal recollection of the writer of the present notice, who knew him—throws curious light on the relations of Prince Napoleon (the King's son) and the Emperor. The King, being paralyzed after a stroke, was attended by the Archbishop of Paris, at the Emperor's wish, for dynastic reasons, Prince Napoleon protesting that his father was not in a state of mind which made him a free agent, and the result was that the Prince refused to be present at his father's death-bed. The account of the marriage, and afterwards of the death, of the Duc de Morny is a little cruel to the widow, who survives. But in no other point can we say that Madame Tascher de la Pagerie has exceeded those rules which she has evidently laid down as proper for the writer of such a work.

MESSRS. HIRSCHFELD BROTHERS have sent a New English and French Vocabulary, by MM. Lallemand and Ludwig, which is likely to be found useful.

We cannot agree with Mr. Lang's admiration of The Betrothed, of which the Border edition has been sent us by Mr. Nimmo. To our thinking it is one of the poorest of the Waverley Novels. Nor are we great admirers of The Talisman, which accompanies it. It has much of the vivacity of 'Ivanhoe,' but in every other respect is far inferior. The designs of Mr. Paget and M. Le Blant err on the side of exaggeration, but they are clever. Mr. Hay has contributed some creditable illustrations to the excellent Dryburgh edition of Redgauntlet, which Messrs. A. & C. Black have forwarded to us.

The English Catalogue of Books for 1893 (Sampson Low & Co.) is a welcome compilation, all the more welcome since the type has been made larger.

We have received the first volume of the Victorian Year-Book, edited by Mr. Hayter, the Government Statist, and published by the Government Printing Office at Melbourne. The work is as good as usual, but there are no new features introduced this year, so far as we can discover.

MR. BLACKMORE'S Brema has been reprinted by Messrs. Sampson Low & Co. in one neat volume; and the same firm have produced in a similar form Mary Marston, by Dr. G. Mac Donald.—Mr. Francillon's clever story A Dog and his Shadow has been included by Messrs. Chatto & Windus in their "Piccadilly Novels."

We have on our table A Handbook for the Clergy, by the Rev. T. A. Blyth, D.D. (Parker).—Betterment, Worsenment, and Recruitment, by A. A. Baumann (Stanford).—The Golden Transvaal, by H. Longland (Simpkin).—Royalty at Home, by D. Grant (Virtue).—Modern Plane Geometry, by G. Richardson and A. S. Ramsay (Macmillan).—Sound, by C. L. Barnes (Nisbet).—Elementary Course of Practical Science, by H. Gordon, Part I. (Macmillan).—Modern Shafting and Gearing, by M. P. Bale (Rider).—Poverty's Resources, by T. Stock (Edinburgh, Turnbull & Spears).—Pain, Pleasure, and Aesthetics, by H. R. Marshall (Macmillan).—Tree Pruning, by A. Den Carr, translated by C. S. Sargent (Rider).—Catalogue of the Collection of Fans and Fan-Leaves in the British Museum, compiled by L. Cust (Longmans).—Body and Soul, or the Method of Economy, by F. W. Bain (Parker).—An Enquiry concerning the Human Understanding, and an Enquiry concerning the Principles of Morals, by D. Hume, edited, with an Introduction, by L. A. Selby-Bigge (Oxford, Clarendon Press).—Customs and Fashions in Old New England, by A. M. Earle (Nutt).—The Mineral Resources of Western Australia, by A. F. Calvert (Phillip).—Under a Spell, by E. Gay (Jarrold).—Doctor Jack's Wife, by St. George Rathborne (Aldine Publishing Co.).—The Telephone, by W. H. Stackpoole (Bristol, Arrowsmith).—Love, Marriage, and Happiness, by Isidore (Digby & Long).—A Dream and a Forgetting, by F. Graham (Digby & Long).—St. Festa, by T. R. E. S. (Southern Publishing Co.).—Addresses to Working Men, by S. R. Hole (Arnold).—Phillips Brooks Addresses, with Introduction by Rev. J. H. Ward (Dickinson).—Fishers of Men, by E. White (Macmillan).—Wesen und Zweck der Politik, by G.

Rakenhofer, 3 vols. (Williams & Norgate).—Monada, by G. Mourey (Paris, Ollendorff).—Némésis, by J. Mairet (Paris, Ollendorff).—Strange Fortune, by P. Cunisset (Paris, Ollendorff).—La Cendry, by F. Vanderm (Paris, Ollendorff).—and Enigma sans Clef, by Madame Urbain Ratazzi (Paris, Ollendorff). Among New Editions we have Outlines of the English Constitution based on Hallam and Fischer, by J. S. Laurie (Laurie).—American Notes, by G. Combe (Caesell).—A Manual of Geography, edited by T. Page (Moffatt & Paige).—Micro-Organisms and Fermentation, by A. Jørgensen, translated by A. K. Miller (Lyons).—A Handy Book of the Church of England, by the Rev. E. L. Cutts, D.D. (S.P.C.K.).—The New Testament in the Original Greek, edited by the late F. H. A. Scrivener (Cambridge, University Press).—Lessons on Confirmation, by the Rev. P. Young (S.P.C.K.).—Adirondack Readings, by E. S. Cressner (Buffalo, N.Y., Moulton).—and The Golden Lake, by W. C. Dawe (Marsden). Also the following Pamphlets: The Absolute Participle in Middle and Modern English, by C. H. Ross (Baltimore, the Modern Language Association of America).—Telling Off and Posting, a Picquet, by Lieut. G. D'Arcy-Evans (Gale & Polden).—The Chemistry of Ransom, by the Hon. William Vernon (Kegan Paul).—The Flora of Kent, by A. D. Webster (Bromley, Strong).—Catch Questions in Infantry Drill, by Lieut. G. D'Arcy-Evans (Gale & Polden).—The Origin of the Lord's Supper, a Historical Enquiry, by P. Gardner (Macmillan).—The Local Government Act, 1894 (Rogers).—and A Franconian City, Hohenburg ob der Tauber (Nutt).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Herford's (B.) Sermons of Courage and Cheer, cr. 8vo. 5/6 cl.
Miller's (R. E.) The Building of Character, cr. 8vo. 3/6
Present-Day Theology, Vol. 12, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Thomson's (H. M.) The Nicene Creed Catechetically Explained, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Upton's (C. B.) Lectures on the Basis of Religious Belief, 10/6
Lanc.

Uttley's (T. F.) How to become a Solicitor, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

Williamson's (G. C.) The Money of the Bible, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.

Poetry and the Drama.

Brookman's (L.) Poems, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Brooks's (C.) The Wanderer in the Land of Cyth, and other Poems, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
Ogilvie's (G. S.) Hypatia, a Play in Four Acts, 3/6 net, cl.
Ramsley's (H. D.) Lyrics and Lyrics of the Nile, cr. 8vo. 3/6
Viking's (E.) Songs of the Cascades, 12mo. 6/ cl.

Bibliography.

Collins's (V.) Attempt at a Catalogue of the Library of the late Prince L. L. Buonaparte, 4to. 31/ net, awd.

History and Biography.

Addy's (S. O.) The Hall of Waltham, or the Early Condition and Settlement of Hants, 4to. 30/ net, cl.
Graham's (G. C.) Santa Teresa, her Life and Times, 2 vols. 8vo. 3/ cl.
Skelton's (J.) Maitland of Lethington and the Scotland of Mary Stuart, a History, 3 vols. 25/ net, cl.

Geography and Travel.

Round the World with the Union Jack, illus. cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Youngusband's (G. J.) On Short Leave to Japan, cr. 8vo. 4/

Philology.

Guliet's (F. P. G.) Discours sur l'Histoire de la Révolution d'Angleterre, edited by H. W. Wye, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Klee's (G.) Die Deutschen Heldensagen, literally translated by Prof. S. Mendel, 12mo. 2/6 awd.

Science.

Dryers's (T.) The Student's Assistant to Practical Cotton-Spinning, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Cottage Gardening, edited by W. Robinson, illustrated, Vol. 3, 4to. 2/6 cl.
Kille's (H.) Man and Woman, a Study of Human Secondary Sexual Character, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Fuller's (J.) Art of Copper-smithing, roy. 8vo. 12/6 cl.
Herman's (O. B.) Difficult Labour, a Guide for Students and Practitioners, cr. 8vo. 12/6 cl.
Hornby's (J.) The Gas Engineer's Laboratory Handbook, 6/ Huxley's (T. H.) Man's Place in Nature, and other Anthropological Essays, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Loney's (S. L.) Plane Trigonometry, Part 2, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Lydekker's (R.) Life and Rock Essays, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Michelet's (J.) The Insect: The Bird: The Bird World, royal 8vo. 6/ each, cl.
Michelet's (J.) Nature, royal 8vo. 6/ cl.
Miller's (J. A.) An Outline of Qualitative Analysis, 7/6 cl.
Reagan's (H. C.) Locomotive Mechanism and Engineering, cr. 8vo. 10/ cl.
Sewer's (J. C.) Osteography, a Natural History of Jaw Materials and Drugs used in Dentistry, Second Series, 15/ Scott's (D. H.) An Introduction to Structural Botany, 3/6 cl.

General Literature.

Allison's (R. O.) Public Baths and Washhouses, 8vo. 6s. cl.
Bon-Mots of Samuel Foote and Theodore Hook, edited by W. Jerrold, 32mo. 2s. net, cl.
Century Magazine, Vol. 25, cr. 8vo. 6s. cl.
Crabbe's (Lieut. C.) Wrinkles in Seamanship, cr. 8vo. 3s. 6d.
Dickens's (M. A.) A Valiant Ignorance, a Novel, 3 vols. 31s.
Hooking's (J.) The Monk of Mar-Saba, cr. 8vo. 3s. 6d.
Hungerford's (Mrs.) Nora Creina, 12mo. 2s. 6d.
Kennard's (Mrs. H.) Just Like a Woman, cr. 8vo. 2s. 6d.
Littlejohn's (J.) England against the World, cr. 8vo. 6s. cl.
Lorrell's (R.) James Gilmour and his Boys, cr. 8vo. 2s. 6d.
Lyall's (H.) To Right the Wrong, cr. 8vo. 6s. cl.
Norris's (W. R.) St. Ann's, a Novel, 2 vols. cr. 8vo. 21s. cl.
Noelle's (R. E.) His Troublesome Sister, cr. 8vo. 6s. cl.
St. Nicholas, Vol. 1, 1894, sm. 4to 8s. cl.
Sklonia the Sorceress, trans. by Lady Wilde, 2 vols. 8s. 6d. cl.
Sperry's (L. B.) Confidential Talks with Young Men, 3s. 6d.
Thomson's (B.) South Sea Yarns, cr. 8vo. 6s. cl.
Veitch's (F. F.) Margaret Drummond, Millionaire, 6s. cl.
Waring's (P.) Tales of Australian Early Days, cr. 8vo. 2s. 6d.
Woman at Home (The), illus. roy. 8vo. 5s. cl.
York's (C.) Between the Silences, and other Stories, 2s. 6d. cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Bachmann (J.): Alttestamentliche Untersuchungen, Vol. 1, 4m.

Archæology.

Herberdy (R.): Die Reisen des Pausanias in Griechenland, 10m.

Kekulé (R.): R. weibliche Gewandstatue aus der Werkstatt der Parthenonplastikern, 10m.

Drama.

Dugès (F.): Théâtre complet, Vol. 10, 3r. 80.

Bibliography.

Warncke (F.): Bücherzeichen des XV. u. XVI. Jahrh., 6m.

History and Biography.

Côte (É.): Madame Sans-Gêne et les Femmes Soldats (1793-1815), 3fr. 50.

Franklin (A.): La Vie privée d'antiquaires: Variétés chirurgicales, 3fr. 50.

Irmser (G.): Hans Georg von Arnim, 6m.

Jastrow (J.): Deutsche Geschichte im Zeitalter der Hohenstaufen, Part 2, 1m.

Philology.

Aly (F.): Geschichte d. röm. Littérature, 7m.

Winckler (H.): Altorientalische Forschungen, Part 2, 6m.

Science.

Buschan (G.): Die Bredow'sche Krankheit, 6m.

Pinet (G.): Histoire de l'École Polytechnique, 24fr.

Roule (L.): L'Embryologie comparée, 32fr.

General Literature.

Bac (F.): La Femme intime, 3fr.

Chapron (P.): Une Reine prison, 3fr. 50.

Dubois (P.): Le Péri anarchiste, 3fr. 50.

Glinzky (P.): La Vie, 3fr. 50.

Lepeletier (H.): Madame Sans-Gêne, 3fr. 50.

Saint-Maurice (R.): L'Inutile Pêché, 3fr. 50.

Salee (P.): L'Écuyère, 3fr. 50.

A GRAVE BY THE SEA.

I.

YON stricken poet whom thou leav'st behind,
Sightless and trembling like a storm-struck tree,
Above the grave he feels but cannot see,
Save with the vision Sorrow lends the mind,
Is he indeed the loneliest of mankind?
Ah no! For all his sobs, he seems to me
Less lonely standing there, and nearer thee,
Than I—less lonely, nearer—standing blind!

Free from the day, and piercing Life's disguise
That needs must partly enveil true heart from heart,
His inner eyes may see thee as thou art
In Memory's land—see thee beneath the skies
Lit by that forehead—those beloved eyes,
While I stand by him in a world apart.

II.

I stand like her who on the glittering Rhine
Saw that sweet swan which drew a faery boat
Where shone a knight whose radiant forehead smote
Her soul with light and made her blue eyes shine
For many a day with sights that seemed divine, Till that false swan returned and arched his throat
In pride, and called him, and she saw him float
Adown the stream: I stand like her and pine.

I stand like her, for she, and only she,
Might know my loneliness for want of thee.
Light swam into her life, she asked not whence, Filled it with joy that Chance nor Fate could smother,
And then, departing like a vision thence,
Left her more lonely than the blind, my brother.

III.

Last night Death whispered: "Death is but the name

Man gives the Power which lends him life and light,

And then, returning past the coast of night,
Takes what it lent to shores from whence it came."

What balm in knowing the dark doth but reclaim
The sun it lent if day hath taken flight?

Art thou not vanished—vanished from my sight—
Though somewhere shining, vanished all the same?

With nature dumb, save for the billows' moan,
Engirt by men I love, yet desolate—

Standing with brothers here, yet dazed and lone,
King'd by my sorrow, made by grief so great

That man's voice murmurs like an insect's drone—
What balm, I ask, in knowing that Death is fate?

IV.

Last night Death whispered: "Life's purblind procession,

Flickering with blazon of the human story—
Time's fen-flame over Death's dark territory—

Will leave no trail, no sign of Life's aggression.
Yon moon that lights the paces, the stars in session,

Are weak as Man they mock with fleeting glory.

Since Life is only Death's frail feodatory,
No love can hold of Fate in true possession."

"If Friendship's loveliest tale of bloom and palm
Is but a vision, every flower and leaf,

Can knowledge of its mockery soothe and calm
The soul," I said, "in such a fiery grief?

If Love but holds of Life through Death in fief, What balm in knowing that Love is Death's—what balm?"

V.

That Skeleton I answered thus—even I
Who have for boon—who have for deathless

dower—
Thy love, dear friend, which broods, a magic power,

Filling with music earth and sea and sky:

"O Death," I said, "not Love, but thou shalt die;
For, this I know, though thine is now the hour,

And thine these angry clouds of doom that lour,
Death striking Love but strikes to delfy."

Yet while I spoke I sighed in loneliness,
For strange seemed Man, and Life seemed com-fortless,

And night, whom we two loved, seemed strange and dumb;

And, waiting till the dawn the promised sign,

I watched—I listened for that voice of thine, Though Reason said: "Nor voice nor face can come." THEODORE WATTS.

Easter-tide, 1882.

THE VERB "TERVE" IN CHAUCER.

WITH regard to Chaucer's use of the old English verb "terve," does not Prof. Skeat's letter suggest the idea that both the noun and verb "turf" are derived from that word? Surely he can have lived in the eastern or south-eastern counties without hearing labourers speak of "turving up" a piece of ground, or cutting up "turves"—for so they pronounce it—i.e., stripping and rolling up layers of rooted grass, precisely in the sense indicated by your correspondent. These men have, for the most part, learnt the word only from oral tradition, and have no more knowledge of modern spelling than had Chaucer himself. F. B.

MISS COLLET.

SOPHIA DORSON COLLET, who died at her house in Highbury Park, March 27th, was born in London, 1822. In early life she was associated with Eliza Flower and Sarah Flower Adams in the musical services of South Place Chapel, under the ministry of W. J. Fox, M.P., her brother Mr. C. D. Collet being the musical director. She composed some of the music still used by that society. Becoming interested in religious and philosophical subjects, she published, in 1855, a small work entitled 'George Jacob Holyoake and Modern Atheism: a Biographical and Critical Essay,' which was reprinted in America. This was followed in 1860 by 'Phases of Atheism, Described, Examined, and Answered.' For many years Miss Collet was a literary representative and interpreter of religious movements in India. She was editor of 'The Brahma Year-Book,' and author of 'Indian Theism and its Relation to Christianity' (1870). In 1870 she edited, with a valuable introduction, four lectures given by Keshub Chunder Sen in England, and in the following year an account of his English visit. She also wrote for the 'Encyclopædia Britannica' the article on Rammohun Roy, of whom she has left an unfinished biography. The complicated physical troubles of which she was a most patient and cheerful victim throughout life prevented any literary production at all proportionate to her culture and intellectual powers, but an interesting volume might be made of her contributions to various periodicals, and her papers in the 'Spectator' and other journals. She was one of the "Emersonian" circle who gathered around the Concord philosopher in London forty-six years ago; her friendships included some of the leading writers of her time; and her literary correspondence, if published, would probably be a valuable contribution to the religious and literary history of the last fifty years.

PROF. WILLIAM ROBERTSON SMITH.

SCARCELY a year has passed since we had to regret the death of Prof. R. Bently, and we have now to lament that of Prof. Robertson Smith, at the comparatively early age of forty-seven. This loss does not come upon us as a surprise, for he had been ailing for years, but none the less is our loss a grave one. Prof. R. Smith began his literary career early, and, alas! ended it too early. In 1870, after having been assistant to Prof. Tait at Edinburgh, he was appointed Professor of Hebrew in the Free Church College, Aberdeen, and his removal from this post in 1881, on account of his free criticism of the Old Testament, is still remembered as the close of a celebrated heresy hunt. After a visit to Arabia (1879-1880) he went to Cambridge, where he was appointed to succeed Prof. Palmer in 1883 as Lord Almoner's Professor of Arabic. He was also elected Fellow of Christ's College.

His reputation was made by the publication of 'The Old Testament in the Jewish Church' (which has now reached a second edition) and 'The Prophets of Israel and their Place in History to the Close of the Eighth Century B.C.' These two works, it must be confessed, do not contain much new matter, but they present in a convenient form and in popular language the best results of German research. Besides a few articles on the Old Testament, which appeared in the 'Encyclopædia Britannica,' of which he was editor—at first in conjunction with the late Prof. Bayne, and afterwards alone—Prof. R. Smith wrote but little on Hebrew, although we must not forget to mention that he was one of the most active members amongst the revisers of the Old Testament. Arabic became his favourite study, and he took to reading old Arabic poetry, and his studies combined with his travels led him to the conclusion that among the Arabs, who are even more tribal than other Semitic people, there was much totemism, which is associated with female kinship, an idea which is the basis of his 'Kinship and Marriage in Early Arabia' (1885), a part of which appeared in the 'Cambridge Journal of Philology.'

Robertson Smith made many friends in Cambridge, and the result was that the post of University Librarian, vacant by the death of Mr. H. Bradshaw in 1886, was offered nearly unanimously to him, but the acute and restless scholar did not feel at home in this new position; in a word, he did not like the library and the library did not feel happy under him; so that in 1889, when the Adams Professorship of Arabic became vacant, through the premature death of Dr. W. Wright, he was appointed to the post, and he and the library again became friends. Wandering from the Old Testament to the Koran, the 'Kitab al-Agani,' and other Arabic poetry, Prof. R. Smith fixed his attention on Semitic studies in general, and more especially on the religion of the Semites, which he made the subject of the first series of the Burnett Lectures in 1889. Whilst the late Prof. Palmer, Dr. W. Wright, and Prof. R. Benally paid great attention to the publication of Semitic texts (Assyrian excepted), Prof. R. Smith preferred popularizing Semitic ideas; but from his frequent quotations from Hebrew and Syriac, and more especially from difficult Arabic poets, scholars learned to regard him as one of the best and most acute of Semitic scholars.

The University will have a great difficulty in replacing Prof. R. Smith. Arabic scholars are becoming rare even in the land of De Sacy and Quatremère as well as in that of Fleischer and Noeldeke. We hope, however, that one rising Semitic scholar at Cambridge will hand on the torch to the new generation of British scholars.

It would be wrong not to say a word of Prof. Robertson Smith's personal qualities. He was one of the most straightforward and simple-minded of men, entirely free from jealousy of other scholars. He was a most excellent talker, speaking with rather a rough Aberdonian accent, very rapidly, as if he had not time to give utterance to the abundant stores of information he possessed on all manner of subjects. And certainly the encyclopedic character of his knowledge was most astonishing. There seemed to be no subject in which he did not take an interest.

COUNT FERSEN.

MRS. CASHEL HOEY writes:—

"Will you allow me to explain to your reviewer, who is right in surmising that I have heard of the Elysian Fields, that in my translation of 'Un Ami de la Reine' I retained the words of the King of Sweden because he meant by them the Parisian Champs Elysées, and not the classic paradise. Gustavus III. was so enamoured of Paris (see M. Gaulot's work and the King's correspondence), and so delighted with the fêtes, and especially with the famous fireworks (a form of entertainment not included, I think, in the joys of the Elysium of the ancients), that for him to pronounce a spectacle 'worthy of the Champs Elysées' was to bestow upon it the highest praise.

"The omitted passages in Count Fersen's deciphered transcript of the letters of the Queen of France were believed by his literary executors, and are believed by his now existing kinsfolk—a distant branch of the ancient Livonian family—to have contained allusions to other persons who were faithful to the royal cause, and who might have been endangered had any record of their co-operation with him been preserved. This interpretation is more charitable than that which is suggested; it is, therefore, less obvious.

"I believe I can suggest a feasible explanation of 'the stamp.' The use of wafers, which even yet survives in the remoter country parts of France, and was common in Paris well within my recollection and practice, was general in the time of the Queen and the Count. Of course it was essential to avoid the employment of wax, or anything that would increase the bulk or conspicuousness of a dangerous correspondence. Metal stamps for pressing down the upper rim of the folded sheet (which was letter-form before envelopes) on the moistened wafer affixed to the lower were indispensable items of 'tout ce qu'il faut pour écrire'; some of these were merely cross-lined, but it was a pretty custom to have a wafer stamp with a motto for particular correspondence, and an exchange between friends of such a token, meaning that the stamp was for two only, was one of the modes of a long-lasting day. I take it that 'the stamp' sent by the Queen to the Count was a duplicate of one which she used for closing her brief notes to him. I possess a specimen of the wafer stamp of the exact period, one of two used in the correspondence of two sisters who were parted by the then hopeless distance which divided Ireland from India.

"In 'Un Ami de la Reine' M. Gaulot has not entered into the proposed attempt to rescue Marie Antoinette from the Conciergerie, probably because he has treated the subject fully in 'Un Complot sous la Terreur' and 'Michonis.'

We cannot agree with Mrs. Hoey that, as fireworks "were not included in the joys of the Elysium of the ancients," Gustavus meant to vulgarise Marie Antoinette's fête to the level of the Champs Elysées.

Mrs. Hoey's second paragraph puzzles us. Unless she means to attack M. Gaulot, we do not follow her argument. Fersen's papers were not published till 1877, when no persons could "have been endangered had any record of their co-operation with him" been disclosed. She says that Fersen's "literary executors believed the omitted passages to have contained," &c. But the belief of these gentlemen must have been positive knowledge if they themselves suppressed the passages, as M. Gaulot suggests. The following note was written by the Queen to Fersen, June 29th, 1791, immediately on her return from Varennes:—

"I exist.....how anxious I have been about you, and how I grieve for all you are suffering from having no news of us. May Heaven permit this to reach you. Do not write to me; it would endanger you, and, above all, do not come back here under any pretext. It is known that it was you who got us out of this place; all would be lost if you appeared. We are closely watched night and day. I do not mind that.....Be tranquil; nothing will happen to me. The Assembly wishes to treat us gently. Adieu.....I shall no longer be able to write to you."—Gaulot, vol. ii. p. 7.

Says M. Gaulot:—

"Were the suppressed passages, marked by dots, left out by Fersen himself—that he did use suppression sometimes we shall see hereafter—or by those persons who undertook the publication of his papers? The latter supposition seems in this instance most likely.....Why, then, are these papers suppressed?"

And so on for a couple of pages, till he discovers,—

"These are idle questions, impossible of solution by us.....All this would perhaps authorize us to supply the missing passages, and would guide us in our suppositions, but to what end? Silence is sometimes very eloquent; let those understand who will. In the Queen's note as we have it, mutilated though it be, we can discern a sentiment which is not gratitude only, and how delicately is that sentiment expressed! That friend who grieves 'for all he suffers in having no news of them' well knows the heart to which she speaks! How anxiously she assures him concerning her fate! 'Be tranquil; nothing will happen to me.' And how sad is that 'Adieu,' and her intimation that she 'will no longer be able to write' to him whose love consoles and sustains her."—Gaulot, vol. ii. pp. 8-12.

And we are told that "this interpretation is more charitable than that which is suggested; it is, therefore, less obvious." Our own interpretation was that M. Gaulot had flavoured his book with maudlin sentiment, romantic assumptions, and scandalous innuendoes.

We have not M. Gaulot's work in the original French, therefore we do not know what is the word which Mrs. Hoey translates as "stamp"; it appears, however, that she means a seal.

THE ENGLISH ANCESTRY OF WASHINGTON.

126, Rue La Boétie, Champs Elysées, Paris.

ALLOW me to point out an error in my letter in the Athenæum of March 24th concerning 'The English Ancestry of Washington,' col. 1, p. 378. Instead of saying: "This family still retains its singular office of 'Champion,' which it derives from the celebrated baronial house of Marmyon, through the Redes of Boarstall," I should have said: ".....from the celebrated baronial house of Marmyon, through the marriage of Sir John Dymoke to Margaret de Ludlow, daughter of Joane de Marmyon and Sir Thomas de Ludlow." Vide Marmyon in Burke's 'Extinct Peerages.'

JOHN MEREDITH READ.

SALR.

MR. HOBSON sold on Tuesday Thackeray's 'Flora et Zephyr.' It was put up at 3*l.* 3*s.*, and the next bid was 30*l.* It was finally knocked down for 99*l.* Some few years ago copies were sold for 5*l.* and under. An interesting collection of coloured illustrations by Alken, George Cruikshank, and others, followed the above, and closed the day's sale.

MRS. W. PITT BYRNE.

THE clever and entertaining author of 'Gossip of the Century,' who died last week after a brief illness, has in her writings given so lively a picture of the impressions and surroundings of her life that there is little left for the biographer to add.

The grave has seldom closed over a woman of more versatile parts. Her acquaintance with modern as well as dead languages, with poetry, painting, and music, supplied depth to her travelling impressions, and given grace and life to her writings. Her own achievements in miniature painting and sketching, as well as in decorative work, were also remarkable, and her singular versatility, too, set off the sparkle of her conversation and utilized an almost phenomenal memory for anecdote brought in at the appropriate moment; she had always ready "le petit mot pour rire."

The early loss of a most devoted husband for a time threw a shadow over her life—William Pitt Byrne, son of the Byrne who had thrown new energies into the support of Pitt and the Tory cause in the Morning Post, one of the austere writers journalism has ever known. The son distinguished himself at Trinity College, Cambridge; but his abilities, while they made him a delightful companion, rather unfitted him to deal with the business details of a great paper when its proprietorship devolved upon him. Consequently, when he won Julia Bask for his companion in life, the newspaper was cast aside, and only the agreeable associations which a newspaper connexion supplies retained. Upon this kind of life his wife, though much his junior, was eminently calculated to enter. Countess d'Albany said that if a woman could count in her life three years of happiness she had no right to expect more. If "happiness" means the worship of an appreciative and good man—appreciative and good beyond the wont—and sealing of mutual affection in the blessing of devoted children, then for her may be claimed seven times the space. But widowhood came; and depression is naturally greater according to the greater height from which we fall. It was Charles Waterton that chiefly found for her, in the development of her latent abilities, the means of rousing her from the concentration of grief.

From that time forward the course of her life was divided into three parallel channels—the direction of the life of her son and daughter, the due cultivation of an ever-increasing circle of friends, and the development of her own talent. She had already made a reputation by 'Flemish Interiors,' 'A Glance behind the Grilles,' and 'Realities of Paris Life,' three pleasant volumes which have fairly held their own.

Later experiences led to the publication of 'Undercurrents Overlooked,' since the date of which public attention has been much directed to correcting the evils in the life of the working classes of London she was one of the first to point out. Foreign travel supplied her with materials for numerous subsequent volumes: 'Red, White, and Blue,' 'Gheel, the City of the Simple' (dealing with the Belgian mode of treating the insane), 'Ste. Pizitz, the City of the Single' (describing a French provision for the unmarried), 'Comas de España,' 'Pictures of Hungarian Life,' &c., followed year by year. Then, again, she portrayed humorous eccentricities of English character in such books as 'Curiosities of the Search Room,' 'De Omnibus Rebus,' &c.; and, lastly, she brought out the popular volumes, of which two only have yet appeared, of 'Gossip of the Century.' To the end she was indefatigable, and last autumn's journey of relief from this sort of work was spent in planning another result of a new and most interesting field of research, which it is to be hoped her son will find in a sufficiently forward state to present shortly to the public.

With all this she found time for a correspondence which was the delight of her friends, and she never omitted those visits to the side of the sick or dying among them, at whatever distance, which are the most valuable to the recipient and the most trying to those who make them.

In all relations of life the one thing she omitted was care of herself.

Literary Gossip.

MR. LESLIE STEPHEN has undertaken to write the life of his brother, Sir James Fitzjames Stephen, and he will be obliged if any one in possession of letters will communicate with him. His address is 22, Hyde Park Gate, S.W.

MR. KENNEL RODD is editing the letters and diaries of the late Sir Gerald Portal, which he will publish very shortly with a short biography. He hopes to have the work finished before he leaves for Egypt to take up his new diplomatic appointment—an appointment which, curiously enough, was at one time held by Sir Gerald Portal himself. Mr. E. Arnold is the publisher.

THE project of raising 1,000*l.* to start a holiday home at the seaside for booksellers is evidently going to be a rapid success. Messrs. Longman have generously subscribed 100*l.*; Mr. J. W. Darton, to whom the idea of the home is due, has given twenty guineas, and so have the Clarendon Press, Messrs. Macmillan, and Messrs. Sampson Low & Co. As cheques are reaching Mr. Larnier by every post, there is good reason to hope that the Lord Mayor will be able to announce at the Booksellers' Dinner next Saturday (April 14th) that the money has been collected.

THE Rev. J. W. Ebsworth informs us that the "Group of Romantic and of Religious Ballads," belonging to the final part of the "Roxburghe Ballads," is in type. It is quickly to be followed by the "Queen Anne Ballads," and the final portion of "Nautical Ballads," the "Robin Hood," and the "Sempill Ballads" of 1565-1570, being the oldest in the British Museum. This, with the general index, will complete the entire work. We are glad to hear that Mr. Ebsworth has now nearly recovered from his severe illness.

MESSRS. OSGOOD, McILVAINE & Co. will publish a novel in two volumes entitled 'A Modern Amazon,' by an author who adopts the pseudonym of "George Paston," but has an hereditary claim to write. The book deals with the much vexed question of woman's rights and wrongs.

WE are sorry to hear of the death of Mr. R. T. Griffin, of Messrs. Charles Griffin & Co., who died on Good Friday, his forty-seventh birthday. He was a most modest, retiring man, who from the age of sixteen had taken an active and useful, but unobtrusive part in the business of the firm.

THE Weekly Dispatch is again changing hands, and Mr. Fox Bourne has retired from the editorship.

THE Abbotsford edition of Sir Walter Scott's works continues to turn up in the auction rooms, seemingly with a constant decline in value. A copy has just been sold under the hammer, this time the twelve volumes only, in the original cloth binding, realizing 5*l.* 15*s.* A few years ago it would have been, by booksellers, considered worth double this sum.

A 'HISTORY OF HADDLESLEY,' by the Rev. J. N. Worsfold, is announced by Mr. Elliot Stock. At Haddlesley was one of the Templar preceptories; subsequently the Darcy and Stapleton families resided there, and Cromwell and his ancestors were connected with the parish. The work is compiled largely from local documents, and will be fully illustrated with sketches from the neighbourhood.

AMONG the deaths to be recorded is that of the Rev. H. Dale, who translated Thucydides and other classical authors for Henry Bohn, and also issued a version of 'Hermann and Dorothea.' He took a first class in Lit. Hum. at Oxford as long ago as 1834.—The "Danbury Newsman" (Mr. J. M. Bailey) is also dead.

THE author of 'A King's Daughter,' a novel which met with considerable success on its publication a year or two ago, is about to publish with Messrs. Sonnenschein & Co. a new novel entitled 'The Perfect Way of Honour.' The scene is laid in Perthshire and the Isle of Wight.

MR. E. AXON is preparing for publication a monograph on the Bayleys of Manchester, which was privately printed in 1890. It has been rewritten and enlarged. The family came into prominence in Manchester in the seventeenth century, and in the eighteenth century the great Lord Clive, when a child, found a home with his relations the Bayleys. Thomas Butterworth Bayley, F.R.S., who died in 1802, was one of the earliest to apply the enlightened ideas as to agriculture, sanitation, and the treatment of criminals which have since been generally adopted. In the present century the Bayleys have distinguished themselves in England, India, and Russia, as will be seen from the names of Archdeacon Bayley of Stow; Sir Daniel Bayley, chargé d'affaires at St. Petersburg; W. B. Bayley, acting Governor-General of India; the Hon. H. V. Bayley, Judge of the High Court, Calcutta; Sir E. Clive Bayley, member of the Council; Sir S. Colvin Bayley, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal; and Major-General J. W. Bayley.

MR. C. O. HAAS, of the house of David Nutt, in the Strand, has, in conjunction with the working partners of that firm, acquired the foreign circulating library and import book business of the late Mr. J. W. Kolckmann, of Langham Place. It will be carried on by him under the style of Kolckmann's Foreign Library (Haas & Nutt).

THE sale of the fourth portion of the Heredia Library begins at Paris on Thursday next, and ends on May 11th.

THE British Museum authorities have issued a descriptive list of the Hebrew and Samaritan manuscripts belonging to that library. A detailed catalogue of them is in preparation by the Rev. G. Margoliouth, which will necessarily take many years. Meanwhile researchers in this branch of learning will be glad to have the short list, to which are appended minute indexes of authors and titles made by Mr. Margoliouth. Moreover, the short list is arranged according to subjects, viz., Biblical MSS., Midrashim, Talmud and Halakhah, liturgies, Kabbalah, philosophy, poetry, philology, mathematics and astronomy, medicine, miscellaneous MSS., and charters. There are altogether about 1,500 MSS. This collection is inferior to those in the Bodleian Library and the Imperial Library of St. Petersburg, but to them only. The Samaritan MSS. in the Museum are in certain branches rivalled by those in the Royal Library at Berlin, which acquired the Petermann collection. We are glad to mention that there are very few typographical mistakes in Mr. Margoliouth's short list.

MR. STANDISH O'GRADY, whose 'Lost on Du-Corrig' has just been published, has engaged with Messrs. Methuen & Co. for the publication in May of a heroic Irish romance, 'The Coming of Cuiclain.'

THE Société d'Études Italiennes, founded in Paris, has chosen M. Jules Simon for its president. Among those who have joined it are MM. Boissier, H. Cochin, A. Croiset, J. Darmesteter, A. Desjardins, Gaston Paris, A. Leroy-Beaulieu, E. Müntz, A. Sorel, &c.

PAUL HEYSE will deliver the Festrede at this year's general meeting of the Goethe-Gesellschaft. Prof. Loening, of Jena, will deliver a philosophical address at the annual meeting of the German Shakespeare Society, which will be held on the 23rd inst., which date will be the thirtieth anniversary of its foundation.

CONSTANTINOPLE is one of the best remaining schools of calligraphy. Sultans in choosing a calling or trade have taken up that of the writer, and specimens of their workmanship can sometimes be purchased. At the present moment the Chancellery of the Imperial Divan still preserves the best practitioners in the various writings, and with the view of maintaining the art the Sultan has directed the number of officials to be increased.

WE are forced by the pressure on our space to defer the publication of Mr. Slater's and other letters on 'Rare Editions' till next week.

WE made a mistake last week in speaking of the late Mr. Maurice's 'Sermons on the Acts of the Apostles' as a reprint. Although issued in the same form as the new edition of his writings, this volume of striking discourses has now appeared for the first time.

THE Parliamentary Papers of the week include Trade and Navigation Accounts for February (7*d.*); a Report as to United States Liquor Traffic Legislation since 1889 (5*d.*); International Sanitary Convention, signed April 15th, 1893, and Protocol, &c., recording Accession of Great Britain (2*d.*); a Report on Employers' Liability in Germany (2*d.*); Education (England and Wales), Code of Regulations for Day Schools, &c. (6*d.*), and Revised Instructions issued to Her Majesty's Inspectors (3*d.*); Annual Statistical Report of the University of Glasgow (2*d.*); and Abstract of the Accounts of the same University for the year ending Michaelmas, 1893 (2*d.*).

SCIENCE

The Discovery of Australia. By A. F. Calvert, F.R.G.S. (Philip & Son.)

UPON a first perusal of this curiously edited work we felt inclined to dismiss it with as short a notice as its literary merits deserve; but after a closer inspection of the first portion of it—dealing with the early discovery and cartography of Australia—it appeared to be a duty to dwell upon the volume as an example to be avoided by future writers upon the subject.

In his introduction the author first of all treats his readers to a translated extract from Viscount Santarem's 'Essai sur l'Histoire de la Cosmographie et de la Cartographie pendant le Moyen Age,' to which is added from the same source a list of seven mediæval maps ranging from the tenth century to the fourteenth. Of course, we are bound to believe that Mr. Calvert has in every instance identified the corresponding maps to be found in Santarem's atlas—a task of no small difficulty even to the initiated, owing to the obscurity of the learned Viscount's references in his text. Mr. Calvert's extract reads:—

"Certain cartographers of the middle ages still continue to represent the Antichthone in their maps of the world in accordance with their belief that beyond the ocean of Homer there was an inhabited country—another temperate region—called the 'opposite earth,' which it was impossible to reach, principally on account of the torrid zone."

Mr. Calvert then adds a numbered list of "the maps of the world which represent this theory"; but his study of these maps only serves to show his unfamiliarity with ancient cartography. If we understand him aright, No. 1 on his list is a map "in a MS. of Macrobius of the tenth century." He continues, "In illustration of the first of these, I have been fortunate enough to secure a photolithograph of a crude but unique map of the world, probably of French origin, which was found in a very rare work of the tenth century." The "unique map" referred to Mr. Calvert produces as plate 1 of his cartographic illustrations. So far from being a map found in a MS. of Macrobius of the tenth century, it is an engraved map found in 'La Salade' of Antoine de La Sale or La Salle, Paris, 1522, a work certainly not written earlier than 1440.

The map bears no relation whatever to the "opposite earth" theory of Macrobius, as the legend on the bottom of it reads: "Mare antipodes [sic] et incognitum." So far from being unique, there are two copies of it in the British Museum, a third is at Stockholm, and a fourth in Paris reproduced by Santarem in his atlas (plate 26). This last, however, has received three additions not to be found on the first three—impressions which were probably added by a later hand.

The interest attached to La Salle's map for our purpose is its record of the "patalis regio." The earliest reference to this on a map known to the late Mr. R. H. Major was on that of Oronce Finé, 1531 (Archæologia, vol. xlv. p. 237). India Patalis is, however, to be found on Martin Behaim's globe of 1492 located to the west of Loach, which is now known to be the early Chinese name for the Malay Peninsula. This is also the region indicated on La Salle's map. To the best of our knowledge Oronce Finé's map of 1531 was the earliest to transfer the "Regio Patalis" to the great southern continent, which, however, is not necessarily Australia. If our author had turned to plate 18 (7) of Santarem's atlas, he would have found a facsimile of the true map in the "MS. of Macrobius of the tenth century."

As Mr. Calvert makes no further use of his list of early maps, we pass on to his treatment of some of the large MS. French mappemonde and portolani, which have always exercised a fascination over writers upon early Australian discovery. It will, however, be useful for future reference if we take them up in some kind of order and indicate their present location. The earliest is the Harleian or Dauphin map, unsigned, but probably by Pierre Desceliers, and belonging to 1536 or thereabouts (British Museum Additional MS. 5413). To this succeeds the fine map in the collection of the Earl of Crawford at Dunecht House; it bears a legend now almost illegible, but first deciphered on a fine summer's afternoon nearly sixteen years ago, "Faictes a Arques par Pierre Desceliers presb. 1546." It will be found on the top left-hand corner near Japan. This map once belonged to Jomard, and was facsimiled in his 'Monuments de la Géographie' (plate xix. 5-8)—Mr. Calvert's section (from Jomard), plate 7, p. 15. This is followed by another superb map by Desceliers, bearing a similar legend to the first on the southeast (Australian) corner, but dated 1550 (Brit. Mus. Add. MS. 24065). The latest map of Desceliers is dated 1553. It was exhibited at the Geographical Exposition in Paris, 1875, as the property of L'abbé Sigismund de Bubice, of Vienna. This map is apparently unknown to Mr. Calvert.

Ranging with the Desceliers group of maps, we notice the Portolano of John Rotz, executed in England for Henry VIII., 1542 (Brit. Mus. O. R. L. MS. 20, E. ix.). This is followed by the Portolano of Nicholas Vallard, executed at Dieppe, 1547, formerly in the late Sir Thomas Phillipps's collection at Middle Hill; the Australian portion of it was reproduced in chromolithography by Mr. Quaritch in 1856, and Mr. Calvert, plate 8, p. 15. Map in a 'Cosmographie' by Guillaume Le Testu, of Havre de Grâce, 1555 (Dépôt de la Guerre, Archives, Paris). A larger map, also by Le Testu, 1566 (Affaires Étrangères, Archives, Paris). A Mappemonde by Nicolas Desliens, of Dieppe, 1566—sometimes confounded with Desceliers's four maps (Bib. Nationale, Paris; Mr. Calvert's plate 11, p. 17). Lastly, a semi-elliptical Mappemonde by Jehan Cossin, 1570 (Bib. Nationale, Paris), not mentioned by Mr. Calvert. A great desideratum for students of comparative cartography is two sets of first-hand reproductions (exact size of the originals) of the Australian and North American portions of these two groups of maps and portolani. Mr. Calvert's studies of some of these maps, both in his text and his illustrations, only add to the existing confusion. The earliest Harleian is certainly not dated 1536, as he asserts; neither can it be as early as 1530, as is stated on his plate 2, probably upon Mr. Major's suggestion. The probable date is 1536, midway between Mr. Major's 1530 and 1542 as suggested by M. Harrisse. The Australian portion of this map was first reproduced (admirably engraved) and published by Alex. Dalrymple in 1787. Mr. Calvert on p. 17 says that the Desceliers map of 1550 also bears the date of 1546. This is nonsense; it would appear that he has confounded Lord Crawford's map with the Brit. Mus. Add. MS. 24065; Mr. Calvert's plates Nos. 7 and 10 fortunately supply their own correction of this error.

Probably the most surprising thing in the book is the attempt to associate the discovery of Australia recorded on the unfortunate Godinho de Eredia map of 1601 (plate 12) with the Oronce Finé map of 1531 (plate 15). Mr. Calvert writes:—

"Some curious evidence of the influence of the discoverer (Godinho de Eredia) upon the cartographer is noticeable in a production, from Nordenakiold's Atlas, of a cordiform or heart-shaped map by Orontius Finé, a French cosmographer of Provence, dated 1531."

This is "curious evidence," indeed, to say nothing of the anachronism. Mr. Calvert is apparently unaware that not only was Mr. Major the first to announce the genuineness of the discovery of 1601, he was also the first to detect that he had been imposed upon. Mr. Major wrote:—

"I congratulate myself that whereas it was I who introduced to the world the reputed discovery, the falsity of which could not be detected by the examination of a MS. which has hitherto lain perdu, it is with my own hands that, now I have examined that document, I have been able to shake the bran out of this puppet of a discoverer."

The widespread mischief wrought by this premature announcement, and not wholly retrieved by the less-known denouncement of it, has caused more perplexity to the student of Australian history and cartography than we care to dwell upon. The latest result is found in the work before us. We hope, for the sake of an honoured reputation in the history of geography and the interests of accuracy, that this unfortunate story of 1601 may never be repeated in any future history of Australia.

The last thing that calls for notice is Mr. Calvert's somewhat defective account of Tasman's MS. journal of his first voyage (p. 30). The first printed abridgment of it was really that of D. R. van Nierop, 1669-74. The second was by T. Valantyn in his 'Oud en Nieuw Oost Indien,' 1724, copied probably from the MS. preserved among the archives at the Hague. The third was by Capt. J. Burney in his 'Chronological History of the South Seas, 1803-17,' vol. iii. chap. iv. This was compiled from a copy of the original MS. purchased by Sir Joseph Banks. Burney, for reasons of his own, assumed this copy to be the original, against the advice of C. G. Woide, a learned clergyman, afterwards an assistant librarian in the British Museum, who translated it into English. This last was, we believe, the text used by Burney.

It does not appear to be generally known that the text of this voyage was first printed in extenso by J. Swart in the Verhandelingen en Berigten, Amsterdam, 1854-60, from the MS. signed by Tasman, formerly in the possession of the nautical establishment of Hulst van Keulen, of the same city. A little more than two years ago we saw and handled a MS. of this voyage preserved among the Dutch National Archives at the Hague. Which of these two MSS. is the original has yet to be determined by experts. There is also a third MS., probably modern, at Utrecht.

The sight of Tasman's map, reproduced by Mr. Calvert (plate 19, p. 35), reminds us that the original MS. map of the two voyages by A. J. Tasman and F. Jacobz Vischer, 1642-44, also formerly possessed by Hulst van Keulen, was recently acquired for the Paris collection of Prince Roland Bonaparte. We heartily commend these few facts to the consideration of our good friends the secretaries of the Hakluyt and the Navy Records societies.

The last half of Mr. Calvert's book contains an account of the two voyages of Capt. James Cook, with notices and illustrations of the Banksian relics of Cook collected by Mr. Calvert's grandfather in Dean Street, Soho Square. These relics were eventually acquired by Sir Samuel Saul, and presented by him to the colony of New South Wales on the occasion of its centenary celebration. Mr. Calvert's book is decidedly scrappy; the plates are out of due order and unnumbered; the text is also without an index.

CHEMICAL NOTES.

M. H. MOISSAN has been busy with his electric furnace in Paris. He has obtained silicide of carbon, SiC, in large crystals by heating the elements together, and also by reducing silica with carbon. The crystals are regular hexagons, and when free from iron colourless, but generally yellowish from the presence of iron, and occasionally blue like sapphire. Moissan has also obtained some true diamonds with the aid of his furnace. Some time ago he showed that when carbon is dissolved in various metals at the ordinary pressure, it always crystallizes out as graphite on cooling, but that under increased pressure the density and hardness of the separated carbon increased, and sometimes black diamonds were formed. By a modification of his former process, and by dissolving the carbon in iron under pressure, cooling the solution of carbon in molten iron by pouring it into molten lead, and dissolving away the lead and the iron, he has obtained transparent, colourless crystals of carbon. These have a density 3.5, scratch rubies, burn in oxygen to form pure carbon dioxide, and moreover show some of the physical peculiarities of natural diamonds, including occasional spontaneous disruption.

Prof. Rosenfeld has carefully studied the cause of the violent explosion which usually takes place when any considerable quantity of metallic sodium is brought into contact with water in a confined space. He finds that it is not due, as often supposed, to the formation of sodium peroxide, and consequent liberation of oxygen and production of an explosive mixture of hydrogen and oxygen. If steam be passed in a rapid current over metallic sodium no explosion occurs, no oxygen is given off, and pure sodium hydroxide may be obtained for analytical purposes. Rosenfeld believes the explosions to be due to the formation of a sodium hydride whose sudden dissociation produces the phenomenon; this is rendered more probable by the fact that the sodium is always blown up into powder from the interior of the mass.

Sodium peroxide is now a commercial article, and has been recommended for the production of oxygen for therapeutic purposes; it is only necessary to drop the peroxide into water to obtain a supply of very pure gas.

The use of soluble fluorides in the cultivation of yeasts for use in distilleries is extending. A small quantity of ammonium fluoride added to a wort in which yeast is growing at first checks the growth of the yeast, but after a short time the yeast plant becomes accustomed to the presence of fluorides and grows well. The yeast may be educated to withstand gradually increasing quantities of fluorides, and this educated yeast, transferred to more dilute solutions, grows with very great rapidity. The fluoride quite destroys many organisms hurtful to the distiller or brewer.

The atomic weight of palladium has been determined by Prof. Keiser and Miss Brod. Since part of the work consisted in distilling a volatile compound of palladium—palladium dichloride—there is reason to believe that pure material for the investigation was obtained. The atomic weight arrived at is 106.25.

Dr. Keiser also contributes further interesting results on the remarkable explosive metallic compounds of acetylene which he has obtained. Copper, silver, and mercury compounds have been described. These bodies have the formulae C_2Cu , C_2Ag , and C_2Hg , respectively.

Five-and-twenty years ago, in connexion with their work on water analysis, Frankland and Armstrong pointed out that the copper oxide obtained by igniting copper nitrate always retained nitrogen very obstinately, and could not, therefore, be used for their combustion process. Messrs. Richards and Rogers, of Harvard University, show that the oxides of zinc, nickel, and magnesium when prepared from the nitrate retain large quantities of nitrogen gas. In the case of magnesium the amount is very large, ten grains of magnesia occluding as much as one hundred cubic centimetres of gas. These results influence the value of some of the atomic-weight determinations of these metals, in which the nitrate of the metal was used.

SOCIETIES.

GEOLOGICAL.—March 21.—Dr. H. Woodward, President, in the chair.—The following communications were read: 'On the Origin of Certain Novaculites and Quartzites,' by Mr. F. Rutley, and 'Note on the Occurrence of Perlitic Cracks in Quartz,' by Mr. W. W. Watts.

ENTOMOLOGICAL.—March 23.—Capt. H. J. Elwes, President, in the chair.—Mr. P. H. Grimshaw was elected a Fellow.—Mr. McLachlan announced the sudden death, on the 23rd inst., of Mr. J. Jenner-Weir, who joined the Society in 1845, and had been one of its most regular attendants. He also commented on the scientific attainments of the deceased and his social qualities. Mr. Goss and Mr. Merrifield also spoke of their long friendship with the deceased, and of the respect and esteem which they entertained for him.—Mr. W. Borrer, jun., exhibited a wasp's nest which had been built in such a way as to conceal the entrance thereto and to protect the whole nest from observation. He believed the nest to be that of Ichneumon vulgaris.—Mr. G. F. Hampson exhibited a specimen of Glaucidium flarata, Moore, from the Khari Hills, and called attention to the existence in the males of this species, in the closely allied British species Cidaris dotata, Linn., and also in two Japanese species, of an organ on the under side of the fore wing, which he suggested might be for stridulation, this organ consisting of a small scar of hyaline membrane situated just below the middle of vein 2, which is much curved. This scar is fringed with long hair, and has running down its middle a row of sharp spines situated on the aborted remains of vein 1, which is curved up close to vein 2; the spines would naturally rub against part of the costa of the hind wing, but no spines or unusual roughening seem to exist on that or on any of the veins on the upper side of the hind wing against which they could strike. Below the scar is situated a large shallow fovea or pit in the membrane, slightly developed in C. dotata and C. flarata, but much more prominently in the two Japanese species, and, should the organ prove to be for stridulation, it would probably act as a sounding-board. Mr. Hampson said that in the Japanese species exceedingly closely allied to flarata the males have no trace of this organ.—The President, Prof. E. B. Foulton, Lord Walsingham, and Mr. Hampson took part in the discussion which ensued.—The Rev. T. A. Marshall communicated a paper entitled 'A Monograph of the British Brachinids, Part V.,'—and M. I. Périguy one entitled 'Descriptions of New Cleindellids from Mashunaland.'—Prof. Foulton gave an account of his recent tour in the United States, and commented on the entomological and other collections contained in the American museums.—Lord Walsingham, Mr. Hampson, and the President also made some remarks on the subject.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—April 3.—Mr. A. Giles, President, in the chair.—It was announced that the Council had transferred three gentlemen to the class of Members, and had admitted six Students. The monthly ballot resulted in the election of four Members, seven Associate Members, and one Associate.—The paper read was 'On the Construction of Gasworks,' by Mr. C. Hunt.

ROYAL INSTITUTION.—April 2.—Sir J. Crichton-Browne, Treas. and V.P., in the chair.—Miss E. Simpson, Messrs. S. W. Barnaby, M. Guest, and H. C. Robinson were elected Members.

SOCIETY OF ENGINEERS.—April 2.—Mr. G. A. Goodwin, President, in the chair.—A paper was read by Mr. E. L. Pease 'On Gasholder Construction.'

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

- Mon. Institute of British Architects, 8.—The Council Chamber and its Accessories, Mr. T. Marshall.
- Society of Arts, 4.—Photometry, Lecture II., Capt. W. de W. Abney (Chairman Lecture).
- Geographical, 48.—Journey across Central Asia, Mr. St. G. G. Edith.
- Tues. Meteorological, 1.—Hybrid Nares.
- Royal Institution, 2.—Electric Illumination, Prof. J. A. Fleming.
- Colonial Institute, 8.
- Society of Arts, 4.—The Evolution of Decorative Art, Mr. H. H. Johnston.
- Society of Architects, 8.—Wrought-iron Work: Medieval and Modern, Mr. J. G. Gardner.
- Civil Engineers, 8.—Further Discussion on 'The Construction of Gasworks.'
- Anthropological Institute, 48.—Sketch of a Microcephalic Head, Prof. E. W. Maudslayi; Ethnographical Studies in the West of Ireland, Prof. A. C. Haddon.
- Wed. Entomological, 8.
- Geological, 8.—Mesozoic Rocks and Crystalline Schists in the Lepontine Alps, Prof. V. B. Seely; Notes on some Trachytes, Mesozoic Tuffs, and other Rocks of Igneous Origin, on the Western Flank of Harlech, Lieut. General C. A. McMahon.
- Society of Arts, 4.—London Coal Gas and its Enrichment, Prof. V. Lewis.
- Library Association, 8.—As Rare Printing Press as described by Thomas Hearne, with Notes, Mr. F. Maden.
- Thurs. Royal Institution, 2.—The Midland Revival, Mr. F. Seymour Hudson.
- Mathematical, 8.
- Electrical Engineers, 8.
- Mathematical, 8.—On Regular Difference Terms, the President; Theorems concerning Spheres, Mr. A. Roberts; Second Memoir on the Expansion of Certain Infinite Products, Prof. I. J. Rogers; A Property of the Circum-Circle, II., Mr. B. Tucker.
- Antiquaries, 8.
- Society for the Encouragement of the Fine Arts.—Conversazione.
- Fri. Physical, 8.—Discussion on Prof. Heinrich's Paper 'On Calculating the Minimum Temperature of Visibility,' Mr. J. L. Gray; Mechanism of Electrical Conduction, Dr. C. V. Burton.
- Architectural Association, 7.
- Philological, 8.—A Dictionary Evening.
- Astronomical, 8.
- Royal Institution, 8.—Some Properties of the Electric Discharge through Gases, Prof. J. J. Thomson.
- Sat. Royal Institution, 8.—Life among the Afghans, Mr. J. A. Gray.
- Botanical, 8.—Session of Fellows.

Science Gossip.

The general meeting of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers will be held on the evenings of the 19th and 20th inst. The President, Prof. Alexander B. W. Kennedy, will deliver his inaugural address, and the papers read will be a 'Description of the Grafton High-Speed Steam-Engine,' by Mr. Edward W. Anderson, and a 'Description of a Fluid-Pressure Reversing Gear for Locomotive Engines,' by Mr. David Joy.

The deaths are announced of the famous physiologist Dr. Brown-Séquard, the successor of Claude Bernard at the Collège de France; and of M. Pouchet, Professor of Anatomy at the Paris Museum. Brown-Séquard had been professor at Harvard, and for some time was settled in London, but, in spite of his habits of wandering, he was a true Frenchman. Most of his books—which were not numerous—were written in English; his French publications were mainly in the form of memoirs and pamphlets. He obtained the Prix Lacaze in 1862, the Prix Biennial of the Institute in 1885, and was elected to the place in the Academy vacant by the death of Vulpian.

THE late Prof. Billroth is said to have deposited a few months before his death the manuscript of his autobiography in the archives of the Medical Society of Vienna. Dr. Czerny, of Heidelberg, the author of 'Die Beziehungen der Chirurgie zu den Naturwissenschaften,' is mentioned as Prof. Billroth's successor.

Messrs. BLACKIE & SON will publish on May 1st the first part of a translation, by Prof. Oliver, of Prof. Kerner von Marilaun's 'Pflanzenleben.' It is to be completed in sixteen monthly parts, issued through the booksellers.

ONE important geographical result of the Durand Mission to Cabul will be the demarcation of a real frontier line between Afghanistan and India. Ever since India's advance into the Baluch highlands and our occupation of Quetta in 1876, the definition of the true boundary line on the north-west has been the despair of politicians and map-makers. An attempt was made on the Indian Government maps to keep up the fiction of the old red line west of the Indus, from the Himalayas to the Arabian Sea, but it ceased to have any meaning when new districts, still further to the west, were every now and then coming under British administration. Three parties of the Topographical Survey have just been formed at Quetta for the purpose of tracing the new line. One party will start from Peshawar, and work through Lundikhana and Asmar; one from Kurram through the Peshawar, on both sides; and one from Loralai through the Zhob Valley. These parties will include in their operations the districts ceded by the Amir in virtue of the recent Durand Mission. A fourth party next year will define the boundary between Baluchistan and Afghanistan as far as New Chaman.

A SPECIAL report on the flora of the interior of Sikkim and the Tibetan frontier has been prepared for the Bengal Government by Mr. J. A. Gamble, Superintendent of the Government Chinchona Plantation. The botany of Sikkim and Tibet is little known, and Sir Joseph Hooker had more than once urged the deputation of an expert to institute a scientific inquiry; but in the unsettled state of Sikkim affairs the matter was allowed to lie over till last year, when Mr. Gamble made his exploration. The herbarium he succeeded in collecting contains specimens of many rare plants.

A SMALL planet was discovered by M. Bigourdan at the Paris Observatory on the night of the 24th ult. This is the thirteenth planet found in the present year, and, if all recent announcements be really new, raises the whole number known to 392.

A FAINT comet (α , 1894) was discovered by Mr. Denning, of Bishopston, Bristol, on the evening of the 26th ult. It was at the time in the constellation Leo Minor, and moving towards the south-east. The following night after the discovery the comet was observed at Hamburg and at Munich. We learn from the Observatory that it has also been observed at Greenwich; and that its approximate place for to-night (April 7th) is R.A. $10^h 33^m$, N.P.D. $64^\circ 21'$, whilst that for April 12th will be R.A. $10^h 46^m$, N.P.D. $67^\circ 5'$.

FINE ARTS

A Catalogue of the English Coins in the British Museum. — Anglo-Saxon Series. Vol. II. By Herbert A. Grueber, F.S.A., and Charles Francis Keary, F.S.A. (Printed by order of the Trustees.)

THE collection of Anglo-Saxon money in the British Museum is estimated to consist of 6,664 specimens. Of this total 4,106 coins (belonging to the four kingdoms of Mercia, Kent, East Anglia, and Northumbria) were published by Mr. Keary in vol. i. of the 'Catalogue of English Coins.' The present volume contains the coinage of Wessex from Egboorht to Eadwig, and of All England from Eadgar to the Norman Conquest, and thus covers the period A.D. 802-1066. In vol. i. Mr. Keary gave complete lists of all known moneyers, whether represented in the British Museum or not. In vol. ii. the authors have published exhaustive lists of the moneyers, and have added descriptions of all known "types," including—to this extent—not only the specimens in the national collection, but also the numerous varieties in the Stockholm Museum and in private cabinets, such as those of Sir John Evans and Mr. H. Montagu. The work, therefore, may be regarded, for all practical purposes, as a corpus of Anglo-Saxon coins.

The descriptions are beautifully arranged and printed, and in this respect the book forms a refreshing contrast to that indispensable, but typographically detestable work, Hawkins's 'Silver Coins of England.' Some of the coins are illustrated by cuts inserted in the text, but the majority are figured in thirty-two plates of photographs creditably executed by the Autotype Company. The authors have been wise in adopting photography instead of engraving. It is no doubt easier to read and identify a coin in an engraving than in a photograph. But, as we have often maintained in the Athenæum, the illustration of coins by any process other than a purely mechanical one is entirely unscientific. The place for interpretation is the text and the notes. Neither the author nor his (usually well-intentioned) engraver has any right to tamper (as it were) with the monuments themselves. We would venture to suggest that in future volumes of the English catalogue the types, or at least the principal groups of types, should be marked off in the plates by lines and lettering in order to facilitate identification and comparison. This plan has already been adopted with good results in another British Museum publication, Mr. Head's 'Catalogue of the Coins of Ionia.' A larger number of plates would be required, but the extra cost would be worth incurring.

The introduction has been written by Mr. C. F. Keary, who, though no longer a member of the official staff, has, we believe, generously given his services to the Trustees. The duty of describing the coins and of seeing the volume through the press has been undertaken by Mr. H. A. Grueber, the Assistant Keeper of Coins and Medals, who has accomplished his task with all the skill and accuracy that might be looked for from his long and extensive experience as a numismatist. To Mr. Grueber is also due the preparation of the indexes of subjects, moneyers, mints, and types, which in fulness rival the splendid indexes prepared by him for the 'Medallie Illustrations of British History.'

In the introduction Mr. Keary furnishes a masterly sketch of the numismatic and political history of the time. His previous work on the Vikings has specially prepared him to deal with a period of English history in which this country, both numismatically and politically, was intimately connected with the kingdoms of the North. The whole introduction shows, moreover, a thorough knowledge of the contemporary coinages of Europe—a knowledge in which many British collectors are far too often deficient.

In discussing the relation of the coinage to political events, Mr. Keary maintains, as we think with good reason, that the abundant issues of money in particular reigns were due not so much to the needs of internal commerce as to the necessity of paying taxes for the support of army and navy, and of providing tributes and bribes. In the reign of Æthelred II., for example, we hear of a payment to the Northmen, first of 10,000, then of 30,000, and lastly of 48,000 pounds of silver. The coins representing this payment found their way in enormous numbers to Scandinavian countries, and not a few of them remain, unto this present, in the National Museum of Stockholm. Finds of Æthelred's coins have, in fact, occurred more frequently in the North than in England, and Stockholm is at this moment far richer than London in the coinage of this sovereign. These coins of Æthelred, moreover, not only served as media of exchange in England, but constituted the prototypes of the native coinages of Denmark, Sweden, Norway, and Ireland.

All the coins represented in this volume are silver pennies, and their devices are less varied and interesting than those described in the previous volume of the catalogue. Mr. Keary calls attention, however, to some interesting types, such as those of Alfred, which show an apparent attempt at portraiture, and the "wall" (or "building") type of Eadward the Elder, which, though ultimately traceable to the "temple type" of Lewis the Pious, is probably significant of the building of the burghs. On the whole, Mr. Keary finds that in type and general appearance the English currency is markedly independent of continental influence, both German and French.

The inscriptions on the coins now under discussion are of exceptional interest, and Mr. Keary deals at considerable length with the names of moneyers and mints that they record. It is generally admitted that the word "moneta," which follows the moneyer's name on the coins, was originally an abbreviation of "monetarius" (moneyer), but Mr. Keary makes the excellent suggestion that on the later currencies it came to have the meaning of "coin" (moneta), for a tendency may be observed to put the moneyer's name in the genitive instead of the nominative. The names furnish valuable material for an Anglo-Saxon Onomasticon, though the extraordinary varieties of spelling—caused partly by technical difficulties in the minting—often render it difficult to decide what name is intended. Minute acquaintance with the coins and familiarity with the mistakes of most common occurrence have, however, enabled the authors of this volume to compile a critical list which will be welcome to those students who are more familiar with the charters and the literature than with the coins. An analysis of the list reveals the presence of a good many Frankish and Scandinavian names. About the status of the moneyer himself not very much appears to be discoverable. In vol. i. Mr. Keary showed that there was reason to suppose that the moneyer was the actual fabricator of the coin, for by the grim ordinance of the laws of Æthelstan an offending moneyer was to have his hand struck off and placed, as an encouragement to the others, uppon þa mynel-smithan (over the mint-smithy). Mr. Keary now examines some passages in 'Domesday,' &c., and is inclined to think that the monetarius, though in a servile condition, may have been a person of some wealth who purchased the right of coining, receiving the dies from London.

A detailed account of the mint places and a brief summary of the history of Anglo-Saxon coinage conclude the introduction to a valuable and scholarly work.

NOTES FROM NUBIA.

III.

Aswan, Feb. 15, 1894.

As the traveller approaches Koroosko, with its north-west turn in the river, and consequent difficulties of navigation, the land becomes more beautiful, and from that place southward far more fruitful. But even the great stretches of golden sand on the west bank imitate fields of corn, and there is nothing desolate about the aspect of this desolation. The east bank is of a totally different colour, the sand being grey; but here the hills are so varied in outline as to make them interesting apart from their colouring. At Sonkari we were visited by the sheiks of the place, who brought us presents of lamb and fowl. They were brothers, but one of a splendid dark-bronze Arab type, with royal manners, and speaking very cultivated Arabic; the elder almost a negro, but a strong and experienced man, who knew all the country to Khartoum, and pronounced it, for the present, safe. And there we also heard tidings of an inscription somewhere on the wady leading up from the river, which we searched for in vain. But the report was so persistent, though our guides could not find the spot, that it is more than likely some stèle is there, giving an account of the road to the gold mines from this point on the river.

Here there are still gazelles to be shot, but they are shy and wary, only coming to the river in the dead of night to drink; and we saw a few Egyptian geese, both the black and the white and brown, which made our sporting instincts rebel against the archaeological work.

At the north-east end of the turn back in the Nile from Koroosko, which generally occupies a sailing boat for three days, though it is but seven miles long, we found the well-known temple of Amada, which seems to have been built for the purpose of holding a stèle of Thothmes III., still standing in the place of honour at the back of the shrine, with its early portraiture of the horse, just then imported into Egypt.

But on the top of the temple, which is covered with inscriptions, we found several in Coptic character, which are certainly not in the Coptic tongue, but probably early Nubian inscriptions, written in the alphabet borrowed from the Coptic. We copied several, but they were too much effaced for any certain results. There are a dozen texts, but not one in Greek, except the spurious one pretending to be Herodotus's writing. This temple at Amada shows, as do all the temples of the eighteenth dynasty, that elegance which is quite wanting when we reach the work of Ramses II.

A few miles further, on the west bank, exactly opposite the north end of Abu Ras's inland, there is a tall fort of mud bricks, set on a stone base course, with many chambers arched in various ways, and traces of white mortar in many places. It seemed to be an old Egyptian fort turned into a Coptic castle, for nearer the river was a field of pottery, with some fragments of the Theban blue, and other curious pieces of antique ware. This fort seems not to have been yet described. Opposite is the great fruitful peninsula of Derr, with its vast palm groves and fields of copper-green castor-oil plants. Our next halting-place was at the villages which conceal the long desert flat leading to the rock shrine of Anibe—a delightful walk over hard sand, about two miles into the desert. The tomb, which is one of the most perfect in Nubia, has long since been described, and its inscriptions (Ramses VI.'s time) copied; but what is new is this, that half-way between Anibe and the rock temple is a large necropolis, showing large circles of stones, rifled tombs, bones, pottery, &c., and among them the remains of eight mastabas of mud brick, in the form of large beehives. There seems little doubt that these are not later than the Middle Empire. In one we uncovered an inner wall of thin white plaster coating the mud bricks, and on it a harvest scene, with five men reaping or binding, the owner leaning on his staff. They are all depicted red, as Egyptians. We sought in vain for a text, but found handsome bands of orange and below a white dado. This precious fresco we covered up again. Here, then, is a chance for an excavator!

Kaer Ibrim (the Roman Primis) is the finest spot on the Nile. Three great cliffs of sandstone stand up in a row on the east bank, barring the way along the river, so that travellers by land must turn inland, and mount a path worn deep in the soft stone, passing under the gate of the fortress constructed on the central cliff, and then down a flight of steps hewn in the rock. Here the Christian Copts settled themselves in after days, and crowded the fortified enclosure with mud houses. The remains of their principal church still stand in the centre of Primis, and there is also a very complete little church down near the river, on the spur of the northern cliff, with many inscriptions on the plaster. The Christians who once peopled this country seem to have gathered into forts, and overcrowded them inconveniently, though the outlying rock tombs, built in the eighteenth and nineteenth dynasties, were also accommodated by them, and turned into the shrines of Coptic saints. Now there is not a single Christian Nubian left among the whole population. Christianity, once quite prevalent, appears to have been totally extinguished. Except that we found at one old Egyptian rock-shrine behind Derr offerings which we were informed were devoted to the Sheik Jens, no trace of Christianity remained but ruins, nor did the worshippers of this Sheik know anything of his history. The rocks at Kaer Ibrim showed in many places graffiti, but either hieroglyphics or Coptic; we found no trace of Greek, or of inscriptions of Roman soldiers. There are, moreover, prehistoric, or at least primitive, drawings of animals long extinct in this country (elephant, giraffe, &c.), and also drawings of the sacred boat of the Egyptians, with its house in the centre of the boat. The hieroglyphics reach back to the days of the eleventh dynasty.

Abu-Simbel has been so amply described that I shall confine myself to noting the offensive novelty set up by the British authorities. Instead of cutting an inscription upon the live rock to commemorate the victory of Toashki, there is a staring slab of Sicilian marble, set up as an advertisement of that victory. This advertisement states at the opening that it is a "memorial tablet on rocks overhanging Abu-Simbel." It is not on an overhanging rock, but beside and below the great temple. It proceeds, in doubtful English, to state the circumstances of the battle. Is it not inconceivable that people who had lived and campaigned in Egypt, and had seen in a hundred instances what a memorial of the kind should be, were unable to imagine anything better than a vulgar and senseless defacement of this great rock temple? For a defacement it is, since it strikes the eye when approaching with the effect of a poster made of white paper. I trust the day will come when more civilized Englishmen will take it away from mere shame, and replace it (if they choose) by something suitable.

The temple is now cleared of sand, and will remain so, we hope, for some years. But the process of filling in from the overhanging mountain is always going on, in spite of the retaining wall which Ramses II. built at the north side of his temple. It is a curious accident that the only colossus which has suffered from an earthquake, and has had his head and shoulders shaken off, which are now lying in front of him on the ground, is that on which all the inscriptions occur. His three complete brethren have not attained to this interest. It is like the statue of Memnon and his fellow. The broken statue is famous, while its complete fellow is dumb in history. The famous text of the Greek mercenaries of Pammetichus, written like a garter below the knee of the broken colossus, and no doubt then written four feet over the sand on which the writer stood, was only found by digging away the sand by Lepsius, far below the level, whereas it is now so high that we studied it with a glass. The concluding letters of the first two lines seemed to me quite worn away. We are still at a loss to know what is meant by their having penetrated "above Kerkis"; I suggest that Kerkis means Wadi Halfa, and that the enigmatical text is to be rendered "they came above Kerkis," either "as far as the river let them," or "until the river began to fall." As regards the limits of this expedition I will say a word in another letter.

J. P. MAHAFFY.

Fine-Art Society.

MR. CALDERON will not be represented in the forthcoming exhibition at Burlington House, to which place, after nearly four months' absence, he has, his friends will be glad to hear, returned with re-established health.

It appears to be almost certain that the Academy Exhibition will be remarkable for the number of its good landscapes. Among these, however, there will be found none by Mr. Adrian Stokes, who has been prevented by illness from finishing his pictures. Mr. Henry Moore, owing to a similar cause, will probably contribute one example only.

MR. F. GOODALL's collection of drawings illustrating 'Life in the Valley of the Nile' will be opened to the public at the gallery of the Fine-Art Society on Monday next; to-day (Saturday) is appointed for the private view. On the same days the public opening and private view will occur of Mr. T. McLean's thirtieth annual exhibition of cabinet pictures at No. 7, Haymarket.

'MR. GLADSTONE in his Study in Downing Street, July, 1893,' is the title of a picture by the Prince P. Troubetzkoy which may be seen next week at Messrs. Graves's, 6, Pall Mall. To-day (Saturday) has been appointed by Messrs. Bousso, Valadon & Co. for the private view, at No. 5, Regent Street, Pall Mall, of a collection of modern Dutch paintings, including instances of the skill of Heeren Artz, Blommers, De Haas, Israëls, J. and W. Maris, Mauve, and Meadag. The public will be admitted on Monday next. Mr. Mendosa exhibits in King Street, St. James's, pictures and sketches by Mr. T. M. Hemy, illustrative of life on the Dogger Bank. The New English Art Club opens its doors in the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, to the public on Monday next, and to-day (Saturday) for the private view. On Thursday last the Continental Gallery, 157, New Bond Street, was opened with a collection of pictures by living French artists.

THE Loan Collection of Pictures formed in Guildhall by the Corporation will be open gratuitously to the public until the 30th of June next. It is one of the best of its class. Of the 150 pictures it comprises a very large proportion are fine works from the collections of various owners. Among the best are Sir John Gilbert's gift to the Permanent Gallery of the Corporation of London, 'Sir Lancelot du Lac'; Mr. B. Riviere's 'His Only Friend'; Mr. Herkimer's masterpiece, 'The Last Muster'; Mr. Poynter's 'Israel in Egypt'; Mr. Armitage's 'Herod's Birthday Feast,' his gift to the City; F. Walker's 'Sunny Thames'; Sir F. Leighton's 'An Idyll' (R.A., 1881), 'Morotta,' and 'Weaving the Wreath' (R.A., 1873); Mr. Watts's portraits of Mr. F. Calderon and Lady Garragh; Sir J. Millais's 'An Idyll' (R.A., 1884), 'The Proscribed Royalist,' 'Isabella' (R.A., 1849), and 'Sir Isumbras'; Mr. Calderon's 'Her Eyes are with her Thoughts'; Mr. W. Wyllie's impressive 'Phantom Ship' (R.A., 1889); Mr. Alma Tadema's 'Roses of Heliogabalus'; Rembrandt's 'High Priest' and 'An Old Lady'; Ruydael's 'Overshot Mill'; Terburg's 'Lady reading a Letter to her Mother' (Smith, 29) and 'The Glass of Lemonade' (Smith, 8); De Hooghe's 'Back Court of a House' (Smith, 30) and 'Interior with Two Cavaliers'; Reynolds's 'Duchess of Rutland'; Cuypp's 'Winter View on the Maas' (Smith, 19); Metsu's 'Woman feeding a Spaniel' (Smith, 22); Romney's 'The Spinster'; Van Dyck's 'G. Digby and W. Russell'; Landseer's 'Monarch of the Glen'; Turner's 'Venice'; Wilkie's 'Letter of Introduction'; Mulroady's 'Train up a Child'; J. Phillip's 'Chat round the Brazer'; Mr. Hook's 'Return of Torello' (1852); Madox Brown's 'Lear and Cordelia'; Mason's 'The Evening Hymn' and 'The Gander'; Rossetti's 'Mona Vanna,' 'Pandora,' and 'Joli Coeur'; Mr. Holman Hunt's 'Finding of the Saviour in the Temple' and 'Smyrna Sheep'; and Sir E. Burne-Jones's 'Hesperides.' There are, besides, pictures by Boerestraten, Broughel, Constable, Crome, Mr. H. W. Davis, Etty, Gainsborough, Mr. G. D. Leslie, J. Linnell, Mieris, A. Moore, Mr. D. Murray, Raeburn, and James Ward. An excellent catalogue has been compiled by Mr. Temple, the Director of the Gallery, to whom the Corporation and the public are much indebted.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS sold on the 31st ult. the following pictures, the property of Messrs. H. Koekkoek, jun., Limited: B. C. Koekkoek, Winter Scene, 130*l.* M. de Munkacsy, The Hero of the Village, 525*l.* J. F. Hule, In Full Cry, and The Death, 120*l.* J. Stark, In Windsor Forest, 189*l.*

DR. WOODWARD, of Montrose, whose work on 'Ecclesiastical Heraldry' was recently published, has nearly ready for press a work on the wider subject of 'European Heraldry,' which is to appear towards the close of the year, with illuminated plates of a superior character.

Mrs. E. PEACOCK is preparing an enlarged and improved edition of 'English Church Furniture, Ornaments, and Decorations as they existed in the Early Part of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth.' The first edition was issued in 1866, and it was founded on the lists of church goods destroyed in certain Lincolnshire churches in 1566 A.D. It contained all the returns then known to be in existence of the work done by the Commissioners sent to clear the churches of Popish objects. A short time ago the returns of twenty-six other parishes were discovered; that these have once formed part of the volume containing the rest is certain from the numbers on the folios answering to those missing in the volume. This fresh matter is of interest, and in some cases throws additional light on the manner in which worship was carried on in the parish churches during the reign of Mary and in the early days of her successor. The editor has supplied, in as condensed a form as might be, some account of the more noteworthy families and persons mentioned in the text. He has also added a glossary explaining the nature of the objects destroyed and the uncommon words occurring in the text. Messrs. Kegan Paul & Co. are the publishers.

THE exhibition of Mr. C. J. Watson's drawings of Italian towns opens to-day at the Rembrandt Head Gallery.

FROM the 19th to the 25th of May an exhibition of the works of Carpeaux will be open in the Ecole des Beaux-Arts, Paris, and comprise sculptures, drawings, pictures, sketches of contemporaries of note, and other studies by the famous artist.

THE Universal Exhibition at Antwerp, the opening of which is announced to occur on the 8th of May, is expected to be one of the most important of its class, far superior to that which was held, with considerable success, in the same city in 1885.

A COUPLE of weeks ago, while describing the diptych by Fra Angelico, newly bought for the National Gallery, we accidentally omitted to say that the figures of the Virgin and the archangel are rather less than half the size of life. In the middle of the garden behind Gabriel is placed a sculptured well-head of marble, while at the foot of the enclosing rose trellis is a bench covered in red cloth, and going all round the garden.

A COLLECTION of the once famous H. B. caricatures, 700 in number, has just been sold under the hammer, realizing the modest sum of 6*l.* The entire remainder of them, consisting of about 14,000, was sold some years ago in one lot at Messrs. Hodgson's rooms. These have all been absorbed by the retail booksellers, so that the only way now of obtaining the pictures is to pick them up at an auction, except by chance the retailers have any left on hand.

HERM SCHONGAUER, the President of the Chamber of Commerce of Colmar, has presented his rich collection of pictures and antiquities to his native town, on condition that the Hôtel des Marchands, a fine building of the fifteenth century, shall be set apart for their reception, and for any other objects which shall be added. The Common Council has accepted his gift on these conditions, and has voted a sum of 40,000 marks for the "restoration" of the Hôtel. Colmar was the birthplace of the early German master Martin Schongauer, and possesses several of his pictures.

AT Syracuse, near the railway station, the remains of the long-missing Roman aqueduct have been discovered. It consists of a double row of arches, and has already been traced for several miles into the country; but though we now know how the town was supplied with water, its source has not yet been discovered. A little stream of water is still running in the channel.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—Saturday Concerts.
DRURY LANE.—'Faust,' 'Carmen.'

ONE of the most noteworthy features in connexion with dramatic productions of a serious nature at the present time is the importance which managers attach to the musical adjuncts in spite of the fact that entr'actes are treated almost necessarily with indifference. But Beethoven, Schubert, and other acknowledged masters left incidental music to plays which have since perished, though the music has survived; and those composers who have recently contributed in artistic fashion to the performances at such theatres as the Lyceum and the Haymarket may feel assured that their efforts are likely to survive for a longer time than certain of the plays for which their numbers were written. Prof. Villiers Stanford's incidental music to Tennyson's 'Becket' had not been heard in the concert-room, so far as we are aware, until it was presented last Saturday at the Crystal Palace. Seven sections were given, consisting of the overture, four entr'actes, and two vocal pieces. In the overture Prof. Stanford has made felicitous use of the traditional hymn "Ingens telluris conditor," which was probably sung on the day of Becket's murder, December 29th, as it is so allotted in the Church's calendar. The entr'actes entitled "Becket's Roast" and "The Martyrdom" are impressive, and the tiny song, occupying little more than half a minute, "Babble in bower, Under the rose," is charming. Under the composer's direction the instrumental music was rendered to perfection, and Madame Fanny Moody and Mr. Charles Manners were unexceptionable in the vocal numbers. Madame Moody was also excellent in the second prayer to the Virgin from Dvorák's 'Spectre's Bride,' and Mr. Manners in the aria "Se il rigor" from 'La Juive.' Mlle. Kleeberg gave a singularly bright and crisp rendering of Schumann's Pianoforte Concerto; and Mozart's Symphony in D, known as the 'Hafner,' and Beethoven's 'Leonora' Overture, No. 2, were included in the programme.

The performances of opera in English at Drury Lane have not, so far, called for much in the way of criticism, but they are meeting with a surprising measure of support from the public, 'Faust,' on Thursday last week, and 'Carmen,' on Saturday, attracting audiences that overflowed the theatre. In Gounod's opera Miss Pauline Joran at brief notice essayed the part of Marguerite with some success; and, except for a tendency to indulge in over gesticulation, a new American baritone, Mr. Hugh Chilvers, was commendable as Mephistopheles.

The Polish contralto, Mlle. Olitzka, made a highly favourable impression in 'Carmen,' her acting in the tragic portions of the work being powerful. Excellent also was the Toreador of Mr. Richard Green, an exceedingly promising young artist. The conductor, Signor Armando Soppilli, was disposed in both operas to hurry the tempi, but he kept his forces well together.

SIR ROBERT STEWART, MUS.D.

THE brief notice of so remarkable a man which appeared in your number of March 24th seems to call for some supplementary sketch from one who shared his work and observed his life very intimately. Stewart was known to the world beyond Ireland as an organist of the highest quality—he had not his superior in Europe—as the writer of Church music which has taken hold of the English cathedrals, and of glees not easy of performance from their richness and complexity. But in Dublin we knew and valued the man for much more than this. He was learned in music beyond all his contemporaries, and in Church music especially, assiduous study in youth and a wonderful memory gave him a mastery which is hard to describe. Transposing difficult accompaniments at sight, reading from instrumental scores, arranging for piano or organ, were child's play to him, and his rendering of orchestral pieces on the organ showed at once how perfect was his knowledge of instrumentation, and how well he could produce its various effects upon his own instrument. I often have wondered at his quickness in detecting the smallest blunder in musical writing, and his learning in bringing instances from the great masters to bear upon any disputed point in theory. He never grew old, but threw himself with all his heart into the new development of Wagner, whose works he constantly studied, and heard at Bayreuth. Indeed, his later songs show clearly the influence of the great master. It is not often that such quickness and versatility are found combined with thoroughness and unflinching diligence. He never missed an appointment; he never was late for an engagement. Of his time and labour he was never chary, and would work into the night, after a long day's teaching, to instruct a poor pupil, or to copy out music for a friend. It was this extraordinary assiduity which wore him out before his full time, and robbed us of a man whom we cannot hope to replace. Though he was, like all the masters of his craft, somewhat impatient and irritable when conducting, nothing could exceed his long-suffering when helping amateurs over the stile, or cloaking their errors by skillful devices. I am not here concerned to give a catalogue of his works, but will undertake to say that wherever his Service for a Double Choir in E flat has become known it is cherished and reproduced as the finest of all our modern services. Most of this work was written when he was almost a boy, as the exercise for his degree of Mus. Bac. J. P. MAHAFFY.

Musical Gossip.

We have received a sketch programme of the Hereford Festival, which will be held in September next, and will evidently be one of the most interesting of the Three-Choir Festivals for many years. Here are the dates and the names of the principal works to be performed: Tuesday, 11th, morning, 'Elijah'; evening, miscellaneous concert in the Shire Hall, including a new cantata by Dr. C. H. Lloyd, 'Sir Olgie and the Ladie Elsie.' Wednesday, Dvorák's 'Requiem,' a symphony, and Mendelssohn's 42nd Psalm, 'As the hart pants'; evening, the first and second parts of Bach's 'Christmas' Oratorio, and the first and second parts of Haydn's 'Creation.' Thursday morning, the second part of Dr. Mackenzie's 'Bethlehem,' the Prelude to 'Parsifal,' a new work by Prof. Bridge, 'The Cradle of Christ,' and Spohr's 'Last Judgment'; evening, Dr. Hubert Parry's 'Job' and Mendelssohn's 'Lobgesang.' Friday morning, 'The Messiah'; and evening, a chamber concert in the Shire Hall. Among the principal artists already engaged are Madame Albani, Mr. Edward Lloyd, and Mr. Santley.

The premature death of Mr. Haydn Parry on Thursday last week deprives the world of a composer of some promise. The musician who lent his name to the scores of 'Cigarette' and 'Miami' had unmistakable talent, and had he lived his name might probably have been associated eventually with higher-class work than light comic opera.

The Annual Festival of the Royal Society of Musicians will be held at the Hôtel Métropole on May 17th, with Prince Henry of Battenberg in the chair.

An excellent concert was given at the Queen's Hall on Monday evening, chiefly by the students of the Royal Normal College and Academy of Music for the Blind. Among the best efforts, speaking in a strictly artistic sense, were those of Master Horace Watling, a juvenile pianist of rich promise; Miss Amelia Campbell, mezzo-soprano; Mr. Alfred Hollins at the pianoforte and the organ; and the male and female choir in unaccompanied pieces by Wilbye, Mendelssohn, Purcell, and Sullivan. In the course of an address delivered between the parts it was stated that last year fully 20,000 had been earned by former pupils at the valuable institution so ably directed by Dr. F. J. Campbell.

The recently established Union of Graduates in Music has issued 'Suggestions for Drafting a Bill for the Registration of Teachers of Music.' The propositions and clauses have been formulated from a memorandum drawn up by the Rev. Dr. J. H. Mee, of Oxford.

ARRANGEMENTS have been concluded by Messrs. Ricordi for new operas by Mascagni, Leoncavallo, Puccini, Franchetti, and other composers of lesser note.

Messrs. PATTERSON & SONS, of Edinburgh, announce ten orchestral and choral concerts, with the aid of Mr. Henschel's new Scottish orchestra, on Monday evenings during next winter. The recent series seems to have been highly successful, and the managers offer thanks for the liberal support they have received.

WAGNER'S 'Tristan and Isolde' has at last been produced in French at the Brussels Théâtre de la Monnaie, and it would seem with considerable success. The local critics for the most part have realized the significance of this greatest of all music-dramas, and praise has been bestowed on some of the principal artists, notably on M. Cosma as Tristan and M. Séguin as Kurwenal, while the efforts of the orchestra under M. Flon have been acclaimed with enthusiasm.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK

Mon.	Miss Katie Leonard's Pianoforte Recital, 2, Steinway Hall.
—	Mr. and Mrs. Frank Moir's Recital, 2, Queen's Hall.
—	Mr. L. Ravina's Concert, 5, Queen's Hall.
—	'Carmen' at Liberty Lane Theatre.
Tues.	Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch's Concert, 245, "Downland," West End.
Wed.	Mr. Henschel's Wagner Concert, 4, Queen's Hall.
Thurs.	Royal Choral Society, by A. C. Mackenzie's new Oratorio, 'Bethlehem,' 5, Albert Hall.
Fri.	Royal Artillery Band Concert, 2, St. James's Hall.
Sat.	Croyal Palace Concert, 2.
—	London Choral Concert, 2, Queen's Hall.
—	Recital of Chamber Music, 2, 1915 Hall, Hampstead.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

AVENUE.—'A Comedy of Signs,' a Play in Four Acts. By John Todhunter.

CRITICISM.—'An Aristocratic Alliance,' a Play in Three Acts. By Lady Greville.

SOMETHING may be advanced in favour of the experiment tried by Dr. Todhunter at the Avenue Theatre. A drama of actual life, dispensing with all extrinsic aid of situation and set tableau, and depending wholly upon psychology, is calculated—when supported by clever and cynical dialogue—to interest a cultivated class of playgoers. Of such, however, the audience on Thursday in last week was not wholly composed. Stalwart and loyal, Bedford Park sent an enthusiastic contingent, the cheers of which, in the long run, prevailed over the discontented manifestations of the gods. Discontented the gods were, and not without cause. The matters set before them were not calculated to appeal to them. Killing flies, to which the heroine challenges her companion, must seem but poor sport to those accustomed to baiting authors; and the strong language to which the same lady stoops, though creditable in a beginner, was not likely to impress a jury of experts such as was congregated. The result of these conditions was the collapse of the entertainment. Less than justice was done to Dr. Todhunter's play, which is neither inept nor foolish, but only inadequate. Carmen, as the heroine is familiarly called, is a direct transmission from Norwegian sources. She is almost another Hedda Gabler. Married without love, wholly dissatisfied with her surroundings, and pining for a larger life, or what she conceives to be such, she plays with fire, and finds that, so far from burning, it will not even warm. The would-be Don Juan retires from her presence discomfited, and she arrives at the conclusion that the clouds which hem her in are not to be lifted. Her own escapade, however, brings on her the light for which she pines. Her husband is for once genuinely angry. As he tells her that he will stand no more nonsense, she finds herself being subjugated, and she surrenders ultimately to his anger what she has refused to his love. To give this play a chance two things are necessary: great piquancy and seduction in the representative of the heroine, and some tolerance of the unwonted on the part of the public. Neither was forthcoming. So far from being indulgent, the audience was unwontedly merciless. Miss Farr may be credited with earnestness and some intelligence. Her performance was none the less wholly deficient in seduction. The result is a rebuff to Dr. Todhunter and to the Independent Theatre, whose methods had been followed while their pessimism and gloom had been rejected.

As one of the most brilliantly successful of French comedies, a work produced forty years ago at the Gymnase, and annexed or "conveyed" by the Comédie Française, 'Le Gendre de M. Poirier,' first announced as 'La Revauche de Georges Dandin,' has dangled, a tempting bait, in front of adaptors. More than one has nibbled at it. Not until now, however, has the play been seriously entertained by a management. Lady Greville has treated it after the fashion of her kind. She has transferred scene and characters to England, has introduced some juvenile love-making of the sort that in our latest drama is substituted for low comedy, has whisked in a pretty widow from the 'Bataille de Dames' or some similar piece, has translated as much of the wit as would bear the process, and has woven into the dialogue the best English jokes with which her memory supplied her. Thus, though the tissue of the cloth is broken, so many patches appear upon it that it is practically weatherproof—a Joseph's coat, sound, though of many colours. If the processes adopted are not to be commended, it is difficult to see what else could be done. The duel which furnishes in the original a dénouement has necessarily to go, and with it departs all chance of a dénouement. What has specially tempted the management is the contrast between the aristocrat and the bourgeois which the play holds forth. At the moment when a clamour is heard against the House of Lords what can be better than to depict the iniquities of one of its members? A direct application to modern times is seen when the sternest censor of an upper chamber is working by indirect means for a peerage. Very far are, however, the author and translator from attempting to hold the balance straight. If their "hereditary legislator" is indolent and vicious, his antagonist is purse-proud, foolish, arrogant, and underbred. In the end the sympathies of the audience go out to the peer. Vicious as he is, he is a more pleasing figure than the father-in-law who tries to starve him into submission. This is the reason probably why Mr. Wyndham—passing over the character of Poirier, "created" by Lesueur, revived by Provost, and transmitted to M. Got—has taken that of Gaston de Presles, now turned into the Earl of Forres. The part suits Mr. Wyndham, who assigns it the necessary brightness and distinction. There are few who recall Rosa Chéri in the character of Antoinette, though memories of Madame Favart survive. Miss Moore is more like the earlier than the later representative of the part. Nothing that she has done is prettier or more pathetic. Mr. Groves made little of the character of Perkin Potter (Poirier), which in the English version seems not too intelligible. Mr. H. de Lange was quite excellent as the cook. Two female characters, introduced for no very evident purpose, were played by Miss Emily Fowler—reappearing after a long absence from the stage—and Miss Annie Hughes.

Dramatic Gossip.

'MISS RUTLAND,' a three-act play of modern life, by Mr. Richard Pryce, was given on Tuesday afternoon at the Gaiety. Its heroine, an actress, gets rid of a wasted life and a hopeless passion by dying at the close of her lover's play. Suicide is the plan meditated, but this is unnecessary, since emotion kills. As a happy ending has been forced on a work intended to be tragical, her death brings matters to a proper issue. Miss E. Williams and Mr. Herbert played the heroine and hero of a play fantastic and ingenious, but dull.

'JAUNTY JANE SHORE' proved no better than its title promised. It was acted at the Strand with much spirit, and just survived the manifestation of hostility it provoked. Miss Alice Atherton and Mr. H. Paulton took the principal parts.

'CASTLE' was played at the Garrick for the last time on Wednesday, when it was withdrawn to make room for the new play of George Fleming.

'FROU-FROU' was put permanently into the bills at the Comedy last Saturday night. Miss Emery has modified in some slight respects her representation of Gilberte, but still plays it in brilliant fashion. Mr. Cyril Maude remains an effective Brigand, and the entire performance is thoroughly competent.

'THE LAND OF HEART'S DESIRE' of Mr. W. B. Yeats, which constitutes at the Avenue the opening piece, is a pleasing, but undramatic Irish fairy legend, which the interpretation failed to commend to the public.

MR. WILLARD will shortly return to London, and will, it is anticipated, be seen in 'The Professor's Love Story' of Mr. Barrie, and 'John Nodham's Double,' by Mr. Hatton—pieces in which, in the United States, he has been received with much favour.

THE last nights of 'The Transgressor' are announced at the Court Theatre. The future plans of Miss Nethercole are undeclared.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—G. E. L.—W. G. W. M.—A. D.—W. C. M.—Jackman—T. J. M.—R. M. R.—A. G.—E. W. C. B. R.—C. M. A.—J. M. R.—received.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION BY POST. To all parts of the United Kingdom.

For Twelve Months...	15	0
For Six Months...	7	6

For all Countries within the Postal Union.

For Twelve Months...	18	0
For Six Months...	9	0

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY.

THE ENGLISH CATALOGUE OF BOOKS FOR 1893.

A List of Books published in Great Britain and Ireland in the Year 1893, with their Sizes, Prices, and Publishers' Names. Also of the Principal Books published in the United States of America. With the Addition of an Index to Subjects. Royal 8vo. 5s.

ON SHORT LEAVE TO JAPAN.

By Capt. G. J. YOUNGHUSBAND,
Queen's Own Corps of Guides, Author of 'Eighteen Hundred Miles on a Burnside Tat,' &c.
With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Just out.]

DEDICATED TO H.R.H. PRINCESS MARY, DUCHESS OF TECK.

A MANUAL of OBSTETRIC
NURSING. By MARIAN HUMPHREY, British Lying-in Hospital London, Diploma London Obstetric Society,
Member Royal British Nurses' Association, and of its Registration Board. Crown 8vo. 300 pp. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The CHAIRMAN'S HANDBOOK.

By Sir R. V. D. FALGHAVE, K.C.B., Clerk to the House of Commons. Tenth Edition, Enlarged and Rewritten. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s.
"A brief compilation of suggestions and rules for the conduct of chairmen of public and other meetings, based upon the procedure and practice of Parliament."—Daily News.

GLIMPSES of the FRENCH REVO- LUTION: Myths, Ideals, and Realities.

By J. G. ALGER, Author of 'Englishmen in the French Revolution,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.
"No writer has done more thorough work in the investigation of the personal side of the revolution than Mr. Alger, whose 'Englishmen in the French Revolution' commanded, not long ago, general attention and critical approval. The present work is even more interesting, dealing, as it does, with many aspects of the revolution, always from a personal point of view; and, like its predecessor, it shows signs of careful and accurate research. A deeply interesting and most valuable book."—Daily Chronicle.

LANDMARKS of a LITERARY LIFE, 1880-1893.

By Mrs. NEWTON CROSLAND
(Camilla Toulmin), Author of 'Mrs. Blake,' &c. With Photogravure Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.
"A book of the day. Will be new to most readers and interesting to all."—St. James's Budget.
"Mrs. Newton Crossland has written a pleasant volume of remembrances put together with remarkable clearness."—Athenæum.

FRA PAOLO SARPI: the Greatest of the Venetians. By the Rev. ALEXANDER ROBERT-SON, Author of 'Count Campello and Catholic Reform in Italy.' With Illustrations and Facsimile Letter.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"The book brings together into one view more about 'the greatest of the Venetians' than will be found in any one English book; while the versatility of Sarpi's genius, his acknowledged pre-eminence in politics, theology, science, and a craft so practical as anatomy, make it a good specimen of the class that tell the stories of great men for their moral value as examples."—Notesman.

The INSTRUCTION and AMUSE- MENTS of the BLIND.

By Dr. GUILLE. With 33
Engravings. 8vo. cloth, 5s.
A reprint of the translation, published in London, 1810, of the interesting and useful work which was dedicated to the king (of France) and printed by the Blind at the Royal Institution for the Blind, in Paris, in the year 1817.

A SCHOOL COURSE in HEAT.

(Revised and Enlarged.) By W. LARDEN, M.A.,
Assistant Master in the M. N. B. College, Devonport; late Science Scholar, Merton College, Oxford. Numerous Illustrations. Fifth Edition. Crown 8vo. 5s.

NOW READY, price One Shilling.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE, APRIL NUMBER.

Contents:
OLD MEMORIES. Painted by Frank Bramley, A.R.A. With Frontispiece and Portrait. Painted by Gilbert Hamilton.
THE FARMER in the SOUTH. (Sketches of American Types.) Octavo Thames. Illustrated.
THE BURIAL of the GIVER. Thomas Nelson Page.
PERADVENTURE. Anna C. Brewster.
LIFE UNDER WATER. Gustav Kobbe. (Illustrated.)
A FOUND of CURE. A story of Monte Carlo. Chaps. 3 & 4. William Henry Wood.
THE BOWERY and INDIENIA. Cyprian and Suburban Sketches. H. C.
Munser. (Illustrated.)
JOHN MARSH, BUTHERNER. Chaps. 23-25. George W. Cable.
SPRING RING. Barbara Campbell Scott.
FRENCH CARICATURE of TUDOR. Arabesque Alexandre. (Illustrated.)
A WINTER JOURNEY UP the COAST of NORWAY. Knutson M.
Andersen. Ex Minister of the C. & O. Denmark. (Illustrated.)
A WORLD ABOUT PAINTING. William A. Coffin.
WITH the GOALS. J. West Norwood.
ON PICTORIAL BEAR. A Merchant's Voyage to the West Indies in 1838. Peter A. Green. (Continued.)
AT "TULLY HEAD." August Dobson. 4s. 6s.

London:

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

FROM WALTER SCOTT'S LIST.

NEW NOVEL BY GEORGE MOORE.

JUST PUBLISHED, cloth, crown 8vo. 6s.

ESTHER WATERS:

A NOVEL.

By GEORGE MOORE.

"We wish to express in unqualified terms our gratitude to Mr.
Moore for a piece of patient, solid, vigorous work, which stamps him a master of his craft.....The book is an eminently humane one. It is not didactic, it does not deliberately 'make for righteousness,' but it does better, in that it makes for knowledge and sympathy.....As we live the book through again in memory, we feel more and more confident that Mr. Moore has done, and well done, a thing worth doing, and has once for all vindicated his position among the half dozen living novelists of whom the historian of English literature will have to take account."

Daily Chronicle.

"It may be as well to set down, beyond possibility of misapprehension, my belief that in 'Esther Waters' we have the most artistic, the most complete, and the most inevitable work of fiction that has been written in England for at least two years.....To find a book to compare with 'Esther Waters' we must go back to December, 1891, and to Mr. Hardy's 'Tess of the D'Urbervilles.'—A. T. Q. C. in the Speaker.

"Mr. Moore's novels show a mastery of detail, an endless patience in the delineation of character, a devotion to the rendering of actualities which mark their author as a man who—at least in English—stands entirely by himself. 'Esther Waters' is no exception."—Glasgow Herald.

"Hardly since the time of Defoe have the habits and manners of the 'masses' been delineated as they are delineated here with a particularity which at once convinces us of the writer's truthfulness and accuracy.....'Esther Waters' is the best story that he [Mr. Moore] has written, and one on which he may be heartily congratulated."—Globe.

London: WALTER SCOTT, LIMITED,
24, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

CASSELL & COMPANY'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

In a few days will be issued, price 10s. 6d.

'COUNT CAVOUR and MADAME DE CIR-COURT: some Unpublished Correspondence.' Edited by COUNT NIGRA. Translated by A. J. BUTLER.

By GRANT ALLEN.

TIDAL THAMES, The. By GRANT ALLEN. With India Proof Impressions of Twenty magnificent Full-Page Photogravure Plates, and with many other Illustrations in the Text after Original Drawings by W. L. Wyllie, A.R.A. In one handsome volume, half-morocco gilt, gilt edges, 5l. 15s. 6d.

G. A. SALA.

Ready shortly, 2 vols. 21s.

THINGS I HAVE SEEN and PEOPLE I HAVE KNOWN. By G. A. SALA.

Now ready, price 6s.

STATESMEN, PAST and FUTURE.

"At once attracts curiosity as well as attention."
Leeds Mercury.

Vol. I. now ready of the Popular Edition of PICTURESQUE AMERICA. With 12 Exquisite Steel Plates and about 200 Original Wood Engravings. 18s.

Prof. NORMAN LOCKYER, C.B.
The DAWN of ASTRONOMY. A Study of the Temple Worship and Mythology of the Ancient Egyptians. By Prof. J. NORMAN LOCKYER, C.B. F.R.S., &c. Illustrated. Cloth, 21s.

Sir ROBERT BALL, F.R.S.
The STORY of the SUN. By Sir ROBERT S. BALL, LL.D. F.R.S. F.R.A.S. With 8 Coloured Plates and other Illustrations, 21s.

By JOHN PENDLETON.

OUR RAILWAYS: their Origin, Development, Incident, and Romance. With nearly 300 Illustrations. 2 vols. 24s.

"Mr. Pendleton's work bids fair to be the standard railway history."—Bookman.

VOL. VII. OF THE NEW AND REVISED EDITION OF

CASSELL'S HISTORY of ENGLAND. With New and Original Illustrations. The Text thoroughly Revised throughout. 9s.

ELECTRICITY in the SERVICE of MAN. With upwards of 950 Illustrations. Revised by R. MULLINEUX WALMSLEY, D.Sc. (Lond.), F.R.S.E. New and Revised Edition. Cloth, 10s. 6d.

CASSELL'S STOREHOUSE of GENERAL INFORMATION. Fully illustrated with High-Class Wood Engravings, and with Maps and Coloured Plates. Vol. VI. 5s.

J. COMPTON RICKETT.

The QUICKENING of CALIBAN. A Modern Story of Evolution. By J. COMPTON RICKETT. Second and Cheap Edition. 3s. 6d.

CASSELL'S ITALIAN LESSONS. With Exercises. Crown 8vo. 208 pp. cloth, 3s. 6d.

LORD A. LOFTUS.

SECOND SERIES READY SHORTLY.

The DIPLOMATIC REMINISCENCES of LORD A. LOFTUS, P.C. G.C.B. 1862 to 1879. 2 vols. 32s. The Second Series of these Reminiscences covers the Period of the Author's Residence at the Courts of Bavaria, Berlin, and St. Petersburg.

STANLEY WEYMAN.

The Man in Black. With 12 Full-Page Illustrations by Wal Paget and H. M. Paget. 3s. 6d.
"In 'The Man in Black' Mr. Stanley Weyman has followed up his recent brilliant adventures in the field of romance with a short story which we cannot but think must have charmed Victor Hugo himself."—Saturday Review.

The Story of Francis Cludde. 6s.

R. L. STEVENSON.

Catriona. Twentieth Thousand. 6s.

Island Nights' Entertainments. Eighth Thousand. 6s.

Treasure Island. Forty-eighth Thousand. 3s. 6d.

The Master of Ballantrae. Twenty-second Thousand. 2s. 6d.

"Kidnapped." Thirty-fifth Thousand. 3s. 6d.

The Black Arrow. Illustrated. Twenty-first Thousand. 3s. 6d.

The Wrecker. By R. L. STEVENSON and LLOYD OSBOURNE. Illustrated. Twenty-fourth Thousand. 6s.

A Foot-Note to History. Eight Years of Trouble in Samoa. Third Thousand. 6s.

Q.

The Delectable Duchy: Stories, Studies, and Sketches. By Q. Cloth, 6s.

UNIFORM EDITION OF Q'S WORKS,
price 3s. each.

Dead Man's Rock.

The Splendid Spur.

The Blue Pavilions.

The Astonishing History of Troy Town.

"I Saw Three Ships."

Noughts and Crosses.

GILBERT SHELTON.

The Standishs of High Acre. A Novel. 3 vols. 21s.

"It is well done....The elements of weirdness are used with effect."—National Observer.

STANDISH O'GRADY.

Lost on Du Corrig; or, 'Twixt Earth and Ocean. By STANDISH O'GRADY. With 8 Full-Page Illustrations. 6s.

E. W. HORNING.

Tiny Luttrell. By E. W. HORNING, Author of 'A Bride from the Bush,' &c. 6s.

J. M. BARRIE.

The Little Minister. By J. M. BARRIE. With 9 Full-Page Illustrations by W. Hole, R.S.A. 6s.

H. RIDER HAGGARD.

King Solomon's Mines. By H. RIDER HAGGARD. Revised Edition. Illustrated. 3s. 6d.

MAX PEMBERTON.

The Iron Pirate. With 16 Illustrations. Second Edition. 6s.

LESLIE KEITH.

'Lisbeth. By LESLIE KEITH, Author of 'The Oblivions,' 'In Spite of Herself,' &c. POPULAR EDITION, ready shortly. 6s.

CASSELL & COMPANY, LIMITED, London; Paris and Melbourne.

J. M. DENT & CO.

TWO NEW VOLUMES just ready.

THE TEMPLE SHAKESPEARE.

Edited by ISRAEL GOLLANCOZ, M.A.

With Concise Preface, full Glossary, and the necessary Notes.

IN SHILLING VOLUMES.

EACH PLAY SEPARATELY.

Printed on Hand-made Paper, in Red and Black, with Photogravure Frontispiece and Title-Page by Walter Crane.

THE
TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.
THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

READY THIS DAY, cloth, 1s. net; paste grain roan, 1s. 6d. net.

STUDENTS EDITION ON WRITING PAPER,
Broad Margins, 1s. 6d. net.

THE TEMPEST was published last month, and two other Volumes will be issued simultaneously each month, in the order of the Folio Editions.

Prospectus, with Specimen Pages, on application.

PRESS NOTICES.

"THE IDEAL SHAKESPEARE."

"If I were limited to the possession of two editions, I would choose first the 'Variorum' edition of 1821, and my second choice should be the 'Temple' edition. When we consider the perfection of the text, the beauty of the get up, and the modesty of the price, I think we may fairly allow it is very nearly the ideal edition of Shakespeare."

H. W. Loe in the Illustrated London News.

"Without exception the most charming little book we have ever seen offered for a shilling."—Daily Chronicle.

"The enterprise of Messrs. Dent deserves unalloyed praise."—Bookman.

"This is certainly the most scholarly, portable, and aesthetically perfect Shakespeare in existence."—Newcastle Chronicle.

JUST OUT.

OUR LADY'S TUMBLER.

A Twelfth Century Legend.

Translated from the French by P. H. WICKSTEED.

Imperial 16mo. with Antique Coloured Wrapper in Red and Black, gilt top, 1s. net.

"Mr. Wickstead has, in the daintily issued brochure before us, translated into quaint and choice English a delightful legend current in France in the twelfth century. It is difficult to convey the charm with which this curious and interesting legend is invested by the simple diction of the narrative itself. Messrs. Dent have produced the tale in a very fitting manner."—Freeman's Journal.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE NEW VOLUME OF THE "BON-MOTS" SERIES.

BON-MOTS FROM SAMUEL FOOTE AND
THEODORE HOOK.

Edited by WALTER JERROLD.

With Grotesques by ANDREW BEARDOLLEY.

Royal 32mo. cloth, gilt top, 2s. 6d. net.

"It is not every day that one lights upon a dainty volume with at least two hearty laughs upon each of its tiny pages. For such a work we are indebted to Messrs. Dent & Co., the publishers, and to Mr. Walter Jerrold, the editor."

Daily Chronicle (London).

"We welcome this dainty little compilation of Mr. Walter Jerrold's... with its clean-cut little grotesques by Andrew Beardolley."—Estimateur (London).

"It is a little book to pick up at odd moments. The illustrations are simply exquisite."—Herald (Chicago).

"This dainty little volume is crammed with good things... and with wit that is as fresh as when it flashed out a century ago."—Sunday.

"One is grateful to Mr. Jerrold for collecting them in a form so dainty, yet one is more grateful to Mr. Andrew Beardolley for the wonderfully clever grotesques with which the pages are plentifully sprinkled. Some of these little sketches are quaint, delicate, and original in the highest degree, and they alone make the volume a very desirable possession."—Review of Reviews.

London: Aldine House, 69, Great Eastern-street.

J. M. DENT & CO.

Ready on the 15th inst.

THE FORTY-FIVE. In 2 vols. 7s. net.

Being the New Volumes of the

ROMANCES OF ALEXANDRE DUMAS.

IN FORTY-EIGHT VOLUMES.

The following Volumes are now ready, and a Complete Novel will be issued each month.

The THREE MUSKETEERS. 3 vols. 7s. net.

TWENTY YEARS AFTER. 3 vols. 7s. net.

VICOMTE DE BRAGELONNE. 6 vols. 21s. net.

MARGUERITE DE VALOIS. 2 vols. 7s. net.

LA DAME DE MONSOREAU. 2 vols. 7s. net.

The TWO DIANAS. 3 vols. 10s. 6d. net.

"To all romantic spirits the appearance of Messrs. Dent & Co.'s new library edition of the Romances of Dumas affords matter for hearty congratulation. A most desirable acquisition to the library and entirely satisfactory to lovers of Dumas. They are exceedingly attractive books, excellent as to type and paper; the binding, in design, colour, and material, of an admirable taste; with capital engravings by way of illustration by French and English artists."

Saturday Review.

"One of Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.'s most successful achievements in the revival of famous romances, the binding, typography, and engravings combining to render these volumes irresistibly attractive."—Times.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

"The charming edition of Dumas' Novels which Messrs. Dent & Co. issue."—Athenæum.

"A more thoroughly creditable set of books [the ten volumes containing the D'Artagnan cycle], both outwardly and inwardly, cannot be seen; paper, type, and numerous illustrations are alike generous and admirable."

Review of Reviews.

ON NEURASTHENIA (Brain and Nerve Exhaustion, Weakness and Failure); and the NEURASTHENIAS of INFLAMMA. By T. STURGEON DOWSE, M.D. 2s. 6d. Medline, Tyndal & Cox, King William-street, Strand.

EVERY ONE SHOULD READ

L A Y R E L I G I O N.

By RICHARD HART.

"Strikingly outspoken and interesting."

R. W. Allen, 4, Ave Maria-lane; or post free from the Author, Crofton Advertising Office, Crofton.

Price Two and Sixpence.

IMPORTANT NEW WORK BY

SIR ROBERT S. BALL, F.R.S.,

Professor of Astronomy and Geometry at the University of Cambridge.

AN ATLAS OF ASTRONOMY.

Containing 12 beautifully executed Plates.

With Explanatory Letterpress and Complete Index.

Small 6to. handsome cloth gilt cover (designed by Walter Crane), gilt edges, price 15s.

The Times says:—"The atlas is admirably adapted to meet the needs and smooth the difficulties of young and inexperienced students of astronomy, as well as materially to assist the researches of those who are more advanced."

George Philip & Son.

London: 31, Fleet-street. Liverpool: 45 to 51, South Castle-street.

Just published, 4to. cloth, 11. 11s. 6d.

THE IMAGE OF WAR; or, Service on the Chin Hills. By GEORGE CHAS. A. G. R. NEWLAND. With an introduction by Historical Notes by J. D. MACNABH. Political Officer, at Chin Hills. Illustrated with 154 reproductions of Photographs. A work of unique and beautiful character.

Two cloth, 11s.

CHIN-LUSHAI LAND. Including a Description of the various Expeditions into the Chin-Lushai Hills and the final Acquisition of the Country. By HENRY LEED. With 100 Illustrations. With 2 Maps, 1 Colotype Plate, and Woodcuts. Two cloth, 7s. 6d.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF ANGLO-MUHAMMADAN LAW. By Sir HOLLAND KNYET WILSON, Bart. M.A., late Reader in Indian Law to the University of Cambridge.

London: W. Thacker & Co. 57, Newgate-street, E.C. Calcutta: Thacker, Spink & Co.

STEVENS & SONS' QUARTERLY LIST.

BY AUTHORITY.—Now ready, bound, price 10s. 6d. THE LAW LIST FOR 1894.

This day, Fifth Edition, royal 12mo. cloth, 6s.

ELLIS'S TRUSTEE ACT, 1893. Including a Guide for Trustees to Investors. By ARTHUR ELLIS, Esq., Barrister at Law. 1894.

Just published, Second Edition, 6emy 8vo. cloth, 9s. 6d.

ODGERS'S PRINCIPLES OF PLEADING IN CIVIL ACTIONS. With Observations on Enforcement of Writs, Trial without Pleadings, and other Recent Preliminary Trials. By W. H. ODGERS, Esq., Barrister at Law. 1894.

Just published, royal 12mo. cloth, 6s.

HOW TO BECOME A SOLICITOR; or, Hints for Articled Clerks, showing the Necessary Steps for getting Articles, passing the Examinations, obtaining Admission, taking out Certificate to Practice. Hints on Reading, Tables of Cases, Statutes and Books. Articles for Law Courts. Notes of recent Cases affecting them, with Appendix, comprising many useful forms and all the questions set at all the Examinations of 1893. By F. F. LITTLE, Solicitor. 1894.

Third Edition, 6emy 8vo. cloth, 5s.

LEAKE'S LAW OF CONTRACTS. A Digest of Principles of the Law of Contracts. By STEPHEN MARTIN LEAKE, Barrister at Law. 1892.

"The work is complete, accurate, and easy of reference."

Solicitors Journal.

Now ready, No. XXXVIII (APRIL), price 3s.

Annual Subscription, post free, 12s. 6d.

THE LAW QUARTERLY REVIEW.

Edited by Mr. FREDERICK POLLOCK, Bart. M.A. LL.D.

Corpus Professor of Jurisprudence in the University of Oxford.

NOTES. Clerk's Proceedings. By Sir Howard Ephraim; Sale of Goods Act, International Law Unions, &c. The CARM of the XRIA. By R. O. Marston.

THE PRINCIPLES OF SETTLEMENT IN ITS LEGAL ASPECT. By F. V. French.

BREACH OF PROMISE OF MARRIAGE. By J. Benson White. In a SIGHT OF ACTION IN TORT A CHARGE IN ACTION. By T. Cyrenus.

A CHAPTER IN THE HISTORY OF THE LAW OF LIBEL. By Joseph R. Fisher.

SOME RECENT DECISIONS CONCERNING "ATTEMPT" and "INTENT." By Samuel Rogers.

FOREIGN COMPANIES IN ITALY. By Malcolm McIlwraith.

AUTO PERSONALIS MORITUR CUM PERSONA IN THE LAW OF HUNGARY. By R. M. Williamson.

BOOK REVIEWS.

Catalogue of Modern Law Works, Abbreviations, Reports, &c., 6d., post free.

STEVENS & SONS, Limited,

119 and 120, Chancery-lane, London.

ELKIN MATHEWS & JOHN LANE beg to announce for publication on Monday, the 16th of April, the First Volume of their New Quarterly Magazine, THE YELLOW BOOK. Pott 4to. 272 pages, cloth limp, price 5s. net.

CONTENTS.

LETTERPRESS.

1. The DEATH of the LION. By HENRY JAMES.
2. TREE-WORSHIP. By RICHARD LE GALLIENNE.
3. A DEFENCE of COSMETICS. By MAX BEERBOHM.
4. Δαυνοφόρετος. By ARTHUR CHRISTOPHER BENSON.
5. IRREMEDIAL. By ELLA D'ARCY.
6. The FRONTIER. By WILLIAM WATSON.
7. NIGHT on CURBAR EDGE. By WILLIAM WATSON.
8. A SENTIMENTAL CELLAR. By GEORGE SAINTSBURY.
9. STELLA MARIS. By ARTHUR SYMONS.
10. MERCEDES. By HENRY HARLAND.
11. A BROKEN LOOKING-GLASS. By HENRY HARLAND.
12. ALERE FLAMMAM. By EDMUND GOSSE.
13. A DREAM of NOVEMBER. By EDMUND GOSSE.
14. The DEDICATION. By FRED. M. SIMPSON.
15. A LOST MASTERPIECE. By GEORGE EGERTON.
16. RETICENCE in LITERATURE. By ARTHUR WAUGH.
17. MODERN MELODRAMA. By HUBERT CRACKANTHORPE.
18. LONDON. By JOHN DAVIDSON.
19. DOWN-A-DOWN. By JOHN DAVIDSON.
20. The LOVE-STORY of LUIGI TANSILLO. By RICHARD GARNETT, LL.D.
21. The FOOL'S HOUSE. By JOHN OLIVER HOBBS and GEORGE MOORE.

PICTURES.

1. A STUDY. By Sir FREDERIC LEIGHTON, P.R.A. Frontispiece.
2. L'EDUCATION SENTIMENTALE. By AUBREY BEARDSLEY.
3. LE PUY en VELAY. By JOSEPH PENNELL.
4. The OLD OXFORD MUSIC-HALL. By WALTER SICKERT.
5. PORTRAIT of a GENTLEMAN. By WILL ROTHENSTEIN.
6. REFLECTED FAWN. By LAURENCE HOUSMAN.
7. NIGHT PIECE. By AUBREY BEARDSLEY.
8. A STUDY. By Sir FREDERIC LEIGHTON, P.R.A.
9. PORTRAIT of a LADY. By WILL ROTHENSTEIN.
10. PORTRAIT of MRS. PATRICK CAMPBELL. By AUBREY BEARDSLEY.
11. HEAD of MINOS. By J. T. NETTLESHIP.
12. PORTRAIT of a LADY. By CHARLES W. FURZE.
13. A LADY READING. By WALTER SICKERT.
14. A BOOK-PLATE. By AUBREY BEARDSLEY.
15. A BOOK-PLATE. By R. ANNING BELL.

Prospectus on application.

KEYNOTES. By GEORGE EGERTON. With Title-Page by Aubrey Beardsley. Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. net.

"A woman doesn't care a fig for a love as deep as the Dead Sea and as silent. She wants something that tells her it is little waves all the time."—Keynotes, p. 13.

KEYNOTES. By GEORGE EGERTON. Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. net.

"Well it is that the workings of our hearts are closed to them, that we are cunning enough or proud enough to seem to be what they would have us rather than what we are."—Keynotes, p. 22.

KEYNOTES. By GEORGE EGERTON. Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. net.

"Men manufactured an artificial morality made sense of things that were as senseless to themselves as the pairing of birds on the wing."—Keynotes, p. 41.

KEYNOTES. By GEORGE EGERTON. Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. net.

"It seems congenial with some women to have deeply rooted in their innermost nature a smouldering animosity, sometimes a physical disgust to men; it is a kind of kin feeling to the raw skulls of white men to black."—Keynotes, p. 101.

KEYNOTES. By GEORGE EGERTON. Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. net.

"Some writing fellow divided all the women into good 'uns and bad 'uns. But he's a conceited stickler for truth. I mean, that both in trout and in women I have found myself faced with most puzzling varieties that were a tantalizing blend of several qualities."—Keynotes, p. 21.

KEYNOTES. By GEORGE EGERTON. Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. net.

"Man in all his passions has a little of the inconsequent child, it is only women who rise with clear seeing."—Keynotes, p. 137.

KEYNOTES. By GEORGE EGERTON. Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. net.

"The blinds are drawn up in the four windows of the bedroom, and the northern night is like unto a day disfigured in a domino of silver-grey crepe."—Keynotes, p. 140.

KEYNOTES. By GEORGE EGERTON. Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. net.

"Pearl mistle wrap her in a chilly shroud, and she fancies that spirit hands spread the rascals of carved blue over them as they glide on, and the moon peers down and nods to her, and another moon runs onwards on a shining silver river."—Keynotes, p. 133.

SHE-NOTES. By BORGIA SMUDGITON. With Japanese Fan de Siècle Illustrations by Mortaribus Wilkshereley.

See Mr. Fuzen's admirable parody, March 10th and 17th.

THE DANCING FAUN. By FLORENCE FARR. Ready shortly, uniform with 'Keynotes.' 3s. 6d. net.

POOR FOLK. By FEDOR DOSTOIEVSKY. Translated by IRMA MILMAN. With a Preface by GEORGE MOORE. Ready shortly, uniform with 'Keynotes.' 3s. 6d. net.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS'
NEW BOOKS.

THE WRITINGS OF THOMAS PAINE.

Political, Sociological, Religious, and Literary.

Edited by MONCURE D. CONWAY,
Author of 'The Life of Thomas Paine,' &c.

Vol. I. 1774-1779. 8vo. cloth, gilt tops, 12s. 6d.

To be completed in Four Volumes.

THE ENGLISHMAN AT HOME:

His RESPONSIBILITIES and PRIVILEGES.

By EDWARD PORRITT.

Post 8vo. cloth, 6s.

THE VENETIAN PAINTERS OF THE RENAISSANCE.

With Index of their Works.

By BERNHARD BERENSON.

Illustrated with Frontispiece, Head of Shepherd, by Giorgione.
Fcap. 8vo. cloth extra, 5s.

THE BLIND AS SEEN THROUGH BLIND EYES.

By MAURICE DE LA SIZERANNE.

Translated from the Second French Edition by
F. PARK LEWIS, M.D.

Post 8vo. cloth, 6s. net.

AUTHORS AND THEIR PUBLIC IN ANCIENT TIMES.

A Sketch of Literary Conditions, &c., from the Earliest Times to the Invention of Printing, in 1460.

By GEO. HAVEN PUTNAM.

Post 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s.

WAH-KEE-NAH AND HER PEOPLE:

A Study of the Customs, Traditions, and Legends of the North American Indians.

By JAMES C. STRONG.

Post 8vo. cloth, 6s. net.

THE EVOLUTION OF WOMAN:

An Inquiry into the Dogma of her Inferiority to Man.

By ELIZA BURT GAMBLE.

Post 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

SECULARISM:

ITS PROGRESS AND MORALS.

By JOHN M. BONHAM,

Author of 'Industrial Liberty,' &c.

Post 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

ART IN THEORY.

An Introduction to the Study of Comparative Aesthetics.

By GEO. LANSING RAYMOND, LL.D.,

Professor of Aesthetics in the College of New Jersey at Princeton.

Post 8vo. cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

24, BEDFORD-STREET, STRAND, LONDON
and New York.

The BODLEY HEAD, Vigo-street London, W.

"That delightful repository of forgotten lore,
NOTES AND QUERIES."

Edinburgh Review, October, 1890.

"That useful resuscitant of dead knowledge, yclept NOTES AND QUERIES, the antiquaries' newspaper."

Quarterly Review.

"When found, make a note of."—CAPTAIN CUTLER.

Every SATURDAY, 24 Pages, Price 1d., of all Booksellers.

NOTES AND QUERIES:

A Medium of Intercommunication for Literary
Men, Artists, Antiquaries, Genealogists, &c.

CONTAINING EVERY WEEK AMUSING ARTICLES
ON SOME OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTTISH HISTORY.

Illustrated by Original Communications and Inedited Documents.

BIOGRAPHY.

Including unpublished Correspondence of eminent Men, and unrecorded Facts connected with them.

BIBLIOGRAPHY.

More especially of English Authors, with
Notices of rare and unknown Editions of their Works, and Notes on Authorship of Anonymous
Books.

POPULAR ANTIQUITIES and FOLK- LORE.

Preserving the fast-fading Relics of the old Mythologies.

BALLADS and OLD POETRY.

With Historical and Philological Illustrations.

POPULAR and PROVERBIAL SAYINGS,

Their Origin, Meaning, and Application.

PHILOLOGY.

Including Local Dialects, Archaisms, and Notes
on our Old Poets.

GENEALOGY AND HERALDRY.

Including Histories of Old Families, completion
of Pedigrees, &c.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES, QUERIES, and REPLIES.

On points of ECCLIASTICAL HISTORY, TOPO-
GRAPHY, FINE ARTS, NATURAL HISTORY, MIS-CELLANEOUS ANTIQUITIES, NUMISMATIC,
PHOTOGRAPHY, &c.

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS,
Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

And may be had, by order, of all Booksellers and News-vendors.

THE CONTEMPORARY REVIEW.

Monthly, price Half-a-Crown.

Contents for APRIL.

THE OLD PREMIER and the NEW. By H. W. Massingham.
THE NATION'S LOSS. By Robert Spence Watson.
THE NEW IMMORTAL—J. M. DE HEREDIA. By Edmund Gosse.
THE HOUSE OF LORAIN and HETTERMENT. By the Duke of Argyll.
THE FINANCIAL CRISIS IN ITALY. By M. O. Micheli.
"REPORE THE SWALLOW DANCE." By Paul Robinson.
THE EVOLUTION OF THE DAUGHTERS. By Mrs. Sheldon Amos.
THE DOGS APOTHEOSIS OF THE BRITISH ARMY. By Archibald Forbes.
FACIES IN THE HISTORY OF ALLOTMENTS. By the Rev. J. Froese Wulfsberg.
MISTAKES about AMYNTAHER. By Archibald Farver, D.D.
THE DIVINE RESPONSE TO HUMAN CAPACITY. By Emma Marie Calver.
THE EXCAVATIONS at SKINDSCHILLI. By Professor David Henry Müller.
THE PAPAL ENCYCLICAL on the BIBLE. By the Author of "The Policy of the Pope."
London: T. Fisher & Co., Limited, Covent-garden, W.C.

Price 6d. Monthly.

THE BOOKMAN. An Illustrated Monthly

Journal for Book-readers, Book-buyers, and Book-sellers.

Contents for APRIL.

MONTHLY REPORT of the WHOLESALE BOOK TRADE.
NEW WRITERS.—Mr. D. & MILDRED, Mr. S. R. CROCKETT. With Portrait.
POETRY.—THE SONG OF THE OLD MOTMERE. By W. R. Yeats.—ALL SOULS' EVE. By Dora Sigerson.
DR. JOHNSON'S HOUSE IN GOUGH SQUARE. With Illustration.
MR. GLADSTONE'S CONTRIBUTIONS TO LITERATURE: A CAU-SERIE. By Francis Hopkinson.
A SYMBOLICAL DRAMA IN FABLES. By W. R. Yeats.
PROF. SKELTON'S CHAUCER. By Prof. C. H. Herford.
THE FIRST EDITION MANIA. By T. J. Wise.
NEWS NOTES—NEW BOOKS—NOVEL NOTES—THE BOOKMAN'S TABLES—THE BOOKSELLER, &c.
London: Hodder & Stoughton, 27, Paternoster-row.

Price Half-a-Crown (Subscription price, 5s. per annum, post free).

SCIENCE PROGRESS.

A Monthly Review of Current Scientific Investigation.
Edited by J. HREYLAND FARMER, M.A.
With the co-operation of an Editorial Committee.

Contents of APRIL Number.

EPHIGNEUS or EVOLUTION. By G. C. BARNES, M.A., Fellow of New College, Oxford.
ON OUR PRESENT KNOWLEDGE OF THE NUMERICAL VALUE OF THE MECHANICAL EQUIVALENT OF HEAT. By E. H. GRIMM,
M.A.
RESEARCHES ON PROTEIN METABOLISM. By E. H. GRIMM,
M.D., Lecturer on Physiology at Guy's Hospital, London.
THE EVOLUTION OF IGNEOUS ROCKS. By Alfred Harker, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge.
VERMES, OR LENTHICATA, and PROTOSTOA. By Sydney J. Hickson,
M.A., D.Sc., Fellow of Downing College, Cambridge.
ON THE STUDY OF ADAPTATION IN PLANTS. By E. GOSSET, F.R.S.,
Professor of Botany in the University of Munich.
London: The Scientific Press, Limited, 435, Strand, W.C.

New Edition, pp. 324, cloth, 1s. post free.

HOMOEOPATHIC FAMILY INSTRUCTOR. By
Drs. H. and W. REPS. Descriptions fully and Precisely for General Diseases.
London: James Epps & Co. Limited, 46, Threadneedle-street, and 170, Piccadilly.

THE EDUCATIONAL REVIEW.

Contents for APRIL, 1894.

1. THE ROYAL COMMISSION on SECONDARY EDUCATION.
2. REPORT on WESTMINSTER SCHOOL: the Old Westminster
View. By T. W. Wheeler, M.A. Q.C.
3. LOCAL CONTROL of SECONDARY and ELEMENTARY EDUCA-TION: a Reply. By William Brown, M.A., Head Master of Tellington Park School.
4. THE FUTURE STUDY OF GEOGRAPHY. By Arthur Montagu.
5. A POPULAR NATURAL HISTORY. (With Illustrations.)
6. EDUCATIONAL LAW. By Edgar Farnham.
7. SONGS and SONNETS. By S. G. T.
8. THE MONTH: Oxford, Cambridge, Women, and General Notes.
9. NOTES on NEW BOOKS and NEW EDITIONS.

Price Sixpence net.

London: At the Office of the Educational Review, 27, Chancery-lane, W.C.

THE NEW REVIEW.

THE ONLY HIGH-CLASS SHILLING MAGAZINE.

Among the Contributors to the APRIL Number are—EDMUND
GOSSE (on Will Whitman), GERALD FIENNES (on Theodor),
W. M. YATTS (Notes of the Humber), T. M. HEALY, M.P., WILLIAM
ARCHER, F. R. SPOFFORTH (on Australian Cricket).

The New Review's Contents are—Distinctly a strong number. Perhaps the strongest of the reviews this month.
London: Wm. Heinemann, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

THE GEOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL.

Contents APRIL Price 2s.

ACHUENS ISLAND. By Karl Grossmann, M.D.—JONGER. By Harry Lake Engineer in the Service of the Selkirk.—RECENT CONTRI-BUTIONS TO ORIENTAL GEOGRAPHY. By E. N. Dickson.—RECENT TRAVELS IN EASTERN ASIA. By Baron F. von Richtofen.—THE PAMPAZ. By F. Kropf.—Dr. CYLICK on the PHENOMENA OF LIMESTONE REMAINS.—NORTHERN GREECE. By Dr. A. Philippson.—THE HILU IN THE ANCIENT HILU. By Louis
Maurer.—THE MONTHLY RECORD.—CORRESPONDENCE. The Height of Peak Godwin-Austen. By General J. E. Walter, C.B.—
OBITUARY.—MEETINGS of the R.G.S.—GEOGRAPHICAL LITERA-TURE of the MONTH.—NEW MAPS.—MAPS and ILLUSTRATIONS.
Edward Stanford, 25, Colindale-street, E.W.

ST. PATRICK'S CATHEDRAL, DUBLIN.

Interior View, and other Illustrations; Large Ground plan and Descriptive Article.
The 'Bulletin' of April 7 contains above, being No. 1 of the IRISH CATHEDRAL SERIES.
Price 4d. (net from)
CHRISTCHURCH, DUBLIN, and KILKENNY will follow in May and June respectively.
The Publisher of the 'BULLION,' 40, Catherine-street, W.C.

GERALD MASSEY'S WORKS.

MY LYRICAL LIFE: Poems. In 2 vols. 2s. 6d. each.
THE SECRET DREAM of SHAKESPEARE'S SONNETS. 7s. 6d.
"A FLEA that WAITS REPLY." Ten Lectures. 6d. each.
Publishers: Watts & Co. 17, Dr. Johnson's-court, Fleet-street,
London.

MENHOLD'S SIDONIA the SORCERESS.

Translated by Lady WILDE, and AMBER WITH. By Lady
DUFF GORDON. 2 vols. small 6vo cloth, 2s. 6d.

DEVIL'S PRONOUN, and other Tales. By Miss
F. FORBES-MOHERTSON. 12mo. 2s. 6d.

CAREW'S POEMS and MASQUES. Edited, with Notes, by Rev. J. W. BISHOP. 12mo. 4s.
Reeves & Turner, 4, Wellington-street, Strand.

NOTICE.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

The VOLUME, JULY to DECEMBER, 1893,

With the Index,

Price 10s. 6d., is NOW READY.

. The Index separately, price 6d.; by post, 6 1/2d. Also Cases for Binding, price 1s.;
by post, 1s. 3d.

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE.

PURCHASERS SHOULD SEE THAT EVERY BOTTLE OF THE ORIGINAL

WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE

BEARS THE SIGNATURE

LEA & PERRINS.

SOLD WHOLESALE BY THE PROPRIETORS, WORCESTER;

CROSSE & BLACKWELL, LTD., LONDON.

RETAIL EVERYWHERE.

MR. LEWIS MORRIS'S NEW POEMS.

SONGS WITHOUT NOTES. By LEWIS MORRIS, Author of 'The Epic of Hades,' &c., is ready this day at all Booksellers', price 5s.

London: KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & Co. Charing Cross-road.

Privately Printed for the Subscribers only.]

DEDICATED BY PERMISSION TO HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

PERSIAN CERAMIC ART

BELONGING TO MR. F. DUCANE GODMAN, F.R.S.;

WITH EXAMPLES FROM OTHER COLLECTIONS.

THE THIRTEENTH CENTURY LUSTRED TILES.

BY HENRY WALLIS.

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS BY THE AUTHOR.

1 vol. imperial 4to.

Price to Subscribers, Five Guineas.

THE EDITION IS LIMITED TO 200 COPIES.

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED BY—

R. H. PORTER, 18, Princes-street, Cavendish-square, London, W.

MESSRS. A. D. INNES & CO'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

VOX CLAMANTIUM: The Gospel of the People.

BY WRITERS, PREACHERS, AND WORKERS.

Brought together by ANDREW REID.

Imperial 16mo. bound in coarse blue Irish linen, with Frontispiece by Walter Crane, price 12s.

A Group of Studies mainly in the relation of Christian Doctrine and Practice to Social Questions of the Day by various well-known Authors and Preachers.

The Contributors are—HALL CAINE, LEWIS MORRIS, HENRY ARTHUR JONES, TOM MANN, RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, S. R. CROCKETT (Author of 'The Sleight Minister' and 'The Raiders'), A. E. FLETCHER (Editor of the Daily Chronicle), GRANT ALLEN, WALTER CRANE, ALFRED RUSSEL-WALLACE, JOHN HEATHER, FRANK SMITH, the Hon. RODEN NOHL, the Rev. C. L. MARSON (Author of 'The Psalms at Work'), Rev. Professor SHUTTLEWORTH, the Hon. the Rev. JAMES ADDERLEY (Author of 'Stephen Barnard'), and the Very Rev. the Dean of ELY (Dr. C. W. STUBBS).

SOCIETY in CHINA. By Robert K. Douglas, Keeper of the Oriental Books and Manuscripts in the British Museum, Professor of Chinese in King's College. An Account of the Every-day Life of the Chinese People—Social, Political, and Religious. Demy 8vo. mandarin cloth extra, with 22 Illustrations, price 16s. The Illustrations are in Collotype from Original Drawings by Chinese Artists and from Photographs.

ENGLAND under the TUDORS. By Wilhelm Busch. A History of the Tudor Period; written with especial reference to the Commercial Development of the Empire. Translated under the superintendence of the Author and Mr. JAS. GAIRDNER, by the Rev. A. H. JOHNSON and Miss TODD. [Volume I. will be ready shortly.]

The WORLDS of SPACE. By J. E. Gore, F.R.A.S. A Series of Popular Articles upon Astronomical Subjects. With numerous Illustrations. Large crown 8vo. cloth, price 7s. 6d

A SON of the FORGE. A Novel. By Robert Blatchford

('Nunquam'). Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6s.

London: A. D. INNES & CO. 31 and 32, Bedford-street, Strand.

Just published, demy 8vo. cloth, price 10s. 6d.

THE HIGGINS LECTURES, 1901.

LECTURES on the BASES of RELIGIOUS BELIEF.

Delivered in Oxford and London in April and May, 1900.

BY

CHARLES B. UPTON, B.A. B.Sc.,
Professor of Philosophy to Manchester College.

Williams & Morgan, London and Edinburgh.

New and Cheaper Edition, price Two Shillings.

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy. Eighth Edition. With 9 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Has, we are glad to see, reached an eighth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the study of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian.

Edward Stanford, 36 and 37, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

Second Edition, price 2s. 6pence, cloth.

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well adapted to accomplish their purpose."

Dr. R. A. GRUBB, Editor of the Astronomical Journal.

Edward Stanford, 36 and 37, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

In preparation, to be published very shortly.

HADDEN'S HANDBOOK to the LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACT, 1888.

Being a Complete and Practical Guide to the above Act and its Incorporated enactments. With Full Texts, Explanations, and Copious Index.

Companion Volume to 'The Councils' Handbook,' by HENCKY and JENKIN.

(Published by us under the Local Government Act, 1888.)

It will be recalled that the principal Author of the 'Councils' Handbook' was Mr. N. HADDEN, who at the time was Private Secretary to the then President of the Local Government Board. Hadden, Esq. & Co. have been fortunate in securing for the present work the services of a gentleman who, from his official position, has throughout his career, and particularly during the last twelve months, had his mind steeped in every branch of the subject, but who, by the rules of the (Civil) Service, is prevented from publishing his name. H. R. & Co. have no hesitation in anticipating that the same "official value" will attach to the present work as to its companion.

HADDEN'S HANDBOOK to the LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACT, 1888, will deal very thoroughly with the Constitution, Election, and Proceedings of Parish Meetings, Parish Councils, District Councils, and Boards of Guardians under the Act, and the powers conferred upon them.

Particular attention will be given to those provisions under the Act, and to the extensive powers which County Councils will have for the purpose of giving effect to the provisions.

The work will be written, so far as the subject will permit, in untechnical language, and will be provided with a Full and Complete Index. The price will be 7s. 6d.

Hadden, Esq. & Co., West Harding-street, London, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.

NOTES and QUERIES for DECEMBER 10th and 20th, 1893, and JANUARY 7th and 21st, 1894, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of MR. GLADSTONE.

Price of the Four Numbers, 1s. 6d.; or free by post, 1s. 6d.

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Brown's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY of BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL OF BEACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.

NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 18th, 27th, JUNE 10th, 24th and JULY 2nd, 1894, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL of BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEYS to 'VIVIAN GREY,' 'LOTHIAN,' 'LOTHIAN,' and 'ENDYMION.'

Price of the Six Numbers, 1s.; or free by post, 1s. 6d.

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Brown's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

ANOBUIUM ERODITUM, the devouring book-worm, traced up his nose at STICKLEHART PASTRY. All testaments, 6d. and 1s. Large size, 1s. 6d. by parcel post, from Factory, Sugar-Loaf-court, Lambhall-street, E.C.

USE

"VINOLIA" CREAM, SOAP, AND POWDER

FOR FACE SPOTS.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES. In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of speaking, the glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing.

EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES are sold in tin, 1s. 1d., by Chemists, including James Nye & Co. (Limited), Homoeopathic Chemists, 279, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street, London.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEADACHE, and INDIGESTION. And Saline Agent for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Invalids.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

A. & C. BLACK'S LIST.

SANTA TERESA: being some Account of her Life and Times, together with some pages from the History of the Last Great Reform in the Religious Orders. By GABRIELA CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. illustrated with 2 Autogravure Frontispieces, price 32s.

RECTORIAL ADDRESSES DELIVERED at the UNIVERSITY of ST. ANDREWS, 1863-1893—Sir WILLIAM STIRLING-MAXWELL to the MARQUIS of BUTE. Edited, with an Introduction, by WILLIAM KNIGHT, LL.D., Professor of Moral Philosophy, University of St. Andrews. Demy 8vo. price 10s. 6d.

An INTRODUCTION to STRUCTURAL BOTANY (FLOWERING PLANTS). By D. H. SCOTT, M.A. D.Sc., Honorary Keeper of the Jodrell Laboratory, Royal Gardens, Kew. Crown 8vo. Illustrated with 113 Figures, price 3s. 6d.

INVESTIGATIONS on MICROSCOPIC FOAMS and on PROTOPLASM. By Prof. O. BÜTSCHLI. Translated by E. A. MINCHIN, B.A., Fellow of Merton College, Oxford. Demy 8vo. illustrated with 12 Lithographic Plates, price 18s. net.

An INTRODUCTION to the STUDY of MAMMALS, LIVING and EXTINCT. By Sir W. H. FLOWER, K.C.B., and RICHARD LYDEKKER. Demy 8vo. 763 pages, and illustrated with 359 Wood Engravings. Cheaper Edition. Price 12s. 6d.

An INTRODUCTION to the STUDY of FISHES. By A. C. L. GÜNTHER. Demy 8vo. 720 pages, and illustrated with 320 Wood Engravings. Cheaper Edition. Price 12s. 6d.

LIFE in MOTION; or, Muscle and Nerve. By J. G. M'KENDRICK, Professor of Physiology in the University of Glasgow. Crown 8vo. illustrated. New Edition. Price 2s. 6d.

BLACK'S HANDY ATLAS of ENGLAND and WALES. A Series of County Maps and Plans, with Descriptive Index and Statistical Notes. Demy 8vo. Cheaper Edition. Price 5s.

CAP and GOWN COMEDY: a Schoolmaster's Stories. By ASCOTT R. HOPE. Large crown 8vo. New Edition. Price 3s. 6d.

MARGARET DRUMMOND, MILLIONAIRE. By SOPHIE F. F. VETICH. 1 vol. crown 8vo. price 6s.

The GREAT CHIN EPISODE. By PAUL CUSHING. 1 vol. crown 8vo. price 3s. 6d.

ALADDIN in LONDON. By FERGUS HUME. 1 vol. crown 8vo. price 3s. 6d.

UNDER TWO SKIES. By E. W. HORNING. 1 vol. crown 8vo. price 2s. 6d.

The STORY of a STRUGGLE. By ELIZABETH GILKISON. 1 vol. crown 8vo. price 2s. 6d.

THE DRYBURGH EDITION

OF THE

WAVERLEY NOVELS.

Illustrated by 250 Woodcuts specially Drawn and Engraved for this Edition. Now publishing in Twenty-five Monthly Volumes. Price 5s. in cloth, or in half-leather, 6s. each.

Order of Publication and List of Artists.

Now ready.	WAVERLEY.	CHARLES GREEN.
"	GUY MANNERING.	GORDON BROWNE.
"	The ANTIQUARY.	PAUL HARDY.
"	ROB ROY.	LOCKHART BOGLE.
"	{ BLACK DWARF.	WALTER PAGET.
"	{ LEGEND of MONTROSE.	LOCKHART BOGLE.
"	OLD MORTALITY.	FRANK DADD.
"	HEART of MIDLOTHIAN.	WM. HOLK, R.S.A.
"	BRIDE of LAMMERMOOR.	JOHN WILLIAMSON.
"	IVANHOE.	GORDON BROWNE.
"	The MONASTERY.	JOHN WILLIAMSON.
"	The ABBOTT.	JOHN WILLIAMSON.
"	KENILWORTH.	H. M. PAGET.
"	The PIRATE.	W. H. OVEREND.
"	FORTUNES of NIGEL.	G. C. HINDLEY.
"	PEVERIL of the PEAK.	STANLEY BEECKLEY.
"	QUENTIN DURWARD.	H. M. PAGET.
"	ST. RONAN'S WELL.	HUGH THOMSON.
"	REDGAUNTLET.	GEORGE HAY, R.S.A.
1894.	{ The BETROTHED.	GODFREY C. HINDLEY.
May 1.	{ HIGHLAND WIDOW.	G. C. HINDLEY.
June 1.	The TALISMAN.	GODFREY C. HINDLEY.
July 1.	WOODSTOCK.	STANLEY BEECKLEY.
Aug. 1.	FAIR MAID of PERTH.	C. M. HARRIS, A.R.S.A.
Sept. 1.	ANNE of GEIERSTEIN.	PAUL HARDY.
Oct. 1.	COUNT ROBERT of PARIS.	GORDON BROWNE.
Nov. 1.	{ The SURGEON'S DAUGHTER.	PAUL HARDY.
	{ CASTLE DANGEROUS.	WALTER PAGET.

London: ADAM & CHARLES BLACK, Soho-square.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Freeman's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C. Printed by JAMES C. FLEMING, Athenæum Press, Freeman's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C. and Published by the said JAMES C. FLEMING at Freeman's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C. Agents for Scotland, Messrs. Bell & Boddicks and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, April 7, 1894.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3468.

SATURDAY, APRIL 14, 1894.

PRICE
THREEPENCE
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

ROYAL INSTITUTION OF GREAT BRITAIN.

Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W.
THURSDAY NEXT, April 19, at Three o'clock, Professor J. F. BRIDGE, Mus. Doc., Organist of Westminster Abbey and Graham Professor of Music, First of Two Lectures on Music. 1. 'Musical Geniuses,' 2. 'Mount as a Teacher.' Half-o'clock.
SATURDAY, April 21, at Three o'clock, W. D. TRAILL, Esq., D.C.L., First of Two Lectures on 'Literature and Journalism.' Half-o'clock.
Subscription to all the Courses in the Session, Two Guineas.

ROYAL SOCIETY OF BRITISH ARTISTS.

Raffles street, Pall Mall East, S.W.—3000 EXHIBITION NOW OPEN daily from 10 to 6. Admission, one shilling.
ADAM R. PROCTOR, Hon. Sec.

ARTISTS' GENERAL BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

For the Relief of Distressed Artists, their Widows and Orphans.
THE ANNUAL DINNER will take place at the Whitehall Rooms, the Hotel Metropole, on SATURDAY, April 21, at half-past six o'clock.
The Right Hon. Lord RIMBLEDAL, P.C., in the Chair.
Dinner Tickets, including Wine, One Guinea.
Donations will be received and thankfully acknowledged by Sir JOHN EVERETT MILLAR, Bart., B.A., Hon. Secretary.
ALFRED WATERHOUSE, M.A., Treasurer.
DOUGLAS GORDON, Secretary.
19, St. James's-street, S.W.

ROYAL LITERARY FUND.

GENERAL LORD ROBERTS, V.C. O.M. G.C.B. G.C.I.E., will preside at the 10th ANNIVERSARY DINNER, to be held at the Whitehall Rooms, Hotel Metropole, S.W., on WEDNESDAY, April 25, at half-past 6 for 7 o'clock precisely.

STEWARDS
The Hon. William Walcott, Esq.
Alfred Austin, Esq.
George Bentley, Esq.
Wm. Blackwood, Esq.
Colonel the Lord Remondy, Esq.
Colonel Sir Henry Collett, K.C.B.
The Rev. Canon W. Cooke, F.R.S.
Frederick Chapman, Esq.
Walter J. Cripps, Esq., C.B. F.R.S.
The Lord Justice Taylor
Sir John Fowler, Bart., K.O.M.G.
J. F. Goad, Esq.
W. G. Gibbs, Esq., C.B. G.C.
Henry Marks Gibbs, Esq., F.R.S.
Assyut Goshie, Esq.
The Viscount Hampden.
Colonel Henry Hoar.
Arthur D. Jones, Esq.
The Rev. Augustus Jessopp, D.D.
Professor William Paton, Esq.
Oscar J. Kington, Esq.
William Knight, Esq., LL.D.
Edwin Lee, Esq.
Sir George Lewis.
W. R. L. Lock, Esq., D.C.L. LL.D.
W. H. Lilly, Esq.
The Right Hon. Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P.
T. Norton Longman, Esq.
Gentlemen willing to attend the Dinner are invited to communicate with the Secretary. Dinner Tickets, One Guinea each. A. LEEWELYN ROBERTS, Secretary.
7, Adelphi-terrace, W.C.

BRITISH ARCHAEOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION.

THE TENTH MEETING of the ASSOCIATION will be held on WEDNESDAY NEXT, APRIL 19th, at 22, Parkville-street, Piccadilly, W. Chair to be taken at 8 o'clock. Antiquities will be exhibited, and the following papers read:
1. 'Excavations at Tullis Cross Abbey.' By the Rev. E. T. OWEN.
2. 'Fig of Lead lately found near Chesham.' By ANDREW K. COCKayne, Esq.
W. DE GRAY SMITH, F.R.S., Honorary Secretary.
W. F. LOFTUS HENDER, F.R.S., Secretary.

THE FOLK-LOVE SOCIETY.

THE NEXT EVENING MEETING of the Society will be held at 22, Albemarle-street, on WEDNESDAY, April 19, at 8 o'clock.
Mr. H. RAYNARD, jun., will exhibit some Kaleidoscope Pictures, Photographs, and other Folk-lore Objects.
Papers will be read on 'The Western Folk of Ireland and their Lore,' illustrated by lantern slides, by Professor A. C. RADFORD, F.R.S., and 'Folk-lore Gleanings from the Lothians,' by L. L. L. DUNCAN, F.R.S.
F. A. MILNE, Secretary.
11, Old-square, Lincoln's Inn, April 5, 1894.

ROYAL HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

(Incorporated by Royal Charter)
Patron—HER MAJESTY the QUEEN.
President—The Right Hon. Sir M. R. GRANT DUFF, G.C.B.
THURSDAY, April 19th, at 8.30 P.M.—The following Paper will be read 'The Harlequins under Edward I.,' by Professor T. F. TOUT, M.A. F.R.Hist.S.
25, Manchester-square, W.

SHAKESPEARE READING SOCIETY.

THE ANNUAL READING, 'KING RICHARD II.' Arranged and rehearsed under the direction of Mr. William Peel, will be given at ST. MARK'S HALL, Lower Wyndham-street, Portman-square, on FRIDAY, April 20th, at 8 P.M.
Tickets 2s. 2s. 1s.—Apply Nov. 12, Upper Berkeley-street, or Miss H. K. LADROU, Grove; or Miss F. J. JAMESON, Esq. (Hon. Treas.), 77, Waterloo, S.W.

SOCIETY OF AUTHORS.—LITERARY PROPERTY.

The Public is annually warned against answering advertisements inviting MSS. or offering to place MSS. without the personal recommendation of a friend who has experience of the advertiser or the advice of the Society. By order, of HENRIETTA TINKING, Secretary.
A. Fortington, Esq., Secy. of the Socy.
No. 6.—The AUTHOR the owner of the Society, is published monthly, price 6d., by Messrs. Cox, Brumby & Co., 10, R.C.

THE BIBLIOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.

President—W. A. COPINGER, LL.D.
Vice-Presidents—Right Hon. the Earl of Crawford, K.T., Right Hon. Lord Charles Bruce, M. Copley Christie, M.A., Richard Garnett, LL.D.
Treasurer—ALFRED H. NUTH.
The NEXT MONTHLY MEETING will be held on MONDAY NEXT, April 16, at 25, Manchester-square, W., when Mr. S. J. ALDRICH will read a Paper on 'The Anonymous Poets of the Fifteenth Century.' Chair to be taken at 8 P.M.
ALFRED W. FOLLARD, Hon. Sec.
25, Manchester-square, W.

EDWARD WHYMPER

will deliver a Lecture entitled
'TWENTY THOUSAND FEET ABOVE THE SEA.'
At 8.30, on MONDAY, April 23,
In ST. MARTIN'S TOWN HALL, Trafalgar-square.
Tickets 1s. 2s. 3s. 4s. 5s. from the Hall, the Principal Libraries and Ticket Agents: Spooner & Co., Strand; and The Lecture Agency, Ltd., The Queen's Temple, Strand, W.C.

EDITOR of Important County Weekly, retiring on account of Paper changing hands, desires SITUATION, SUB-EDITORSHIP or similar post. Able Londoner, thoroughly well acquainted with current politics, and with special knowledge of Social and Church questions. Also good speaker and Lecturer. University and Right references.—Address: Glaston, care of Mother & Crowther, 11, Fleet-street, E.C.

SECRETARIAL, LITERARY, or JOURNALISTIC

WORK WANTED by Short-hand Writer (Lady). Speed 140 (own shorthand). Good Correspondent, Reporter, Interviewer, &c. German and French Fluen. Plays, &c. Translated.—Letter Press Sec., 11, Greville Mansions, Gray's Inn-road, W.C.

LITERARY ASSISTANT, SECRETARY, Experienced Press Reader. Typist. Understands Domestic work. Moderate terms.—L. L. G., Southampton-row, W.C.

ADVERTISER seeks ENGAGEMENT as

LIBRARIAN or PRIVATE SECRETARY. Latin French Short-hand Type-writing (own machine). Over 50 years experience. Good penmanship. Highest testimonials.—ARTHUR BAKER, 109, Station-road, Walsingham.

AS SECRETARY or COMPANION.

AMATEURISH Advertiser (age 27), Short-hand Writer, with knowledge of Type-writing. Desires POSITION as ABOVE.—JAMES HOSKIN, 38, Whitecross-street, Hereford.

A YOUNG LADY, with her own Yost Typewriter in demand of a DAILY ENGAGEMENT as SECRETARY or CORRESPONDENT.—Mrs. M. Broadbent, 11, W.C.

LITERARY CONTRIBUTIONS (signed or otherwise)

REQUIRED for Two leading SCIENTIFIC NEWSPAPERS. Contributions will be required to subscribe for Part of an issue of 6d. per cent. Proficiency shown.—Address: Marston, 11, Conduit-street, W.

NEWSPAPER for DISPOSAL.—An old-established

High-Class Illustrated PICTORIAL for SALE.—Apply Messrs. ARNOLD & BARNETT, Stationers, 14, Great Winchester-street, London, E.C.

TYPE-WRITING by CLERGYMAN'S

DAUGHTER.—Authors' MSS., &c., 1s. per 1,000 words, reducing long MSS. Type-writer (Circulars), &c., by Copying Process. Authors' references.—Miss GALE, 13, Weymouth-gardens, Hammersmith.

TYPE-WRITER—AUTHORS' MSS., Plays, Reviews, Lectures, Legal, or other Articles, COPIED with accuracy and despatch. Terms moderate. Duplicate Copies.—Address Miss E. TROTT, 21, Maitland Park-villa, Maresfield-hall, N.W. Established 1865.

TYPE-WRITING, in best style, 1d. per folio.

Customers please note change of address.—Miss OLIVER, 21, Lambeth-road, S.E. 1, Lambeth, S.W., late of 24, South Lambeth-road.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all descriptions, COPIED. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing). Usual terms. Misses R. & I. PHARR, Hastings House, North-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 24, Southampton-street, Strand).

TYPE-WRITERS.—SECOND-HAND

MACHINES, equal to new, FOR SALE, EXCHANGE, or HIRE on HIRE. Machines sold by instalments on terms to suit purchasers. Use of Machine taught free to hire or purchase. Remington's Yost, Hammond, Caligraph, Pen-locks, Pict. &c. from 25 MR. COPIED with accuracy and despatch at lowest rates. Highest references. Illustrated Catalogue free.—N. TAYLOR, Manager, National Type-Writer Exchange, 74, Chancery-lane, London (Waltham road).

QUEEN ELIZABETH'S GRAMMAR SCHOOL,

IPSWICH
Commonly called 'The Ipswich School.' Founded 1565.

HEAD MASTERHIP.—The Governors invite applications for the post of HEAD MASTERHIP of this SCHOOL, which will be vacant at the end of the second Term, 1894. The School was reorganised in 1891. The Master must be a Graduate of some University in the United Kingdom. It is not necessary that he be in Holy Orders. The following are the emoluments of the office:—A fixed yearly stipend of £100, a Capitation Fee of 4s. 6d. per boy of the School Residence rent free, and free of taxes and rates (except water supply), and he will be allowed to receive Boarders for which there is accommodation for about 20. The School is capable of providing for about 200 scholars. It possesses a Gymnasium, Swimming Bath, and a Cricket Field of 6 acres in area. Applications of Candidates with copies of testimonials (not originals) and letters, to be forwarded on or before the 15th day of May next to the undersigned, of whom further particulars and information can be procured.

GEOFFREY J. MOUTRIE, Secretary, Clerk to the Governors.

Ipswich, 2nd April, 1894.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—

AMBIEN, ANTWERP, BRUXELLES-MER, HARRIS, BOURBONNE, BOULOGNE-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, NANTES, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLE, MONTPELLIER, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, FAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOULON, TOULOUSE.

And at the GALLIANI LIBRARY, 206, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

INFORMATION respecting WORKS by Mr.

MURKIN and others published by Mr. ALLEY, of Oyston and 118, Charing Cross-road, W.C., will be found on p. 405 of this paper.

HEAD MASTER for PORTMADOC COUNTY

(DUVAL) SCHOOL, CARRIGROHMORE.

WANTED a HEAD MASTER for this School, established under the Welsh Intermediate Education Act. Salary estimated at £200 per annum.

Particulars and conditions to be had on application.
J. H. ROYCE, ROBERTS, Clerk to the County Governing Body.

Carrigrohmore, April 4, 1894.

EDUCATION.—Particulars as to best University of Army Officers and Schools for Boys or Girls, at Home or Abroad, may be obtained, free of charge, by sending a statement of requirements to R. J. TRENDS, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand.

HAMPSTEAD.—Professor REGINALD STUART

INOLE, LL.D., highly RECOMMENDED as an EDUCATIONAL HOME at Hampstead for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, conducted by Two Cultured Ladies of varied experience, with high University Honours. The Educational advantages of London need to be best effect. Care of health. No overpressure. Terms. Highest references.—R. S. HAWESON'S Library, High-street, Hampstead, London.

SKETCHING from NATURE.—Miss SOPHIA

WHELAN SKETCHING PARTIES are now being ARRANGED. Other lessons as usual after the 15th inst.—Prospectus upon application to 25, Albany-street, N.W. Special arrangement for Schools.

MR. HENRY BLACKBURN'S STUDIO.

INSTRUCTION in DRAWING for the PRESS with Technical Annotations. Students join at any time. Advice and instruction by Correspondence.—112, Victoria-street, Westminster (near Army and Navy Stores).

BEDFORD COLLEGE LONDON (for WOMEN),

8 and 9 York-place, Baker-street, W.
Principal—Miss EMILY FENNER.

The COLLEGE OFFERED for the EARLY TERM on THURSDAY, April 12.

WESTMINSTER ACADEMY.—An EXAMINA-

TION to fill up not less than seven Resident and Five Non-Resident QUEEN'S SCHOLARSHIPS and several valuable EXHIBITIONS will take place in JULY NEXT.—Detailed information may be obtained from the Head Master, Dean's yard, Westminster.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.—NOTICE IS HEREBY

GIVEN, That the next Half-yearly Examination for MATRICULATION in this University will commence on MONDAY, the 19th of June, 1894, in addition to the Examination at the University, Provincial Examinations will be held at University College Aberystwyth, University College Bangor, The Modern School, Bedford, Mason College, Birmingham, University College, Bristol, Durham College (for University College), Cardiff, The Ladies' College, Cheltenham (for Ladies only), St. Gregory's College, Devonport, The Herriot-Watt College, Edinburgh, The Royal Medical College, Exeter, The County School, Hereford, The Yorkshire College, Leeds, The Weymouth School, Leicester, St. Edward's College, Liverpool, University College Liverpool, The Queens College, Manchester, Rutherford College, Newcastle-on-Tyne, University College, Nottingham, The High School, Oswestry, The Public School, Plymouth, Fifth College, Sheffield, St. Xavier's College, and St. Charles College, Tinsley.

Every candidate is required to apply to the Registrar (University of London, Harington Gardens, London, W.) for a Form of Entry not less than five weeks before the commencement of the Examination.

ARTHUR MILLMAN, M.A., Registrar.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON

Professor W. F. KERR will give Three Public Lectures on the 'Tentative Hagen' on THURSDAY, April 12, THURSDAY, April 24, and THURSDAY, May 1, at 4 o'clock. These Lectures are Open to the Public without payment of tickets.

J. M. HOUSHORON, M.A., Secretary.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.—

FACULTY OF MEDICINE.—THE SUMMER SESSION begins on MAY 1. The work is arranged so that a student may advantageously begin his Medical Curriculum then. Full information may be obtained from either of the undersigned.

V. A. H. HUSLEY, M.B. B.S. F.R.S., Dean of the Faculty.
J. M. HOUSHORON, M.A., Secretary.

WESTMINSTER HOSPITAL MEDICAL

SCHOOL, Grafton-street, W.
THE SUMMER SESSION will BEGIN on MAY 1.

NATURAL SCIENCE ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS.

The subjects for the SENIOR SCHOLARSHIP, value £50, are the same as those of the Preliminary Science.

The subjects for the JUTHERLAND ALCOR and GOVERNOR SCHOLARSHIPS, value £50 each, are Chemistry and Physics, according to the syllabus of the First Conjoint Examination.

DIPLOMA IN PUBLIC HEALTH.—LABORATORY WORK.

CHEMISTRY.—Dr. Hagen.
PHYSICS.—Mr. Sturges.

BACTERIOLOGY.—Dr. Hagen.
A special bacteriological Laboratory has been fitted up and placed under the charge of Dr. Hagen.

General Fee 15s. in one payment, or by instalments.
A Prospectus forwarded, and all particulars to be obtained on application to WALTER G. SPENCER, Dean.

On MONDAY, April 30, the COLLECTION
OLD PORCELAIN of BURNETT FOSTER, Esq.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW NOVELS.

L. T. MEADE.—'A SOLDIER of FORTUNE,' the New Novel by L. T. MEADE, Author of 'The Medicine Lady,' is now ready, in 3 vols., at every Library.

W. E. NORRIS.—'SAINT ANN'S,' the New Novel by W. E. NORRIS, Author of 'The Rogue,' is now ready, in 2 vols., at every Library.

MARK TWAIN'S New Book, 'TOM SAWYER ABROAD,' illustrated by Dan Beard, will be ready at all Booksellers' on April 16. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

JACK DOYLE'S DAUGHTER. By E. E. FRANCHILLON, Author of 'Ropes of Sand,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mr. Franchillon long ago conquered the secret of a readable novel, and his latest book shows that his hand has not lost its cunning. The story is bright and amusing. It is, in fact, a racy book."—London Mercury.

DOROTHY'S DOUBLE. By G. A. HENRTY, Author of 'Requiem for the Juggler,' 3 vols.

"An ingenious and vividly written story. 'Dorothy's Double' is from its first page to its last a thoroughly readable and entertaining novel, bright in style and wholesome in moral."—Daily Telegraph.

THE ONE TOO MANY. By E. Lynn LINTON, Author of 'The Attonement of Leam Dundae,' 3 vols. Second Edition.

"'The One Too Many' is a delightful book, full of humour and interest, and excellent characterization. Mrs. Linton is at her best as a story-teller; she writes clearly and brightly."—Standard.

IN DIREST PERIL. By D. Christie MURRAY, Author of 'Joseph's Coat,' 3 vols.

"We are tempted to use up the reviewer's kindly store of phrases in connexion with 'In Direst Peril'—not a dull page throughout, 'capitally written,' 'a bright, readable story,' and so on—for Mr. Murray's story is certainly all this and a great deal more besides."—Guardian.

CHRISTINA CHARD. By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED, Author of 'Outlaw and Law-maker,' 3 vols.

"The first idea of Mrs. Praed's new novel came from Mr. George Boughton, and all readers of 'Christina Chard' will be grateful to him for a suggestion which has borne such brilliant fruit. Christina herself is a fascinating study."—Athenæum.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY NOVELS.
A PROTEGEE of JACK HAMLIN'S, &c. By BRIT HART. With 28 Illustrations.

"Mr. Harte is at his best, and what can be better? One and all are delightful reading."—Daily Telegraph.

A DOG and his SHADOW. By E. E. FRANCHILLON.

"A study of a man and his circumstances that, in default of the Hogue, might have satisfied George Meredith himself. A wealth of character finely and playfully distinguished."—Morning Leader.

The KING'S ASSEGAI: a Matabili Story. By BRITRAM MITFORD, Author of 'The Gun-Runner,' &c. With 6 Illustrations.

"His adventures teem with marvels, and the narrative from first to last is keenly exciting."—Saturday Review.

THE QUEEN AGAINST OWEN. By ALLEN UPWARD.

"An unmistakable success. We have not for a long while read anything more intensely dramatic. Altogether a notable book; and if its popularity be at all commensurate with its merits, it will have a great vogue."—Sun.

MY TWO WIVES, &c. By George E. SIMS. Post 8vo. picture boards, 2s., cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Told in the best style of the well-known novelist, dramatist, and poet. You will not drop the 'Two Wives' without feeling quite satisfied with having read a smart and entertaining work of fiction."—Sun.

POST-PRANDIAL PHILOSOPHY. By GRANT ALLEN, Author of 'The Tents of Shem,' &c. Crown 8vo. Irish linen, 3s. 6d.

"A very charming volume. They are the brightest things of the kind we have seen for a long time."—Speaker.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

ENLARGEMENT OF THE DAILY NEWS.

THE ERECTION OF POWERFUL MACHINES
Specially Constructed for 'THE DAILY NEWS,'

AND BELIEVED TO BE

THE MOST EFFECTIVE YET MADE,

ENABLES THE PROPRIETORS TO

ADD MATERIALLY TO THE SIZE OF THE PAPER.

WITHOUT THE USE OF DETACHED SUPPLEMENTS,

'THE DAILY NEWS,'

FROM MONDAY NEXT, APRIL 16, WILL, ON MOST DAYS, CONSIST OF

TEN OR TWELVE PAGES,

THUS

VASTLY INCREASING THE QUANTITY OF INTELLIGENCE,

AS WELL AS ADMITTING OF

NEW AND INTERESTING FEATURES.

WHILE FRESH SPACE IS DEVOTED

TO

EVENTS OF THE DAY

IN POLITICS AND COMMERCE, TO CORRESPONDENCE, TO SPORTS,

TO LEGAL REPORTS,

AND TO GENERAL INFORMATION,

THE GROWING DEMAND FOR

WHATEVER IS NEW AND IMPORTANT IN LITERATURE,

THE DRAMA, AND

THE ARTS

WILL BE FULLY MET.

GEORGE ALLEN'S PUBLICATIONS.

WILL BE PUBLISHED SHORTLY.

A NEW WORK BY JOHN RUSKIN.

VERONA, and OTHER LECTURES. Delivered principally at the Royal and London Institutions between 1870 and 1883. Illustrated with Frontispiece in colour and 11 Photogravure Plates from Drawings by the Author. Medium 8vo. 15s. cloth.

This volume consists of five chapters, four of which were prepared by the Author to be delivered as Lectures during his tenure of the Slade Professorship at Oxford, and one has been written since his resignation.

There will be 350 Large-Paper Copies on Arnold's Unbleached Hand-made Paper, with India Proofs of Plates, large post 4to. 30s.

. The publication is being delayed in order to issue simultaneously in America.

WILL BE READY APRIL 17.

RUSKIN ON MUSIC:

Being EXTRACTS FROM THE WORKS OF JOHN RUSKIN.

Intended for the Use of all interested in the Art of Music.

Edited by A. M. WAKEFIELD.

With Facsimile in Colour of Leaf from Antiphonaire of Thirteenth Century from Mr. Ruskin's Collection.

Medium 8vo. 168 pp. cloth, 5s. net; half-parchment, 6s. 6d. net.

Contents:—Of the Ideal of Music—Music and Early Influences—Music and Painting—Music and Education—Music and Morals, &c.

WILL BE READY APRIL 17.

By AUGUSTUS J. C. HARE.

SUSSEX.

With Maps and 40 Woodcuts from Drawings by the Author. Crown 8vo. 250 pp. cloth, 6s.

By AUGUSTUS J. C. HARE,

Author of 'Memorials of a Quiet Life,' 'Walks in Rome,' &c.

The STORY of TWO NOBLE LIVES: CHARLOTTE, COUNTESS CANNING, and LOUISA, MARCHIONESS of WATERFORD. In 3 vols. of about 450 pages each. Crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

The Illustrations consist of 2 Portraits engraved on Steel, 9 Portraits in Photogravure, 21 Plates in Photogravure from Lady Waterford's Drawings, 8 Full-Page Wood Engravings, and 24 Woodcuts from Sketches by the Author, &c.

The Special Large-Paper Edition consists of 300 Copies, with India Proofs of the Plates. Crown 4to. £3 3s. net.

Also by JOHN RUSKIN.

The POETRY of ARCHITECTURE; or, the Architecture of the Nations of Europe considered in its Association with Natural Scenery and National Character.

A Prose Work in One Volume of 260 pages, with Chromo-lithograph Frontispiece, 14 Plates in Photogravure from unpublished Drawings by the Author, and 9 Full-Page and other new Woodcuts. 4to. cloth, 21s.

UNTO THIS LAST. Four Essays on the First Principles of Political Economy. Eighth Edition. Cloth, 3s.; roan, gilt edges, 12mo. 4s.

FRONDES AGRESTES. Readings in 'Modern Painters.' Tenth Edition. Cloth, 2s.; roan, gilt edges, 4s.

"OUR FATHERS HAVE TOLD US": Sketches of the History of Christendom. Part I. The BIBLE of AMIENS (complete in itself). With a Steel Engraving and Plan of the Western Porches of Amiens Cathedral. Cloth, 6s.

SELECTIONS from the WRITINGS of JOHN RUSKIN. In 2 vols. small post 8vo. (sold separately), cloth, 6s. each; roan, gilt edges, 8s. 6d. each.

A few of the Large-Paper Copies, on Arnold's Unbleached Hand-made Paper, with Portraits on India Paper, still remain, 30s. the two vols., not sold separately.

The First Series (from Works written between 1843 and 1860), with Engraved Portrait after George Richmond's Picture, and an Index, 540 pages.

The Second Series (from Works written between 1860 and 1883), with Photogravure Portrait from a recent Photograph, and an Index, 500 pages.

MODERN PAINTERS. In 5 vols.

with all the Woodcuts, 1 Lithograph, and the 86 Full-Page Steel Engravings, besides 3 hitherto unpublished. The Text is that of the 1873 Edition, with all the Author's subsequent Notes, and a New Epilogue. Cloth, 6d. 6s. the 5 vols. Imperial 8vo.

The STONES of VENICE. Complete

Edition. (Imperial 8vo.) 3 vols. with the 53 Plates and the Text as originally issued, and Index. Cloth, 4l. 6s. the 3 vols.

EXAMPLES of the ARCHITECTURE of VENICE. With the Text and the 16 Plates as originally published. Cloth cover (unbound), atlas folio (about 36 in. by 17 in.), 2l. 2s.

The STONES of VENICE: Selections for the Use of Travellers. 2 vols. cloth, 6s. each. Fifth Edition.

BY JOHN RUSKIN.

New ready, crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d. each; roan, gilt edges, 10s. each.

Complete with all the Plates.

The SEVEN LAMPS of ARCHITECTURE. The 14 Plates for this Edition have been specially prepared from the larger work. Fourth Edition.

ARATRA PENTELICI: Seven Lectures on the Elements of Sculpture. With 1 Engraving on Steel and 20 Autotype Plates.

VAL D'ARNO: Ten Lectures on Art of the Thirteenth Century in Pisa and Florence. With 1 Steel Engraving and 12 Autotype Plates.

ARIADNE FLORENTINA: Six Lectures on Wood and Metal Engraving, and Appendix. With 4 Full-Page Facsimiles from Holbein's 'Dance of Death,' and 12 Autotype Plates.

LECTURES on ARCHITECTURE and PAINTING. Delivered at Edinburgh in November, 1858. With 15 Full-Page Illustrations drawn by the Author.

Small post 8vo. cloth, each 5s.; roan, gilt edges each 7s. 6d.

SESAME and LILIES. A Small Com-plete Edition, containing the Three Lectures, 'King's Treasures,' 'Queen's Gardens,' and 'The Mystery of Life.' With long Preface and new Index. Just out.

MUNERA PULVERIS: Six Essays on the Elements of Political Economy.

TIME and TIDE, BY WEARE and TYNH: Twenty-five Letters to a Working Man of Sunderland on Laws of Work.

The CROWN of WILD OLIVE: Four Essays on Work, Traffic, and the Future of England. With Articles on the Economy of the Kings of Prussia. Eighth Edition.

QUEEN of the AIR: a Study of the Greek Myths of Cloud and Storm. Third Edition.

The TWO PATHS: Lectures on Art and its application to Decoration and Manufacture. Delivered 1855-9. With New Preface and added Note. Third Edition.

"A JOY for EVER" (and its Price in the Market). The Substance of Two Lectures on the Political Economy of Art. With New Preface and added Articles.

The EAGLE'S NEST: Ten Lectures on the Relation of Natural Science to Art.

LECTURES on ART. Delivered at Oxford in 1870. Revised by the Author, with New Preface. Sixth Edition.

The ETHICS of the DUST: Ten Lec-tures to Little Housewives on the Elements of Crystal Lication. Crown 8vo. Seventh Edition.

The ELEMENTS of DRAWING, in Three Letters to Beginners. With all the Woodcuts as drawn by the Author.

ST. MARK'S REST. The History of Venice, written for the help of the few Travellers who still care for her Monuments. 12mo. complete in cloth, 5s.

GUIDE to PICTURES in the ACADEMY of FINE ARTS, VENICE. New Complete Edition, Revised and Corrected. In One Part. 8vo. 1s.

MORNINGS in FLORENCE. Being Simple Studies of Christian Art, for English Travellers. Third Edition. 12mo. cloth 4s.

The BIBLE of AMIENS. A Guide to Amiens Cathedral. Being a Pocket Edition of Chapter IV. from the larger Work. Second Edition. Red leatherette, 12mo. 10d.

RUSKIN HOUSE, 156, CHARING CROSS-ROAD (Oxford-street End), LONDON; and at ORPINGTON.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S NEW NOVEL.

NOTICE.—The THIRD EDITION of
'MARCELLA,' 3 vols., by Mrs.
HUMPHRY WARD, will be ready at all the Libraries on MONDAY next.

MARCELLA.

By Mrs.
HUMPHRY
WARD.

From the Times.—"Mrs. Humphry Ward again thrusts her hand into the hot fire of living interests. Perhaps from this reason not a page is inaliquid. Everywhere is fresh, bright 'actuality'; everywhere are touches of intimacy with the world which she describes."

MARCELLA. THIRD EDITION.

MARCELLA.

By Mrs.
HUMPHRY
WARD.

Mr. FREDERICK GREENwood in the Full Mail Gazette.—"Not one, but nearly all the characters are drawn with an ease, a masterly completion, of which there are few examples in English, and none but by hands of high renown."

MARCELLA.

By Mrs.
HUMPHRY
WARD.

From the Daily Chronicle.—"Marcella" is a singularly noble and impressive story.
The book is characterized by profound seriousness, by pervading sanity, by noteworthy imaginative intensity, by not less noteworthy literary skill and finish."

MARCELLA. THIRD EDITION.

MARCELLA.

By Mrs.
HUMPHRY
WARD.

From the Manchester Guardian.—"Artistically, beyond all dispute, her best novel.
We are safe in predicting for 'Marcella' a popularity which will both command and outlast the season of its first appearance."

MARCELLA. By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD.
3 vols. post 8vo. Second Edition. At every Library.
From the Saturday Review.—"Marcella" is unquestion-ably stronger in interest than anything the author has written.....The novel comprises scenes of striking power; is skilfully developed, and strong in the qualities of observation and characterization."

MARCELLA. THIRD EDITION.

MARCELLA.

By Mrs.
HUMPHRY
WARD.

From the Christian World.—"Marcella" is worthy of a great reputation, and will be read hereafter as a living picture, boldly outlined and vividly coloured, of a complex, a difficult, but withal a profoundly interesting age."

MARCELLA.

By Mrs.
HUMPHRY
WARD.

From the Observer.—"Mrs.
Ward has produced a great work, which, we are persuaded, will long be read with keen interest and warm admiration."

MARCELLA. THIRD EDITION.

MARCELLA.

By Mrs.
HUMPHRY
WARD.

From the Standard.—"Mar-cella" is a much better novel than its immediate predecessor.....There are some passages in the book so fine that they would well bear detaching, to stand alone, on the strength of their own intrinsic merit or beauty."

MARCELLA. By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD.
3 vols. post 8vo. Third Edition. At every Library on April 16th.

From the Daily News.—"Marcella" is a noteworthy book.....'Robert Klamere' was the new attitude of the conscience towards religious belief. 'Marcella' is the same thing in relation to the neo-democratism of our day and of the century. It is a book that is instinct with purpose all through.....It had to be done, and, consistently with that obligation, stupendously well done it is."

MARCELLA.

By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD.
THIRD EDITION. 3 vols. post 8vo. At every Library on MONDAY NEXT.

London:
SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON'S LIST.

THIRD THOUSAND.

A YELLOW ASTER.

In 3 vols. By "IOTA."

The Spectator says:—"It is, we think, a good time since we have read in English fiction anything so strong and impressive as the latter half of 'A Yellow Aster.'" The Guardian says:—"Attains to a very high level indeed of pathos and power. The authoress has humour, vivacity, power of vivid description, and force." The World says:—"You ask me what to read and what books are most talked about. 'A Yellow Aster' is the last sensation." The Athenæum says:—"The characters are drawn with a notable combination of delicacy and down-rightness, and with a pathos which is as effective as it is refined." The Speaker says:—"Altogether a notable book." The Daily Telegraph says:—"A work of genius. One of those rare novels of superb quality which compel the iciest criticism to thaw, and resolve itself into warm admiration and unqualified praise." The Westminster Gazette says:—"We shall be surprised if it does not rank among the novels of the year." The Queen says:—"Iota' has achieved a brilliant success."

MRS. ROBERT JOCELYN'S NEW NOVEL.

PAMELA'S HONEYMOON. In 3 vols.

"The writing is excellent. Mrs. Jocelyn has never told a story more admirably."—Daily Chronicle.

MRS. DIEHL'S NEW NOVEL.

A WOMAN'S WHIM. In 3 vols.

"We congratulate Mrs. Diehl on having drawn some lifelike characters, and written some natural, bright, and interesting dialogue. Teresa does her creator credit. She is a real live girl."—Daily Chronicle.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'STILL LIFE OF THE MIDDLE TEMPLE.'

MIDDLE TEMPLE TABLE TALK. By W. G. THORPE, F.S.A., a Barrister of the Society. In demy 8vo. cloth gilt, with Photogravure Portrait of the Author, 15s. [This day.]

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'I FORBID THE BANNS.'

A JOURNALIST'S NOTE-BOOK. By FRANKFORT-MOORE. In demy 8vo. cloth, gilt top, with Photogravure Portrait of the Author, 12s.

The Times says:—"The author is a raconteur of undeniable humour. Unquestionably those in search of a racy and entertaining book will find something to satisfy them in Mr. Moore's volume."

The Saturday Review says:—"From beginning to end it is capital reading and full of excellent stories."

BY THE HON. MRS. HENNIKER.

OUTLINES. By the Author of 'Foiled,' 'Sir George,' &c. With Designed Title-Page and Portrait of the Author. In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6s. [Second Edition this day.]

"Distinctly the best thing she has yet done. Close observation, sympathetic insight, and a very real literary gift, combine to make 'Outlines' a book to be treasured."—Speaker.

NEW STORY OF INDIAN ADVENTURE.

The TEMPLE of DEATH. By EDMUND MITCHELL. In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, with Frontispiece by G. H. Edwards, 6s.

"Mr. Rider Haggard must look to his laurels, for Mr. Mitchell introduces us to mysteries, wonders, and horrors which the author of 'She' could hardly surpass. There have been few better tales of the kind."—Sootsman.

BY F. HAROLD WILLIAMS.

CONFESSIONS of a POET. By the Author of 'Twixt Kiss and Lip' and 'Women must Weep.' In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, with Portrait, 5s. [Immediately.]

"A FEMALE SHERLOCK HOLMES."

The EXPERIENCES of LOVEDAY BROOKE, Lady Detective. By C. L. FIRKIS. In cloth gilt, with 41 Illustrations, 3s. 6d.

"People who like detective stories are little likely to get anything better. Even the great Sherlock Holmes is not more clever than Loveday Brooke."—Record.

NEW VOLUMES OF HUTCHINSON'S SELECT NOVELS.

Each Volume in crown 8vo. handsome cloth gilt, 8s. 6d.

The HERITAGE of LANGDALE. By Mrs. ALEXANDER, Author of 'The Waving o'k,' &c. The CUCKOO in the NEST. By Mrs. OLIPHANT. With Illustrations by G. H. Edwards.
Sixth Edition.

The TRAGEDY of IDA NOBLE. By W. CLARK RUSSELL. With 46 Illustrations by Everard Hopkins. The STORY of an AFRICAN FARM.
By OLIVE SCHREINER. Seventy-third Thousand.

London: HUTCHINSON & CO. Paternoster-row.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

TOWN LIFE in the FIFTEENTH CENTURY. By Mrs. J. R.

GREEN. 2 vols. 8vo. 32s.

TIMES.—"Her work must from every point of view be pronounced memorable, not only as filling for the first time a conspicuous breach in our historical literature, but as an example of a woman's attainment of certain masculine faculties rarely found in historians of her sex—the power of selection, of condensation, of severe repression, and of generalization..... It is an important, instructive, and picturesque contribution, almost the first of its kind, to an undervalued neglected branch of English history."

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"The book is one that every student of English history, whatever his period, must necessarily read, and will read with interest and enjoyment; and many who are not students will do well to buy these volumes, every chapter of which offers some new light on modern questions."

A VALIANT IGNORANCE. By Mary Angela Dickens. 3 vols.

Crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

KATHARINE LAUDERDALE. By F. Marion Crawford. 3 vols.

Crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"A most admirable novel, excellent in style, flashing with humour, and full of the ripest and wisest reflections upon men and women."

MORNING POST.—"The story has depth of feeling as well as distinction of style, and, above all, it is very human."

CRITICISMS on CONTEMPORARY THOUGHT and THINKERS. A Series of Essays selected from the Spectator. By RICHARD HOLT HUTTON, M.A. (London). Fellow of University College, London. 2 vols. Globe 8vo. 10s.

TIMES.—"Thoughtful and suggestive essays.....The range of the essays is wide and various, and Mr. Hutton finds occasion in them to display his intellectual antagonism side by side with his large intellectual sympathies."

DAILY NEWS.—"His penetration is but one of the charms of these essays. Above, beyond it, is the evidence of his genuine urbanity of spirit, his charity, his toleration, his determination to make every man yield up his best to him, even in spite of himself."

The COLLECTED WORKS of THOMAS HENRY HUXLEY,

F.R.S. In Monthly Volumes. Globe 8vo. 6s. each Volume.

[The Everyday Series.]

Vol. I. METHOD and RESULTS. Vol. II. DARWINIANA. Vol. III. SCIENCE and EDUCATION. Vol. IV. SCIENCE and HEBREW TRADITION. Vol. V. SCIENCE and CHRISTIAN TRADITION. Vol. VI. HUME; with HELPS to the STUDY of BERKELEY. Vol. VII. MAN'S PLACE in NATURE, and other Anthropological Essays.

QUESTIONS of the DAY, SOCIAL, NATIONAL, and RELIGIOUS: being Addresses delivered in St. Martin's Church, Leicester, on Special Occasions between the Years 1870 and 1900. By DAVID J. VAUGHAN, M.A., Honorary Canon of Peterborough Cathedral, Master of Wyggeston's Hospital, late Vicar of St. Martin's, Leicester; formerly Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The LAWS and JURISPRUDENCE of ENGLAND and AMERICA: being a Series of Lectures delivered before Yale University. By JOHN P. DILLON, LL.D., Storrs Professor, Yale University, 1891-92, Author of 'Commentaries on the Law of Municipal Corporations,' late Professor of Real Estate and Equity Jurisprudence in Columbia College Law School. 8vo. 16s. net.

IN the COURT of the ARCHBISHOP of CANTERBURY.

Read and Others v. The Lord Bishop of Lincoln. Judgment, Nov. 21, 1890. Second Edition. 8vo. 2s. net.

READINGS on the INFERNO of DANTE, chiefly based on the Commentary of Benvenuto da Imola. By the Hon. WILLIAM WARREN VERNON, M.A. With an Introduction by the Rev. EDWARD MOORE, D.D., Hon.D.Litt. Dublin, Principal of St. Edmund Hall, Oxford. In 2 vols. Crown 8vo. 30s.

"Uniform with 'READINGS on the PURGATORIO of DANTE,' by the same Author."

TIMES.—"The reputation of the author and the high merit of his former work sufficiently attest the quality and merit of his present labours."

MODERN LOVE. A Reprint. To which is added 'The Sage Enamoured and the Honest Lady.' By GEORGE MEREDITH. New Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. 5s.

BALLADS and POEMS of TRAGIC LIFE. By George

MEREDITH. Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. 6s.

POEMS and LYRICS of the JOY of EARTH. By George

MEREDITH. Third Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. 6s.

MACMILLAN'S THREE-AND-SIXPENNY SERIES.—NEW VOLUME.

ADVENTURES in MASHONALAND. By Two Hospital

Nurses, ROSE BLENNERHASSETT and LUCY SLEMAN. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.—"The adventures and hardships of these two brave ladies are extremely fascinating reading."

WORLD.—"The book is excellent reading, full of movement and incident."

MODERN PLANE GEOMETRY. Being the Proofs of the

Theorems in the Syllabus of Modern Plane Geometry, issued by the Association for the Improvement of Geometrical Teaching. By G. RICHARDSON, M.A., Second Master of Winchester College, and A. S. RAMSAY, M.A., Mathematical Master of Fettes College, Edinburgh. Globe 8vo. 3s. 6d.

SCOTSMAN.—"It is simply and clearly expounded, and forms a valuable connecting treatise between the ordinary Euclid and the text-books of the higher geometry.....It deserves a hearty welcome, and will no doubt soon be widely in use."

A TREATISE on HYDROSTATICS. By Alfred George Greenhill,

F.R.S., Professor of Mathematics in the Artillery College, Woolwich. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

MACMILLAN'S ENGLISH CLASSICS.—NEW VOLUME.

SCOTT.—The LADY of the LAKE. Canto I. With Introduction and Notes by G. H. STUART, M.A., Principal and Professor of English, Kumbakonam College. Globe 8vo. sewed, 9d.

MACMILLAN & CO. London.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

SECOND EDITION. 2 vols. 8vo. price 32s.

LETTERS of HARRIET COUN-

TESS GRANVILLE, 1810-1845. Edited by her Son, the Hon. F. LEVESSON GOWER.

Truth.—"The collection of letters of Lady Granville is certainly the most entertaining and important work of the kind which has appeared since the Gravelle Memoirs."

The SENSES and the INTEL-

LECT. By ALEXANDER BAIN, Emeritus Professor of Logic in the University of Aberdeen. Fourth Edition, with Emendations. 8vo. 16s.

SHAKESPEARE STUDIES, and other Essays. By THOMAS SPENCER BAYNES, LL.D., late Professor of Logic, Metaphysics, and English Literature in the University of St. Andrews, and Editor of the Ninth Edition of the 'Encyclopædia Britannica.' With a Biographical Preface by Prof. LEWIS CAMPBELL. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"The Essays in this volume consist of three articles which appeared in Fraser's Magazine, 1879-80, entitled 'What Shakespeare learned at School,' the article on Shakespeare which appears in the 'Encyclopædia,' and one on English Dictionary which appeared in the Edinburgh Review of July, 1888."

PARLIAMENTARY GOVERN-

MENT in the BRITISH COLONIES. By ALPHRUS TODD, LL.D. C.M.G. Second Edition. Edited by his Son. 8vo. 20s. net.

SELECTED POEMS. By the

BARON of LITTON (OWEN MEREDITH). Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

"This volume is uniform with the New Edition, recently published, of the Author's 'The Wanderer' and 'Lucile,' but appears now for the first time, several hitherto unpublished Poems being included. The author's daughter, Lady Betty Hailour, contributes an Introduction dealing with her father's work as a poet."

PSYCHOLOGY, DESCRIPTIVE

and EXPLANATORY: a Treatise of the Phenomena, Laws, and Development of Human Mental Life. By GEORGE TRUMBULL LADD, Professor of Philosophy in Yale University. 8vo. 21s.

VERBA VERBI DEI: the WORDS of OUR LORD and SAVIOUR JESUS CHRIST. Harmonized by the Author of 'Charles Lowder.' With an Introduction on the Different Periods in Our Lord's Life on Earth. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

NEW BOOK BY THE AUTHOR OF 'SUPERNATURAL

RELIGION.'

The GOSPEL ACCORDING to

PETER: a Study. By the Author of 'Supernatural Religion.' 8vo. 6s.

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW,

No. 398, will be published on MONDAY NEXT.

1. AFRICAN EXPLORATION.
2. DR. JULIAN'S HYMNODY.
3. MEMOIRS of CHANCELLOR PASQUIER. Second Volume.
4. THE LIQUEFACTION of GASES.
5. THREE NOBLE ENGLISHWOMEN.
6. VON MOLTKE'S CAMPAIGN in BOHEMIA.
7. NAVAL ARMAMENTS.
8. KIDD on SOCIAL EVOLUTION.
9. THE NEW MINISTRY.

THE ENGLISH HISTORICAL REVIEW.

No. 34. APRIL. Royal 8vo. price 5s. [On Monday next.]

1. Articles.
 - MR. FREMANT and the BATTLE of HASTINGS. By J. H. Round. With a Note by the Editor.
 - BISHOP BECKINGTON and KING HENRY VI. By the Ven. Archdeacon Perry.
 - THE CITY of YORK in the SIXTEENTH CENTURY. By Miss Maude Sellers.
 - "THE DOKE LONGYNG to JUSTICE of the PEACE" and the ASSESSMENT of WAGES. By Miss Ellen A. McArthur.
2. Notes and Documents.—3. Reviews of Books.—4. List of Historical Works recently published.—5. Contents of Periodical Publications.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.

New York: 15, East 16th-street.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

IMMEDIATELY.

THE LIFE OF

JOHN CHURCHILL,
DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH,

TO THE ACCESSION OF QUEEN ANNE.

BY

GENERAL VISCOUNT WOLSELEY.

3 vols. demy 8vo. with Portraits and Plans.

The ANCIENT "VELLUM BOOK" of the HONOURABLE ARTILLERY COMPANY. Being the Roll of Members from 1611 to 1632. Edited with Notes and Illustrations, by Colonel BARKER. F.S.A. in demy 8vo. 21s.

The HISTORY of the HONOURABLE ARTILLERY COMPANY of LONDON. Including also a brief History of the American Branch of the Regiment founded in Boston in 1638. By Colonel G. A. BARKER, F.S.A. 2 vols. with Portraits, Coloured Illustrations, and Maps, demy 8vo. 31s. 6d. each.

NOTICE.

MISS BROUGHTON'S NEW NOVEL,

A BEGINNER,

WILL BE OUT AT ALL THE LIBRARIES

On TUESDAY NEXT.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

NEW NOVELS AT EVERY LIBRARY.

A NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'MASTERS OF THE WORLD.'

THOROUGH.

By MARY A. M. MARKS,
Author of 'Dr. Willoughby Smith,' &c.

3 vols. crown 8vo.

This Novel deals with the period of the Irish Rebellion of 1641, and the Events which led to the transplantation of Connaught.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

The GREATER GLORY. By MAARTEN MAARTENS, Author of 'An Old Maid's Love,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"A strangely beautifully book."—Guardian.

A DEVOTED COUPLE. By J. MASTERMAN, Author of 'The Boots of Westminster,' 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"A supremely entertaining novel."—Daily Telegraph.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S PUBLICATIONS.

NEW EDITIONS, EACH PUBLISHED
AT 3s. 6d.

The LAST of the BUSHRANGERS:
An Account of the Capture of the Kelly Gang. By FRANCIS AUGUSTUS MARK, F.M., late Superintendent of Victorian Police. With Illustrations. Third Edition. 1 vol. crown 8vo 3s. 6d.

BENCH and BAR: Reminiscences of
One of the Last of an Ancient Race. By Mr. HENRY HART HOBBS. With Appendix and Portrait of the Author. Fourth Edition. 1 vol. crown 8vo 2s. 6d.

UNDER THE SPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MAJESTY
New ready, 3rd Edition, 1 vol. royal 8vo. with the Arms beautifully engraved, 12s. 6d. bound, gilt edges.

LODGE'S PEERAGE and BARONET-
AGE for 1894. Corrected by the NOMINITY

NEW WORK BY JOHN CORDY JEAFFERSON

New ready, in 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

A BOOK of RECOLLECTIONS. By JOHN CORDY JEAFFERSON, Author of 'A Book about Lawyers,' 'A Book about Doctors,' &c.

The book is readable enough, and full of pleasant gossip about men of letters and other celebrities, great and small, whom Mr. Jeafterson has known.—Times.

NEW NOVELS.

NEW NOVEL BY MRS. VENN

New ready at all the Libraries, in 3 vols. crown 8vo

The HUSBAND of ONE WIFE. By Mrs. VENN, Author of 'Some Married Fellows,' &c.

ORCHARD DAMEREL. By Alan ST. AUBYN, Author of 'A Fellow of Trinity,' &c. 3 vols.

"Taken altogether, the work is the strongest that has come from the author's pen, and does not gain its strength by any abandonment of the peculiar refinement which characterizes this writer's books. It is a thoroughly enjoyable story."—Review.

JANET DELILLE. By E. N. Leigh FRY, Author of 'A Book Thistle,' &c. 3 vols.

"We like Janet Delille as a novel, and we wonder will feel his time wasted in perusing it, which cannot in truth be said of most novels."—Glasgow Herald.

IN CUPID'S COLLEGE. By Mabel HART, Author of 'Two English Girls,' 'From Harvest to Haytime,' &c. 3 vols.

"The writing is always bright and pleasant, the dialogues are natural and characteristic, and some of the situations are exceedingly pathetic. In Cupid's College is well above the average novel in tone, in feeling, and in writing."—Literary World.

HETTY'S HERITAGE. By Noel DENE, Author of 'The Aftermath,' 3 vols.

"Has an interesting and well-contrived plot, while the number of personages is wisely limited to that necessary for its development."—Morning Post.

The WHITE AIGRETTE. By Vin VINCENT, Author of 'Cathedral Bells,' 'Wrong on Both Sides,' &c. 3 vols.

"The White Aigrette should find favour with the old-fashioned hunter of circulating libraries, however, and to such a one, if she still exist, we commend it."—Athenæum.

The PRICE of a PEARL. By Eleanor HOLMES, Author of 'Through another Man's Eyes,' &c. 3 vols.

"The story is very pleasantly told, for the author has the knack of presenting even the most trivial details of her scheme in language that is always refined and telling."—Daily Telegraph.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

New ready, in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

TO RIGHT the WRONG. By Edna LYALL, Author of 'Dorothea,' 'We Two,' &c.

Uniform, each in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

NOVELS BY EDNA LYALL.

DONOVAN; a Modern Englishman.

WE TWO. IN the GOLDEN DAYS.

KNIGHT ERRANT. WON by WAITING.

A HARDY NONSERMAN.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S LIST.

The First Large Edition of 'The RUBICON' having been exhausted, a Second Edition is now ready.

E. F. Benson.—The RUBICON. By E. F. BENSON, Author of 'Dodo,' 2 vols. crown 8vo. 31s.

Baring-Gould.—The QUEEN of LOVE. By S. BARING-GOULD, Author of 'Mehalah,' 'Cheap-Jack Zita,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

[April 15th.

A story of the Cheshire salt region—a new district for the exercise of Mr. Baring-Gould's original and powerful gifts.

Stanley Weyman.—UNDER the RED ROBE. By STANLEY WEYMAN, Author of 'A Gentleman of France,' &c. With 12 Illustrations by R. Caton Woodville. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. [Shortly.

Mr. Weyman's fine historical tales have placed him in the front rank of novelists, and this stirring story of Richelieu and the Huguenots will not lessen his reputation.

Mrs. Oliphant.—The PRODIGALS. By Mrs. OLIPHANT. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

[In the press.

Gilbert Parker.—The TRANSLATION of a SAVAGE. By GILBERT PARKER, Author of 'Pierre and his People,' 'Mrs. Falchion,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6s.

A story with a powerful and pathetic motive by a writer who has rapidly made his way to the front.

Richard Pryce.—WINIFRED MOUNT. By RICHARD PRYCE, Author of 'Miss Maxwell's Affections,' 'Time and the Woman,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s.

[Shortly.

A story of society by Mr. Pryce, "whose clever pen," says the Athenæum, "has the lightness and ease of Octave Feuillet."

Constance Smith.—A CUMBERBER of the GROUND. By CONSTANCE SMITH, Author of 'The Middle of Lawrence Haviland,' 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

[Shortly.

NEW EDITIONS.

EIGHTH EDITION IN THE PRESS.

Marie Corelli.—BARABBAS: a Dream of the World's Tragedy. By MARIE CORELLI, Author of 'A Romance of Two Worlds,' 'Vendetta,' &c. Seventh Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

E. F. Benson.—DODO: a Detail of the Day. By E. F. BENSON. Crown 8vo. Thirteenth Edition. 6s.

Baring-Gould.—CHEAP-JACK ZITA. By S. BARING-GOULD. Crown 8vo. 6s.

A Cheap Edition of a story which has been recognised as Mr. Baring-Gould's most original effort since 'Mehalah.'

Norman Gale.—CRICKET SONGS. By NORMAN GALE. Crown 8vo. linen. 3s. 6d.

Also a Limited Edition on Hand-made Paper, demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

Also a Small Edition on Japanese Paper, demy 8vo. 21s. net.

[In the press.

Mr. Gale's rural poems have made him widely popular, and this volume of spirited verse will win him a new reputation among the lovers of our national game.

METHUEN & CO. 36, Essex-street, W.C.

SATURDAY, APRIL 14, 1894.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S NEW NOVEL ...	466
THE LAND OF POGO TIEMPO ...	470
TRADITIONAL GAMES ...	470
THE CARVELS OF WEST GMINSTAD ...	471
THE FLENDERS PETRIS PAPYRI ...	472
A CANADIAN POET ...	473
TRANSLATIONS ...	473
LOCAL HISTORY ...	474
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS ...	474-477
THE BOOKSELLERS' TRADE DINNER; THE 'DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY'; COUNTRY; RARE EDITIONS; THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON ...	477-479
LITERARY GOSPEL ...	479
SCIENCE—CHEMICAL SCHOOL-BOOKS; THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS; GOSPEL ...	480-482
FINE ARTS—ARCHITECTURAL LITERATURE; AN UNDESCRIBED SILHOUETTE PORTRAIT OF THOMAS GRAY, THE POET; FROM PALACE TO PAWNSHOP; SALES; GOSPEL ...	482-484
MUSIC—THE WEEK; LIBRARY TABLE; GOSPEL; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK ...	484-486
DRAMA—THE WEEK; LIBRARY TABLE; GOSPEL ...	486-488

LITERATURE

Marcella. By Mrs. Humphry Ward. 3 vols. (Smith, Elder & Co.)

LET it be said at once (and without prejudice) that 'Marcella' is a better book to read than either 'Robert Elsmere' or 'David Grieve,' whether it be taken as a piece of fiction depending absolutely upon its human interest, as a mirror—a more or less sensitive mirror—of the time, or merely as so many hundred pages of printed matter. Mrs. Ward has clipped those wings that would ascend the highest heaven of invention in search of flaming metaphors; she has checked the reckless fluency of her "adjectivity"—if we may coin a word to express the central fault of 'David Grieve.' It is true, unfortunately, that her heroine "devoured the scene before her with that passionate intensity of pleasure which had been her gift and heritage through life"; true that she had "a noble, free-poised, suggestive head," "a fine plastic face," and eyes "with a subtle inheritance of various expression" from which, once at least, she "flung a gay, quivering, defiant look"; true likewise that she found "the dignified ancestral sound of the breakfast bell" both "novel and attractive," although we need not think that she was starved or more than commonly hungry on that account, although we are told that "her voice had a hungry, lingering note." Mrs. Ward has not quite rid herself of the notion that a fine, wanton excess of verbiage is really fine writing; but she has developed her sense of sobriety and appropriateness in diction. Consequently her thought is the gainer. 'Marcella' might have been cut, indeed, and cut, so to say, with a blue pencil, to its own advantage. The ends of the story are dragged, and here and there the reader encounters passages which cannot be perused without a yawn. But although Mrs. Ward's style is not yet so brisk as it might be, it has lost not a little of its ponderousness. In closeness to the realities of life, as well as in style, this book marks a distinct advance on its predecessors. The characters argue, indeed, till the reader is, and they ought to be, weary; but they preach less than those who have already been sealed of the same tribe. They live upon the rarer, intenser planes of intelligence, they lapse too frequently upon a vein of enlightened discursiveness, but their emotions are emotions, their sensibility is more than a peg to hang theses upon, and such of them as have least to do with the development of Marcella Boyce are sketched with a light, fanciful touch which we had not formerly supposed Mrs. Ward to have at command.

The success of these "ungraced actors," the vigour and strength with which Mrs. Boyce and Lord Maxwell, Mrs. Jellison and old Patton, are made to stand out memorably from the prophetic souls "dreaming on things to come," for whose sake the novel was written, suggest a profitable theme of inquiry: How is it that 'Marcella,' despite its author's eloquence, her more than feminine art of reasoning, her breadth and depth of vision and view, remains an unsatisfactory work of fiction? One lays it down understanding, but incredulous, untouched to any great sympathy. And yet the power is there: the power of observation, selection, narrative. Mrs. Ward has wisely chosen a plot of the utmost simplicity—conventional as the plot of a most ordinary romance. Stripped of their accidents, the chief characters are an impulsive girl with a scapegrace father and an ill-regulated upbringing; a hero of many perfections and the usual heroic predisposition to misfortune; and an irresponsible, attractive "villain"—only, if we may pervert and paraphrase Mr. Meredith, no person is villain here but the intellects of all the persons. The hero loves the heroine, who is extravagant in thought, and overburdened with self-consciousness. She does not love him, and the twain are parted, to meet again in a low court near Drury Lane, under circumstances which may be paralleled every night of the year from the melodramatic sketches played in a neighbouring music-hall. The "villain" is deposed from his authority over her mind, and after other remarkable coincidences the lovers are happily united, leaving one to reflect that "as the climbing up a sandy way is to the feet of the aged, so is a wife full of words to a quiet man."

Now for the accidents. Marcella Boyce is a noble and impulsive girl who, in the course of an unhappy, lonely youth, has formed her mind "partly from the random opinions that young people of a generous type pick up from newspapers and magazines"—mostly of a Socialistic character, and extremely confused. With everything against her, from her own opinions to her father's past history, she meets the heir to the headship of the county. Aldous Raeburn is thus described:—

"His tastes, his sympathies, his affinities were all with the old order; but the old faiths—economical, social, religious—were fermenting within him in different stages of disintegration and reconstruction; and his reserved habit and often solitary life tended to scrupulousness and over-refinement. His future career as a landowner and politician was by no means clear to him. One thing only was clear to him—that to dogmatise about any subject under heaven, at the present day, more than the immediate practical occasion absolutely demanded, was the act of an idiot."

Both before and after the engagement, Marcella had plunged into a course of village reform, sanitary, social, political, economic. She fell out with Aldous because he would not sign a petition for the reprieve of a poacher who had either murdered a keeper (according to him), or accidentally killed him (according to her), a keeper who was an old-time and vindictive enemy of his. Although he saw himself as "the man standing midway," as the "perennially ineffective" in politics and everything else, Aldous clung to the law of his conscience when he saw that law clearly. The scene of their parting, with all its defects of language and construction, is one of the best in the novel:—

"'Marcella!' cried Aldous, 'can you not be just to me if it is impossible for you to be generous?'"

"'Just!' she repeated, with a tone and gesture of repulsion, pushing him back from her. 'You can talk of justice!'"

"He tried to speak, stammered, and failed. That strange paralysis of the will-forcem which dogs the man of reflection at the moment when he must either take his world by storm or lose it was upon him now. He had never loved her more passionately—but as he stood there looking at her, something broke within him, the first prescience of the inevitable dawned.

"'You,' she said again, walking stormily to and fro, and catching at her breath—'you, in this house, with this life—to talk of justice—the justice that comes of slaying a man like Hurd! And I must go back to that cottage, to that woman, and tell her there is no hope—none. Because you must follow your conscience—you who have everything..... Things cannot go on so. I should kill myself and make you miserable. But now I must go to her—to the poor—to those whom I love, whom I carry in my heart!'"

"She broke off sobbing....."

"'You are very scornful of wealth,' he said, catching her wrist, 'but one thing you have no right to scorn—the man who has given you his inmost heart—and now only asks you to believe that he is not the cruel hypocrite you are determined to make him!'....."

"'Please go and order the carriage,' she said. 'I cannot bear any more. I must go home and rest..... There is someone who will help me. I must not forget that!'"

"The reckless words, the inflection, turned Aldous to stone. Unconsciously he drew himself proudly erect—their eyes met. Then he went up to the bell and rang it."

"Someone" is Mr. Wharton, the type of a handsome, irresponsible politician, a leader of labour, who had already laid a strong hold upon Marcella's untrained mind. Afterwards, when she had become a London nurse, he began to love her and she to love him. But his treachery to the principles he preached and to the party he led was exposed—a rather improbable treachery rather improbably exposed—about the time that she, who was discovering the facts of life for herself by patient experiment, had begun to find out the shallowness of his mind:—

"'Strange is the modern woman,' thought Wharton..... 'I talk to her of passion, and she asks me in return why I do things inconsistent with my political opinions! puts me through a moral catechism, in fact! What is the meaning of it all—confound it!—her state of mind and mine!'"

Consequently Wharton is mated with an unpleasant old maid, not unlike Mr. Gilbert's Lady Jane, and the lovers, having come to know each other's worth, are left on the brink of happiness. The story does not keep to the height of these and such great arguments. Ever and anon it must pause the while some one develops a new proposition in politics or tries to propound "the ethical relation of the individual to the World's Fair and its vanities." These prattles and prabbles might be pardoned if they revealed any new side to any temperament, if they were essential to the progress of the narrative. But they are not, nor are the burdensome details about people's past lives which constantly crop up. For instance, Marcella's youth and its early adorations are told in pages where a very moderately skilled novelist would have used lines. Mr. Boyce and his gentlemanly blackguardism might have been the whole and sole cause of his daughter's behaviour, such is the length at which they are treated; and the casuistry of poaching, interesting enough in relation to the life of the villagers, has less to do with the marring of Aldous Raeburn's happiness than one might imagine from the painstaking manner in which Mrs. Ward dissects it. It is for the minor characters, however, that this book is to be commended chiefly, and of these Mrs. Jellison is the head and front:—

"It wor she taught me.....She had a queer way wi' the hard words, I can tell yer, miss. When she couldn't tell 'em herself she'd never own up to it. 'Say Jerusalem, my dear, and pass on.'.....An' when Isabella an' me used to read the Bible, nights, I'd allus rayther do't than be beholden to me own darter. It gets yer through, anyway."

And there we must leave an interesting, suggestive, able, instructive, wrongly planned, and by no means rightly written book, regretting that so many of its passages tempt the reader to "say Jerusalem and pass on."

The Land of Poco Tiempo. By C. F. Lummis. (Sampson Low & Co.)

By "The Land of Poco Tiempo" Mr. Lummis means to indicate New Mexico, "the Great American Mystery—the National Rip Van Winkle—the United States which is not United States": in three words "sun, silence, and adobe." From this specimen of the opening chapter it will be seen that the author is somewhat rhapsodical in style; and a subsequent allusion—without explanation—to Alexander Pope as "the hunchbacked sermonizer in pentameter" may be a trifle above the heads of average readers in this country. Of course every American is aware that Pope's claim to immortality rests—so far as the United States are concerned—on the line beginning "Lo, the poor Indian!" whence any red man is facetiously and briefly called "Lo"; but that is a fact which is not generally known on this side of the water. Yet, apart from a tendency to verbiage which is the besetting sin of many Americans, the book is by no means uninteresting; it is, moreover, printed in clear open type, so that it can be easily run through, and it is very well illustrated.

In the dry, rocky wildernesses of New Mexico and part of Arizona, where the lines of huge buttes of blood-red sandstone stretch for miles in fantastic outlines carved by the elements, there are three typical races:

the Pueblos, the Navajos, and the half-bred Mexicans, the last a negligible quantity. The Navajos are horse-stealing vagrants of the saddle, but the Pueblos are Indians who are neither poor nor naked, who were farmers and irrigators and builders of six-story houses before the Conquest, and who were then, as they are now, peaceful money-making traders and—above all—carriers: the Etruscans of the New World. Whatever may have been the behaviour of the Spaniard in other places, here at least he neither "used up" the Indians by forced labour nor treated them like wild beasts, as did the descendants of the Pilgrim Fathers in New England; the Catholic missionaries slipped in, a wholesale conversion to Christianity—of a kind—took place, and the result was "a military democracy guided by a democratic theocracy." Under this system there has been developed, from an old custom of self-inflicted torture with cactus thorns (called pooya-tye, from pooya, a thorn), a regular fraternity of Penitentes, who are severely scourged in procession during Lent, and actually crucified on Good Friday. It was only after 1887 that, to the disgust of the willing victim, the perforation of the hands and feet with nails seems to have been omitted, but no other forms of torture with blood-stained scourge, crown of thorns, gashing with flint knives, and binding to the crosses were wanting. Mr. Lummis claims to have been the first and only person who obtained in 1888, at no small personal risk, the photographs which form an important feature of his book. The details of these weird scenes and of the chase of the Chongo (a semi-religious race), with other ancient customs, must be read in the original, for quotations are simply impossible. Very vivid, too, are the accounts of the dances and processions in the mountain fastness of Acóma, one of the chief of the Zuni or Pueblos settlements; while Abó, with its vast parallel walls forty-two feet apart, one hundred and fifteen feet long, twelve feet thick at the base, and sixty feet high, receives deserved mention and illustration, as do also the huge and mysterious ruins of Cuaraí.

Intercalated are two chapters upon the Apache Indians and their outbreak in 1885, when thirty-four Chihuicahui men, eight well-grown boys, and ninety-two women and children exchanged the reservation for the war-path. By April, 1886, they had killed between three and four hundred people, and baffled the most successful Indian fighter of the United States army, with the loss of two killed; and then, for six months more, twenty "renegades" (so called) kept Sonora, Chihuahua, Arizona, and New Mexico in terror, without the loss of a man. All this description of Indian warfare is exciting, and will prove attractive to the general reader, but the most valuable portion of the book is, in our opinion, the account of the primitive town-inhabiting races already mentioned. Some of the folk-songs set to music are extremely pretty, and the translations from the Spanish into English verse are often decidedly happy; but we must protest against the rendering of "La Calandria" as the calendar-lark, for the word has no relation to calendars in New or in Old Spain.

The Traditional Games of England, Scotland, and Ireland. By Alice Bertha Gomme. (Nutt.)

MR. GOMME has, as is well known, been collecting material for a dictionary of folk-lore since 1878, and has collected to such good purpose that, as Mrs. Gomme tells us in her preface, he now sees that the extent of the work will be an obstacle to its completion:

"To print the whole in one alphabet would be more than could be accomplished except by the active co-operation of a willing band of workers, and then the time required for such an undertaking, together with the cost, almost seemed to debar the hope of ever completing arrangements for its publication."

Workers, no doubt, would have been found—a very good one, indeed, has already been found in the person of Mrs. Gomme—but subscribers to such an expensive and many-volumed work might not at once have presented themselves in adequate numbers; so we think that Mr. Gomme has done well to divide the dictionary into sections, each section complete in itself, but arranged alphabetically, so that at some future time they could readily be turned into one gigantic whole. Mrs. Gomme has taken charge of "Children's Games," for as such they perhaps began; but for many years they have been adopted by children of a larger growth. How rarely does "a trip" take place without "Kiss in the Ring" or some such game being played among the wreck of broken capitals and fallen cloisters, if an abbey is the spot chosen! There is a great deal of kissing in these games; but one of them, "Prinny-francy," which is popular in Ireland, is all kissing. It is described as "a game played between the dances at balls in farm-houses. A chair was placed in the middle of the barn or room; the master of the ceremonies led to the chair a young woman, who sat down and named the young man whom [sic] she was willing should kiss her. This he did, and then took the seat which the lady vacated. He then called out the name of some favourite girl, who was led up to him; there was another kiss. The girl then took the seat, and so on. (Co. Down.)"

Many of these games are old—how old none can say. Under "Buck, Buck,"—a game in which "a boy stoops so that his arms rest on a table; another boy sits on him as he would on a horse. He then holds up (say) three fingers, and says, 'Buck, buck, how many horns do I hold up?' &c.,—

Mrs. Gomme quotes Dr. Tylor, who says:—

"It is interesting to notice the wide distribution and long permanence of these trifles in history when we read the following passage from Petronius Arbiter, written in the time of Nero: 'Trimachio, not to seem moved by the loss, kissed the boy, and bade him get up on his back. Without delay the boy climbed on horseback on him, and alapped him on the shoulders with his hand, laughing and calling out, 'Bucca, bucca, quot sunt hic!'"

Another game still played is spoken of by Polydore Virgil. Not a few of the games require fortitude. Which of us would like to play "Dish-a-loof," in which rustics are said to enjoy themselves as follows?—

"One lays his hand down on a table, another clashes his upon it, a third his on that, and so on. When all the players have done this, the one who has his hand on the board pulls it out and lays it on the one uppermost: they all follow in rotation, and so a continual clashing and dashing is kept up; hence the name 'Dish.' Those who win the game are those who stand out longest, viz., those who are best at enduring pain. Tender hands could not stand it a moment: one dash of a rustic 'loof' would make the blood spurt from the tip of every finger."

A "Cobbin Match," which is "a school game in which two boys are held by the legs and arms and bumped against a tree, he who holds out the longest being the victor," would also be too much for the endurance of most people.

Some of the games have a fitful and devious morality. If children play games to which they sing,

King William was King David's son,
All the royal race is run;
Choose from the East, choose from the West,
Choose the one that you love best;
If she's not here to take her part,
Choose another with all your heart, to what tune may their after lives be set? Nor is enduring affection inculcated. In the Yorkshire version of "Green Grass" which we know—as it slightly varies from Henderson's we will give it—children, after mating a couple, always sang:—

If this young man should chance to die,
And leave the young woman a widow,
The bells shall ring, and we will sing,
And all clap hands together.

When criticizing a work in which so many of the games are but versions of one original with slightly varied formulae, we shrink from suggesting omissions or variations lest the rhyme we suggest should be found under another heading, and in the confusion of reading so many rhymes on much the same subject we should inadvertently have passed it over; but we think that Mrs. Gomme has not printed the rag-bag-like formula with which "Tig Tag" or "Cross Tig" begins in Durham and Yorkshire. This, as we remember, was how the game was played. One child is called "Tig." He runs up to one in the group of children and slaps him, saying "Tig," and then to another, saying "Tag," until all the words in the rhyme are exhausted but "last bat, poison." These are kept for the child whom he means to pursue, and when the word "poison" is said the chase begins, but the child seldom waits to receive the "last bat." In North Yorkshire, too, one way in which "Hen and Chickens" begins is by the assailant approaching under the guise of friendship. "Good-day, ma'am," he says to the hen. "Who goes there?" she asks. "A grenadier," he answers. "What do you want?" is the next question. "A pot of beer."—"Where's your money?" "I've clean forgot."—"Get you gone, you drunken sot!" Whereupon he states his intention of dining on chicken, and the game is at once in full swing. We might run on to any extent were space not valuable. We have a fragment of "Wallflowers" which begins:—

Wally, wally, wallflowers, growing up so high,
All these pretty maidens were all made to die.

By-the-by, the wallflowers should not be spoken of as growing in a border by the wall; they were manifestly growing out of the wall itself, as wallflowers so often do.

Old wives, arise and bake your pies,
And let your maidens lie in bed
On Christmas Day in the morning.

is the Northumbrian version most in use; and when throwing "Ducks and Drakes" the Durham rhyme is, or used to be:—

A Duck and a Drake
And a penny white cake
With father to earn it
And mother to bake.

West-Grinstead et les Caryll. Par Max de Trenqualéon. 2 vols. (Paris, Torrè; West Grinstead, Denis.)

"WENT to Harting to see the grand monument of the Carylls," says the late Mr. Dilke in a letter quoted in the memoir prefixed to 'Papers of a Critic,' and he adds: "These Carylls were so great in their day—strutted so bravely in their hour—that their dust was not to mingle with the dust of the commonalty; so they built a chapel or chantry, and there they were to lie alone in their state and dignity. Now.....the very name of the Carylls is forgotten where they lived, and while the church of the commonalty is in excellent repair, the chantry of the Carylls has been turned into a carpenter's workshop; their alabaster monuments serve as props for deal boards; and all the heralds' blazonry is hidden by cobwebs and shavings."

It is to this once illustrious and long powerful family, whose name is preserved in Pope's well-remembered line in 'The Rape of the Lock,'

This verse to Caryll, muse, is due, and in Lord Macaulay's somewhat confused reference to Lord Caryll, secretary to James II.'s queen at St. Germain's, that M. Trenqualéon has devoted these two solid volumes. The task has been manifestly a labour of love. It has extended over many years, and involved patient investigations in numerous localities in the southern counties, and much study of original documents, among which the archives of the Caryll family, now in the British Museum, and extending to thirty huge folio volumes, fill a large space. It is easy to see how, in the course of his labours, the author's horizon has widened. The subject, he tells us, soon presented to him a new attraction in the evidence it afforded that the Catholic religion did not suffer under the Reformation that total eclipse which is assumed by Protestant prejudices. "I had," he says, "before me proof to the contrary. I saw that in the district of West Grinstead, once a Catholic parish, now a simple Mission, the Catholic religion had always existed, because faithful priests, protected by a powerful family, had preserved their faith."

Created in the evil days of religious persecutions to minister to the needs of a Catholic population who were compelled to conceal their priests in order to have them in their midst, the Mission had its centre at West Grinstead, and its influence is traced by our author over a district extending, though without precise limits, to all the sea coast from Portsmouth to Seaford, and over all the territory between Lewes, Dorking, and Havant. M. Trenqualéon, however, has been far from confining himself to the pathetic story of the struggles of his co-religionists in the days of persecution. He is nothing if not thorough. Accordingly he has come to regard "Les Caryll de West Grinstead" as only part and parcel of a local history that extends back to the first ages of Christianity. Hence it happens that it is not until we reach the 338th page of his first volume that we are introduced to the first of the Sussex Carylls, in the person of Nicholas Caryll, supposed to have been of Irish origin, who settled in this part somewhere about the middle of the fifteenth century. M. Trenqualéon has traced the fortunes of the family from that time forward with infinite pains, distinguishing the otherwise bewildering succession of John Carylls by Roman figures in regal fashion. Kings, indeed, they were in their way, with blood enriched in the eyes of their dependents by numerous high and mighty alliances; and many curious and interesting evidences of their munificence, power, and influence are cited by their biographer. Of John Caryll V. it was said that, starting from the coast line at Shoreham, he could ride by way of Harting and Horsham up to the ancient town of Guildford without ever leaving his own land.

Persecution did its work with the great family of the Carylls, however, more effectively than might be inferred from the enthusiastic generalizations of the author's preface. The powerful family whose influence is there described as sufficing to protect the faithful ecclesiastics and their ancient religion stood themselves unhappily in sore need of protection. Long and nobly they withstood the storm; but confiscation and fines for recusancy left them with little prospect but that of utter ruin. There was one John Caryll who, in the time of the Civil Wars, deemed it expedient to conform by public declaration to "the true Protestant religion," whereby it is recorded that he was graciously permitted to pay no more in the way of fine than 2,680*l.*, from which was to be deducted a sum of 600*l.* already extorted by the Parliamentary general Sir William Waller, and another sum of 500*l.* which had been paid to Parliament. M. Trenqualéon tells us that this unhappy inheritor of the glories of the Carylls was at no pains to conceal the fact that his abjuration of the Catholic faith was merely temporary, and that by penitence and the practice of works of piety he endeavoured to expiate his weakness and the error of a moment. It is certain that, in consequence of his conscientious backsliding, he was condemned again to pay the fines levied upon Popish recusants, even under Charles II., for whose family the Carylls had suffered so much. The eighteenth century, with its anti-Jacobite fury, its Catholic disabilities, and its persecution of Non-jurors, brought little improvement; and some lack of worldly prudence in the later members of the family achieved the rest. The history of the Carylls of West Grinstead, though not the more extensive story which these volumes unfold, practically ends with John Baptist Caryll, grandson of the poet Pope's friend and patron, about the middle of the last century, when, as the author says, notwithstanding the efforts of Father Hoghton, who endeavoured to preserve the existence of the Mission and the property of his family, and in spite of the tears of Madame Caryll and her daughter, the unhappy John Baptist sold the park and farms of West Grinstead for 6,000*l.*—a sum insufficient to fill up the gulf of his debts.

The Flinders Petrie Papyri. By the Rev. J. P. Mahaffy, D.D. Part II. With Eighteen Autotypes. (Royal Irish Academy.)

WITH the publication of this second volume, the ninth of the "Cunningham Memoirs," Dr. Mahaffy completes his labours on the papyri disinterred by Mr. Flinders Petrie from the cartonnages of the Gurob mummy-cases; and the first duty of a reviewer is to congratulate him on the achievement of a most arduous, though highly interesting task. It has, indeed, been a work of no slight difficulty, for it must be remembered that the handwritings of the period to which these papyri belong (the third century before Christ) were practically unknown before Mr. Petrie's discovery, and that the mutilation and defacement of the fragments increased indefinitely the difficulty of deciphering and interpreting them. They form a new province, both palaeographically and historically, and Dr. Mahaffy's work on them has been that of a pioneer. Only a happy combination of patience and ingenuity could have carried the exploration of it so far as Dr. Mahaffy, with the assistance of Prof. Sayce and several of his Dublin colleagues, has carried it; and if he has left many problems still unsolved, those who have worked over any part of the same ground will be the last to make this a matter of reproach.

The documents contained in this second series are, for the most part, those which were originally assigned to Prof. Sayce, who published in Hermathena some of the results of his first study of them; but circumstances prevented Prof. Sayce from carrying on the work, and consequently Dr. Mahaffy remains the principal editor of the second part, as he was of the first. It cannot be said that the new volume equals the first in value or in interest. The literary fragments are fewer and less important; the palaeographical results have been anticipated by the earlier publication, and the historical results are scanty and scattered. The number of texts published is, however, larger, and they contain a great quantity of matter which is useful and interesting to the minuter students of history. On the other hand, only eighteen plates of facsimiles accompany the second part as against thirty with the first. So far as palaeography is concerned there is no cause to complain of this. The best and most characteristic specimens have, no doubt, been selected, and the palaeographer has now ample means of forming his opinion of the handwriting of this period. But for those who wish to check the accuracy of the transcripts, or to make attempts at filling the lacunae, the lack of more facsimiles is serious. To the plea of expense, however, put forward by Dr. Mahaffy, it is impossible to frame any cogent reply, and students must wait until the originals have been placed in some accessible repository.

The manuscripts of a literary character in the present instalment include only five columns of Plato's 'Laches' and a few much-mutilated fragments of prose and verse. The chief value of the 'Laches' fragment is that it contradicts the somewhat alarming conclusions which were drawn from the remains of the 'Phædo' published in the earlier volume. In the 'Phædo' the variations of the MS. from the received text were considerable, and it was suggested that we had here a proof of the extensive corruption which classical texts had suffered at the hands of Alexandrian scholars. Prof. Campbell and Prof. Usener showed cause against this revolutionary theory; and their conservatism is justified by the 'Laches' fragment, which exhibits practically the same text as that with which we are familiar in the much later vellum manuscripts of Plato. The general drift of the new evidence derivable from papyri is all in the same direction, that, despite the very much greater age of these newly discovered documents, the best papyrus manuscripts are those whose texts approach most nearly to those contained in the good vellum MSS. of the tenth and eleventh centuries.

The large majority of the Petrie papyri is composed of documents the value of which is chiefly historical. First of these is the fragmentary record of a campaign by Ptolemy Euergetes in Cilicia and Syria. The interpretation of it is, indeed, open to doubt, but Dr. Mahaffy has given his explanation already in the columns of the Athenæum, and we shall not discuss it here. This document is directly historical; the rest are of a very miscellaneous character, and are only historical in an indirect sense. They include the official correspondence of a superintendent of public works and of other public officers, the petitions of private individuals who seek redress, bills for the hire of horses, a list of the horses of a cavalry squadron, tax registers, loans, legal documents, and receipts. They throw incidental light on the irrigation system of Egypt under the Ptolemies, the manner and extent of taxation, the organization of the official administration, the life and thoughts of the inhabitants, both Greek and native. But it is in the interpretation of these facts that their virtue lies. The little isolated details recorded in these papyri and in others of later date have still to be brought into their proper order and correlation by the exercise of historical insight and imagination. Dr. Mahaffy makes many illuminating suggestions, but the work of the historian yet remains to be done.

Dr. Mahaffy asks (in effect) that his critics shall try their hands at deciphering the facsimiles before they undertake to criticize his work. Perhaps he goes too far in stating that most of the autotypes are as good as the originals; for, great as is our respect for his imaginative powers, we cannot help thinking that his readings must rest on a larger basis of actual decipherment than in some instances appears to be possible from the facsimiles alone. Still, we have followed out his suggestion, and therefore venture to propound a few doubts and alternatives as a contribution towards the further correction or interpretation of the text. The epistatagus of the district to which these papyri relate (the Fayyûm) would not have his headquarters at Alexandria, as stated on p. 7, but presumably at Memphis. The collateral use of silver and copper currencies (p. 12) is fully illustrated by one of the recently published British Museum papyri (pap. cxxxi.), in which a farm steward freely intermingles silver and copper drachmas, and finally reduces them to a common total. Dr.

Mahaffy's suggestion on p. 36 that the official there mentioned is wrongly addressed as "royal secretary" (βασιλικὸς γραμματεὺς) is hardly probable; for the document (as is shown by the word ἀπογράφουμαι) is a tax or census return, and in Roman times at least such returns were regularly addressed to the "royal secretary." The origin of the semicircular symbol indicating the remainder of a subtraction (p. 39) is to be found in a capital $\Lambda = \lambda(\text{οὐδέν})$. The third division of the Arainoite nome was called Themistos, not Themistios (p. [2] and elsewhere). On p. [4], No. iv. (3), l. 2, the reading of the original appears to be εὐχόμενος διατελῶν, as in Brit. Mus. pap. xlii., rather than ἐσχομεν. In iv. (7), l. 4, 5, [δ]ιστάλλε[με]νος δὲ τῇ διανοίᾳ may be suggested, and in iv. (9), l. 11, λιτοῦργοις (?). With regard to the difficult text on p. [14] it may be observed that the peculiarly shaped σ mentioned by Wilcken stands for 200, not for 6. Taken in conjunction with the text on p. [118], the mysterious word ἀνάλια must apparently indicate a unit of division of the work on the irrigation embankments, payment for which was made at the rate of one drachma for fifteen. The letters printed ἀναφύσσης in vii., l. 12, should surely be ἀναλφύσσης. The proper name in xii. (3), l. 2, is probably Ἀνχίρατος. The location of the division of Heracleides in the south-east of the Fayyûm does not harmonize with the ascertained position of Socnopseis Neous, a village in that division, at the modern Dimay, to the north of the Birket-el-Kurûn lake. One or two of the dates seem to be wrong, unless Dr. Mahaffy has any new evidence as to the exact time at which some of the Ptolemies commenced their reigns; thus the fifth year of Ptolemy Euergetes should be B.C. 243-2, not 252 (pp. [61]-[63]), and the fourth year of Ptolemy Epiphanes should be B.C. 202-1, rather than 200 (p. [151]). On p. [122] (No. xxxviii. verso, l. 2) the facsimile appears to admit of reading πρότερον, instead of the improbable proper name προττων. In xxxix. σ (6), l. 12, the character read as α should apparently be the symbol for ϕ . In xli. α , l. 17, we should suggest the omission of the conjectural $\omicron$: and in xli. l. 5, ταμίσιον, which Dr. Mahaffy interprets as "a place for making rennet," and rightly thinks a very odd description of a house, should surely be ταμίσιον. The symbol $\alpha\mu$ on p. [141] is probably for ἀμπελώνων. Finally, the interpretation of No. xlvi. seems open to question. The crucial word, ἐγγυασθαι, should surely be rendered "stand surety for," and the meaning is that Theotimus stands surety for Philippus when the latter undertakes the duties of a tax-farmer. Philippus apparently fails, and the securities given by Theotimus are consequently estreated.

It is in no carping spirit that we have made these suggestions. No one has recognized more explicitly than Dr. Mahaffy the truth that, in dealing with material of this novel description, one mind cannot exhaust all the possibilities; indeed, he repeatedly invites suggestions as to the adequacy of his own interpretations and decipherments. We therefore offer this small contribution for his consideration. However much future students of these papyri may add to the illustrations from the pencil of Mr. Herbert Marshall. A Winchester schoolboy is not a Wintonian, but a Wykehamist, and he is proud of the distinctive title. He carries on a tradition which had its origin in the mind of the founder. It is well, therefore, that Lord Selborne should lead off in this volume with a chapter on the place in history occupied by William of Wykeham, who is pronounced "not only virtuous and magnificent," but in genius, character, and action one of the most illustrious men of his age. The several sketches of college life in the sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth centuries, with the Rev. E. C. Wickham's "Life in College about 1850," are well done. Unhappily the picture of the fourteenth century schoolboy, in all except the architectural outlines of chapel and chambers or the dry text of the statutes, is well-nigh a blank. What would we not give for a packet of letters home revealing the inner life of a junior in the days of the Wars of the Roses! Historically, the most fresh and interesting of these papers is that by Mr. A. F. Leach on Wykeham's models. He finds those models not in the old monastic schools, but rather in their newer secular rivals the collegiate churches, and more especially in such foundations as that of Merton College or the House of the Valley Scholars at Salisbury. Yet even here the school was a subordinate and subsidiary establishment. "Wykeham," says Mr. Leach,

"for the first time established a school as a sovereign and independent corporation, existing of, by, and for itself: self-centred and self-controlled..... To make education, and that education not the education of clerics in theology or canon law, but the education of boys in grammar, the paramount and pronounced object of that ecclesiastical institution with all the paraphernalia of Papal Bull and royal and episcopal license, was no small innovation. It was a new departure, which opened a new era in the world of education and therefore of thought."

Dr. Fearon follows with a paper on Wykeham's conception of a public school, and shows that the founder of St. Mary's, Winchester, not only established the first of public schools, "but fixed for all after time on true strong lines the type which shall be accepted by popular voice as the most cherished form of national education."

History of the Parish Church of Saint Michael and All Angels, Chipping Lambourn. By John Footman, M.A. (Stock.)—Mr. Footman's original intention was to compile a history of the Hundred of Lambourn, but he found, as many another local antiquary has done before him, that the materials were far more abundant than he had anticipated. He therefore changed his plan, and has published one section of the work in the volume now before us. It is to be succeeded by others on the manorial history of Lambourn and on the church and landowners of Eastgarston. These works Mr. Footman hopes to supplement by the publication of the church registers of the two parishes. We trust that he may be able to accomplish all he has planned, for the specimen he has given is creditable in most respects. Chipping Lambourn is a small town in Berkshire rarely visited by tourists, though its church is one of considerable interest. There was a church at Lambourn before the Norman Conquest, but we believe no trace of it is to be found in the present fabric. Mr. Footman thinks, and he is probably right, that there was a church here at the end of the seventh century, but no direct evidence of it has yet been discovered. Lambourn Church first becomes known by a charter of Canute, which it appears is unquestionably genuine. The original is lost, but a copy has been preserved in one of the Chapter House books of St. Paul's Cathedral. The king sets forth in the usual form what were the rights of the Church in Lambourn, both as to lands and tithes. Among the land rights are mentioned "two shrift-acres in harvest." The author candidly tells us that he does not know what they were. We have only his translation to go by, but if the rendering be correct it seems probable that the "shrift-acres" were lands given in lieu of Easter dues. This charter has a far wider interest than that which pertains to it as contributing to the history of a Berkshire town; it is, Mr. W. de Gray Birch has informed the author, one of the earliest documents we possess relating to tithes. Here very full details are given, though some of them are not easily understood. The charter winds up with one of those curses of which the men of the eleventh and earlier centuries were so fond. Nothing about St. Paul's appears in the charter itself, but a note by the transcriber adds that Canute, King of England and Denmark, gave the church of Lambourn to the church of St. Paul, London, for the maintenance of the dean for the time being: "Ad victum Decani qui pro tempore fuerit." The deans of St. Paul's were rectors of Lambourn for somewhere about eight hundred years. The next mention of Lambourn Church is in Domesday, where we are told that a hide of land belonged to it. The oldest part of the existing fabric is the nave, which is late Norman, probably built in the earlier part of the reign of Henry II. Though it has suffered much from churchwardens and restorers, it yet affords a pleasing example of the style which immediately preceded the first pointed. The lower stage of the tower, which is central, is somewhat later than the nave. Its western front presents a curious feature which we have not heard of elsewhere. On the south side of the arch, at thirteen feet from the ground, is to be seen a piscina, mutilated, it is true, and restored in plaster, but having sufficient of the original remaining to leave no doubt as to what it is. It shows, therefore, that the rood-loft must have had the gallery above the screen sufficiently wide for an altar to have been placed thereon. We know of instances where there was an organ in the rood-loft, but an altar in such a position is a new thing, for the rood-altars of which mention is sometimes made in old churchwardens' account-books usually stood on one or the other side of the door in the middle of the screen. Of the date of the transepts and choir it is impossible to speak. An antiquary who visited the church forty-five years ago has left it on record that the roof of the north transept "is of plain open timber work with tie-beam and king-post, which, with the corbels, appear to be Early English." He adds that the roof of the south transept is of the same character, but not quite so well executed or so early. All this has gone now. "Later alterations and additions," Mr. Footman says, "have entirely transformed the appearance of the transepts and chancel, and the nineteenth century has ruthlessly destroyed the ancient roofs." There is in the church a tomb to a certain John Estbury, a great benefactor to the church. Mr. Footman prints his will, and a highly interesting document it is, but that which preserves the memory of John Estbury still green is an absurd piece of folk-lore attaching to his tomb. It is of grey marble; there are heraldic shields on the sides, and a portrait of Estbury in brass on the top. On a scroll issuing from the mouth of the figure are the words "Pater de Cella Deus, miserere nobis." This scroll has some faint likeness to a serpent, so the Lambourn people have excoquiated a story to account for the good man's death. "He was killed by a worm dropping into his mouth while he was asleep in an arbour. His housekeeper tried to decoy it out with a basin of milk, but in her haste to get it out it stung his lip, from the effects of which he died." It is commonly and truly thought that the cause of education owes much to the ministers who governed England for Edward VI., but sometimes we catch a glimpse of the other side of the picture. There was a chantry in Lambourn Church. The priest who was attached to it had a double duty. He was required to say certain masses, and also to be master of a free school for teaching grammar. There was surely nothing superstitious in giving free education to boys of the town. The authorities chose to think there was, and chantry and school were alike condemned. Lambourn is one of the very few churches in England in which, so far as is known, daily service has always been kept up. The reason is that John Estbury founded certain almshouses, and built for his almsmen the chapel of the Holy Trinity, making it incumbent on the recipients of his bounty to attend daily prayer therein.

Peeps at the Past; or, Rambles among Norfolk Antiquities. By Mark Knights. (Jarrold & Sons.)—It is a good sign that the march of luxury and the growing taste for sumptuous display are sensibly affecting the manufacture of books. Publishers and authors who could not expect a large sale among the circulating libraries for such works as the general public would care to read are beginning to appeal to buyers who may be interested in this subject or in that, and it is clear that they find customers if only the volumes published are sent out in a form and at a cost which please the favoured few. This handsome volume is a favourable specimen of its class. From cover to cover it is a book to be proud of, and reflects credit upon the taste and enterprise of the publishers. The illustrations are excellent and well chosen—the sketch of Mortimer's Chapel is a capital specimen; the delicious lightness of the paper makes the book as easy to handle as an ordinary octavo; the print is so good as to make reading a positive treat for the eye. Only two hundred copies have been struck off, and it is, therefore, inevitable that, sooner or later, the original subscribers will find themselves the happy possessors of a "rarity." It cannot be said that the author has added much to our knowledge, but he has managed to bring some facts into greater prominence than has heretofore been accorded to them; he has made the most of his authorities; he writes like a man who has read a great deal, perhaps a little too widely and discursively; and he is so brim full of theories that he helps his readers along by stringing all the isolated facts upon some threads of ingenious and sometimes rather startling hypothesis, so that the memory is not burdened, while the imagination is allowed to have very free play. Mr. Knights has divided his book into twenty chapters, beginning with one on the traces of primeval man in Norfolk, and ending with another on the curious relic known as Hardley Cross. They are all pleasant reading enough, but they need to be read with caution, not to say suspicion, by the neophyte. The existence of palæolithic man in the Brandon Valley, and the probable extinction and obliteration of the old savage race by another people, only a little more advanced than their predecessors, and this in ages immensely remote, has now become an accepted conclusion, arrived at by much careful and laborious examination of the evidence, and science has no doubt of the soundness of the induction. But it is a vast step from those times to the days when Roman invaders appeared upon the scene. Of the intervening period Mr. Knights has little to say. It is no fault of his, for he scarcely pretends to be an explorer; but if he has so little to tell, or to guess, about our Celtic forbears, there was a great deal more to say about the Roman occupation. His chapter on this period betrays the limited views and the limited knowledge of a writer who is intensely local in his sympathies; for no man can know much of Roman Norfolk whose purview does not extend far beyond the boundaries of his own province. The same thing must be said of almost the whole book. There is some useful information about the distribution of the East Anglian round towers, about the burghs, and a serviceable notice of the dimensions of the great earthworks at Thetford. But when we come to look into the views which are propounded on all these old questions we cannot but regard them with grave misgivings. To say that "the Thetford earthworks were without doubt thrown up by the Northmen" is audacious. The truth is we know almost nothing as yet about Danish camps and earthworks, nor shall we ever know much more than we do until research has been pursued on that problem, as on many another problem of archaeology, after a scientific method. We are far enough from that, unhappily, and not likely to attain to it for many a long day. Mr. Knights, though by taste an antiquary, is by conviction a religious mystic, and like other mystics he looks at everything from the mystical standpoint, and so far as he cites history it is usually to support his dreamy speculations. The chapter on "The Christian Mills" is a rhapsody in which scraps of history are made to do service of the very strangest kind. In his chapter on holy wells we are perplexed by the oddest reflections. What can be the meaning of the following?—"It was no wonder, when the earthly parent of Christ was raised into an object of adoration and worship, that the people should continue to worship that which flowed from the earth." So in another place, when we are told that Augustine "met the representatives of the British Church under an oak," we are solemnly warned that "these facts remind us that it was by the oak of Moreh that the Lord first appeared to Abraham, and that it was under the oak of Shechem that Jacob hid the strange gods of his household." But we may let such follies pass; they are, indeed, more frequent than they should have been, but we all have our eccentricities—sometimes. Mr. Knights, however, now and then takes too much pains to argue a point which had better been left alone. The question whether the old East Anglian bishops fixed their seat at North or South Elmham is not to be settled without much more research than he is capable of. He does not seem to know that it was a common practice of the early Augustinian canons to take over abandoned churches in parishes where there were no priests to serve them. He is under the impression that for a man to set up a mill in old times, and so save the inhabitants of a district from the toil of grinding their own corn in a quern, was an act of extortion. He cannot but believe that all monks were "guzzlers and gourmands who gloated in the things of the flesh." As might have been expected, the chapters dealing with the monastic houses are but weak compilations, yet they are not wholly without value from the picturesque point of view, and Mr. Knights has visited all these ruins and knows them well from personal inspection. As relics of a past life which was not according to his views of the right order of things they are abomination to his devout mind, and suggest mystical interpretations of the most surprising character. But transcendentalists are apt to leave history behind them when they get into the clouds. Mr. Knights goes so far as to tell us that the introduction of Christianity into Gaul did not take place till the fourth century; and in another passage he seems to think that Norwich Cathedral was set down on a spot where there had been a chapel dedicated to St. Ethelbert. Little eccentricities like these, however, and many others we can very well pardon when we have so handsome a book in our hands; and if we have to deplore that this performance was not a little better, we may readily confess that it might easily have been much worse.

Gleanings towards the Annals of Aughton, near Ormakirk. By G. C. Newstead. (Liverpool, Ratcliffe.)—We think that these 'Gleanings' should have been reserved until they made at least a chef before they appeared in print. The author has amassed some interesting materials, and writes unassumingly, if not with exactness and research. At p. 3 he mentions a charter dated in 1316, with a notice of "Le Mahomet's field," and thinks that he has discovered a memorial of the Prophet in an obscure Lancashire parish. We look upon his discovery with considerable doubt. Mr. Newstead describes the church, parish registers, and rectors, and gives extracts from the accounts of the churchwardens and constables, from which some curious facts may be drawn. In 1787 the parish bought an umbrella for the minister which cost 14s. In 1813 they purchased two white bears, which the author judiciously explains as meaning door-mats. The overseers, we find, were clever in lessening the number of their paupers by marrying them and getting them out of the parish. On one occasion they actually went to the expense of a licence to bring the union about. In 1738 they gave 1s. 6d. for "two new bratts," meaning not children, but pinafores. It seems strange to find them spending half-a-crown for two new shifts for Thomas Bradshaw. In 1742 they paid a bill of a guinea—no doubt under protest—to "Dr. Davies, who pretended to cure Thomas Roberts." In 1751 the sum of 8d. was given to a man and three children "distressed with thunder." We presume that their house had been struck by lightning. But the strangest and most painful entry occurs in 1758: "To conveying a lunatic woman to Maghull, who lay in Maudslay's swine coat all night, and cash to be quit of her, 1s." The poor creature was actually shut up for the night in a pigsty!

The Temple Church. By T. H. Baylis, Q.C. (Philip & Son.)—This delightful little book does not pretend to the title of a history of the Temple Church. It is described by the author as an "historical record and guide," a description which will commend itself to foreign and colonial visitors and to itinerant antiquaries. It would be difficult to imagine an historical guide-book affording more information than is contained in the small compass of this dainty little volume. More than this, the information is admirably arranged, and Mr. Baylis has a pleasant way of addressing himself to his readers as though they were actually inspecting the ancient church under his personal guidance. The illusion is maintained by a liberal allowance of plates and facsimiles. Nothing is forgotten that might contribute to the better understanding of the subject, and there is even a useful glossary. Mr. Baylis has naturally found some space for a brief sketch of the history of the knights themselves, and this is, on the whole, very well done. It would seem, however, that, by citing Wata's edition of Matthew Paris instead of Dr. Luard's, the characteristic blunder of "de Sancto Andomaro" for de Sancto Audo-maro is perpetuated. There are also a few obscurities, for possibly there would be some amongst Mr. Baylis's imaginary audience who would "want to know" why the Outer Temple should once have been called "Exeter Inn," after Walter de Stapleton—or was it Lord Paget? These, however, are trifling blemishes in a really valuable handbook.

Blau's Map of Lancashire in 1662. (Stirling, Shearer & Son.)—An enterprising Scottish firm is reproducing the maps of Scotland and England which were published at Amsterdam in 1662 in Blau's 'Atlas Major.' That of Lancashire is before us, and is remarkably well done. We recommend our readers to examine it, if they can, with the description of the same county which they will find in Michael Drayton's 'Polyolbion,' a book which may be very properly regarded as a notional atlas. We hope Messrs. Shearer will go on with their project, and, when that is completed, give us a reproduction of the still more famous maps of Christopher Saxton.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

PROF. KNIGHT, of St. Andrews, has reprinted the Rectorial Addresses delivered at the University of St. Andrews (A. & C. Black) from 1863, when Sir W. Stirling Maxwell delivered his inaugural address, to 1893, when the Marquis of Bute was the speaker, and pronounced a very interesting oration on the history of St. Andrews. Prof. Knight has prefixed a readable introduction, which is disfigured by some slight inaccuracies. For instance, although he has printed a letter of Browning's giving his address as Warwick Crescent, Prof. Knight a few lines above says that Browning lived in Warwick Square.

MESSRS. SONNENSCHNEIN & Co. publish a translation of M. Yves Guyot's The Tyranny of Socialism, edited by Mr. J. H. Levy, who contributes an introduction and notes in which he somewhat finds fault with his author for being too civil to the economical pretensions of the Socialists.

MESSRS. MURRAY & SON, of Glasgow, send us The Education of the Horse, an illustrated volume by "Professor" E. K. Crocker, which is intended for a practical book, but does not impress us favourably.

The Devil's Pronoun, and other Phantasies. By Frances Forbes Robertson. (Reeves & Turner.)—It is difficult to know exactly what to say about this book. Miss Forbes Robertson has evidently written these phantasies for the purpose of inculcating certain social doctrines, for which she is presumably an enthusiast; but the doctrines suggested are of so vague a nature that, even if this were the place to do so, there would be considerable difficulty in criticizing them adequately. Judged simply as stories, these allegories are rather dreary reading. 'The Devil's Pronoun' is the only one of which the sense is tolerably plain, though valiant efforts are made to render even that obscure by the strange dialect used, of which this sentence is a fair example: "The dark new-comers seemed gracious men, and spoke the language of their hosts with the addition of some odd words, of which the islanders had no wot of the meaning." The illustrations are almost as quaint as the text.

MESSRS. EVER & SPOTTISWOODE send a pretty edition of The Imitation of Christ, with a preface by Canon Knox-Little, chiefly remarkable for the dogmatic manner in which he assigns the treatise to "St. Thomas à Kempis." The Canon does not seem to know much about the subject.

Modern Dogs, by Rawdon B. Lee (H. Cox), is a handsome volume upon the sporting division of dogs used in the British Islands, with full-page illustrations of each species by Mr. A. Wardle. On the whole, these plates are decidedly good, while the letterpress is of the quality that might be expected from the kennel-editor of the Fidd. Mr. Lee naturally speaks with authority, and from a practical knowledge of his subject, in all that relates to judging the various species and the assignment of their respective "points"; while he shows considerable analytical skill in discriminating between what can be fairly expected of dogs, and what they are often credited with doing. It is obviously unfair, as he shows, to imagine that a bloodhound ought to be able to follow up the trail of a supposed criminal along a pavement which has been "foiled" by other passers-by; but over fresh ground the sleuth-hound is unrivalled, and he will hunt the "clean boot" as no other dog can, whereas for such more trials as following a sole which has been rubbed with horse-flesh, terriers or almost any clever dogs would serve. In addition to the old and well-known breeds, several others are introduced; such as the whippet, which is a cross between the greyhound and the terrier, and much fancied among working men in the north of England, where it is used in rabbit-coursing and for dog-racing. Another is the Great Dane—including boar-hounds, German mastiffs, &c.: a species to which the late Mr. Walsh ("Stonehenge") refused a place in his 'Dogs of the British Islands,' about a quarter of a century ago. Some ten years since, ladies took a fancy to the mastiff, and as he was large and had a strong temper, he was fast becoming a dangerous nuisance in the streets, when the rabies scare set in, and as any restraint, either of muzzle or chain, made him furious, he happily went out of fashion. His place has been well supplied by the handsome and good-natured Borzoi or Russian wolfhound, a dog which was almost unknown in England three years ago. As regards hunting, which is often derided by humanitarians, it may be morally wrong, as the production of opium is said to be; but even as "the wages of sin" it has to be considered, for there can be no doubt that fox-hunting alone leads to the direct expenditure and consequent diffusion of from three millions (minimum) to four and a half millions sterling annually, to say nothing of horse-keep, forage, and an enormous amount of indirect expenditure to which we dare not put even an approximate figure. It would be easy to continue, but this is not a sporting journal, and we refrain, having probably said enough to show that the work is good of its kind. Ladies will like it very much; it is not the book for them.

M. PAUL OLLENDORFF, of Paris, publishes Souvenirs intimes d'un Lancier de la Garde Impériale, by Marcel de Bailléhache, a book which does not contain much that is in itself either amusing or of deep interest, but which, giving as it does a picture of the life of a non-commissioned officer in the Imperial Guard in the latter days of the Second Empire and during the war, is well worth attention, so curiously unreal or antique are many of the facts which relate to a period historically so near and yet grown so dim and misty. Those who remember the birth of the Empire and its whole era nevertheless hardly remember its detail more closely than they know that of the First Empire, which they have heard at second hand from those who remember it. The accounts here given of the ceremonies of 1807 read as though they were descriptive of the events of 1802. Although good stories are scarce in the book, there are some traces of humour. The author was resident in Alsace as a boy, and was confirmed at Colmar by the Bishop of Strasbourg, who preached the confirmation sermon in German. The bishop was a patriotic subject of the French empire, but was very hostile to the use of the French tongue. The lancer's father was Advocate-General, and represented to the bishop his sorrow at the slow progress of French in the schools of Alsace, to which the bishop answered, in his impossible French, to this effect: "Ah! but you see French is the tongue of Voltaire." "That may be so," was the reply; "but it is also the tongue of Bossuet." "Yes, but if they learn French they will read Voltaire, and they won't read Bossuet."

The Royal Artillery Institution at Woolwich reprint, from their Proceedings, The French Sudan, by Capt. S. P. Oliver, which gives an excellent account of French proceedings on the Upper Niger and in that neighbourhood up to January of the present year, with a further note carrying matters almost to the present time.

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Dawson's (W. J.) The Comrade Christ, and other Sermons, 3/6 Jones's (Rev. J. M.) The Cup of Cold Water, and other Sermons, or. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Mackintosh's (W.) The Natural History of the Christian Religion, 8vo. 10/6 net, cl.
Millard's (W.) The Resurrection of the Dead, or. 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Bainy (P.) and others' The Supernatural in Christianity, 2/ Smith's (R. T.) The Church in France, or. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Vaughan's (D. J.) Questions of the Day, Addressed, 5/ cl.
Vox Clamantis, The Gospel of the People, imp. 16mo. 12/ World's Congress of Religions, with Introduction by Rev. M. J. Savage, 8vo. 2/6 fwd.

Law.

- Dillon's (J. F.) The Laws and Jurisprudence of England and America, 8vo. 16/ net, cl.
Marland's (B.) Rules and Regulations affecting Building Operations in London, 16mo. 2/6 bds.

Richards (H. C.), Payne (W. H. C.), and Soper's (J. P. H.) The Parish Councilor's Guide to the Local Government Act, 1894, or. 8vo. 2/6 cl.

Fine Art.

- Hillier's (D. E.) Illustrated Lessons on Form, 6/ canvas.
Poetry and the Drama.
Aldrich's (T. B.) Poems, or. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Baynes's (T. B.) Shakespearean Studies, and other Essays, or. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
History of Reynard the Fox, rendered into Verse from Caxton's Translation, Additions by F. Hills, 26/ net, cl.
Morris's (L.) Songs without Notes, 12mo. 5/ cl.
Shakespeare, Whitehall Edition, edited by H. A. Doubleday, Vol. 3, or. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Steele's (H.) Plays, edited by G. A. Aitken, or. 8vo. 3/6 cl.

Political Economy.

- O'Meara's (J. J.) Municipal Taxation at Home and Abroad, or. 8vo. 7/6 cl.

History and Biography.

- Drake's (S. A.) The Making of Virginia and the Middle Colonies, or. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Hills's (J.) Short Lives of Men with a Mission (Stanley, Lawrence, Kingsley), or. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Green's (Mrs. J. K.) Town Life in the Fifteenth Century, 3 vols. 8vo. 32/ cl.
Hancock's (A. M.) A History of Chile, or. 8vo. 10/6 cl.
History of the War between France and Germany, 1870-1, or. 4to. 9/ cl.
Liszt (F.), Letters of, ed. by La Mare, trans. by C. Sachs, with Portrait, 3 vols. or. 8vo. 25/ cl.
Thorpe's (W. G.) Middle Temple Talk, with Portrait, 16/ cl.

Geography and Travel.

- Haynes's (A. E.) Man-Hunting in the Desert, 8vo. 21/ net.
Lane's (H. W.) Manners and Customs of the Modern Egyptians, illustrated, or. 8vo. 4/ cl.
Mason's (Capt. J.) Twelve Years' Residence on the West Coast of Scotland, or. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Winser's (J.) Cartier to Frontenac, Geographical Discovery in the Interior of North America, 8vo. 15/ cl.

Philology.

- Boswell (A.) and Beck's (T. E.) Practical German Readings for Beginners, or. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Caeser de Bello Gallico, Book 7, Translation, Introduction, Text, and Notes by Allcock and Mason, or. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Cioppo pro Sex Roscio Amerino, a Translation, with Text Papers, by F. G. Plautow, or. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Matriculation Model Answers, Latin, or. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Plato's Gorgias, Translation, with Text Papers, by F. G. Plautow, or. 8vo. 4/6 cl.

Science.

- Chapman's (H. C.) A Manual of Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, illustrated, or. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Clapperton's (G.) Practical Paper-Making, or. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Lee's (R. B.) The Modern Dogs of Great Britain (Non-Sporting Division), 8vo. 15/ cl.
Mercier's (C.) Lunatic Asylums, 8vo. 16/ cl.
Morris's (H.) Essentials of Practice of Medicine, 6/ net, cl.
Schneider's (G.) The Book of Choice Ferns, Vol. 3, 4to. 31/ cl.
Shaw's (J. C.) Essentials of Nervous Diseases and Insanity, or. 8vo. 4/ net, cl.

General Literature.

- Benson's (H. F.) The Rubicon, 2 vols. or. 8vo. 31/ cl.
Blatchford's (R.) A Son of the Forge, or. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Bliss's (P. J.) A Mound of Many Cities, 8vo. 6/ cl.
Bouldwood's (R.) A Modern Buccaneer, 3 vols. or. 8vo. 31/6 cl.
Bramah's (S.) English Farming and Why I Turned It Up, or. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Broughton's (R.) A Beginner, or. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Cox (W. G.) and Clegg's (J. R.) The Irish Diurnal Year, 1863, 8vo. 4/ net, cl.
Famous Adventures and Prison Escapes of the Civil War, 7/6 Hall's (G.) Allegretto, illustrated by O. Herford, 5/ net, cl.
Hutton's (B.) Mid Lyle, 2 vols. or. 8vo. 21/ cl.
Henderson's (E. E.) A Guide to Palmistry, 18mo. 2/6 cl.
Hope's (A.) The Prisoner of Zenda, or. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Mackie's (G.) The Reconciliation, a Romance of Fairy Land, or. 8vo. 2/6 sewed.
Meade's (L. T.) A Soldier of Fortune, 3 vols. or. 8vo. 31/6 cl.
Paston's (J.) A Modern Amazon, a Novel, 2 vols. or. 8vo. 21/ cl.
Spenser's (W.) Eighteen of Them, Singular Stories, 3/6 cl.
Taylor's (H. C.) The Flower of Portuguese, 2 vols. or. 8vo. 12/ cl.
Taylor's (H. C.) An American Poetess, a Novel, 2 vols. 21/ cl.
Thoughts and Reflections on Modern Society, with an Introduction by A. Featherman, 8vo. 21/ cl.
Westall's (W.) For Honour and Life, or. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Yellow Book (The), an Illustrated Quarterly, 5/ net, cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

- Corpus Scriptorum Ecclesiasticorum Latinorum, Vol. 36, 16mo. 80.

- Rauch (C.) Die Offenbarung des Johannes, 8mo. 60.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Molinier et Mazenod: Inventaire des Meubles du Château de Fou (1661-2), 30fr.

- Yriarte (C.) Livre de Souvenirs de Mamocito, 45fr.

Drama.

- Lavodan (H.) Le Prince d'Aurec, 8fr.

History and Biography.

- Lémann (J.) Napoléon I. et les Israélites, 8fr.
Pasquier (H.) Vie de St. Suphrane Pelletier, 3 vols. 8fr.
Stiegler (G.) Le Maréchal Oudinot, d'après les Souvenirs de la Maréchaie, 3fr. 50.

Geography.

- Levasseur (R.) Lexique géographique du Monde entier, Part 1, 1fr. 50.

Philology.

- Clapin (S.) Dictionnaire canadien-français, 2fr.
Job (L.) Le Présent et ses Dérivés dans la Conjugaison latine, 10fr.
Lecuyer (J. van): Enchiridium Dictionis Episcopi, Part 2, 8mo. 26.

Science.

- Hayem (G.) Leçons de Thérapeutique, 12fr.
Muesel (A.) Die Temperatur des Gehirns, 10m.
Panne (P.) Traité des Maladies des Yeux, 3 vols. 40fr.

General Literature.

- Dieulafoy (J.) Frère Pélagie, 3fr. 50.
Foley (C.) Cœur de Roi, 3fr. 50.
Gille (P.) La Bataille d'Azincourt, 3fr. 50.
Hatfield (A.) et Meunier (G.) Les Critiques Littéraires au XIXe Siècle, 3fr. 50.
Hendelbert (L.) Villaines Gens, 3fr. 50.
Lettres d'Hommes, 3fr. 50.
Pouville (E.) Bernadette de Lourdes, 3fr. 50.
Scheffer (R.) L'Idylle d'un Prince, 3fr. 50.
Schur (M.) La Vie mystique, 3fr. 50.

THE BOOKSELLERS' TRADE DINNER.

April 7, 1894.

In your issue of to-day you refer to the booksellers' trade dinner. You must permit me to take exception to this designation. It is the annual dinner of the Booksellers' Provident Institution—an institution which very few booksellers believe in—and is not associated in any way with the booksellers, whose annual dinner takes place in October of each year.

The dinner which is to be held on the 14th is arranged for by the publishers and publishers' clerks, who will not on the other 364 days of the year allow themselves to be styled booksellers. The dinner committee, numbering twenty-eight, contains only two booksellers' names, or rather booksellers' assistants, and I question if they have been present at any committee meeting. The booksellers who will be present at the dinner will prove to be a very small minority, and it is this which induces me to protest against the word "bookseller" being introduced, when it is so exclusively an affair of the Booksellers' Provident Institution.

A LONDON BOOKSELLER.

THE 'DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.'

THE following is the second part of a list of names which it is intended to insert under the letter B (Section I.) in the 'Dictionary of National Biography.' When one date is given, it is the date of death, unless otherwise stated. An asterisk is affixed to a date when it is only approximate. The editor of the 'Dictionary' will be obliged by any notice of omissions addressed to him at Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.'s, 15, Waterloo Place, S.W. He particularly requests that when new names are suggested, an indication may be given of the source from which they are derived.

- Batcliffe, Charles, titular Earl of Derwentwater, 1698-1748
Batcliffe, Sir Egremont, translator, 1576
Batcliffe, Henry, 4th Earl of Sussex, 1530*-1593
Batcliffe, James, 3rd Earl of Derwentwater, 1696-1716
Batcliffe, John, Lord Fitzwater, 1696
Batcliffe, John, President of Virginia, 1699
Batcliffe, John, bibliophile, 1776
Batcliffe, Sir Richard, adviser of Richard III., fl. 1480
Batcliffe, Robert, 1st Earl of Sussex, 1453-1511
Batcliffe, Robert, 5th Earl of Sussex, 1690*-1699
Batcliffe, Thomas, divine, fl. 1590
Batcliffe, Thomas, 3rd Earl of Sussex, 1536-1593
Bathbone, Hannah Mary, author of 'Lady Willoughby's Diary,' 1850
Bathbone, John, landscape painter, 1750-1807
Bathbone, William, merchant of Liverpool, 1809
Bathborne, Aaron, surveyor, fl. 1616
Battray, Sylvester, medical writer, fl. 1650
Battray, Thomas, D.D., Bishop of Dunkeld, 1743
Battree, James, wood carver, 1836-1855
Baulenghien, or Baphelegium, Francis, Hebrew scholar, 1536-1597
Bauleton, John, Bishop of Dunkeld, 1469
Baven, John S., water-colour painter, 1828-1877
Bavens, François Simon, engraver, 1774
Bavenscroft, Edward, dramatist, fl. 1690
Bavenscroft, Thomas, musician, 1592-1640
Bavenscroft, Richard de, judge, 1386
Bavis or Balc, Christian, Arabic scholar, 1677
Bavis, John, author, fl. 1635
Bavis, Thomas, Bishop of London, 1609
Bawdon, Christopher, "Mawdon Fund," 1780-1868
Bawdon, Sir George, 1st Baronet of Moira, soldier, 1694
Bawle, Henry Augustus, religious writer, 1690-1696
Bawle, Francis, colonist, 1697-1757
Bawle, Richard, Bishop of Trindad, 1814*-1860
Bawle, Samuel, engraver, fl. 1805
Bawle, John, divine, 1642-1660
Bawley, William, chaplain to Francis Bacon, 1589-1607
Bawley, Richard, independent minister, 1697-1757
Bawlin, Thomas, author, fl. 1630
Bawlin, Richard, Bishop of St. David's, 1536
Bawlin, Thomas, dramatist, 1610*-1670
Bawlinson, Christopher, Anglo-Saxon scholar, 1677-1733
Bawlinson, Sir Christopher, Chief Justice of Madras, fl. 1806
Bawlinson, George, scientific writer, 1826-1867
Bawlinson, James, painter, 1760-1848
Bawlinson, John, divine, 1631
Bawlinson, Richard, topographer, 1756
Bawlinson, Thomas, bibliophile, 1681-1726
Bawlinson, Sir Thomas, Lord Mayor of London, 1706-1769

Rawlinson, William, judge, 1640-1703
 Rawson, George, hymn-writer, 1807-1880
 Rawson, John, Viscount Clontarf, 1580
 Rawson, Richard, chaplain to Henry VIII., 1543
 Rawson, Sir William, oculist, 1783-1830
 Ray, Benjamin, miscellaneous author, 1760
 Ray, John, naturalist, 1628-1706
 Rayman, J., violin maker, s. 1640
 Raymond, Robert, Lord Raymond, judge, 1670-1733
 Raymond, Sir Thomas, judge, 1637-1683
 Raymond, William, Lieutenant-general, 1630
 Raynalde, Thomas, 'The Birth of Manynude,' s. 1646
 Rayner, John, legal writer, s. 1783
 Rayner, Lionel Benjamin, actor, b. 1778
 Rayner, Samuel, water-colourist, s. 1850
 Rea, John, florist, 1703-
 Reach, Angus B., journalist, 1822-1866
 Read, Charles Anderson, compiler, 1841-1878
 Read, Charles David, draughtsman, 1790-1861
 Read, John, surgeon, s. 1846
 Read, Katherine, painter, 1778
 Read, Nicholas, sculptor, 1787
 Read, Sir Richard, judge, s. 1850
 Read, Richard, engraver, 1745-1790
 Read, Samuel, artist, 1816-1863
 Read, Thomas, Royalist divine, 1600
 Read, Sir William, empiric, 1715
 Read, William, Irish verse-writer, 1796-1866
 Reade, Charles, novelist, 1814-1854
 Reade, John Edmund, author, 1870
 Reade, Joseph Bancroft, botanist, 1801-1870
 Reade, Robert, Bishop of Chichester, 1417
 Reade or Rede, William, Bishop of Chichester, 1265
 Reade, William, portrait painter, s. 1650
 Reade, William, antiquary, 1753-1853
 Reading, Burnet, engraver, s. 1770-1780
 Reading, John, divine, 1588-1667
 Reading, John, musician, 1784
 Reading, Robert de, chronicler, 1313
 Reading, William, librarian of St. College, b. 1704
 Ready, William James Durant, painter, 1823-1878
 Reay, Stephen, Professor of Arabic, 1752-1861
 Rebecca, Biagio, painter, 1735-1808
 Reichenau, Anthony, electrician, 1850-1888
 Record, Robert, mathematician, 1868
 Reclan, Peter, Jesuit, 1608-1661
 Redburn, queen of Egbert, s. 637
 Reddie, James, writer on law, 1775-1803
 Redding, Cyrus, journalist, 1785-1870
 Reddish, Samuel, actor, 1735-1785
 Rede, Leman Thomas Tertius, 'Head to the Stage,' 1790-1832
 Rede, Sir Robert, Chief Justice of Common Pleas, 1519
 Rede, William Leman, dramatist, 1809-1847
 Rederch, King of Strathelyde, s. 600
 Redevale, Robin of, popular leader, s. 1470
 Redfern, James F., sculptor, 1838-1876
 Redford, Sir Henry, Speaker of the House of Commons, s. 1403
 Redford, John, musician, 1491-1547
 Redford, Sebastian, Jesuit, 1701-1763
 Redgrave, Richard, painter, 1804-1866
 Redgrave, Samuel, 'Dictionary of Artists,' 1869-1876
 Redhouse, Sir James William, Oriental scholar, 1811-1889
 Redman, John, Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, 1490-1551
 Redman, John, poet and physician, 1708
 Redman, Richard, Bishop of Ely, 1506
 Redman, Robert, printer, 1517-1536
 Redman, William, Bishop of Norwich, 1603
 Redmayne, Sir Richard, Speaker of the House of Commons, s. 1431
 Redmond, Thomas, painter, 1745-1785
 Redpath, Peter, Canadian philanthropist, 1894
 Redwald, King of the East Angles, 627
 Reece, Richard, physician, 1831
 Reed, Andrew, Independent minister, 1787-1863
 Reed, Sir Charles, chairman of London School Board, 1810-1881
 Reed, Isaac, editor and author, 1713-1807
 Reed, Joseph, dramatist, 1728-1787
 Reed, Joseph Charles, painter, 1823-1877
 Reed, Robert, architect, 1774-1856
 Reed, Thomas, classical scholar, 1600-1650
 Reed, Sir Thomas, general, 1796-1863
 Reed, William, writer on falconry, s. 1258
 Rees, Abraham, encyclopedist, 1743-1825
 Rees, Charlotte, Quakeress, 1783-1836
 Rees, George, physician, 1716-1846
 Rees, George Owen, physician, 1809
 Rees, Owen, publisher, 1770-1837
 Rees, Rice, 'Welsh Saints,' 1804-1839
 Rees, Thomas, divine, 1777-1864
 Rees, William, Congregationalist minister, b. 1803
 Rees, William Jenkins, prebendary of Brecknock, 1773-1865

(To be continued.)

COUNT FERSEN.

MRS. CASHEL HOEY writes:—

"The word used by Queen Marie Antoinette in her letter to Count Fersen is empreinte. I took this to indicate that the writer was not alluding to a seal (cachet), but to the article which was then and is now known as a wafer-stamp."

If Mrs. Hoey meant a wafer-stamp, why did she not use that term? I though we confess that it is a new one to us, and that we have failed to find it either in Sheridan's Dictionary of 1790, or in more modern books of that description.

RARE EDITIONS.

Crouch End, N., April 3, 1894.

THIS controversy has now assumed a definite form, and I propose to conclude my reply to

Mr. Chambers's criticisms. It will be remembered that this gentleman began by complaining about prices, making allegations, and asking questions. I refuted the former, and answered the latter, giving references, and not merely making statements unsupported by proof. But Mr. Chambers would rather not see, preferring, as he says, to agree to differ. I am glad that he has the grace to agree with me in anything. Let me now proceed to investigate a few more of his assertions. "At p. 3," he says, "the author refers to a memoir of Ainsworth by Leman Blanchard, printed in the 1857 edition of 'Rookwood.'" What I said is not denied, but I am told that I ought preferentially to have quoted the Mirror, in which Leman Blanchard's memoir had, so it is said, previously appeared. Why should I? We are dealing with 'Rookwood' and Ainsworth. Mr. Chambers is slightly illogical here. He next corrects me by asserting that the first 8vo. edition (1848) of 'The Miser's Daughter' has no portrait. I said that it has a portrait of the author by Finden, and I still believe that to be so. I have never seen a copy without. The Kilmarnock edition (1786) of Burns is a small book, technically in 12mo., a size not used now except on very rare occasions, but common enough in 1786, and for long afterwards. New books of this size, or near it, are sometimes quoted as foolscap 8vo. We are speaking of an old one. 'Is She his Wife?' by Charles Dickens, was published by James R. Osgood & Co., of Boston, not of New York as I stated. I am wrong and Mr. Chambers right here; but what does it matter? And now comes a remark which, like many others made to support this case, is really most extraordinary. He says: "At p. 91 the threepenny numbers and sixpenny parts of 'Master Humphrey's Clock' are said both to have had green covers." Here is what I say at p. 91, word for word, with punctuation accurate: "In the first instance the work was published in 88 weekly numbers (containing six addresses) at 3d. each, demy 8vo., but later on in 20 monthly parts at 1s. (or in a few cases 1s. 3d.) each, in the familiar green covers." Let any one, friend of Mr. Chambers or not, support him in a criticism like his if he can. I was asked why I did not include Cruikshank and Leech in my list. I gave the title of my book and added that I would have done so had I thought they were "popular modern authors." The sarcasm was lost, for I am gravely told in rejoinder, "They were not authors." This is a charming bit of special pleading, but not to the merits. The object is, of course, to fix on me a definite statement that although these artists were not popular modern authors, yet they were authors of a kind; but this is too transparent—it is a mere trick spoiled in the playing. Again, "Mr. Slater not being a collector, nor, so far as I know, a dealer, and probably seldom seeing a bookseller's catalogue" (Ohe! jam satia), "how can he possibly be an authority upon works which are specially interesting to collectors?" The competency of collectors to pose as judges depends upon their capabilities and experience; of dealers partly on their willingness to subordinate their pecuniary interests to the public good. A bookseller's catalogue is a summary compiled for his own good, and if a dealer had written a book like mine, people would have said that it was a catalogue, and not an impartial record. This cannot be said of my work, for I am unprejudiced, and moreover I have nothing I would sell, except, perhaps, to Mr. Chambers, for mere flesh and blood could not resist such a temptation as that. That gentleman will please to understand that, with the one exception above admitted, I deny the accuracy of the whole of the statements contained in his letter of March 26th, together with every one of his inferences.

In conclusion, let me ask Mr. Chambers a few pertinent questions. Does your "Catalogue of some of the Rarer Books, also Manuscripts and Autograph Letters in the Collection of C. E. S. Chambers.....Edinburgh, 1891," give any evidence, strong or weak, primary or secondary, that you are capable, even in the narrow limits at your disposal, of passing judgment upon any one? Have you a single copy of Burns's works, any edition, which you have thought it worth while to catalogue, or more than seven entries devoted to Ainsworth, all told, or out of the thirty-three authors I notice, have you any personal knowledge, and that only of a very few of their works, of more than five? Do you really believe that Charles Dickens wrote 'Sketches of Young Ladies,' as on p. 7 you say he did, or that the first edition of Lever's 'St. Patrick's Eve' appeared in 1846, or that "Lewis" is the proper way to spell the name of the first husband of "George Eliot," as you spell it, not once, but twice? All these and many other inaccuracies are doubtless mere slips of the pen, and, indeed, I would not insult your knowledge and experience by suggesting that you know no better; but had I made such slips I am afraid you would have described them as worse than blunders.

It is better, I think, to leave criticism to those whose business it is to criticize. No author, whatever the facts, will ever argue with a professional critic, if he be wise. He should, and as a rule does, take his little corrective dose with fortitude to begin with, and then when he has had experience he will swallow others like it with much composure. Had Mr. Chambers been a professional critic I should not have replied to him, even if I had read his remarks—for I seldom read criticisms on my own books—but since he is not I have taken the opportunity to defend myself. And this, so far as I am concerned, must end the matter, for the time spent in examining details and statements of reputed fact has already been much greater than I could have anticipated.

J. H. SLATER.

Shaftesbury Avenue, W., March 30, 1894.

I FEAR Mr. Slater must employ a much larger "staff" than the one he leans on to support his "lame and impotent conclusion" that the collecting of first editions is a "bad investment from any point of view."

The veriest tyro knows better, and the instructed collector will only laugh at such puerilities. Of first editions he says, "they are pleasant to look at and instructive to read, but," he adds, "I submit that when bought and sold like slaves they become mere blocks [is this a misprint for blocks, or does he mean block-books?], useless to the owner, and a bad investment from any point of view." Fancy the Rev. T. F. Dibdin indulging in such an elegant flight of metaphor! What it means I am at a loss to understand, unless it is intended as a bull—a bibliographical bull—against the wickedness and folly of collecting first editions. If so, it is formulated in vain. Book-lovers will go on collecting Mazarine Bibles and Columbus Letters, quarto Shakspereans and duodecimo Waltons, original 'Robinson Crusoes' and 'Vicar of Wakefields,' 'Pickwick' and 'Vanity Fair,' Leeches and Cruikshanks, and a thousand and one other authors and artists (ancient and modern), in spite of all this slating and slaughtering, and the prices will go on rising in the future as they have in the past. The time even will arrive when Mr. Slater's "average" prices for "average" copies will have to undergo revision, and on an increased scale. But collectors do not, as a rule, care for "average" copies, and it is evident that what suits Mr. Slater does not suit Mr. Chambers, though Mr. Chambers would doubtless be very glad to purchase his first editions at Mr. Slater's prices. Condition, the collector's watchword, forms a more important factor in appraising values than Mr. Slater is probably willing to admit, and a collation of

The list of elements on p. 110 needs revision and rearrangement; it has a very dissipated appearance now, the arrangement being partly alphabetical and partly incomprehensible; the valencies and atomic weights in some cases need correction. The woodcuts are numerous and very rough, but they are correct, and, we must acknowledge, give often a better idea of the apparatus used than more pretentious illustrations sometimes achieve. To the English mechanic the book will be a very useful introduction to chemistry, and for such it is intended rather than for the more exact student of science.

The Essentials of Chemical Physiology for the Use of Students. By W. D. Halliburton, M.D., F.R.S. (Longmans & Co.)—This small book consists of twenty-six lessons in practical laboratory work, each lesson being followed by a short résumé of our present knowledge of the substances studied in the lesson. The work is judiciously illustrated, and contains a full account of the apparatus and reagents required. The first twelve lessons are elementary, and should be carried out by every medical student; the remaining fourteen are intended for more advanced students. In some cases we think matter is introduced for which the student might preferably be referred to the larger text-books, as, for instance, the discussion as to where urea is formed. With this exception we cordially commend these lessons as the outcome of the author's somewhat considerable experience as a teacher and examiner, and we trust that the appearance of the book is a sign that increasing attention is being given to this most important branch of practical work.

Inorganic Chemistry for Beginners. By Sir Henry Roscoe, F.R.S., and Joseph Lunt, B.Sc. (Vict.). (Macmillan & Co.)—Among the piles of text-books and introductions to elementary inorganic chemistry it is refreshing to come upon something rather out of the ordinary rut, and this we have in the present little book. In the selection and arrangement of experiments Sir Henry Roscoe has followed pretty closely the outline of experiments suitable for illustrating elementary instruction in chemistry prepared, some years ago, by himself and Dr. W. J. Russell. The first lesson, on solids, liquids, and gases, begins with some experiments with carbonic anhydride, hydrogen, and oxygen, in order to illustrate that different colourless, transparent gases have different physical and chemical characters. But the beginner is not told how to make these gases, nor even their names until the end of the lesson; he must want a guide to help him here. Lessons on air and water follow, and then the enunciation and illustration of elementary principles and laws, and the physical properties of gases. The latter part of the book deals with some of the non-metallic elements and their more important compounds: hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen, chlorine, sulphur, and carbon are the elements selected. The names of the authors are sufficient guarantee of the accuracy and the careful selection of the matter of the book, and as a guide to teachers of elementary chemistry or for use with the assistance of a teacher it is most highly to be commended, and should prove very useful and be widely used. The "atomic weights are given to one place of decimals only, as being sufficiently accurate for use in elementary work." Hydrogen is taken as unity, and oxygen is given as 15.9, carbon as 11.9, nitrogen as 13.9, and so on; and these atomic weights are used in the various calculations given in the book. We altogether fail to see the advantage of these numbers over the nearest whole numbers in an elementary book, or in any other book. Surely 15.9 is no nearer to, but rather further from, the true atomic weight (15.96) of oxygen than 16. And so in other cases. The fact that the atomic weights are probably not simple multiples of the atomic weight of hydrogen might have been called attention to without introducing larger errors than those brought about by this common assumption. The equation illustrating the generation of chlorine from common salt, manganese dioxide, and strong sulphuric acid differs from that commonly given in text-books, but is probably nearer the truth. We heartily commend the book as an introduction to the elementary principles of chemistry.

Chemical Problems, with Solutions. By R. L. Taylor, F.I.C., and S. Parrish. (Sampson Low & Co.)—This is really a key to the problems in Taylor's 'The Student's Chemistry' and 'Chemistry for Beginners.' But this little book may be used independently, as the way of working the problems is shown with sufficient detail to enable students to follow the processes. The problems are well selected, and, as far as we have been able to test them, accurately worked out.

A Short Manual of Inorganic Chemistry. By A. Dupré, Ph.D., F.R.S., and H. Wilson Hake, Ph.D., F.C.S. Second Edition, Revised. (Griffin & Co.)—The first edition of this textbook by the teachers of chemistry at the Westminster Hospital Medical School appeared about seven years ago, and notwithstanding the vast multiplicity of text-books on this subject, we are glad to see that in due course a new edition of this one has been called for. Owing largely to the systematic arrangement of the physical and chemical properties of the bodies described and to the lucid style of the authors, they have contrived to pack a very large amount of information into a handy volume. Generally the information imparted has been brought up to date, but even in a short manual of to-day we should like some notice taken of the important compounds azoimide and nickel-carbonyl. We heartily wish that this manual may still further supplant others of less merit, and these are numerous.

THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON.

THE Clarendon Press announce the 'Mathematical Papers of the late Henry J. S. Smith, Savilian Professor of Geometry in the University of Oxford,' with portrait and memoir, 2 vols.—'A Manual of Crystallography,' by Mr. M. H. N. Story-Maskelyne,—Part II. of 'Index Kewensis,'—'A Monograph on the Oligochaeta,' by Mr. F. E. Beddard,—Adler's 'Alternating Generations: a Biological Study of Oakgalls and Gallflies,' translated by Mr. C. R. Stratton,—'The Measurement of Electrical Resistance,' by Mr. W. E. Price,—and 'Practical Work in General Physics,' by Mr. W. G. Woodcombe.

Mr. Lewis will issue in his "Practical Series" a volume on 'Diseases of the Nose and Throat,' by Dr. P. de Havilland Hall; and a new edition of Dr. Norman Kerr's treatise 'On Inebriety.'

Messrs. George Philip & Son have the following works in preparation: 'A Handbook for Beginners in the Study of Natural History,' a series of articles by well-known writers, with an introduction by Sir M. E. Grant Duff, edited by the Lady I. Margesson,—'A Handy Atlas of the Moon for Students,' consisting of a large-scale map in four sections accompanied by descriptive letterpress, by Mr. T. G. Elger,—'Korea and the Sacred White Mountain,' being a brief account of a journey in Korea in 1891 by Capt. A. E. J. Cavendish, with an account of an ascent of the White Mountain by Capt. H. E. Gould Adams, R.A.,—'Philips' Systematic Atlas, Physical and Political,' by E. G. Ravenstein, forming the first volume of 'Philips' Geographical Series,'—'The Tourist's Pocket-Book,' by Mr. G. F. Chambers, revised and enlarged edition,—'Philips' Series of Varied Occupations for the Kindergarten and Lower Standards,'—new editions of the 'Teacher's Handbook of Sloyd,' by Mr. Otto Salomon, and of 'The Theory of Educational Sloyd,'—'The Eva Rodhe Model Series in Woodwork': 'A Manual in Primary Sloyd,'—and 'Lessons in Woodwork for Evening Classes.'

SOCIETIES.

GEOGRAPHICAL.—April 9.—Mr. C. B. Markham, President, in the chair.—The following gentlemen were elected Fellows: Lord Cottesloe, Sir W. E. De Souza, Capt. J. S. Cowan, Capt. T. F. D. Benny-Tailleur, Messrs. H. E. Allhuson, R. H. Anderson, J. Kinson, A. Larcom, R. W. Philpott, and F. C. Selous.—The paper read was 'A Journey across Central Asia,' by Mr. St. G. R. Littledale.

LINNEAN.—April 8.—Mr. F. Crisp, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. L. Greening was admitted, and Messrs. W. C. Grubb, G. D. Haviland, J. Smith, and J. F. Wilkinson were elected Fellows.—Sir J. Hooker exhibited a portrait in oils of Sir S. Benthham, a colonel in the service of the Empress of Russia, painted at St. Petersburg in 1784. He was father of G. Benthham, the distinguished botanist and former president of this society, 1891-74 (Proc. Linn. Soc. 1890, pp. 90-104).—Dr. B. Shillitoe exhibited some specimens of a primrose having abnormal leaf-like bracts immediately below the true calyx, and found growing with ordinary flowers of the same species.—An exhibition of some trap-door spiders and nests, by Mr. F. Enock, was deferred to a subsequent meeting.—Mr. R. H. Burne read a paper 'On the Aortic-Arch System of Saccobranchia,' in which he elucidated the method by which respiration is effected in certain fishes which in tropical countries, but more especially in India, have acquired the power of living for a longer or shorter time out of water. Referring particularly to a paper by the late Surgeon-Major F. Day 'On Amphibious and Migratory Fishes of Asia' (Journ. Linn. Soc. Zool., vol. xiii, p. 138), he detailed the results of some recent investigations he had made, which were characterized by Prof. Huxley as original and valuable.—The Secretary read a paper by Mr. H. N. Ridley 'On the Orchidæ and Apostasiæ of the Malay Peninsula,' from the Kedah state (long. 99° 30' to 104° 30', lat. 7° N.) to Singapore, including the islands adjacent to the west coast and those on the east coast of Johore, with the addition of a few species from Southern Siam, on the borders of the Malay peninsula, the entire area comprising about 50,000 square miles.—Mr. C. B. Clarke, who criticized the paper, commented upon the important additions made to the existing knowledge of the Orchidæ of this region, of which so large a portion was even yet botanically unknown.

ZOOLOGICAL.—April 8.—Sir W. H. Flower, President, in the chair.—The Secretary read a report on the additions to the menagerie during March.—Dr. Günther exhibited and made remarks on some specimens of the American lepidosiren (Lepidosiren paradoxa) from the Upper Rio Paraguay, collected by Dr. Böhl.—Capt. H. O. C. Swayne gave a description of the physical features of Somaliland, and an account of the expeditions he had made into the interior of that country during the past nine years, pointing out the localities in which the larger mammals were usually met with. The paper was illustrated by the exhibition of a large series of well-mounted heads of the various species of antelopes and other animals of Somaliland.—Mr. B. T. Coryndon gave an account of his pursuit of the white or Burchell's rhinoceros (Rhinoceros simus) in Mashonaland, and of the way he had obtained the specimens which would shortly be placed in the British Museum, the Tring Museum, and the Cambridge University Museum.—Papers were read: by Mr. O. Thomas, on the dwarf antelopes of the genus Madoqua, in which three species from Somaliland were described as new, and named M. swainsoni, M. philippi, and M. guentheri; and a revised classification of the six known species of this genus of antelopes was added,—and from Miss E. M. Sharpe, on the butterflies collected by Capt. J. W. Pringle while on the march through British East Africa from Teita to Uganda. A new Papilio was proposed to be called P. pringlei, and a new genus and species of Satyridæ was named Raphiceropsis pringlei. Altogether examples of 134 species were obtained.

SOCIETY OF ARTS.—April 9.—Mr. F. Cobb in the chair.—Capt. Abney delivered the second lecture of his course of Cantor Lectures 'On Photometry.'

April 10.—Sir G. Birdwood in the chair.—A paper 'On the Evolution of Decorative Art' was read before the Applied Art Section by Mr. Henry Balfour.—A discussion followed, in which Messrs. H. Stannus, A. Cole, and E. P. Spiers, and the Chairman took part.

April 11.—Mr. J. N. Finner in the chair.—A paper 'On London Coal Gas and its Enrichment' was read by Prof. V. Lewis.

ARISTOTELIAN.—April 5.—Mr. S. H. Hodgson, President, in the chair.—Mr. A. F. Shand read a paper on 'Attention.' The commonly accepted position that attention tends universally to increase the intensity, clearness, or stability of the sensation or representation attended to, was called in question, and it was contended that an examination of well-known cases of psychological experiment shows that this result is due not to attention, but to a process combined with it in ordinary cases, but separable from it. It was contended in the second place that though we cannot say that attention tends to increase the clearness and intensity of the sensation attended to, yet we can affirm universally that it makes us more clearly and intensely aware of that sensation. In this clearer awareness of a sensation that possibly grows more obscure while we attend to it consists attention. And, thirdly, it was contended that the quality of constituents in which attention consists, viz., attending and the object attended to, are equally directly felt and experienced, although the first is often not recognized or identified.—The paper was followed by a discussion.

HELLENIC.—April 9.—Prof. L. Campbell, V.P., in the chair.—Miss Harrison read a summary of the views in regard to the temples on the Acropolis at Athens recently put forward by Prof. Furtwängler in his great work on the 'Masterpieces of Greek Sculpture.'—In the discussion which this summary was intended to initiate, Mr. A. H. Smith, while admitting that he had read only certain parts of the book in question, expressed the view that it was a reductio ad absurdum of modern archaeological method. In his opinion, which he illustrated by quotations, the author had attempted to build a huge superstructure of theory upon a very slender basis of fact. It seemed time to protest against this method of dealing with archaeological problems, and to remember that many of them were necessarily insoluble until further facts came to light.—Miss Sellers, who followed, protested in her turn against this offhand condemnation of a work which represented years of research, and especially against judging it, as Mr. Smith had largely done, from a single chapter, that on Euphranor, which was admittedly conjectural, whereas the chapters on Phidias, Scopas, and Praxiteles dealt with facts generally accepted. In her view "method" meant merely the arrangement of material, and what seemed new and even revolutionary in Prof. Furtwängler's work was due in great measure to the gradual accumulation and recognition of new material. German archaeologists had opportunities for discovering and comparing this material which were as yet denied to English archaeologists, who were, therefore, quite taken aback by the brilliant theories put forward in such a book as the one under discussion. Miss Sellers further showed that some of the views put forward by Prof. Furtwängler, notably in regard to the archaic tendencies displayed by artists of the fifth century B.C., were not so new and fanciful as Mr. Smith seemed to suppose, but merely carried a step further suggestions long ago thrown out by Hauser and other well-known scholars.—Mr. Penrose made some remarks on the architectural problems involved, and Miss Harrison concluded the discussion by replying in detail to some of Mr. A. H. Smith's criticisms.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

- Mon. Victoria Institute, 44.—'The Religion of the Assyrians and Babylonians,' Mr. T. G. F. Pearson.
 — Surrey Institution, 4.—Adjourned Discussion on 'The Sating of Ground Values.'
 — Aristotelian, 4.—'Prof. V. H. Rieu's View of the Bible,' Mr. J. A. Mackenzie.
 — Society of Arts, 4.—'Pneumatics,' Lecture III, Capt. W. de W. Abney (Public Lecture).
 — Bibliographical, 4.—'The Augsburg Printers of the Fifteenth Century,' Mr. J. B. Aldrich.
Tues. Royal Institution, 3.—'Electric Illumination,' Prof. J. A. Fleming.
 — Statistical, 19.—'Conditions and Prospects of Popular Education in India,' Mr. J. A. Raine.
 — Society of Arts, 4.—'Tasmania and the forthcoming Robert International Exhibition, 1894-5,' Mr. J. F. B. Riehn.
 — Civil Engineers, 4.—'The Training of Rivers,' Mr. L. F. Vernon-Harcourt.
 — Entomology, 4.—'Honey and Muscles of the Mammalian Hand and Feet,' Prof. G. von Hildebrand.
 — Zoology, 4.—'Two New Species of the Family Terebratulidae from the Madras Museum,' Dr. G. M. Foster.
 — 'Two New Genera, comprising Three New Species of Bivalves from Western Tropical Africa,' Mr. F. R. Scholard.
Wed. Technical Service Institution, 3.—'Steam Transport on Roads,' Lect. 4th, J. L. R. Penrose.
 — Society of Arts, 4.—'Design applied to Carpets,' Mr. A. Miller.
 — Meteorological, 4.—'Some Peculiarities of the Upper Air,' Mr. R. Inwards.
 — Fala Lore, 4.—'The Western Folk of Ireland and their Lore,' Prof. A. C. Haddon.
 — 'Folk-lore Gleanings from an Lestrin,' Mr. J. L. Gwynne.
 — Microscopical, 4.—'An Account of the Development of the Origin of a Fossil Lake in New Jersey and the Identification of it by the Inclusions found in the Deposits,' Dr. A. M. Edwards.
Thurs. British Archaeological Association, 4.—'Excavations at Villa Crucis Abbey, near St. Owen,' Mr. C. Smith.
 — Linnaean, 4.—'Monograph of the Ammocarididae,' Prof. Graf von Sclater.
 — Society of Arts, 4.—'Tasmania and the forthcoming Robert International Exhibition, 1894-5,' Mr. G. C. Levy.
 — Antiquarian, 4.

Thurs. Historical, 4.—'Bardonia under Edward I.,' Prof. V. F. Tuck.
 — Civil Engineers, 4.—'The Sinking by Compressed Air of the Cylinder Foundations of the Tower Viaduct,' Mr. H. V. White.
 — Astronomical, 4.—'Early British Science,' Dr. J. G. Gurney.
 — Royal Institution, 3.—'Literature and Journalism,' Mr. H. D. Todd.

Science Gossip.

THE friends and former colleagues of Mr. R. Etheridge, F.R.S., who retires from work at the British Museum in accordance with the recent order in Council which fixes an age-limit, will entertain him to dinner at the Imperial Institute on Thursday, the 26th inst. Sir William Flower is to take the chair, and among those who intend to be present are Sir A. Geikie, Prof. Ray Lankester, and Dr. Woodward.

MR. ELLIOT STOCK announces a 'Monograph on the Stalactites and Stalagmites of Cleaves Cove,' in Ayrshire, by Mr. John Smith, Vice-President of the Glasgow Geological Society. The volume will be illustrated.

MR. D. F. STEVENS is going to issue a limited edition of 'Christopher Columbus, his own Book of Privileges,' a photographic facsimile of the compilation made by Columbus himself in 1502 of the privileges, &c., granted to him in relation to his four voyages of discovery in the western hemisphere, now in the Paris Foreign Office. Mr. Stevens has intercalated his facsimile with letterpress transliteration of the old Spanish and translation into English, so that all facing pages, whatever their quantity of matter, have exactly the corresponding MS., Spanish transliteration, and English translation. An introduction is supplied by Mr. Henry Harrisse.

M. JABLOCHKOFF, the celebrated Russian electrician, is dead; and so is Dr. Haeussel, the well-known analyst.

THE elements of the orbit of the comet (α, 1894) which was discovered by Mr. Denning on the 26th ult. have been determined by M. Schulhof, who finds that the perihelion passage took place so long ago as February 13th, at the distance from the sun of 1.215 in terms of the earth's mean distance. The brightness at the time of discovery did not exceed that of a star of the eleventh magnitude, and is now less than half as great as it was then, so that it will be very difficult to see the comet at all during the moonlight nights of next week. It is moving in a south-easterly direction, through the constellation Leo. M. Schulhof considers it probable that the comet is periodic, and also remarks that the elements of its orbit present a considerable resemblance to those of the comets of 1231 and 1746, which were, however, very imperfectly determined, the former entirely from Chinese observations, whilst the comet of 1746 appears to have been observed (or rather its course through the stars described) only by Kindermann of Dresden.

FINE ARTS

ARCHITECTURAL LITERATURE.

The Poetry of Architecture; or, the Architecture of the Nations of Europe considered in its Association with Natural Scenery and National Character. By John Ruskin. With Illustrations by the Author. (George Allen.)—This is a series of essays written by Mr. Ruskin in 1837, when he was a lad of eighteen, and printed in a long-forgotten magazine. We cannot help thinking that Mr. Ruskin's friends would have done better to leave them in that obscurity, instead of bringing them forth into light, set out with a glory of paper, print, and illustration very different from what originally belonged to them. When a man has made himself a great name in literature we like to know and judge of him in his maturity, and it is hateful to be called upon to gaze at him in the vulgar character of the infant phenomenon.

The book has an interest, without doubt. In it we may find a clear forecast of the real Ruskin, both in his strength and his weakness. There are passages which he might have written in the plenitude of his power, and there are others which he would hardly then have cared to hear quoted as his. To review the book seriously now would be an anachronism; but we quote one passage which recalls a recent controversy between the architects and the Institute which calls itself by their name:—

"We do not think there is any truth in the aphorism, now so frequently advanced in England, that the adaptation of shelter to the corporal comfort of the human race is the original and true end of the art of architecture, properly so called; for, were such the case, he would be the most distinguished architect who was best acquainted with the properties of cement, with the nature of stone, and the various durability of wood. That such knowledge is necessary to the perfect architect we do not deny; but it is no more the end and purpose of his application than a knowledge of the alphabet is the object of the refined scholar or of rhythm of the inspired poet."

The reproductions of Mr. Ruskin's drawings which are used to illustrate the book are the one feature of it which may without reserve be praised. We should have liked them even better if they had been published by themselves.

Leadwork, Old and Ornamental, and for the most part English. By W. R. Lethaby. With Illustrations. (Macmillan & Co.)—This nicely got-up little book seems to be intended as a plea for the revival of the use of lead as a material for the artist. But it takes the form of a rather sketchy account of various works which have been done in lead from the days of the Roman occupation of Britain to about a hundred years ago. Mr. Lethaby sees great possibilities in lead; but he also sees that before they can be reached much will have to be done in the cultivation of the worker. For it is not in the highest branches of art, but in its application to common things, that lead may become a fit medium. It has been used for statuary, but only on account of its comparative cheapness. The introduction of plaster castings drove it out of the field, which it is scarcely likely to recover on its own merit. So, too, for applied architectural ornament there are other materials more convenient than lead, which was sometimes used in the past. The architectural purist may condemn them, but it is difficult to see why an ornament cast in lead and applied to a wood panel is legitimate, and the same ornament cast in stucco or papier maché is to be condemned. They may both be wrong, but if one is lawful the other is, and the lead will not be chosen. But there are things for which lead is the best material, and if Mr. Lethaby's teaching can put art into them, he will have done well. But first he will have to fight to save the plumber himself from extinction. In more than nine cases out of ten the man who is called a plumber to-day is only a fitter, who sets in place things which are selected by numbers from catalogues, and often does not know enough about them to do it right. Even the casting of web lead for roofs, which every village plumber could do fifty years since, would now be a lost art but for the traditions of a few large churches where there are regular staffs of workmen, and the efforts of a very few architects who will have cast lead and give themselves a good deal of trouble to get it. Mr. Lethaby's remedy is "for men with a sense of architectural fitness and a feeling for design to take up the actual workmanship and practise it themselves," which may be all very well for the beginning; but before a real and lasting good can be done the reform must pass out of the amateur stage and leave a large and very dense lump. Looked at as a history of the use of lead, the book fails through the attempt to cover too wide an area and the unevenness of the treatment. A few subjects are fully discussed, whilst others as worthy of notice are barely mentioned. The seeming caprice of the selection may be only accidental, and come of the author having used such material as chanced to be in his hands at the time of writing. For there are signs of haste in the composition; the English is sometimes faulty, and we note one or two mistakes which suggest hurry—for example, the well-known twelfth century plan of the abbey of Christchurch, Canterbury, is described as showing a system "for collecting the water from the roofs," whereas it shows the laying on of water collected from springs in the fields some distance away; and on p. 112 we are told that touchstone means alabaster. The cross said to have been found in the grave of King Arthur at Glastonbury is called an absolution cross, which it was not, and no real absolution cross is mentioned, though a considerable number of these curious objects exist. Lenden fonts are treated of at some length, and a list of English examples is given, which is that compiled by Mr. André, and printed in the 'Sumner Archaeological Collections' in 1882, with one omission and one addition. The omission is that at Great Plumstead, in Norfolk, which unfortunately no longer exists, it having been destroyed when the church was burnt down two years ago. The addition is said to be in Northamptonshire, at a place called Walsford on p. 62, and Wansford on p. 59. We suspect that this is an error. Walsford we never heard of; at Wansford there is a remarkable early font, but it is of stone. But a book like this must not be judged by its inaccuracies. Mr. Lethaby thinks for himself, and has a quaint way of putting his thoughts into words; and his sketches, of which a goodly number decorate the book, are generally excellent.

AN UNDESCRIBED SILHOUETTE PORTRAIT OF THOMAS GRAY, THE POET.

Scottish National Portrait Gallery, Edinburgh.

IN connexion with the valuable article by Mr. Scharf on 'A Newly Discovered Portrait of Thomas Gray,' published in the Athenæum on February 24th, it may interest some of your readers to know that an authentic, and, so far as I am aware, hitherto undescribed silhouette portrait of the poet is preserved in the library of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland, Edinburgh.

It forms part of a series of about one hundred and thirty silhouette portraits, executed, for the most part at Windsor, in the latter part of the eighteenth century by Miss Lucy Lind. This lady was one of the daughters of Dr. James Lind (sometimes confused with another Scottish physician of the name, born 1716, died 1794, who was author of a valuable 'Treatise on Scurvy'), who was born in 1736, accompanied Banks on his voyage to Iceland in 1772, and read various scientific papers before the Royal Society, of which he became a fellow in 1777. About that date he settled in Windsor, and it is usually asserted that he became physician to the royal household, though his granddaughter denies this, and states that he was only a friend of the king's, and that "Queen Charlotte used to delight in hearing him read, and relate his travels." He was a friend of the young Shelley, who said "he loved me, and I shall never forget our long talks, when he breathed the spirit of the kindest tolerance and the purest wisdom"; and he was the original of the old hermit in 'Læon and Cythna,' and of Zonaras in the unfinished 'Prince Athanasus.' He died in 1812. His daughter Lucy became a Mrs. Sherwill, whose son, Lieut.-Col. Walter Stanhope Sherwill, presented the series of silhouettes to the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland on May 14th, 1877.

The portrait of Gray is the only silhouette in the series that shows a full-length figure. It is 4½ in. in height and turned to our right, and it represents the poet in his later years, his upper lip having fallen in through the loss of teeth, and his lower lip protruding; and there is a slight suggestion of loose, withered skin below the chin. The "singularly bird-like" expression of face, which Mr. Scharf notes as characteristic of the portrait of Gray engraved by Basire in the 1757 quarto edition of his 'Poems,' appears, very definitely, in this silhouette. The nose is particularly sharp and clear-cut in its curve, and the straight forehead rises vertically from above the nose, and then suddenly curves back round the top of the temples. A wig, with the thin "rope-like queue" that appears in others of his portraits, is worn. The slim, rather narrow-chested figure is seated well back in a chair, the head being held erect. Three buttons appear prominently in front at the breast of the coat, the long skirts of which fall down over the side of the chair. Knee-breeches and shoes complete the costume so far as the silhouette shows it. The right leg is crossed over the other knee, the toes of its foot just touching the ground, and on the knees rest two books, which are represented by a separate piece of black paper. The words "Gray the Poet" are written in pencil across the dark surface of the silhouette.

The face and the pose of the head convey the impression of keen alertness, and the whole work has the air of being a faithful and characteristic likeness, so far as the restricted method of the silhouette permits.

I have not seen the two silhouettes of Gray preserved at Pembroke College, Cambridge, but I presume that these show only the head and bust; so probably the Lind silhouette may claim the distinction of being the only authentic rendering in full length of the poet, with the exceptions of the first and fourth of the designs by Richard Bentley engraved in the 1753 and 1776 editions of Gray's 'Six Poems'—works in which the artist evidently intended to include representations of the form and features of the poet.

Another of the silhouettes is titled 'Mr. Mason'; but this can hardly represent the Rev. William Mason, the friend and biographer of Gray, for it shows no recognizable likeness to the front-face portrait of the friend and biographer of Gray, engraved by Doughty and by Watson after Reynolds; and it appears to portray a man older than Mason was at the time when Miss Lind was executing her series.

Among the remaining other silhouettes in this curious and interesting series are bust-portraits of George III.; Queen Charlotte; the Princess Amelia; Sir Isaac Hurd, Garter; Mr. and Mrs. Delany; Dr. Solander; Thomas Paine; David Hume, the historian; Capt. Grose, the antiquary; Benjamin West, P.R.S.A.; Dr. James Hutton, the geologist; Paul Sandby, the water-colour painter, and other persons of distinction; but, unfortunately, about one-third of the subjects are untitled. They are all distinguished by variety and character, and, judging from those which I have compared with other authentic portraits of the persons portrayed, are faithful and trustworthy likenesses.

From a communication from the artist's daughter, I learn that the silhouettes "were all cut out with scissors without any other instrument," and were "all done from the life." Several of the subjects in the collection, however, being in Indian ink upon white paper, are evidently copies from the original "shades" cut out from life; others are cut out in white paper; but the portrait of Gray is one of the original silhouettes, cut out, presumably directly from life, in black paper.

J. M. GRAY, F.S.A.Scot.

* * Mr. Gray wrote this letter in the middle of last month, just before his fatal illness seized him, and he did not live to correct the proof.

120, High Street, Portsmouth.

PERHAPS it might be interesting to Mr. G. Scharf to know that the engraving of the portrait of Gray which he saw in the Print Room of the British Museum was used to decorate the title-page of Gray's poems in 12mo., published about 1800-1802. I have the book now before me, with the oval portrait after Wilson, but the inscription below it differs from that given by Mr. Scharf. It runs thus: "Printed and sold by G. Nicholson, Poughnill near Ludlow. Sold also in London, by H. D. Symonds, Pater-noster-row; Champante & Whitrow, Aldgate; R. Bickerstaff, Strand; T. Conder, Bucklers-bury; Lackington, Allen & Co., Finsbury Square, and all other Booksellers." No date. Above the portrait is inscribed "Poems by Thomas Gray, L.L.B., with the Author's Life." The life extends to pp. xxix, and thus concludes: "Besides the 'Long Story,' the pieces omitted in this Selection, are, 'The Fatal Sisters,' and 'The Descent of Oden' [sic], from the Norse tongue; the first is too trifling, and the latter abound with too much of gross fable and superstition, to be admitted into a design of retaining pieces of unexceptionable excellence only." G. Nicholson, of Poughnill near Ludlow, seems to have published a good many books in 12mo. I have a collection of about sixty separate works issued by him, bound in six thick volumes, entitled "The Literary Miscellany." Most of them are undated, but a few have dates, the earliest 1800, and the latest 1802. Among these publications are the poems of Milton, Prior, Shenstone, Gray, Lyttelton, Pope, Gay, Armstrong, Goldsmith, Soame Jenyns, and others, to each of which is prefixed a finely executed oval portrait and life of the author. Among the prose writers are B. Franklin, Lord Chesterfield, Shenstone, Langhorne, Sterne, Madame de Genlis, Mrs. Barbauld, and Goethe. The last is represented by the 'Letters of Werther.' W. H. LOXO.

FROM PALACE TO PAWNSHOP.

19, Bloomsbury Street, W.C.

MAY I beg you will kindly grant me a few lines in reply to Mr. Rassam's note in your issue of March 24th?

I only performed what I considered to be a public duty in offering to the Trustees of the British Museum the fragment of Assyrian sculpture, and in the hope, expressed in my note, that other fragments might find their way to the Museum; it was not my business to inquire into, or to interfere in any way with, the affairs of the Trustees of the British Museum.

I hardly understand Mr. Rassam's reference to "duplicate or triplicate copies of certain sculptures," seeing that, according to the memorandum in his own handwriting pasted to the back of the fragment in question, it was "cut from one of the slabs found in the mound of Kouyunjik (or Nineveh), which represents men employed in dragging the Human-headed bull to place in the Palace of the Kings of Assyria." From this it is evident that Mr. Rassam believed it to belong to a slab of the series of which some portions are now preserved in the British Museum.

FRANCIS E. WHELAN.

SALES.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS sold on the 7th inst. the following drawings, from the collection of the late Mr. J. W. Barnes: S. Prout, A Street Scene, Normandy, 784. W. Hunt, Hedge-sparrow's Nest and Pyrus Japonica, 65s.; Dead Pigeons, 54s. D. Cox, A Road by a Pool, with farmer on horseback, 50s. A. Goodwin, The Alpine Summer, 1874, 68s. G. P. Boyce, The Crypt of St. Nicolas, Giornico, Canton Ticino, 52s.; Edward the Confessor's Chapel, Westminster Abbey, 110s.; Bridewell Precincts at Nightfall, 1867, 94s.; Black Poplars at Pangbourne, 80s.; At the Back of Great Tangle House, Surrey, 63s. A. W. Hunt, Durham, from below Framwellgate Bridge, 390s. J. M. W. Turner, Lyme Regis, 1891. P. De Wint, Carrying Hay, 136s.

The same auctioneers sold on the 9th inst.

the following engraving: The Sergeant's Portrait, after Meissonier, by J. Jacquet, remarque proof, 26l.

Fine-Art Society.

VISITORS to Messrs. Dowdenwell's Gallery, New Bond Street, on Monday next, when the collection will be opened to the public, will most assuredly be enchanted by the splendour and variety of Mr. W. L. Wyllie's century of drawings, intended to illustrate the "Oceans, Seas, and Rivers" which he saw during a year's yachting in the West Indies (including Barbados), Trinidad, Grenada, St. Lucia, and Dominica, returning thence, by way of the Azores, Gibraltar, Algiers, Tangiers, and the Spanish coast, to Start Point. The wonderful beauty of the colour of the sea was never more delicately and brilliantly depicted than in these studies from nature, which display the varied aspects of the ocean at all hours of the day and night. The expansiveness not less than the ever-changing charms of the tropical atmosphere have been represented with the choicest skill and that indomitable patience for which the artist has always been renowned. Nothing finer in its way is known to us than the modelling of the waves in the pictures of the Bay of Biscay in lively turmoil, in the drawing that represents those rugged, lonely peaks the Desertas, or that in which the ship is represented plunging through the seas soon after Guadeloupe is left behind. The solidity and soundness of all these drawings are evidence of the care and learning the artist has bestowed upon them; their harmonies of tone and colour are not less to be admired than their drawing, while their simplicity and sincerity belong to all works which, like these, are excellent in style. The private view is appointed for Saturday (to-day).

THE pictures now exhibiting at Mr. McLean's in the Haymarket illustrate more or less well the varied skill and powers of several modern artists of renown. Among the more noteworthy examples are two powerful, superbly coloured sea-pictures by Mr. H. Moore, being his 'Mouth of the Seine,' No. 5, and 'On the North Sea' (44), a noble study of dark blue, lucent waves rushing before the wind that brings heavy drifts of shadow-like rain. M. J. Breton's 'Gleaner' (7) is a sketch worthy of his admirable spontaneity in design and his vigorous touch; Anton Mauve's skill and frank touch are deftly epitomized in 'Dutch Pastures' (15), with cattle couching in a sunny meadow near water; 'In the Forest of Fontainebleau' (16) is a fine sketch by Mlle. B. Bonheur; the same may be said of M. G. Vastagli's 'An Anxious Mother,' a lioness watching her playful cubs (18); and the visitor should not omit to notice M. P. Billet's 'Tending the Geese' (20), the strong and broad study of a girl leaning against a tree. Besides these we may mention M. O. Seiler's 'Amateurs' studying "curios" (23); Mr. P. Graham's 'Scotch Coast Scene,' cows on the seashore, in sunlight; and Heer F. Courtens's 'Golden Shower' (29). All told, the gallery contains sixty-six pictures.

THE Fine-Art Society's collection of Mr. P. Goodall's pictures of "Egypt and Life in the Valley of the Nile," which was opened to the public on Monday last in the room adjoining Mrs. Allingham's drawings, of which we may speak on another occasion, is exactly such as we expect from him. Some of them are sketches for, or rather reduced versions of, much larger pictures we have commented upon when reviewing successive Academy exhibitions, and, except as to size, they are in no respect inferior to them. More pleasing, smoother, and more carefully studied, if not more subtle or less obvious in all their motives and qualities, they could hardly be. Lady Colin Campbell has supplied a bright and very sympathetic preface to the catalogue.

Messrs. SHEPHERD BROTHERS have opened an exhibition of "Early British" pictures at No. 27, King Street, St. James's, among which some are attributed to G. Romney, G. Vincent, T. Gainsborough, J. Stark, J. Crome, J. S. Cotman, and D. Cox, besides Messrs. V. Cole, E. Hayes, Haynes Williams, W. P. Frith, H. Moore, and J. Brett.

THE annual report of the Society of Scottish Artists congratulates the members on its artistic success, and the financial position is stated to be satisfactory. The roll of membership now contains 479 names.

THE Journal des Arts reports that the jury of painters have admitted to the Salon of this year 1,862 pictures and 686 water-colours, pastels, and miniatures. The society which manages the exhibition on the Champ de Mars, having been refused the large extent of wall space it demanded, has determined not to contribute to the approaching exhibition at Antwerp. M. Jules Lefebvre will contribute to the Salon 'Portrait de jeune Fille' and 'Portrait de M. Clero'; M. A. Moreau, 'Fontainebleau sous le Premier Empire'; M. Watelin, 'Une Prairie à Blangy-sur-Bresle, Normandie'; M. Aviat, 'Deux Amis, and two portraits'; M. Berne-Bellecour, 'Un Secours'; M. Bortholon, 'Coup de Vent du Nord, Palais du Tréport'; M. L. Bonnat, 'L'Art triomphe de l'ignorance et de la Barbarie' (plafond); M. Douguereau, 'L'Innocence et la Perle'; M. G. Cain, 'Victorien Sardou dirigeant une des Répétitions générales de "Madame Sans-Gêne"'; M. Bérard, 'Foyer des Artistes de la Comédie Française'; M. Chaperon, 'Masséna à Wagram'; M. Cormon, 'La Forge'; M. Dautant, 'Une Répétition'; M. J. Desbrosses, 'Route au Soleil couchant'; and 'Le Plaisir au Temps de la Moisson à La Tourneille-Septeuil, près Mantes'; M. Harpignies, 'Les Bords de la Loire' and 'Un Soir d'Automne'; MM. A. Maignan and Champigneulle, 'Jeanne d'Arc au Château des Tournelles, Orléans, 1429' (vitrail); M. G. Médigue, 'Jeanne d'Arc et le Capitaine Baudricourt'; M. H. Pille, 'Les Puritains'; M. Roybat, 'La Main chaude'; M. Paul Sain, 'Avignon, le Soir,' and 'Eau dormante'; and M. Tattégren, 'Quéteuses.' The Salon will be opened, as usual, on the 1st of May.

At Terracina, on Monte Angelo, a search is being made for the temple of Jove, and rich architectural remains have already been found.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

ST. JAMES'S HALL.—Bristol Orpheus Glee Society.
CRYSTAL PALACE.—Saturday Concerts.
QUEEN'S HALL.—Popular Wagner Concert.

THERE are unquestionably symptoms of a revival of interest in unaccompanied part-singing in London, and the visit of the Bristol Orpheus Society last week may, therefore, be regarded as well timed. Fifty years ago this valuable association was established, and the celebration of its "Jubilee" has been most suitably arranged. Prizes were offered for new five-part compositions by students of the Royal College and the Royal Academy of Music. The adjudicator in the first instance was Sir George Grove, whose choice fell upon 'The Sturdy Rock,' by H. Walford Davies, the words being taken from the Percy 'Reliques of Ancient Poetry'; and in the second Dr. A. C. Mackenzie, the successful piece being a setting of Ingoldsby's "There sits a bird," by Charles Macpherson. Without saying that either of these pieces is noteworthy for individuality of any sort, both are certainly compositions in which the general talent of English musicians for vocal part-writing is conspicuously displayed. Other modern compositions, directed by their respective composers, were 'Peace' and 'The Pedlar's Song,' by Mr. C. Lee Williams; Prof. F. G. Bridge's clever version of Dickens's lines from 'Pickwick,' supposed to be sung by Sam Weller, "Bold Turpin vance on Hounslow Heath"; and Mr. W. H. Cummings's graceful "Oh! the summer night." Mr. George Riseley, whose services to music in Bristol are almost invaluable, conducted various masterpieces by T. Cooke, Dr. G. W. Martin, S. S. Wesley, Horsley, Walmisley, J. J. Viotta, Sir Arthur Sullivan, R. J. S. Stevens, and other writers of part-music, with consummate ability, and the singing throughout of the Orpheus Society was as noteworthy as ever for beauty of tone and delightful ensemble. In some of the numbers the assistance of solo voices was needed, and this was satisfactorily supplied by Mr. Harper Kearton and Mr. Watkin Mills.

The regular series of Saturday concerts at the Crystal Palace is drawing to a close. At the performance last week a setting of Longfellow's familiar poem 'The Wreck of the Hesperus,' by Mr. Ferdinand Dunkley, was performed for the first time. It is for chorus and orchestra, without solo voices, and is appropriately spirited and picturesque. Mr. Dunkley, it may be remembered, gained the prize in an orchestral suite competition during a season of promenade concerts at Her Majesty's Theatre a few years ago. He was a scholar at the Royal College of Music, and is now a "Professor of Music" at St. Agnes' School, at Albany in the United States. The most important feature in Saturday's programme was Beethoven's 'Choral' Symphony, which received an excellent interpretation, with Fräulein Fillunger, Miss Annie Layton, Mr. Henry Piercy, and Mr. Andrew Black as the principal vocalists. Nothing else in the concert calls for remark.

Mr. Henschel's so-called "grand popular Wagner concert" at the Queen's Hall on Wednesday evening was a conspicuous success in every way. The programme resembled that which will be given under the direction of Herr Felix Mottl on Tuesday next week; that is to say, it comprised selections from all the Bayreuth master's music dramas with the exception of 'Der Fliegende Holländer,' and included the Overtures to 'Rienzi' and 'Tannhäuser,' the Preludes to 'Lohengrin' and 'Die Meistersinger,' the 'Walkürenritt,' 'Siegfried's Tod,' and the Prelude and Good Friday music from 'Parsifal.' All these were played forcibly, and with much artistic intelligence. We repeat that Mr. Henschel has made rapid strides of late as a Wagnerian conductor.

Musical Form. By Ebenezer Prout. (Augener & Co.)—Mr. Prout remarks in the preface to this latest instalment of his remarkable series of educational works in connexion with music that the previous volumes dealt chiefly with matters of theory, while the present is almost entirely practical, points of theory being hardly touched upon. Curiously enough, however, it is just when he approaches theory, or, more strictly speaking, theoretical assertion, that he is most likely to be vehemently opposed. But those who may dissent from him on matters which some may regard as of value and others as of no import whatever cannot fail to acknowledge the amazing amount of research, the splendid musicianship, and the clearness in statement which characterize this book. In one respect it is the most valuable of the series. Works on musical form written by English musicians for English students already existed, Ouseley and Macfarren being among those who have laboured in this field; but they and others have dealt mainly with technicalities, while Mr. Prout has followed his usual method in going to the great masters for examples and argument. He has also studied the principal German treatises on composition, which, as he observes, are not "light reading," and the apology he makes for the delay in the appearance of his book can only be regarded as a touch of humour. Commencing with the thesis that an important difference between the old unbarred music and modern music lies in the regularity of pulsation in the latter, a strong alternating with a weak accent, he goes on to say that from this germ a "motive" is developed, and on a succession of motives a movement is built. A phrase is formed from the combination of two sections, of course with alternate strong and weak accents, and in a cadence in common time the last chord should come upon a strong accent, the principal exception being in what writers on prosody term the feminine ending. Very many examples are quoted to show that the great masters always worked on these principles, though in numberless instances they have barred their efforts incorrectly. No doubt this has frequently happened; indeed, we may go so far as to say that in the majority of the examples given his emendations are valuable as showing clearly that the best composers have penned their ideas carelessly, and that in consequence they are frequently misinterpreted. But to lay down as a law that a strong accent is always preceded by a weak, in imagination if not in fact, invites discussion of a kind which can scarcely result in profit. For what is gained, even if the truth of this point of theory is fully demonstrated? Composers will pen their ideas, good, bad, or indifferent, just as before, without deference to Mr. Prout's technicalities modified from Dr. Hugo Riemann, just as they will after the promulgation of his views on the harmonic chord founded on those of Day and Macfarren. But when attention is diverted from a subject the import of which seems incommensurate with the amount of space devoted to it, to matters of greater value, the position of the questioner must change to that of the eulogist. The motto on all of Mr. Prout's treatises might be, "Musical instruction made easy." Thanks to him, students can now gain really large acquaintance with the works of all the acknowledged masters, ancient and modern, without the trouble and expense entailed in the purchase and study of the scores. The explanations here given of the various forms, such as binary, ternary, rondo, &c., are luminous and, for the most part, logical, and the illustrations are numberless, and in almost all instances felicitous. It should be added that the book deals mainly, though not exclusively, with the fundamental principles of form, the next volume of the series to be issued being 'Applied Forms.' But in the present treatise no fewer than nine complete movements are given from the instrumental works of the great masters, and are fully analyzed. Difference of opinion must necessarily prevail as to the minutiae of musical forms, because it is quite certain that composers of genius do not trouble themselves concerning the nature of motives, sentences, phrases, and so forth, when penning their inspirations; but, whatever views may be taken as to the value of Mr. Prout's theories, no musician can possibly deny the practical value of his book.

Musical Society.

It is worthy of note that English opera, or, to speak more strictly, opera in English, is being played simultaneously in three London theatres, namely, Drury Lane, the Grand, and the Standard. At the Islington house Mr. Arthur Rousaby's company opened for a season of three weeks on Monday with a portion of Donizetti's now rarely heard 'Daughter of the Regiment' and 'Cavalleria Rusticana.' The performances in both instances deserve to be commended; Miss Minnie Leverenz, Miss Agnes Molteno, Mr. St. Austell, and Mr. Rousaby especially distinguishing themselves in the solo parts. The orchestra, chorus, and stage appointments were more artistic than they usually are in enterprises of this nature.

According to authoritative report no fewer than seven additions are to be made to the Covent Garden operatic repertory during Sir Augustus Harris's season which will commence on May 14th. The works named are Berlioz's 'Faust,' Bruneau's 'L'Attaque du Moulin,' Mr. Cowen's 'Signa,' Verdi's 'Falstaff,' Gounod's 'Sapho,' Massenet's 'La Navarraise,' and Puccini's 'Manon Lescaut,' a more than sufficiently extensive list, which it will be difficult to present adequately in the course of a ten or eleven weeks' season of opera.

It is stated that the Musical Union, associated for so many years with the late John Ella, is to be revived under the direction of M. Johannes Wolff, the violinist, and that the first concert will take place on May 21st, when M. Widor, M. Waeffelghem, M. Delsart, and Mlle. Chaminade will appear.

An agreeable violin recital, or rather chamber concert, was given by M. Emile Sauret at the Hampstead Conservatoire last Saturday afternoon. The brilliant violinist was effectively assisted at the pianoforte in Beethoven's Sonata in G, Op. 30, No. 3, by Mr. Stanley Hawley, in place of Mr. Haydn Parry deceased, and his principal solo was Spohr's Concerto in A, No. 5. Mr. Charles Conyers evinced considerable promise as a tenor vocalist in songs by Goring Thomas, Miss F. Allitson, and F. Clay.

MR. AND MRS. FRANK MOIR gave a vocal and instrumental recital at the Queen's Hall on Monday afternoon, their programme including Brahms's Sonata in E minor, for piano and violoncello, Op. 38, undertaken by Miss Adelina de Lara and Mr. Edward Howell, and several new songs by Mr. Moir.

THE Silesian Musicfest, which will take place next June at Goerlitz, is likely to be brilliant. Several distinguished soloists have promised their co-operation, and the chorus will consist of upwards of 800 and the orchestra of 123 persons.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Mon.	Musical Artists' Society, 8, St. Martin's Town Hall.
Tues.	Wagner Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
Wed.	Mr. P. Dawson's Pianoforte Recital, 8, St. James's Hall.
Thurs.	Madame Tichonow's Pianoforte Recital, 8, St. James's Hall.
Fri.	Mr. R. Mackay's Choral Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
Sat.	Philharmonic Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
Sun.	Philharmonic of Music, 8, Henry Lane.
	Crystal Palace Concert, 8.
	Musical of Chamber Music, 8, Drill Hall, Hampstead.
	'The Golden Legend,' 8, Queen's Hall.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

GARRICK.—'Mrs. Lessingham,' a Play in Four Acts. By George Fleming.

THAT the dramatist may take what views he pleases concerning historical characters seems on the point of being conceded; that he should be allowed equal licence with regard to human motives is "a horse of another colour." From opposite points of view Cromwell was a hero or, as Charles II. called him, a coquin. Man is man, however, and woman woman throughout, and to represent both as different in nature from what they are is a hazardous experiment. This theory, on the aspects and limitations of which there is not time at present to dwell, has been neglected or ignored by the clever author of 'Mrs. Lessingham,' whose work consequently suffers. Her hero stands between two women, in some respects like the ass of Buridan between two stacks of hay. He knows, however, to which side to turn. On one hand is yesterday, on the other to-morrow, the possessed and the coveted. Doubt is not possible as to the direction in which he will turn. To do justice to the author, no sign of doubt is traceable. The difficulty arises with the women. These meet, and, with the instinct of women, recognize at once the rivalry between them. Before long all clouds are dissipated, and the betrothed of the present recognizes the mistress of the past, and is recognized by her. Both are ladies, and at bottom good women. There is no question of fur and feathers, only a combat of magnanimity. So deep is the love of the one for her seducer that she will immolate or efface herself that he may be happy with the woman of his later choice; so loyal is the other that she too yields up her lover, and compels him to do what she conceives to be his duty, and marry her predecessor. This, good easy man, he does. We have in all this a departure from tradition so wide as to be perplexing and, if the truth must be confessed, unacceptable. Juliet compel Romeo to marry Rosalind! Romeo accept her bidding! Josephine Beauharnais retire voluntarily in favour of Maria Louisa! Here is heresy to all theories, sentimental or tragic. This is the chief defect in 'Mrs. Lessingham.' One able to make the required concession and accept as real a world of topsy-turvydom is rewarded. The play abounds in situations theatrically effective, and in spite of its almost sepulchral gloom stimulates and stirs. A scene in the second act between the two women is ingenious and touching, and the concluding action, the resemblance of which to 'On ne badine pas avec l'Amour' has been pointed out, is harrowing. To the favour with which the whole was received a fine interpretation largely contributed. It is difficult to conceive of the two women being played better than they are by Miss Kate Rorke and Miss Elizabeth Robins. Quite exquisite is the manner in which the young girl, knowing till now of sin and shame as things vaguely existing in the world, receives the knowledge that they are around and about her, blighting her prospects and darkening her sun while it is still day. Miss Robins's method is as yet imperfect, but it is full of promise. Her shuddering sense of the inevitableness of doom and her physical dread of the consequences of the act she has courage to commit are impressive. Mr. Forbes Robertson is the best jeune premier we possess, and his presentation of the hero, a somewhat pitiable creature, is masterly. Mr. Hare endows with vitality and value a character which offers few opportunities, and cannot even be regarded as of primary importance.

The Theatrical World for 1893. By William Archer. (Scott.)—Though not the first to supply to the English playgoer something in the nature of a theatrical feuilleton, Mr. Archer has in the World, with which his name is most generally associated, gone nearer that form of composition than any of his rivals. Almost, though not quite, alone in periodicals read by the educated, he is allowed to use the unshackled and irresponsible I in place of the customary and repressive we, and he takes full advantage of his privileges and immunities. He does not, indeed, like Jules Janin, make a representation which he may possibly not have witnessed a peg on which to air his intellectual frippery, but he is almost as much occupied with the opinions of others concerning the plays with which he deals as he is with his own. Possessor of excellent weapons of offence, and animated at once with the fervour of the zealot and the passion for combat of the soldier, he is as dangerous an enemy as he is a firm partisan. It is in part due to his combative instinct that his book, which consists of a reprint of his criticisms upon last year's plays contributed to the World, constitutes so delightful reading. We have ourselves read it, so to speak, in a breath, and, though not always in accord with the writer, cannot too strongly admire the cleverness and subtlety of the whole. Mr. Archer's reasons for republication, and his method of dealing with his existing work, are exposed in a dedicatory address to his friend and associate Mr. Robert W. Lowe, in which is also given an avowal of his dramatic faith. The later criticisms have been reprinted rather than the earlier, not because of any avowed ripening of thought, increase of observation, or improvement of style, but because the past season has been "a veritable 'annus mirabilis' in the history of the modern stage." 'The Second Mrs. Tanqueray' is regarded by Mr. Archer as its supreme accomplishment, but we have had besides the visits of the Comédie Française and Signora Eleonora Duse, the establishment of the Augustin Daly theatre (which, however, Mr. Archer does not count among the memorable events), a representation of one tragedy of Sophocles, three plays of Shakespeare, two of Tennyson, one novelty of Ibsen, together with ambitious dramas by Mr. Henry Arthur Jones, Mr. Oscar Wilde, Mr. Sydney Grundy, and Mr. Louis Parker, and miscellaneous, but interesting experiments too numerous for record. If, then, his book is slight and trivial, it is "because of the inadequacy of the writer to his themes, not because of any unworthiness in the themes themselves." Neither slight nor trivial are, it is needless to say, Mr. Archer's opinions and judgments, nor are they, what some might more readily believe, prejudiced nor doctrinaire. For every form of art Mr. Archer has tolerance, and in his most gravely expressed repugnances he avoids the use of strong language. The rapier is his weapon, not the quarterstaff, when he is in earnest, but he more often finds the lath sword adequate to the task of castigation. His praise, on the contrary, is warm. He does not hesitate to advance the opinion that Tennyson's plays "get well across the footlights. They seize our attention and challenge our criticism. They stand or fall by the same test which we apply to 'Richard III.' or 'Coriolanus,' to 'Egmont' or 'Wilhelm Tell.'" When the sternest condemnation is expressed, it takes some form such as the following, well merited, if ever censure was :—

"Then we had two sisters, whom I, at first, in my innocence, supposed to be importations from America, but whose accent soon proclaimed them children of the wild East—of London. They sang in an incredibly acute and scratchy voice,—a voice, I say, for it sounded like one, and I trust there is not such another in the world—two songs in praise of debauchery, whereof the frank paganism charmed me unspcakably."

The italics in the concluding words are our own. Ibsen, Mr. Archer's special horse of battle, occupies no disproportionate share of the volume. A theory concerning 'The Master Builder' is ingenious, but scarcely convincing.

There is in this volume a mass of sound criticism, delivered in a highly cultivated and effective style. There is, perhaps, more disputatiousness than is absolutely desirable, but it is generally good-natured, and is invariably defensive rather than aggressive. The volume is, in fact, worthy of Mr. Archer, will be valued by the intelligent public, and is of highest importance to all who take an enlightened interest in the stage.

Dramatic Gossip.

'THE LITTLE SQUIRE,' an adaptation, by Mrs. William Greet and Mr. Horace Sedger, of 'The Squire' of Mrs. de la Pasture, given at the Lyric Theatre at a series of afternoon representations, presents a leash of the most uncomfortably artificial and sentimentalized children ever put upon the stage. Such, "so wise, so young," says Richard III., "do ne'er live long," and so far as art life is concerned the truth of the cynical statement or prophecy is acceptable and satisfactory. But for the mistimed zeal of friends, who in a performance already long and tedious insisted tyrannically on encooing everything the poor creatures did, the exhibition might have attained a moderate success, since there is story of a melodramatic kind in the play, and actors so capable as Mr. Charles Sugden, Miss Mary Rorke, Miss Rose Leclercq, and Miss Fanny Brough took part in the performance. The critical reporter meanwhile is pardonable for quoting from Mrs. Browning, with ironical emphasis :—

But the young, young children, O my brothers !

At the revival this evening at the Lyceum of Will's adaptation of 'Faust' Mr. Irving and Miss Terry resume their original parts. Mr. Terrie is Faust ; Mr. Julius Knight, Valentine ; and Miss M. A. Victor, Martha.

'THE MASQUERADERS' is the title finally chosen for the new drama of Mr. Henry Arthur Jones forthcoming at the St. James's Theatre on the 28th inst.

'IN THE EYES OF THE WORLD,' a one-act piece by Mr. Fraser Wood, has been unostentatiously added to the bill at the Globe, and its performance now precedes that of 'Charley's Aunt,' which has reached its five hundredth representation.

THERE is some question of producing at the Court Mr. Clement Scott's adaptation of 'Denise,' with Miss Olga Netherole as the heroine.

MR. WEDDON GROSSMITH will on Monday transfer 'The New Boy' from Terry's Theatre to the Vaudeville.

A NEW play by Mr. Bernard Shaw will shortly replace Dr. Todhunter's 'Comedy of Sighs' at the Avenue.

MRS. CROWE (Miss Bateman) will give a dramatic recital on May 4th at the Queen's Hall, Langham Place.

THE Germans in Austria certainly deserve great commendation for their encouragement of the drama. The Curatorium of the Bauernfeld-Stiftung of Vienna offers a prize of 2,000 florins for the best German play which may be performed from January 13th, 1894, to August 9th, 1895 ; and the well-known composer Herr Alfred Straesser has placed at the disposal of the Raimund Theater the sum of 10,000 florins for the new Raimund Prize.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—W. M.—H. E. A.—G. M.—H. E. A. M. W.—H. E. H.—W. S.—G. E. L.—H. E.—J. C. E.—H. A. S.—H. H.—received.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION BY POST.

To all parts of the United Kingdom.

For Twelve Months...	15 6
For Six Months...	7 8

For all Countries within the Postal Union.

For Twelve Months...	18 0
For Six Months...	9 0

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

READY NEXT WEEK.

DANTE G. ROSSETTI

AND THE

PRE-RAPHAELITE MOVEMENT

Viewed in Relation to the Problems, Tendencies, and Purposes of Modern English Art.

By Mrs. J. W. WOOD.

With 8 Photogravure Reproductions of Rossetti's Paintings. 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.

The book contains some unpublished reminiscences of Rossetti's student days and career in art, and describes the founding of the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood and its long conflict with academic traditions.

Through the courtesy of Lord Battersea, Mr. Theodore Watts, Mr. Moncure D. Conway, and others, several important Drawings and Studies are reproduced for the first time, and they appear in the book as Full-Page Photogravure Illustrations.

AMONG the MOORS: Sketches of

Oriental Life. By G. MONTBARD, Author of 'In Egypt,' &c. Superbly Illustrated. Royal 8vo. cloth, 16s. (In a few days.)

LARGE-PAPER EDITION, strictly limited to 100 Copies, each numbered and signed by the Author, printed on Japanese Vellum, THREE GUINEAS each, net.

M. Montbard, whose skill as an artist has been rendered familiar to every one through the pages of the Illustrated London News, recently explored the highways and byways of Morocco, and made himself acquainted with the manners and customs of the natives, the characteristics of the scenery, the architecture of the cities and mosques, and every aspect of the social life of the people in town and country.

ON SHORT LEAVE to JAPAN. By

Capt. G. J. YOUNGHUSSEMAN, Queen's Own Corps of Guides, Author of 'Eighteen Hundred Miles on a Burmese Tat,' &c. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The ENGLISH CATALOGUE of

BOOKS for 1893. A List of Books published in Great Britain and Ireland in the Year 1893, with their Sizes, Prices, and Publishers' Names. Also of the Principal Books published in the United States of America. With the Addition of an Index to Subjects. Royal 8vo. 6s.

DEDICATED TO H.E.H. PRINCESS MARY, DUCHESS OF TECK.

A MANUAL of OBSTETRIC

NURSING. By MARIAN HUMPHREY, British Lying-in Hospital, London, Diploma London Obstetrical Society, Member Royal British Nurses' Association, and of its Registration Board. Crown 8vo. 300 pp. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The INSTRUCTION and AMUSE-

MENTS of the BLIND. By Dr. GUILLE. With 28 Engravings. 8vo. cloth, 5s.

A reprint of the translation, published in London, 1819, of the interesting and useful work which was dedicated to the King (of France) and printed by the Blind at the Royal Institution for the Blind, in Paris, in the year 1817.

The CHAIRMAN'S HANDBOOK.

By Sir M. F. D. PALGRAVE, K.C.B., Clerk to the House of Commons. Tenth Edition, Revised. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s.

"A brief compilation of suggestions and rules for the conduct of chairmen of public and other meetings, based upon the procedure and practice of Parliament."—Daily News.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION NOW READY.

TALES FROM WESTMINSTER

ABBEY told to CHILDREN. By Mrs. FRESHWATER LORD. With a Portrait of Dean Stanley and a Plan and View of the Abbey. Crown 8vo. boards, 1s.

PREACHERS OF THE AGE.—New Volume just ready.

A CUP of COLD WATER. By the Rev. J. MONLAIS JONES, of Llewistham. With Photogravure Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

CHEAP EDITIONS AT ALL BOOKSELLERS

Uniform crown 8vo. Volumes, bound in cloth.

HALF-A-CROWN each.

BY R. D. BLACKMORE.

MARY ANERLEY.

BY W. CLARK RUSSELL.

LITTLE LOO.

BY GEORGE MAC DONALD.

MARY MARSTON.

London :

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

WARD, LOCK & BOWDEN'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Complete Catalogue post free on application.

NEW WORK BY MACKENZIE BELL.

Now ready, cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

SPRING'S IMMORTALITY, And other Poems. By MACKENZIE BELL.

Athenæum.—"Has an unquestionable charm of its own."

Review of Reviews.—"This graceful little volume... One or two of the poems in the 'Pictures of Travel' section are, owing to the very great success with which the details of natural beauty are treated, really notable; while the religious poems breathe an atmosphere of sincerity and devotion not a little refreshing."

Bookman.—"Verse like Mr. Mackenzie Bell's... is sufficiently rare, and should be valued. These selections from former volumes and some new poems give one not a little pleasure... His verse leaves on us the impression that we have been in company with a poet."

Globe.—"Throughout one is struck by the evidence given of a sympathetic personality expressing itself in clear and well-turned strains. Everywhere the workmanship is good, the spirit serene, the standpoint generous. We have been attracted especially by the sonnets on Shakespeare, Browning, and Rossetti."

Academy.—"There are poems in this volume which will bring light and cheer to many a drooping spirit. There are others—notably 'The Taking of the Flag' and 'The Keeping of the Vow'—that will be read with pleasure for the vigour with which they are written. And there are others—more particularly, perhaps, the sonnets—on which readers will dwell with the delight which thoughtful verse, the genuine outcome of true feeling, never fails to give... Mr. Bell thinks his own thoughts, and expresses them in his own style and language."

Daily News.—"Throughout a model of finished workmanship and of that perfect sanity of the imagination which is the note of all our best work in this department of literature."

Black and White.—"Both tuneful and charming."

Publishers' Circular.—"Some of them have the rare quality of remaining in the memory. Contains much that lovers of genuine poetry will cherish."

Western Morning News.—"His descriptive poems are very fine, while his religious and historical efforts are by no means lacking in noble sentiment and poetic power."

AN INEXPENSIVE LIBRARY OF INDISPENSABLE BOOKS.

"Excellent 'Minerva Library.' One of the best libraries of the day."—ATHENÆUM.
"That wonderful series of good books, the 'Minerva Library.'"—CHRISTIAN WORLD.

THE MINERVA LIBRARY OF FAMOUS BOOKS.

An Illustrated Series of First-Class Books, averaging from 100 to 600 pages, strongly and attractively bound in cloth, each with Introduction, Notes, Illustrations, or other Special Feature.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS EACH VOLUME, with either cut or uncut edges.

N.B.—Also supplied in half-morocco, half-persian, half-calf, or full paste-grain, price 3s.; paste-grain extra, 6s. 6d.; ditto, padded, 7s.; full calf or tree-calf, 10s. 6d.

Travels.

DARWIN.
HOOKER.
GALTON.
WALLACE.
BARTH.
BORROW.
&c.

1. Darwin's Journal during the Voyage of H.M.S. Beagle Round the World.
2. The Ingoldsby Legends.
3. The Bible in Spain: Journeys, Adventures, and Imprisonments. By GEORGE BORROW.
4. Emerson's Complete Prose Works.
5. Travels in Tropical South Africa. By FRANCIS GALTON, F.R.S.
6. The Betrothed Lovers (I Promessi Sposi). By ALESSANDRO MANZONI.
7. Goethe's Faust (Complete). Translated in the Original Metres by RAYARD TAYLOR.
8. Travels on the Amazon and the Rio Negro. By ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, LL.D. &c.
9. The Life and Letters of Dr. Arnold, of Rugby. By the late DEAN STANLEY.
10. Poe's Tales of Adventure, Mystery, and Imagination.
11. Comedies by Molière. Newly Translated by CHAS. MATTHEW, M.A.
12. The Life and Times of Oliver Goldsmith. By JOHN FORSTER.
13. The Manners and Customs of the Modern Egyptians. By EDWARD WILLIAM LANE.

Biography.

STANLEY.
FORSTER.
LOCKHART.
YONGE.
&c.

14. Memoirs of Lord Melbourne. By W. M. TORRENS.
15. Vanity Fair: a Novel without a Hero. By W. M. THACKERAY.
16. Dr. Barth's Travels in North and Central Africa.
17. Victor Hugo: Select Poems and Tragedies.
18. Darwin's Coral Reefs, Volcanic Islands, &c.
19. Lockhart's Life of Robert Burns.
20. Dr. Barth's Travels in Central Africa.
21. Lyra Elegantiarum: Social and Occasional Verse.
22. Carlyle's Sartor Resartus, Heroes and Hero-Worship, and FAST AND FETTERED.
23. The Life and Letters of Benjamin Franklin: including his AUTOBIOGRAPHY.
24. Beckford's 'Vathek' and European Travels.
25. Macaulay's Historical and Literary Essays.
26. The Life of the Duke of Wellington. By Prof. C. D. YONGE.
27. Carlyle's History of the French Revolution.
28. The Land of the Lion and the Sun; or, Modern Persia. By C. J. WILLS, M.D.

Poetry & the Drama.

GOETHE.
HUGO.
MOLIÈRE.
&c.

Essays.

MACAULAY.
BACON.
CARLYLE.
EMERSON.
&c.

29. Mary Barton. By MRS. GASKELL.
30. Ingram's Life, Letters, and Opinions of Poe.
31. Shirley. By CHARLOTTE BRONTË.
32. Sir Joseph Hooker's Himalayan Journals.
33. Bacon's Famous Works.
34. Macaulay's Biographical, Critical, and Miscellaneous Essays, and PORTFOLIO WORKS.
35. Carlyle's Cromwell's Letters and Speeches.
36. Kingsley's Alton Locke.
37. Thackeray's Pendennis.
38. Lavengro: The Scholar, The Priest, The Gipsy. By GEORGE BORROW.

History.

CARLYLE.

Fiction.

KINGSLEY.
THACKERAY.
BRONTË.
POE.
BECKFORD.
GASKELL.

Each Volume contains some special feature in the shape of Introduction, Notes, or Illustrations.

The MINERVA LIBRARY gives in a handsome and permanent form, and at a very low price, the best and most classic works in the language; variety is kept constantly in view, and paper, print, and binding are so excellent as to fit them to appear in any library. In point of value and literary interest and excellence the series is the best and cheapest in existence.

London: WARD, LOCK & BOWDEN, LIMITED, Salisbury-square, E.C.;

And of all Booksellers throughout the World.

W. H. ALLEN & CO.'S LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES.

Just published, with numerous Portraits and other illustrations, demy 4to. 21s.

INDIA'S PRINCES:

Short Life Sketches of the Native Rulers of India.

By Mrs. GRIFFITH.

"Something akin to Oriental splendour has been displayed in the preparation of 'India's Princes.' This volume embodies short biographical sketches of the native rulers of India. It is enriched with photographic portraits and other pictorial views which have been very effectively produced. To all in any way interested in our Indian empire this handsome volume will be a source of delight and instruction."

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged, with upwards of 50 Maps and Plans, 18s. net.

MODERN TACTICS. By Captain H. B. GALL, late 5th Fusiliers.

This Third Edition has been almost entirely rewritten in accordance with the new Drill Books, and contains upwards of 50 Plans and worked-out schemes illustrating how to dispose of a force in a Map.

"A clear and comprehensive manual for the present-day student, and made pleasant to read by the beautiful printing and paper."—Graphic.

Demy 8vo. with 27 Plans, 9 Sketch Maps, and 3 Sketches in Text, 36s.

MOLTKE'S TACTICAL PROBLEMS. From 1856 to 1882. Edited by the Prussian Grand General Staff (Department for Military History). Authorized Translation, by CARL VON DONAT, late Lieutenant East Prussian Fusilier Regiment, No. 32 (now Regiment Count Moon), Author of 'Studies in Applied Tactics.'

"These solutions and problems will, on account of their lucidity and striking simplicity, ever remain model decisions, and afford by their pronounced originality a fountain of suggestion and information."

Demy Chronicle.

A GREY ROMANCE. By Mrs. W. K. CLIFFORD; and Stories by FREDERICK GREENWOOD, GILBERT PARKER, FRANK STOCKTON, and others.

"Not very often have eight stories been published or republished under one cover so interesting and original as those in 'A Grey Romance.' A remarkable volume, and Mrs. Clifford worthily leads a worthy band."—Saturday Review.

Crown 8vo. Illustrated, 6s.

IN the SHADOW of the PAGODA: Sketches of Burmese Life and Character. By R. D. CUMING.

"With their rare humour and dramatic quality, these sketches are thoroughly entertaining, and they give a singularly vivid and cleverly observed picture of a very interesting people."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

SIGHTS and SHADOWS: being Examples of the Supernatural. By the Rev. F. G. LEE, Author of 'Glimpses in the Twilight.'

"Very attractive, and will be widely read."—World.

Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

WOMEN of RENOWN. By G. BARNETT SMITH, Author of 'The Life and Enterprises of Ferdinand de Lesseps.'

"The selection is decidedly well devised, the field embraced by the essays is agreeably varied, and the result is a pleasing volume of sketches."—Saturday Review.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

WAR TIMES; or, the Lads of Craigross; and IN the CANNON'S MOUTH. By SARAH TYLER, Author of 'Citoyenne Jacqueline.'

"Will be read with profit and interest by old and young."—Globe.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

The SHADRACH; and other Stories. By FRANK R. STOCKTON, Author of 'Budder Grange.'

"In Mr. Stockton's stories the unexpected is always happening. There is a quiet turn both in phrase and in plot, and a humour which is peculiarly just and genuine."—Scottishman.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

HERE and THERE in ITALY and OVER the BORDER. By Signora LINDA VILLARI, Author of 'Tuscan Hills and Venetian Waters,' &c.

"Madame Villari is a pleasant writer, who conveys a clear general impression of the places she visits."—Standard Observer.

SIXTEENTH EDITION. Crown 8vo. with Portrait, 7s. 6d.

MUSIC and MORALS. By the Rev. H. B. HAWKES, M.A.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

FOURTH EDITION. Crown 8vo. with Portrait, 7s. 6d. MY MUSICAL LIFE.

At all Libraries and Bookstalls.

THE BEST of HER SEX. By Fergus HUMB, Author of 'The Harlequin Opal.' In 2 vols.

"A smart stirring story, with a good deal of sterling virtue in it. The book is very amusing."—World.

London: W. H. ALLEN & CO., LIMITED,
15, Waterloo-Place.
Publishers to the Indian Office.

F. V. WHITE & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS. (TO BE OBTAINED IN TOWN OR COUNTRY.)

I.
Helen Mathers's A MAN of TO-DAY. By the Author of 'Comin' thro' the Rye,' 'Cherry Ridge,' 'What the Olden Told,' 'A Study of a Woman,' &c. 3 vols. (At all Libraries)

II.
Dora Russell's A GREAT TEMPTATION.

By the Author of 'Footprints in the Snow,' 'Out of Eden,' 'The Victim's Government,' 'On Golden Wings,' &c. 3 vols. (At all Libraries)

The Daily Telegraph.—"Miss Dora Russell's latest work of fiction is a cleverly constructed story. The interest of this stirring narrative is well sustained throughout three volumes."

The Scotsman.—"The story becomes in this author's hands the ground of an agreeable diversion, and any one who likes to let the sentimental part of his nature be played upon in good effect will read the book with enjoyment."

The Public Opinion.—"The story has many dramatic situations, and well maintains the interest to the conclusion."

The Publishers' Circular.—"The story is told with considerable power, and is distinctly entertaining, the three volumes containing a good deal of sensational interest."

The Court Journal.—"The story is never dull from start to finish."

III.
Florence Warden's MY CHILD and I: a Woman's Story. By the Author of 'The House on the Marsh,' 'A Young Wife's Trial,' 'A Wild Wooing,' 'A Witch of the Hills,' &c. 3 vols. (At all Libraries)

The Standard.—"Miss Florence Warden's inventive powers have not failed her, and her freshness is not decreased by wear and tear. The character of the heroine is well sustained. The story is full of interest."

The News of the World.—"Miss Warden is dramatic enough to bring her characters on the stage well, and to give them effective exit, as those who may have one or two plans well kept. And while they are on the stage they never bore us, and the incidents are cleverly worked in with just enough show of probability to let one read on without uncomfortable doubts."

The Guardian.—"It is a book of so much interest that it is not easy to put it down. The poor young mother's search for the infant of whom she was robbed, the companionship and mistakes that ensue when she thinks she has found him, are very interesting."

The Daily Telegraph.—"In 'My Child and I' Miss Warden evinces no falling off in the inventive faculty and contrived capacity for which her previous fictional works have been and all been justly distinguished. The book teems with incident and displays a generous tenacity towards arousing its readers with surprise. There is much real and various entertainment in such and every sensational episode of 'My Child and I.'"

IV.
A Perrin's INTO TEMPTATION. 2 vols.

(At all Libraries)
The Athenæum.—"The story of the young girl whose wife were brighter than her conscience is briefly told. Josephine Howson tells her own story with much verve. Her unvarnished tale never wanders from the point and is often a pleasantly graphic in consequence. The character sketches are all remarkably telling."

The Scotsman.—"The story which the writer of 'Into Temptation' puts into the mouth of the young and spirited heroine is at once interesting and painful. Her own peculiarities of character are skilfully depicted. The novel is very readable, in the sense that it is written in a bright and spirited style."

V.
Annie Thomas's (Mrs. Pender Cadlip) NO HERO, HIT A MAN. By the Author of 'Allerton Towers,' 'Kissed Villains,' 'Bye of Bismarck,' 'Dennis Domes,' &c. 3 vols. (Immediately)

VI.
Mrs. Edward Kennard's JUST LIKE a WOMAN. By the Author of 'The Girl in the Brown Habit,' 'Wedded to Sport,' 'Sporting Tales,' 'That Pretty Little Horsebreaker,' &c. Cloth, 2s. 6d. (At all Bookellers and Bookstalls)

VII.
Mrs. Alexander's FOUND WANTING. By the Author of 'The Wedding of,' 'For his Dear,' 'A Woman's Heart,' &c. Cloth, 2s. 6d. (At all Bookellers and Bookstalls)

VIII.
"Rita's" THE COUNTESS PHARAMOND. A Sequel to 'Rita,' By the Author of 'The Man in Possession,' 'The Rending of My Day,' &c. Cloth, 2s. 6d. (At all Bookellers and Bookstalls)

IX.
Mrs. Robert Jocelyn's FOR ONE SEASON ONLY. A Sporting Novel. By the Author of 'Only a Horse-dealer,' 'A Big Stake,' &c. Cloth, 2s. 6d. (Immediately)

X.
Mrs. Hungerford's NORA CREINA. By the Author of 'Molly Rawn,' 'An Unsatisfactory Lover,' &c. In picture boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d. (At all Bookellers and Bookstalls)

XI.
Hume Nisbet's THE QUEEN'S DESIRE: a Romance of the Indian Mutiny. By the Author of 'A Man-O'-War Romance,' 'The Haunted Station,' &c. In picture boards, 2s. (At all Bookellers and Bookstalls)

XII.
Florence Warden's A WILD WOOING. In picture boards, 2s. (At all Bookellers and Bookstalls)

XIII.
Mrs. Alexander Fraser's THE NEW DUCHESS. By the Author of 'A Modern Bridgeman,' 'Daughters of Helgavia,' &c. Third Edition. In picture boards, 2s. (Immediately)

XIV.
Florence Warden's A SCARBOROUGH ROMANCE: the Strange Story of Mary Grange. In paper covers, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d. (At all Bookellers and Bookstalls)

F. V. WHITE & CO. 14, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.

IN large crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. cloth extra, 1186 pages, A NEW AND POPULAR HISTORY OF ENGLAND

AND

THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

POLITICAL, CONSTITUTIONAL, NAVAL,
MILITARY, AND LITERARY,
FROM B.C. 55 TO A.D. 1890.

By EDGAR SANDERSON, M.A.

With Genealogical Tables, Contents, and Index.

With 16 Maps printed in Colours.

A Selection from the numerous Eucommiums received.

Rev. W. HAIG BROWN, D.D., Charterhouse.
"I can say that it is a valuable and well-written summary, which will be useful for school work."

Rev. J. WOOD, D.D., Tonbridge School.
"I have read a good deal of the book, and think it a very excellent piece of work. What so few school histories are, thoroughly readable and interesting."

Rev. O. D. INSKIP, M.A., Framlingham College.
"A student could not find a better book on the subject."

Rev. W. J. NEWBOLD, M.A., St. Bees School.
"I have found this new work singularly well written and interesting; gives in few words a full grasp of the particular question dealt with; and I consider it better adapted for use in upper classes for general purposes than any book I have yet read."

Mr. WALTER MOLE,
Edinburgh Civil Service College.
"It is, in my opinion, a capital work for advanced Civil Service students."

"There is need of a summary of the whole written in a brief and yet not too compressed style. Mr. J. R. Green provided us with such a work and set the example of a study of history on a more rational system than had hitherto been prevalent. There are epochs in the development of the English nation which cannot be studied properly if their history is regarded merely as an appendage to the history of its kings. The reigning dynasties were not the chief things to study in such a history. But Mr. Green's history, brilliant and interesting as it is, does not occupy the whole field, and Mr. Sanderson, who has clearly been influenced by the labours of his predecessor, has produced a book which will commend itself to many."

"It is just the book for public elementary teachers to procure. It is also a very readable book, and as such will be useful in the higher forms of our public schools. It is an unusually successful attempt to include within the limits of one thousand pages the history of the English people. One feature of special worth is a sketch of the literature of the period, which is given in nearly every book. It is evident that Mr. Sanderson has chosen good guides as authorities for his narrative, and we can commend his book as likely to supply a want among an increasing class of readers who are now in need of a reliable history."—Guardian.

"We have had several histories of modern times, but it has been left for Mr. Sanderson to tell the complete story—to embrace in a single volume our history down practically to the present moment, and to include in the narrative, in their proper places, those achievements abroad which built the existing British Empire. The manner in which this work is done is admirable. Mr. Sanderson presents his narrative in a singularly clear, forcible, scholarly style. An excellent book, which should find a place in the collection of every student or thinking, intelligent man."—Scottman.

"It is history with the modern improvements. Points once disputed but now cleared up; wild legends, pushed back into dusty oblivion; exploded fictions, and the like, are all brought into their proper places."—Churchman.

London: FREDERICK WARNE & CO.;
and New York.

OSGOOD, McILVAINE & COMPANY'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

NEW NOVEL DEALING WITH WOMAN'S REAL RIGHTS AND WRONGS IN A CLEVER ORIGINAL MANNER.

THIS DAY, AT ALL LIBRARIES,

A MODERN AMAZON.

By GEORGE PASTON. 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth.

PUBLISHED THIS DAY,

FOR HONOUR and LIFE: a Tale of the Terror. By WILLIAM WESTALL, Author of 'The Phantom City.' Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.

The BARD of the DIMBOVITZA. Roumanian Folk Songs. SECOND SERIES. Collected from the Peasants by HÉLÈNE VACARESCO. Translated by CARMEN SYLVA and ALMA STRETTTELL. With an Introduction by CARMEN SYLVA. Printed on Hand-made Paper, crown 8vo. 10s. 6d. [Just ready.]

The BARD of the DIMBOVITZA. Roumanian Folk Songs. FIRST SERIES. Collected from the Peasants by HÉLÈNE VACARESCO. Translated by CARMEN SYLVA and ALMA STRETTTELL. With an Introduction by CARMEN SYLVA. Printed on Hand-made Paper, crown 8vo. 10s. 6d. (Out of print.) New and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s. Edition de Luxe, limited to Fifty signed and numbered copies on Imperial Japan Paper, bound in vellum, 42s. (Few remain.)

"The poems have the wild melancholy and the fierce simplicity of all true popular ballads, with an undertone of ghastly mystery that reminds one of the Highland second-eight and Irish fairy tales. They are directly, passionately, fiercely human; rich with a poetic sympathy with external nature, but regarding it almost as the comrade and friend of man. There are elements of the Greek joy in all beautiful sights and sounds, but there is also a fierce love of battle and of blood, such as rings through the Nibelungen epic."—FREDERICK HARRISON, in the Fortnightly Review.

LOVE on a MORTAL LEASE. By O. SHAKESPEAR. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s. [April.]

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'IN A NORTH COUNTRY VILLAGE.'

The STORY of DAN: a Romance of Irish Peasant Life. By M. E. FRANCIS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. [Immediately.]

ONLY a DRUMMER BOY. By ARTHUR AMYAND. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. [April.]

PURIFICATION of DOLORES SILVA. By MORLEY ROBERTS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. [April.]

JUST PUBLISHED, BY THE AUTHOR OF 'TESS OF THE D'URBERVERILLES.'

LIFE'S LITTLE IRONIES: a Set of Tales, with some Colloquial Sketches, entitled 'A Few Crusted Characters.' By THOMAS HARDY. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.

NOTE.—The First Large Edition sold out a week before publication. The Second Large Edition sold out and the Third Large Edition nearly exhausted. A Fourth Large Edition in rapid preparation.

COMPANION VOLUME.

A GROUP of NOBLE DAMES. By THOMAS HARDY. Containing 'The First Countess of Wessex,' and other Tales. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s. [New Edition.]

NEEDS MUST. By AMELIA S. C. YOUNG (Pamela Sneyd). Crown 8vo. 6s.

The World says:—"A singularly clever novel. The style is terse and vivid, and there is not a page without more than one notable 'good thing.'"

HORACE CHASE. By CONSTANCE FENIMORE WOOLSON. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.

"A strong and original story, brilliantly told. The book sparkles with sprightly wit and humour; even the slightest of its character sketches are delineated with a master hand."—Daily Telegraph.

IN the MESHES. By FLORENCE SEVERNE, Author of 'The Pillar House.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"The plot is well worked out, and there are some effective scenes."—Glasgow Herald.

London OSGOOD, McILVAINE COMPANY, 45, Albemarle-street.

MESSRS. BELL'S BOOKS.

Imperial 16mo. printed at the Chiswick Press.

ENGLISH BOOK-PLATES (EX-LIBRIS). By ROBERTON CASTLE, M.A. F.S.A. Third Edition, with over 300 Examples. 10s. 6d. net.

"It is much to be feared that, unable to make certain which of Mr. Castle's volumes (i.e., the first and second editions) we prefer, and wholly unable to part with either, our choice, and that of many others, will be.....to split the difference and take both."—Saturday Review.

Fcap. 8vo. 6s.

HANDBOOK to ROBERT BROWNING'S WORKS. By Mrs. SUTHERLAND ORR. Sixth Edition, Revised, with a Bibliography.

Works by Robert Giffen, C.B. LL.D.

ESSAYS in FINANCE. Fifth Edition, Revised. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

ESSAYS in FINANCE. Second Series. Third Edition. Demy 8vo. 14s.

The GROWTH of CAPITAL. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

The CASE AGAINST BIMETALLISM. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

2 vols. imperial 8vo. buckram, 3l. 3s.

A BIBLIOGRAPHICAL and CRITICAL DICTIONARY of PAINTERS and ENGRAVERS. With a List of Cyphers, Monograms, and Marks. By MICHAEL BRYAN. Imperial 8vo. New Edition, thoroughly Revised and Enlarged, by R. E. GRAVES, of the British Museum, and WALTER ARMSTRONG, R.A., Author of 'Peter de Wint,' 'Scottish Painters,' &c.

"The new edition of Bryan is an enormous improvement on the old one, and is a book which no collector and no public library can possibly do without."—Times.

Demy 8vo. 4 vols. 3l. 3s.

TEUTONIC MYTHOLOGY. By JACOB GRIMM. Translated from the Fourth Edition, with Notes and Appendix, by JAMES STEPHEN STALLYBRASS. Vols. I. to III., 16s. each. Vol. IV. (containing Additional Notes and References, and completing the Work), 18s.

"The best extant introduction to the studies of mythology and folk-lore. A handbook for travellers abroad and observers at home."—Mr. F. YORK POWELL, in the Academy.

"These three volumes are a store of curious learning."—Spectator.

"In a volume so thickly built up of facts, it is hardly possible to say where we have derived the most instruction, as every page has been valuable to us."—Review on Vol. IV., Notes and Queries.

Fcap. 8vo. 6s. 6d.

STUDENT'S GUIDE to the UNIVERSITY of CAMBRIDGE. Fifth Edition. Rewritten.

Also in Parts.—I. Introduction. University Expenses. Non-Collegiate Students. 1s.—II. The Mathematical Tripos. 1s.—III. The Classical Tripos. 1s.—IV. Theological Examinations. 1s.—V. The Study of Law. 1s.—VI. Medicine and Surgery. 1s.—VII. Natural Science. 1s.—VIII. Moral Science. 1s.—IX. Historical Tripos. 1s.—X. Previous Examination, Poll, Degree, Local Examinations, Lectures, &c. 1s.—XI. Oriental, Medieval, and Modern Languages Triposes. 1s.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
York-street, Covent-garden.

MIDLAND EDUCATIONAL COMPANY, Ltd., BOOKMEN, BIRMINGHAM.

A List of Incomparable Large-Paper Editions and First Editions of esteemed Authors.
Many out of Print and Scarce, and all Choice and Invaluable.

Tennyson's Poems by Two Brothers, Large Paper, illustrated and bound.	2 0 0
Stevenson's Across the Plains, Large Paper, recent, very rare.	1 0 0
Barrie's Window in Thrums, Large Paper, sought after, and scarce.	2 0 0
Johnson's Teller of the Deep, Large Paper, fine and difficult to procure.	1 0 0
Monnet's Goblin Market, illustrated by Laurence Housman, Large Paper.	1 0 0
Ameyson, Thomas Stanley's Translations, illustrated by Weygand, Lawrence & Beller, cloth.	1 0 0
The same, printed throughout on vellum, very choice.	2 0 0
Catullus, Edited by S. O. Owen, illustrated by Weygand, most exquisite plates.	0 0 0
The same, printed throughout on vellum, very rare.	2 0 0
Cornwall, Walter, The Wonder Book, exquisite illustrations in colours, scarce First Edition.	1 0 0
Shakespeare by Urquhart and Morison, 2 vols., a handsome and choice edition.	3 0 0
The same, printed throughout on pure vellum, a princely volume.	6 0 0
Ship Van Winkle, 48 illustrations by Doughton, Large Paper.	1 0 0
One Norman, Mayne, and Le Gallienne, Fellowship in Song, dainty and rare.	0 10 0
The same, Large Paper, extremely rare.	0 4 0
Orchard Songs, Foreman Chase, First Edition.	0 0 0
High Thorman's Coaching Days and Coaching Ways, First Edition, recent, rare.	0 0 0
The same, gilt edges, First Edition.	0 0 0
Historic Warwickshire, Tom Harpess and Joseph Hill, Large Paper, very rare, only 300 copies done.	3 0 0
The Image of Death, introduction by Austin Dobson, printed on vellum, choice.	1 0 0
Oliphant, Mrs. Royal Edinburgh, Large Paper, fine copy.	2 0 0
Jerusalem, illustrated, Large Paper, scarce.	2 0 0
High Thorman, Sir Roger de Coverley, First Edition, small size, a choice specimen for the amateur.	0 10 0
Our Village, Milford, Large Paper, mounted, very scarce.	1 0 0
Ball Gown, Mrs. Forrester and Bickings, fine copy of the choice work, 1822.	1 0 0
Hood's Archibishop of Canterbury, 10 vols. half-morocco, gilt edges, fine set, choice.	8 0 0
Shakespeare's Dramatic Works, Revised by George Gervase, fine Large-Paper copy, issued only to subscribers, plates by Woodcut, Hamilton, and others, beautifully printed from the types of W. Martin, 8 vols. half-morocco, 1825, a copy sold by auction, extra illustrated, last year for gilt.	10 0 0

Collectors of Large-Paper Editions and First Editions of Modern Authors are invited to send their lists of wants to the Midland Educational Company, Birmingham, who will be happy to forward prices for many.

The Midland Educational Company are purchasers of Standard Works and High-Class Second-hand Books. Catalogues of Books (second-hand) in all branches of Literature will be forwarded to any address in the world on receipt of card. Catalogues of Books suitable for school prizes. Librarians are cordially invited to write for our Catalogues.

Address THE MIDLAND EDUCATIONAL COMPANY, Limited, Bookmen, Corporation-street, Birmingham.

Branches: Leicester and Leamington.

NOW READY,

Demy 4to. 15s. net; by post, 15s. 6d.

Only 750 Copies printed.

VANISHING LONDON:

A Series of Drawings illustrating some of the Old Houses in London and Westminster lately destroyed or threatened with Demolition.

WITH DESCRIPTIVE NOTES AND INDEX.

By ROLAND W. PAUL.

Examples are given from Westminster, the Strand, Fleet Street, the Temple, Lincoln's Inn, Holborn, and the City, illustrating over Sixty Old Houses, Doorways, Fireplaces, Ceilings, and other Objects of Interest.

"'Vanishing London' is the suggestive title given by Mr. Roland Paul to a handsome volume just published by himself, and containing a series of careful drawings from his own pen."—From Leading Article in Daily Telegraph, April 2nd, 1894.

"An attractive series of drawings."—Times.

"A work of much architectural interest and value."—British Architect.

"Mr. Roland Paul has done a patriotic service to Londoners in a volume of beautiful drawings which he has just published. They are produced with the greatest skill and accuracy. . . . The book is one which every patriotic Londoner will admire."—London.

Published by the Author, ROLAND W. PAUL, 18, Arundel-street, Strand, London, W.C.

THE CONTEMPORARY REVIEW.

Monthly, price Half-a-Crown.

Contents for APRIL.

THE OLD PREMIER and the NEW. By H. W. Massingham.
THE NATIONAL LOAN. By Robert Spence Watson.
THE NEW IMMORTAL—J. M. DE HEREDIA. By Edmund Gosse.
THE HOUSE OF LOUIS and BETTHERMENT. By the Duke of Argyll.
THE FINANCIAL CRISIS IN ITALY. By M. G. Malhal.
"BEFORE THE SWALLOW DABBS." By Phil Robinson.
THE EVOLUTION OF THE DAUGHTERS. By Mrs. Shannon Ames.
THE NOBIS APOTHEOSIS OF THE BRITISH ARMY. By Archibald Forbes.
PAGES IN THE HISTORY OF ALLOTMENTS. By the Rev. J. Froese Winkles.
MISTAKES ABOUT ABSTINENCE. By Archibald Fraser, D.D.
THE DIVINE RESPONSE TO HUMAN CAPACITY. By Emma Marie Child.
THE EXCAVATIONS AT BENDISCHILL. By Professor David Henry Muller.
THE PAPAL KNIGHTHOOD ON THE BIBLE. By the Author of 'The Policy of the Pope.'
London: Johnston & Co., Limited, Covent garden, W.C.

THIS DAY, AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND LIBRARIERS, THE SCOTTISH REVIEW, APRIL, 1894.

CONTENTS.
1. SIR WALTER SCOTT. By A. M. Miller.
2. THE GREAT PALACE at CONSTANTINOPLE. By J. R. Barry.
3. SCOTTISH ARMS and TARTANS. By the late J. M. Gray.
4. SPIELMANN ROMANCES—SALMAN and MOHOLF. By A. Menzies, D.D.
5. PERTHSHIRE. By J. R. Crawford.
6. MODERN MUSLIMS. By Major C. R. Conder, LL.D. R.E.
7. SCOTLAND and the UNIONIST CAUSE. By a Scottish Conservative.
8. ST. ANDREW'S MEDICAL DEBATES. By G. Fraser.
9. SUMMARIES OF FOREIGN REVIEWS.
10. CONTEMPORARY LITERATURE.
Alexander Gardner, Publisher to Her Majesty the Queen, Paisley; and H. Paterson-square, London.

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW.

APRIL 1894. Price 2s. 6d.
Abridged Contents.
FEDERAL REMINISCENCES OF THE VATICAN COUNCIL. By His Eminence Cardinal Gibbons.
NEW PARTIES IN PARLIAMENT. By Justin McCarthy, M.P.
PRIVATE HISTORY OF THE "JUMPING FROG" STORY. By Mark Twain.
FORGIVENESS as a PROFESSION. By Robert A. Fickerton.
AN ANGLO-AMERICAN ALLIANCE. By Arthur C. White.
HOW WE RESTRICT IMMIGRATION. By Dr. Joseph H. Sanner (United States Commissioner of Immigration).
London: Wm. Heinemann, 2, Bedford-street, W.C.

LE CORRESPONDANT.

Revue Périodique paraissant le 10 et le 20 de chaque mois.
1. UN DIPLOMATE A LONDRES (1871-1877). Lettres et Impressions. Charles Gavard.
2. LE PREMIER JAPON M. DESSERT.
3. LE PRINCE DE JOUVILLE et le MARINE FRANÇAISE. TH. FROMENT.
4. LE ROMAN DE GRAND MOI, d'après des Documents inédits. III. Lucien Puy.
5. LA RÉACTION ACTUELLE contre le POSITIVISME: Recherche de la Cause de l'écueil de l'écueil. IV. Abbé de Bréville.
6. AN GHE JOE CHIMERS. III. A. M. Gaudin.
7. LES COMÉDIES RÉVOLUTIONNAIRES: Le Théâtre-Français. I. Palma. Victor Fournier.
8. REVUE LITTÉRAIRE DE L'ÉTRANGER. Allemagne, Italie.
9. REVUE des MÉTIERS. Henri de Parville.
10. CHRONIQUE POLITIQUE. Louis Jourdain.
Prix de l'abonnement: Paris, Département de l'étranger, un an, 10 fr., six mois, 5 fr. Les abonnements partent du 1er de chaque mois. On s'abonne à Paris, aux bureaux de Correspondant, rue de l'Abbaye, 14, dans tous les bureaux de poste et chez tous les Libraires des Départements; ou on s'abonne directement au mandats poste à M. Jules Gervais, créant du Correspondant, 14, rue de l'Abbaye.
London: M. King William-street, Strand, Charing Cross.

Price 1s. post free.
DEAFNESS: its Treatment by Massage (Hemmi's Method), Baths, and Remedial Agents. With Cases of Nervous Deafness. By M. T. COOPER, M.A. M.D.
London: James Epps & Co., Limited, 170, Fleet-street, and 44, Threadneedle-street.

LATEST PUBLICATIONS OF THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY OF LONDON.

TRANSACTIONS, Vol. XIII., Part 8, price 12s., containing the following papers:—On Remains of an Extinct Giant Tortoise from Madagascar. Treated grandifolia. Vallant, by G. A. BOURLENGER. With 3 Plates. On the Remains of some Giant Land Tortoises, and of an Extinct Lizard recently discovered in Mauritania. By HANS GAUDIN, F.R.S. With 3 Plates.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY OF LONDON, 1893, Part 4, containing the Papers read at the Scientific Meetings held in November and December last. With 15 Plates, price 1s.

To be obtained at the Society's Office, 2, Manchester-square, W.; or through any Bookseller.

J. W. ARROWSMITH'S THREE-and-SIXPENNY SERIES.

Crown 8vo. Vol. XVIII.
THE PRISONER OF ZENDA.
By ANTHONY HOPE.

One of our leading Novels says—"It is capital stuff. The plot is high-spirited, and worked out with very gallant good breeding. I balanced it and then turned back and read it again."
Mr. Anthony Hope may justly be invited to look with pride and pleasure upon the brilliant novel he has contributed to the Arrowsmith's 3d Series. It is one of those novels that, moving to with keen delight, and grateful hearts, leaving to read the author a warm vote of approval. It is a novel that is more difficult to find than fresh fields for fiction, and when we chance across a novelist who seems with every new effort to strike the unworked, we should do something to encourage him."—Morning Leader.
Written: J. W. Arrowsmith.
London: Simpkins, Marshall & Co., Ltd., and Railway Bookshops.

IMPORTANT NEW WORK BY SIR ROBERT S. BALL, F.R.S., Professor of Astronomy and Geometry at the University of Cambridge.

AN ATLAS OF ASTRONOMY.

Containing 75 beautifully executed Plates.
With Explanatory Letterpress and Complete Index.
Small size, handsome cloth gilt cover (designed by Walter Crane), gilt edges, price 12s.

The Times says:—"The atlas is admirably adapted to meet the needs and smooth the difficulties of young and inexperienced students of astronomy, as well as materially to assist the recollections of those who are more advanced."

George Philip & Son.
London: 25, First-street. Liverpool: 45 to 48, South Castle-street.

First 8vo. 7s. 6d. cloth.
BIRDS and the BARDS. Selected from various Poets and Arranged by F. NOEL PATON. With 10 Illustrations by Mrs. Hugh Mackintosh and Robert Paton.

12mo. cloth, 1s. 6d.
SAYINGS (The) of the LORD JESUS CHRIST. Selected and Arranged from the Four Evangelists by J. W. MACKAIL, Esq.
Robert & Turner, 4, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.

Second Edition, price 3s. 6d. cloth.
REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.
"Well adapted to accomplish their purpose."
Dr. R. A. Gortch, Editor of the Astronomical Journal.
Edward Stanford, 20 and 22, Chancery-lane, Chancery-lane, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.

NOTES and QUERIES for DECEMBER 10th and 20th, 1893, and JANUARY 1st and 21st, 1894, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of MR. GLADSTONE.
Price of the Four Numbers, 1s. 4d.; or free by post, 1s. 6d.
John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Broad's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL OF BEACONSFIELD, 1830 to 1892.

NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 13th, 20th, JUNE 10th, 24th, and JULY 6th, 1894, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL OF BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEYS to 'VIVIAN GREY,' 'COMINGSTON,' 'LOTHAIR,' and 'ENDYMION.'
Price of the Six Numbers, 2s.; or free by post, 2s. 3d.
John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Broad's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

W. C. BENNETT'S POEMS.

The GOLDEN LIBRARY.—Square 12mo. cloth, 1s.

SONGS for SAILORS.

Morning Post—"Spirited, manly, and vigorously graphic."
Daily News—"Very spirited."
Pall Mall Gazette—"Really admirable."
Morning Advertiser—"Rare of a wide popularity."
John Bull—"Very successful."
Examiner—"Full of incidents and strongly expressed sentiment, and having a simple, pleasing, musical roll and movement that rendered us of some songs that are favourable with all sailors, and the touches of humour he introduces are precisely of the kind that they will relish."
Graphic—"We may fairly say that Dr. Bennett has taken up the mantle of Heine."
Standard—"Dr. Bennett's heart is thoroughly in his work. . . . All spirited and vigorous. There is a healthy, manly, frankness about them which ought to make them popular with the class for whose use and pleasure they are designed."
Nonconformist—"These songs bear a true literary mark, and give us the genuine ring."
Literary World—"It seems to quiver the pulse of our national life. It is to be hoped these spirit-stirring songs may be sung in all parts of the world by our gallant tars north and south, east and west—wherever, in short, the Union Jack flies proudly over the sea. We heartily commend Dr. Bennett's 'Songs for Sailors' to the public at large."
Mirror—"With admirable facility he embodies national sentiments and emotions which stir the hearts of the people."
Lancet Mercury—"There is no one nowadays who can compose with Dr. Bennett at a popular song-writer. In his volume of sea songs we find the qualities which must secure its success."
Liverpool Mail—"Dr. Bennett has devoted his lyrical powers to a noble object in this comprehensive yet unobtrusive work. This gem deserves to be patronized not only by our sailors Royal Navy, but by all our sailors' homes and all our Mercantile Marine Associations."
Echo—"These songs are literally written for sailors, and they are precisely the kind of songs that sailors most enjoy."
Metropolitan—"Interlarded with patriotic song."
Illustrated London News—"Right well done."
Jones of the World—"There is real poetry in these songs."

Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.

PROMETHEUS the FIRE-GIVER. An Attempted Restoration of the Lost First Part of the Trilogy of Hesiod.

The GOLDEN LIBRARY.—Square 12mo. cloth, 1s.
CONTRIBUTIONS to a BALLAD HISTORY of ENGLAND.
Athenaeum—"These ballads are spirited and stirring, such as 'The Fall of Harlequin Harlequin,' 'Old Harlowe's March,' and 'Corporal John,' the editor's name for the famous Duke of Marlborough, which is a specially good ballad. 'Queen Elizabeth's Vengeance' is a vividly told story. . . . The ballads are excellently well edited and set out. A book of ballads, interesting to all who have British blood in their veins. Dr. Bennett's contribution will be welcome. Dr. Bennett's ballads will leave a strong impression on the memory of those who read them."

Christie & Windsor, Piccadilly.

New and Cheaper Edition, price Two Shillings.
CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of
 Astronomy. Eighth Edition. With 3 Plates. By W. T. LYNN,
 R.A. F.R.A.S.
 "Has, we are glad to see, reached an eighth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the facts of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian.
 Edward Stanford, 35 and 37, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

ALLEN'S SOLID LEATHER
 PORTMANTEAUS.
 ALLEN'S VICTORIA DRESSING BAG.
 ALLEN'S STRONG DRESS BASKETS.
 ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE, post free.
 37, West Strand, London. Discount 10 per cent.

Just published, at all Libraries and Booksellers', demy 8vo. pp. 246, cloth gilt, 6s.

FALLEN ANGELS.

A Disquisition upon Human Existence, an Attempt to Elucidate some of its Mysteries, especially those of Evil and Suffering.

By ONE OF THEM.

London: GAY & BIRD, 5, Chandos-street, Strand.

REMINGTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS', BOOKSTALLS, AND LIBRARIES.

Libres! Libres! Libres! Vient de paraître, le recueil le plus fantastique du XIX^{me} Siècle.

PASSAGES TIRES des MEMOIRES INEDITS du MARQUIS. Récapitulation graphique des événements de l'émouvante et sanglante période de la Révolution Française. Cet ouvrage remarquable est l'épilogue en miniature des causes et des effets de la grande Révolution Française. Lire 'Mémoires Inédits du Marquis de —' Par WALTER HERRIES POLLOCK. Bound in vellum, 2s. 6d.

PICTURES of the WORLD. Pencilled by CLEMENT SCOTT. Crown 8vo. cloth, illustrated, 3s. 6d. [Just out.]
 The DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—"In every sense this is a book for holiday reading, as it is full of vivacity and good spirit, and presents a series of pictures of travel which makes one long to follow the footsteps of the author and shake the dust of metropolitan civilization from one's feet."
 BY HENRY HERMAN.

A KING in BOHEMIA. By the Author of 'Engle Joe,' 'His Angel,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d. [Just out.]
 The GLASGOW HERALD says:—"A King in Bohemia" is a well-written, pathetic story."

A LIFE of BENITO JUAREZ, Constitutional President of Mexico. By ULICK RALPH BURKE, Author of 'A Life of Goncalvo de Cordova,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. With Portrait of Benito Juarez.
 The TIMES says:—"It is not without considerable intrinsic interest and a certain amount of dramatic intensity which is rare in modern affairs. He has diligently studied the available materials, and tells his story with considerable spirit, presenting Juarez as an inflexible patriot of heroic mould, and Maximilian as the weak and contemptible tool of an unscrupulous gang of foreign brigands."

GUNNER JINGO'S JUBILEE. By Major-General TOM BLAND STRANGE (late R.A.). With 15 Full-Page Illustrations, Plans, Maps, and numerous thumb-nail Sketches. Demy 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d. [Just ready.]
 The LITERARY WORLD says:—"Gunner Jingo's Jubilee" is the title chosen for a volume of over 300 pages of an interesting and entertaining military adventures as one could wish to read."

The MARK TWAIN BIRTHDAY BOOK. Cloth, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.
 The DAILY CHRONICLE says:—"The quotations from the works of the American humorist will be found full of drollery."

A NOTABLE WOMAN, and other Sketches. By MILICENT ERSKINE WEMYSS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.
 The MORNING POST says:—"It is full of interest, and merits an honorable place in the historical literature of the day."

The PERSIAN VIZIER, and other Poems. By F. H. CLIFFE, Author of 'The Fatal Ring,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

A PAGE of LIFE. By JULIAN SMITH. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d.

REMINGTON & Co. (Limited), King-street, Covent-garden, and Sydney.

SEELEY & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

Cloth, 2s. 6d.

A BRIEF ACCOUNT of WESTMINSTER ABBEY. By W. J. Loftie. New and Abridged Edition. With 30 Illustrations. Large crown 8vo.

Cloth, 1s.

The PLEDGES of HIS LOVE. Thoughts on the Holy Communion. By Rev. H. G. C. MOULE.

Cloth, 3s. 6d.

ROUND MY HOUSE. Notes on Rural Life in France in Peace and War. By P. G. HAMERTON. New and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo.

Sewn, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

The FIRST LIGHT on the EDDYSTONE. A Story of 200 Years Ago. By EMMA MARSHALL. Crown 8vo.

Price HALF-A-CROWN Monthly,

THE PORTFOLIO.

Edited by P. G. HAMERTON.

THE SUBJECT FOR APRIL IS

JULES BASTIEN-LEPAGE.

By JULIA CARTWRIGHT (Mrs. Henry Ady).

"The clever authoress has done her work excellently well, and has written a bright and vivid chronicle of the great painter's brief career."—Black and White.

SEELEY & CO., LIMITED, Essex-street, Strand.

RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE COMPANY INSURES AGAINST RAILWAY ACCIDENTS,
 PERSONAL ACCIDENTS,
 EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY.
 Capital, 1,000,000. Established 1840.
 64, COBURNHILL, LONDON.
 W. D. MANN, } Secretaries.
 A. VIAN, }

ANOBNIUM ERODITUM, the devouring book-worm, turns up his nose at STICKFAST PASTE.
 All Stationers, 6d. and 1s. Large size, 1s. 3d. by parcel post, from Factory, Sugar-Loaf-court, Londonhall-street, E.C.

THE MARLBOROUGH PATENT ADJUSTABLE BOOK COVER.

PAPER COVERS TO FIT VOLUMES OF ANY ORDINARY THICKNESS.

No. Inches.	For des.	No. Inches.	For des.
17-8 by 4	 1 0	25-3 by 4	 1 0
18-0 by 4	 1 0	25-8 by 4	 1 0
19-7 by 4	 1 0	26-0 by 4	 1 0
20-7 by 4	 1 0	26-0 by 4	 1 0
22-7 by 5	 1 0	26-0 by 4	 1 0

Specimen Box of assorted sizes, containing 12 complete Covers, price 1s., or by post, 1s. 3d.

SUPPLIED BY ALL STATIONERS.

Wholesale: MARLBOROUGH, GOULD & CO., 20, Old Bailey, London.

GUARANTEED SPECIALITIES OF THE

SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.

Manufactured in three sizes, at 10s. 6d., 16s. 6d., and 25s. each. For a Present or Memento you could not give a more faithful, ready, or willing friend than a SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.

1. 14-carat Gold—therefore never corrodes.
2. Iridium tipped—therefore never wears out.
3. Instantly ready for use.
4. Writes continuously to many hours.
5. Economical—outlasting 20,000 steel pens.
6. Saves fully 15s. in cost of steel pens and ink pots.
7. Ink in reservoir always limpid—no evaporation.
8. For every writer in every land a necessity.

FINALLY.

A pen as nearly perfect as the inventive skill of the day can produce.

FOR WEDDING AND COMPLIMENTARY PRESENTS, THE IDEAL OBJECT.

We only require your steel pen and handwriting to guide us in selecting a pen.

GOLD PENS, IRIIDIUM TIPPED.
 Everlasting Wear.

GOLD PENS, IRIIDIUM TIPPED.
 From 4s. to 19s. each.

GOLD PENS, IRIIDIUM TIPPED.
 Short, Long, Broad, Fine Nibs.

GOLD PENS, IRIIDIUM TIPPED.
 Made to suit your Handwriting.

Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application.

MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.; or 95A, REGENT-STREET, W.

USE

"VINOLIA" CREAM, SOAP,

AND POWDER

FOR FACE SPOTS.

EPPS'S COCOA, WITH BOILING MILK.

GRATEFUL and COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST and SUPPER.

EPPS'S COCOA, WITH BOILING WATER.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEADACHE, and INDIGESTION. HENRY'S BATH, GOUT, and other Ailments for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Labourers.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

CHAPMAN & HALL'S NEW BOOKS.

LORD WOLVERTON.

FIVE MONTHS' SPORT in SOMALILAND. By Lord WOLVERTON. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. [Next week.

REV. H. N. HUTCHINSON, F.G.S.

CREATURES of OTHER DAYS. By Rev. H. N. HUTCHINSON, F.G.S., Author of 'Extinct Monsters.' With Illustrations by J. Smit. Large crown 8vo. [Next week.

W. S. LILLY.

The CLAIMS of CHRISTIANITY. By W. S. LILLY, Author of 'Ancient Religion and Modern Thought.' Demy 8vo. [Nearly ready.

BULA N'ZAU.

TRAVEL and ADVENTURE in the CONGO FREE STATE and its BIG-GAME SHOOTING. By BULA N'ZAU. With Illustrations from the Author's Sketches. Demy 8vo. [Nearly ready.

JOHN FISKE.

EDWARD LIVINGSTON YOUNG: Interpreter of Science to the People. A Sketch from his Published Writings and Extracts from his Correspondence with Spencer, Huxley, Tyndall, and others. By JOHN FISKE. Crown 8vo. [Next week.

A. R. AND THE HON. MRS. WIEL.

DESIGNS for CHURCH EMBROIDERY. By A. R. and the Hon. Mrs. WIEL. With numerous Illustrations. Demy 4to. [Nearly ready.

FRANK G. JACKSON.

THEORY and PRACTICE of DESIGN. By FRANK G. JACKSON, Author of 'Decorative Design.' With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. [In the press.

F. G. JACKSON.

DECORATIVE DESIGN. An Elementary Text-Book of Principles and Practice. By F. G. JACKSON. Fully illustrated. Large crown 8vo. [Third Edition next week.

MARGARET STOKES.

EARLY CHRISTIAN ART in IRELAND. By MARGARET STOKES. With 106 Woodcuts. Crown 8vo. [New Edition in the press.

HERBERT SPENCER.

APHORISMS from the WRITINGS of HERBERT SPENCER. Selected by JULIA RAYMOND GINGELL. With Portrait of Herbert Spencer. Crown 8vo. 3s. [New Edition in the press.

SAMUEL LAING.

PROBLEMS of the FUTURE and ESSAYS. Demy 8vo. [Thirteenth Thousand in the press.

SAMUEL LAING.

HUMAN ORIGINS: Evidence from History and Science. With Illustrations. Demy 8vo. [Twelfth Thousand in the press.

SAMUEL LAING.

MODERN SCIENCE and MODERN THOUGHT. Demy 8vo. [Nineteenth Thousand in the press.

NEW NOVELS.

H. C. CHATFIELD-TAYLOR.

AN AMERICAN PEERESS: a Novel.

By C. H. CHATFIELD-TAYLOR.

2 vols. crown 8vo.

[This day.

BESSIE HATTON.

ENID LYLE.

By BESSIE HATTON.

2 vols. crown 8vo.

[This day.

MAURUS JOKAI.

'MIDST THE WILD CARPATHIANS.

By MAURUS JOKAI.

Translated by R. NISBET BAIN.

Crown 8vo.

[Nearly ready.

GEORGE MEREDITH'S WORKS.

UNIFORM EDITION. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. each and 6s. each.

One of Our Conquerors.

Diana of the Crossways.

Evan Harrington.

The Ordeal of Richard Feverel.

The Adventures of Harry Richmond.

Sandra Belloni.

Vittoria.

Rhoda Fleming.

Beauchamp's Career.

The Egoist.

The Shaving of Shagpat; and Farina.

CHARLES DICKENS'S WORKS.

THE HALF-CROWN EDITION.

Containing the whole of the Original Illustrations. Complete in 21 vols. crown 8vo. 2s. 6d. each.

The Pickwick Papers.

Barnaby Rudge: a Tale of the Riots of 'Eighty.

Oliver Twist.

The Old Curiosity Shop.

David Copperfield.

Nicholas Nickleby.

Martin Chuzzlewit.

Dombey and Son.

Sketches by "Boz."

Christmas Books.

Bleak House.

Little Dorrit.

Christmas Stories from Household Words.

American Notes and Reprinted Pieces.

Hard Times and Pictures from Italy.

A Child's History of England.

Great Expectations.

A Tale of Two Cities.

Uncommercial Traveller.

Our Mutual Friend.

Edwin Drood, and other Stories.

THOMAS CARLYLE'S WORKS.

PEOPLE'S EDITION, 37 vols. small crown 8vo. 1s. each.

Sartor Resartus. With Portrait of Thomas Carlyle.

French Revolution. 3 vols.

Oliver Cromwell's Letters and Speeches. 3 vols. With Portrait of Oliver Cromwell.

On Heroes and Hero-Worship.

Past and Present.

Critical and Miscellaneous Essays. 7 vols.

The Life of Schiller. With Portrait.

Latter-Day Pamphlets.

Wilhelm Meister. 3 vols.

Life of John Sterling. With Portrait.

History of Frederick the Great. 10 vols.

Translations from Musæus, Tieck, and Richter. 2 vols.

The Early Kings of Norway; Essay on the Portraits of Knox.

CHAPMAN & HALL, LIMITED, London.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Broom's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C. Printed by JOHN C. FRANCIS, Albemarle Press, Broom's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C., and Published by the said JOHN C. FRANCIS at Broom's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C. Agents for Scotland, Messrs. Bell & Bradburn and Mr. John Macdonald, Edinburgh.—Saturday, April 14, 1904.

4

4

PRICE
THREEPENCE
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France :—

AMENS, ANTWERP, BRACILU-GUE-MER, BIAIRITE, BO-DRAUX, BOLLONGNE-GUE-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUN-KIRK, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOUL, TOULON.

And at the GALIGNANI LIBRARY, 790, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

A. P. WATT & SON BEG to ANNOUNCE that they have REMOVED from 2, PATERNOSTER SQUARE to HASTINGS HOUSE, 15, NORFOLK STREET, STRAND, W.C.

GROCKERS' COMPANY.

The Scholarships, Three in number, each of the value of 200*l.*, and open only to British Subjects, have been instituted by the Company as an encouragement to the making of great Discoveries into the Nature

Applications may be made at any time before the end of April, by letter addressed to the CLERK OF THE COMPTON, Grocers' Hall, Finsbury Street, E.C. from whom particulars may be obtained.

April 1994

EDUCATION.—Particulars as to best University or Army Tutor, and Schools for Boys or Girls, at Home or Abroad, may be obtained, free of charge, by sending a statement of requirements to R. J. BRYAN, M.A., & Lancaster-place, Strand.

LIAMPSTEAD.—Professor REGINALD STUART

POOLER, LTD., highly RECOMMENDED as EDUCATIONAL HOME at Hampstead for the DAUGHTERS OF GENTLEMEN, conducted by Two cultured Ladies of varied experience; with High University Honours; The Educational advantages of London used to the best effect. Care of health. No overpressure. Tenable. Highest references.—M. E. Howatson's Library, High-street, Hampstead, London.

MOUNT VIEW, HAMPSTEAD.—The NEXT

M TEAM will begin on THURSDAY, May 30.—Reference kindly allowed to Mrs. Hanson, Lambeth Palace, Professor Martin, Broadwood, Cloniston; Sir Agnesore Wells, Golder's Hill, Hampstead.—For prospectus on application to Miss Helen E. Mayne.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINA

ATTENTION to all up not less than Seven Resident and Five Non Resident QUINCY SCHOLARSHIPS and several valuable EXHIBITIONS will take place in JULY NEXT - Detailed information may be obtained from the Head Master, Dean's-yard, Westminster.

DELSIZE COLLEGE, HAMPSTEAD

43, Holme Park gardens, London, N.W. Established 1871.
Classes for General Education, under the teaching and supervision the Principals, Assistant Principals and Foreign Governments (fully qualified) Pupils prepared for University Examinations, &c. Entire charge taken of Pupils from India and the Colonies.

Professors and Lecturers in attendance:—
 English Language and Literature: J. M. MCKENNINGTON, Esq.

FR 68 - Ancient and Modern History. H. N. MALDEN, Esq. M.A.
FR Hist. - Science. H. CAMPBELL, Esq. M.D. MRCP - French.

French Master at the Royal Naval College, Greenwich, and occasional Examiner to H.M. Civil Service Commission. — German, Dr C. REINER, University of Göttingen and City of London College.
Italian Signor RINALDI, City of London College. — Landscapes, Perspective.

and Model Drawing from the (Dead and Living Model, in Oil and Water Colours. ALFRED STANLEY Reg., Miss HOFFE—Mansueto. WALTER MAGNANIMUS Reg., Miss WALTER KUTSCH Reg., Miss HAN—S.

MAULFELDER, Ray, R.A.M. — WARDEN, VERNON, Ray, R.A.M.
 Singing (Choral Singing). R. H. CUMMINGS, Ray, R.A.M. — Elocution
 Mrs. HATCLIFFE — Harp. F. LOCKWOOD, Ray — Viola, M. L.
 ROBERTS, Ray — Dancing and Calliothene, Mrs. BURCH.

For terms, references, etc., apply to the Publisher.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.-

FACULTY OF MEDICINE.—The SUMMER SESSION begins MAY 1. The work is arranged so that a student may advantageously begin his Medical Course in June. —Full information may be obtained

Y. A. H. HOSKIN, M. D., D.S. P.R.C., Dean of the Faculty

J. M. HOSKINSON, M.A., Secretary.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S HOSPITAL COLLEGE.

The Hospital contains a service of 700 beds (including 75 for long-term patients). Students may reside in the College within

SCHOLARSHIPS and PRIZES of the aggregate value of over $1000 a

For full particulars apply to the Warden of the College, St. M.

A Handbook forwarded on application.

WESTMINSTER HOSPITAL MEDICAL

W SCHOOL, Canton-street, W
The SUMMER SESSION will BEGIN on MAY 1.

NATURAL SCIENCE ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS.
The subjects for the SENIOR SCHOLARSHIP, value $50., are:

The subjects for the RUTHERFORD ALEXANDER and GOVERNOR ARTHUR ALEXANDER scholarships are Chemistry and Physics, according

DIPLOMA IN PUBLIC HEALTH—LABORATORY WORK.

CHEMISTRY - Dr. Hake
PHYSICS - Mr. Remerville

BACTERIOLOGY—Dr. Hissail.
A special Bacteriological Laboratory has been fitted up and placed under the charge of Dr. Hissail.

A Prospectus forwarded, and all particulars to be obtained on application.

1 million to WALTER G. SPENCER, JR.

Digitized by C

Тема:

NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

—
NOW READY,

A New Novel by

RHODA BROUGHTON.

A BEGINNER.

BY THE

AUTHOR OF 'RED AS A ROSE IS

SHE,' 'NANCY,' &c.

In 1 volume, crown 8vo. 6s.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'MASTERS OF THE WORLD,' &c.

THOROUGH. By Mary A. M. Marks.
In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

JUST READY,

IF MEN WERE WISE. By E. L.
SHAW. In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

The GREATER GLORY. By
MAARTEN MAARTENS, Author of 'An Old
Maid's Love,' 'The Sin of Joost Avelingh,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

NOW READY,

The DAUGHTER of the NEZ
PERCÉS. By ARTHUR PATERSON, Author of 'A Partner from the West,' &c. 2 vols.
crown 8vo.

In preparation, a THIRD EDITION of

DIANA TEMPEST. By Mary Cholmondeley, Author of 'The Danvers Jewels,'
'Sir Charles Danvers,' &c.

NOW READY,

A DEVOTED COUPLE. By J.
MASTERMAN, Author of 'The Scots of Best-minster.' 3 vols. crown 8vo.

NOW READY,

EVE'S APPLE. By M. Deane.
2 vols. crown 8vo.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

SOCIAL EVOLUTION. By Benjamin Kidd. Second Edition.
8vo. 10s. net.

TOWN LIFE in the FIFTEENTH CENTURY. By Mrs. J. R.
GREEN. 2 vols. 8vo. 32s.

DAILY NEWS.—"Mrs. Green's learned, most attractive, and in every way admirable book.....One of the most original and valuable histories which have appeared in England for many years."
DAILY CHRONICLE.—"Mrs. Green's book is learned enough for a whole faculty of professors, while it is irradiated by a humour and sympathy which comes from a brighter atmosphere than that of the common-room."
TIMES.—"It is an important, instructive, and picturesque contribution, almost the first of its kind, to an unservedly neglected branch of English history."
WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"She has put together a sketch of the life of towns, in the pride of their manhood in the fifteenth century, which is of the greatest possible interest in itself, and will be invaluable as the starting-point of those who may hereafter trace their earlier development.....Mrs. Green has caught no small portion of the spirit and the fire which made the 'Short History' an epic poem."

A SHORT HISTORY of the ENGLISH PEOPLE. By J. R.
GREEN, M.A. Illustrated Edition. Edited by Mrs. J. R. GREEN and Miss KATE MORGATE. In 4 vols.
(Volumes I., II., and III. now ready.) Super-royal 8vo. 12s. net each vol.

FALL MALL GAZETTE.—"Altogether this edition of the 'History' will be far and away the best that has been published."
DAILY CHRONICLE.—"We welcome with unmixed satisfaction the appearance of the late Mr. Green's 'Short History of England' in a form worthy of that monumental work."

The FLOWER of FORGIVENESS, and other Stories. By Flora
ANNIE STEHL. 2 vols. Globe 8vo. 12s.

A MODERN BUCCANEER. By Rolf Boldrewood. 3 vols.
Crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

A VALIANT IGNORANCE. By Mary Angela Dickens. 3 vols.
Crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

KATHARINE LAUDERDALE. By F. Marion Crawford. 3 vols.
Crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

PUNCH.—"Admirable in its simple pathos, its unforced humour, and, above all, in its truth to human nature..... There is not a tedious page or paragraph in the three volumes."
MORNING POST.—"The story has depth of feeling as well as distinction of style, and, above all, it is very human."
WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"A most admirable novel, excellent in style, flashing with humour, and full of the ripest and wisest reflections upon men and women."
DAILY CHRONICLE.—"Mr. Crawford has scored another success.....His characters interest us quite as much when he is telling us about them as when they are telling us about themselves."

MACMILLAN'S SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.—NEW VOLUMES.

MARION DARCHE. By F. Marion Crawford. Crown 8vo. 6s.
NATIONAL REVIEW.—"Eminently charming, entertaining, and readable from beginning to end."
SATURDAY REVIEW.—"Charming in style, and very easy to read."

PIETRO GHISLERI. By F. Marion Crawford. Crown 8vo. 6s.

ATHENÆUM.—"There are no dull pages in this elaborate and engrossing study of contemporary manners and morals."
SPEAKER.—"Mr. Crawford is an artist, and a great one, and he has been brilliantly successful in a task in which ninety-nine out of every hundred writers would have failed."

ESSAYS in HISTORICAL CHEMISTRY. By T. E. Thorpe,
Ph.D. B.Sc. (Vict.), Sc.D. (Dub.), F.R.S., Professor of Chemistry in the Royal College of Science, South Kensington, London. Crown 8vo. 6s. 6d. net.

Mr. PATRICK MUIR in NATURE.—"I fancy that most people who take up the book, if they have some little acquaintance with chemistry, will not care to put it down till they have read it through; and that those who dip into it, knowing no chemistry, will determine to become more familiar with this, the most fascinating and the most human of the sciences."

A MANUAL of MICROCHEMICAL ANALYSIS. By Prof. H.
DENHENS, of the Polytechnic School in Delft, Holland. With an Introductory Chapter by J. W. JUDD, F.R.S.,
Professor of Geology at the Royal College of Science. With 84 Illustrations drawn by the Author. Crown 8vo. 6s.

A TREATISE on HYDROSTATICS. By Alfred George Greenhill,
F.R.S., Professor of Mathematics in the Artillery College, Woolwich. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

SCOTSMAN.—"The work gives a clearly-exposed and well-graded exposition of its subject, and proceeds generally by a method of constant exemplification. This practical system makes the book as useful to working engineers as to theoretical students."

LECTURES MARITIMES. For the Use of Naval Cadets on Board H.M.S. "Britannia." By LEON DELBOS, M.A., Instructor in French, H.M.S. "Britannia." Globe 8vo. 2s. net.

ELEMENTARY COMMERCIAL CLASS-BOOKS.—NEW VOLUME.

INTRODUCTION to COMMERCIAL SPANISH. By Leon
DELBOS, M.A., Instructor H.M.S. "Britannia." Globe 8vo. 3s. 6d.

ELEMENTARY CLASSICS.—NEW VOLUMES. Pott 8vo. 1s. 6d. each Volume.

The TWENTY-FOURTH BOOK of the ILIAD. Edited, with Notes, Introduction, and Vocabulary, by WALTER LEAF, LL.D., late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, and
M. A. RAYFIELD, M.A., Head Master of Christ College, Brecon.

SELECTIONS from QUINTUS CURTIUS. Adapted for the Use of Beginners. With Vocabulary, Notes, and Exercises. Edited by P. COVERLEY SMITH, B.A., Assistant Master in the High School, Nottingham.

FOREIGN SCHOOL CLASSICS.—NEW VOLUME.

COLOMBA. By Prosper Merimee. Edited, with Introduction
and Notes, by G. E. FASNAUGHT. Pott 8vo. 2s.

ENGLISH CLASSICS.—NEW VOLUMES.

SCOTT.—The LADY of the LAKE. Canto I. With Introduction and Notes by G. H. STUART, M.A., Principal and Professor of English, Kumbakonam College. Globe 8vo.
sewed, 6d.

COWPER.—The TASK, Book IV. With Introduction and Notes
by W. T. WEBB, M.A., late Professor of English Literature, Presidency College, Calcutta. Globe 8vo. sewed, 1s.

MACMILLAN & CO. London.

CHARLES GRIFFIN & COMPANY'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

STANDARD SCIENTIFIC WORKS.
NEW METALLURGICAL SERIES.

Edited by W. C. ROBERTS-AUSTEN, C.B., F.R.S., Chemist and Assayer of the Royal Mint, Professor of Metallurgy in the Royal College of Science.

In large 8vo. handsome cloth. With Illustrations.

1. INTRODUCTION to the STUDY of METALLURGY. By the EDITOR. THIRD EDITION. 12s. 6d. (New ready.)

"No English text-book at all approaches this in the completeness with which the most modern views on the subject are dealt with. Professor Austen's volume will be invaluable."—Chemical News.

2. GOLD. By THOS. KIRKE ROSE, B.Sc., Assoc. R.S.M., Assist. Assayer of the Royal Mint. 21s. (New ready.)

Will be published at short intervals.

3. COPPER. By THOS. GIBB, Assoc. R.S.M.

4. IRON and STEEL. By THOS. TURNER, Assoc. R.S.M., Director of Technical Education for Staffordshire.

5. METALLURGICAL MACHINERY. By H. C. JENKINS, Wh.Sc., Assoc. R.S.M., Assoc. M.Inst.C.E., of the Royal Mint.

6. ALLOYS. By the Editor.

*. Other Volumes in preparation.

TENTH EDITION, Revised and Enlarged, leather, 8s. 6d.

A POCKET-BOOK OF ELECTRICAL RULES AND TABLES.

For the Use of Electricians and Engineers.

By JOHN MUNRO, C.E.,

AND

ANDREW JAMIESON, F.R.S.E. M.I.C.E. M.I.E.E.

"Wonderfully perfect.....Worthy of the highest commendation we can give it."—Electrician.

In crown 8vo. extra, illustrated, Fourth Edition, cloth, 7s. 6d.

MINE SURVEYING (A TEXT-BOOK OF).

For the Use of Managers of Mines and Collieries, Students at the Royal School of Mines, City and Guilds of London Institute, &c.

By BENNETT H. BROUGH, F.G.S.,

Formerly Instructor of Mine-Surveying, Royal School of Mines.

"It is the kind of book which has long been wanted, and no English-speaking Mine Agent or Mining Student will consider his technical library complete without it."—Nature.

THE MEAN DENSITY OF THE EARTH:

An Essay to which the Adams Prize was adjudged in 1893 in the University of Cambridge.

In large 8vo. with Bibliography, Illustrations in the Text, and 7 Lithographed Plates, 12s. 6d.

By J. H. POYNTING, Sc.D. F.R.S.,

Late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, Professor of Physics,
Mason College, Birmingham.

THIRD EDITION, 21s. In folio, half bound.

Published with Concurrence of the Surveyors-General for New South Wales and Victoria.

TRAVERSE TABLES:

Computed to Four Places Decimals for every Minute of Angle up to 100 of Distance.
For the Use of Surveyors and Engineers.

By RICHARD LLOYD GURDEN,

Authorised Surveyor for the Governments of New South Wales and Victoria.

SECOND REVISED AND ENLARGED EDITION.

With Illustrations in the Text, and 37 Plates, large 8vo. now ready, 30s.

SEWAGE DISPOSAL WORKS.

A GUIDE TO THE CONSTRUCTION OF WORKS FOR THE PREVENTION OF THE POLLUTION BY SEWAGE OF RIVERS AND ESTUARIES.

By W. SANTO CRIMP, M.I.C.E., &c.,

Late Assistant Engineer to the London County Council.

*. To the NEW EDITION are added Maps and Plans illustrative of the Sewage Disposal Systems of LONDON and BERLIN.

"The MOST COMPLETE and BEST TREATISE on the subject which has appeared in our language, and a most valuable addition to the Standard Works on the subject."

—Edinburgh Medical Journal.

"Possesses the GREATEST PRACTICAL VALUE."—Lancet.

REVISED ANNUAL ISSUE, handsome cloth, 7s. 6d. Immediately.

The SCIENTIFIC and LEARNED SOCIETIES of GREAT BRITAIN and IRELAND (YEAR-BOOK OF).

Compiled from Official Sources. Including Lists of the Papers read during 1893 before Societies engaged in Fourteen Departments of Research.

"British Societies are now well represented in the 'Year-Book of the Scientific and Learned Societies of Great Britain and Ireland.'"

Art. "Societies" in New Edition of 'Encyclopædia Britannica,' vol. xxi.

"It goes almost without saying that a Handbook of this subject will be in time one of the most generally useful works for the library or the desk."—Times.

London: CHARLES GRIFFIN & CO. LIMITED, Exeter-street, Strand.

STANDARD MEDICAL WORKS.

NEW VOLUMES OF "GRIFFIN'S MEDICAL SERIES."

In large 8vo. handsome cloth, with Illustrations.

ON THE BRAIN AND MENTAL DISEASES.

ASYLUM MANAGEMENT and ORGANISATION. By

CHARLES MERRICK, M.B., F.R.C.S., Lecturer on Neurology and Insanity, Westminster Hospital Medical School, Medical School for Women, &c. Now ready, 16s.

The BRAIN and SPINAL CORD: The Structure and Functions of. By VICTOR HORSELEY, F.R.S., Prof. of Pathology, University College. 10s. 6d.

"We HEARTILY COMMEND the book to all readers and to ALL CLASSES OF STUDENTS ALIKE, as being almost the only lucid account extant, embodying the LATEST RESEARCHES and their conclusions."—British Medical Journal.

The CENTRAL NERVOUS ORGANS in HEALTH and DISEASE. By Prof. OBERSTEINER. Translated, with Additions, by ALEX. HILL, M.A., M.D., Master of Downing College, Cambridge. 26s.

"Dr. Hill has enriched the work by many Notes of his own.....Dr. Obersteiner's work is admirable.....INVALUABLE AS A TEXT-BOOK."—British Medical Journal.

MENTAL DISEASES: with Special Reference to the Pathological Aspects of Insanity. By W. DEAN LEWIS, L.R.C.P., M.R.C.S. Medical Director of the West Riding Asylum, Wakefield. 25s.

"Without doubt, the BEST WORK in English of its kind."—Journal of Mental Science.

"This ADMIRABLE TEXT-BOOK places the study of Mental Diseases on a SOLID BASIS. To the student the work is INDISPENSABLE."—Practitioner.

PERIPHERAL NEURITIS. By Dr. James Ross and

JUDSON BURY, M.D., Senior Assistant Physician, Manchester Royal Infirmary. 21s.

"Will for many years remain the AUTHORITY TEXT-BOOK on Peripheral Neuritis."—British Medical Journal.

FORENSIC MEDICINE and TOXICOLOGY. By J.

DIXON MANN, M.D., F.R.C.P., Prof. of Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology in Owens College, Manchester, Examiner in Forensic Medicine in the University of London, and in the Victoria University, Physician to the Salford Royal Hospital. Part I. FORENSIC MEDICINE. Part II. INSANITY in its MEDICO-LEGAL BEARINGS. Part III. TOXICOLOGY. 31s.

"By far the MOST RELIABLE, MOST SCIENTIFIC, and MOST MODERN book on Medical Jurisprudence with which we are acquainted. We recommend it as the BEST BOOK extant."—Dublin Medical Journal.

CLINICAL MEDICINE. A Practical Handbook for

Practitioners and Students. By JUDSON BURY, M.D., M.R.C.P., Senior Assist. Phys., Manchester Royal Infirmary. With numerous illustrations and Two Coloured Plates. [Immediately.]

DISEASES of the SKIN. By T. M'Call Anderson, M.D.,

Professor of Clinical Medicine in the University of Glasgow. SECOND EDITION.

[Immediately.]

"Beyond doubt, the MOST IMPORTANT WORK on Skin Diseases that has appeared in England for many years."—British Medical Journal.

BIOLOGY. By J. R. Ainsworth Davis, B.A., Professor of Biology, University College, Aberystwyth. SECOND EDITION, Revised and Enlarged. In Two Parts, sold separately.

Part I. VEGETABLE MORPHOLOGY and PHYSIOLOGY. With Complete Index-Glossary and 128 Illustrations. 8s. 6d.

Part II. ANIMAL MORPHOLOGY and PHYSIOLOGY. With Complete Index-Glossary and 168 Illustrations. 10s. 6d.

Of the SECOND EDITION, the British Medical Journal says:—"Certainly the BEST 'Biology' with which we are acquainted, and it owes its pre-eminence to the fact that it is an EXCELLENT attempt to present Biology to the student as a CORRELATED and COMPLETE SCIENCE. The glossarial Index is a most useful addition."

The PHYSIOLOGIST'S NOTE-BOOK: a Summary of the Present State of Physiological Science for Students. By ALEX. HILL, M.A., M.D., Master of Downing College, Cambridge. With numerous Plates and Blank Pages for MS. Notes. In large 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.

The Lancet says of it:—"The work which the Master of Downing College modestly compares to a Note-Book is an ADMIRABLE COMPENDIUM of our present information.....Will be a REAL ACQUISITION to Students."

BOHN'S LIBRARIES.

ANTIQUARIAN LIBRARY.

36 vols. at 5s. each.

BEDE'S ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY OF ENGLAND Together with the ANGLO-SAXON CHRONICLE. With Notes, Life of Bede, Analysis, and Map of Anglo-Saxon England. Edited by J. A. GILES, D.C.L.

BOETHIUS'S CONSOLATION OF PHILOSOPHY, King Alfred's Anglo-Saxon Version of. With an English Translation on opposite Pages. Notes, Introduction, and Glossary. By Rev. B. POK. M.A. To which is added the Anglo-Saxon Version of the METAPHYSICS of BOETHIUS, with a Translation.

BRAND'S POPULAR ANTIQUITIES OF ENGLAND, SCOTLAND, AND IRELAND Edited by Sir HENRY ELLIS, K.N.F.S.S. 2 vols.

CHRONICLES of the CRUSADES. Contemporary Narratives of the Crusades of HUGUES (first de Lion), by HUGUARD of DUVIGNY and GRIFFITHIN DE VINCENY, and of the Crusade of SAINT LOUIS, by LORD JOHN DE JOINVILLE. With Illuminated Frontispiece.

DYER'S BRITISH POPULAR CUSTOMS, PRESENT AND PAST. By the Rev. T. F. THRELTON DYER, M.A. With Index.

ELLIS'S SPECIMENS OF EARLY ENGLISH METRICAL ROMANCES. With an Historical Introduction on the Rise and Progress of Romances; Composition in France and England. Revised Edition, by J. O. HALLIWELL, F.R.S. With Illuminated Frontispiece.

FLORENCE OF WORCESTER'S CHRONICLE. Translated by THOMAS TOLESTER, M.A. With Index.

GESTA ROMANORUM; or, Entertaining Moral Stories invented by the Monks. Translated, with Preliminary Observations and Copious Notes, by the Rev. CHARLES SWAN. Revised Edition, by FREDERICK MOORE, M.A.

GIRALDUS CAMBRENSIS'S HISTORICAL WORKS Translated by TH. FOULSTON, M.A., and Sir R. CULPE. Revised Edition, Edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, M.A. F.R.S.

HENDERSON'S SELECT HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS of the MIDDLE AGES including the most famous Charters relating to England, the Empire, the Church, &c., from the sixth to the fourteenth centuries. Translated and Edited, with Introduction, by HENRIET F. HENDERSON, A.B.A.M. 7s. 6d.

HENRY of HUNTINGDON'S HISTORY of the ENGLISH Translated by T. FORESTER, M.A.

INGULPH'S CHRONICLES of the ABBEY of CROYLAND, with the Continuation by PRIOR of BLAIS and other Writers. Translated by H. T. RILEY, B.A.

KEIGHTLEY'S FAIRY MYTHOLOGY, Illustrations of the Romance and Superstition of Various Countries. Sixtieth Edition, with Frontispiece by George Cruikshank.

LEPSIUS'S LETTERS from EGYPT, ETHIOPIA, and the PENINSULA of SINAI. Translated by L. and J. H. MÜLLER. With Maps.

MALLET'S NORTHERN ANTIQUITIES. Translated by RUPERT PERCY. Revised Edition, with a Translation of the FRODO EDDIA from the Original Old Norse Text by J. A. BLACKWELL. To which is added an Abstract of the NERVIOGA SAGA, by Sir WALTER SCOTT. With Glossary, Index, and Coloured Frontispiece.

MARCO POLO'S TRAVELS: the Translation of Marsden, Revised, with a Selection from his Notes, an Introduction, and Index. Edited by T. WRIGHT, M.A. F.R.S.

MATTHEW PARIS'S ENGLISH HISTORY, from the Year 1235 to 1273. Translated by Rev. J. A. GILES, D.C.L. 2 vols.

MATTHEW of WESTMINSTER'S FLOWERS of HISTORY. Translated by C. D. YONGE. With Index. 2 vols.

ORDERICUS VITALIS'S ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY of ENGLAND and NORMANDY. Translated by T. FORESTER, M.A. To which is added the CHRONICLE of ST. EVROULT. With Indexes. 4 vols.

PAULI'S LIFE of ALFRED the GREAT. To which is appended ALFRED'S ANGLO-SAXON VERSION of the ANGLES. With a Literal Translation interspersed. Notes, and an Anglo-Saxon Grammar and Glossary by H. THORPE.

ROGER de HOVEDEN'S ANNALS of ENGLISH HISTORY. Translated by H. T. RILEY, B.A. 2 vols.

ROGER of WENDOVER'S FLOWERS of HISTORY. Translated by J. A. GILES, D.C.L. 2 vols.

SIX OLD ENGLISH CHRONICLES: viz., ANSER'S LIFE of ALFRED and the CHRONICLES of ETHELWOLD, GILGAR, BENNY, GOSBERT of MONMOUTH, and RICHARD of CHIRECHESTER. Edited with Notes and Index, by J. A. GILES, D.C.L.

WILLIAM of MALMESBURY'S CHRONICLE of the Kings of ENGLAND. Translated by Rev. J. SHARPE. Edited by J. A. GILES, D.C.L.

YULE-TIDE STORIES. A Collection of Scandinavian and North-German Popular Tales and Traditions from the Swedish, Danish, and German. Edited by B. THOMPSON.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS
York-street, Covent-garden.

MESSRS.

WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS' PUBLICATIONS.

On MONDAY, April 23, will be published.

THE ARABIAN HORSE: His Country and People.

By Major-General W. TWEEDIE, C.S.I.,
For many years H.B.M.'s Consul-General, Baghdad, and Political Resident for the Government of India in Turkish Arabia.

In 1 vol. royal 8vo. with 7 Coloured Plates and other Illustrations, and a Map of the Country. 2l. 3s. net.

This day is published.

LIFE OF SIR HOPE GRANT.

WITH SELECTIONS FROM HIS CORRESPONDENCE.

Edited by

Lieut.-Col. HENRY KNOLLYS, Royal Artillery,
His former A.D.C., Editor of 'Incidents in the Sepoy War,' Author of 'Sketches of Life in Japan,' 'English Life in China,' 'From Sedan to Scarborough.'

With Portrait of Sir Hope Grant and other Illustrations.
Maps and Plans. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 5l.

On MONDAY, April 23, will be published.

IN VARYING MOODS.

SHORT STORIES.

By BEATRICE HARRADEN.

Author of 'Ships that Pass in the Night.'
Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Next week will be published.

LALLAN SONGS AND GERMAN LYRICS.

By RALPH MACLEOD FULLARTON.

Author of 'Mertin: a Dramatic Poem,' 'Tauhauser,' &c.
In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 5s.

This day is published.

SOUTH SEA YARNS.

By BASIL THOMSON.

With 10 Full-Page Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 6s.

HISTORICAL PHILOSOPHY IN FRANCE AND FRENCH BELGIUM AND SWITZERLAND.

By ROBERT FLINT.

Corresponding Member of the Institute of France, Hon.
Member of the Royal Society of Palermo, Professor in the University of Edinburgh, &c.
8vo. 21s.

SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

THE STORY OF MARGREDEL.

BRING A FIRESIDE HISTORY OF A FIFTEENTH FAMILY.

By D. STORRAR MELDRUM.

"It is a tale of passion and retribution.....Told with brevity, force, and resonance."—British Weekly.
"It is like a bit of life thrown on a canvas by a sure and sympathetic artist."—Te-day.

TIMAR'S TWO WORLDS.

By MAURUS JOKAI.

Authorized Translation by Mrs. HEGAN KENNARD.

New and Cheaper Edition.

"Timar's Two Worlds' may not only be regarded as the author's masterpiece, but as a masterpiece of European literature."—Athenæum.

THE CITY OF SUNSHINE.

By ALEXANDER ALLARDYCE.

Author of 'Earlecourt,' 'Balmoral': a Romance of the Queen's Country, &c.
New and Revised Edition.

"A real tale of India, by a writer who thoroughly understands his subject."—Saturday Review.
"The City of Sunshine' is an entrancing story."—Morning Post.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS,
Edinburgh and London.

WALTER SCOTT'S LIST.

MR. GEORGE MOORE'S NEW NOVEL.

Cloth, crown 8vo. price 6s.

ESTHER WATERS: a Novel.

By GEORGE MOORE.

"As we live the book through again in memory, we feel more and more confident that Mr. Moore has once for all vindicated his position among the half dozen living novelists of whom the historians of English literature will have to take account."

Daily Chronicle.

"It may be as well to set down, beyond possibility of misapprehension, my belief that in 'Esther Waters' we have the most artistic, the most complete, and the most inevitable work of fiction that has been written in England for at least two years."

A. T. Q. C. in the Speaker.

"Hardly since the time of Defoe have the habits and manners of the 'masses' been delineated as they are delineated here.....'Esther Waters' is the best story that Mr. Moore has written, and one on which he may be heartily congratulated."—Globe.

"I can only compare it with the best of Flaubert's work—and what greater praise could one give than that? Slowly, patiently, detail is piled on detail, nothing is omitted, till the thing has the complexity of life itself."—MR. A. B. WALKLEY in the Morning Leader.

"Matthew Arnold, reviewing one of Tolstol's novels, remarked that the Russian novelist seemed to write because the thing happened so, and for no other reason. That is precisely the merit of Mr.
Moore's book.....It seems inevitable."

Westminster Gazette.

"It is a book which will greatly enhance the reputation of Mr. George Moore with all serious lovers of literature, and a novel which will be read with avidity by many to whom the ordinary fiction of the day offers no kind of attraction. It is not too much to say that here at length Mr. Moore has produced a great novel of character."

St. James's Gazette.

"To say that 'Esther Waters' is Mr. Moore's masterpiece is to give but a poor idea of its excellence.....Mr. Moore has written a novel which is set far apart from the rubbish of the circulating libraries. And how many in a lifetime boast so respectable an achievement?"—Full Mail Gazette.

Now ready, crown 8vo. cloth, price 6s.

MAN AND WOMAN:

A Study of Human Secondary Sexual Characters.

By HAVELOCK ELLIS.

Author of 'The Criminal,' 'The Nationalisation of Health,' &c.

With numerous Illustrations.

An Anthropological and Psychological Study of the Secondary Sexual differences which recent investigation has shown to exist among Civilized Human Races.

Contents.

Introduction—How to Approach the Problem—The Growth and Proportions of the Body—The Pelvis—The Head—The Senses—Motion—The Intellectual Impulse—Metabolism—
The Viscera—The Functional Periodicity of Women—Hypnotic Phenomena—The Affectability of Women—The Artistic Impulse—Mutil and Psychic Phenomena—The Variational Tendency of Men—Natality and Mortality—Conclusion.

Ready shortly, crown 8vo. paper cover, price 1s.; cloth, 2s.

FROM BONDAGE TO BROTHERHOOD;

A Message to the Workers.

By J. C. KENWORTHY.

Author of 'The Anatomy of Misery,' &c.

A NEW ISSUE OF THE

WORKS OF NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE.

In 12 vols. crown 8vo. antique paper, with Frontispieces in Photogravure, the Cover designed by Walter Crane.

Price 2s. 6d. per Volume.

Ready April 25.

A WONDER BOOK FOR GIRLS AND BOYS.

With Frontispiece by James Torrance.

London: WALTER SCOTT, LIMITED,
24, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

THE AMENITIES OF CRITICISM.

MR. BENSON'S NEW NOVEL.

"Mr. Benson, we are afraid, after all is not so clever a young man as he was thought to be. Taking the book as a whole, it is an absolute failure. It does not touch us or edify us, or even amuse us beyond a certain languid point. It is written, as all the world knows, by the son of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and, if it has any purpose at all, it is so written as to ridicule virtue and to applaud vice..... It is emphatically one of those books that are sensual, earthly, and unwholesome."—Standard.

"A school-girl's idea of 'plot'; a nursery governess's knowledge of the world; a gentleman's gentleman's views of high life; an undergraduate's sense of style and store of learning; a society paragraphist's fine feeling and good taste; a manufacturer's notion of creating character: of each of these you may easily find plenty of evidence in the novels of the day; but nowhere else—unless it be in 'Dodo'—will they all be found welded into one harmonious unity as they are here."—St. James's Gazette.

"That 'The Rubicon' is the worst-written, falsest, and emptiest novel of the decade it would be, perhaps, too much to say. In these days of elastic publishing standards and moneyed amateurs many queer things are done, and Mr. Benson's work is a shade better than the poorest of the stuff which would-be novelists pay for the privilege of seeing in print. Judged by the rules of the professional novelist, it is quite at the bottom. On its own merits 'The Rubicon' is not worth a moment's serious talk."—Daily Chronicle.

"All the gutter-elements of 'Dodo' are rehearsed and warmed up again with no touch of novelty or improvement."—Full Mail Gazette.

The First Edition of 'The RUBICON' having been exhausted on the day of publication, a Second Edition is now ready.

E. F. Benson.—The RUBICON. By E. F. BENSON, Author of 'Dodo.' 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

"The anticipations which must have been formed by all readers of 'Dodo' will in nowise be disappointed by 'The Rubicon.' The new work is well written, stimulating, unconventional, and, in a word, characteristic. Intellectual force is never absent, and the keen observation and knowledge of character of which there is abundant evidence are aided by real literary power."—Birmingham Post.

"In Gerlie Carston Mr. Benson surprises us with the skill he shows in drawing a simple and lovable girl."—Westminster Gazette.

"We congratulate Mr. Benson upon an exceptional achievement. He has conceived and executed successfully an analytical study of modern life in which a certain salt of humour serves, at least, to keep the pages wholesome. The change and fusion of character amid the fires of passion have been rightly felt and justly depicted from the beginning, events have fallen out in a natural sequence, and the whole story conveys an impression of reality. The book is a notable advance upon Mr. Benson's previous work."—Natural Observer.

Baring-Gould.—The QUEEN of LOVE. By S. BARING-GOULD, Author of 'Mehalah,' 'Cheap-Jack Zita,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

A story of the Cheshire salt region—a new district for the exercise of Mr. Baring-Gould's original and powerful gifts.

Mrs. Oliphant.—The PRODIGALS. By MRS. OLIPHANT. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

Stanley Weyman.—UNDER the RED ROBE. By STANLEY WEYMAN, Author of 'A Gentleman of France,' &c. With 12 illustrations by R. Caton Woodville. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

Gilbert Parker.—The TRANSLATION of a SAVAGE. By GILBERT PARKER, Author of 'Pierre and his People,' 'Mrs. Falchion,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6s.

A story with a powerful and pathetic motive by a writer who has rapidly made his way to the front.

Richard Pryce.—WINIFRED MOUNT. By RICHARD PRYCE, Author of 'Miss Maxwell's Affections,' 'Time and the Woman,' &c. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

A story of society by Mr. Pryce, "whose clever pen," says the Athenæum, "has the lightness and ease of Octave Feuillet."

Constance Smith.—A CUMBERER of the GROUND. By CONSTANCE SMITH, Author of 'The Riddle of Lawrence Haviland,' 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

NEW EDITIONS.

EIGHTH EDITION NEARLY READY.

Marie Corelli.—BARABBAS: a Dream of the World's Tragedy. By MARIE CORELLI, Author of 'A Romance of Two Worlds,' 'Vendetta,' &c. Seventh Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

Miss Corelli's new romance has been received with much disapprobation by the secular papers, and with warm welcome by the religious papers. By the former she has been accused of blasphemy and bad taste; "a gory nightmare"; "a hideous travesty"; "grotesque vulgarization"; "unworthy of criticism"; "vulgar redundancy"; "sickening detail"—these are some of the secular flowers of speech. On the other hand, the religious papers praised the dignity of conception, the reserve and reverence that characterized the book.

E. F. Benson.—DODO: a Detail of the Day. By E. F. BENSON. Crown 8vo. Thirtieth Edition. 6s.

Baring-Gould.—CHEAP-JACK ZITA. By S. BARING-GOULD. Crown 8vo. 6s.

A Cheap Edition of a story which has been recognized as Mr. Baring-Gould's most original effort since 'Mehalah.'

SEVENTH EDITION NOW READY.

Rudyard Kipling.—BARRACK-ROOM BALLADS, and other Verses. By RUDYARD KIPLING. Twenty-third Thousand. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Mr. Kipling's verse is strong, vivid, and full of character.....Unmistakable genius rings in every line."—Times.

Henley and Whibley.—A BOOK of ENGLISH PROSE. Collected by W. E. HENLEY and CHARLES WHIBLEY. Crown 8vo.

Also small Limited Editions on Dutch and Japanese Paper, 21s. and 42s. net.

A companion book to Mr. Henley's well-known 'Lyra Heroica.' Each piece, whether containing a character-sketch or incident, is complete in itself. The book will be finely printed and bound.

Waldstein.—JOHN RUSKIN: a Study. By CHARLES WALDSTEIN, M.A., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. Post 8vo. 5s.

Also a Small Edition on Hand-made Paper, demy 8vo. 15s.

This is an appreciation of Mr. Ruskin's work and influence—literary and social—by a critic who has enough admiration to make him sympathetic, and enough discernment to make him impartial.

Norman Gale.—CRICKET SONGS. By NORMAN GALE. Crown 8vo. linen, 2s. 6d.

Also a Limited Edition on Hand-made Paper, demy 8vo. 10s. 6d. net.

Also a Small Edition on Japanese Paper, demy 8vo. 21s. net.

[In the press.]

METHUEN & CO. 36, Essex-street, W.C.

SMITH, ELDER & CO'S LIST.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S NEW NOVEL.

NOTICE.—The THIRD EDITION of 'MARCELLA,' 3 vols., by Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD, is nearly exhausted. A FOURTH EDITION will be ready at all the Libraries on Monday next.

CHEAP POPULAR EDITION OF MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S 'DAVID GRIEVE.'
In a few days, crown 8vo. limp cloth, 2s. 6d.

THE HISTORY OF DAVID GRIEVE.

By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD,
Author of 'Robert Elsmere,' &c.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE SLAVE OF THE LAMP.'

On April 26, at all the Libraries, in 3 vols. post 8vo.

WITH EDGED TOOLS.

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN,
Author of 'The Slave of the Lamp,' &c.

On April 26 (Sixpence), New Series, No. 131,
The CORNHILL MAGAZINE
for MAY, containing MATTHEW AUSTIN, by W. E. Norris, Chaps. 17-20—The CARNARVON PENINSULA—CHARACTER NOTE: The Child—HACHISON EATING—COLOUR-SERGEANT RHODES—TOFT and CROFT—BARNABAS RABBIT'S RAIN-CLOUD—The LAST GOVERNOR of the BASTILLE—WITH EDGED TOOLS, Chaps. 40-42.

NEW ONE-VOLUME NOVEL.

Early in May, crown 8vo. 6s.

STANHOPE of CHESTER: a Mystery. By PERCY ANDREAE.

NEW VOLUMES OF SMITH, ELDER & CO'S POPULAR 2s. AND 2s. 6d. SERIES.

In the press, fcap. 8vo. boards, pictorial cover, 2s. each; or limp red cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

FROM ONE GENERATION to ANOTHER. By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN, Author of 'The Slave of the Lamp,' &c. [On May 10.]

DARK: a Tale of the Down Country. By Mrs. STEPHEN BATSON. [On June 10.]

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION OF THE HON. EMILY LAWLESS'S 'GRANIA.'

On April 26, crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

GRANIA: the Story of an Island. By the Hon. EMILY LAWLESS, Author of 'Hurrisb,' 'With Moses in Ireland,' &c.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'WHERE TOWN AND COUNTRY MEET.'

Early in May, in 3 vols. post 8vo.

RICHARD DARE. By Mrs. Alfred BALDWIN, Author of 'The Story of a Marriage,' 'Where Town and Country Meet,' &c.

London:

SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

Ready on MONDAY NEXT.

THE LIFE OF JOHN CHURCHILL, DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH,

TO THE
ACCESSION OF QUEEN ANNE.
BY
GENERAL VISCOUNT WOLSELEY.

In 2 vols. demy 8vo. with Portraits and Plans, 32s.

NOW READY.
WOMEN of LETTERS. By Ger-
TRUDE TOWNSHEND MAYER. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 32s.

SECOND EDITION.
PRIVATE LIFE of NAPOLEON.
From the French of ARTHUR LÉVY. By STEPHEN
LOUIS SIMON, Translator of 'The Youth of Frederick the Great,' &c. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 28s.

BY COLONEL RAIKES.
The HISTORY of the HONOURABLE
ARTILLERY COMPANY of LONDON. By Col. G. A.
RAIKES, F.S.A. 2 vols. with Portraits, Coloured Illustrations, and Maps, demy 8vo. 32s. 6d. each.

NOW READY.
The CONVERSATIONS of JAMES
NORTHCOTE, R.A. Recorded by WILLIAM HAZ-
LITT. A New Edition. Edited, with an Essay on Hazlitt and a Note on Northcote, by EDMUND GOSSE.
1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

NOW READY.
FREDERIC HILL: an Autobiography of Fifty Years in Times of Reform. Being the Recollections of a Retired Civil Servant. Edited by his Daughter, CONSTANCE HILL. 1 vol. demy 8vo. with Portraits, 16s.

NOW READY.
THE ONE HUNDREDTH VOLUME of 'THE TEMPLE BAR MAGAZINE' Being an Alphabetical List of the Titles of all Articles appearing in the previous Ninety-nine Volumes. In demy 8vo. 3s.

* For Works of Fiction, see page 506.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S PUBLICATIONS.

NEW NOVELS.

NEW NOVEL BY MRS. VERN.
Now ready at all the Libraries, in 3 vols. crown 8vo.

The HUSBAND of ONE WIFE. By
Mrs. VERN, Author of 'Some Married Fellows,' &c.

ORCHARD DAMEREL. By Alan
ST. AUSTIN, Author of 'A Fellow of Trinity,' &c. 3 vols.

"Taken altogether, the work is the strongest that has come from the author's pen, and does not gain its strength by any abandonment of the peculiar refinement which characterizes this writer's books. It is a thoroughly enjoyable story."—Standard.

JANET DELILLE. By E. N. Leigh
FRY, Author of 'A Scots Thistle,' &c. 3 vols.

"We like 'Janet Delille' as a novel, and no reader will find his time wasted in perusing it, which cannot in truth be said of most novels."—Ulster Herald.

IN CUPID'S COLLEGE. By Mabel
HART, Author of 'Two English Girls,' 'From Harvest to Harvest,' &c. 3 vols.

"The writing is always bright and pleasant, the dialogues are natural and characteristic, and some of the situations are exceedingly pathetic.
'In Cupid's College' is well above the average novel in tone, in feeling, and in writing."—Lancet.

HETTY'S HERITAGE. By Noel
DENN, Author of 'The Aftermath,' &c. 3 vols.

"Has an interesting and well-contrived plot, while the number of personages is wisely limited to that necessary for its development."—Morning Post.

The WHITE AIGRETTE. By Vin-
VINCENT, Author of 'Cathedral Walls,' 'Wrong on Both Sides,' &c.
3 vols.

"The 'White Aigrette' should find favour with the old-time hearer of circulating libraries, however, and to each a one, if she still exist, we commend it."—Advertiser.

The PRICE of a PEARL. By Eleanor
HOLMES, Author of 'Through Another Man's Eyes,' &c. 3 vols.

"The story is very pleasantly told, for the author has the knack of presenting even the most trivial details of her scheme in language that is always refined and telling."—Daily Telegraph.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.
Now ready, in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

TO RIGHT the WRONG. By Edna
LYALL, Author of 'Donovan,' 'We Two,' &c.

Uniform, each in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

NOVELS BY EDNA LYALL.

DONOVAN: a Modern Englishman.
WE TWO. IN THE GOLDEN DAYS.
KNIGHT ERRANT. WON BY WAITING.
A HARDY NORSEMAN.

A SELECTION FROM HURST & BLACKETT'S STANDARD LIBRARY.

EACH IN A SINGLE VOLUME, PRICE 6s.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'JOHN HALIFAX.'
JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN. CHRISTIAN'S MISTAKE.
A WOMAN'S THOUGHTS. A NOBLE LIFE.
ABOUT WOMEN. HANNAH.
A LIFE for a LIFE. THE UNKIND WORD.
NOTHING NEW. A BRAVE LADY.
MISTRESS and MAID. STUDIES from LIFE.
THE WOMAN'S KINGDOM. YOUNG MRS. JARDINE.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'SAM SLICK.'
NATURE and HUMAN. THE OLD JUDGE; or, Life
NATURE. in a Colony.
WISE SAWS and MODERN. TRAITS of AMERICAN
INSTANCES. HUMOUR.
THE AMERICANS at HOME.

BY DR. GEORGE MAC DONALD.
DAVID ELGINBROD. ALSO FORBES.
ROBERT FALCONER. SIX GIRLS.

BY MRS. OLIPHANT.
ADAM GRAEME. LIFE of IRVING.
LAIRD of HOLLAW. A BOSS in JUNE.
AGNES. THREE JUNIORS.

IT WAS A LOVER and HIS LASS.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY.

DANTE G. ROSSETTI

AND THE

PRE-RAPHAELITE MOVEMENT

Viewed in Relation to the Problems, Tendencies, and Purposes of Modern English Art.

By Mrs. J. W. WOOD.

With 8 Photogravure Reproductions of Rossetti's Paintings.
8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.

The book contains some unpublished reminiscences of Rossetti's student days and career in art, and describes the Founding of the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood and its long conflict with academic traditions.

"The best book yet written on Rossetti and the Pre-Raphaelites. Besides being a work of philosophical value, the book is a most attractive record of comradeship, inspired by the noblest and most generous ideals of youth."

"The illustrations from some of Rossetti's greatest paintings are beautifully executed."

"In her treatment of the tragically pathetic incidents in Rossetti's life Mrs. Wood displays the greatest tact and delicacy."—Daily News.

NOW READY.

AMONG THE MOORS:

Sketches of Oriental Life.

By G. MONTBARD,
Author of 'In Egypt,' &c.

Superbly Illustrated. Royal 8vo. cloth, 16s.

LARGE-PAPER EDITION, strictly limited to 100 Copies, each numbered and signed by the Author, printed on Japanese Vellum, THREE GUINEAS each, net.

ON SHORT LEAVE to JAPAN.

Capt. O. J. YOUNGHUSBAND, Queen's Own Corps of Guides, Author of 'Eighteen Hundred Miles on a Burmese Tat,' &c. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The ENGLISH CATALOGUE of

BOOKS for 1903. A List of Books published in Great Britain and Ireland in the Year 1903, with their Sizes,
Prices, and Publishers' Names. Also of the Principal Books published in the United States of America. With the Addition of an Index to Subjects. Royal 8vo. 5s.

DEDICATED TO H.R.H. PRINCESS MARY, DUCHESS OF TECK.

A MANUAL of OBSTETRIC

NURSING. By MARIAN HUMPHRY, British Lying-in Hospital, London, Diploma London Obstetric Society,
Member Royal British Nurses' Association, and of its
Registration Board. Crown 8vo. 300 pp. cloth, 2s. 6d.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION NOW READY.

TALES from WESTMINSTER

ABBEY told to CHILDREN. By Mrs. FRESH-LORD. With a Portrait of Dean Stanley and a Plan and View of the Abbey. Crown 8vo. boards, 1s.

PREACHERS OF THE AGE.—New Volume just ready.

A CUP of COLD WATER.

Rev. J. MORLAIS JONES, of Llanham. With Photo-gravure Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

CHEAP EDITIONS at ALL BOOKSELLERS.

Uniform crown 8vo. Volumes, bound in cloth,
HALF-A-CROWN each.

MARY ANERLEY.

By R. D. BLACKMORE.

LITTLE LOO.

By W. CLARK RUSSELL.

MARY MARSTON.

By GEORGE MAC DONALD.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

SATURDAY, APRIL 21, 1894.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
A JOURNALIST ON JOURNALISTS	501
ESSAYS IN DEFENCE OF CATHOLIC THEOLOGY	503
THE LIFE OF DR. REEVES	503
THE DEATH OF PROF. PALMER	503
ST. ANDREWS	504
PRINCE DE JOINTVILLE'S REMINISCENCES	505
NEW NOVELS (Katharine Lauderdale; Jack Doyle's Daughter; Orchard Damerel; A Man of To-day; Her Angel Friend; A Daughter of Music; The Daughter of the New Perce; Janet Deltile; The Man in Black; An Unsatisfactory Lover; The King's Assail; Marchionne; Le Chemin de Damas; Les Elans d'Élodie)	505-507
AMERICAN HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY	507
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS	508-509
THE BOOKSELLERS' TRANK DINER; THE DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY; EARLY EDITIONS; THOMAS LOVELL BEDDOES; THE FLINDERS PETRIK PAPYRI, PART II.; SALES; THE SPRING FURNISHING SEASON	510-512
LITERARY GOSSIP	512
SCIENCE—GEOGRAPHICAL LITERATURE; CHEMICAL NOTES; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS; GOSSIP	513-515
FOUR ARTS—THE DAWN OF ASTRONOMY IN EGYPT; SALES; ARABIAN ANTIQUITIES; GOSSIP	515-516
MUSIC—THE WEEK; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	517-518
DRAMA—GOSSIP	518
MISCELLANEA	518

LITERATURE

A Journalist's Note-Book. By Frank Frankfort Moore. (Hutchinson & Co.)

MR. MOORE has written at least a score of novels, and among the "press opinions" concerning some of these, which he prints at the end of this book, is one by a critic who states that "the author is always trying to say clever things." The remark is true of 'A Journalist's Note-Book,' which, though not a novel, is, it may be presumed, to some extent a work of fiction. Mr. Moore, who informs his readers that he was "little more than a boy" in 1874, and who has published volumes of verse and plays, besides his twenty or more romances, can scarcely have been employed in all the newspaper offices in Ireland, Scotland, England, and elsewhere of which he speaks; nor is it probable that he has met with so many knaves and fools among journalists as he here describes. Some of his stories are manifest inventions, and a great many more have evidently been amplified and coloured with the intention of discrediting the trade or profession to which he belongs or belonged. He is an amusing anecdotist, however, when he is not too spiteful or too flippant, and several of his reminiscences—the following, for instance—may well be true:—

"Some years ago I was getting my hair cut in Regent Street, and, as usual, the practitioner remarked in a friendly way that I was getting very grey. 'Yes,' I said, 'I've been getting a grey hair or so for some time. I don't know how it is. I'm not much over thirty.' (I repeat that the incident occurred some years ago.) 'No, sir, you're not what might be called old,' said he indulgently. 'Maybe you're doing some brain-work?' he suggested, after a pause. 'Brain-work?' said I. 'Oh no! I work for a daily paper, and usually write a column of leading articles every night. I produce a book a year, and a play every now and again. But brain-work—oh no!' 'Oh, in that case, sir, it must be due to something else. Maybe you drink a bit, sir.'"

There is not much order in Mr. Moore's book. He writes at random, and turns aside from his mocking gossip about journalists to report whatever he remembers about clergymen, doctors, judges, actors, or people of any other calling whom he can hold up to ridicule. Indeed, these digressions are often more entertaining than most of the "researches into the highways and byways of journalism" which are his professed theme. But he sketches for his readers in some sort of sequence successive groups of drunken and ignorant editors, sottish and incapable sub-editors, blundering and bumpitious leader-writers, inventive and thievish reporters, and others with whom he would have us believe it has been his constant misfortune to be in contact. As most of his newspaper work appears to have been done in Ireland, it might be rash to say that his information is altogether misleading; but it bears a suspicious likeness to the unkind tittle-tattle contained in such old books as Cyrus Rodding's 'Recollections,' and such later repertoires of scandal as the late Mr. Henry Vizetelly's 'Glances Back,' and it is to be hoped that no one will accept the book as a fair account of journalistic life and ways in London or any respectable provincial town. At any rate, Mr. Moore appears to have been exceptionally unfortunate. If, in the course of his fitful and versatile career as a pressman, he has come across more than two or three honest and intelligent journalists, he does not tell us so. His object is to make fun of both craft and craftsmen, and presumably to show how very much superior he is to it or them. Therefore his book is crowded with fanciful pictures of such "types" as he can most laughably contrast with himself. We have, for instance, one reporter who is, and another who should be, a ticket-of-leave man; a sub-editor "with a rooted prejudice against soap and the comb," but constrained to drink six bottles of stout in the course of a night's "work"; another sub-editor who lives on nothing but porridge; a third who poisons all his colleagues by cooking red herrings for his supper; and a leader-writer who keeps a collection of newspaper cuttings and constructs his "original articles" by piecing together selections from his scrap-book. The account of the last-named, or rather unnamed, individual is a favourable sample of Mr. Moore's story-telling:—

"At night I frequently came down to my office and found that he had written two columns of the most delightful essays. One night, perhaps, he on the subject of Moresco-Gothic Architecture and its influence on the genius of Velasquez, another on Battue-shooting and the Acclimatization of the Bird of Paradise in English coverts; but both were treated with equal grace. That such erudition and originality should be associated with cloth gloves astonished me. One day, however, the man wrote a column upon the decoration of one of the courts of the Alhambra, and a more picturesque article I never read—up to a certain point; and this point was reached when he commenced a new paragraph as follows: 'Alas! that so lovely a piece of work should have fallen a prey to the devastating element that laid the whole structure in ruins, and eclipsed the gaiety, if not of nations, at any rate of the people of London, who were wont to resort nightly to this Theban temple of Leicester Square, feeling certain that under the liberal management of its enterprising entrepreneur some brilliant stage spectacle would be brought before their eyes. Now, however, that the company for the restoration of the building has been successfully floated, we may hope for a revival of the ancient glories of the Alhambra.' I inquired casually of the perpetrator of the article if he had ever heard of the Alhambra!

'Why, I wrote of it yesterday,' he said. 'I've been in it; it's in Leicester Square.' 'Did you ever hear of another Alhambra?' I asked blandly. 'Yes; there's one in Glasgow.' 'Did you ever hear of one that wasn't a music-hall?' 'Never. Maybe the temperance people give one of their new-fashioned coffee places the name to attract sinners on false pretences.' 'Did you ever hear of an Alhambra in Spain?' 'You don't mean to say that they have music-halls in Spain? But why shouldn't they? Spaniards are fond of dancing, I believe.' 'Why not indeed?' said I. The next day he had an explanation to offer to the chief of the staff. In the evening he told me that he was going to leave the paper. 'How is that?' I inquired. 'I don't like it,' he replied. 'My ideas are cribbed, cabined, and confined here.' 'They are certainly cribbed,' said I. 'Did you never hear of the Alhambra at Grenada [sic]?' 'Never; that's what played the mischief with the article. You'll see how the mistake arose. There was a capital article in the Telegraph about the Alhambra—I see now that it must have referred to the one in Spain—about four years ago; well, I cut it out and indexed it. A year ago, when the Alhambra in Leicester Square was about to re-open, there was an article in the Daily News. I found it in my index also, and incorporated the two articles in mine. How the mischief was I to know that one referred to Grenada [sic] and the other to London? These writer chaps should be more explicit. What do they get their salaries for, anyway!'"

Mr. Moore discreetly withholds the names of the journalists and newspapers that he prattles about; but Mr. Henry Irving and a few others with whom he has been connected in journalism or play-writing are mentioned, and some of the anecdotes about them with which he ekes out his volume are among its most readable passages. The following is, perhaps, the best thing in the book, and its humour is not weakened by the frank admission that it does not give "exact instances" of Boucicault's Irishisms:—

"It may be remembered that ten or eleven years ago the late Mr. Dion Boucicault was obliging enough to offer to give a lecture to English actors on the correct pronunciation of their mother-tongue. The offer was, I suppose, thought too valuable to be neglected, and it was arranged that the lecture should be delivered from the stage of the Lyceum Theatre. A more interesting and amusing function I have never attended. It was clear that the lecturer had formed some very definite ideas as to the way the English language should be spoken; and his attempts to convey these ideas to his audience were most praiseworthy. His illustrations of the curiosities of some methods of pronouncing words were certainly extremely curious. For instance, he complained bitterly of the way the majority of English actors pronounced the word 'war.' 'Ye pronounce the word as if it wuz spelt w-a-u-g-h,' said the lecturer gravely. 'Ye don't pronounce it at all as ye shud. The word rhymes with "par," "are," and "kyar," and yet ye will pronounce it as if it rhymed with "saw" and "paw." Don't ye see the difference?' 'We do, we do!' cried the audience; and, thus encouraged by the ready acquiescence in his pet theories, the lecturer went on to deal with the gross absurdity of pronouncing the word 'grass,' not to rhyme with 'laas,' which of course was the correct way, but almost—not quite—as if it rhymed with 'laws.' 'The word is "grass," not "graws,"' said our lecturer. 'It grates on a sensitive ear like mine to hear it mispronounced. Then ye will never be injured to give the word "Chrischin" its three value as a word of three syllables; ye'll insist on calling it "Christyen," in place of "Chrischin." D'ye persave the difference?'

'We do, we do!' cried the audience. 'Ay, and ye talk about "shoots" of garments, when everybody knows that ye shud say "shoots"; ye must give the full value to the letter "u"—there's no double o in a shoot of clothes. Moreover, ye talk of the members of the polis force as "constables," but there's no "u" in the first syllable—it's an "o," and it shud be pronounced to rhyme with "gone," not with "gun." Then I've heard an actor who shud know better say, in the part of Hamlet, "wards, wuds, wuds"; instead of giving that fine letter "o" its full value. How much finer it sounds to pronounce it as I do, "wards, wards, wards"! But when I say that I've heard the ward "pull" pronounced not to rhyme with "dull," as ye'll all admit it shud be, but actually as if it was within an ace of being spelt "p double o l," I think ye'll agree with me that it's about time that actors learnt something of the rudiments of the art of ellycution.' I do not pretend that these are the exact instances given by Mr. Boucicault of the appalling incorrectness of English pronunciation, but I know that he began with the word 'war,' and that the impression produced upon my mind by the discourse was precisely as I have recorded it."

As Mr. Moore says that he has hundreds of other journalistic stories to tell if the public cares for them, we hope that his next volume, should he publish it, may be at least as vivacious and much more generous.

Witnesses to the Unseen, and other Essays.
By Wilfrid Ward. (Macmillan & Co.)

THE essays in this interesting volume have, with one exception, already made an appearance separately at different times and in various magazines; but as they are clearly inspired by common sentiments and dominated by a common purpose, they form in their new shape a work of a sufficiently homogeneous character. In some respects they are also a valuable contribution to the current literature of theological controversy; for whether or not we agree with the doctrines here expounded, it is well to have them stated with as much precision as is consistent with their mystical nature, and with as much skill and learning as can be supplied by a competent writer who has spared no pains to present them from his own point of view. For Mr. Wilfrid Ward is certainly an able exponent of what we may call the higher Catholicism. He is endowed with wide knowledge; he is familiar with the resources of theological and philosophical argument; and he knows how to make the most of the advantages arising from vague and elastic elements in the Catholic creed. He appears to be perfectly alive to the nature and effect of the progress which physical science and historical criticism are making, and the further progress which they are likely to make, in undermining the old Catholic position; but he is beset by no fears, for he is also perfectly alive to the convenient constitution of a Church which finds the means of adapting its creed to fresh requirements whenever such a course is indispensable to its existence.

In this connexion the essay in which Mr. Ward discusses the effect of "New Wine in Old Bottles" is one of the most instructive; for while he there reviews some attempts which have recently been made to find a modus vivendi between the Christian faith and the conclusions of science—while he leads us to suppose that those attempts must of necessity end in the bottles being broken and the wine spilled—he maintains at the same time that the Catholic Church can and does put whatever is good in the new wine into the old bottles without any disastrous consequences. The method is simple. The Church waits until the wine has proved its character. If it keeps well, if the conclusions of science and of history are firmly established, she uses them in her own service; for, says Mr. Ward with remarkable courage, "the discoveries of science are among the acknowledged criteria used by the Church in the explanation of Scripture" (p. 96). He quotes with manifest approval a passage from an address given by Monsignor d'Hulst to an International Scientific Congress of Catholics at Paris, in which that eminent Catholic defended a dilatory attitude on the part of the Church. He pointed out to his hearers that so long as they showed a common docility to the Church, they were not forbidden to hold their own views on questions of science or criticism on which she had hitherto made no definite pronouncement. "But this," proceeds Mr. Ward,

"is not all. While individual Catholics often have what may be called a certain provisional power of reconsideration where the Church has not decided authoritatively, we may also see in the Church a power of assimilation and of ultimate consolidation of her teaching in its relations to assured scientific advance, or well-examined and tenable hypothesis. While her caution protects her against those whims of the Zeitgeist which prematurely claim the title of discoveries, the activity of her life enables her in the end to find a modus vivendi with what is really valuable in intellectual movements or really true in scientific achievement. This is a special prerogative of a living authoritative tribunal which, from the nature of the case, cannot be clearly asserted by any ruling power whose nature is documentary. And the Church has on occasion exhibited the principle of progressive assimilation in a marked manner."

A very slight knowledge of history suffices to show that the Church has not always treated scientific novelties with this irreproachable prudence; and it is fairly obvious that it is only the existence of a large body of educated opinion which prevents the Church from now acting towards the pioneers of science as she acted in the Middle Ages. Mr. Ward's explanation of this ugly difficulty is ingenious, but to the Protestant mind unconvincing. He maintains that in the old days "there was probably less need for toleration for the sake of individual consciences, as scientific discovery had not yet got so firm a foothold as to be in many cases a living source of difficulty." To admit a startling scientific novelty would, he says, have endangered the Christian conscience; to yield to a new discovery would have shaken dogmatic beliefs in the minds of persons unable to separate the traditional interpretation of a dogma from its essence. But now, says Mr. Ward, the Church takes an exactly opposite course.

"The over-subtle mind of the present day, readily grasping the real weight of evidence for a new scientific discovery, more readily than formerly distinguishing between the essence and the traditional interpretation of dogmatic belief, has more to fear from the temporary denial of what may prove true, and less to fear from the readjustment of explanations of dogma."

The conclusion which the plain man will draw from this ecclesiastical opportunism is not far to seek. He will judge, and rightly judge, that in regard to science and history—that is, in regard to organized knowledge in large and important branches of human inquiry—the Catholic Church is not in the least concerned to remove old error; nay, that she has a definite motive for preferring old error, if it leaves religious belief undisturbed. Nor will he be wrong in further judging that this indifference, or rather this opposition to new truth in some branches of knowledge, which the Church admittedly presses into her own service at her own convenience, argues ill for any strict regard to truth in the performance of what Mr. Ward calls her primary duty, that of protecting religious belief in the mass of Christian souls.

But, as every one knows, the Catholic Church is as little disposed in these days to exalt reason at the expense of faith as she was in the days of Abelard; and in the question which, according to Mr. Ward, she now has to solve, it is, of course, faith and not reason which determines her solution of it. To what extent—so runs the question—ought belief in Christian dogma to be affected by the results of modern science and historical research? This fundamental problem is attacked in "The Wish to Believe," a series of three dialogues, taking up half the volume. There Mr. Ward endeavours to come to close quarters with the real difficulty of his position. There, as elsewhere, he attempts a practical application of the doctrine involved in Newman's theory of an illative sense; that is to say, a faculty by which the mind draws, and is entitled to draw, inferences without any conscious logical process; and his object is to show that when, for instance, two men of equal ability view the same evidence for the Christian dogmas, one in a spirit of strict impartiality, and the other with a fervent desire to find them true, this wish to believe does not, in the latter case, invalidate the verdict. Mr. Ward has a heritage of dialectical skill which by use and exercise he has made his own, and he entertains his readers with a good display of intellectual fencing of a certain order. His main contention is that there is one set of principles for estimating the effect of historical evidence, and another for estimating the effect of religious evidence; and that in the investigation of religious evidence it makes a radical difference in the appreciation of that evidence whether or not the investigator intensely wishes that one interpretation of it should prove true rather than another. A man, he declares, who looks at evidence with equal readiness to draw one conclusion or another, according to the weight of it, is without the true motive power for critical inquiry. Very well; but Mr. Ward assumes throughout that the only interpretation of the evidence which a man thoroughly in earnest will desire to see proved is the Catholic interpretation. The first essential of the religious attitude of mind is, he says,

"A deep sense of the importance of the knowledge and of the bearing of the fact to be known."

upon oneself. This immediately issues in a passion for true knowledge based on this sense, and thus passion is enlisted on the side of reason."

It is obvious that a passionate desire to prove the validity, let us say, of a theism like Dr. Martineau's, or an agnosticism like Mr. Huxley's, would make an investigator equally keen in appreciating all the evidence, and equally sensitive to all the clues, that lead to theism or agnosticism; and it cannot be denied that we have theists and agnostics who are passionate in this sense. Mr. Ward appears to confuse the wish to find some explanation of the facts of life and consciousness, as a refuge from complete scepticism, with the wish that some particular explanation should prove true; and it is begging the question to suppose that the desire for knowledge and the desire to believe must necessarily be confined to the inquirer who finds his theories stilled by Catholicism, or to lay down at the outset that the only or the best explanation of the facts is that which he earnestly wishes to establish.

Of the remaining essays, two are devoted to an estimate of certain aspects of Newman's influence and a vigorous reply to Dr. Abbott's attack on Newman's 'Essay on Ecclesiastical Miracles.' In 'The Clothes of Religion' Mr. Ward batters, in a playful and effective fashion, the weaker sides of Mr. Spencer's theory of the "Unknowable" and Mr. Harrison's deification of humanity—doctrines that have, of course, often been battered before. The introduction contains some remarks hitherto unpublished on the extent to which contemporary opinion ought to influence private judgment; in a word, on the respect due to the Zeitgeist. Mr. Ward finds it a hopeful sign of the present age that, with us at least, the Zeitgeist in some degree recognizes its own want of accuracy and finality; and it is plain that if this is really so the Zeitgeist is doing well; but a prudent man will not too readily suppose that the world is on that account about to return to Catholicism.

Life of the Right Rev. William Reeves, D.D., Lord Bishop of Down, Connor, and Dromore.
By Lady Ferguson. (Dublin, Hodges, Figgis & Co.; London, Longmans & Co.)

NEXT to Dublin, the see of Down, Connor, and Dromore is the Irish bishopric best known to Englishmen, and this is due to the fact that in three successive centuries occupants of its episcopal throne have been one man of genius, and two men of letters of the first order: Jeremy Taylor, Dr. Percy, and Dr. Reeves. William Reeves was born March 16th, 1815, and died January 12th, 1892. His birthplace was Charleville, a town founded by the first Earl of Orrery in 1661. In the Bishop's childhood the oldest inhabitants used to relate the tradition received from their great-grandfathers of how the Duke of Berwick had dined at Charleville House with his officers, and had set it on fire immediately after dinner, before retreating to Limerick. His grandfather was agent to the Earl of Cork, successor of the founder of the town, and in his kitchen the boy saw many fiddlers and pipers, who sang the 'Ailing air Eire' or 'Vision of Ireland' and other compositions of the famous poet of the district, John Claghagh MacDonnell. He often visited the neighbouring ruined abbey of Kilmallock, and had heard from the people the local tradition of the Earl of Desmond's return in 1600—how there were bonfires and crowds to welcome him, and how when Sunday came he went, in accordance with his bringing up in England, to the Protestant church, to find when he emerged that the crowd had disappeared and that he had not a single friend among the country people. Such local influences gave Reeves his first inclination to the study of Irish history, while his profession led him to devote himself chiefly to the ecclesiastical part of that history. He always regretted that he had not early in life made use of his opportunities for acquiring a thorough knowledge of the Irish language. In the general history or literary history of the country, want of this knowledge would have prevented him from doing any original work of permanent value; but in ecclesiastical matters Latin and not Irish is the dominant language. It may be added that his generous disposition and absolute freedom from sectarian feeling made him the friend of every native Irish scholar of his time. O'Donovan and O'Curry both gladly transcribed and translated for him, and, while fully acknowledging their help, he gave them more in return. He sent O'Donovan 60,000 references to aid him in the preparation of the index to his noble edition of the 'Annals of the Four Masters.'

Reeves was the author of more than sixty works of various sizes, some of which appear to be less known than they deserve, for a useful appendix to the life, by the Rev. J. R. Garstin, B.D., which gives a complete list, states:—

"As illustrating the way in which publications, brought out as were the Bishop's, appear—or rather fail to appear—in the catalogues of great libraries enjoying copyright privilege, it may be worth referring to that of Oxford. The Bodleian Catalogue has twenty-one references under the title 'Reeves (William)'; but, of these, only seven belong to the Bishop, and one is a cross-reference to Mr. Carroll's 'Clergy of St. Bride's,' &c., the Preface of which was furnished by Dr. Reeves. The British Museum Catalogue contains eleven of his works, and the same cross-reference."

His first work was a short essay, 'A Description of Nendrum, commonly called Mahee Island,' and was published in 1845. It was followed in 1847 by the valuable 'Ecclesiastical Antiquities of Down, Connor, and Dromore,' and in 1850 by 'Acts of Archbishop Colton.' These two books give an account of the parishes of all the counties of Ulster which are on the sea-coast, except Donegal, the first in relation to a Papal taxation of 1308, and the second in relation to an archiepiscopal visitation of 1397. The most interesting and important of his works is his edition (published in 1857) of 'The Life of St. Columba, Founder of Hy, written by Adamnan, ninth Abbot of that Monastery.' Besides the text and an introduction of the highest interest, it contains two hundred and fifty closely printed quarto pages of notes, each of which is, in fact, a separate and generally exhaustive treatise on some point of the history of the times or places mentioned in the life.

The Professorship of Ecclesiastical History in the University of Dublin, the Librarianship of Trinity College, and the Archbishopric of Armagh were three positions for which Reeves had high qualifications, but all of which were awarded to other men when he was a candidate. Yet he never complained. He was long a country clergyman and a schoolmaster of an undistinguished school, but after many years became Rector of Tynan (a village near the ecclesiastical capital of Ireland) and Librarian of Armagh, then Dean of Armagh, and finally bishop of the diocese in which a large part of his life had been spent as a perpetual curate. He was one of those men to whom the past is just as living as the present, and it gave him constant pleasure to think that at Tynan he was living in the home of one of the most accomplished of Irish scribes, Maelisa Macintacairt, the tutor of the Maelbrigte who wrote in 1138 the exquisite gospel which bears his name, and is now in the British Museum. Bishop Reeves used often to quote a passage on fol. 14: "The writing of my tutor, that is [Maelisa] Macintacairt of Tynan, is at the top of this page. May God be gentle to the soul of Maelisa!"

Throughout the Bishop's 'Life,' and in the many letters which are published in it, kindness of heart is as prominent as a love of learning. Lady Ferguson states her method of biography clearly: "His aims have been as far as possible given in his own words; his successes in the words of men of eminence, his contemporaries and friends." She has shown considerable skill in following this method, and has produced a terse yet readable life of a man whose generous consideration of all other scholars was no less remarkable than his own depth of scholarship.

Man Hunting in the Desert: being a Narrative of the Palmer Search-Expedition (1882-1885). By Alfred E. Haynes, Captain Royal Engineers. With an Introduction by Walter Besant. (Cox.)

THIS story of one of the saddest of the many tragedies of the Egyptian war is belated, for obviously the public interest of the narrative has lost something in ten years; but if there is a loss in the delay, there is also a gain. When the crime committed on August 11th, 1882, in Wadi Sadr was fresh in the public memory, when the nation as well as the many friends of Palmer and Gill were mourning their irreparable loss, it would have been impossible for this story how "justice, swift, stern, not to be escaped, fell upon their murderers," to have been calmly told. And there is much that calls for calmness. Palmer, and those with him, fell in no ordinary desert raid. Seldom was a murder more deliberately planned or carried out in cooler blood. "Perhaps," says Mr. Walter Besant in the introduction which he has written for this volume,

"the time has not yet come to tell the whole truth concerning this expedition. Things are known—I do not speak of things connected with his instructions, his powers, or the Government—which are not easy to prove, yet are very well known to a few. It is sufficient here to say that the real murderers of this scholar, and of the two gallant officers who fell with him, were not the wretched men who were rightly hanged for being the tools, but others."

The time to tell the whole truth will not come, it may be added, in the lifetime of living men. It may, indeed, never be told. It is a story of treachery and calculating malice, but as the reader peruses this account of the fate that, as if in answer to Palmer's dying invocations, overtook his murderers, he will feel that there is a strange injustice in those who planned the crime escaping its penalty.

It is doubtful whether the importance of Palmer's expedition to the Sinai Desert in the beginning of the summer of 1882 has quite been realized. From the first his doings were surrounded with a veil of mystery which has never been penetrated. The scanty relics of the expedition which were rescued by Sir Charles Warren, Capt. Haynes, and their brave comrades, as we are told in this narrative, have revealed little. The official despatches, or such of these as the exigencies of the public service permitted to be published, told scarcely more. But although certainty and complete knowledge are out of reach, we can, from such data as we possess, draw conclusions which throw some light upon much that is dark in this matter. Palmer's death came as a bitter surprise to those who knew him best, and most of all to those who knew something of the Desert of the Tih. He was better acquainted with the desert than any living European. It was only ten years since he had accomplished the survey for the Palestine Exploration Fund related in the 'Desert of the Exodus.' No doubt, as Capt. Haynes argues, the conditions had changed meanwhile, and the war had already produced results which could not be readily measured. But Palmer, with his intimate knowledge of the Bedouin—a knowledge to which no other Englishman had ever before attained, with the exception possibly of Sir R. Burton—was able to appreciate all these things. It must be remembered that when, accompanied by Capt. Gill and Lieut. H. Charrington and a small retinue, he set out from Suez on the mission, as it was given out, of buying camels and cutting the Syrian telegraph, he had already accomplished his great ride. He left Gaza to visit the Bedouin sheiks he knew, and those to whom he had introductions, on July 15th, and he reached Suez on the 1st of August. Mr. Bevan has told us all that is known of that perilous journey in his 'Life and Achievements of Edward Henry Palmer.' But there is much that will now probably never be known. Palmer was engaged on secret service, and he was not the man to violate the conditions of his employment by the Government by any ill-timed disclosures. But his subsequent conduct points to the conclusion that he had accomplished that mission to his own satisfaction. Upon the dangers he ran single-handed in this enterprise, Capt. Haynes throws some additional light. For example, Palmer was pursued by Sowarki Bedouin sent after him by the Governor of El Arish with orders to bring him in dead or alive. He carried his life in his hand, every mile of the hundred he travelled, as he went alone among the desert tribes, all then hostile to Christians, if not all yet attached to the cause of Arabi. That in spite of this he succeeded in getting through in safety, and, more than that, in pacifying the tribes, was a most remarkable achievement. The difficulties experienced by Sir Charles Warren in entering the desert—difficulties which were only overcome by unusual energy and determination—afford a measure of the service Palmer rendered. By necessary inference, more than by direct statement—for Capt. Haynes wisely confines himself for the most part to matters which happened within his own experience—he places beyond all doubt the surmise that it was to Palmer that the safety of the Canal was due. At the time when he went about from tribe to tribe, allaying their anxieties by arguments and promises, and securing their allegiance to the Khedive, they were almost to a man being subjected to overwhelming influences in favour of Arabi. It is not putting it too high to say that nobody except the Sheikh Abdullah could have turned back the current of desert opinion. Capt. Haynes questions Palmer's figures as to the fighting force of the Bedouin, and he may have been misled by the sheiks as to the number of men they could command; but there is little doubt that their influence would have rendered the task of the British army far heavier than it was—perhaps impossible. "What if he had not gone through the desert first?"

Capt. Haynes has told his story simply. If his volume is of a strong cerulean tint, the blemish is one which may be forgiven. It is a story, too, worth telling. It is well that it should not be left to Blue-books to relate how the strong arm of England was stretched out in defiance of all obstacles—of the impenetrability of the desert, of the silence of the Bedouin almost to a man, and of the duplicity of the great Cairene sheiks, who, at the moment when they were pretending to assist Warren, were straining every nerve to render his task impossible and to wipe off the face of the earth every vestige of that ghastly tragedy in the Wadi Sadr. But the dying prophecies of the Sheikh Abdullah were destined to be fulfilled. And perhaps they have not yet reached their full fulfilment.

St. Andrews. By Andrew Lang. (Longmans & Co.)

AN eminent Scottish antiquary has lately denounced all county and parish histories that are not largely founded on an exhaustive examination of the local retours; but, alas! the word "retours" is not so much as mentioned in any one of the 350 pages of this work. Mr. Lang himself modestly calls it "a little sketch of the history of St. Andrews"; so, too, Turner made little sketches of Kilchurn and Bemersyde, and other Highland and Border scenes. Turner's sketches, as Mr. Hamerton has pointed out, are not always too accurate; and in Mr. Lang's sketch we notice some slight inaccuracies. Alexander III. met his death at Kinghorn in 1286 (not 1285); and Paul Cawar, by Mr. Lang's own showing elsewhere, was burnt in 1432 (not 1471)—the true date, we fancy, is 1433. The "Murray" of p. 177 becomes "Moray" on p. 183; "Tala" is better spelt "Talla"; the author of 'Old Dundee' is Mr. Maxwell (not Melville); "monster" strikes us as strange for "monstrance"; and Montrose surely forded the Tweed afoot, not on horseback. Mr.

Lang writes of the sainted Samuel Rutherford that "some irregularity or peccadillo in connection with his marriage caused him to resign his lectureship"; the peccadillo in question was (so Mr. Cochrane discovered in 1892) nothing less than that pre-nuptial offence which figures so frequently in the kirk sessions' records.

There could not be much that is absolutely new in a history of St. Andrews; the slaying of the cardinal, the execution of Chastelard, the hanging of Archbishop Hamilton, and the murder of Archbishop Sharpe have often been told before. Still, in this history there is plenty of novelty, for Mr. Lang has the happy art of saying common things in an uncommon way, and of reviewing events from an unconventional standpoint. As a rule the writer who does not venerate Knox is certain to cherish a blind admiration for Montrose; that the rule does not hold good here is shown by the following passage:—

"In attempting to estimate the conduct of the clergy and Argyll, we must not forget how much Argyll had suffered from Montrose, who sacked his country, and how much the populace of Scotland had endured from the savagery of Montrose's Irish. They, in a civilised land, were like Red Indian or Zulu forces let loose among Europeans. The sack of Aberdeen was neither forgotten nor forgiven, and Spottiswoode, with his gallant friends, was a sacrifice as much to natural revenge as to the bloodthirsty zeal of a theocracy modelled on the wildest passions of ancient Israel. Others might have forgiven, these flowers of the kirk never forgave."

The passage affords a fair specimen of the history, and it also illustrates Mr. Lang's attitude towards the Reformers and Covenanters. Knox and Burns have been the two "makers of Scotland," the Ormuzd and Ahirman, so to speak, of its social life, though which has been which may be questioned. Anyhow, the great body of Scotsmen view Knox with respect, if not, indeed, with affection; Mr. Lang both dislikes and despises him. "That Knox," he writes, "'never feared the face of man' is proverbial, but he did not lack the better part of valour"; and Mr. Lang it was who first pointed out—as he points out once more here—the moral of the second marriage of Mrs. Knox to Ker of Faldonside, the most ruffianly of the ruffians who murdered Rizzio. The moral is that "the lady had a singular taste in lovers."

Such pithy sayings are to be met with on every page. The Covenanters "could do much to bring about what they predicted, and as they usually prophesied evil, they were usually correct in their forecasts." Ferguson is "our only modern poet, our harmless Villon—a noisy, lively lad, full of whisky, and melancholy, and religious fears." "Meanwhile Heaven, which is Presbyterian, punished St. Andrews with a plague and much unusually disagreeable weather"; and so forth. There is, it will be noticed, a certain causticity, but then Mr. Lang does not spare even himself, or at any rate his fellow Gifford lecturers. His work, with its thirty-two charming illustrations by Mr. Hodge, is a delightful one; we can conceive no more pleasant handbook of the annals of this little grey Northern city from the early days when it held seven Culdes Parsons.

Vieux Souvenirs, 1818-1848. Par le Prince de Joinville. (Paris, Calmann Lévy.)

This is a book of remarkable interest, with illustrations by the author, one of which, however, represents his birth, and many of which represent scenes in which he figured at the age of four or five. As we have mentioned the illustrations, we ought to add that, whether imaginary or not, from whatever hand, they are spirited, and in many cases give representations of scenes which are of considerable historical moment, with lifelike portraits of the personages, although the heads are on a microscopic scale. The recollections of a man who has dined in childhood with Louis XVIII. at the Tuileries; who has had the same tutor as Metternich, and who remembers a coronation at Rheims; who (as the son of the reigning king and as captain of a frigate) was long afterwards charged with the duty of bringing to France the ashes of Napoleon Bonaparte; and who has lived to see the exile of his father, the Second Republic, the Second Empire, and the twenty-fourth year of the Third Republic, cannot but be striking; and the Prince de Joinville's memoirs, which are written with extraordinary freedom, will enjoy an undoubted success.

He has not hesitated to caricature his sisters as well as himself, and to tell every story which he remembers, whether to the credit or the discredit of his family. Apologizing for his parents having allowed him as a boy to be a good deal behind the scenes of theatres, he explains that after all the trade of prince and the trade of actor are so much alike that it is just as well that princes and actors should be brought up together. Speaking of a party given by the old Duc de Bourbon, at which he was present with Louis Philippe and Marie Amélie, he says that there was a crowd because his father and mother had consented to receive Madame de Feuchères, "who had great influence with the old Duke, and who was not received at Court." Considering the history of the suicide or murder, the action of M. de Feuchères in afterwards refusing to receive, or to consent to his wife's accepting without separation from himself, any portion of the Duke's bequest to her, the bequest by the same will of the bulk of the Duke's fortune to the Prince de Joinville's brother, the tragic story of the supposed Condé curse, and the use which has been made of the incident by anti-Orleanist writers, the Prince de Joinville's paragraph almost bears the air of being purposefully malicious. We believe, however, that it is merely a part of the writer's extraordinary frankness, which must make his book a terror to his family and party, but which renders it the more historically important and the more certain to be widely read.

Among the Prince de Joinville's revelations is an account of how, having seen during the fair of Neuilly the non-commissioned officers of the Guards dancing in the public balls with the washerwomen in a style which may be imagined by those who have seen the dancing at a French fair, he set to work to induce his sisters to practise the same steps. The notion of the Duchess of Wurtemberg, the Queen of the Belgians, and that staid and reverend lady the Princess Clementine of Orleans dancing what is politely termed the national dance of France is irresistibly comic. There is another terrible story of how, when the Prince paid his visit to the church of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem, and was kneeling with his suite in prayer, the organ struck up in his honour, of all tunes in the world, the 'Marseillaise.' Another hit at the history of his father's reign is the Prince's anecdote of how one of the great officers of State, after one of the many attempts upon the King's life, on the remark by one of his friends, "Are we going now to the King to congratulate him?" gravely replied, "Certainly; it is the usage on these occasions." There is an anecdote of Talleyrand, dying, receiving the young princes for the purposes of prophesying to them how the reign of Louis Philippe was to terminate. "It will be neither the knife nor the pistol, but a rain of great stones from the roof which will crush you all." Another somewhat pretty anecdote is that of the Prince de Joinville, after the State dinner celebrating the inauguration of the Museum of Versailles, which was followed by a gala representation of comedy, opera, and ballet, going to the King to ask him to allow the artistes to join the guests for the royal torchlight promenade. The King in consenting meant, of course, the actors and actresses of the Théâtre Français and of the Opéra, but the Prince de Joinville extended the royal invitation to the whole corps de ballet, the ladies of which proceeded to come in their town clothes, to which they had changed, carrying their pumps and skirts in little cardboard boxes in their hands.

When the Prince de Joinville sailed to join the fleet in the Levant, where he was to see a good deal of service, he had obtained orders from the ministry that he was not to have a State reception at Toulon, having been much annoyed at such treatment on former occasions. When he was some five miles from the town, he spied a horseman, who rode off towards the fortress after having seen that the Prince was in the carriage; and feeling certain what this meant, the Prince at once left the carriage and allowed it to go empty to Toulon, while he walked across the fields to the dockyard. He soon heard the royal salute, and says that he has no doubt that his carriage was received "with an enthusiasm difficult to describe," according, as he adds, to the universal official assurances on such occasions. Shortly afterwards he sailed for St. Helena to fetch the ashes of Napoleon. Comte Philippe de Roban-Chabot was attached to his mission as a diplomatist for the settlement of the negotiations, and is well known to us as that Comte de Jarnac who afterwards died (when Ambassador of the Third Republic at London) of an easterly wind experienced at a Drawing-Room. As soon as they were at sea the Count displayed "sealed orders," signed by Thiers, directing the diplomatist to take complete command of the mission, showing the distrust felt for the King by the minister, and the intention to place the King's son under the ministry, and to affirm distinctly the principle that the constitutional king had no share in government. The result was, not a breach between the two young men, but the creation of a feeling of hatred and contempt for the minister in the mind of the Prince.

When Prince de Joinville reached Paris with Napoleon's body he explained that he knew exactly what to do because the ceremony for "the entry" was the same as he had already gone through in the case of Charles X. and in that of the Duchess of Orleans. The ministers had drawn up a speech for the Prince to his father, to be made in handing over the body, and a reply for the King; but they had not given the speech to the Prince nor told him of it—at least so he says, though we would not be too certain that he had not torn it up; and the result was that his speech was not delivered, although it duly appeared in the official journal.

Later in the book we come to a good deal of scandal, about well-known English people among others, such as an anecdote about Lord Clarendon when British Minister in Spain as Mr. Villiers; and some of the stories, both about well-known French people and about English ladies, might well have been expunged.

There is a curious apparent slip in the Prince's account of his visit to the United States, which reads almost as though he thought that Murat had survived 1815; but this can only be apparent, or else it would be inexplicable. Among the fun that he makes of American ways he tells a story of a Philadelphia theatre at which he had taken seats, and which proceeded to advertise in enormous letters "Prince de Joinville at 8.30"—with the result that he did not attend.

The last of the references which we shall make concerns the annual festivities of all governments, which he says are always exactly alike, and always equally annoying. The speeches of the various bodies represented "are entirely without sincerity, and to their expression of their wishes the unfortunate chief of the State is eternally condemned to reply by the most diversified formulas of banality." In the case of the King, his father, he says they were taken down in shorthand, and then handed over to a brilliant Academician "to be polished up," the latter describing the process as "cooking the royal macaroni." During the reign of Louis Philippe

"the reception of the clergy had an originality of its own. Invariably not one word could be heard of the speech of the Archbishop. Whether it was by chance or by an unfortunate coincidence of hours, that speech was always covered by the noise of the tremendous congratulatory roll delivered in the courtyard by the twelve to fifteen hundred drums of the National Guard and garrison of Paris."

NEW NOVELS.

Katharine Lauderdale. By F. Marion Crawford. 3 vols. (Macmillan & Co.)

MR. CRAWFORD has mapped out for himself and his readers a sort of human comedy, made up of passages from the lives of a few wealthy residents in New York; and in the story of 'Katharine Lauderdale'—which deals largely in family details, analysis of character, hereditary motives and tendencies, with other problems of consanguinity, such as Balzac, Zola, and even the author of 'Saracinesca' have delighted to handle—he seeks to lay the foundations of a new structure of romantic interest. It seems just a little doubtful whether there is sufficient strength of characterization, or ruthlessness of vivisection, or bold intensity of purpose in Mr. Crawford's literary creations to sustain the fifteen or twenty volumes which he appears to contemplate. The drunkard, the miser, the shrewdly benevolent millionaire, the Spartan mother, and the epileptic artist have made their entrance on the stage; but, truth to tell, the air of New York scarcely seems to suit them. One misses the atmosphere that surrounded Mr. Crawford's earlier romances; and the very cleverest epigram and repartee, the pink of New York society, the indefinite multiplication of personages like Hamilton ("Ham") Bright and Frank Miner, would not suffice to make up for it. Of course there is no necessity to say that the author is more than equal to the task of creating a world in which the people know good and evil, and act upon their knowledge in the most interesting fashion. The hero and heroine are fairly sympathetic; but they are not amongst the most successful characters which Mr. Crawford has drawn.

Jack Doyle's Daughter. By R. E. Francillon. 3 vols. (Chatto & Windus.)

MR. FRANCILLON seldom troubles himself much over the construction of a story, and yet few writers make a more abundant assemblage of building materials. The mysteries attending the birth and palming off of Jack Doyle's daughter, and the complications involved in the descent of certain landed property in Lincolnshire, are so many in number, so incoherent, inconsistent, and improbable, that few readers are likely to keep count of them or put faith in them. If the author had found more difficulty in getting himself out of his complications, the story might have been much improved; but he never hesitates about taking a character created for one purpose and using him, or her, as a long-lost brother or a missing heir, and thus confusion is worse confounded. This is all the more unfortunate because the idea of a heroine with six fathers is happily conceived, and leads to some novel and amusing situations. 'Jack Doyle's Daughter' is a good novel spoiled in the making.

Orchard Damerel. By Alan St. Aubyn. 3 vols. (Hurst & Blackett.)

'ORCHARD DAMEREL' is a warm-coloured and somewhat gushing story, told with girlish simplicity and ignorance of technicalities. It makes a man succeed to an earldom through the discovery of an entry in an old book of recipes, after the title had been supposed to be in abeyance, although the trustees had known him for many years as a kinsman of the family, bearing the same name as the last earl, and although he himself knew as much as the book of recipes told him. It makes a disagreeable couple of bailiffs turn out of a rectory at a moment's notice, late at night, on the production of a cheque the worth of which they had no means of verifying. The most poignant sorrows and the most ecstatic joys recorded in these volumes spring from the loss or the acquisition of little sums of money; but such is Alan St. Aubyn's artless skill that the reader inclines to accept everything on her own showing—to grieve with her women's grief, and to rejoice with her women's joy. There is very little substance in 'Orchard Damerel,' but it will certainly be voted a nice and a pretty story.

A Man of To-day. By Helen Mathers. 3 vols. (White & Co.)

THE chief characteristic of this slipshod story is the vulgarity which permeates it from one end to the other. Matter and manner are both alike in this respect, and the pages of observations about things as they are—or are not—in society and the world in general are the most deplorable of all. The heroine has the misfortune to have a father who is engaged in trade, whereas her lovers and acquaintances are nearly all "born in the purple." This young person, whose name is "Easter," is no credit to her family, nor are her vagaries before or after marriage of an entertaining character. Her undesirable father's manners and customs—one of which is said to be the kissing of pretty maidservants—are no worse than those of the aristocratic circle in which she subsequently moves. The word "cad" is the only one which at all describes her Russian prince. The wicked Lala Hoyos, with her high-born countenance and low morality, is the only person whose remarks occasionally have some point in them. Both she and Easter are fond of being "attired à quatre épingles": why not "tires"? Their misdeeds are dull and monotonous; but what is really shocking to any right-minded person is the coolness with which a little girl, called Nan, is dragged by the author with full understanding into the polluted complications between Easter and the Strokoff animal. To throw a child into the mire to play good angel to two such persons is a lamentable device indeed, even in such a story.

Her Angel Friend. By Monica Tregarthen. 3 vols. (Digby & Long.)

A story much poorer as a story, or of a poorer style, than 'Her Angel Friend' it would be difficult to find even in these days of multitudinous writings. Yet a word or a touch here and there suggests that the author might possibly "with longer time and deeper lore" do something slightly better; there is much more to show she could not possibly do worse. Doctoring, nursing, and the medical profession generally appear to be her favourite hunting-ground. The "general practitioner" who is the principal character is quite humane and exemplary, and the one unkind word which makes him more or less responsible for the death of a hyper-sensitive wife must not be set down against him too severely. The "Angel Friend" is not this lady, but a popular young lady-nurse, who subsequently "takes over" the doctor and his daughters, and gives "every attention" to a case of hip disease developed by one of these. There are lots of other people, amongst them a virtuous country jeweller, his wife, and a young person who pawns a ring. None of them seems to have much vital connexion with the story nor any vital spark of their own. Most of them are remarkable for being very easily amused—a mere nothing excites them to outbursts of mirth. They may be called amiable and inoffensive persons, and we have no wish to find fault with their laughter-loving mood.

A Daughter of Music. By G. Colmore. 3 vols. (Hoinemann.)

THE most serious drawback about Mr. Colmore's clever novel is the fact that by its title, its motto—"The daughters of music shall be brought low"—the tone of its references to modern music, and the magnetic influence over the heroine ascribed to one of the chief characters, it will undoubtedly strike most readers as being a novel with no other purpose than that of endeavouring to establish a direct connexion between music and morals in general and Wagner and morals in particular. This is all the more to be regretted inasmuch as the controversial tendency of the book is likely to interfere with the success of its appeal to the public as a work of art. Mr. Colmore's major premise—that music intrinsically, and apart from associations, scenic accessories, or words, can work moral mischief—is disputable; but there can be no doubt of the force and sombre picturesqueness with which he has carried it out to its logical catastrophe. Evidences, conscious or unconscious, of the Brontëan influence are perceptible in the landscape and characterization. But Mr. Colmore's method is, in the main, his own, and a dramatic and forcible one to boot, while the complete absence of all "up-to-date" actuality in the dialogue and mounting of the story lends it a freshness which accentuates its undoubted originality.

The Daughter of the Nez Percés. By Arthur Paterson. 2 vols. (Bentley & Son.)

TO turn from the unpleasant problems which occupy the attention of so many novel-writers of the present day to a story about Red Indians (noble-hearted or otherwise), and such adventures as those of Winnetka and "Big Fist," is quite a refreshing exercise. Mr. Paterson goes to some trouble in his preface to explain that his novel both is, and is not, historical; that Joseph, chief of the Nez Percés, is actually alive, although various of the incidents of this stirring tale spring from the fertile brain of its author. Part of the explanation will probably be superfluous; the other part may conceivably add something to the interest of one of the figures in it. For the rest, there is plenty of realistic fighting and of good old unrealistic romance, supplied by Joseph's half-caste and highly civilized daughter and her admirers, red and white. Tomahawks, scalps, squaws and piccaninnies, none of the good old properties are wanting, and the story awakens sensations which are pleasingly reminiscent of days too long gone by. The pretty binding of the book must not be passed over without a word of praise.

Janet Delille. By E. N. Leigh Fry. 2 vols. (Hurst & Blackett.)

WITHOUT being either a very striking or original book, 'Janet Delille' has several most engaging qualities. Although in its essence a story of serious aim, its pathetic side is enhanced by the author's fresh and often irresistible strokes of humour. The studio life of the heroine and her companion, with its struggles and its triumphs, is excellent reading; and although Mr. Leigh Fry is perhaps too fond of introducing the lights of fashionable Bohemia under thinly-veiled pseudonyms, his satire is well aimed and in the main genial. "Passion in the parlour" is a decidedly happy phrase for the fervid folly of some modern minstrels; and there is a really delightful sketch of a restless Jill of all trades, a Lady Haddesley, who gave up charity for athletics, and renounced the latter "after she had fallen from the horizontal bar in the presence of a select female circle, two bishops, and a section of the medical profession." As for Janet herself, she is one of those women whom it would be good to meet in real life. Mr. Leigh Fry, in short, has earned our sincere gratitude for a story that is at once wholesome and entertaining.

The Man in Black. By Stanley J. Weyman. (Cassell & Co.)

'THE MAN IN BLACK' is not likely to add to the reputation of the author of such romances as 'The House of the Wolf' or 'A Gentleman of France,' and yet it is in no way a discreditable performance. But it is slight, and wanting in blood and bone and an air of conviction and vigour. The "business" is dark and stern enough in kind, but it is reeled off so easily that its portentous character disappears. There is not a great deal of the solid interest and peculiarly artistic atmosphere and workmanship Mr. Weyman has taught us to expect. Though the story is of themes that should be exciting—it is of France in the early days of 1600—some will own to a feeling of disappointment. The Man in Black is an astrologer and poisoner, and his personality and "place of business" are grim enough in all conscience. Yet one feels it is all too facile and easily touched off, and that the reader will be apt to take it with equal ease and lightness in spite of the horrors depicted.

An Unsatisfactory Lover. By Mrs. Hungerford. (White & Co.)

TERRY O'MORE is pleasantly Irish, like her name, and quite enough so to be the alternate plague and delight of the conventional young Englishman with the eyeglass, whom she is perpetually putting into false positions from which he emerges more or less discomfited. As a study of the growth of love, the course of which is sufficiently checked to test its reality, the history of Terry and Gerrard Trefusis is not unworthy of the author, who has often happily described the dawning womanhood of unsophisticated girls. But it is unfortunate that its merits should be obscured by such deformities as the inane interludes provided by Mr. Evingley, the poet, and Mr. Kitts, the comic man; by commonplace, not to say coarse jibes at Low Church devotees; and by such rude anecdotes as that of the duchess who swallowed her false tooth, and of Sir Darby Mackenzie, who was drunk at a temperance meeting. The two young "pickles," too, for whose sake their sister Terry first accepts the idea of marriage, are none the more tolerable for their clownish practical jokes. Mrs. Hungerford's wit, it must be confessed, is often depressing, and strangely out of keeping with the undeniable humour which pervades and lightens her love scenes. We like Terry and her swain, who is as true as he is tactless; but we wish they had been in better company.

The King's Asagai: a Matabili Story. By Bertram Mitford. (Chatto & Windus.)

MR. MITFORD indulges in a "romance of an historical episode," which Mr. Stanley Wood makes more attractive with half a dozen pictures of horrid black men in the most frantic attitudes. We read of Tshaka's impi, and Basuto kraals, and a Tyasigama dance, and a Mosutu witch-doctor, and many other details and incidents in the recent history of the noble savage in South Africa. The tale is told by Untiswa, son of Ntelani, freely annotated by Mr. Mitford; and no doubt there is a good deal of trustworthy information in its two hundred and fifty pages.

Marcienne. Par Édouard Delpit. (Paris, Calmann Lévy.)

MR. DELPIT's book is not very like real life, but is a sensational novel in which there is a good deal of character, so that movement is obtained, if not reality. The novel is an ordinary modern French story of passion; but the scene is laid in a world which is a little cosmopolitan, although not much hint of this is given, so that some of the incidents will be as "shocking" to well-brought-up French people as to English readers. The book is one not very easy to lay down, in spite of its improbabilities.

Le Chemin de Damas. Par Léon de Tinseau. (Paris, Calmann Lévy.)

M. DE TINSEAU's new story, although comparatively speaking a simple tale, with but a small number of characters, reminds us of M. Paul Bourget's 'Cosmopolis.' It contains excellent studies of an exotic lady and of a French lady who successively adore a French naval officer, also well drawn. He is too young to understand the first, and the poor Levantine kills herself when she finds that she has her maid for rival. He is converted by the second to the true humility of love. All three—the hero and two heroines—are too fond of digging themselves up to see how they are growing.

Les Élans d'Élodie. Par Madame P. de Nanteuil. (Paris, Hachette & Co.)

MADAME DE NANTEUIL's new volume, which belongs to the "Petite Bibliothèque de la Famille" series, is, generally speaking, of the usual character, but is a story of our times, of which the scene is laid at Cherbourg, and which is somewhat less a novel of adventure and less an "historical novel" than are most of those of this excellent writer.

AMERICAN HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY.

The History of the United States of America, by Henry Adams, is now concluded by the publication of the ninth volume (Putnam's Sons). We have noticed all the volumes except the last three, and they are as good as the others which we have praised. A general index, at the end of the ninth, adds to the usefulness of the whole. Mr. Adams writes well, but he might have treated sixteen years of his country's history within a smaller compass. Mr. Kinglake wrote at as great length when narrating the Crimean campaign, yet the length of his story was its chief fault; the style, at any rate, was vivacious. Mr. Adams does not succeed in making the reader forget the number of pages which he covers. A large part of the concluding volumes is devoted to the war against England which the United States declared in 1812. Mr. Adams tries to defend Madison's conduct, urging as an excuse that England was then so disastrously engaged in a struggle with Bonaparte that she could not have been expected to resist with success the demands which the United States preferred, sword in hand. The Southerners favoured the war; the Northerners were its opponents. In the history by Bryant and Gay it is stated that Madison plunged into war with the view of being elected President for the second time. He was re-elected; but the war itself ended without the demands of the United States being conceded. If the country had remained at peace its progress would have been more rapid. Those who desire to read the details of this great blunder should turn to Mr. Adams's work.

The French War and the Revolution, by Prof. Sloane (Sampson Low & Co.), and Division and Reunion, by Dr. Woodrow Wilson, another Princeton professor (Longmans), are recent additions to the mass of books dealing with the history of the United States. These two volumes contain nothing that is new, and not much that cannot be found in others. Both are carefully compiled, and both contain illustrative maps. Of the two the first is better fitted for the general reader, who is supposed to hunger after information, while the second is obviously prepared to instil information into the school-boy, who may have no longing for it. Prof. Sloane tells his story with clearness, and now and then he makes observations which display his acuteness, as, for instance, when he writes that the revolutionary war was a contest between brothers: "There was no nice line of separation on one side and on the other of either principles or conduct, for there were Tories in America and American sympathizers in England." If the framers of Fourth of July orations would take these words to heart they might pen less nonsense. Prof. Wilson deals with contemporary politics and with questions which are still burning. He has endeavoured to be impartial, and, though his success is not perfect, his intention is praiseworthy. Surely, however, he might have headed the fifth chapter "Restoration of the Union," and not "Rehabilitation of the Union." Each work has the great advantage of an excellent index.

Through Colonial Doorways, by Anne Hollingsworth Wharton (Lippincott), is a pretty volume and a pleasant one to read. The author has tried to represent the lighter side of colonial life, and she has succeeded in her endeavour. Before the revolution and during it, cakes and ale were known in America. The wives and daughters of the revolutionary leaders did not disdain fine clothes when they could wear them, or dances when they could enjoy them. While Philadelphia was occupied by General Howe, a splendid entertainment, arranged by the unfortunate Major André, was given in the General's honour. It was called "The Mischianza," and grave historians have written as if it were a disgrace. The particulars of what occurred have been withheld, and Mrs. Wharton has taken great pains in obtaining and setting them forth. The performance itself was a revival of a Middle Age tournament, with several changes and improvements. Balls and receptions given in New York after Washington became President are described, as are the more serious proceedings of the American Philosophical Society. A bundle of old love-letters forms another interesting chapter. After the evacuation of Philadelphia, the ladies who had taken part in the festivities during the British occupation were excluded from invitations to the festive gatherings. There Mrs. Washington held her first Drawing-Room—it is absurdly called a Levee by Mrs. Wharton—and a writer who was present said, "There was so much of Philadelphia taste in everything that it must be confessed the most delightful occasion of the kind ever known in this country." No intelligent reader of this volume will regret the time spent over it.

Thomas Hazard, Son of Robt, call'd College Tom, by Caroline Hazard (Boston and New York, Houghton, Mifflin & Co.), is a study of life in Rhode Island during the eighteenth century. The work contains curious particulars relating to local history in Narragansett, which the historian of America would find profitable, but they are set forth in too crude a form for the reader who likes his information to be palatable. The title of the book is a puzzle. It might naturally be supposed that the person nicknamed College Tom had some special connexion with a university, whereas Thomas Hazard was thus styled because he had attended New Haven College for several terms. He was born in 1720. His family were in good circumstances, and he seems to have been so also. He was a member of the Society of Friends, and his chief achievement was to convince that Society that slavery was a sin, and he laboured hard and successfully for its abolition. He set the example by freeing his own slaves. A few anecdotes relieve the dryness of these pages. In Connecticut there was greater religious strictness than in Rhode Island. A small boy was taken from his Rhode Island home to visit some relatives in Connecticut. The head of the house catechized him, and put the question, "How many Gods are there?" "There ain't e'er a one in Rhode Island," was the reply. By way of contrast another story is told of a little Connecticut boy who, when asked the question, "What State do you live in?" immediately replied, "State of sin and misery, sir."

Princeton Sketches: the Story of Nassau Hall, by George W. Wallace (Putnam's Sons), relates to the foundation and rise of the University of New Jersey. Though considerably younger than several other American universities, it has grown as rapidly as any of them, and its name is held in as high honour. It was founded on November 9th, 1748. Funds were provided in its earlier days by means of a lottery, and Mr. Wallace gives the facsimile of a scheme for that purpose which appeared in the Pennsylvania Journal for January 16th, 1750, the encouragement being held out to those who bought tickets that the design was to "furnish the youth with all useful learning, and at the same time to instil into their minds the principles of morality and piety." After a long struggle, the new university prospered. Jonathan Edwards, who became its President in 1758, died from unsuccessful inoculation shortly after being installed. Less notable men succeeded him, the most successful being one in recent days, to whom this seminary of learning owes much of the fame which it now enjoys. This was the Rev. Dr. McCosh, who left the Chair of Logic and Metaphysics in Queen's College, Belfast, to preside over Princeton. He did so for twenty years with considerable ability. The sphere of the University widened during his time, and has continued to do so, science being now as much cared for, it is said, as the older departments of knowledge. Mr. Wallace, a graduate of Princeton, has narrated the changes in a pleasant style, and the illustrations add to the charm of his interesting volume.

Personal Recollections of Nathaniel Hawthorne, by Horatio Bridge (Osgood, McIlvaine & Co.), is a small book which every admirer of Hawthorne ought to read. Few of the volumes which have been written on the subject give the reader much information that is worth having. Mr. Bridge was Hawthorne's schoolfellow and his intimate friend through life. He entered the navy, and he did not stand in a literary relation to his literary friend. For that reason, possibly, Hawthorne was most frank with him. The letters which are reprinted here all contain passages worth reading. The following was written by Hawthorne shortly before 'The Scarlet Letter' appeared: "Some portions of the book are powerfully written; but my writings do not, nor ever will, appeal to the broadest class of sympathies, and therefore will not attain a very wide popularity." After its appearance he wrote to his friend:—

"I feel an infinite contempt for the Salem people, and probably have expressed more of it than I intended, for my preliminary chapter has caused the greatest uproar that has happened here since witch-times. If I escape from town without being tarred and feathered, I shall consider it good luck. I wish they would tar and feather me; it would be such an entirely novel kind of distinction for a literary man. And, from such judges as my fellow-citizens, I should look upon it as a higher honour than a laurel crown."

Although the letters in this volume are not many, they are all characteristic and instructive, and help to reveal the real Hawthorne.

William Jay and the Constitutional Movement for the Abolition of Slavery, by Bayard Tuckerman (Osgood, McIlvaine & Co.), is a work designed to explain the anti-slavery agitation which ended in the civil war of 1861-5. Mr. Jay, whose life is narrated, was the son and biographer of one of the founders of the North American republic. He was an eminently patriotic and pious man, yet if it be an honour to have a biography written, he did not deserve it. In the chapter on early anti-slavery men it is said that Patrick Henry, of Virginia, and John Jay, of New York, were conspicuous among them. The writer of these words must have been unaware that Patrick Henry, who eloquently proclaimed the doctrine of human equality, lived and died a slave-holder. The agitation for the abolition of slavery, in which William Jay played an honourable and conspicuous part, did not have his approval in all its manifestations. Some of those who were ardent in the cause wished to achieve other ends. Gerrit Smith was one of them. He thought that drinking anything containing alcohol was as wicked as holding slaves. William Jay wrote in 1838 that he had seen abolition used "as a packhorse to carry into the world some favourite notion having no legitimate connexion with the anti-slavery cause." He added: "Thus have I known an official document, under the signature of a secretary of a State society, pass a high eulogium on a particular form of Church government, and I have seen an editorial article in an official anti-slavery periodical recommending a decoction of dried currants as a substitute for the fermented juice of the grape in the observance of the Lord's Supper." William Jay was born on the 16th of June, 1789; he died on the 14th of October, 1858.

The History of the Expedition under Lewis and Clark (Henry Stevens & Son) is the most fascinating story of exploration in the annals of the United States. It was undertaken at the instance and with the support of President Jefferson, after Louisiana had been acquired from France. The work has been out of print for many years. The new edition, in four volumes, is something more than a reprint of the authorized one which appeared in 1814. Dr. Elliott Coues, the editor, has had the manuscript journals and field note-books of the explorers from which to draw explanatory notes. Moreover, full details are given of those who took part in it. The small party executed a feat such as commands our respect. They passed through an unknown land and through tribes of hostile Indians from the Missouri to the Pacific Ocean. They took their lives in their hands, and for two years they disappeared from public view. It was with surprise that their return was welcomed. They were supposed to have perished. That they should have lived to return is wonderful. Those who now traverse the continent in a luxurious railway carriage cannot realize how great were the obstacles which Lewis and Clark had to surmount. The work deserves to be read; it resembles a narrative of travel in the Middle Ages, not only in the adventures passed through, but in the simplicity with which the story is told. This edition supersedes any other, and it is one which every good library should contain.

The Life and Adventures of James P. Beckwourth, Mountaineer, Scout, Pioneer, and Chief of the Crow Nation of Indians (Fisher Unwin), is the long title of the new edition of a work for the authenticity of which Mr. Leland vouches. Beckwourth was born in 1798, and he is supposed to have lived till 1867. The greater part of his life was spent among the Indians on the frontier. He took part in their fights; he married and had children by Indian girls. His feats were heroic, as narrated in these pages, but they may have been largely imaginary. When reading what he performed we recall the words of Fuller, who noted that Capt. John Smith was the sole witness of his own achievements in the New World. Yet, even if all that is narrated be authentic, the book is most wearisome. The Indians appear to have been unable to rest for more than a short time in peace with their neighbours. They regarded warfare as civilized persons regard going to the play. The following passage is the most instructive in the book:—

"Trading whiskey for Indian property is one of the most infernal practices ever entered into by man. Let the reader sit down and figure up the profits on a forty gallon cask of alcohol, and he will be thunder-struck, or rather whiskey-struck. When disposed of, four gallons of water are added to each gallon of alcohol. In two hundred gallons there are sixteen hundred pints, for each of which the trader gets a buffalo robe worth five dollars. The Indian woman toils many long weeks to dress these sixteen hundred robes. The white trader gets them all for worse than nothing, for the poor Indian mother hides herself and her children in the forests until the effect of the poison passes away from the husbands, fathers and brothers, who love them when they have no whiskey, and abuse and kill them when they have [any?]. Six thousand dollars for sixty gallons of alcohol! Is it a wonder that with such profits in prospect men get rich who are engaged in the fur trade? or is it a miracle that the poor buffalo are becoming gradually exterminated, being killed with so little remorse that their very hides, among the Indians themselves, are known by the appellation of a pint of whiskey."

Since this was written the buffalo have almost entirely disappeared. The North American Indians are following them to the land of spirits.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

We have received The Parish Councillor's Handbook, by Mr. Corrie Grant, with a preface by Dr. Spence Watson, President of the National Liberal Federation, published by the Liberal Publication Department. This handbook, like two others which we have noticed, gives a fair and generally accurate account of the Local Government Act, although the one now before us differs from the other two in according special prominence to Parish-Council parishes, and allowing other matters to fall into the background. It may, therefore, be slightly more convenient than the others for use in Parish-Council parishes, but it will be of little value elsewhere, and will be useful in only a limited number of parishes, as more than half the parishes in the country will either certainly not have Parish Councils, or are in doubt whether they will have them or not. Of course, no parishes in urban districts can obtain them. The two chief errors which we notice in this book are Dr. Spence Watson's statement in the preface that the new powers of the parish include "the control of village charities"; and Mr. Corrie Grant's statement at the head of his account of Parish Meetings in parishes which have not Parish Councils: "There will be some cases in which parishes will not choose to have a Parish Council or will not be grouped with other parishes to elect a Parish Council." This latter statement implies that a "Parish-Meeting parish" (to use the new slang) will be a rare exception. A careful perusal of the Act shows that Parish-Meeting government must be very common, and our belief is that it will be general in the smaller parishes, which form the vast majority in most counties. With regard to Dr. Spence Watson's statement, the control of village charities is exactly what the villages have asked for and have not received. Where there is a vestige of popular control at present, that vestige is retained and revived; but where there is not—which is the more important case, and the case with all the richer charities—the villages have got (unless they can convert that very "stiff" body the Charity Commissioners) virtually nothing.

MR. BENTLEY has done well in reprinting the Journal of the Conversations of Lord Byron with the Countess of Blessington, for although it is a dangerous authority to rely on, the volume will always have a certain value for those who wish to understand Byron, and it is decidedly readable. Miss Power's sketch of Lady Blessington is prefixed to this handsome reprint, which is enriched with portraits, and the editor has added an excellent memoir, which, however, terminates abruptly.

MR. PIKE's Biography of John Cassell (Cassell & Co.) is written in too emphatic a style, and outside the circle of readers to whom it directly appeals it will probably excite somewhat different feelings from what the author designs to call forth.

LADY BETTY BALFOUR has prefixed an interesting introduction to the volume of Selected Poems: The Earl of Lytton (Longmans). Her criticism of her father's work shows judgment and sound sense, although her opinion of Lord Lytton's poetical achievement is naturally enough higher than ours. The choice of poems is judicious.

We have received a pretty little volume from the Florentine firm of Lœcher & Seebler, named Dante: di Giorno in Giorno. It is compiled by Signorina Eugenia Levi, and consists of a number of extracts from Dante for each month and each day of the month, the extracts being given not only in the original Italian, but in foreign languages as well—French, German, and English. In the English language Longfellow and Lyell are the favourites, but some other translators have also been drawn upon. For the months the extracts are appropriate enough. As to the days, little or no attempt is made to select anything apposite—for instance, the extract for Christmas Day has no reference to that day in particular. The plan of the compilation is, we think, less satisfactory, the editor beginning with extracts from the 'Vita Nuova,' and, when those are exhausted, passing on to other works—the 'Paradiso' coming last but one, and then finally a Latin eclogue. This is not the first production of Signorina Levi, who has compiled some other anthologies, beginning in 1891. The print of the present volume is small, but choice, the ink rather faint, so that a tolerably good pair of eyes is needed for enjoying the selection. In its proper circle of readers it deserves acceptance.

We have received new editions of Mr. Allardye's clever tale The City of Sunshine (Blackwood & Sons); of Mrs. Kennard's translation of Timar's Two Worlds, by Maurus Jokai (same publishers); of Adventures in Mashonaland, by Two Hospital Nurses (Macmillan & Co.); of Between the Silences, and other Stories, by Curtis Yorke (Jarrold & Sons); and of Mr. Gissing's recent novel The Emancipated (Lawrence & Bullen).

The Medical Register and The Dentists' Register, two standard works of reference, have reached us from Messrs. Spottiswoode.

The first volume of the Yellow Book (Mathews & Lane), an illustrated quarterly, evidently aims at novelty, and yet it is not unlike in appearance the annual volumes of Chatterbox and other periodicals for young people. The opening article, Mr. Henry James's story, is the best piece of writing in the volume. Dr. Garnett and Mr. Saintsbury have also furnished excellent contributions. On the other hand, Mr. Le Gallienne's verses, which follow Mr. James's tale, are too artificial to be poetry, and Mr. Beerbohm's 'Defence of Cosmetics' is silly. Mr. Sickert's illustrations are not to our taste, and Mr. Beardsley's portrait of Mrs. Patrick Campbell is libellous. The Yellow Book will need to be better edited if it is to succeed.

We have on our table Walpole, a Study in Politics, by E. Jenks (Methuen);—Studies of Travel: Italy, by E. A. Freeman (Putnam);—Modern German Series: Harold, by Ernst von Wildenbruch, edited by A. Vagelin (Rivington, Percival & Co.);—Saskia, the Wife of Rembrandt, by C. K. Bolton (New York, Crowell);—Centenary History of the South Place Society, by M. D. Conway (Williams & Norgate);—Transactions and Proceedings of the Japan Society, Vol. I. (Kegan Paul);—An Introduction to the Study of Political Economy, by L. Coase, translated by L. Dyer (Macmillan);—Zoe's Lessons on Scientific Palmistry (Record Press);—The Queen of the Adriatic, by C. E. Clement (Gay & Bird);—John Boyd's Adventures, by T. W. Knox (Low);—A Queer Honeymoon, by H. Dew (Hayman & Co.);—The Station-Master's Children, by L. Indermaur (Wells Gardner);—On the Trail of the Moose, by E. S. Ellis (Nelson);—Astford, and other Poems, by W. E. Brockbank (Kegan Paul);—The Feast of Colytto, and other Poems, by O. T. Lusted (Digby & Long);—Shakespeare's Historical Tragedy of Richard III., edited by J. H. Leigh (Stewart);—Dante, a Dramatic Poem, by G. H. R. Dabbs and E. Righton (Macmillan);—Some Translations from Charles Baudelaire, Poet and Symbolist, by H. O. (Digby & Long);—Christ and Modern Life, by H. B. Ottley (Wells Gardner);—Religion in History and in Modern Life, by A. M. Fairbairn, D.D. (Hodder & Stoughton);—Thoughts for the Times, by F. C. Woodhouse, M.A., 2 vols. (Wells Gardner);—The Gospel according to St. Mark, edited by H. R. Heatley (Rivington);—The Christ Has Come, by E. Hampden-Cook (Simpkin);—Geschichte des Alterthums, by E. Meyer, Vol. II. (Stuttgart, Cotta);—Gustav, by J. de Crosals (Paris, Lecène & Oudin);—Doris, by L. Gallet (Paris, Lévy);—Chateaubriand, by A. Bardoux (Paris, Lecène & Oudin);—Joh. Peter de Memels Lustige Gesellschaft, by F. Gerhard (Nutt);—Shakespeare, by A. Brandl (Luzac);—Die Klage-lieder Jeremiae in der aethiopischen Bibelübersetzung, edited by Dr. J. Bachmann (Nutt);—Walsprache und Walsprachen, by G. Meyer and H. Schuchardt (Straßburg, Trübner);—De "Posterage" of Oproeding in Fremde Families, by S. R. Steinmetz (Leyden, Brill). Among New Editions we have The Chairman's Handbook, by Sir R. F. D. Palgrave (Low);—The Credentials of Science, by J. P. Cooke, LL.D. (Macmillan);—Australia as It Is, by a Clergyman (Longmans);—Scott's "Ivanhoe" (Nelson);—Discussions on Education, by G. Combe (Cassell);—A History of Civilization in Ancient India, by R. C. Dutt, C.I.E., 2 vols. (Kegan Paul);—Johnston's Elements of Agricultural Chemistry, revised by C. M. Aikman (Blackwood);—The Horse in Health and Disease, revised by G. Armatago (Warne).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Manual of Devotions for the Holy Communion, compiled from Various Sources, 18mo, 2/6 cl.
Parker's (J. V.) People's Bible: Vol. 2, Acts i.-xvi., 8vo, 8/6 cl.
Spurgeon's (C. H.) Third Series of Lectures to my Students, 8vo, 2/6 cl.

Thorold's (Rt. Rev. A. W.) The Tenderness of Christ, 3/6 cl.

Law.

Day's (S. H.) Election Cases in 1892-3, 8vo, 7/6 cl.
Hall's (W. E.) Treatise on the Foreign Powers and Jurisdiction of the British Crown, 8vo, 10/6 cl.
Motherole's (H. B. N.) The Parish Councils Guide, 3/6 cl.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

Petrie's (W. M. F.) Tell-el-Amarna, with Chapters by Prof. Sayce and others, imp. 4to, 25 net, bds.
Society of Fine Arts, Paris, 1894, Illustrated Catalogue, 3/6
Wood's (E.) Dante Rossetti and the Pre-Raphaelite Movement, 8vo, 12/6 half-parliament.

Poetry and the Drama.

Akerman's (W.) The Cross of Sorrow, a Tragedy in Five Acts, imp. 18mo, 6/ net, parchment.
Chaucer's Complete Works, edited by Rev. W. W. Skeat, Vol. 2, demy 8vo, 16/ buckram.
Fielding's (B.) In Verse and Out of It, being Metaphysical Studies and Stories, 8vo, 2/6 cl.
Lang's (A.) Ban and Arriere Ban, a Rally of Fugitive Rhymes, 12mo, 5/ net, cl.
Poems, Sonnets, Songs, and Verses, 12mo, 3/6 parchment.

Bibliography.

Catalogue of Books relating to the University, Town, and County of Cambridge, Notes by E. Bowes, 10/6 net, cl.

Philosophy.

Fowler (T.) and Wilson's (J. M.) The Principles of Morals, 8vo, 14/ cl.
Waller's (B.) The Microcosm and the Macrocosm, an Essay in Philosophy, 8vo, 2/ cl.

History and Biography.

Cassell's History of England, Vol. 7, 4to, 9/ cl.
Grant (General Sir H.) Life of, edited by H. Knollys, 2 vols. 8vo, 31/ cl.
Johnson's Life of Pope, with Introduction by F. Ryland; Life of Swift, 8vo, 2/ each, cl.
Taine's (H.) The Modern Régime, Vol. 2, 8vo, 16/ cl.

Geography and Travel.

Scottland's (C.) On Sunny Shores, illustrated, 8vo, 3/ cl.

Philology.

Jarven's Satires, 1, 2, 4, edited by A. H. Allcroft, 3/6 cl.
Livron's (Capt. A. de) Anglo-Russian Marine Dictionary, 7/6
MacLagan's (T. T.) The Royal English Dictionary, 2/6 cl.
Matriculation Model Answers: French, 8vo, 2/ swd.
Ritchie's (F.) A First Latin Verse Book, 8vo, 2/ cl.

Science.

Carnegie's (D.) Law and Theory in Chemistry, 8vo, 6/ cl.
Hurd's (H. M.) Hospitals, Dispensaries, and Nursing, 8vo, 21/ net, cl.
Lee's (R. B.) Modern Dogs of Great Britain: The Terriers, illustrated, 8vo, 10/6 cl.
Rose's (T. K.) The Metallurgy of Gold, 8vo, 31/ cl.
Tweedie's (Major-General W.) The Arabian Horse, his Country and People, royal 4to, 63/ cl.

General Literature.

Costley's (T.) My Favourite Authors, 8vo, 2/6 net, cl.
Crawford's (P. M.) Marion Darcie, 8vo, 6/ cl.
Dale's (O.) Strange Stories of Strange People, 8vo, 3/6 cl.
Elementary Education, 8vo, 4/ cl.
Fallen Angels, a Disquisition upon Human Existence, by One of Them, 8vo, 8/ cl.
Godkin's (G. S.) Il Mal Occchio, or the Evil Eye, 8vo, 3/6
Gould's (S. B.) The Queen of Love, a Novel, 3 vols, 31/6 cl.
Gray's (M.) A Costly Freak, 8vo, 6/ cl.
Hainault's (L.) Time and the Player, 8vo, 3/6 cl.
Jocelyn's (Mrs. E.) For One Season Only, a Sporting Novel, 12mo, 3/6 cl.
Landon's (J.) The Principles and Practice of Teaching and Class Management, 8vo, 8/ cl.
Organization of Charities, edited by D. C. Gilman, 6/ net, cl.
Southam's (A. D.) Type-writing as a Means of Earning a Livelihood, 8vo, 3/ cl.
Squance's (H. S.) Miss Mackerell Skye, a Fairy Tale, 3/6 cl.
Street's (A. H.) Critical Sketches, 8vo, 1/ cl.
Twain's (M.) Tom Sawyer Abroad, 8vo, 3/6 cl.
Venn's (Mrs.) The Husband of One Wife, 3 vols, 8vo, 31/6
West's (J. M.) The Elements of Military Topography, 3/6 cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Friedländer (M.) Zur Entstehungsgeschichte des Christenthums, 2m, 80.
Kohn (S.) Die Sabbatarier in Steinenbürgen, 7m.
Reusch (F. H.) Beiträge zur Geschichte des Jesuitenordens, 8m.
Tepe (G. B.) Institutiones Theologiae in usum Scholarum, Vol. 1, 4m, 80.
Winter (J.) u. Wütsche (A.) Die jüdische Literatur seit Abschluss des Kanons, Vol. 1, 11m.

Drama.

Schwartz (R.) Hethor im Drama des Reformationsalters, 4m.

History and Biography.

Bertin (G.) Madame de Lamballe, 8fr, 50.
Boguslawski (A. v.) Der Krieg der Vendée, 7m, 50.
Guillon (B.) Les Combats militaires sous le Consulat et l'Empire, 8fr, 50.
Kuns: Hunsdarellungen v. Schlachten aus dem Kriege von 1870-1, Part 3, 8m.
Lamprecht (K.) Deutsche Geschichte, Vol. 5, Part 1, 6m.
Portig (G.) Schüler in seinem Verhältnisse zur Freundschaft u. Liebe, 18m.

Geography and Travel.

Mission Paris. Exploration de l'Indo-Chine, 3 vols, 304r.
Montbard (G.) A travers le Maroc, 12fr.

Pouchet (G.): Mission scientifique de "La Manche" à l'Île Jean Mayon et au Spitzberg, 10fr.

Physiology.

Dunbar's Poems, edited by J. Schipper, Part 5, 7m.

Peters (K.): Schulwörterbuch zu Ovids sämtlichen Dichtungen, 2m, 50.

Reinhold (H.): Griechische Oestlichkeiten bei Pindaros, 1m, 30.

Scherff (R.): Französischer Antifortarius, 3m, 50.

Toussaint (M.): The Tail of Haut Collyear, 1m, 80.

Science.

Behrens (H.): Das mikroskopische Gefüge der Metalle u. Legierungen, 14m.

Dujard (A.) u. Balser (E.): Hilfsbuch f. Nahrungsmittelchemiker, 8m.

Lohmann (P.): Lebensmittelpollen, 5m.

General Literature.

Beaume (G.): Au Pays des Cigales, 3fr. 50.

Erbsberg Carl von Oesterreich: Ausgewählte Schriften, Vol. 4, 12m.

Oertzen (M. M. v.): Norwegische Novellen, 5m.

THE BOOKSELLERS' TRADE DINNER.

39, Paternoster Row, April 14, 1894.

"A LONDON BOOKSELLER" (who oddly enough does not give his name, so that his claim to be so called may be estimated) has administered to me, and I fear to many others, a startling shock. For forty-four years, the greater part of which has been spent in the wholesale trade, I have thought that I have been a bookseller; this, however, I now find, is not everybody's opinion, and what is worse, the gentleman, whom we must assume to be one, gives no clue to tell me what I really am.

But your correspondent must be a very Thomas amongst booksellers. He appears not to believe that a man employed in the wholesale part of the business has a right to be called a bookseller. He states that few believe in the Booksellers' Provident Institution (we may take it for granted, I think, that he is one who does not). He does not believe that the five dinners initiated by the Institution are trade dinners. And he does not believe that the majority of those who have been present are really booksellers.

May I be allowed to express the beliefs I hold in opposition to the "London Bookseller's" doubts?

I believe that a man remains a bookseller although he is merely in a wholesale warehouse, but whose work still consists in selling books in large quantities. I believe in and am proud of the great and beneficent action of such a society as that of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, which has for fifty-seven years existed to relieve the necessities of those in the trade who are its members, and which after all those years grants annually more than 1,500, amongst fifty or sixty recipients—those, I know well, thoroughly believe in it. I believe and am certain that booksellers have largely predominated amongst those present at each of the dinners referred to. And I do further believe that the dinner under the auspices of the Institution is more truly representative of the whole trade than a similar undertaking promoted by a body consisting chiefly of that part of it who have recklessly flung aside their living in an evil attempt to undermole their fellow tradesmen, and who now foolishly ask the principal wholesale houses to provide for them that profit which has been needlessly given to the public. The large firms have never advised nor favoured such unwine competition, and even now they afford by their steadfast terms the only security against a further ugly rush of discount.

WILLIAM BANTRAM.

4, Stationers' Hall Court, April 16, 1894.

YOUR correspondent of last week, who poses as "A London Bookseller," must, I think from the ignorance he displays of the composition of the committee and of the persons who attend our annual dinners, be of that unfortunately large class who would be more correctly designated as sellers of books rather than booksellers.

It has always been the object of the promoters of these dinners to have every department in the trade of bookselling represented. There are on the committee publishers, publishers' clerks, book distributors, booksellers (in your correspondent's sense of the term), and booksellers' assistants; whilst at the dinner we have, in addition to the classes already mentioned, paper-makers, stationers, printers, authors, bookbinders, real booksellers (I counted over forty present on Saturday last), and, in fact, representatives of every department that assists in making and carrying on what is called the bookselling trade.

Perhaps your correspondent, in his wisdom, would define the meaning of the term "bookseller," and also state from what source he derives his information "that few booksellers believe in the Booksellers' Provident Institution." But it is impossible to discuss these questions with one who is apparently ashamed of his name. To me it is a great satisfaction that I belong to the Booksellers' Provident Institution. I am also proud to be one of the committee of the dinners held under its auspices, and that we are instrumental in bringing together two hundred and fifty gentlemen all, more or less, interested in the trade of bookselling.

I maintain that we are doing far more good by thus giving authors and publishers the opportunity of seeing and knowing those who have the selling and distributing of the books they produce, and by our effort to establish a seaside home for booksellers and their assistants, than those "whose annual dinner takes place in October," and who are just now attempting to coerce the publishers into giving them better terms.

JOSEPH SHAYLOR.

THE 'DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.'

THE following is the third part of a list of names which it is intended to insert under the letter B (Section I.) in the 'Dictionary of National Biography.' When one date is given, it is the date of death, unless otherwise stated. An asterisk is affixed to a date when it is only approximate. The editor of the 'Dictionary' will be obliged by any notice of omissions addressed to him at Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.'s, 15, Waterloo Place, S.W. He particularly requests that when new names are suggested, an indication may be given of the source from which they are derived.

Reeve, Clara, author, 1739-1803.
Reeve, Edmund, divine, s. 1837.
Reeve, Edmund, judge, 1647.
Reeve, Henry, physician, 1790-1814.
Reeve, John, conductor of Muggleton, 1608-1608.
Reeve, John, actor, 1709-1804.
Reeve, Joseph, Jesuit, 1733-1830.
Reeve, Lovel, conchologist, 1805-1863.
Reeve, Thomas, B.D., divine, s. 1860.
Reeve, Sir Thomas, judge, 1737.
Reeve, William, musical composer, 1766-1815.
Reeves, Charles, architect, 1815-1866.
Reeves, George, author, s. 1760.
Reeves, John, king's printer, 1739-1829.
Reeves or Reeve, Richard, Benedictine monk, 1642-1693.
Reeves, William, chaplain to Queen Anne, 1669-1736.
Reeves, William, Bishop of Down, Connor, and Dromore, 1815-1892.
Regan, Maurice, Irish chronicler, s. 1171.
Regimorter, Amseerus, physician, 1613-1650.
Reginald, Abbot of Abingdon, 1096.
Reginald of Canterbury, Latin poet, s. 1112.
Reginald, Abbot of Walden, s. 1164.
Reginald of Durham, author, s. 1165.
Reginald of Dunstanville, Earl of Cornwall, 1109-1175.
Reginald, Henry, translator, s. 1549.
Reginald, King of the Danes in England, s. 994.
Regulus, St., Abbot or Bishop of St. Andrews, s. 4th cent.
Relataek, Edward, eccentric and linguist, 1819-1891.
Reid, Alexander, painter, 1747-1833.
Reid, Alexander, educational writer, s. 1845.
Reid, Andrew, author, s. 1740.
Reid, David Boswell, inventor, 1806-1863.
Reid, George William, Keeper of Prints at British Museum, 1819-1867.
Reid, Hugo, scientific writer, s. 1833-1870.
Reid, James, Chief Justice of Canada, s. 1830.
Reid, James Scanton, divine, 1798-1851.
Reid, John, general, 1721-1807.
Reid, John, physician, 1773-1822.
Reid, John, 'Bibliotheca Scotto-Celtica,' s. 1832.
Reid, John, anatomist, 1808-1849.
Reid, Capt. Mayne, novelist, 1818-1863.
Reid, Peter, physician, 1777-1833.
Reid, Richard L., Professor of Jurisprudence at Bombay, 1853.
Reid, Robert, Bishop of Orkney, 1608.
Reid, Thomas, Scottish metaphysician, 1710-1796.

Reid, Thomas, surgeon, 1791-1826.

Reid, Sir William, major-general, 1791-1866.

Reid, William Hamilton, bookseller and minor poet, 1794-1866.

Reilly, William Edmund Moyne, Inspector-General of Artillery, 1827-1886.

Reinagle, George Philip, painter, 1802-1835.

Reinagle, Joseph, music composer, s. 1785.

Reinagle, Philip, painter, 1740-1833.

Reinagle, Ramsay Richard, painter, 1776-1862.

Reinold or Reginald, Bishop of Ross, 1213.

Reiner or Reginald, Archbishop of Armagh, 1266.

Reinger or Reinger, Richard, judge, 1282.

Reiny, John de, judge, 1346.

Reisen, Charles Christian, metallist, 1679-1735.

Reitham, Anthony, physician, 1776.

Reitham, Richard, naturalist, 1755-1833.

Reilly, James, universalist, 1790-1775.

Reiph, Josiah, Cumberland poet, 1713-1743.

Remigius, Bishop of Lincoln, 1082.

Remnant, Richard, agricultural writer, s. 1637.

Remington, Sir Thomas, admiral, 1606.

Remington, Sir Thomas, soldier, 1456.

Remedyke, John, draughtsman, s. 1755.

Renard de Hollande, verse-writer, s. 1190.

Renel, James Meadows, engineer, 1800-1856.

Reider, William, miscellaneous writer, s. 1800.

Reidie, John, divine, 1768-1816.

Reidie, William, F.R.C.S., writer on Southwark, 1893.

Reichard, Laurence, President of Maynooth College, 1797-1857.

Rennel, James, geographer, 1743-1830.

Rennell, Thomas, divine, 1787-1834.

Rennell, Thomas, Dean of Winchester, 1753-1840.

Reenie, George, agriculturist, 1740-1839.

Reenie, George, sculptor, s. 1838-1838.

Reenie, George, civil engineer, 1791-1866.

Reenie, James, zoologist, 1867.

Reenie, John, civil engineer, 1760-1830.

Reenie, Sir John, civil engineer, 1794-1874.

Reininger or Rhanger, Michael, divine, 1580-1600.

Renouard, George Cecil, scholar, 1770-1867.

Repton, George, agriculturist, s. 1807.

Repton, John, painter, s. 1790-1841.

Repton, Sir Thomas, physician to George I., s. 1730.

Reuel, Sir Matthew de, Irish writer, 1434.

Reuel, James, Covenanter, 1653-1686.

Reuel, William, naval surgeon, s. 1790.

Reynolds, Philip, Bishop of Lincoln, 1436.

Repp, Thorolf Gudmundson, Advocate's Librarian, 1794.

Repps, Repps, or Rugg, William, Bishop of Norwich, 1680.

Repton, Humphrey, gardener, 1748-1818.

Repton, John Adey, architect, 1773-1860.

Revelly, Sir John, Governor of York and diarist, 1460.

Revelly, Nathaniel, Nonconformist divine, s. 1600-1700.

Reesby, John, Wycliffite, s. 1430.

Reestitus, British bishop, s. 214.

Reiford, Robert de, judge, s. 1307.

Reitham, Bishop of Leicester, s. 830.

Reuter, Adam, author, 1637.

Revana, Samuel, "father of the New Zealand press," 1806.

Revelly, Wiley, architect, 1721-1790.

Revet, Edward, dramatist, s. 1670.

Revet, Nicholas, architect, 1791-1804.

Reynard, Francis, mathematician, 1777-1841.

Reynardson, Sir Abraham, Lord Mayor of London, 1590-1661.

Reynell, Carew, economic writer, 1680.

Reynell, Carew, Bishop of Derry, 1694-1745.

Reynell, Edward, divine, b. 1619.

Reynell or Rennell, Thomas, painter, 1714-1786.

Reynier, Clement, Benedictine monk, 1631.

Reynier, Edward, Puritan divine, 1600-1670.

Reynier, John, Nonconformist divine, s. 1682.

Reynier, William, Catholic controversialist, s. 1713.

Reynes, John, printer, s. 1530.

Reynold, Thomas, printer, s. 1835.

Reynolds, Sir Barrington, admiral, 1766-1861.

Reynolds or Reginald, Bathana, Latin poet, s. 1616.

Reynolds, Charlotte, friend of Shelley, 1802-1864.

Reynolds, Christopher Augustine, Archbishop of Adelaide, 1834-1893.

Reynolds, Edward, Bishop of Norwich, 1600-1676.

Reynolds, Frances, painter, 1736-1807.

Reynolds, Frederick, dramatist, 1765-1841.

Reynolds, Frederick Mansell, novelist, 1850.

Reynolds, George, Archbishop of London, 1790.

Reynolds, George, mathematician, s. 1812.

Reynolds, George Nugent, Irish verse-writer, 1803.

Reynolds, George W. M., Reynolds's Newspaper, 1879.

Reynolds, Henry Revell, physician, 1745-1811.

Reynolds, James, Lord Chief Baron, 1698-1739.

Reynolds, James, Baron of the Exchequer, 1604-1747.

Reynolds, James, Orientalist, b. 1803.

Reynolds, John, epigrammatist, 1614.

Reynolds, John, divine, 1667-1737.

Reynolds, John, of Osmestry, genealogist, s. 1730.

Reynolds, John Hamilton, author, 1796-1857.

Reynolds, John Stuckey, educational promoter, s. 1630-1840.

Reynolds, Sir Joshua, painter, 1723-1793.

Reynolds, Laurence, "Laureate of the Irish Brigade," 1803-1867.

Reynolds, Richard, chronicler, 1009.

Reynolds, Richard, Bishop of Lincoln, 1344.

Reynolds, Richard, inventor and philanthropist, 1735-1816.

Reynolds, Robert, rectifie, s. 1604-1665.

Reynolds, Robert Cartwright, rear-admiral, 1611.

Reynolds, Samuel William, engraver, 1773-1835.

Reynolds, Thomas, Presbyterian divine, 1664-1727.

Reynolds, Thomas, antiquary, 1753-1839.

Reynolds, Thomas, informer, 1771-1836.

Reynolds, Reginald, Reynold, or Reynald, Walter, Archbishop of Canterbury, 1337.

Reynolds, William, Nonconformist divine, 1622-1690.

Reynolds, William, inventor, s. 1764.

Rham, William Lewis, "Dictionary of the Farm," 1778-1863.

Rhees, Morgan John, D.D., divine, 1760-1804.

Rhind, Alexander Henry, antiquary, 1833-1893.

Rhialon, Welsh prince, s. 1066.

Rhodes, Benjamin, hymn-writer, 1743-1816.

Rh. Jea, Edward, "Peak Scenery," s. 1640.

Rhodes, Henrietta, miscellaneous writer, 1766-1817.

Rhodes, Henry, printer, s. 1770.

Rhodes, Hugh, 'The Book of Nurture,' s. 1260
 Rhodes, John, author, s. 1606
 Rhodes, John W., painter, 1809-1842
 Rhodes, Richard, 'Flora's Vagaries,' 1648
 Rhodes, Richard, engraver, 1763-1838
 Rhodes, William Barnes, dramatic writer, 1773-1826
 Rhodri, Welsh prince, s. 1124
 Rhodri Mawr, Welsh prince, 877
 Rhun, Welsh prince, 888
 Rhydderch Hael, King of Cumbria, 621
 Rhydderch, John, poet, s. 1709-1730
 Rhys, Welsh prince, 1074
 Rhys ap Tewdwr, King of Deheubarth, 1093
 Rhys, Welsh prince, 1196
 Rhys or Rhese, John David, Welsh grammarian, 1834-1890
 Rhys, Morgan, Welsh hymn-writer, 1776

EARLY EDITIONS.

189, Queen Street, Glasgow, April 10, 1894.

I HAVE no wish to interfere between the author of 'Early Editions' and his critic—Mr. Chambers—although to a Scotsman the correspondence presents several tempting points. But I venture to make some "corrections," if he will allow me the use of the term, on Mr. Slater's "Bibliographical Survey" of the works of Robert Burns. It is matter for regret that Mr. Slater, who is generally "up to date" in the market value of books, should be so Rip Van Winklish in regard to Burns. 'Early Editions,' to quote the sub-title of the book, may be described as an epitome of the priced catalogues of the leading auctioneers; and it is not too much to say that in the matter of current prices the book, so far as it goes, is, upon the whole, reliable. Such is the quality of the volume, and if the record at Sotheby's had been co-extensive with Mr. Slater's rather ambitious chapter on Burns, he might have escaped the blunders into which he has fallen. But to particulars.

In his description of the Kilmarnock edition of the 'Poems' Mr. Slater has so blundered that one doubts if he has seen a perfect copy of the book. Rightly enough he says it is one of the costliest of books; but he errs in saying that "it is only a small book in 12mo." The Kilmarnock edition of the 'Poems,' as all the world knows, is not a small 12mo., but a regulation 8vo. That is to say, the volume, as issued, measures nine by six inches.

Nor is Mr. Slater more happy in his description of the Edinburgh edition of the following year, which, he assures his readers, was "published in calf gilt, with yellow edges. Copies," he continues, "in the original binding sell readily enough by auction for two or three guineas, and sometimes for even more." Both statements are wide of the mark. The book was issued in boards; and the "Young" copy, which had been rebound, but which had the rough edges undisturbed, was knocked down to Mr. Hugh Hopkins, at Sotheby's, in 1890, for 14*l.* 1*s.*

"From 1786," continues Mr. Slater, "when the Kilmarnock edition of the poems was published, to 1870 (a period of eighty-four years), only two years—1791 and 1796—have elapsed in which at least one edition of the poems has not been published"; and he sets down the total issue of the "collective works" of Burns at considerably over one hundred editions, whatever figure that may represent. If Mr. Slater would multiply his one hundred by five, he would be nearer the mark.

It is calculated, says Mr. Slater, that at the close of 1816 no fewer than 22 editions had been published in London; 19 in Edinburgh; 16 in the United States; 4 in Dublin; 4 in Belfast; 3 in Glasgow; 2 in Berwick-upon-Tweed; 1 in Kilmarnock; 1 in Paisley; and 9 in other towns scattered about England and Scotland, making in all 81 editions. Mr. Slater gives no authority for his figures, but I have gathered the books, and Mr. Slater is very welcome to count them, if he chooses. Counting those only with which I am familiar, I make (without including single poems or selections) 163 editions (262 volumes), being double the number given by Mr. Slater. The issues in the respective towns of publication are: Edinburgh, which tops the list, 38; London, 30; Belfast, 15; Glasgow, 14; Alnwick, 7; Dublin, 7; Newcastle-upon-Tyne, 6; Berwick, 4; Paisley, 3; Arbroath, 3; Montrose, 2; Perth, 2; Kirkcaldy, 1; Liverpool, 1; Cork, 1; Kilmarnock, 1; Musselburgh, 1; Falkirk, 1; Stirling, 1; Dundee, 1; and Air, 1. United States: Philadelphia, 9; Baltimore, 5; New York, 5; Salem, 2; Boston, 1; and Wilmington, 1.

Should Mr. Slater be correct in including the years 1792 and 1796 (which, so far as my collecting goes, are blank) among those in which one or more editions were published, the number will be still further increased. The editions not having been specified, we are in the dark as to their importance. With the Alnwick Burns, of which he might have given us a description, it is otherwise. I am grateful to Mr. Slater for having added one Burns of the first importance to the record. Some few years ago our friends the Alnwick collectors were not a little fluttered when the edition of 1807, which had escaped such chroniclers as Hugo, Pearson, and Gibson, was discovered. Imagine their joy on being informed that to the ancient hamlet of the Percy belongs the proud distinction of not only having kept step with Edinburgh and London in simultaneously publishing the poems of Burns, but of having anticipated (by fourteen years) "baith North and South Countrie" with an illustrated edition! It is not too much to say, thanks to Mr. Slater, that the 1787 Bewick Burns is the most cherished globe in Northumbria's book-land.

Assuming that the years 1792 and 1796 each produced an edition of the poems, we have (with the 1787 Bewick added to the list) not a total of 81 but of 165 editions up to the close of 1816. In view of the altered figures, I have to ask Mr. Slater, How stands the circulation of the Bible, Shakespeare, and Thomas A' Kempis in relation to Burns? These three, according to Mr. Slater, are the only books that in "continuous publication" surpass Burns. It has never been doubted in the Burns cult that the circulation of the poems and letters of the bard has outrun that of all other books, with, perhaps, the single exception of the Bible; and nothing that this iconoclast has said to the contrary will shake the faith of our weakest brother.

W. CRAIG ARNOLD.

12, South Castle Street, Liverpool, April 10, 1894.

MR. SLATER states in his letter which appeared in your issue of March 24th that he will accept Mr. Chambers's criticisms, but not his corrections. I do not ask Mr. Slater to accept any criticisms from me, but I must ask him to accept my correction.

On p. 211 of his book Mr. Slater states that the first edition of 'Memoirs of the late John Mytton, Esq.,' by Nimrod, is 1837, that it contains eighteen plates by Alken and Rawlins, and that the value of the book is five pounds.

Now the first edition was not published in 1837, it does not contain eighteen plates by Alken and Rawlins, and its value is not five pounds. The first edition was published in 1836, and contains twelve coloured illustrations by Alken (not Alken and Rawlins), and two of the plates—'Blood and the Bull-Dog' and 'Mytton and the Savage Dog'—have never been reproduced in any other edition of the work.

Mr. Slater need have no fear that I am making a mistake in this matter. The first edition is of course excessively rare, but a copy of it is in the library of Mr. James Hornby, of Swinley House, Wigan, who has very kindly collated the book for me.

HAROLD EDGAR YOUNG.

THOMAS LOVELL BEDDOES.

April 9, 1894.

It may be of some interest to your readers, and possibly save the money of the unwary, if you will permit me to say that I was yesterday visited by a German whose name, according to the card he presented, is Hans Ole Brack. After eliciting from me the fact that I was interested in English literature, he produced a portfolio, from which he drew some MSS., copied, he stated, from papers published in Zurich, and containing uncollected poems by Thomas Lovell Beddoes. On looking over these I was convinced that a literary fraud is about to be or has been perpetrated. Herr Brack declined to leave me for inspection any of the MSS., which he said was in his own handwriting; but on my selecting one of the poems it struck me that a certain amount of imitation was discernible, and though I did not betray my ideas on the subject, I asked him why he had not consulted Mr. Goese, who has edited both the poems and letters of Beddoes. To this he replied that he was about to do so. I give you herewith a hasty translation made of one of these poems after Herr Brack's departure. He would not permit me to even make shorthand notes of the original.

TO Z. K.

With the morn a letter comes
 Unto me who wait
 In a silence that benumbs
 Like the touch of Fate.
 Swiftly wheel, O rolling earth,
 Plunge athwart the night—
 Spin! and let the morrow's birth
 Flood my soul with light.

R. W. COLLES.

THE FLINDERS PETRIE PAPYRI. PART II.

APROPOS of your kindly and instructive review of my book, in which many good suggestions were made, allow me to observe (1) that the correction ἀδελφός was already made by me (p. 29 of Introduction, on vii.). (2) The correction ταχυς for ταχύν I should have suggested, but cannot read the τ, and it is my religion to print papyri as I find them. (3) My explanation of the historical papyrus has been accepted by Diels, Köhler, Wilcken, and others, so that it seems now no longer doubtful, though put forward as such by me. This support I have received in private letters, so that your reviewer could hardly have known it. (4) I do not agree with him that the horse-shoe sign for signifying remainders in arithmetic (xxxix.) is derived from the λ of λουρόν. There is no evidence of λ ever being written in any such form among these papers. But π is often so written, especially with an o inside it, for πολς. I therefore suggest that it represents the π of πεποσσι (εσσι).

But I will not occupy your space without contributing something new. I found in the Gizeh Museum last month, among the papyri preserved there, a fragment of the Iliad, containing the ends of the lines iv. 191-219, and another of the Odyssey, containing the ends of xv. 217-234, and the openings of vv. 239-54, at least partly. The latter text, numbered 8 in the collection, seems to agree closely with our textus receptus; the former has some variants of interest (vv. 196-7 are omitted), but none at all approaching to those of the old fragment in the Petrie papyri and in M. Nicole's old fragment. As Mr. Kenyon has observed (vol. xxii. of the Journal of Philology), most old papyri increase our confidence in the faithfulness of the more recent MSS. This is not so with the Iliad and Odyssey. Before the second century B.C. there appears to have been a widely different version. In quoting Ludwig's excellent article on the value of these old texts, your reviewer should also have cited the able article of E. Meyer ('Homerische Parerga' in Hermes for 1891), who modifies Ludwig's conclusions considerably.

J. P. MAHAFFY.

* * We did not question Prof. Mahaffy's explanation of the historical papyrus. As to the other points, we had certainly overlooked Prof. Mahaffy's correction of the reading referred to in No. 1; on Nos. 2 and 4 we prefer our own view, though without assuming infallibility.

SALES.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE commenced the sale of the second and final portion of the library of the late Rev. W. E. Buckley on Monday. The following are the principal prices realized in the first three days. Bowick, History of British Birds, with Supplement, 1794-1821, 15l. 15s. Badminton Library: Hunting, on large paper, 21l. Thomas & Kempis, De Christi Imitatione, editio princeps, 20l. 5s. Aristotelis Opera et Theophrastus de Historia et de Causis Plantarum, first edition, Venetiis, 1495, 30l. Aaseri Alfredi Regia Res Gestæ, et T. Walsingham, Historia ab Edwardo I. ad Henricum V., 1574, in one volume in red morocco, with the Tudor rose and initials "E. R." stamped in gold, 51l. Mr. Buckley considered that this volume formerly belonged to Queen Elizabeth, and was bound by Archbishop Parker's binder. Burns's Poems, first Edinburgh edition, with the original proposals for printing and verses in the autograph of Burns inserted, 12l. 15s. Byss, Cantica Variora (sic), with the hedges and motto of the Emperor Charles V. on the sides, 14l. 15s. Horatius, edited by W. Baxter, 1725, with memorandum on fly-leaf in Lord Byron's autograph, 13l. 15s. Chancery Society's Publications, 15l. 10s. Chetham Society's Publications, 19l. 5s. Coleridge, Ode on the Departing Year, 1796, and Wordsworth's An Evening Walk, 1793, both first editions, in one volume, 21l. 10s. Della Bella, fourteen original drawings of the entry of the Polish Ambassador into Rome, 1633, 36l.

Messrs. Puttick & Simpson dispersed the library of a well-known private collector on April 11th, 12th, and 13th: A complete set of the Aldine Poets fetched 20l. 10s. Officium Virginis Mariæ, MS. on vellum, with thirteen miniatures, 17l. 10s. Alken's National Sports, 24l. 10s. Curtis's British Entomology, 16 vols., 14l. 10s. A volume of Horæ (Paris, 1536), 33l. Gould's Birds, 43l. Redoute, Les Liliacées, 8 vols., 18l.; Les Roses, 3 vols., 20l. Strange's Historical Prints, 21l. Wallich, Plantæ Asiaticæ Rariore, 19l. Tussac, Flore des Antilles, 15l. 10s. Dugdale's Monasticon, 15l. 10s. The ninth edition of the Encyclopædia Britannica, 19l. 5s. The total realized was 1,309l. 1s.

THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON'S spring announcements include a translation by Mr. R. H. Shorard of the 'Memoirs to Serve for the History of Napoleon I. from 1802 to 1815,' by his private secretary, Baron Claude François de Méneval, arranged and edited by his grandson, 'Outlines,' a volume of stories by the Hon. Mrs. Henniker, 'The Green Bay Tree,' by Messrs. W. H. Wilkins and Herbert Vivian, 'Mrs. Oliphant's 'A House in Bloomsbury,' 'Aaron the Jew,' by Mr. B. L. Farjeon, 'The Temple of Death,' by Mr. E. Mitchell, two volumes of the 'Homespun Series,' 'The Trial of Mary Broom,' by Mrs. Coghill, with illustrations, and 'A Foolish Marriage,' by Miss Annie S. Swan, 'Sojourners Together,' a story by Mr. Frankfort Moore, 'The Heritage of Langdale,' a romance of the eighteenth century, by Mrs. Alexander, 'A Marriage Ceremony,' by Ada Cambridge, 'The Experiences of Loveday Brooke, Lady Detective,' by C. L. Pirks, 'Confessions of a Poet,' by Prof. F. Harold Williams, 'Hooks of Steel,' by Helen Prothero-Lewis, 'A Precious Scamp,' by Mr. H. Cresswell, 'Found and Fettered,' a series of detective stories, by Dick Donovan, 'The Game of Life,' by Darley Dale, and two volumes of 'Famous Women of the French Court' series, 'The Court of Louis XV.' and 'The Last Years of Louis XV.'

Literary Gossip.

THE Century for May will contain yet another of Mr. Lowell's posthumous articles. It consists of a metrical translation of some length, by the American poet, from the 'Kalevala,' believed never before to have been published.

IN the May number of Blackwood will appear an account of a visit to the Tennyson family, paid under romantic circumstances in 1839, which will afford some glimpses of the late Laureate in the days before he became famous. This account is taken from the journals of a lady who was a member of the little-known literary coterie of the "Husks," to which Tennyson and some of his brothers and sisters then belonged.

MESSRS. BLACKWOOD & SONS have in the press a sporting novel, 'A Banished Beauty,' by Mr. John Bickerdyke, the author of the 'Curiosities of Ale and Beer.' The scene is chiefly laid in the Island of Lewis. The plot to some extent reflects the influence of the Land League agitation in Ireland upon the minds of the Hebridean crofters. Messrs. A. Constable & Co. have in the press a work entitled 'Thames Rights and Thames Wrongs,' dealing with the Conservancy question, by Mr. Bickerdyke.

MR. WILLIAM HEINEMANN will publish early in May a novel by Miss Ella Hepworth Dixon, entitled 'The Story of a Modern Woman.'

BESIDES the subscriptions we have already mentioned for the Booksellers' Home at the seaside, we may mention the following: The Directors of Simpkin, Marshall & Co., 30l.; Mr. John Murray and his brother, 25l.; Mr. Bentley, Messrs. Cassell & Co., Mr. Darton, Messrs. Crosby Lockwood & Son, and Messrs. Smith & Elder, 21l. each; the Lord Mayor, Messrs. Blackwood & Sons, Messrs. Chapman & Hall, Messrs. Hurst & Blackett, Messrs. Routledge & Sons, Messrs. Spicer & Sons, Mr. Awdry, Mr. J. C. Francis, Mr. Heinemann, and Mr. Sotheman, 10l. 10s. each; Prof. Goldwin Smith and the proprietor of the Athenæum, 10l. each.

THE best speeches made at the dinner were those of Prof. Goldwin Smith and Mr. Murray. The latter made the remarkable statement that the depression that had prevailed of late was unexampled since the crash of 1826. Sir Francis Jeune excited some surprise by informing his hearers that "newspapers anxious to get good advertisements were willing"—we quote the report in the Standard—"to adapt themselves to the feelings and interests of good readers, and it was the advertisements they sought to obtain that forced them to behave in a way to secure a good class of readers." This theory of the natural wickedness of newspapers, and their tendency to vicious courses being providentially checked by the salutary influence of advertisers, is quite novel, and suggests startling reflections. To what depths of depravity might not the staff of the Times descend if their inherent propensity to evil were not kept in check by a desire for a well-filled outer sheet? We never thought of it before. The editor of the Daily News, too, probably meditates on wicked courses in Bourverie Street, but the wholesome warnings of his publisher in Fleet Street prevent him from frightening away "a good class of readers," and being left alone with the bad ones. This curious adjustment of natural forces is, indeed, a discovery, and should lead advertising agents to regard themselves as a moral power.

THE final issue of the new Spencer Society to its members consists of 'The Spider and the Fly' of John Heywood.

A LARGE publisher in Philadelphia—Mr. Henry Altemus—has purchased the right to publish a special edition of Mr. Coulson Kernahan's 'Book of Strange Sins' in addition to that published in the United States by Messrs. Ward & Lock, and the New York World has made arrangements for the issue of some of the stories in its columns.

AT a meeting of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, held on March 7th, Dr. Roet, late Librarian of the India Office, was elected an Honorary Member.

MESSRS. MACLEHOSE, of Glasgow, will publish immediately a volume by Prof. MacCunn, of University College, Liverpool, on the 'Ethics of Citizenship.' The object of the book is to connect some leading aspects of democratic citizenship with ethical facts and beliefs. Among the subjects dealt with are "The Equality of Men," "Fraternity," "The Rights of Man," "The Rule of the Majority in Politics," "Party and Political Consistency," "Democracy and Character," and "Some Aspects of Luxury."

THE late Mr. Talbot Baines Reed left in a practically finished state a story which will shortly be published, under the title of 'Kilgorman,' by Messrs. Thos. Nelson & Sons. Mr. Reed's friend and neighbour, Mr. John Sims, who has seen the work through the press, has prefixed a short memoir of the author, and Mr. J. Williamson, whose illustrations to the Dryburgh edition of Scott will be familiar to our readers, is illustrating the story. Apocryph of this, we learn that funds have been collected by the friends and neighbours of Mr. Reed for the purchase of a library of between 200 and 300 books for boys, which is to be presented as a "Reed Memorial" to the Literary and Scientific Institution at Highgate, where Mr. Reed lived and died.

IN the course of next month 'My Paris Note-Book,' by the author of 'An Englishman in Paris,' will be published by Mr. Heinemann. It treats chiefly of the political personages and also of the social conditions of Paris since the war of 1870, and is said to be full of anecdote and gossip—a little more veracious, we hope, than his former collection.

THE annual festival dinner of the News-vendors' Benevolent Institution on Tuesday last was a great success. The subscriptions announced by the secretary, Mr. Walter Jones, amounted to nearly 9000l., towards which Mr. J. Passmore Edwards generously contributed 200 guineas.

MR. J. PASSMORE EDWARDS perseveres in his encouragement of the free library movement. On the 13th ult. he was engaged in laying the foundation stone of a free library at Falmouth, towards the cost of which he is a munificent contributor. Mr. Edwards is also establishing a free library at Camborne, to which he proposes to present one thousand volumes.

MR. C. F. KEARY has returned from India, and is in France, engaged on a new novel. Meanwhile 'The Two Lancrofts' is coming out in a single volume, the original edition having sold out in spite of the boycotting it received.

MR. NUTT is going to issue Mr. Ellis's rendering into verse of 'The History of Reynard the Fox: with some Account of his Family, Friends, and Associates,' from Caxton's translation of the Dutch prose version of the story, adding "some particulars not therein set down, but very needful to be known." That Mr. Ellis has considerably amplified the story may be judged from the fact that the volume consists of about ten thousand lines of octosyllabic verse in forty-five chapters. It presents the novel features of quatrain shoulder notes, indicating the gist of each chapter, and a rhyming glossary.

MR. W. ROBERTS, who published in the March Fortnightly Review a paper on 'The First Edition Mania,' is contributing to the same review a somewhat similar article on 'The Stamp Collecting Craze.'

GENERAL READ writes regarding his paper on the 'Washington Ancestry':—

"On p. 378, col. 3, l. 43, 'George Reade, fifth son of Henry Reade and Mildred Windebank,' should be 'George Reade, fifth son of Robert Reade and Mildred Windebank.'"

At the annual dinner of the Association of the Edinburgh Booksellers' Assistants, which was recently held, the report showed that the Association was in a prosperous state. The toast of the book trade was proposed by Mr. Hew Morrison, librarian of the Free Library, and was responded to by Mr. J. H. Thin, who referred to the evil entailed on booksellers by the discount system which is now so rife.

THE printers' readers have got together 260*l.* towards the second pension they propose founding. At their dinner to-night Mr. F. Macmillan will be supported by Dr. Garnett, Mr. Joseph Hatton, Mr. Henniker Heaton, Mr. G. Macmillan, Mr. James Sime, and Mr. McCullagh Torrens.

MR. CLINCH, having disposed of Marylebone and Bloomsbury, is going to bring out a monograph on Soho, and would be glad of information addressed to the care of his publishers, Messrs. Dulau.

MR. PRACH is going to add to his memoir of Ralph Allen, of Prior Park, an account of the parishes of Lyncombe and Widcombe, which were outside the city of Bath till 1832. Among the subjects of illustration will be, besides Prior Park Mansion, Old Widcombe Church, Pope's Walk, and the Palladian Bridge. A portrait of Allen will be added.

MESSRS. OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER are to publish a novel, 'William Blacklock, Journalist,' by Mr. T. Banks MacLachlan, editor of the Weekly Scotsman. The scene is laid in Scotland, and the story describes the career of an ambitious young Borderer on the press and in love. Most of the press scenes are drawn from real life; likewise more than one of the principal characters—notably the late editor of the Scotsman, Alexander Russel.

THE Imperial Academy of St. Petersburg has determined to issue, under the title Byzantine Chronicles, a quarterly devoted to Byzantine history, archaeology, and philology. The articles will be written either in Russian or in modern Greek.

THE poet and art critic Ludwig Pfau died in Stuttgart on April 12th. He was born at Heilbronn in 1821, and was sent to France to learn gardening. He devoted his spare time to learning to draw and paint, and to the study of French, gathering the materials for a translation of Breton songs, which he published in 1853. Returning to his fatherland, he entered the university of Tübingen, and later of Heidelberg. His participation in the revolutionary movements of 1848, when he edited the comic Eulenspiegel, involved him in a charge of high treason, and he fled to Paris. After fourteen years' absence from Germany he settled in Stuttgart, and became editor of the Beobachter. He published several volumes of poems, chiefly lyrical. His collected aesthetic writings are in considerable repute in his own country.

THE Parliamentary Papers of the week include Report on Statistics, University of Edinburgh (2*d.*); Report on the Finances, Administration, &c., of Egypt (6*d.*); Education, England and Wales, Return showing Expenditure on Annual Grants, and the Number of Schools on the Annual Grant List, &c. (3*d.*), and Minute providing for Grants for the Education of Blind and Deaf Children (1*d.*); Welsh Intermediate Education, Management of the Funds in the Counties of Flint (3*d.*) and Anglesey (3*d.*); and Statement exhibiting the Moral and Material Progress of India during 1891-2 and the Nine Preceding Years (4*s.*).

SCIENCE

GEOGRAPHICAL LITERATURE.

My Arctic Journal, by Josephine Diebitsch-Pearcy (Longmans & Co.), has for its author a lady who accompanied her husband to Northern Greenland in 1891, and who, notwithstanding the hardships she underwent, and the advice of solicitous friends, is now spending a second winter on the inhospitable shore of Whale Sound. It is a brightly written narrative, containing a mass of information on the home life of the Eskimo, with whom the author, almost of necessity, held close and frequent communication. Sportsmen, too, may find something to interest them in this beautifully illustrated volume, for Mrs. Percy was a brave woman, who hunted not only the bear and the reindeer, but also boldly faced an infuriated walrus, who thrust his savage head, with gleaming tusk and bloodshot eyes, out of the water, threatening to capsize the boat which was occupied by herself and her husband, still a cripple from an accident.

MR. FRED. W. W. HOWELL, the author of Icelandic Pictures drawn with Pen and Pencil (Religious Tract Society), has twice visited Iceland, and was the first to reach the summit of the Oesaefa Jökull. His book will be welcome to those who contemplate a summer trip to the home of the Norseman, for it abounds in information—historical, topographical, and social—is well written, and abundantly illustrated.

A Descriptive Physical, Industrial, and Historical Geography of England and Wales, by Thomas Haughton (Philip & Son), is the work of a practical teacher—the author is the late head master of the Liverpool Blue Coat Hospital—and is essentially a teacher's manual. In addition to the information usually to be found in a text-book it abounds in geographical details and historical notes reproduced from the author's note-books, and rightly considered by him to afford materials for rendering the lessons in geography more interesting and stimulating than is still too frequently the case. Teachers, we should say, will find this a very useful companion.

THE Clarendon Press publish the third volume of Mr. Lucas's 'Historical Geography of the British Colonies,' the present volume (which is, like the others, complete in itself) being on West Africa. It includes not only West Africa proper, but also St. Helena, Ascension, &c. With the exception of the Niger sphere of a Chartered Company, and the Oil Rivers Protectorate and Lagos, which are somewhat closely connected with that sphere, British West Africa forms a sorry spectacle. Gambia and Sierra Leone are hemmed in by the possessions of France, which shows as much enterprise in West Africa as we, except on and near the Niger, show the reverse. The Gold Coast, Ascension, and St. Helena are in a miserable position; and Walfisch Bay is merely kept, dog-in-the-manger fashion, because it makes Damaraland and Namaqualand (which the Germans ought never to have been allowed to occupy) useless to them. While we are on the subject of Damaraland, we ought to point out that, in the map of Africa given by Mr. Lucas, the tongue of land running from Damaraland to the east up to the Zambesi Falls—which was by a most extraordinary arrangement conferred by Lord Salisbury upon Germany, which had never sent a traveller to it, and could have no conceivable interest in it—is not shown. The result is that the wasp-waist between the British Bechuanaland Protectorate and British Central Africa is made far wider on the map than it is in reality. The British Bechuanaland Protectorate is also made too large, and the sphere of influence of the British South Africa Company too small, upon the map. The line marked on the map for the range of the Arab trade and influence is a curious one, for it surely ought to be placed much further south; and the words "area of supply of slave labour," which run along the Atlantic coast from the Canary Islands almost to Damaraland, are somewhat unmeaning there, and would perhaps be more applicable to the Mozambique Channel and the East Coast generally, unless they are intended to be purely historical, in which case they are out of place on a map which is otherwise purely modern. Mr. Lucas is an agreeable and an accurate writer, and though he has a terrible story to tell of the gradual decline of British influence, and the coupling-up and starving of British colonies, he tells it well. It is a pity, however, that there is so little in his book about the Niger sphere, which is really the only interesting remnant of British influence. There are, indeed, four pages relating to the territory occupied by the Company; but four pages for that which alone is great, and has in it the possible elements of success and of a future, as contrasted with the couple of hundred or more pages which contain the record of a disastrous failure, is indeed small measure. There is nothing stranger than to compare the growth of British India, and the survival of the historical French empire in India in the form only of Pondicherry and the Loges, with the growth in West Africa of the magnificent French empire of Senegambia around those historical remnants of our past in West Africa—Gambia and Cape Coast. The British navy declare Sierra Leone to be essential to the Cape route, which itself is vital to us in time of war; yet Sierra Leone is becoming a little unhealthy county, lost in a vast French possession fully garrisoned and provided with all modern machinery of government—a position which can hardly be permanent.

THE principal articles in the Geographical Journal for April are by Dr. K. Grossmann, who gives an account of a journey through Iceland, and Mr. Harry Lake, who describes the native state of Johore, on the Malay Peninsula. Both these articles are accompanied by excellent maps. Among minor articles are one on 'Recent Contributions to Oceanography,' by Mr. H. N. Dickson, and excellent abstracts of two papers read before the Berlin Geographical Society, the one, by Dr. A. Philippson, dealing with Northern Greece; the other, by Lieut. Mareker, with the Kizil Irmak (the Halys of the ancients) in Asia Minor.

CHEMICAL NOTES.

V. H. VELEY has proved that dry chlorine and dry lime do not unite at the ordinary temperature—in fact, no reaction takes place until about 300°, when a partial replacement of oxygen by chlorine occurs. A similar reaction takes place with baryta and chlorine at ordinary temperatures.

At different times various substances have been described as new sulphides of carbon, carbon monosulphide and others; these substances have generally been amorphous solids and difficult to purify. We have now, however, a new liquid sulphide of carbon, C_2S_2 , obtained by Prof. von Lengyel, of Buda-Pesth. It was obtained by subjecting the vapour of carbon disulphide to the action of an electric arc, taking care that the products of reaction were rapidly removed from the sphere of action. The new sulphide has the specific gravity 1.2739. It can be partially distilled in vacuo, but has a great tendency to form a solid black polymeride. It readily ignites and burns with a luminous flame, has a very powerful and frightful odour, but strangely enough it combines with bromine, whose odour has similar attributes, to form a compound, $C_2S_2Br_2$, possessing a pleasant aromatic odour.

Dr. Paul Duden, of Jena, has obtained an interesting di-nitroderivative of marsh gas, $CH_2(NO_2)_2$. It is not surprising that it is dangerously explosive, but its potassium derivative, $CHK(NO_2)_2$, is far more stable. Silver and other metallic compounds have been obtained, and they show remarkable properties.

Russel and Frank describe a new method of preparing phosphorus, using aluminium as the reducing agent. If a phosphate be heated alone with aluminium, one-third of the phosphorus is given off in the free state, the remainder forming aluminium phosphide; but if the phosphate be previously mixed with powdered silica, all the phosphorus is given off in the free state. Any mineral phosphate, such as coprolites, apatite, or bone ash, may be employed. The reaction may be readily adapted to a lecture experiment by mixing sodium metaphosphate, finely powdered silica, and aluminium turnings, and heating them in a long combustion tube in a gentle current of hydrogen. When the reaction commences a brilliant incandescence will be observed, and the action will go on without further heat, the phosphorus condensing in globules in the cooler part of the tube.

Aconitine, the intensely poisonous alkaloid or alkaloids from monkshood, is receiving a good deal of attention, both in this country from Prof. Dunstan, and in Germany from Freund and Beck. Many other workers have investigated this difficult substance, or rather group of substances, and probably we shall shortly, from these researches, be in possession of much more exact knowledge of this deadly base.

Dr. Bernard Dyer has published, through the Chemical Society, the results of a laborious and important investigation on the determination of available mineral plant-food in soils. Ordinary soil analyses give little information on this point, the strong acids used in preparing the soil solutions being far too drastic in their action. Pure water, again, is too mild a solvent. Dyer, after determining the average acidity of the roots of about one hundred plants, determined to use a 1 per cent. solution of citric acid as the soil solvent, this being taken as fairly representing the acid sap of the rootlets of plants. He examined samples of soils from twenty-two of the historical barley plots on Hoes Field at Rothamsted. From no other place in the world but Sir John Lawes's farm could soils have been obtained whose past history, condition, and capabilities were sufficiently well known for the purpose of this research. The results show that this solution, although necessarily empirically arrived at, does dissolve from soils an amount of phosphoric acid and of potash which is a good measure of the available plant-food of this kind in the soil. The thanks of agricultural chemists and of agriculturists are certainly due to Dr. Dyer for his labours, which we expect to see widened by himself and other workers.

SOCIETIES.

GEOLOGICAL.—April 11.—Dr. H. Woodward, President, in the chair.—Messrs. C. W. Andrews and C. W. Fennell were elected Fellows; Prof. E. S. Dana, New Haven, Conn., U.S.A., a Foreign Member; Prof. J. F. Iddings, Chicago, U.S.A., and Prof. J. H. L. Vogt, Christiania, Foreign Correspondents of the Society.—The following communications were read: 'Mesozoic Rocks and Crystalline Schists in the Lepontine Alps,' by Dr. T. G. Bonney, and 'Notes on some Trachytes, Metamorphosed Tuffs, and other Rocks of Igneous Origin on the Western Flank of Dartmoor,' by Lieut.-General C. A. McMahon.

STATISTICAL.—April 18.—A paper was read, by Mr. J. A. Baines, 'On Conditions, Progress, and Prospects of Popular Education in India.'

ENTOMOLOGICAL.—April 11.—Capt. H. J. Elwes, President, in the chair.—Mr. F. W. Jones and Dr. W. S. Ridding were elected Fellows.—The Hon. W. Rothschild exhibited male and female specimens of Ornithoptera paradisa, Stögr., from Finisterre Mountains, New Guinea; O. trijana, Stögr., from Palawan; O. andromache, Stögr., from Kina Balu, Borneo; Gnethus mirabilis, Rothsch.; and a few other splendid species from the Upper Amazona.—The President, Lord Walsingham, Col. Lang, Messrs. J. J. Walker, O. Salvin, Champion, and Hampson, made remarks on the geographical distribution of some of the species and the elevation at which they were taken.—Mr. H. Gosse exhibited, for Mr. G. A. J. Rothney, several specimens of a species of Hemiptera (Serinetia augur, Fab.) and of a species of Lepidoptera (Phaëda flammaria, Walk.), the latter of which closely resembled and mimicked the former. He said that Mr. Rothney had found both species abundantly on the roots and trunks of trees in Mysore in November last, in company with ants (several species of Camponotus and Crematogaster). The Hemiptera appeared to be distasteful to the ants, as they were never molested by them, and he thought that the species of Lepidoptera was undoubtedly protected from attack by its close imitation of the Hemipteron. Mr. Gosse said he was indebted to Mr. C. J. Gahan for determining the species.—A discussion followed on the mimicking species, in which the President, Col. Swinhoe, Messrs. Waterhouse, J. J. Walker, and Hampson, took part.—Mr. J. W. Tutt exhibited a typical specimen of Lyrena corydon, captured in July, 1893; a hybrid male (L. corydon and L. adonis), taken in copula with a typical female L. adonis; a typical male L. adonis; a female L. adonis, the pigment falling in one hind wing; a pale var. of L. corydon, probably to be referred to var. apennina of Zeller, usually taken in Italian mountains, or var. albicans, H. S., taken in Andalusia. Mr. Tutt remarked that of the first Staudinger (Cat. p. 12) says "pallidior," of the latter "albicans." He also remarked that the hybrid retains the external features of the species corydon, but has taken on to a great extent the coloration of L. adonis.—The question having been raised by the President as to the number of meetings of the Society which it was desirable to hold during the year, and the most convenient dates for such meetings, a discussion on the subject ensued, in which Mr. Waterhouse, Mr. Salvin, the Hon. W. Rothschild, the Rev. T. Wood, Mr. S. Stevens, and the Rev. J. B. St. John took part.

MICROSCOPICAL.—March 21.—Mr. A. D. Michael, President, in the chair.—Mr. C. L. Cortes exhibited and described a new form of photo-micrographic camera and drawing apparatus, designed by Prof. Edinger and constructed by Herr E. Leitz.—Dr. W. H. Dallinger exhibited and described a new model microscope by Messrs. Swift.—Messrs. Watson & Sons exhibited a new super-stage plate fitted with two steel springs. They also showed a Ramsden screw micrometer and an Abbe camera lucida, both made in aluminium.—Mr. R. T. Lewis described a scale insect from Natal, which he believed to be Trioxa pellucida.—Mr. J. G. Grenfell exhibited and described specimens of Dicyemida, parasites found on the renal organs of cephalopods.—The President read a paper entitled 'Notes on the Uropodina,' a sub-family of the Gamasidae, one of the higher families of Acari. The classification was first considered; that by former authors was reviewed, and a new classification proposed suitable to the present state of knowledge on the subject. Two new genera were established: one, Glyphopsis, for species with the body of irregular form, sculptured on the dorsal surface, and with excavations for the legs on the ventral surface, which the author claimed as forming a natural group; the other, Trachetes, to replace Celeno, which name has failed by the operation of the law of priorities and for other reasons. Three new species were described, two from Cornwall and one from Tyrol: one of the former, Glyphopsis basilei, is the largest and handsomest of known Uropodina; the Tyrolean species, Uropoda hamulifera, is also a remarkable creature. A list of the British species, which has not been attempted before, was then given, and the synonymy, which has fallen into great confusion, elucidated. The author then treated of the anatomy of Glyphopsis formicaria, a curious species found some years since by Sir John Lubbock in the nests of the ant Lasius flavus, and lately found by Mr. Michael in considerable numbers in Cornwall in similar nests. The anatomy varies a good deal from that of other Uropodina previously investigated. The alimentary canal is more of the type of other Gamasida than of the Uropodina; the ventriculus being small and its caeca long. The male genital organs also present special features; but the most remarkable novelties consist in a number of branched "racemose glands" of various sizes, underlying the dorsal cuticle in fixed situations, and probably functioning as dermal glands. The coxal gland, which is attached to the second leg on each side, is also noticeable, especially for the extremely large size and fleshy nature of its duct. It is probably the most striking coxal gland found in the Acarina.

PHILOLOGICAL.—April 13.—The Rev. Prof. Skeat, Litt.D., V.P., in the chair.—M. de Chémigny was elected a Member.—Dr. Murray made his yearly report on the progress of the Society's 'New English Dictionary.' Since last year the letters C and E have been completed; D is in type to "Definition," and F, which Mr. Bradley edits, to "Fiance." D and E will form vol. iii.; F, G, and H, vol. iv. If they can be got into one volume. Suggestions have been made by many subscribers that the 'Dictionary' shall be issued in half-crown parts of seventy-two pages every two or three months. This plan, if adopted, would need an increase of Mr. Bradley's staff. During 1893, 50,000 quotations were sent in: 9,500 by Mr. T. Henderson for combinations and phrases of simple verbs, go, keep, &c.; in come, &c. of Mr. Henderson's slips appeared in the 'Dictionary.' A. Matthews sent 2,500; G. Joicey, 4,200; J. Dormer, 4,000 (besides other help); W. Muir, 3,500; R. Duncan, 3,000; C. Gray, 2,000; F. Furnivall, 2,000; B. Talbot, 2,000; and many others less numbers, from 1,500 (E. Peacock) to 100 or fewer. But extracts from modern novelists—Hardy, Haggard, Ward, Lang, &c.—are wanted. Thirteen sub-editors sent in their work done: parts of D (C. B. Mount), T (W. B. Robertson), M (W. J. Anderson), G, B (J. Bartlett), W (G. Bousfield), K (E. L. Brandreth), I (Miss Brown, with help), O (W. J. Löwenberg), P (Mrs. McLintock), M (J. Smallpiece), W (W. A. Beckett), M (J. Brown), N (H. A. Nesbitt). Other parts of I, K, M, N, O, F, R, T, W, still need sub-editing. Dr. FitzEdward Hall continued his invaluable help. All proofs were read by him, H. H. Gibbs, J. R. Johnstone, J. T. Fowler, W. Sykes, and F. J. Amours. Prof. Sievers, P. Meyer, Pollock, Maitland, Goudie, Vines, &c., also gave aid. D is about a half larger than E or F, but the bulk of it consists of de- and dis- words, which are dull work and difficult. There is so much connotation besides the denotation of these words: their uses are vague and indefinite, their forms and meanings often confused, especially when Latin had verbs with both particles, like decernere and discernere. In Mid. Eng. both decern and discern occur in the senses of the modern discern, as well as in those of the modern decern. Difer, to put off, is not from L. de-ferre, but from dis (dis)-ferre. After defer, diferent and difference were taken into English, and then difer was used as a distinct word. But to make up for treating as distinct two words from the same original, defer, to put off, was confused with another defer, to submit to another man's judgment, from L. deferre, to carry down, tender, submit. The initial d in daffodil has not been satisfactorily accounted for. It first appears in Turner, 1547, "the white affodil or Dutch daffodil"; Cotgrave (1611) has "thaffodil"; from Fr. aphodite. Damp was (1) a noxious exhalation, miasma, "choke-damp, fire-damp"; (2) a watery vapour; fig. a dejection of spirit: 1744, "shame, that cold-water damper to an enterprising spirit"; 1818, "out of sixteen people, five dampers were present." Dank, moist, disagreeably moist, was formerly our damp. Dandy came from Scotland to London in 1813-14; from "Jack a Dandy." The West Indian fever dandy was altered by the negroes from the East African denkyi, got from Somali. Dapple-grey is, perhaps, from leel. deppil, spotted, but has been mixed with apple, from which most other languages have named the spots. Darkle, vb., was made from darkling, adv., in the dark. Deck of a ship is two hundred years older in English than in Dutch. Debenture is from the L. debentur, "there are due to John Smith 3*l.*" &c. It was first a voucher for payment of stores or for a soldier's wages, which was then taken to a pay-office; next an acknowledgment of debt, then of a loan to Government, and in 1847 a company's debenture; later, debenture stock was formed. "Daughter," "dead," "dear," "black death" (coined by Mr. Markham), "gray" and "grey," &c., were dealt with. A cordial vote of thanks was passed to Dr. Murray.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—April 17.—Sir R. Rawlinson, V.P., in the chair.—The first paper read was 'On the Training of Rivers,' by Mr. L. F. Vernon-Harcourt. Training-works were considered successively under four conditions, namely, 1, along non-tidal rivers; 2, at the outlets of tideless rivers; 3, along tidal rivers; and, 4, through tidal estuaries.—The second paper read was 'On Estuaries,' by Mr. H. L. Partiot.

MATHEMATICAL.—April 12.—Mr. A. B. Kempe, President, in the chair.—The following communications were made: 'On Regular Difference Terms,' by the President (Prof. Greenhill, V.P., in the chair pro tem.); 'Theorems concerning Spheres,' by Mr. E. Roberts; 'Second Memoir on the Expansion of certain Infinite Products,' by Prof. L. J. Rogers; 'A Property of the Circum-circles, II,' by Mr. E. Tucker; 'A Proof of Wilson's Theorem,' by Mr. J. Perott; and 'On the Sextic Resolvent of a Sextic Equation,' by Prof. W. Burnside.—Mr. H. Perigal exhibited some diagrams illustrating circle-squaring by dissection.

ARISTOTELIAN.—April 16.—Mr. S. H. Hodgson, President, in the chair.—Mr. J. S. Mackenzie read a paper 'On Mr. Bradley's View of the Self.' It was contended that there were apparent inadequacies in Mr. Bradley's system due to an insufficient recognition of the place of the self in knowledge. The various senses in which Mr. Bradley recognizes the self were distinguished—the sentient self and the self as a psychological construction being apparently the most important. It was urged that it is necessary to recognize also the self as the unity of experience, and as the ideal involved in knowledge; and it was contended that by introducing these conceptions, certain modifications would be rendered necessary in Mr. Bradley's system, especially (1) a removal of the antithesis between truth and reality; (2) the introduction of a positive instead of a merely subversive dialectic; (3) a modification of the analysis of psychological elements, through the explicit recognition of three stages in the development of consciousness; (4) a reconciliation of the two sides of self-assertion and self-denial in the moral ideal; and (5) a more fully developed view of the finite world as the revelation of the absolute. It was acknowledged, however, that on all these points Mr. Bradley has, to a considerable extent, supplied his own correction.—The paper was followed by a discussion.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL.—April 16.—Chancellor Christie in the chair.—Mr. S. J. Aldrich read a paper 'On the Augsburg Printers of the Fifteenth Century.' The first part dealt with the introduction of printing into Augsburg, then celebrated as the chief seat of the block-printers and playing card makers, the opposition offered by these craftsmen to the new art of printing, their refusal to admit the printers to citizenship, and the mediation of the Abbot of St. Ulrich, whereby it was arranged that the illustrations, if any, in books thereafter to be printed should be from blocks cut by local men. The lecturer then proceeded to give a detailed account of each printer and his work. Among them were Benzler, the "people's printer," whose books were in the vernacular and illustrated, and one woman, Anna Riegerin. Printing was also done at the neighbouring monastery of St. Ulrich, with types borrowed from the Augsburg printers.—A discussion followed the reading of the paper.

MARTINIS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK

- M. Society of Antiquaries, 2.—'Assyriology.'
- I. Institute of British Architects, 6.—'Furniture, Domestic and Ecclesiastical,' Messrs J. Reicher, C. F. A. Voysey, A. Henson, and W. D. Curry.
- G. Geological, 9.—'The Face of the Earth,' Prof. C. Lapworth.
- H. Horticultural, 7.—'Botanical Exploration in Borneo.'
- R. Royal Institution, 8.—'Electric Illumination,' Prof. J. A. Fleming.
- C. Civil Engineers, 9.—'Further Discussion 'On the Training of Rivers and 'On Estuaries.'
- G. Geological, 8.—'Further Notes on some Sections on the New Railway from Romford to Upminster, and on the Relations of the Thames Valley Beds to the Boulder Clay,' Mr. T. V. Holmes.
- G. Geological, 9.—'The Miocene Deposits in the Valley of the Thames at Twickenham, with Contributions to the Fauna and Flora of the Period,' Dr. J. B. Leeson and Mr. G. B. Laidlaw.
- A. A New Granite from the Lower Coal Measures (Granulites), Mr. R. H. Holton.
- S. Society of Arts, 8.—'Some Recent Developments of Photography in Chemistry,' Mr. C. Jones.
- T. Technical Institution, 8.—'Monks as a Teacher,' Prof. J. F. Bridge.
- S. Society of Arts, 8.—'Municipal and Village Water Supply and Sanitation in the North-West Provinces and Oudh,' Mr. A. Colvin.
- E. Electrical Engineers, 8.—'Cost of Electrical Energy,' Mr. R. E. Thompson.
- U. United Service Institution, 8.—'The Training of Volunteer Officers,' Col. T. G. Cave.
- P. Physical, 5.—'The Mechanism of Electrical Conduction,' Dr. C. V. Rieu.
- C. Chemical, 9.—'Graphic Method of constructing the Curves of Current in Electro-magnets and Transformers,' Major Hippesley.
- E. Electrical Engineers, 8.—'Design and Winding of Alternate Current Electro-magnets,' Prof. S. P. Thompson.
- A. Architectural Association, 7.—'Modern House-planning,' Mr. R. A. Briggs.
- R. Royal Institution, 9.—'Action of Light on Bacteria and Fungi,' Prof. H. Marshall Ward.
- R. Royal Institution, 8.—'Literature and Journalism,' Mr. H. D. Traill.
- B. Botany, 3.—'Election of Fellows.'

Science Gossip.

THE new volume of Transactions was issued to the members of the Woolhope Naturalists' Club on the 12th. The most noteworthy papers in it consist of Mr. A. Watkins's lecture on the pigeon houses of Herefordshire, observations on the earthquakes and floods of the district, an account of the treasure trove found at Stoke Prior (seven ecclesiastical silver vessels discovered in 1891 in a rabbit-hole), and a notice of the curious Norman church of Rowlestone by Mr. Thomas Blashill, F.R.I.B.A. Naturalists will be glad to learn that this club, founded in 1851, and the ancestor of almost all the natural history clubs which have since been formed, is in a prosperous state. More than 200 members already belong to it, and some eight or ten more are just being added. The meeting-places of the Club during the ensuing summer were settled at the same time. They include the Frome Valley, Church Stretton, Cwm Eilan, and Caerleon.

CAPT. OLIVER has translated an interesting sketch of the history of the École Polytechnique, which appeared in the Temps on the occasion of the centenary of the famous school, March 11th.

THE sixty-sixth Vorammlung deutscher Aerzte und Naturforscher will take place from September 24th to 30th, at Vienna, where it has been held twice before.

FROM Rome is reported the death, on the 12th inst., of the Prince Baldassarre Boncompagni. Born in Rome in 1821, unmarried, and of retired habits, his whole life was devoted to the study of astronomy and mathematics. From 1867 to 1887 he issued as editor twenty volumes of his Bollettino delle Scienze Matematiche e Fisiche, which were printed at his own private press established for the purpose. Other papers of his may be found in the publications of the Academy dei Nuovi Lincei, of which he was the librarian. An important work of his on Cleraut, on which he was latterly engaged, remains incomplete.

DISCOVERIES of two new comets have been announced. Comet b, 1894, was detected by Mr. Gale, of Sydney, N.S.W., on the 3rd inst., in the constellation Horologium, the place at the time of discovery being R.A. 2^h 31^m, N.P.D. 145° 35'. The comet was described as round, bright, with condensation, and moving in an easterly direction. Comet c, 1894 (described as "bright, with a tail"), was discovered by Mr. E. Holmes, of Islington, on the evening of the 9th inst., at R.A. 17^h 58^m, N.P.D. 18° 30', in the constellation Draco.

THE crisis in Australia has been felt severely by the scientific institutions. The Royal Society of Victoria in its report expresses a fear that it may not be able at present to issue Transactions, but hopes to continue the Proceedings.

FINE ARTS

The Dawn of Astronomy: a Study of the Temple - Worship and Mythology of the Ancient Egyptians. By J. Norman Lockyer, F.R.S. (Cassell & Co.)

NOTWITHSTANDING the wonderful activity which has been shown by Egyptologists during the last twenty years, and the far-reaching nature of some of their investigations, there are still a few points of considerable importance for Egyptian archaeology which have, by some means, escaped the notice of the ablest and best workers in this interesting field. Among these must be reckoned the astronomical functions of Egyptian temples. There is, perhaps, no country in the world which possesses such a long and complete series of temples as Egypt, and now that Prof. Lockyer has undertaken to explain to us the astronomical teachings of these marvellous monuments of the Pharaohs of old, we are inclined to ask how it is that no one has perceived the bearing of the deductions which may be made from a study of the orientation of Egyptian temples, or if it has been perceived, why no student has given to the world the results of his investigations before these latter days of Egyptology. It is true that Prof. Nissen had already, in 1885, published in the Rheinisches Museum für Philologie a number of articles on the orientation of ancient temples, in which he proved that astronomical considerations influenced their builders; but it is equally true that the credit of applying his proofs to the solution of chronological difficulties belongs entirely to Prof. Lockyer, who had, by the way, evolved the same idea independently and before Prof. Nissen's papers came into his hands.

We cannot attempt to describe in detail the process of thought by which Prof. Lockyer arrived at his conclusions, but we may state the chief facts which he derived from personal observations of ancient temples in Egypt. (1) Egyptian temples were built for the observation of the rising and setting of the heavenly bodies, the moon and planets excepted. (2) The stars were first observed, and subsequently, when the regularity of his movements was discovered, the sun. (3) Solar temples were oriented to the sun at some critical time of the agricultural—or religious—year, or to the solstices and equinoxes, and the sun's annual movement being made out, the temples were oriented solstitially or equinoctially. (4) Solstitial temples were built by people who began their year at the solstice, at which period of the year the Nile began to rise. (5) Every part of a temple was built to subserve a special object, i.e., to limit the light which fell on its front to a narrow beam, and to carry it to the other extremity of the temple into the sanctuary, so that once a year the light could pass without interruption along the whole length of the temple, finally illuminating the sanctuary and striking the sanctuary wall, through which no light could pass. (6) The pylons of a temple acted like diaphragms in a telescope, and the temple itself served the purpose of a telescope. (7) The flash of light in the sanctuary indicated the beginning of a new year, and one of the most important uses of solstitial temples was to measure the exact length of the year, upon which the agricultural welfare of Egypt depended. (8) Temples were built to observe certain stars. (9) The axes of star temples were freely changed when it was found that the precessional movement of the stars rendered it necessary. (10) The Egyptian religion was astronomical.

Keeping these facts in mind, it is easy to see that many difficulties in Egyptology may be swept away for good and all, if only we have in our hands a series of accurate astronomical data for each temple upon which to work; but, alas! in many cases these have yet to be collected, for Prof. Lockyer shows that in many of the best published plans of temple-fields there are serious inaccuracies, and the first thing to be done, before the value of the discovery can be properly appreciated, is to obtain an accurate astronomical survey of all the temples in Egypt. On the temple-fields of Heliopolis and Karnak, Prof. Lockyer, assisted by Major Lyons, R.E., has made observations for himself, and the results at which he arrives are exceedingly satisfactory, for they help the archaeologist materially, and if we mistake not, the meanings of certain difficult words in the texts referring to the foundation of the temple at Edfu have now a better chance of being understood. Having observed carefully the direction of the axes of certain solar temples, he has worked out mathematically the position of the sun at the solstices when they were built, and he is, therefore, able to give us dates for the foundation of them. These dates have, in our opinion, considerable value, for however much he may find it necessary to modify them when more complete observations are available, there is no doubt that Prof. Lockyer has thought out a new path whereby the weary traveller over the troubled waters of Egyptian chronology may pass to something very like firm ground.

Passing from the consideration of the dating of temples, the personification of stars, star cults, the Egyptian year, the red and green waters of the Nile, the inundation, the heliacal rising of stars, the Sothic cycle, &c., are all discussed in Prof. Lockyer's characteristic vigorous English; and his very suggestive and well-illustrated book ends with some chapters on the pyramid builders and the various schools of Egyptian astronomy, and a series of comparisons of Egyptian ideas and symbols with probable Babylonian counterparts. In conclusion, we hope that Prof. Lockyer will take steps to have mathematical data for every temple in Egypt obtained, and we trust that before long we may have from him a list of dates of foundations of at least the chief temples in Egypt.

SALES.

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods sold on the 14th inst. the following, from various collections. Drawings: H. B. Willis, A Marsh

Scene, with cows, 58*l*. T. M. Richardson, Town of Taormina, Mount Etna in the distance, 157*l*.; At Pozzuoli, 73*l*. A. C. Gow, The First Provision Boat for the Besieged Town, 152*l*. F. Powell, The Isles of the Sea, 73*l*.; Loch Coruisk, 68*l*. J. Holland, The Grand Canal, Venice, 136*l*. S. Prout, The Temple of Minerva, 81*l*.; St. Maclou, Rouen, 105*l*. C. Fielding, Whitby Sands, with fishing boats and figures, 63*l*.; View from the Sands, Rauth Maur, Snowdon in the distance, 220*l*.; A Forest Scene, with gipsy tent and cows, distant view of Bolney Church, 200*l*. W. Callow, A Street in Bologna, 52*l*. Sir J. Gilbert, Scene from 'King Henry VIII.', 240*l*. L. Haghe, A Courtyard of a Flemish Stadthaus, 52*l*. J. Holland, The Lake of Geneva, 283*l*. W. Hunt, Preparing for the Soirée, 152*l*. F. Tayler, A Huntsman, with four bloodhounds, 73*l*. P. De Wint, Travelling Gipsies, with a distant view of Bolsover Castle, 71*l*. Pictures: T. S. Cooper, A Group of Three Cows, near an old pollard willow, 325*l*. T. Creswick, The Green Lane, 336*l*.

The same auctioneers sold on the 16th inst. the following, from various collections. Drawings: D. Cox, Warwick Castle, 81*l*.; A Forest Scene, with sheep, 78*l*.; A View in Wales, with cattle in the foreground, 58*l*.; A Moorland Scene, with cart and figures, 67*l*.; Bolton Bridge and Abbey, 90*l*.; The Old Mill, 79*l*. T. Collier, Kilburn Castle, Loch Awe, 57*l*. J. Hardy, jun., A Highland Gillie, with setters, 63*l*. J. Syer, Near Barmouth, 73*l*. Pictures: D. Cox, Through the Forest, 220*l*.; The Fisherman, 241*l*.; A Welsh Funeral, 493*l*.; Milking-Time, 346*l*.; Old Turnpike, Bettws-y-Coed, 105*l*. G. Morland, A Landscape, with horseman and beggars, 115*l*. W. Müller, A Landscape, with a cottage, and a boy and girl with two donkeys on a sandy road, 162*l*. E. Nicol, The Finishing Touch, 336*l*.; "A Tablespoonful, Three Times a Day," 283*l*. J. Syer, On the Conway, the first snow of the season, 210*l*.

The same auctioneers sold on the 18th inst. the following, from various collections. Drawings: D. Cox, Lancaster Sands, with numerous figures and carts, 60*l*. C. Fielding, Near Worthing, looking up the valley towards Findon, 57*l*. S. Prout, A Street Scene in Rouen, with clock tower and figures, 89*l*. J. M. W. Turner, The Abbey Church, Bath, 57*l*. Pictures: A. Bonheur, A Shepherd driving Sheep along a Road, cattle on the left, 130*l*. T. Faed, The Reaper, 126*l*.

Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge sold the following prints last week: Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter, after Wheatley, in colours, 23*l*. 10*s*. Master Lambton, after Lawrence, by Cousins, 31*l*. 10*s*. A Tea Garden in St. James's Park, in colours, 40*l*. The Fortune-Teller and the Gamblers, after Peters, 21*l*. Lady Bampfylde, after Sir Joshua Reynolds, 28*l*. Decorating the Statue of Hymen, after Sir Joshua Reynolds, 26*l*. 10*s*.

ASSYRIAN ANTIQUITIES.

53, Palace Gardens Terrace, Kensington, April 14, 1894.

I SHALL feel obliged to you if you will allow me once more a small space to answer Mr. Whelan's rejoinder.

I thought my reply of the 17th ult. was quite plain for any one to understand. As he seems, however, unacquainted with former Assyrian researches and discoveries, and he has offered for presentation the relic alluded to to the Trustees of the British Museum, it is left to them to make any inquiry they like about it, and I am ready to give them any information they require upon the subject. H. RASSAM.

FINE-ART SOCIETY.

OUR remarks on the brilliant and highly attractive collection of drawings by Mrs. Allingham, now on view at the Fine-Art Society's rooms, have been accidentally delayed, and must be necessarily brief. On the whole, her work is less solid, firm, and well modelled than it was when 'A Flat-Iron for a Farthing' informed the world that F. Walker had a worthy rival in genre painting. Yet there is more than enough in the seventy-four charming pictures and sketches now before us to deserve high praise for their pleasantness, graceful feeling, freshness, and variety. The subjects were found in the Isle of Wight, Kent, Gloucestershire, at Pinner, and in Donegal; for, attracted to the north-west coast of Ireland by the fact that the poet whose name she bears was born, lived long, and was buried there, Mrs. Allingham has found in some coast studies a new opening, of which she has availed herself happily. Among the prettiest drawings before us are 'Isle of Wight Cottage' (No. 3), 'Near Boarsted' (13), 'High Street, Pinner' (21), 'Hindhead' (24), 'Cottage near Boarsted' (32), 'Fairy Bridges, Bundoran' (48), the richly toned 'Cave at Freshwater Bay' (53), 'At Boarsted' (61), 'At Dover' (69), and 'Over the Weald of Surrey' (72), a panorama of great charm, breadth, and expansiveness. Apart from the delightful qualities of these instances, and others hardly less excellent, it is our duty to express a growing conviction that, in painting so many small and simply pretty things as have pleased us of late years, the singularly gifted lady seriously wastes power which will not bear such frittering away. She would, it seems to us, more profitably concentrate her energies on more difficult themes than are easily to be derived from rural greenery, ruddy cottages, somewhat shadow-like foliage, and neat, but weak representations of the agricultural classes at home and other somewhat faint idyls which form the staple of this gathering.

MANY of our readers will be glad to hear that Mr. Boyce's very fine drawing of 'The Tithe Barn at Bradford-on-Avon,' which was sold the other day at Christie's with other works from the gatherings (which we described in 'The Private Collections of England,' No. XX.) of Mr. J. W. Barnes, of Durham, has been acquired by the South Kensington Museum, where it will be placed in a few days, together with the drawings—formerly in Mr. Barnes's possession—of 'Bridewell, London,' and 'The Interior of the Confessor's Chapel, Westminster Abbey.' They have reverted to Mr. Boyce, and he has generously lent them to the Museum. As an historical record the drawing of the Confessor's Chapel is valuable, having been executed before the late Sir Gilbert Scott wrecked its beauty.

THE "Society of Lady Artists (Professional)" has appointed to-day (Saturday) for a private view of the exhibition which opens on Monday next at the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly. The Society of Painters in Water Colours opens its spring exhibition to the public on Monday next, the private view being to-day (Saturday). The New Gallery will be opened to the public on Monday, the 30th inst., and the private view will occur on Saturday next, the 28th inst.

THE executors of Ford Madox Brown have decided to sell on the 30th and 31st of May, at his house, No. 1, St. Edmund's Terrace, Regent's Park, the whole of his collections, which include pictures, drawings, and cartoons by him, as well as some studies and sketches by other artists, and artistic implements, apparatus, and furniture of various kinds.

MANY artistic and literary friends will regret to hear that Lucy, the elder daughter of Ford Madox Brown, and the wife of Mr. William M. Rossetti, died at San Remo last week, after a long and exhausting illness. Several of her essays and other literary efforts have been published in magazines and journals of repute, and she contributed pictures of merit to metropolitan galleries.

A CIRCULAR has been issued on the part of a number of the leading gallery directors and art historians of the Continent, proposing the foundation of an Institute of Art History on lines somewhat analogous to those of the German Archaeological Institute at Rome. The main objects of such an institute are described as being (1) the establishment of the richest and most systematic collection possible of materials for the study of art history, in the shape alike of books, photographs, and other reproductions of all kinds; (2) the appointment of a resident director qualified to organize the library and collections, guide students in their researches, and stand as a kind of official head and leader of these studies. The place designated as the most appropriate centre for such an institute is Florence, and it is proposed to attempt to make a beginning by means of private donations and subscriptions, before appealing for aid in the shape of Government subventions. Among the signatories of the prospectus are Dr. Bode, of Berlin; the Commendatori Cavalcaselle and Gnoli, of Rome; M. Hymans, of Brussels; Prof. Justi, of Bonn; Prof. Lützow, of Vienna; Prof. Venturi, of Rome; Prof. Schmarzow, of Leipzig; Dr. Bayersdorfer, of the Munich Gallery; and Dr. M. G. Zimmermann. The three gentlemen last named are the provisional executive committee for carrying out the scheme.

THE exhibition of pictures at Salford, in celebration of the jubilee of the incorporation of the borough, was opened on Monday last. The Duke of Devonshire has sent works of art from Chatsworth.

MR. W. BAIRD, F.S.A., who is engaged upon a memoir of the Rev. John Thomson, of Duddingston, who seventy years ago used to be called "The Scottish Claude," will be glad of help to trace pictures by the artist which have found their way into England. Mr. Baird's address is Clydesdale Bank, Portobello, Midlothian.

A THIRD copy of Mr. Ruskin's pamphlet entitled 'The Queen's Gardens' has come to light, and is now in the hands of Miss Millard, of Teddington. It varies considerably from the version given in 'Sesame and Lilies.'

THE Chronique des Arts records the death, at the age of sixty-six years, of Eugène Lejeune, one of the few remaining pupils of Delacroix and Gleyre, who had contributed to nearly all the Salons since 1845, when he appeared, for the first time, with a water-colour drawing. Many of his works, which were highly popular, have been reproduced in lithography and other modes.

AN exhibition of pictures, portraits, and other relics associated with Marie Antoinette and her circle, to which we have already alluded, has been opened in the galleries of M. Sedelmeyer, Paris. It comprises paintings by Nattier; the spinning-wheel of Madame Elizabeth; the bust of Madame Royale by Houdon; a group in marble by Pigalle; the spinning-wheel which Louis XVI. made for his wife; one of his cravats; a portrait of M. de Sèze, by Girodet; that of the Duchesse de Guiche, by Madame Vigée Lebrun, &c.

In addition to the pictures we have already mentioned as intended for the approaching Salon, the Journal des Arts states that M. Barillot will contribute 'Bergère Saintongeoise,' 'Labourage en Saintonge,' and two pastels; M. Benjamin-Constant, 'Diamants noirs,' and a portrait; M. Fantin-Latour, 'L'Aurore,' 'Les Troyens à Carthage,' and two pastels; M. J. P. Laurens, 'Entrée de Napoléon at Pie VII.,' and M. Pointelin, 'Terrain vierge,' 'Solitude,' and a pastel. It is manifest that pastel painting is rapidly increasing in Paris.

THE Berlin Gallery has acquired for a considerable sum a very fine portrait of a man, by Luca Signorelli, which was the subject of a recent article in the Gazette des Beaux-Arts.

"THE number of the Bulletin de Correspondance Hellénique which appeared on April 9th contains," our Correspondent at Athens writes, "the hymns to Apollo found at Delphi. Prof. Henri Weil devotes an article to the Pæan, which is completely preserved, consisting of twelve strophes, each of four glyconic verses, and one to the inscriptions which contain musical notes. There are six of these, of which A. and B. contain the Pæan written in pæonic verse." We hope to print more on this subject next week.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

ALBERT HALL.—Production of Dr. A. C. Mackenzie's 'Bethlehem.'
QUEEN'S HALL.—Herr Felix Mottl's Wagner Concert.

NEW sacred choral works of magnitude are for the most part heard for the first time at our provincial festivals, so that the production of Dr. A. C. Mackenzie's 'Bethlehem' by the Royal Choral Society on Thursday last week was an event of no ordinary significance. It is matter of history that the work was to have been presented at Chicago during the recent exhibition; but music of a serious nature did not flourish there, and hence it was withdrawn by consent. Without saying that the score—words and music—is original in the highest sense of the term, it certainly presents peculiar features to which it is necessary to refer. To begin with the librettist. Mr. Joseph Bennett uses the appellation "mystery" rather than "oratorio," and justifies this by saying that the former term, "in its special and ancient application to religious drama, more clearly indicates the nature of the work than would the wider designation, 'oratorio.'" There are two acts or parts, the first dealing with the vision of the angels to the shepherds, and the second with the homage paid by the favoured herdsmen and the wise men from the East to the infant Jesus. Each part for performing purposes is complete in itself, so that we have virtually two cantatas, and we are distinctly of opinion that it would be advisable generally to select one part rather than to give the entire work on the same evening. Each is divided into several sections, prefixed by description in black-letter characters and archaic language. What is gained by such headings as "The Celestial Quire returneth to Heaven," "Cometh a Heavenly Legion to Guard the New-born King," and others of a similar nature, it is difficult to determine. Mr. Bennett's verse, however, is, for the most part, distinctly modern in phraseology, and rich at once in elegance and expression. He eschews Scriptural texts, and has so saved Dr. Mackenzie from the danger of offering comparisons with the masterpieces of Bach and Handel; but in the music a distinct intention of writing in the manner of a past age may be detected. True, the composer supplies leading motives in plenty, and never leaves us in doubt as to what they signify; but the antiquarian flavour is strong at times in the matter of tonality as well as phraseology. Against this artificiality must be set the simple charm of the Virgin's cradle song to the Heavenly Child, the barbaric Oriental strains which herald the arrival of the Eastern potentates, and the splendid mastery of all musicianly resource which pervades the score from the first bar to the last. Some of the ensembles are too prolonged and would bear curtailment, even when 'Bethlehem' is given in two sections, as suggested. Enough, however, that Dr. Mackenzie's latest utterance in oratorio—and his last, if we may place reliance on words probably uttered in haste—proves that his hand has lost nothing of the virility so splendidly manifested in 'Jason,' 'The Rose of Sharon,' and 'The Dream of Jubal.' The performance last week was in all respects satisfying. Mr. Edward Lloyd was unable to appear owing to illness, but Mr. Barton McGuckin was an able substitute, though it is only fair to say that he was singing music by no means easy, at a few hours' notice. Miss Ella Russell, Miss Marian McKenzie, Mr. Arthur Barlow, and Mr. David Bispham did their respective shares in the work extremely well, and the general performance, under the composer's direction, was in the main highly praiseworthy.

The number of amateurs who desired to be present at the Wagner concert on Tuesday, when Herr Felix Mottl made his first appearance in London as a conductor, was sufficient to fill the Queen's Hall twice over, and curiosity was followed by enthusiasm, although the reading of these selections differed in most cases very materially from that of either Herr Richter or Mr. Henrich, not to mention Mr. Manns. We have so frequently described Herr Mottl's methods in connexion with the performances at Bayreuth that there is no reason to enter into further details. Let it suffice that nearly every piece on Tuesday was taken at a somewhat slower pace than usual, with very strong accents and moderate indulgence in the tempo rubato. The finest performances were those of the Prelude to 'Lohengrin,' the Prelude and death song from 'Tristan und Isolde,' the fire music from 'Die Walküre,' and the Prelude to 'Parsifal.' Mr. Andrew Blacke sang 'Wotan's Abschied' remarkably well; and the Overtures to 'Rienzi,' 'Der Fliegende Holländer,' and 'Die Meistersinger' completed the scheme. We are glad to learn that Herr Mottl will conduct a second concert on May 22nd, when selections from Beethoven and Berlioz, as well as Wagner, will be performed under his baton.

Musical Society.

THE performance in English of 'Cavalleria Rusticana' at Drury Lane on Thursday last week was unsatisfactory as regards the chorus and orchestra, neither being equal to their duties. Some of the principal artists, however, did well, notably Miss Pauline Joran as Santuzza and Mr. Pfrangeon Davies as Alfio. The promised performance of 'Philémon et Baucis,' with Mr. Joseph Bennett's translation of the libretto, is postponed until next Thursday afternoon.

ANOTHER Wagner concert was given at the Crystal Palace last Saturday in place of the programme originally announced, M. Sapellnikoff being unable to fulfil his engagement. The apologetic note issued was not needed; the directors did the best they could under the circumstances, as, according to their experience, "Wagner's music draws a larger audience at the present time than that of any other composer." No criticism of the scheme or the manner of performance is required, every item being familiar to those who frequent the Sydenham concerts. Selections from all the music-dramas save 'Rienzi,'

'Die Meistersinger,' and 'Parsifal' were included, and vocal items were contributed with excellent effect by Madame Clara Samuëll and Mr. Andrew Black.

The sixty-eighth performance of the Musical Artists' Society took place at St. Martin's Town Hall on Monday evening. The new compositions in the programme comprised a brightly written Suite for Pianoforte in D, by G. B. Aitken; two movements from a String Quartet, by Alfred Gilbert; a Pianoforte Quartet in A, by C. Lawrence; and a melodious setting of the 'Ave Maria,' by Edith Sweetstone. The concert was under the direction of Mr. Alfred Gilbert.

MR. FREDERICK DAWSON, the clever and energetic North-Country pianist, gave the first of three recitals at St. James's Hall on Tuesday afternoon. He has evidently a predilection for Beethoven's music, for on this occasion he played the 'Waldstein' Sonata and 'Les Adieux, l'Absence, et le Retour'; and at the next recital, on the 24th inst., he will play no fewer than five of the Bonn master's sonatas, thus emulating Rubinstein and the late Hans von Bulow. If there is not much charm in Mr. Dawson's style, he has plenty of force and general manipulative skill, and very seldom plays false notes.

MADAME FRICKENHAUS gave a concert, or, as she termed it, a matinée, on Wednesday afternoon at St. James's Hall, playing a number of minor pieces by Tchaikowsky, Liszt, and less familiar composers, such as Rachmanikoff, Nawratil, Huber, Graham P. Moore, Friedberg, and Arensky. She was joined by Signor Simonetti in Beethoven's Sonata in G for piano and violin, Op. 98, and in three movements from a suite by Ignaz Brüll. Mr. Norman Salmond being unable to sing, his place was taken by the Westminster Singers, one of the most capable of the many male-voice quartets now claiming attention.

S. R. T. wrote from Paris on Tuesday:—

'Last night at the Opéra Comique was given the répétition générale of Verdi's 'Falstaff.' Even those who know the caprices of the Parisian public best can find no adequate explanation for the fact that of Verdi's two recent works—'Otello' and 'Falstaff'—the one should be taken, the other left; but the success of last night's performance will perhaps induce the Parisians to remove from themselves the reproach that theirs is the only great capital in which 'Otello' has not yet been heard. The invitations for last night were confined, with but few exceptions, to the French critics, and it is impossible, therefore, to predict what measure of success 'Falstaff' will have with the general public; nevertheless, the very electness of the audience, which at the fall of the curtain cheered the old master so long and so tumultuously, made it clear that there is to be no attempt to disparage the work for political reasons. This being so, the ultimate success of the opera rests 'between the knees of the gods'; who, it may be assumed, will see justice done to the greatest masterpiece of the present decade. Its exquisite beauties seem even increased since it was produced fourteen months ago; and the artists of the Opéra Comique, it should be said at once, threw themselves into their task of interpretation with a loyalty worthy of the occasion. M. Maurel has improved his conception of the chief rôle, and his acting is more subtle, his singing finer, than last year. In M. Souleiroz we have a splendid Ford; voice, bearing, and conception are as good as possible. The representatives of the women are very much better than those of La Scala, and Mlle. Delna, a young singer who is hardly more than a débütante, was most admirable as Mrs. Quickly, and proved that she will be a most valuable addition to the Covent Garden regiment of artists. Mlle. Landouzy was an attractive Nannetta, and the other interpreters were all efficient. The orchestra, excellently conducted by M. Dambé, was almost flawless, having, indeed, only one fault, that of playing too softly. The wonderful passage for double-basses, for instance, which opens the second part of the third act, was, to me at least, absolutely inaudible. But the performance remains, as a whole, singularly fine; it is hardly too much to say that it is worthy of the greatness of the work.'

The male-voice choir from Berne, which enjoys a very high reputation, will visit London this season, and will give concerts at the Queen's Hall on May 28th and June 1st. Another interesting announcement is that the recently formed Laistner Choir will perform Max Bruch's fine, though somewhat sombre setting of Schiller's 'Lay of the Bell' on May 9th, the anniversary of the poet's death. The work was first produced in England at the Birmingham Festival in 1879, but it has not yet been heard in London. The Laistner Choir performance will be at St. James's Hall.

A CURIOUS report has been made by American papers, that Dvorak's Symphony in E minor, which was said to be founded on, or at any rate suggested by, negro and plantation melodies, proves to be an early work, performed fourteen years ago, but newly embellished. The matter is not of much consequence, for a composer has a perfect right to revise and enrich his own utterances.

A NEW choral society is in process of formation in connexion with St. Martin's Town Hall. The honorary conductor is Mr. J. Connah, and the rehearsals will commence in September next. In the mean time communications should be addressed to the honorary secretary, Mr. George Marshall, 3, Charing Cross Road.

A VIENNESE paper states that the house in which Handel was born at Halle is about to be demolished. Efforts were made to purchase it, but without success, and it will accordingly disappear.

A PRINCELY composer has appeared at Constantinople. The Prince Burhaneddin, son of the Sultan, has long devoted himself to musical studies, and now, according to the Lerant Herald, has composed a military march, which is to be used by the bands of the Turkish army.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Mon.	M. Repinichoff's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Mr. Frederick Dawson's Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
—	Mr. Robert Newman's National Concert, A. Queen's Hall.
Tues.	Mr. F. Dawson's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Miss Ada Davies's Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Westminster Choral Society's Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
—	Tonic Sol-Fa Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
—	Rev. Mr. Lambbridge's Concert, A. St. James's Hall.
—	Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch's Concert, 8, 15, 'DeWland,' West Dulwich.
Wed.	Miss Edith Greenup's Pianoforte Recital, A. Queen's Hall.
—	Miss Pauline St. Angelo's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Westminster Choral Society's Concert, 8, Westminster Town Hall.
—	Royal Amateur Orchestral Society's Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
—	Miss Ethel Beaufield's Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
Thurs.	Gagliardi's Pianoforte and 'Philosophy of Music,' 2, Drury Lane Theatre.
—	Mr. Aguilera's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Beethoven Rooms.
—	Reformers and Redemptive Union Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Miss Kate Leonard's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Royal Choral Society—'Riljak' & Albert Hall.
—	Signor Simonetti's Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
Fri.	Royal Artillery Band Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
Sat.	Mr. Manasse Benedict's Concert, 8, Crystal Palace.
—	Mr. Perry Nieuwland's Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Hotel of Chamber Music, 3, Hotel Hall, Hampstead.
—	Wagner Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
—	Concert in Aid of the Royal Free Hospital, 8, St. Martin's Town Hall.

DRAMA

Dramatic Society.

THE alterations that have been made in 'Faust' during Mr. Irving's tour in America are neither numerous nor specially significant. They affect practically the scenes of décor, some at least of which are but remotely connected with the main action. One innovation alone calls for notice. This is the substitution of sensuality for sentiment as the means of luring Faust to perdition. For the picture of Gretchen in her simple dress is now given a series of tableaux of houris. This is altogether consonant with the 'Dr. Faustus' of Marlowe, and gets rid of the objection that the fiend can use for the vilest of purposes what, up to then, was a flower of pure maidenhood. In the acting a gratifying change is perceptible. Mr. Irving has altered his method, avoids the eccentricities of pronunciation which were the chief drawback from his previous performance, and speaks naturally, intelligibly, and with excellent effect. His performance is, in this respect, on a level with his Becket, which is, by general consent, his most satisfactory creation. Mephisto is well within his range. The two chief characteristics of his art are imagination and humour: the latter caustic and austere, never genial and rubicund. We cannot fancy him in Falstaff or Sir Toby Belch; but he is now an admirable Mephisto. Miss Terry meanwhile remains a delightful Gretchen, and plays with somewhat less of passion than she previously exhibited, but with exquisite pathos. Other characters scarcely call for comment, the weakest being the Faust, which is melodramatic. The scenery retains its old beauty, and the pageant of German life is superb.

MR. HARE will before very long revive Lord Lytton's play of 'Money.' The rumour that Mrs. Bancroft will play Lady Franklin is premature.

'A BUSCH OF VIOLETS,' a play of contemporary life, altered by Mr. Grundy from one of his earlier works, will be the next novelty at the Haymarket. Mr. Tree is to play a financier.

MR. HENRY IRVING will take the chair at the next banquet of the Royal General Theatrical Fund, to be held at the Hôtel Métropole on May 31st.

'TWELFTH NIGHT' was played on Thursday at Daly's Theatre for the one hundredth time. Such a result is a triumph for Mr. Daly's management and his company. Separate performances, such as the Viola of Miss Ada Rehan and the Sir Toby of Mr. James Lewis, are admirable in all respects; and the mounting and general interpretation, though violating some Shakespearean canons, are full of beauty, poetry, and suggestion.

'BLUE BEANS' is the title of a new play by Mr. Joseph Arthur, author of 'The Still Alarm,' which may be looked for during the season. 'En Garçon,' a comedy by Miss Emily Coffin and Mr. C. S. Fawcett, is also promised.

WITH no change of cast Mr. Law's comedy of 'The New Boy' was successfully transferred on Monday from Terry's Theatre to the Vaudeville, where it will presumably be played until the end of the season.

THE play in which Mrs. Langtry will appear at the Opéra Comique is a five-act work of Messrs. Robert Buchanan and Henry Murray, which is not yet definitely named.

THE thirty-eighth banquet of the Dramatic and Musical Benevolent Fund, held at the Hôtel Métropole on Wednesday in last week, under Mr. Comyns Carr's chairmanship, produced subscriptions to the amount of 850*l*.

MISCELLANEA

Wafer-stamps.—In reference to a note on Count Fersen in your issue of April 14th, "wafer-stamps" were common in the first half of this century, and I possess the one that my father invariably used to impress his initial on his official correspondence at Addiscombe College, which was always fastened by a wafer.

CHAS. E. LEEDS.

* * We have not questioned the use of wafers nor the practice of impressing a device upon them. But the term "wafer-stamp" is new to us, and we do not know in what respect such an article would differ from a seal.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—H. M.—V. G. P.—T. G. O.—M. K.—M. C. F. M.—L. H. M.—St. G.—H. R. A.—R. G. T.—H. J.—E. M. S.—received.
No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION BY POST. To all parts of the United Kingdom.

For Twelve Months...	15	0
For Six Months...	7	6
For all Countries within the Postal Union.
For Twelve Months...	18	0
For Six Months...	9	0

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & CO., LIMITED.

Now ready, Part I., super-royal 8vo., of BIBLIOGRAPHICA: a Magazine of Bibliography.
 Subscription price, 30s. per annum (Four Parts), net. Single Parts, price 10s. each, net. Prospectuses on application.

ONE HUNDRED COPIES ONLY, Columbian 4to.
BITS of OLD CHELSEA. A Series of 41 Etchings.
 By WALTER W. BURGESS, R.P.E. With Letterpress
 Description by Lionel Johnson and Richard Le Gallienne.

* * This sumptuous Edition is printed on Hand-made Paper, illustrated with proofs before letters on Japanese vellum, signed by the Artist, and strongly bound in buckram. The price is Ten Guineas, net.

MR. LEWIS MORRIS'S NEW VOLUME.
SONGS WITHOUT NOTES. By LEWIS MORRIS,
 Author of 'The Epic of Hades,' &c. Fcap. 8vo. 5s.

"These songs exemplify anew Mr. Morris's faculty for giving graceful, melodious, and distinguished expression to thoughts that are somewhat lacking in distinction. We cannot refuse to admire his healthy optimism, his glowing faith, and his attempt to idealize and draw a spiritual lesson from the more sordid aspects of modern life."—Times.

A LIFE of ARCHBISHOP LAUD. By a ROMISH
 RECUSANT. With Portrait from a rare Engraving prefixed to 'The Recantation of the Prelate of Canterbury,' 1641.
 Demy 8vo. 15s.

"A deeply interesting book."—Church Times.
 "Put together with great literary skill."—Scotsman.

DAVID GARRICK: a Biography. By JOSEPH
 KNIGHT. With Etched Portrait by W. Boucher, from a Painting by Gainsborough (never before Engraved) in the possession of Mrs. Kay. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d. net.

* * A few Large-Paper Copies are being printed on Hand-made Paper, 21s. net.

INTRODUCTION to the STUDY of the NEW TESTAMENT. Critical, Exegetical, and Theological. By the Rev. S. DAVIDSON, D.D. LL.D. New Edition, thoroughly
 Revised and Enlarged. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 30s.

The DISPERSAL of SHELLS: an Inquiry into the means of Dispersal possessed by Fresh-water and Land Mollusea. By H. WALLIS KEW, F.Z.S. With Preface by A. R. WALLACE, F.R.S., and Illustrations. 5s.

THOUGHTS and REFLECTIONS on MODERN SOCIETY. With an Introduction on the Gradual Social Evolution of Primitive Man. By A. FEATHERMAN. Demy
 8vo. 21s.

FIANS, FAIRIES, and PICTS. By DAVID
 MAC RITCHIE. Demy 8vo. with Illustrations, 5s.

DOVE SONO. A Volume of Poems. Crown 8vo.
 2s. 6d.

GROWING CHILDREN and AWKWARD WALK-ING. By THOMAS WILLIAM NUNN, F.R.C.S., Consulting
 Surgeon to the Middlesex Hospital. Crown 8vo. 2s.

BOOKS ABOUT BOOKS.

The BINDING of BOOKS. An Essay in the History of Gold-tooled Bindings. By HERBERT P. HORNE.
 Being the concluding Volume of "Books about Books," Edited by A. W. POLLARD. With Illustrations printed on Handmade Paper, and bound in buckram. Post 8vo. 6s. net.

FANS of JAPAN. By CHARLOTTE M. SALWEY.
 With Introduction by WILLIAM ANDERSON, F.R.C.S., late of H.M. Legation, Japan. Handsomely bound in cloth and gold. And with 10 Full-Page Coloured Plates and 39 Illustrations in Black and White. Large 4to. 31s. 6d.

"Richly illustrated.....It is, however, more than ornamental, for the text has been most laboriously built up, and treats not only of the invention and development of the fan, but of its varieties in shape, material, and use; it discusses fan legends, explains fan manufacture, and gives statistics of fan exportation."—Observer.

MAXWELL GRAY'S NEW VOLUME.

A COSTLY FREAK. By MAXWELL GRAY, Author of 'The Silence of Dean Maitland.' With Frontispiece by Everard Hopkins. Crown 8vo. 6s.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR,

An INNOCENT IMPOSTOR, and other Stories.
 Crown 8vo. 6s.

PREBENDARY EYTON'S NEW SERMONS.

The TEN COMMANDMENTS: Sermons Preached at Holy Trinity, Chelsea. By ROBERT EYTON, Rector of Upper Chelsea. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"Full of that well-known preacher's spiritual insight and practical sagacity."—Times.

EARLY EDITIONS: a Bibliographical Survey of the Works of some Popular Modern Authors. By J. H.
 SLATER. Demy 8vo. half-Roxburghe morocco, 21s. net. A few Large-Paper Copies on Hand-made Paper are issued at 42s.

"A most valuable and important book—indispensable, indeed, to all collectors, and interesting even to those who do not care twopence whether the editions they possess are the first or the fiftieth."—St. James's Gazette.

CONSCIENCE: an Essay towards a New Analysis,
 Deduction, and Development of Conscience. By the Rev.
 J. D. ROBERTSON, D.Sc. Vol. I. NEW ANALYSIS of CONSCIENCE. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

HISTORY of CIVILIZATION in ANCIENT INDIA based on SANSKRIT LITERATURE. With Maps. By ROMESH CHUNDER DUTT, C.I.E. Revised Edition.
 2 vols. 21s.

LECTURES on the HISTORY of PHILOSOPHY.
 By GEORG WILHELM FRIEDRICH HEGEL. Translated from the German by E. S. HALDANE. 3 vols. large post 8vo. Vols. I. and II. 12s. each.

CRITICAL SKETCHES. By A. E. STREET.
 Crown 8vo. 5s.

Contents:—Rousseau's Theory of Education—The Education of Gargantua—The Poetry of the Sea—Westminster Abbey—William Hazlitt—Dickens and Daudet—Diderot as Art Critic—The Realities of War—Tolstoi and Vereshchagin—M. Zola—Originality in Art—A Letter to a Student in Architecture.

The PASSING of the POET, and other Poems.
 By AQUILA. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

PATERNOSTER HOUSE, CHARING CROSS-ROAD.

DIGBY, LONG & CO.

NEW NOVEL BY JEAN MIDDLEMASS.

THE MYSTERY OF CLEMENT
DUNRAVEN.

In 3 vols. 31s. 6d.

[Immediately.]

JOHN LITTLEJOHNS' NEW NOVEL.

ENGLAND AGAINST the WORLD. A Novel. By the Author of 'The Flowing Tide,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.SCOTSMAN.—"His readable and enjoyable novel.....
Threads of adventure, romance, and love which one may pursue with considerable interest."

SECOND EDITION shortly.

THREE EMPRESSES.

Josephine, Marie-Louise, Eugénie. By CAROLINE
GERRARD, Author of 'In Other Lands,' &c. With Portraits. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

BY BERNARD FIELDING.

IN VERSE AND OUT OF IT.

Being Metaphysical Studies and Stories. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d. [Just out.]

BY ALFRED SMYTHIE.

SIR DUNSTAN'S DAUGHTER,

and other Poems. By the Author of 'The Warlock,' &c.
Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d. [Just out.]

DIGBY, LONG & CO. 18, Boulevard-street, E.C.

In crown 8vo. Vols., strongly bound in imperial cloth, cut edges, price 1s. 4d. each.BLACKIE'S SCHOOL AND HOME
LIBRARY.Under this title the Publishers have arranged to issue a selection of the best and most interesting books in the English language.The Library will include lives of heroes ancient and modern, records of travel and adventure by sea and land, fiction of the highest class, historical romances, books of natural history, and tales of domestic life.An important feature of the series will be the careful editing of the books, to render them in all respects fit to be read by young people. This editorial work will be carried out in such a way as to maintain the integrity of the books, only what is objectionable or superfluous being discarded.

NOW READY.

Dana's Two Years before the Mast.

Southey's Life of Nelson.

Waterton's Wanderings.

Anson's Voyage round the World.

To be followed by two volumes on the first of each month, commencing June 1st.

London: BLACKIE & SON, Limited, Old Bailey.

"Perhaps the great Norwegian novelist's most characteristic romance."—Athenæum.

NOW READY.

Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, with Portrait of the Author, price 3s. 6d.

THE VISIONARY;

OR,

PICTURES FROM NORDLAND.

By JONAS LIE.

Translated by JESSIE MUIR.

The ATHENÆUM says:—"The Visionary" is the best translation from the Danish that we have met with for some time; it is a real pleasure to read it."The PALL MALL GAZETTE says:—"It is, unhappily, but seldom that Scandinavian or any other literature provides us with such pleasant reading as this. Full of the poetry of the far North, simple as a fairy tale, human as human heart could wish. But 'The Visionary' is to be read, not written about."

AT ALL THE LIBRARIES,

THE VISIONARY.

By JONAS LIE.

The SCOTSMAN says:—"A book of which any author and any literature might be proud. The tale is unfolded simply and with a growing sadness which reaches to a great height of pathos at the close. It is a fine work."The DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—"It is here's autobiographical narrative tomes not only with personal experiences of extra natural apparitions, but with appalling tales of goblins and demons. The story is told with thoroughly artistic simplicity, and its descriptive episodes are characterized by remarkable graphic force and delicacy. Altogether, a book worthy of careful and repeated perusal."

Price 3s. 6d.

THE VISIONARY;

OR,

PICTURES FROM NORDLAND.

Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., in the WEEKLY SUN, says:—"Such is this exquisite love story—pure, sad, spectral, like the land of which it is told. I hope my readers will have as much joy in reading as I have had in telling it."The DAILY CHRONICLE says:—"The novel is good as a whole, but it is especially remarkable as the setting of a short story which certainly deserves to rank among the very best in literature. One of our literary clubs is said to demand, as a sort of entrance-ambush, a solemn declaration that 'Wandering Willie's tale in 'Redgauntlet' is the best short story ever written. We should advise all ap-prants to this fellowship to refrain from reading the story of Elias and the 'droug' in the third chapter of 'The Visionary' if they wish to make the statutory declaration with an easy conscience."TO-DAY says:—"Does not read like a translation, its language is so felicitous. A story of unusual charm and power."

"A striking and powerful romance."

Saturday Review.

THE VISIONARY.

By JONAS LIE.

The ABERDEEN FREE PRESS says:—"In point of real power in the presentation of human character he (Jonas Lie) is as far above the mass of what seems the favourite school of English writers of that class of fiction in which characterization is aimed at, as the simple dignity and natural ease of his style is, in a literary sense, superior to their perpetual striving after effect. And this comes out quite markedly in 'The Visionary.' Then the picture of Susanna, the heroine of the story, though limned with the utmost simplicity, hardly anything finer or more elevated in tone could be conceived."The PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR says:—"The book depicts with peculiar force and fascination the life and thought of persons in the far north of Norway—the land of the midnight sun, the land of the nine months' night.". Numerous other commendatory notices and reviews have also appeared.

HODDER BROTHERS,

18, New Bridge-street, London, E.C.

MESSRS. ISBISTER'S
NEW BOOKS.TENNYSON: his Art and Relation to Modern Life.By STOPFORD A. BROOKE, M.A., Author of 'Early English Literature,' &c. On double-edge paper, pp. 496, medium 8vo. 7s. 6d.

[Just ready.]

SOCIALISM.

By Prof. FLINT, D.D. LL.D., Author of 'Theism,' &c. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d. [In May.]

THE TENDERNESS OF CHRIST.

By the Right Rev. A. W. THOROLD, D.D., Lord Bishop of Winchester, Author of 'The Yoke of Christ,' &c. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

[Just published.]

THE MESSAGE OF ISRAEL IN
THE LIGHT OF MODERN CRITICISM.By JULIA WEDGWOOD, Author of 'The Moral Ideal,' &c. Demy 8vo. 6s. [In May.]LABOUR AND SORROW. Sermons on Some Aspects of Human Life.By the Rev. W. J. KNOX-LITTLE, M.A., Canon of Worcester Cathedral. Crown 8vo. gilt top, 3s. 6d. [In May.]CHRIST AND SCEPTICISM, and other Sermons.By Rev. S. A. ALEXANDER, M.A., Reader of the Temple Church. Crown 8vo, gilt top, 3s. 6d. [In a few days.]

THE HEROIC IN MISSIONS:

Pioneers in Six Fields.

By the Rev. A. R. BUCKLAND, M.A., Morning Preacher at the Foundling Hospital. Crown
8vo. 1s. 6d. [Just published.]THE COMRADE CHRIST, and other Sermons.By the Rev. W. J. DAWSON, Author of 'The Makers of Modern English,' &c. Crown 8vo. gilt top, 3s. 6d. [Just published.]THE PHANTOM BROTHER AND
THE CHILD.By EVELYN EVERETT GREEN. And other
Stories by L. T. MEADE, SARAH DOUDNEY,
&c. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.
[In May.]

GREATER LOVE.

By ALEXANDER GORDON. And other
Stories by GILBERT PARKER, ROBERT
BARR, &c. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo.
2s. 6d. [In May.]

ESSENTIAL CHRISTIANITY:

Selected Sermons.

By the Rev. HUGH PRICE HUGHES, M.A.
Crown 8vo. gilt top, 3s. 6d. [In May.]

THE INVISIBLE PLAYMATE:

Story of the Unseen.

By WILLIAM CANTON, Author of 'A Lost
Epic, and other Poems,' &c. Small crown 8vo.
1s. : gilt extra, and gilt top, 1s. 6d.

[Just ready.]

London: ISBISTER & CO., LIMITED,
15 and 16, Tavistock-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE & CO.'S LIST.

Dedicated by special permission to Her Majesty the Queen.

MEMORIALS of OLD HAILEY-
BURY COLLEGE. By the late BRAND
SAPTE, Sir MONIER MONIER-WILLIAMS,
FREDERICK CHARLES DANVERS, PERCY
WIGRAM, Sir STEUART COLVIN BAYLEY, and many Contributors. Pcap. 4to. buckram,
21s. net.

A small Edition on Hand-made Paper, with Plates on Japanese Paper, 42s. net.

The WHITEHALL SHAKE-
SPEARE. Printed in Large Type on antique laid
Paper. A readable and handy Volume. Vols. I., II., and III. already published. In buckram and in cloth, 5s.; in half-parliament, with gilt top, 6s.

The ORIGINAL INHABITANTS of INDIA. By Dr. GUSTAV OPPERT. Demy
8vo. cloth gilt, 20s.

SOME MEMORIES of BOOKS,
AUTHORS, and EVENTS. By JAMES BER-
TRAM. Being Reminiscences of De Quincey,
Scott, &c. Demy 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 7s. 6d.

GOLD, SPORT, and COFFEE in MYSORE. By R. H. ELLIOTT, Author of 'Experiences of a Planter.' With a Map.
Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 7s. 6d.

The INDIAN EYE on ENGLISH
LIFE. By B. M. MALABARI. New Edition.
Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The RIVAL POWERS in CEN-TRAL ASIA. By JOSEF POPOWSKI. Translated by A. B. BRABANT and Edited by CHAS. E. D. BLACK. With a MAP of the PAMIRS and PART of AFGHANISTAN, measuring 25 inches by 18½ inches.

This Map has been specially compiled from the most recent data, and gives in a concise form a correct view of the situation in the Pamirs. Demy 8vo. cloth gilt, Map in Pocket, 12s. 6d.

"A useful review of the great subject with which it deals."—Times.

"Herr Popowski has done his work thoroughly.
.....A fascinating book. It is a book to make the British reader think. It is accompanied by the best map of the Pamir region we have yet seen."
Natural Observer.

A MONOGRAPH on the COINS of the HINDU STATES of RAJPUTANA. By Surgeon-Capt. W. W. WEBB. With 12 Plates and a Map in Colours, showing the Mint Towns in Rajputana. Royal 8vo. cloth gilt, 16s. net.

VOL. V. OF CONSTABLE'S ORIENTAL MISCELLANY.

RAMBLES and RECOLLEC-TIONS of an INDIAN OFFICIAL. By Sir
W. H. SLEEMAN. Edited by VINCENT
ARTHUR SMITH, B.C.S. 2 vols. 12s. net.

London: A. CONSTABLE & CO.,
14, Parliament-street.

BLISS, SANDS & FOSTER.

THE COUNTRY Month by Month.

MARCH AND APRIL NOW READY.

Cloth, silk-sewn, inlaid parchment, gilt top,
2s. each;

Paper printed stiffened wrapper, gilt top,
1s. each.

PRESS OPINIONS.

TIMES.—"Well adapted to the purpose."

NATURE.—"Interesting and brightly written."

SCOTSMAN.—"Full of observant sympathy and special knowledge."

SCHOOL BOARD CHRONICLE.—"It is altogether delightful reading."

CHRISTIAN WORLD.—"Charming gossip—reminding us of Gilbert White and Richard Jefferies."

GLASGOW HERALD.—"Should delight the heart of the naturalist."

"CHARMING IN APPEARANCE, LITERARY IN STYLE, ACCU-RATE IN STATEMENT.....WE KNOW SOME WHICH SO WELL DESERVES CREDIT FOR BEING 'UP-TO-DATE' AS THIS PRETTY LITTLE VOLUME."—SSELBORNE SOCIETY'S 'NATURE NOTES'.

(And many more.)

NEW NOVELS.—In Two Volumes.

AT THE LIBRARIES.

DUST BEFORE THE WIND.

By MAY CROMMELIN.

PRESS OPINIONS.

PRO.

ATHENÆUM.—"Written with a care and skill worthy of better materials."

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"A tale of grim and cruel retribution, directly illustrating the Scriptural pronouncement which declares that the sins of the parents shall be visited on the children.....Powerfully written throughout."

CONTRA.

MORNING POST.—"PERVERTED—UNPLEASANT—MELO-DRAMATIC—CORRUPT TO THE BACKBONE—UNSATISFACTORY TALK."

MRS. MACQUOID'S Latest Novel.

IN AN ORCHARD.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

In 2 vols.

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"Pleasingly written.....
Dainty setting.....Simple and healthy reading."

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"Mrs. Macquoid is an adept in the art of word painting.....Her sketches of Norman and Breton characters are not surpassed in vivacity and verisimi-litude by those of even the ablest native specialists, such as Eile Borthet, Alphonse Karr, and André Theuriet."

ATHENÆUM.—"Very pretty.....It is needless to say that the author is as successful as usual."

GRAPHIC.—"Unsurpassable art—for it is the art of nature herself—with which Mrs. Katherine Macquoid makes us realize and enter into the whole lives of men and women
.....is charmingly exemplified in her story, 'In an Orchard.'" MORNING POST.—"Naïve simplicity.....The story is a pretty one."

In One Volume, 3s. 6d.

INSCRUTABLE.

By ESMÉ STUART.

ATHENÆUM.—"Is exciting enough to please at least one 'jaded reviewer'."

London: 15, CRAVEN-STREET, STRAND, W.C.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S EDUCATIONAL BOOKS FOR SCHOOLS.

MATHEMATICS AND SCIENCE.

The MERCANTILE ARITHMETIC.

By Dr. WORMELL, Head Master of the Central Foundation Schools of London. Large crown 8vo. Complete Work, 3s. 6d.; with ANSWERS, 4s. Parts I. and II. separately, 7s. each; ANSWERS only, 1s.

An ELEMENTARY TEXT-BOOK of

MECHANICS. By Dr. WORMELL. Specially adapted for the Science and Art Departments and other Examinations. Fully illustrated, crown 8vo. 3s. net. A Volume of Solutions for Teachers and Private Students, 3s. net.

LECTURES on SOUND, HEAT, and

LIGHT. By Dr. WORMELL. Popular Courses of Instruction for Junior Students and Evening Classes. Each in 1 vol. with numerous illustrations, crown 8vo. cloth, 1s. net, each.

The STANDARD COURSE of

CHEMISTRY. By B. J. COX, Head Master of the Birmingham
Technical School. Adopted by the School Boards for London, Edinburgh, &c.

Parts I-IV, cloth, price 1d. each; Part V, cloth, price 1s. Complete in 1 vol. 2s. 6d. net. Each Part is fully illustrated, and forms a simple, well-graded, and interesting course of study.

An ELEMENTARY TREATISE on

FOURIER'S SERIES, and SPHERICAL, CYLINDRICAL, and ELLIPTICAL HARMONICS. With Applications to Problems in Mathematical Physics. By W. B. STEWART, Ph.D. Professor of Mathematics in Harvard University. 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.

FRENCH.

A FIRST FRENCH COURSE. By

JAMES BOILLER, B.A. (Univ. Coll.), Officer d'Académie, Senior
French Master at Dulwich College. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d.

A FIRST FRENCH READER and

EXERCISE BOOK. By W. J. GREENSTREET, M.A., Head Master of the Marlborough School, Wiltshire. With Vocabulary. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s.

TEXT-BOOKS.

BALZAC.—Une TÉNÉBREUSE

AFFAIRE. Edited by JAMES BOILLER. Cloth, 1s. 6d. net.

STAHL.—MAROUSSIA. Edited by

JAMES BOILLER. Cloth, 1s. 6d. net.

HUGO.—QUATRE-VINGT-TREIZE.

Edited by JAMES BOILLER. 2s. 6d. net.

DUMAS.—MONTE CRISTO. Edited by FRANCIS TAYLER, M.A. 2s. 6d. net.

GRÉVILLE.—PERDUE. Edited by

JAMES BOILLER. 2s. 6d. net.

DUMAS.—Les TROIS MOUSQUE- TAIRES. Edited for Use in Schools, by Professor SUMNER, M.A., of Harvard University. Cloth, 8vo. 3s. 6d.

FRENCH REVOLUTION READ- INGS. Edited by A. JAMISON SMITH, M.A., Head Master of King Edward's School, Camp Hill, Birmingham, and C. M. DIX, M.A., Assistant Master at the Oratory School. Square 8vo. cloth, 2s. net.

MODERN FRENCH READINGS.

Edited, with Notes and Helps for Composition, by A. J. SMITH,
M.A. 8vo. cloth, with red edges, 3s.

RICHEBOURG.—Le MILLION du

PÈRE RACIOT. Edited by JAMES BOILLER. Cloth
[Nearly ready.]

LATIN.

ALLEN and GREENOUGH'S LATIN

GRAMMAR. A Latin Grammar for Schools and Colleges, founded on Comparative Grammar. By J. H. ALLEN, Lecturer at Harvard University, and J. H. GREENOUGH, Professor of Latin at Harvard University. New Edition, Revised and Enlarged. 4th pp., crown 8vo. half-crown, 6s.

The GATE to CÆSAR. By W. C.

COLLIER, Author of 'Practical Latin Composition', 6s. 13s. pp.,
cloth, 2s.

This Volume contains:—(1) A Simplified Text of Cæsar's War, Book II.
—(2) The Original Text.—(3) Notes on both Texts.—(4) Exercises on the Simplified Text.—(5) Vocabulary.—(6) Etymological Vocabulary.

THE BEGINNER'S LATIN BOOK.

Complete with Grammar, Exercises, Colloquia, Selections for Translation, and Vocabulary. By W. C. COLLIER, M.A., and
M. GRANT DANIELL, A.M. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s.

PRACTICAL LATIN COMPOSITION.

By W. C. COLLIER, Author of 'The Beginner's Latin Book', 4s.
25s. pp., crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d., 2s. 6d., on Teachers' order only.

DR. MORRISON'S GEOGRAPHIES.

Entirely New Editions of these well-known Works are now ready.
Revised and largely Rewritten by W. L. CARRIE, M.A., Assistant Master at George Watson's College, Edinburgh.

The HISTORICAL GEOGRAPHY.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The SHILLING GEOGRAPHY. Small

8vo. cloth, 1s.

London:

EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street, W.C.,
Publisher to the India Office.

DEVIL'S PRONOUN, and other Tales. By Miss F. FOLKINGHAM. With Illustrations. 18mo. cloth, 3s. 6d.
Reeves & Turner, 5, Wellington-street, Strand.

THE DOCTRINE OF EVOLUTION.

MR. HERBERT SPENCER'S WORKS.

- FIRST PRINCIPLES. 16s.
PRINCIPLES OF BIOLOGY. 2 vols. 34s.
PRINCIPLES OF PSYCHOLOGY. 2 vols. 36s.
PRINCIPLES OF SOCIOLOGY. Vol. I. 21s.
Ditto. Vol. II. 18s.
ECOLESIASTICAL INSTITUTIONS. 5s.
PRINCIPLES OF ETHICS. Vol. I. 15s.
Ditto. Vol. II. 12s. 6d.
THE DATA OF ETHICS. (Separately.) 8s.
JUSTICE. (Separately.) 8s.
THE STUDY OF SOCIOLOGY. 10s. 6d.
EDUCATION. 6s.
Ditto. Cheap Edition. 2s. 6d.
ESSAYS. 3 vols. 80s. (or each vol. 10s.).
SOCIAL STATICS AND MAN v. STATE. 10s.
MAN v. STATE. (Separately.) 1s.

Williams & Morgan, 14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. with 2 Portraits, 24s.

JOHN FRANCIS AND THE 'ATHENÆUM.' A LITERARY CHRONICLE OF HALF A CENTURY.

By JOHN C. FRANCIS.

"The volumes abound with curious and interesting statements, and in bringing before the public the most notable features of a distinguished journal from its infancy almost to the present hour, Mr. Francis deserves the thanks of all readers interested in literature."—Spectator.

"A mine of information on subjects connected with literature for the last fifty years."—Echo.

"No other fifty years of English literature contain so much to interest an English reader."—Freeman.

"A fascinating page of literary history."—Illustrated London News.

"Our survey has been unavoidably confined almost exclusively to the first volume; indeed, anything like an adequate account of the book is impossible, for it may be described as a history in notes of the literature of the period with which it deals. We confess that we have been able to find very few pages altogether barren of interest, and by far the larger portion of the book will be found irresistibly attractive by all who care anything for the history of literature in our own time."—Manchester Examiner.

"No memoir of Mr. Francis would be complete without a corresponding history of the journal with which his name will for ever be identified. The extraordinary variety of subjects and persons referred to, embracing as they do every event in literature, and referring to every person of distinction in science or letters, is a record of such magnitude that we can only indicate its outlines. To the literary historian the volumes will be of incalculable service."—Bookseller.

"This literary chronicle of half a century must at once, or in course of a short time, take a place as a permanent work of reference."—Publishers' Circular.

"We have put before us a valuable collection of materials for the future history of the Victorian era of English literature."—Standard.

"A worthy monument of the development of literature during the last fifty years. The volumes contain not a little specially interesting to Scotsmen."—Scotsman.

"Rich in literary and social interest, and afford a comprehensive survey of the intellectual progress of the nation."—Leeds Mercury.

"The thought of compiling these volumes was a happy one, and it has been ably carried out by Mr. John C. Francis, the son of the veteran publisher."—Literary World.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street, W.,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

PADEREWSKI.

PADEREWSKI.

AN ILLUSTRATED INTERVIEW. With many Photographs. 8s.
THE WOMAN AT HOME.

Sixpence monthly. Previously Illustrated.

THE WOMAN AT HOME.

Contents of MAY Number.—Ready this day

1. PADEREWSKI: an illustrated interview. By Baroness von Siedlitz.
2. The LOVES OF RUFLA. By Mrs. Stephen Benson. Fully Illustrated.
3. JONAS COAKER, an Idyll of Dartmoor. By Rev. & Mr. George Gould. Fully Illustrated.
4. TWO MOTHERS: CHILD HOMES IN RUSSIA. By Mrs. J. Lacey. With many Photographs, specially taken.
5. MISS FLEYDELL. By Katherine Lee. Illustrated.
6. The MYSTERY OF THE SAINTS: A SOFA. By Haddon Hill.
7. FORT LEYTON'S HEIR. By Annie S. Swan. Fully Illustrated.
8. A PAGE OF CONFESSIONS. By Signer Tosti.
9. BRIDES and BRIDEGROOMS. With Portraits.
10. ORIGINAL FASHION DESIGNER. By Mildred Harris.
11. SUNDAY REACTIONS. By the Dean of Armagh.
12. OVER THE TRACED. By Annie & Susan.—13. Dress and Fashion Illustrated.—14. Cookery.—15. House Furnishing.—16. Health and Personal Appearance.—17. Women's Employment.—18. Mothers and Children.—19. Smiles.

THE WOMAN AT HOME. Sixpence monthly.

London: Hodder & Stoughton, 27, Paternoster-row.

Now ready, price 1s. 6d.

TALES and SKETCHES of MODERN GREECE.

By MISS WYNN WILLIAMS.

London: D. Nisbet, 270, Strand, W.C.

Huddersfield: Huddersfield Publishing Company, 7, High-street.

This day, post 8vo. cloth, with Illustrations, 3s. 6d.

TWELVE YEARS' RESIDENCE ON THE WEST COAST OF SCOTLAND.

By Captain JAMES MACDON, late of the 79th and 60th Regiments.

Glasgow: Jackson, 1, Paternoster-row / Mr. Van Nostrand's successors.

GERALD MASSEY'S WORKS.

MY LYRICAL LIFE. Poems. In 3 vols. 2s. 6d. each.
THE SECRET ISLAND OF SHAKESPEARE'S SONNETS. 7s. 6d.
"A PLEA THAT WAITS REPLY." Ten Lectures. 6d. each.
Publishers: Watts & Co. 37, Dr. Johnson's-court, Fleet-street, London.

Post 8vo. 7s. 6d. cloth.

BIRDS and the BARDS. Selected from various Poets, and Arranged by F. NOLLE PATON. With 10 Illustrations by Mrs. Hugh Blackburn and Herbert Paton.

12mo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

SAYINGS (The) of the LORD JESUS CHRIST.

Selected and Arranged from the Four Evangelists by J. W. MACKAIL, Esq.

Reeves & Turner, 5, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.

LATEST PUBLICATIONS of the ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY of LONDON.

TRANSACTIONS, Vol. XIII., Part 8, price 12s., containing the following Papers:—On the anatomy of an extinct Gigantic Tortoise from Madagascar (Testudo grandisieri, Valenciennes); By U. A. BOUTLENGER. With 5 Plates. On the formation of some Gigantic Land Tortoises, and of an Extinct Lizard, recently discovered in Mauritania; By HANS GADSDON, F.R.S. With 3 Plates.

PROCEEDINGS of the ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY of LONDON, 1893, Part 4, containing the Papers read at the Scientific Meetings held in November and December last. With 15 Plates, price 15s.

To be obtained at the Society's Office, 3, Manchester-square, W.; or through any Bookseller.

New and Cheaper Edition, price Two Shillings.

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of

R.A. P.M.A.S. Eighth Edition. With 5 Plates. By W. T. LYNN.

"—Has, we are glad to see, reached an eighth edition, which embodies this excellent introduction to the study of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian.

Edward Stanford, 36 and 37, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

Second Edition, price Sixpence, cloth.

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy. By W. T. LYNN, R.A. P.M.A.S.

"Well adapted to accomplish their purpose."—Dr. R. A. Green, Editor of the Astronomical Journal.

Edward Stanford, 36 and 37, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

Owing to the enormous demand for Volume I. of The YELLOW BOOK, the large First Edition has been exhausted.

A SECOND EDITION is in preparation, and will be ready on MONDAY at all Booksellers', Libraries, and Railway Bookstalls.

ELKIN MATHEWS & JOHN LAKE, Vigo-street, London, W.

NEW VOLUME OF POEMS BY ANDREW LANG.

BAN AND ARRIÈRE BAN:

A Rally of Fugitive Rhymes.

Fcap. 8vo. 5s. net.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN & Co.

KERNER'S BOTANY.

PART I. will be published on the FIRST of MAY.

To be completed in Sixteen Monthly Parts, imperial 8vo. price 2s. 6d. each net.

THE NATURAL HISTORY OF PLANTS:

Their Forms, Growth, Reproduction, and Distribution.

From the German of ANTON KERNER VON MARILAU,

Professor of Botany in the University of Vienna.

By F. W. OLIVER, M.A. D.Sc.,

Quain Professor of Botany in University College, London.

With the assistance of MARIAN BUSK, B.Sc., and MARY EWART, B.Sc.

With about 1,000 Original Woodcut Illustrations and 16 Plates in Colours.

KERNER'S 'NATURAL HISTORY OF PLANTS,' now for the first time presented to English readers, is one of the greatest works in Botany ever issued from the press. Its province is the whole realm of Plant Life, and its purpose, as conceived by the author, Prof. ANTON KERNER VON MARILAU, of Vienna University, is to provide "a book not only for specialists and scholars, but also for the many."

* Detailed Prospectus post free on application.

London: BLACKIE & SON, Limited, Old Bailey.

MR MURRAY'S LIST.

Now ready, 8vo. 6s.

THE QUARTERLY REVIEW, No. 356.

1. The BRITISH NAVY.

2. The POLITICAL LIFE of W. H. SMITH.

3. SHAKESPEARE'S BIRDS and BEASTS.

4. OCEAN MEADOWS.

5. OLD TESTAMENT CRITICISM.

6. The PLEASANT LAND of DEVON.

Contents.

7. The LIBERALS and SOUTH AFRICA.

8. A CYCLE of CATHAY.

9. PARLIAMENTARY PROCEDURE versus OBSTRUCTION.

10. The AGRICULTURAL LABOURER.

11. HYBRIDS and the NEW PAPYRI.

12. DEMAGOGUES in BRITISH POLITICS.

With Portraits, crown 8vo. 9s.

JENNY LIND the ARTIST. New and Abridged Edition of the Memoir of Madame Jenny Lind-Goldschmidt. 1820-51. From MSS. and Documents Collected by Mr. Goldschmidt. By H. SCOTT HOLLAND, Canon of St. Paul's Cathedral, and W. S. NOCKSTHO, Author of 'The Life of Mendelssohn.'

"This life is certainly one of the most interesting that have been written, and about one of the most interesting people of the century."—St. James's Gazette.

A NEW, ENLARGED, AND REVISED EDITION.

8vo. 18s.

SIR WILLIAM SMITH'S CLASSICAL DICTIONARY of

MYTHOLOGY, BIOGRAPHY, and GEOGRAPHY. A New, Enlarged, and Revised Edition, with many New Plans and Illustrations. Edited by G. R. MARINDIN, M.A., formerly Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. With over 800 Illustrations.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The CHRISTIAN ETHIC. By WILLIAM KNIGHT, LL.D., Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of St. Andrews.

"In a very interesting little book by Professor Knight, of St. Andrews, we find an admirable description of the virtues and the line on which Christ's teaching lays most stress. Professor Knight sketches briefly and vigorously the character of the human ethics which made Christ's teaching the very flower and completion of all the earlier ethical teaching which had ever moulded human conduct."—Spectator.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The JACOBAN POETS. By EDMUND GOSSE. Forming a Volume

of "MURRAY'S UNIVERSITY EXTENSION MANUALS." Edited by Professor KNIGHT.

"None can read this brief but comprehensive treatise on a brilliant episode in English letters without increasing their own knowledge of the period and their appreciation of its exponent's critical acumen and research."—Daily Telegraph.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

SECOND EDITION, NOW READY.

NEW BOOK BY THE AUTHOR OF 'OBITER DICTA.'

In fcap. 8vo. tastefully printed, and bound in olive cloth, uniform with 'Obiter Dicta,' price 5s.

ESSAYS about MEN, WOMEN, and BOOKS.
By Augustine Birrell, Q.C. M.P.

SOME OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Mr. Birrell's light and easy style well befits his generally kindly judgments. A very entertaining and handy little book for leisurely reading."—Times."Mr. Birrell is always good company. He is always himself, and the self is so sane, so shrewd, so vivacious, that this fidelity to it suffices to make his books delightful."—Daily Chronicle."Very sprightly and facile are the judgments which he passes on the men and women included in this volume."—Daily Telegraph."These essays have a charming individuality of manner, not self-conscious and affected, but spontaneous. It is when discoursing of bookish matters that Mr. Birrell is at his best."—Globe."Bright, amusing, scholarly, wise, and genial."—Echo."He shares with the great lexicographer of Fleet Street the spring of boundless anecdote and allusion that bubbles up spontaneously."—Morning Leader."Mr. Birrell's pen has lost nothing of its grace, and we have here a dainty volume as full of charm and vivacity as the much beloved 'Obiter Dicta,' informed by the same delicate spirit of literary appreciation, and the same wisdom and genial satire."—Sun.

ELLIOT STOCK, 62, Paternoster-row, London, E.C.

LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE.

PURCHASERS SHOULD SEE THAT EVERY BOTTLE OF THE ORIGINAL

WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE

BEARS THE SIGNATURE

LEA & PERRINS.

SOLD WHOLESALE BY THE PROPRIETORS, WORCESTER;

CROSSE & BLACKWELL, Ltd, LONDON.

RETAIL EVERYWHERE.

PUBLICATIONS NOUVELLES

DE LA

LIBRAIRIE HACHETTE ET C^{ie}.London: 18, King William-street, Charing Cross.

Paris: 79, Boulevard Saint-Germain.

TAINE (H.), de l'ACADÉMIE FRANÇAISE:
DERNIERS ESSAIS de CRITIQUE et d'HISTOIRE. 1 vol. in-16, broché, 3 fr. 50.La RÉVOLUTION FRANÇAISE en
HOLLANDE. La RÉPUBLIQUE BATAVE.
1 vol. in-8, broché, 7 fr. 50.LACOMBE (P.), Inspecteur Général des Bibliothèques et des Archives: De l'HISTOIRE considérée comme SCIENCE. 1 vol. in-8, broché, 7 fr. 50.LAFAYE (Georges), Maître de Conférences à la Faculté des Lettres de Paris:
CATULLE et ses MODÈLES. Ouvrage couronné par l'Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres (Prix Bordin, 1892). 1 vol. in-8, broché, 5 fr.RECEUIL des ACTES du COMITÉ de
SALUT PUBLIC, avec la Correspondance officielle des Représentants en Mission, et le Registre du Conseil Exécutif Provisoire, publié par F. A. AULARD, Professeur d'Histoire de la Révolution Française à la Faculté des Lettres de Paris. Tome VI. (15 Août, 1793—21 Septembre, 1793). 1 vol. grand in-8, broché, 12 fr.

EN VENTE:

Tome I. (10 Août, 1793—31 Janvier, 1793). 1 vol. grand in-8, broché, 12 fr.

Tome II. (22 Janvier, 1793—31 Mars, 1793). 1 vol. grand in-8, broché, 12 fr.

Tome III. (1 Avril, 1793—5 Mai, 1793). 1 vol. grand in-8, broché, 12 fr.

Tome IV. (6 Mai, 1793—10 Juin, 1793). 1 vol. grand in-8, broché, 12 fr.

Tome V. (19 Juin, 1793—15 Août, 1793). 1 vol. grand in-8, broché, 12 fr.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE

RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.

NOTES and QUERIES for DECEMBER 10th and
24th, 1893, and JANUARY 7th and 21st, 1894, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of MR. GLADSTONE.

Price of the Four Numbers, 1s. 4d.; or free by post, 1s. 6d.

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Brown's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN DISRAELI,
EARL OF BEACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 13th, 27th, JUNE 10th 24th, and JULY 8th, 1894, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL OF BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEY'S to VIVIAN GREY, "CUNNINGHAM," "LOTHAIR," and "ENDIMION."

Price of the Six Numbers, 2s.; or free by post, 2s. 6d.

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Brown's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

ANOBIUM ERODITUM, the devouring book-worm, turns up its nose at STICKPRAST PARTS
All Stationers 6d and 1s. Large size 1s 5d. by parcel post, from Fentory, Sugar-Land-court, London-lane-street, E.C.

SAVE YOUR COMPLEXION

BY USING

"VINOLIA" SOAP.

Don't economize at the cost of your complexion by using the super-fatted imitations, which are, as a rule, adulterated shams.THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and shortening the voice. For these symptoms use EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.
In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of speaking, the glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing.

EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—EPPS'S
GLYCERINE JUJUBES are sold in tins, 1s. 1d. by Chemists, labelled "James Epps & Co., Limited, Homoeopathic Chemists, 170, Piccadilly, and 46, Threadneedle-street, London."

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN,
HEADACHE, and INDIGESTION.And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions,
Children, and Invalids.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

Mr. SWINBURNE'S New Volume, 'ASTROPHEL, and other Poems,' will be ready at all Booksellers' on APRIL 26. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s.

W. E. NORRIS.—SAINT ANN'S, the New Novel by W. E. NORRIS, Author of 'The Rogue,' is now ready, in 2 vols., at every Library.

"In 'Saint Ann's' Mr. Norris gives us one of his usual pleasant and airy love stories.....His entertainment is always agreeable, and those who pay their money at the door of 'Saint Ann's' will sit it out with pleasure to the close."—Glasgow Herald.

L. T. MEADE.—A SOLDIER OF FORTUNE, the New Novel by the Author of 'The Medicine Lady,' is now ready, in 3 vols., at every Library.

MARK TWAIN.—TOM SAWYER ABROAD, by MARK TWAIN, with Illustrations by Dan. Beard, is now ready at all Booksellers', crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

CHRISTINA CHARD. By Mrs. Campbell Praed, Author of 'Outlaw and Lawmaker,' &c. 3 vols.

"Mrs. Praed has written nothing better than 'Christina Chard,' and this admission may be accepted as a tribute of sincere and unconditional praise."—Daily Telegraph.

DOROTHY'S DOUBLE. By G. A. Henty, Author of 'Bujub the Juggler,' &c. 3 vols.

"The plot is developed with a skill that makes every page of the three volumes light and entertaining. The book is eminently readable."—Scotsman.

JACK DOYLE'S DAUGHTER. By R. E. Francillon, Author of 'Ropes of Sand,' &c. 3 vols.

"A clever and interesting novel."—Glasgow Herald. "The story is bright and amusing.....It is, in fact, a racy book."—Liverpool Mercury.

THE ONE TOO MANY. By E. Lynn Linton, Author of 'Patricia Kemball,' &c. 3 vols. (Second Edition.)

"The whole book teems with brilliant epigram and sagacious apophthegm.....In many respects, as a matter of fact, 'The One Too Many' is fully entitled to rank among the most powerful and remarkable novels of the day."—Daily Telegraph.

IN DIREST PERIL. By D. Christie Murray, Author of 'Joseph's Coat,' 3 vols.

"In 'Direst Peril' is an admirable story of adventure, plot, intrigue, and character.....Mr. Murray tells his story with delightful spirit, and his novel may be recommended to everybody who likes a novel to be readable from cover to cover."—Speaker.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY NOVELS.

The REBEL QUEEN. By Walter Besant. With a Frontispiece by A. Birkenruth.

"The 'Rebel Queen' is a remarkable work. It is fascinating as a fiction and it is instructive and suggestive as a study in sociology to an extent which is not to be taken in at a first reading."—World.

A PROTÉGÉE OF JACK HAMLIN'S, &c. By ERIC HARTE. With 26 Illustrations.

"Mr. Eric Harte has put his best into the volume, and the many admirers of his brilliant originality will find fresh reason for their enthusiasm in the inimitable verse and quaint humour of each of these tales."—Morning Post.

A FAIR COLONIST. By Ernest Glanville. With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood.

"A 'Fair Colonist' is really a very good story of the adventurous kind—well written, full of incident and variety."—Westminster Gazette.

A DOG and his SHADOW. By R. E. FRANCILLON.

"A masterly story."—Liverpool Mercury. "It is a powerful story."—Scotsman.

RED DIAMONDS. By Justin McCarthy, Author of 'Dear Lady Diadem.'

"A thrilling story.... It is difficult to put down Mr. McCarthy's romance until the last page is reached."—Daily News.

The KING'S ASSEGAI: a Matabili Story. By BERTHAM MITFORD, Author of 'The Gun-Runner.' With 6 Illustrations.

"His adventures teem with marvels, and the narrative from first to last is keenly exciting."—Saturday Review.

THE QUEEN AGAINST OWEN. By Allen UPWARD. With a Frontispiece.

"An unmistakable success..... Altogether, a notable book; and if its popularity be at all commensurate with its merits, it will have a great vogue."—Sun.

MY TWO WIVES, &c. By George R. Sims. Post 8vo. picture boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.

"Told in the best style of the well-known novelist, dramatist, and poet..... You will not drop the 'Two Wives' without feeling quite satisfied with having read a smart and entertaining work of fiction."—Sun.

NEW TWO-SHILLING BOOKS.

The DUCHESS OF POWYSLAND. By GRANT ALLEN.

THE IVORY GATE. By Walter Besant.

A FAMILY LIKENESS. By B. M. Croker.

BARBARA DERING. By Amélie Rives.

CORINTHIA MARAZION. By Cecil GRIFITH.

A STRANGE MANUSCRIPT FOUND in a

COFFER CYLINDER. By OLBERT GAUL.

ZAMBRA the DETECTIVE. By Headon HILL.

Those marked * may also be had in cloth, at 3s. 6d.

MY DEAD SELF. By William Jameson.

A ROMANCE of the NINETEENTH CENTURY. By W. R. MALLOCK.

A SONG of SIXPENCE. By H. Murray.

THE MASTER of ST. BENEDICT'S. By ALAN ST. AUSTIN.

POST-PRANDIAL PHILOSOPHY. By Grant Allen, Author of 'The Evolutionist at Large,' &c. Crown 8vo. Irish linen, 3s. 6d.

"A very charming book..... They are the brightest things of the kind we have seen for some time."—Speaker.

GASPARD DE COLIGNY. By Walter Besant. With a Portrait. Crown 8vo. Irish linen, 3s. 6d.

"The art of the novelist combined with the skill of the historian..... It is delightful."—Morning Leader.

SIR RICHARD WHITTINGTON, Lord Mayor of London. By Walter Besant and James Rice. With Frontispiece. Crown 8vo. Irish linen, 3s. 6d.

"It is delightfully written, and makes its hero quite as interesting in history as he is in his more familiar legendary character."—Scotsman.

THIERS' HISTORY of the CONSULATE and the EMPIRE of FRANCE under NAPOLEON. Translated by D. FORBES CAMPBELL and JOHN STEBBING. A New Edition, with 36 Steel-Plate Illustrations. Complete in 12 Monthly Volumes, demy 8vo. cloth extra, 12s. each. The FIRST EIGHT VOLUMES are now ready.

"In the publication of Thiers' 'History of the Consulate' Messrs. Chatto & Windus have embarked upon one of the most attractive and important literary undertakings of the year..... My Baronet has a cherished recollection of boyhood, when the work—then fresh from the hand of the author—reposed on a certain library shelf, in twenty solid volumes—a romance enchanting beyond all contemporary fiction."—Fraser.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

MESSRS. BELL'S NEW BOOKS.

Now ready, New and Enlarged Edition (1072 pp.), with numerous illustrations, demy 8vo. cloth, 6s. net.

JOHNSON'S GARDENER'S DICTIONARY. A New Edition, thoroughly Revised and considerably Enlarged. By C. H. WRIGHT, F.R.M.S., and D. DEWAR, Curator of the Glasgow Botanic Garden.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

POUSHKIN'S PROSE TALES. The Captain's Daughter—Dobrovsky—The Queen of Spades—An Amateur Peasant Girl—The Shot—The Snowstorm—The Postmaster—The Coffin-maker—Kirdjall. Translated from the Russian by T. KEANE.

NEW VOLUME OF THE ALPINE POETS.
Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d. net.

THOMAS PARNELL. Edited, with Memoirs and Notes, by GEORGE A. AITKEN. With Portrait.

THE SERIES NOW INCLUDES:

Blake. Edited by W. M. ROSETTI.
Burns. Edited by G. A. AITKEN. 3 vols.
Butler. Edited by R. BRIMLEY JOHNSON. 2 vols.
Campbell. Edited by the Rev. A. W. HILL.
With Memoir by W. ALLINGHAM.
Chatterton. Edited by the Rev. W. W. SKERAT.
2 vols.
Chaucer. Edited by Dr. R. MORRIS. With Memoir by Sir H. NICOLAS. 6 vols.
Churchill. Edited by JAMES HANNAH. 2 vols.
Coleridge. Edited by T. ASHE. 2 vols.
Collins. Edited by W. MOR THOMAS.
Dryden. Edited by Rev. R. HOOPER. 5 vols.
Gray. Edited by J. BRADSHAW, LL.D.
Herbert. Edited by Rev. A. B. GOSART.
Herrick. Edited by GEORGE SAINTSBURY. 2 vols.
Keats. Edited by the late Lord HOUGHTON.
Milton. Edited by Dr. BRADSHAW. 3 vols.
Pope. Edited by G. R. DENNIS. With Memoir by JOHN DENNIS. 3 vols.
Prior. Edited by R. B. JOHNSON. 2 vols.
Raleigh and Wotton and the Country Poets, from 1540 to 1600. Edited by Ven. Archdeacon HANNAH, D.C.L.
Rogers. Edited by EDWARD BELL.
Scott. Edited by JOHN DENNIS. 5 vols.
Shelley. Edited by H. BUXTON FORMAN. 5 vols.
Spenser. Edited by J. PAYNE COLLIER. 5 vols.
Vaughan. Sacred Poems and Pious Ejaculations. Edited by the Rev. H. LYKE.
Wordsworth. Edited by Prof. DOWDER. 7 vols.

Now ready, 2 vols. demy 8vo. 32s. New and Completely Revised Edition of SCRIVENER'S PLAIN INTRODUCTION TO THE CRITICISM OF THE NEW TESTAMENT. For the Use of Biblical Students. Edited by the Rev. EDWARD MILLER, M.A., formerly Fellow and Tutor of New College, Oxford. Illustrated with Portraits and numerous Lithographed Plates.

•• This, the Fourth Edition of this Standard Work, while including much new matter left by the late Dr. SCRIVENER himself, has been largely rewritten and carefully edited by the Rev. EDWARD MILLER. In his editorial work Mr. MILLER has had the assistance of distinguished scholars who are leaders in their several departments.

3 vols. imperial 8vo. buckram, 3l. 3s.

A BIOGRAPHICAL and CRITICAL DICTIONARY OF PAINTERS and ENGRAVERS. With a List of Cyphers, Monograms, and Marks. By MICHAEL BRYAN. Imperial 8vo. New Edition, thoroughly Revised and Enlarged by R. H. GRAVES, of the British Museum, and WALTER ARMSTRONG, B.A., Author of 'Peter de Wint,' 'Scottish Painters,' &c.

"The new edition of Bryan is an enormous improvement on the old one, and is a book which no collector and no public library can possibly do without."—Times.

Illustrated, crown 8vo. 6s.

A TREATISE ON WINES: their Origin, Nature, and Varieties. With Practical Directions for Viticulture and Vinification. By J. L. W. THUDICUM, M.D. F.R.C.P. (Lond.).

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
York street, Covent garden.

FREDERICK WARNE & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

The LANSDOWNE POCKET SHAKESPEARE.

Printed on the finest India paper, red line. 6 vols. 3s. by 6, cloth gilt, in cloth case, 1l. 1s. Also kept in best French morocco, in lock case; Turkey morocco, in elegant folding case; full calf, in elegant folding case.

The ABBEYS, CASTLES, and

ANCIENT HALLS OF ENGLAND and WALES: their Legendary Lore and Popular History. By JOHN TIMBS. A Superior and Revised Edition, illustrated by 12 superb Photographures, reproduced by Hainstaengl, of Munich. 3 vols. medium 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 15s.

DICTIONARY of QUOTATIONS, from Ancient and Modern, English and Foreign Sources. Containing 30,000 Quotations, and a most Complete Index. Selected and Compiled by the Rev. JAMES WOOD, Editor of 'Nuttall's Standard Dictionary.' Tenth Thousand. Demy 8vo. cloth gilt, 7s. 6d.

HISTORY of ENGLAND and the BRITISH EMPIRE: a Record of Events, Political, Constitutional, Naval, Military, and Literary, from B.C. 45 to A.D. 1890. By EDGAR SANDERSON, M.A. With Genealogical Tables, Index, and 16 Maps printed in colours. Large crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. cloth extra.

THE ONE I KNEW THE BEST OF

ALL. By FRANCES RODGSON BURNETT. Author of 'Little Lord Fauntleroy,' &c. With 36 Illustrations by Reginald Birch. Tenth Thousand. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6s.

The FLOWERING PLANTS,

GRASSES, Sedges, and Ferns of GREAT BRITAIN and their ALLIES, the CLUB MOSSES, PEPPER-WORTS, and HORSETAILS. By ANNE PRATT. With 113 accurately-coloured Plates. 4 vols. medium 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 3l.

WARNE'S ONE-VOLUME NOVELS.

In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6s. each.

JULIAN KARSLAKE'S SECRET. By Mrs. J. H. NEEDLELL.

PASSING THE LOVE OF WOMEN. By Mrs. J. H. NEEDLELL.

PHILIP METHUEN. By Mrs. J. H. NEEDLELL.

In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 3s. each.

A DIVIDED DUTY. By IDA LEMON.

STEPHEN ELLICOTT'S DAUGHTER. By Mrs. NEEDLELL.

DUNWELL PARVA. By REGINALD LUCAS.

HIS GREAT SELF. By MARIAN HARLAND.

ON the EDGE of the STORM. By Author of 'Mollie Mori.'

HIS LIFE'S MAGNET. By T. C. ENSLIE.

QUEENN. By BLANCHIE WILLIS HOWARD.

AULNAY TOWER. By BLANCHE WILLIS HOWARD.

A YOUNG GIRL'S WOOING. By E. P. ROE.

LADY MAUDE'S MANIA. By G. MARVILLE PENN.

THROUGH ONE ADMINISTRATION. By F. H. BURNETT.

THE TAVISTOCK LIBRARY.

New Volume.

In small fcap. fancy wrapper, 1s.; or cloth, 1s. 6d.

SIR JOSEPH'S HEIR. By Captain Claude DEAY, Author of 'Randall Davenant,' 'Ivanda,' &c.

WARNE'S LONDON LIBRARY.

In small crown 8vo. effective covers, 1s. each.

TWO ORIGINAL NOVELS.

A DEAD MAN'S STORY.

THE POSTMAN'S DAUGHTER.

By HENRY HERMAN,

Author of 'The Silver King,' 'The Bishop's Bible,' &c.

London: FREDERICK WARNE & CO.;
and New York.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

Mr. SWINBURNE'S New Volume, 'ASTROPHEL, and other Poems,' is now ready at all Booksellers'. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s.

A SECOND EDITION of 'SAINT ANN'S' by W. E. NORRIS, Author of 'The Rogue,' is now ready, in 2 vols., at all Libraries.

"A novel that will delight people who take pleasure in studying the peculiarities of wild, if winsome women.... A novel which you may read with zest."—Westminster.
"The book is not only amusingly written, but of unflagging interest throughout, and full of 'good things'."—Daily Telegraph.

'IN the FACE of the WORLD,' the New Novel by ALAN ST. AUBYN, will be ready, in 2 vols., at all Libraries on May 3.

A SOLDIER OF FORTUNE. By L. T.

MEADE, Author of 'The Medicine Lady,' 3 vols.
"Deserves a good place among the readable things of the season."—Glasgow Herald.

JACK DOYLE'S DAUGHTER. By R. E. FRANCHILLON, Author of 'Hopes of Sand,' &c. 3 vols.
"A clever and interesting novel."—Glasgow Herald.

DOROTHY'S DOUBLE. By G. A.

HENRY, Author of 'Rajub the Juggler,' 3 vols.
"A thoroughly readable and entertaining novel."—Daily Telegraph.

THE ONE TOO MANY. By E. LYNN

LINTON, Author of 'Patricia Kemball,' 3 vols.
"A delightful book."—Standard.

IN DIREST PERIL. By D. Christie

MURRAY, Author of 'Joseph's Coat,' 3 vols.
"An eminently entertaining and fascinating book."—Daily Telegraph.

CHRISTINA CHARD. By Mrs.

CAMPBELL FRANK, Author of 'Outlaw and Law-maker,' 3 vols.
"Christina is a fascinating study."—Athenæum.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY NOVELS.

ZOLA'S Novel, 'L'ARGENT,' has been Translated under the Title of 'MONEY,' by E. A. VIZETELLY, and is now ready at all Booksellers'.

TOM SAWYER ABROAD. By

MARK TWAIN.
"Julius Verne-like invention.... Ought to be an especial delight to boy-readers."—Daily News.

The REBEL QUEEN. By Walter

BESANT. With a Frontispiece by A. Birkenhead.
"The Rebel Queen" is a remarkable work. It is fascinating as a fiction, and it is instructive and suggestive as a study in sociology to an extent which is not to be taken in at a first reading."—World.

A PROTEGEE of JACK HAMLIN'S,

&c. By BRET HARTE.
"Unique, powerful, breathless stories."—Morning Leader.

A DOG and his SHADOW. By

R. E. FRANCHILLON.
"A powerful story."—Scotsman.

The KING'S ASSEGAI. By Bertram

MITCHELL.
"No lover of stories of this order should leave 'The King's Assegai' unread."—Speaker.

QUEEN AGAINST OWEN. By

ALLEN UPWARD.
"An unmistakable success."—Star.

POST-PRANDIAL PHILOSOPHY.

By GRANT ALLEN. Crown 8vo. Irish Hacen, 3s. 6d.
"A very charming volume."—Speaker.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

MR. T. FISHER UNWIN'S LIST.

J. J. JUSSERAND'S NEW WORK.

PIERS PLOWMAN, 1383-1399: a Contribution to the History of English Mysticism. By J. J.

JUSSERAND, Author of 'English Wayfaring Life,' &c. Photogravure Frontispiece, and 26 other Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 12s.—Also, a Fine Edition, on Japan Paper, demy 8vo. vellum binding, gilt lettered, 31s. net.

TIMES.—"M. Jusserand has once more made English literature his debtor by his admirable monograph on Piers Plowman.....It is a masterly contribution to the history of our literature, inspired by wide study and rare delicacy of critical appreciation."

THIRD EDITION OF S. R. CROCKETT'S

The RAIDERS. By the Author of 'The Stickit Minister.' Cloth, gilt top, 6s.

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"Of capital merit."

MORNING POST.—"A strikingly realistic romance."

ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.—"Indubitably a fine work."

THE ADVENTURE SERIES.—NEW VOLUME.

FAMOUS ADVENTURES and PRISON ESCAPES of the CIVIL WAR. Edited by GEORGE

W. CABLE and Others. Large crown 8vo. cloth extra, gilt top, 7s. 6d.

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"Everywhere the book pulsates with 'thrills' such as the adventurous seek, but love the more when they are wedded to truth in a union of power and of literary grace."

VOL. II. JUST READY.

The REVOLUTION and the EMPIRE. Being the Memoirs of Chancellor Pasquier. In 3 vols.

With Portraits. Vols. I. and II. now ready. Demy 8vo. cloth, 16s. per vol.

STANDARD.—"The book can be highly recommended, not only to the student, but to the more serious class of the great reading public; there is scarcely a page which is not worthy of perusal. Its author abstains from entering upon the gossip and frivolities that form so large a part of many French memoirs, and while he disclaims in his preface the title of historian, he writes in the spirit of one—calmly, impartially, and almost judiciously."

MARK RUTHERFORD'S NEW NOVEL.—THIRD EDITION.

CATHARINE FURZE. 2 vols. cloth, 12s.

ATHENÆUM.—"Mark Rutherford is a writer of extraordinary force."

TIMES.—"Both in treatment and in style 'Catharine Furze' recalls Miss Austen's novels.....A close comparison would not result unfavourably to Mark Rutherford."

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

The HOUSE of LORDS: a Retrospect and a Forecast. By THOMAS ALFRED SPALDING, LL.D.,

Barrister-at-Law. (Forming the New Volume of "The Reformer's Library.") Large crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"Mr. Spalding is a conspicuously well-informed and severely judicious writer."

NEW VOLUME OF "THE INDEPENDENT NOVEL" SERIES.

TIME and the PLAYER. By LEWIS HAINAULT. Demy 12mo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

A FAIRY-TALE FOR YOUNG AND OLD.

MISS MACKARELL SKYE. By HERBERT S. SQUANCE. Illustrated by A. D. McCormick. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

LIMITED EDITIONS.

ALLEGRETTO. 250 copies, numbered. Small fcap. 4to. illustrated, 5s. net.

BRAND. By HENRIK IBSEN. A New Verse Translation by F. E. GARRETT. Printed on Hand-made Paper, with Photogravure Frontispiece. A Limited Edition of 250 copies, each numbered and signed, 10s. 6d. net.

NEW IRISH LIBRARY.—NEW VOLUME.

A PARISH PROVIDENCE: a Country Tale. By E. M. LYNCH, Author of 'The Boy God,' &c.

Introduction by Sir CHARLES GAVAN DUFFY. Paper, 1s. 6d.; cloth, 2s.

TWO NEW "PSEUDONYMS."

The HON. STANBURY, and Others. By Two.

SPEAKER.—"Distinctly clever.....Maintains the well-deserved reputation."

SHEFFIELD TELEGRAPH.—"Charmingly written, and intensely pathetic."

The SHEN'S PIGTAIL. By Mr. M——.

Paper, 1s. 6d. each; cloth, 2s. each.

THE MERMAID SERIES.—NEW VOLUME.

The COMPLETE PLAYS of RICHARD STEELE. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by

G. A. AITKIN. Photogravure Portraits of Richard Steele and Colley Cibber. Post 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

THE BEST PRESENT FOR A BOY OR GIRL IS

THE NEW VOLUME, JUST COMPLETED, OF

ST. NICHOLAS MAGAZINE.

* The Volume contains 506 pp. of the best reading matter, and hundreds of beautiful illustrations. Elegantly bound in red cloth, gilt, price 3s.

The Contents include:—

FOUR COMPLETE STORIES BY RUDYARD KIPLING.

TOM SAWYER ABROAD. (Complete.) By MARK TWAIN. And Complete Stories by MARY M. DODGE, FRANK STOCKTON, PALMER COX, BRANDER MATTHEWS, GEORGE W. CABLE, and many others.

THE CENTURY FOR MAY

COMMENCES A NEW VOLUME,

AND CONTAINS THE FIRST INSTALMENT OF

'ACROSS ASIA ON A BICYCLE,'

By T. G. ALLEN and W. L. SACHTLEBEN,

Profusely Illustrated from Photographs taken en route.

Price 1s. 4s.

THE AUTONYM LIBRARY,

A Companion
to the PSEUDONYM.

VOL. I. JUST READY.

THE UPPER BERTH.

BY

F. MARION CRAWFORD.

Paper, 1s. 6d.; cloth, 2s.

London: T. FISHER UNWIN, Paternoster-square, E.C.

THE YELLOW BOOK.

An Illustrated Quarterly.

Vol. I. APRIL, 1894.

THIRD EDITION NOW READY.

Fort 4to. 272 pp. 15 Full-Page Illustrations, 5s. net.

"If the New Art is represented by the cover of this wonderful volume," says the Times, "it is scarcely calculated to attract by its intrinsic beauty or merit." And yet a leader-writer in the Daily News finds the cover "artistically jaundiced"; while LOGROLLER in the Star describes it as bright and smart.—The National Observer asserts that 'The YELLOW BOOK' is "not beautiful as a piece of book-making," and objects to the type as too small and to the paper as too smooth, though the same journal in a previous issue thought the type "of a highly artistic character," and the paper "such as a princess might be proud to use for private correspondence"; and the Daily Chronicle says 'The YELLOW BOOK' "is beautifully printed in old-faced type,....and altogether poses a new and much higher standard for the form of periodical literature."—The Pall Mall Gazette remarks that Mr. Henry James's opening story, 'The Death of the Lion,' "is very difficult to read," and the Birmingham Gazette fancies it is "chiefly valuable for the sake of the name of its author"; whereas the Westminster Gazette says that "it is very near Mr. James's best—there is satire, humour, and epigram enough in its fifty pages for half a dozen ordinary stories." The National Observer calls it "a wholesome, stinging criticism on the pseudo-literates of modern society," the St. James's Budget declares that it alone "renders 'The YELLOW BOOK' worth buying," and the Daily News made it the subject of a leading article, observing that "it raises problems," and describing it as "a diverting apologue."—The Times says that Mr. Le Gallienne's 'Tree Worship' is "singularly repulsive," whilst the Birmingham Daily Post avers that it is "almost startlingly strong, and in some passages there is a fierce passion that thrills."—LOGROLLER in the Star characterizes Miss Ella D'Arcy's 'Irremediable' as a "tragic hint of much power," and the same writer admires Mr. William Watson's sonnets as "full of his own incommunicable dignity and solemn glamour." The Times calls them "stately and sonorous"; the Pall Mall Gazette alludes to the "fine classic flavour of their diction."—The Referee, describing Mr. John Davidson's 'London' as a "perfect little poem," adds, "Many a poet has climbed Parnassus to less purpose than Mr. Davidson has climbed Primrose Hill."—And though the Birmingham Gazette dismisses Mr. George Saintsbury's 'Sentimental Cellar' as pompous and empty, the National Observer thinks it "a clever fantasia on wine and women."—The St. James's Gazette falls foul of Mr. Arthur Symonds for the "peculiar kind of gutter immorality" he "celebrates in song"; but the Times describes Mr. Symonds as "graceful and melodious."—The Globe avers that Mr. Henry Harland's 'Mercedes' is "weak"; LOGROLLER says "it is one of the most touching and delicately wrought idylls of child-life I have ever read."—The Pall Mall Gazette condemns Mr. Gosse's poems as "prattling mediocrity"; the Glasgow Herald praises them as "among the best in the book."—According to the Daily Chronicle, George Egerton's 'Lost Masterpiece' is "a nothingness of words"; according to the Birmingham Gazette it is a "most clever, graceful, and cultivated piece of writing"; and the Queen pronounces it "a clever impressionist record of moods."—The Globe finds Mr. Crackanthorpe's 'Modern Melodrama' "very Crackanthorpean,....and full of actuality."—The Westminster Gazette admires Dr. Garret's translations of Tansillo, and the "learned and discerning comment" by which they are accompanied.—The St. James's Budget describes the 'Vool's Hour,' by John Oliver Hobbes and George Moore, as "a work of the keenest wit"; and here there has been no difference amongst the critics.—The St. James's Budget objects to "the ill-drawn and morbidly conceived drawings of Mr. Aubrey Beardsley" as "particularly offensive"; Public Opinion hails them as "an unqualified success."

The National Observer speaks of the style of Sir Frederic Leighton's studies as "formal, academic, and frigid"; the Chronicle says they are "noble and doubly welcome."—The National Observer, again, admires Mr. Pennell's and Mr. Furse's contributions, while the Chronicle praises Mr. Rothenstein's Portrait of a Lady.

* * So much for the critics. The public appears to have been more single-minded. The First Edition of 5,000 copies was exhausted in five days; a Second Large Edition is already out of print; and a Third is now ready.

Each succeeding volume will be bound in yellow cloth, but the designs upon the cover and title-page will be new with each volume.

ELKIN MATHEWS & JOHN LANE,
The Bodley Head, Vigo-street, W.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

NEW BOOK BY ANDREW LANG.
BAN and ARRIÈRE BAN: a
Bally of Fugitive Rhymes. By ANDREW LANG.
Crown 8vo. 5s. net.

The SENSES and the INTEL-LECT. By ALEXANDER BAIN, Emeritus Professor of Logic in the University of Aberdeen. Fourth Edition, with Emendations. 8vo. 18s.

PARLIAMENTARY GOVERN-
MENT in the BRITISH COLONIES. By ALPHRUS
TODD, LL.D. C.M.G. Second Edition. Edited by his Son. 8vo. 30s. net.

The HISTORY of TRADE
UNIONISM. By SIDNEY and BEATRICE WEBB.
With Coloured Map and a Full Bibliography of the Subject. 8vo. 18s. (On May 1.)

* * This work, the result of three years' special investigation, will describe the growth and development of the Trade Union Movement in the United Kingdom from 1700 down to the present day. Founded almost entirely upon materials hitherto unpublished, it is not a mere chronicle of Trade Union organization or record of strikes, but gives, in effect, the political history of the English working-class during the last one hundred and fifty years.

CHRISTIANITY and the
ROMAN GOVERNMENT: a Study in Imperial Administration. By E. G. HARDY, M.A., formerly
Fellow of Jesus College, Oxford. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The PRIMITIVE CHURCH and
the SEB of PETER. By the Rev. LUKK BRIVINGTON,
M.A., Magdalen College, Oxford. With an Introduction
by the CARDINAL ARCHBISHOP of WESTMINSTER.
8vo. 16s.

LAW and THEORY in CHE-MISTRY: a Companion Book for Students. By DOUGLAS CARNegie, sometime Scholar and Demonstrator in Chemistry of Gonville and Caius, Cambridge. Crown 8vo. 6s.

Now ready, price 1s. 6d.

LONGMAN'S MAGAZINE.

MAY.

The MATCHMAKER. By L. B. Walford. Chaps. 25-30.
HUGH PHARSON. By A. K. H. B.
APOLOGIA PRO SCRIPTIS SUIS. By Austin Dobson.
A POT o' DEER. By Mrs. Stephen Benson, Author of 'Dark.'
The BEGINNINGS of SPEECH. By Grant Allen.
The SILVER OTTER. By Horace Hutchinsan.
The UNBIDDEN GUEST. By E. W. Hornung. Chaps. 1-4.
AT the SIGN of the SHIP. By Andrew Lang.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN & Co.
New York: 15, East 16th-street.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

Now ready, price One Shilling.

THE TEMPLE BAR MAGAZINE.

Contents for MAY.

1. A BEGINNER. By Rhoda Broughton. Chaps. 12, 14.
2. The POET'S HOME.
3. VOLTAIRE'S FAVOURITE MORALIST.
4. A LEGEND of GRANADA.
5. QUOTATION.
6. The LAST of the THRUSTONS.
7. FEBRUARY at ADARE.
8. HORACE WALPOLE.
9. RALPH INGLEFIELD'S REVENGE.
10. AND ONE UNKNOWN.
11. NIGHT SONG.
12. BY RIGHT of WOMANHOOD.
13. An INTERLOPER. By F. M. Peard. Chaps. 13-14.
14. OF MARGURITES (VILLANELLE).

NEW NOVELS at THE LIBRARIES.

NOW READY.

The New Novel by the Author of
'The Masters of the World.'

THOROUGH.

By MARY A. M. MARKS.

In 3 vols.

This work treats of the Irish Rebellion of 1841 and the events which led to the transplantation of Connaught.

NOW READY.

The DAUGHTER of the NEZ
PERCES. By ARTHUR PATERSON, Author of 'A Partner from the West,' &c. 3 vols.
Crown 8vo.

"One of the best stories of Indian life we have ever read.
The frequent battles and skirmishes are vividly described, love interest is not wanting, and the denouement is powerful and pathetic."—Daily Chronicle.
"The interest of the story increases as one proceeds, and in several of the more exciting chapters it is maintained at a high state of tension."—Literary World.
"Some shadow of Fenimore Cooper's mantle has surely fallen on the author of this novel."—Manchester Guardian.
"An admirably told, stirring story."—World.
"Brightly and pleasantly written, we can recommend the book to those who love the novel of adventure."

"To turn from the unpleasant problems which occupy the attention of so many novel-writers at the present day, to a story about Red Indians, and such adventures as those of Winnetka and 'Big Flat,' is a most refreshing exercise."
—Athenæum.

READY THIS DAY,
IF MEN WERE WISE. By E. L.
SHAW. In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

NOW READY,
EVE'S APPLE. By M. Deane.

2 vols. crown 8vo.
"The book is most admirably written. The style has the ease and grace which comes of care and thought. The author has placed a fascinating personality in the thick of an interesting period."—Daily Chronicle.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.
The GREATER GLORY. By
MAARTEN MAARTENS, Author of 'An Old
Maid's Love,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo.
"A strangely beautiful book."—Guardian.

A DEVOTED COUPLE. By J.
MASTERMAN, Author of 'The Scots of Best-
minster.' 3 vols. crown 8vo.
"A supremely entertaining novel."—Daily Telegraph.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

TOWN LIFE in the FIFTEENTH CENTURY. By Mrs. J. R. GREEN.

GREEN. 3 vols. 8vo. 32s.
SATURDAY REVIEW.—"The clearness of thought and expression conspicuous in her volumes almost hides from her readers the skill implied in the successful presentation of so complex a subject. Her book, besides presenting us with no scanty harvest of interesting facts, is full of suggestive criticism and independent thought."

NATIONAL OBSERVER.—"It is a book of exact knowledge, careful inference, and logical discussion, as well as graphic statement and brilliant summary. In fact, it is history written as it ought to be written, a branch at once of science and of literature."

ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.—"It is a task which requires far higher and more original qualities than the mere discovery of new and unimportant details; and Mrs. Green has brought to it careful and exhaustive research, broad sympathy, and grasp of the subject, which give to her portrait an air of life and reality."

TIMES.—"It is an important, instructive, and picturesque contribution, almost the first of its kind, to an undervalued neglected branch of English history."

A SHORT HISTORY of the ENGLISH PEOPLE. By J. R. GREEN, M.A. Illustrated Edition. Edited by Mrs. J. R. GREEN and Miss KATE MORGATE. Part 32.

Super-royal 8vo. 1s. net. (Volumes I., II., and III. now ready. Super-royal 8vo. 12s. net each vol.)

SOCIAL EVOLUTION. By Benjamin Kidd. Second Edition. 8vo. 10s. net.

The CAMBRIDGE SHAKESPEARE. Edited by William Aldis WRIGHT. ÉDITION DE LUXE. 40 vols. super-royal 8vo. 6s. per vol. net. (Now being issued at the rate of two Volumes per month. Each Volume contains a single Play. Orders received only for complete sets.)

Vol. XV. The LIFE and DEATH of KING JOHN.
Vol. XVI. The TRAGEDY of KING RICHARD II.

The FLOWER of FORGIVENESS. By Flora Annie Steel. 2 vols. Globe 8vo. 12s.

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"The two volumes of short stories which Mrs. Steel calls 'The Flower of Forgiveness' will confirm the reputation of this admirable writer. The best of them are a pure delight, most cunning, most delicate, most pathetic. They are mostly so good that we hardly know which to choose, but the 'Shut Baby' and 'Ferosa' are without flaw in their way."

A MODERN BUCCANEER. By Rolf Boldrewood. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

A VALIANT IGNORANCE. By Mary Angela Dickens. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

WORLD.—"The most skillfully constructed, most evenly written, most progressively and consistently interesting novel she has yet produced. There is strong drawing in the character of Mrs. Romayne."

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"As a study of character Mrs. Romayne is excellent, and the relations between her and her son are skilfully and convincingly presented."

KATHARINE LAUDERDALE. By F. Marion Crawford. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

PUNCH.—"Admirable in its simple pathos, its unforced humour, and, above all, in its truth to human nature. There is not a tedious page or paragraph in the three volumes."

MORNING POST.—"The story has depth of feeling as well as distinction of style, and, above all, it is very human."

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"A most admirable novel, excellent in style, flashing with humour, and full of the ripest and wisest reflections upon men and women."

MACMILLAN'S THREE-AND-SIXPENNY SERIES—NEW VOLUME.

A COUNTRY GENTLEMAN and his FAMILY. By Mrs. OLIPHANT. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

MACMILLAN'S ELEMENTARY CLASSICS.—NEW VOLUMES. Part 8vo. 1s. 6d. each Volume.

The TWENTY-FOURTH BOOK of the ILIAD. Edited, with Notes, Introduction, and Vocabulary, by WALTER LEAF, Litt.D., late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, and M. A. DAYFIELD, M.A., Head Master of Christ College, Brecon.

EDUCATIONAL NEWS.—"A very skilful and satisfactory Homeric class-book."

THUCYDIDES.—The FALL of PLATÆA, and the PLAGUE at ATHENS. From Thucydides II. and III. Edited, for the Use of Beginners, by W. T. SUTHERLY, M.A., and A. S. GRAYES, B.A., Assistant-Masters in Felsted School. With Map, Exercises, Notes, Appendices, and Vocabulary.

LITERARY WORLD.—"The Elementary Classics series has made such a well-defined position for itself that the editors are able to preserve a remarkably even and regular standard of execution. The two latest volumes have the usual well-selected passages of graded difficulty, the one giving those splendid stories 'The Fall of Plataea' and 'The Plague at Athens,' from Thucydides; the second, equally interesting, is 'Tales of the Civil War' from Cæsar."

XENOPHON.—TALES from the CYROPÆDIA. Adapted for the Use of Beginners. With Vocabulary, Notes, and Exercises. By CHARLES H. KEENE, M.A.

SCHOOL GUARDIAN.—"For a beginner's text-book these tales are exactly suited, and Mr. Keene's selection and arrangement leave nothing to be desired. The notes and exercises are excellent."

LITERARY WORLD.—"The notes, vocabulary, and exercises are as full and suitable as we have learned to expect in this series."

CÆSAR.—TALES from the CIVIL WAR. Adapted, with Vocabulary, Notes, and Exercises for the Use of Beginners. By C. H. KEENE, M.A.

LYCEUM.—"Altogether, the book can be made as pleasant for the pupil as it will be useful to the teacher; we sincerely commend it to the attention of teachers."

EDUCATIONAL NEWS.—"For junior classes it would be difficult to acquire a better equipped short Latin reader."

SELECTIONS from QUINTUS CURTIUS. Adapted for the Use of Beginners. With Vocabulary, Notes, and Exercises. Edited by F. COVERLEY SMITH.

EDUCATIONAL NEWS.—"Mr. Smith has shown himself to be a good scholar and a painstaking editor."

EXERCISES in UNSEEN TRANSLATION from LATIN. By W. WELCH, M.A., and C. G. DUFFIELD, M.A.

SCHOOL BOARD CHRONICLE.—"It is an excellent and carefully compiled work, admirably adapted for the purpose designed."

GUARDIAN.—"They are well selected, and the difficulties are smoothed over by 'helps'; they are also of reasonable length, neither too long nor too short for the boys who (we imagine) will attempt them."

MACMILLAN'S MAGAZINE.

No. 415. MAY. Price 1s.

Contents.

1. PERLYCROSS. By R. D. Blackmore. Chaps. 36-38.
2. THE PARLIAMENTS and MINISTRIES of the CENTURY. By C. B. Roylance-Kent.
3. A DISCOURSE on SEQUELS.
4. DITAS.
5. THE MELANCHOLY MAN.
6. BEGGING LETTERS and their WRITERS.
7. THE CLIFF-CLIMBERS.
8. THE LAST NIGHT of JOAN of ARC. By Andrew Lang.

MACMILLAN & CO. London.

MESSRS.

WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS' PUBLICATIONS.

On MAY 1st will be published,

PHILOSOPHY and DEVELOPMENT OF RELIGION.

Being the Gifford Lectures for 1894.

By OTTO PFLEIDERER, D.D.,
Professor of Theology at Berlin University.

In 2 vols. post 8vo. 15s. net.

This day is published,

THE ARABIAN HORSE: His Country and People.

By Major-General W. TWEEDIE, C.S.I.,

For many years H.B.M.'s Consul-General, Baghdad, and Political Resident for the Government of India in Turkish Arabia.

In 1 vol. royal 8vo. with 7 Coloured Plates and other Illustrations, and a Map of the Country. 2s. 3s. net.

* The LIMITED EDITION, on Large hand-made Paper, will be ready for Subscribers in a few days.

This day is published,

LIFE OF SIR HOPE GRANT.

WITH SELECTIONS FROM HIS CORRESPONDENCE.

Edited by

HENRY KNOLLYS, Col. (H.P.) Royal Artillery, His former A.D.C., Editor of 'Incidents in the Sepoy War,' Author of 'Sketches of Life in Japan,' 'English Life in China,' 'From Sedan to Saarbrück.'

With Portrait of Sir Hope Grant and other Illustrations. Maps and Plans. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 21s.

NEW BOOK BY THE AUTHOR OF 'SHIPS THAT PASS IN THE NIGHT.'

This day is published,

IN VARYING MOODS.

SHORT STORIES.

By BEATRICE HARRADEN.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

This day is published,

LALLAN SANGS AND GERMAN LYRICS.

By RALPH MACLEOD FULLARTON, Author of 'Merlin: a Dramatic Poem,' 'Tanhauser,' &c. Crown 8vo. 3s.

This day is published,

SOUTH SEA YARNS.

By BASIL THOMSON.

With 10 Full-Page Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 6s.

SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

On MAY 3rd will be published,

THE RICH MISS RIDDELL.

By DOROTHEA GERARD, Author of 'Lady Baby,' 'Recha,' &c.; Joint Author of 'Rosa,' 'The Waters of Hercules,' &c. Crown 8vo.

THE STORY OF MARGREDEL.

BEING A FIFTEENTH HISTORY OF A PIPESHIRE FAMILY.

By D. STORRAR MELDRUM.

TIMAR'S TWO WORLDS.

By MAURUS JOKAI.

Authorized Translation by Mrs. HEGAN KENWARD. New and Cheaper Edition.

THE CITY OF SUNSHINE.

By ALEXANDER ALLARDYCE, Author of 'Barbecue,' 'Balmoral,' &c.; a Romance of the Queen's Country; &c. New and Revised Edition.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

BY GENERAL VISCOUNT WOLSELEY, K.P.
NOW READY.

THE LIFE OF
JOHN CHURCHILL,
DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH,
To the ACCESSION OF QUEEN ANNE.

BY
GENERAL VISCOUNT WOLSELEY.
2 vols. demy 8vo. with Portraits and Plans, 28s.

"A genuine piece of independent historic research. Often, no doubt, Lord Wolseley's account coincides with that of other historians. It would be inevitable that it should do so; but there are nearly always nuances of difference which are of importance."—Standard.

"The author has displayed conspicuous ability in preparing and arranging this biography. It is rich in historical research, and enlivened throughout by a vein of enthusiasm, which justly holds up to our admiration Marlborough's prowess as a soldier, his finesse as a diplomatist, and his unrivalled capacity as a leader of men."

Morning Post.

"It would be to give a very faint idea of the charm of these volumes to omit to point out how individual they are—how full of the personality of the chronicler. In this case we are not dealing with the ordinary author or the professional authority on history. Affectation could go no further than to pretend that in reading Lord Wolseley's descriptions of military operations two-thirds of our interest does not arise from the fact that it is one of the most famous of recent English soldiers who speaks."—St. James's Gazette.

"By a happy combination of the arts of the historian, biographer, and the military critic, Lord Wolseley has produced a book which will charm and profoundly inform all classes of readers."

Irish Times.

"Lord Wolseley has laboured with energy and enthusiasm, and his book will rank among the biographies of permanent interest and value."—Globe.

A NEW NOVEL BY MISS BROUGHTON.

A BEGINNER.

By RHODA BROUGHTON,
Author of 'Nancy,' 'Cometh Up as a Flower,' &c.
In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"It is a great thing to be able to enjoy without the perpetual background of an ethical moral. In the midst of nervous hysteria like that of 'A Superfluous Woman,' and yellow asteria like that of 'Iota,' it is a pleasure to come across a book so simple, so direct, and so full of lively and picturesque details."—Daily Telegraph.

"An animated and entertaining story."

Scotsman.

"Displays all the author's powers of humorous characterisation; her amused sense of the comedy of life. It contains enchanting open-air word-pictures; delightful chatter of children; vivacious dialogue; it throbs with actuality and animal spirits; is, in short, a characteristic specimen of her work."—Daily News.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington Street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S
PUBLICATIONS.

NEW NOVELS.

The FOOL of DESTINY. By Colin
MIDDLETON, Author of 'Innocent Blatancy.' 3 vols.

The HUSBAND of ONE WIFE. By Mrs VINN, Author of 'Some Married Fellows,' &c. 3 vols.
"The theme is a good one, but one requiring delicate handling. Mrs. Vinn has treated it excellently, so much so that the interest increases instead of diminishing as the proceeds, and the third volume, in our opinion, is much the best of the set. 'The Husband of One Wife' is good work, and its personal may safely be recommended."—Glasgow Herald.
"The Husband of One Wife' is an excellent book, in which all healthy-minded novel-readers will find something to interest them."—Standard Advertiser.

ORCHARD DAMEREL. By Alan
ST. AUBYN, Author of 'A Fellow of Trinity,' &c. 3 vols.

"Taken altogether, the work is the strongest that has come from the author's pen, and does not gain in strength by any abandonment of the peculiar refinement which characterises this writer's books. It is a thoroughly enjoyable story."—Scotsman.

JANET DELILLE. By E. N. Leigh
FRY, Author of 'A Scots Tale,' &c. 3 vols.

"We like Janet Delille as a novel, and no reader will feel his time wasted in perusing it, which cannot be said of most novels."—Glasgow Herald.

IN CUPID'S COLLEGE. By Mabel
HART, Author of 'Two English Girls,' 'From Harvest to Haytime,' &c. 3 vols.

"The writing is always bright and pleasant, the dialogue is natural and characteristic, and some of the situations are exceedingly pathos."—Scotsman.
"In Cupid's College' is well above the average novel in tone, in feeling, and in writing."—Lancashire Post.

HETTY'S HERITAGE. By Noel
DENE, Author of 'The Aftermath,' &c. 3 vols.

"Has an interesting and well-sustained plot, while the number of personages is wisely limited to that necessary for its development."—Morning Post.

THE WHITE AIGRETTE. By Vin
VINCENT, Author of 'Cathedral Bells,' 'Wrong on Both Sides,' &c. 3 vols.

"The White Aigrette' should find favour with the old-time hanker of circulating libraries, however, and to such a use, if she will, we commend it."—Advertiser.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

Now ready, in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

TO RIGHT THE WRONG. By Edna
LYALL, Author of 'Donovan,' 'We Two,' &c.

Uniform, each in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

NOVELS BY EDNA LYALL.

DONOVAN: a Modern Englishman.
WE TWO. IN THE GOLDEN DAYS.
KNIGHT ERRANT. WON BY WAITING.
A HARDY HOUSEMAN.

A SELECTION FROM

HURST & BLACKETT'S
STANDARD LIBRARY.

EACH IN A SINGLE VOLUME, PRICE 8s.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'JOHN HALIFAX'

JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLE- MAN.	CHRISTIAN'S MISTAKE.
A WOMAN'S THOUGHTS ABOUT WOMEN.	A NOBLE LIFE.
A LIFE FOR A LIFE.	HANNAH.
NOTHING NEW.	THE UNKIND WORD.
MISTRESS and MAID.	A BRAVE LADY.
THE WOMAN'S KINGDOM.	STUDIES FROM LIFE.
	YOUNG MRS. JARDINE.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'SAM SLICK'

NATURE AND HUMAN NATURE.	THE OLD JUDGE; or, Life in a Colony.
WISE SAWS and MODERN INSTANCES.	TRAITS of AMERICAN HUMOUR.
	THE AMERICANS at HOME.

BY DR. GEORGE MAC DONALD,
DAVID HUGHES, ROBERT FALCONER, ALBO FORBES, SIR GILBERT.

BY MRS. OLIPHANT.
ADAM GRAEME. LIFE OF IRVING.
LAIRED OF NORLAW. A ROSE IN JUNE.
AGNES. THREE UNION.

IT WAS A LOVER AND HIS LASS.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED.

Now ready,

SANTA TERESA:

Being some Account of her Life and Times, together with some pages from the History of the last great Reform in the Religious Orders.

BY

GABRIELA CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM.

In 2 vols.

Illustrated with Two Autographs Frontispieces.

Demy 8vo. price 38s.

"She has not merely studied much original and previously inaccessible material for the life and times of Saint Teresa, but is also specially qualified for the work she has undertaken by her intimate acquaintance with the country and countrymen of the saint. She has patiently and not unconstructively examined the difficult psychological question of Teresa's mysticism, and her study of the rise of the Discalced Carmelite Order may be acknowledged to throw an interesting light on the general history of the period."—Times.

"Exceedingly well written, very picturesque, complete, accurate, sincere, enthusiastic, and, above all, extremely readable. We know no life of the saint which presents so rational yet so gaily effective a portrait of a woman who was truly great and noble as this new English history of her career."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"A truly noble work, written with such profound knowledge and understanding sympathy that the book has spirit and vitality which no merely graphic skill could impart to it."—World.

"This biography displays keen insight into emotions and character. Not only is it a product of great industry, but it brings back into intelligible and credible human form, rehabilitates for us with sympathetic and painstaking constructive power, a real human being. The work is of great and enduring interest."—Aberdeen Free Press.

"No one can take up the book without quickly perceiving that it is written with care as well as with enthusiasm."—Leeds Mercury.

"A notable biography of a remarkable character. It is impossible to withhold admiration for the zeal and devotion of Teresa di Cepeda as depicted in the glowing pages of Mrs. Cunningham Graham."—Dundee Advertiser.

"It must be admitted that the authoress of the present chronicle has completed her labours, from her own point of view, with scientific thoroughness and a consistently cultivated skill."

Daily Telegraph.

"This narrative concerning the mystical Santa Teresa, written in such graphic terms and furnished with a copious index, may be justly regarded as a comprehensive history of Spain as it existed three centuries back."—Glasgow Weekly Citizen.

"By the power of sympathy and of patient and self-sacrificing labour Mrs. Cunningham Graham may be said to have performed a miracle as remarkable as any attributed to Teresa the nun; she has painted a saint who is also a living and breathing woman."—Scotsman.

A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, London.

SATURDAY, APRIL 28, 1894.

CONTENTS.

SIR HOPE GRANT	PAGE
THE VERDICT OF THE MONUMENTS	531
SEATY'S EDITION OF CHAUCER	535
BIG GAME SHOOTING	536
NEW NOVELS (Kather Waino; The Hubloom; The Prisoner of Zenda; The Constable of St. Nicholas; Needs Must; The Mystery of Lady Court; A Dish of Maritimony; His Troublesome Sister; A Modern Xanthippe)	537-539
BIBLIOGRAPHICAL LITERATURE	539
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS	540
THE BREATH OF ARMS; THE BOOKSELLER'S TRADE; DENVER; CHAUCER'S "CLERKS TALE"; THE ENGLISH ARCHBISHOP OF WASHINGTON; THE BURIAL-PLACES OF RACHEL BRUSHMAN AND OF HER FATHER NICHOLAS	541
LITERARY Gossip	542
SCIENCE—MATHEMATICAL LITERATURE; ASTRONOMICAL NOTES; GEOGRAPHICAL NOTES; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS	543-544
FINE ARTS—THE SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS; NOTES FROM NUBIA; A "SABELLIC" ANGLIFY; SALUS; Gossip	545-547
MUSIC—THE WEEK; Gossip; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	548-549
DRAMA—THE WEEK; Gossip	550
MISCELLANEA	550

LITERATURE

Life of General Sir Hope Grant. With Selections from his Correspondence. Edited by Henry Knollys, Colonel (H.P.) Royal Artillery. 2 vols. (Blackwood & Sons.)

THE late Sir Hope Grant was not a commander of genius, but he was a capable soldier; and after having been one of Lord Clyde's most able lieutenants, he carried to a successful issue a most difficult campaign. He was also pre-eminently a good man, and the story of his career, his experiences, and his ideas, now put before us by his ex-aide-de-camp, is full of interest. As far as is possible, Col. Knollys lets Sir Hope tell his own tale by means of his journals and letters, only adding connecting or explanatory passages or foot-notes.

The youngest son of Mr. Francis Grant, of Kilgraston, and a brother of the late President of the Royal Academy, James Hope Grant was born in 1808, and in 1826 he was gazetted to the 9th Lancers. After nine years in this expensive regiment he became captain, and his commissions having cost him 5,000*l.*, and the other 5,000*l.* of his patrimony being nearly exhausted, he was thinking of retiring, when, fortunately for him and the country, Lord Saltoun, who had defended Hougoumont during the earlier part of the battle of Waterloo, was recommended by Sir David Baird to appoint Capt. Grant his brigade-major upon being ordered to China. Lord Saltoun was extremely fond of music, and Sir David had laid stress on the fact that Capt. Grant was not only an excellent officer, but also a skilled musician. In December, 1841, Hope Grant sailed with his general for Shanghai, one of his fellow passengers being Lieut.-Col. Colin Campbell, with whom he commenced a warm and lasting friendship. Capt. Grant's first experience of active service was at the capture of Chin-Kiang, and one of the incidents of that exploit greatly pained a brave, but humane officer:—

"During the attack on the city, an officer and a party of Madras soldiers entered a house which was apparently deserted, but on further search they discovered a fine Tartar soldier, badly wounded, hidden among some bed-clothes, and his wife, a pretty young creature, who had been manifestly tending him, huddled up close to him in an agony of terror. The officer's party removed her from her husband, thrust her outside the room, and then drove their bayonets into their unfortunate prisoner."

In 1842 the 9th Lancers sailed for India, and Capt. Grant obtained his majority on augmentation. He was also made a C.B., so that when in 1844 he arrived at Cawnpore, to find himself in temporary command of the regiment, he was entitled to consider himself a fortunate officer. His next experience of active warfare was at Sobraon, where his career nearly came to an untimely end through an incident almost unprecedented in the history of the British army. The colonel of the regiment was officiating as brigadier:—

"On the day of the battle... appeared very drunk. He had been taking naps to keep up his spirits. He was drunk before us all; everybody saw it when we were going into action, and a hiss was very audible throughout our ranks. He was utterly useless; he was even incapably nervous, and his behaviour annoyed us all very much. So on the evening of the battle I went to the second lieutenant-colonel who was senior to me, and said: 'You know that the colonel was drunk yesterday [sic] when we were going into action?' 'Yes, of course,' was the reply. 'Well, you know you must go and put him in arrest.' 'Indeed, I shall do nothing of the sort,' he answered angrily; 'I will leave you to do that business, and to knock your head against a stone wall if you choose.' 'Very well,' I said, 'if you won't do your duty, I will do mine.' So early next morning I went to the colonel in his tent, where he received me alone, and little suspecting my mission, addressed me very cordially, and I spoke thus to him: 'You know you were very drunk yesterday, sir, when you led us into action. I have come to tell you that if you do not at once undertake to leave the regiment, I shall now put you in arrest and report your conduct.' 'Will you, indeed,' said the colonel in great anger. 'Very well, I will be beforehand with you, and I now place you in arrest for bringing a false and insulting accusation against your commanding officer,' and I went to my tent in arrest. Of course the above was a strong measure for a junior officer to take against his senior, but I had no wish to remain in a regiment if it were to be so disgraced by its commanding officer, and I was quite ready to stand the consequences. There was a great to-do about the matter. Sir Hugh Gough ordered a court of inquiry to assemble, and witnesses were examined on both sides.... The proceedings seemed to be endless. I remained in arrest for six weeks, and a pretty state of mind I was in. I made sure I should be turned out of the army.... I only know that after six weeks I was released from arrest and ordered to return to my duty, and that Col. — was allowed to retain command of the regiment."

It appears that Sir Hugh Gough, anxious to help Grant, suggested that the latter should make some sort of an apology. Major Grant consented so far that he apologized, "not for bringing the charge of drunkenness, but for going to his commanding officer's tent and telling him he must leave the regiment."

In the Punjab campaign of 1848-9 Hope Grant, who had become a lieutenant-colonel, commanded his regiment at Chillianwallah and Goojerat, and at the former battle (where, by the way, he engaged in single combat with a Sikh horseman) he suffered a signal mortification. He was in personal command of two of his squadrons when, suddenly seized with a panic, his men turned about and fled, notwithstanding the efforts of their officers. Grant supposed that his professional prospects were ruined, but a manly letter of explanation was considered to clear him from all blame. At Goojerat he was ordered, on the occasion of the enemy's last attempt at a general advance, to charge with a squadron of his regiment and the Scinde Horse a large body of Sikh cavalry. Of the subsequent pursuit he says in his journal, "It was horrible work slaughtering these wretched fugitives," and he mentions two particularly cruel acts of British soldiers. He, however, urges in extenuation that "our men were enraged with the Sikhs, owing to the brutal manner in which they had slaughtered our wounded at Chillianwallah." In 1850 the colonel against whom Grant had brought charges at Sobraon died of quinsy in England, and almost simultaneously the next senior officer died of over-exertion in Kashmir. Grant in consequence became lieutenant-colonel (without purchase) of the 9th Lancers, a conspicuous piece of good fortune for him, as he had no funds for purchasing the step. In 1854 he became full colonel by brevet.

Col. Grant was stationed at Umballa when the mutiny broke out, and he was appointed brigadier of cavalry in the force hastily organized for the siege of Delhi. The brilliant part which he played in the struggle thus commenced is matter of history, and we cannot spare space for all the numerous passages concerning it which we should like to quote. One or two, however, are not to be passed over. At about 7.30 p.m. on the 9th of June, Sir H. Barnard sent for Brigadier Grant:—

"He hushed me into a whisper, and asked me if I thought any person could possibly overhear us. On my replying 'No,' he said, 'There is treason around us; our servants are treasonable—the 9th Irregular Cavalry are treasonable; and I mean to attack the town.' I was surprised at his manner, but I said I thought his determination a very wise one.... Soon after I quitted him, and at about 11 o'clock at night a paper was put into my hands with directions for the attack; but scarcely an hour had elapsed ere I received a counter-order.... This change of plan appeared to me unwise. However, had the attack failed, our situation would have become desperate indeed."

On the 6th of July Sir H. Barnard died:—

"Sir Hope, judging from his chief's wild and painfully depressed manner and words, when imparting the secret orders for an immediate assault, was of opinion that the naturally strong mind of the noble soldier was unhinged, and that the subsequent recall of the order was due to the restored balance of reason."

Of Sir Archdale Wilson, Sir H. Barnard's successor, Sir Hope says, "Wilson was an energetic officer, had a sound head, and knew his work."

Grant's subsequent services were highly appreciated by both Lord Canning and Lord Clyde. At the end of 1857 he was advanced from C.B. to K.C.B., and for the series of operations commencing with the siege of Delhi and concluding with the defeat of the Gwalior contingent at Cawnpore he was created a major-general, and about the same time received a good-service pension of 200*l.* a year. To the civilian it may appear that he was handsomely rewarded. As a matter of fact, however, the promotion involved a heavy pecuniary loss—no less a sum than 12,000*l.*, which he would have obtained from the regiment had he become major-general in the ordinary way a year or two later. For his subsequent achievements in the Doab and Oudh he received nothing, though Lord Clyde recommended him for the G.C.B. In a letter to Lord Canning written in January, 1859, referring to Sir Hope Grant, Lord Clive observes: "I cannot say too much in his praise. He has the rare merit of uniting the greatest boldness in action, a firm and correct judgment, and the most scrupulous regard for his orders and instructions." Again, in conversation Lord Clyde said, "Hope has a clear head for business, and a sound judgment; and as to handling troops in the field, he is quite perfection, and has no master." How well he conducted the campaign in China in 1860, notwithstanding difficulties of every sort, is well known—too well known, indeed, to require comment or to call for criticism. As a reward he received the Grand Cross of the Bath, but had to pay 8*l.* 4*s.* for fees! On arrival in England he found that he had crossed a letter from Sir Charles Wood containing his appointment to the command of the forces in Madras; and when he applied for the usual 2,000*l.* for outfit, it was refused on the pretext, worthy of a village attorney, that he was on leave in England, and was not entitled to the money unless sent out direct from home!

On Grant's final arrival in England, the Duke of Cambridge explained that it was not his fault that Sir Hope Grant had not been appointed Commander-in-Chief in India, but that Sir Charles Wood had decided upon Sir William Mansfield. Sir Hope in his journal remarks that "Sir William Mansfield's appointment was apparently a good one, for he was very talented. But in my opinion he would have made a better Governor-General than Commander-in-Chief." With this opinion those who knew the late Lord Sandhurst will agree, for although a most ableman, his sympathies and tastes were those of a statesman rather than a soldier. Appointed Quartermaster-General, Sir Hope Grant was frequently called into consultation about the Jervis court-martial. He considered that to try this man by court-martial was unwise, that an explanation should have been demanded of him, and that if this was not satisfactory he should have been called upon to resign his staff appointment.

Although his old companions in arms Sir William Mansfield and Sir Robert Napier—men certainly not his superiors in military achievements—had been raised to the peerage, Sir Hope Grant died not even decorated with the order of the Star of India! The editor attributes the withholding of these honours to Sir Hope's singularly modest character, and "the fact that while nature had endowed him with considerable military ability, quick perception, and sound judgment, she had inflicted on him an absolute dumbness as regards the power of giving them utterance." However this may be, Col. Knollys, who has done his work of editor with zeal, is by no means dumb; on the contrary, he will probably bring upon himself by his outspoken utterances a great amount of hostility. As he says himself, "Approval of good.....is inseparable from condemnation of evil," and on that principle he has acted; and some wonderfully candid statements are to be found in his interesting volumes.

The "Higher Criticism" and the Verdict of the Monuments. By the Rev. A. H. Sayce. (Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge.)

THAT the monuments, although they teem with contemporary allusions to Biblical personages and Biblical matters, should, on the whole, have received little direct attention from the Biblical critic is not to be wondered at, certainly not in England. Those who are under no professional obligation to forward the older studies outside the circle of routine are not likely gratuitously to meddle with a new science. Critical boldness, if raised to a still higher point, might become critical foolhardiness, and since Porson's day "sobriety" has been our word. It is true that widespread interest and proficiency in Assyrian studies, on the part of inquirers of all sects and schools, honourably distinguish the ambitious and enterprising pundits of the United States; but at home, steadied by an academical past of seven or eight hundred years and revenues to match, we are less impulsive; while, to take another point of view, those accustomed to the satisfying precision and completeness of the elementary handbook have surely a right to expect that a language of which the vowels are still unnumbered—to quote a recent able statement of the case against Assyrian by a Biblical critic not himself an Assyriologist—should perform some sort of quarantine before it is admitted to the leisured circle in which more definite studies are endowed and represented, even if they are not cultivated.

Under these circumstances, the appearance of a book dealing with the Higher Criticism and the Monuments by a scholar possessing the unusual qualifications not only of being able to read the monuments—telling the number of the vowels, and calling them all by their names—but of having himself largely contributed to the work of their discovery and decipherment, is an event that, if only on account of its novelty, deserves more than a passing notice.

Mill said that a man could not tell the difference between two things if he only knew one of them; but since Mill's day inquirers have, apparently, gone up "higher." It seems, however, that before one actually strikes the stars there is a cloud-land to be traversed, in which it is quite possible to mistake shadow for substance, assumption for fact.

"Discovery has been crowding on discovery, each more marvellous than the last, and bearing more or less directly on the Old Testament records. So rapidly has the work of the excavator and the decipherer been proceeding, that it has been difficult even for the oriental archaeologist to follow it, and estimate its consequences for the study of ancient history. Still less can it be expected that either the 'higher critic' by profession or the public at large has been able to follow it and realise the complete revolution it must make in our conceptions of the ancient oriental world. The assumptions and preconceptions with which the 'higher criticism' started, and upon which so many of its conclusions are built, have been swept away either wholly or in part, and in place of the scepticism it engendered there is now a danger lest the oriental archaeologist should adopt too excessive a credulity."

Out of the points upon which Prof. Sayce brings the evidence of the monuments to bear with his accustomed learning and ingenuity we can only select a few; but at the outset it must be remembered, as the author himself admits, that this testimony is by no means always at variance with the conclusions to which the critics have come on their own higher ground. For instance, in the Books of Chronicles we see "the first beginnings of that transformation of history into Haggadah, which is so conspicuous in later Jewish literature"; the story of Esther, again, is "an example of Jewish Haggadah which has been founded upon one of those semi-historical tales of which the Persian chronicles seem to have been full"; while against the historical character of the book of Daniel our author pronounces with as much clearness and decision as if he had been incapable of reading the Babylonian equivalent of Belshazzar's name.

On the other hand, of the assumptions either made explicitly by critics or involved in their assertions and conclusions, not a few, according to Prof. Sayce, will decompose when brought into the light from the monuments.

For instance, with regard to the early use of writing in Palestine, it is undoubtedly true that a rude and ignorant clan may dwell for a considerable time within the borders of a highly civilized people without acquiring more than the faintest tincture of learning and cultivation, and, if we had nothing but probability to guide us, it might well seem neither necessary nor even natural that, when Israel came out of Egypt, he should have taken with him many acquisitions more intangible than the gold and silver borrowed on very favourable terms at the last moment. In Egypt astronomy had been advanced by centuries of cultivation to a high degree of perfection; nevertheless—to quote the words of Mr. Renouf—"after a long time of bondage, the Israelites left Egypt without having even learnt the length of the year"; and what reason was there in fact, as distinguished from tradition, to assume that they must have been more familiar with the signs of the alphabet than they were with the signs of the zodiac? Under these circumstances it was not surprising if the critic found it "impossible to conceive of a Samuel, or still less of a Moses, sitting down to compile a history and a code of laws." But recent discoveries have widened the reach of probability by widening the basis of fact upon which it rests.

"The Old Testament and the discoveries of oriental archaeology alike tell us that the age of the Exodus was throughout the world of Western Asia an age of literature and books, of readers and writers, and that the cities of Palestine were stored with the contemporaneous records of past events inscribed on imperishable clay. They further tell us that the kinsfolk and neighbours of the Israelites were already acquainted with alphabetic writing. If we are to reject the narratives of the earlier books of the Bible it must be for other reasons than the absence of a contemporaneous literature. If we are to throw discredit on the history of the campaign of the Babylonian kings and the payment of tithes to Melchizedek, or to refuse belief to the archaeological statements of the Deuteronomist, we must have recourse to other arguments than those which rest upon the supposed ignorance of the art of writing in the early age of Palestine."

Of all the results of Assyrian discovery, none is probably more widely known and accepted than the fact that there are Babylonian elements in the book of Genesis. Through long residence with critics and apologists of all schools this result has become quite domesticated and respectable, and it is no longer to be recognized as a hostile intruder. In fact, the phrase "inspiration of selection"—which means presumably the influence under which the Biblical compiler borrowed one uninspired thing instead of another—so exactly suits its assured and honourable position that it might have been invented on purpose. Nevertheless, it seems probable to our author that even this old-established occupier of licensed premises may have to move into new relations. Before the discovery of the Tel el Amarna tablets it was natural for the critic, who had once been brought to see that the compiler of Genesis had employed Babylonian material, to assume that he could only have got hold of it when in permanent and fruitful intercourse with Babylonian civilization; and for anything the critic knew, or could have known, to the contrary, there was no such period of intercourse before the Babylonian captivity. Now, however,

"in the Canaan which was conquered by the Israelites we must expect to find not only Babylonian gods and forms of faith, but also Babylonian traditions, Babylonian beliefs and Babylonian legends. There is no longer, therefore, any need of looking to the Babylonian exile for an explanation of the Babylonian ideas which underlie the account of the Creation in the first chapter of Genesis."

But the Babylonian are by no means the only foreign elements to be found in the Bible. Not to speak of the story of Joseph, of which "the Egyptian colouring is too vivid and clear to admit of question," even the book of Job, according to Prof. Sayce, may possibly have had an Edomite origin:

"Its scene is laid in the land of Uz, which cannot have been far from the Edomite border, and the corruption and difficulty of the text would be explained if the book were written in a dialect which differed from Hebrew as we find from the inscriptions of Mesha the language of Moab differed from that of Israel. Copyists and commentators alike would be puzzled by dialectic peculiarities which resembled Hebrew only in form."

In the introduction to this volume Prof. Sayce complains that the critics have demanded of the Biblical writers a degree of accuracy which they would hardly expect to find even in a modern author; but, if this is so, it must be remembered that unique demands are the result of unique pretensions. To doubt the accuracy of Herodotus was enough to raise a storm in the Cam and a hubbub in Fleet Street; but even his champions among the journalists did not go so far as to call him inspired; and, after all, have not the strictures of the critics been pretty evenly balanced by the shuffles of the apologists? "Des hypothèses auxquelles un Boissonade ou même un Rollin ne songeraient jamais, on les trouve plausibles quand il s'agit de disculper un auteur sacré."

In conclusion, this book is characterized, like all the work of Prof. Sayce, by the charms of a style which does not, because it is popular, cease to be literary, but combines clearness and elegance in a form that is almost French. It will have done good service if it tends to raise the question whether disbelief in what one has not learnt to read may not be as much of a drawback in archaeology as belief in what one does not understand is said to be an advantage in theology—unless, of course, those who stand outside see most of the game.

The Complete Works of Geoffrey Chaucer.
Edited from Numerous MSS. by the Rev. Walter W. Skeat, Litt.D. Vol. I.
(Oxford, Clarendon Press.)

It is some five hundred years since the chief English poet of the Middle Ages drew near the close of his busy, chequered life—perhaps exactly five hundred years since, in the "Envoy" of what is somewhat inaptly called 'The Compliment of Venus,' he begs that his verses may be received with indulgence,

For old, that in my spirit dulleth me,
Hath of endyng al the soteltie
Wel ny bereft out of my remembrance.

The long day's task was done, and he was soon to sleep. And ever since his has been held one of the greatest names of English literature. Every subsequent generation with more or less real knowledge of his writings—often with less rather than more—has recognized his eminence, as it would be easy to show by quotations, did time and space permit. But not till now has any complete critical edition of his works been undertaken. Much excellent service towards a comprehension of them, or one or other of them, and towards a careful investigation of the poet's life and circumstances, has been rendered by Tyrwhitt, Nicolas, Dr. Richard Morris, Dr. Furnivall, the late Prof. Ten Brink, and other distinguished continental scholars. But, though many Chaucerian students have done wisely, it must be allowed Prof. Skeat excels them all. The publication of which the first volume now lies before us stands absolutely alone in respect of extent of learning and thoroughness. Prof. Skeat has produced more than one magnum opus which has greatly aided and promoted English scholarship. But, however high the praise that may be justly given to his previous enterprises, this present one is certainly his maximum opus. There can be little doubt that for many a long year it will be the standard edition of Chaucer's works. Some details may have to be corrected; haply, and happily, some additions may have to be made; certainly from an historical and from an æsthetic point of view his labours may be largely supplemented or complemented; but it is not at all likely that this masterly production will be superseded in a hurry, and when at some distant period superseded, it will unquestionably leave its mark on what comes after. In a word, this edition makes an epoch in Chaucerian study.

To describe more definitely the outline of Prof. Skeat's work, we may consider it under four heads or "distinctions": in the first place, he brings together with exhaustive care all the facts at present ascertained of Chaucer's life; secondly, he has most carefully scrutinized the list of Chaucer's works, and firmly and finally rejected many pieces that have hitherto found admission into the current collections, himself, on the other hand, adding—on grounds that are at least plausible and in some cases more than plausible—some poems that have not before appeared in any Chaucerian collection; thirdly, he has taken unlimited pains to furnish a satisfactory text, and, what is more, to provide his readers with the means of appraising the value of the lessons he adopts; and, lastly, he has done all that an indefatigable research could reasonably be expected to do, and often much more, in the way of explaining obscurities of language or allusion, and has succeeded in throwing light on many passages that utterly defied previous commentators.

In all these departments of Chaucerian study Prof. Skeat has laboured with wonderful vigour and shrewdness, incorporating (with acknowledgment) what is of worth in the results of his predecessors and contemporaries, but scarcely in any case not adding something valuable of his own discovery, in the notes perpetually doing so. Other sides of Chaucerian study he leaves to others. "Of his poetical excellence," he writes, "it is superfluous to speak. Lowell's essay on Chaucer in 'My Study Windows' gives a just estimate of his powers." The directions and limits of Prof. Skeat's investigations are well known, and known to no one better than himself, or rather are consciously adopted and observed by himself. And it would be mere churlishness, when he gives so abundantly in so various ways, to complain that he does not give yet more—give in other ways. Let us rather realize the high value of what is set before us, and be duly thankful. He has, in fact, done much to make an artistic criticism of Chaucer possible; he has cleared the way for it, by finally removing obstructions in the shape of poems assigned to him which he did not write, and of numerous sentences which no one could understand. Assuredly, many of the literary judgments on Chaucer to be found in current handbooks are sufficiently comic, based as they so commonly are on things written by somebody else, such as 'The Testament of Love,' 'The Flower and the Leaf,' 'The Cuckoo and the Nightingale'! The less said about much Chaucerian criticism, the better; to say nothing were best. But we trust that for the future "appreciators" of Chaucer will at least exclude from their estimate compositions that are certainly spurious!

Of course there are Chaucerian difficulties, both biographical and other, that even Prof. Skeat's diligence has not solved, e.g., difficulties relating to his married life, to his friendship with Gower, to his son Thomas—if he was his son, as seems now fairly certain from the quotation given from Gascoigne's 'Liber Veritatum,' first printed in our own columns some years ago. One matter at least which undoubtedly demands consideration—viz., how a vintner's son came to obtain such a position at Court as Chaucer obtained, a matter the investigation of which might help to a better understanding of mediæval society and its ways—Prof. Skeat passes over without any notice. And we are not sure that Prof. Skeat always uses all the means obviously within his reach for elucidating or illustrating the poet's various fortunes. Something more might, we think, be gained by a closer examination of the general history of the period, and especially of its closing years. Chaucer's connexion with the Court being so intimate, the question may well be asked, What was his attitude towards King Richard II. as he grew more and more wayward and headstrong,

Regardless of the sweeping whirlwind's sway,
That, hush'd in grim repose, expects his evening prey?

We know from the second edition of the 'Confessio Amantis' how utterly so loyal a subject as Gower was estranged and made indignant by the wildness and incompetence he beheld in high places; and we know—Prof. Skeat has himself called special attention to the fact—how Langland also (he, too, of a loyal spirit) keenly observed that the ill-conditioned and misguided monarch was travelling fast on the road to ruin. Was Chaucer, then, blind to all the growing mischief? Did he perceive no signs of the coming storm? Or, seeing clearly such signs, did he hold his peace, and utter no word of warning to his miserable patron? In fact, he spoke out with exceeding courage and plainness, and possibly enough the pecuniary distresses which beset him so grievously in the last decade of his life are not unrelated to the honesty with which he liberated his soul; for possibly enough he gravely offended and disgusted the wilful, frivolous ruler to whom he gave "a piece of his mind" with a frankness that is highly significant as exhibited by a nature so unceremonious and indulgent. At least, if he was not indignant, it is vastly to the credit of the said ruler, and somewhat at variance with the ordinary estimate of his character. In Chaucer's "balade" headed 'Lak of Stedfastnesse,' the biographical importance of which Prof. Skeat and others before him have, we venture to think, overlooked, the poet's burden is That al is lost for lak of stedfastnesse.

Word and deed, he says, are not like each other; the world is turned upside down by corruption; fraud is rife; virtue is powerless; things have gone from right to wrong, from truth to fickleness. This is plain speaking, and in "Lenvoy to King Richard" he strikes home, he cries aloud, and spares not:—

O prince, desyre to be honourable,
Cherish thy folk, and hate extorcioun!
Suffre nothing, that may be reprevable
To thyng estat, dou in thy region.
Shew forth thy swerd of castigacioun,
Dred God, do law, love trouthe and worthinesse,
And wed thy folk again to stedfastnesse.

No doubt "the general idea" of these verses is from Boethius; but assuredly Chaucer has made it his own, and imparted to it an unmistakable application. If the exact date of this little poem could anyhow be ascertained, light would surely be thrown on an obscure passage in the poet's life. Shirley assigns it to the last years of Richard II., and says it was sent to the King at Windsor. But it may very well have been written some years earlier—as early as 1393, as Prof. Skeat suggests, or even before 1393. With what hope, not only for himself, but for his country, Chaucer welcomed the advent of King Richard's successor appears with sufficient vividness in the envoy of the "compleint" to his empty purse:—

O conquerour of Brutes Albion!
Which that by lyne and free eleccioun
Ben very king, this song to you I sende;
And ye, that mowen al myn harm assende,
Have minde upon my supplicacioun.

The Badminton Library.—Big Game Shooting.
By Clive Phillippa-Wolley and other Writers. 2 vols. (Longmans & Co.)

THERE is undoubtedly great fascination for a large section of the English public in the subject of which these two volumes treat; for big game shooting involves visits to the more remote and unknown parts of the world, concerning which all are glad to learn, and few teachers are more agreeable or competent than those favoured persons whose circumstances permit them to rove far and wide in pursuit of pleasure.

Moreover, their training as sportsmen, entailing close observation of nature in many moods, often serves them well when the gun is laid aside for the pen. This is fortunate, for the sport is so varied that in order to deal with the subject satisfactorily many contributors, each an expert in his own line, are required, and they have in the present instance worked together successfully under the editorship of Mr. Phillippa-Wolley. For this Mr. Phillippa-Wolley deserves credit, because it is no easy matter to secure the necessary co-operation; and even when that is done the difficulties are by no means at an end. Experts differ widely on shooting as on other subjects, so that the tact necessary in supervising and keeping their work in harmony, and at the same time in subordination to the general scheme of the series, deserves recognition.

The editor opens the first volume with a chapter "On Big Game Shooting Generally," in which the sport is justified on grounds which will be deemed sufficient by the persons for whom the book is written, and reckless or wanton destruction is most properly condemned. That such has often been indulged in, especially in Africa, under the excuse of the necessity of feeding large bodies of men, and in America without that excuse, is beyond question; the results that might be anticipated have followed, and the butchery has been dignified by the appellation of sport. The general directions given are, as might be expected, good, though there may be a difference of opinion on some points. The less tobacco smoked when on the hill or in the forest the better, we think, for the sportsman; and the wisdom of shooting from a roost wherever it is possible is doubtful. Still, these are comparatively small matters, and men being different, no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down.

After this chapter African sport is described, first as it was fifty years ago, by Mr. Cotton Oswell, the companion of Livingstone; and next as it is now, by Mr. F. J. Jackson and Mr. F. C. Selous. Of Oswell, who died on May 1st, 1893, soon after he had finished his chapters for this book, there is a sympathetic notice by Sir Samuel Baker, who in turn paid his debt to nature on December 30th of the same year. Baker "regarded Oswell as the perfection of a Nimrod. Six feet in height, sinewy and muscular, but nevertheless light in weight, he was not only powerful but enduring.....all those who knew him, either by name or personal acquaintance, regarded him as without a rival; and certainly without an enemy: the greatest hunter ever known in modern times, the truest friend, and the most thorough example of an English gentleman."

The admiration was mutual, for Mr. Oswell refers to Baker as "the best shot, sportsman, and writer that ever made Africa his field." Oswell's reminiscences, though agreeably told and full of sufficiently surprising incidents, are of a time and circumstances in the nature of things little likely to recur. The days were those of muzzle-loaders, and the method followed was to gallop on horseback after countless herds of game, slaughtering vast numbers, and wounding more—a form of sport with which we have but scant sympathy. Now the sportsman has to travel much further into the interior, and has to stalk the animals in orthodox fashion or something approaching to it. Mr. F. J. Jackson describes the sport as it is to-day, and supplies excellent instructions as to the requirements of dress, camp gear, and stores; he mentions districts and routes in East Africa, gives advice as to the arrangements desirable for the caravan, and devotes several chapters to the more important animals likely to be found. We believe that the descriptions are correct, but may be permitted to regret that our illusion as to the lion being king of beasts is being gradually dispelled. It is hard for a Britisher to bear, and we shall have to find a substitute to set up opposite the unicorn, which, it seems, has no existence at all. In South Africa the character of lions given by Mr. Selous is scarcely better:

"Speaking generally these great cats have a most wholesome dread of the human biped, and avoid him as much as possible by daylight, but when once the sun has set and the darkness of night has come on, lions become bold and fearless, and often, when urged on by hunger, incredibly reckless and daring.....You may walk twenty times at night before meeting a lion at all; and you may meet twenty lions before encountering a really hungry animal; but when you do at last meet him, he will, most assuredly, be the last lion that you will have any knowledge of in this world."

The big game of North America is described by the editor, who assures us that in spite of wanton destruction there are still sufficient animals left to satisfy a reasonable sportsman, and that there is plenty of fresh ground if men will leave the old trails and the railroad, and endure the hardships and discomforts of the wilds. Mr. Wolley makes light of the ferocity of the puma and of the grizzly bear.

"As a rule, like all bears, the grizzly will rather run than fight, and very rarely attacks without provocation, but when surprised near a carcass, when cornered, when wounded, or with cubs, U. horribilis is apt to be dangerous."

The black bear he contemptuously describes as "a pig without a pig's pugnacity."

Of deer North America is said to possess eight well-defined species, of which the wapiti (C. canadensis) and the moose or elk (C. alces) are the best known. The former is, we think, perhaps the handsomest of a species remarkable for beauty, and no sportsman's trophy is more impressive than a fine wapiti head, whilst the moose, on the contrary, is, to our thinking, so ungainly that his appearance should prove his best protection. The Rocky Mountain sheep or bighorn (Ovis montana) is a magnificent creature which inhabits the high ground above the timber line, and, like the rest of the species, affords good sport. The resemblance of the head and horns of Mr. Arnold Pike's great ram, of which there is an illustration (vol. i. p. 386), to the horns of Ovis ammon (vol. ii. p. 293) appears much greater than to those of Ov. nivicola, which is said most nearly to resemble Ov. montana; this view is supported by Cuvier, who defines the argali, or wild sheep of Siberia, as Ov. ammon, Lin., and considers it probable that Ov. montana is a species of argali which may have crossed the sea on the ice.

In vol. ii. the big game of Europe and Asia are described in considerable detail by many contributors, including Mr. Pike, an expert in Arctic hunting; the editor, who treats of the Caucasus and gives hints on camps, transport, taxidermy, &c.; Mr. St. George Littledale, who has supplied chapters on the Caucasian aurochs, the Ovis argali of Mongolia, and the Ovis poli, or Marco Polo's sheep of the Pamir; and Lieut.-Col. Reginald Heber Percy, whose chapter on Indian shooting occupies a little less than half the volume. Mr. Baillie-Grohman's description of the sport afforded by the chamois and stag of the Alps is excellent, as is Sir Henry Pottinger's of the Scandinavian elk. Major Percy and Lord Kilmoray treat the subject of European big game generally, whilst that of Spain and Portugal has been assigned to Mr. Chapman and Mr. Buck.

The subject of Indian big game is unquestionably too large for one man to deal with after the manner of an expert, and we are disposed to regret that some subdivision of the subject was not attempted; nevertheless Col. Percy has executed his difficult task with credit. He furnishes useful notes regarding expenses, and some good general instruction for persons about to visit India. And, after all, it may be doubted whether there is any country in the world at all comparable with it for the variety and excellence of its sport. Capt. Forsyth, author of 'The Highlands of Central India,' thus compares African and Indian sport:—

"Africa may be thought to be better, but it is not so if India be looked on as a whole. Perhaps more animals in number or in size may be slaughtered in Central Africa; but that does not surely imply superior sport.....In India fewer animals will perhaps be bagged; all will have to be worked for, and some perhaps fought for. The sport will be far superior: and the sportsman will return from India with a collection of trophies which Africa cannot match."

We agree with him, though remembering that tastes differ; and when the fine climate and scenery of the Himalaya range from Kashmir to Darjiling, where refuge can be taken when the plains become unhealthy, are considered, we think our readers will likewise concur.

The most important matter of rifles and ammunition is dealt with by H. W. H., whose conclusions are supported by Mr. F. C. Selous, Col. James Baker, and Mr. Edward Rose. They are generally sound, though of course opinions vary respecting weapons. Personally we incline to small-bore expresses of great accuracy for all open shooting, but the very light bullets should never be used. They are doubtless excellent and perfectly effective between 100 and 200 yards, when the enormous initial velocity is somewhat abated; but they will not at short range, say within twenty yards, penetrate to any depth the body of even a deer or antelope, but merely inflict a large surface wound which completely ruins the skin. The danger then of meeting a charging animal is apparent; for a wound of that sort would merely add to his anger and utterly fail to stop him. For many of the smaller animals a .360 express is ample, and the sportsman will reap much benefit from its use in two ways: he will have a light weapon with but little recoil, and (what is of considerable importance) the report makes much less noise and the game is proportionately undisturbed. With a .450 rifle carrying a bullet heavier, and perhaps somewhat longer, than is usually made, every sort of game may be successfully faced, save perhaps the largest thick-skinned animals. For these, no doubt, a heavier weapon is desirable, but we are sure that the great majority of sportsmen simply could not use with impunity the prodigious powder charges recommended by Sir Samuel Baker and others. For snap-shooting the "Paradox" gun of 12 bore will probably be found the most efficient weapon for ordinary use.

Before concluding one or two blemishes in these generally excellent volumes may be pointed out. As they are part of an English series written mainly for Englishmen, we would gladly dispense with many of the Americanisms which disfigure some of the pages. A little American slang goes a long way; much of it is but buffoonery, and not particularly good of its kind. Then, again, it is somewhat provoking to have the same animal in one book called bison and buffalo; two wholly different creatures described as buffalo; the wapiti called an elk; and so on. Reasons for doing so, which the editor seems to think sufficient, are given, but we venture to differ. If it be needful in America to call bison buffalo, and a wapiti stag a bull elk, by all means let the sportsman do so; but when he publishes his adventures for the edification of the English public he should use the English names of the animals. Forsyth, too, already quoted, advocated the erroneous Madras custom of calling the gaur or wild bull "bison," partly because of custom, and partly because of the similarity of sound to the native name bhainas, by which the animal is known in Central India. Though the sound is very similar, we doubt if there is any connexion, the word "bison" being probably of German origin—"Boves, quos Germanice vicent vocamus."

The illustrations deserve a word of praise, none of them surpassing "Spanish Ibex" (Capra hispanica). The bibliography might with advantage have been somewhat extended; but altogether the two volumes are worthy of the series to which they form a delightful addition.

NEW NOVELS.

Esther Waters. By George Moore. (Walter Scott.)

IN a sense this is a disappointing book. It is most carefully written—more carefully than some of Mr. Moore's previous works; it shows a really exquisite art in the arrangement of the material, in the choice of incident, and in the illustrative conversations; and it has a fixed unity of purpose which makes of it a most perfect whole; and yet it seems to miss just that spark of inevitableness which should make it live. In a word, it is the achievement of an almost faultless craftsman who fails to appreciate his subject so absolutely as to touch the reader's highest feelings; the features are correct, the lines are perfect, it is only the soul that is missing. The impression derived from 'Esther Waters' is that Mr. Moore has set himself to study betting men and domestic servants in order to write a book about them; he does not care about such people at all, and has only a student's interest in them, but he has been at the utmost pains to be exact. He has succeeded, and, moreover, to exactitude he has been able to add the true artist's faculty of discrimination and correct insight into the salient points; nevertheless it is only the outside of his characters that he makes us see. After reading this book one knows exactly how betting men talk, one knows the vicissitudes of their lives, but one does not know William Latch himself or "Mr. Leopold"; to the very end they remain not so much living men as types of the betting man, who do everything in character, rather as one might imagine the actors did in an old morality. Of course, this comparison is exaggerated, but it serves to suggest the feeling aroused by these characters. Esther herself is the most real personage in the book, but even with her one can never forget that one is only reading about her, and there are nowhere any of those sudden glimpses of personality which make the great characters of fiction almost a part of one's life. Everybody, for example, who has read 'Richard Feverel' knows exactly what Lucy Desborough was like, and how she talked after that first meeting by the stream; but at the end of this book you know no more how Esther looked than before you have begun it. Probably this unreality is partly due to a certain want of humour in Mr. Moore's work: he is too serious about it all; a few more light touches would alleviate the rather oppressive sense of laboriousness visible throughout. It would not be worth while dwelling so much on this point if it were not for the very sincere admiration which Mr. Moore's book arouses in other respects. One thing that is especially remarkable is, as mentioned above, the fitness of his choice of incidents. Perhaps the most striking example of this is in the description of Esther's terrible walk about London in search of employment. In an isolated scene like this Mr. Moore is at his best; every point tells, and every epithet adds to the horror of the situation. It is, perhaps, rather unfair to quote the following passage out of its context; still even so it will do no injustice to the author:—

"She was then at Charing Cross. There was a lightness, an emptiness in her head which she could not overcome, and the crowd appeared to her like a blurred, noisy dream. And then the dizziness left her, and she realized the temptation she had escaped. Here, as in Piccadilly, she could pick out the servant girls; but here their service was yesterday's lodging-house—poor and dissipated girls, dressed in vague clothes with hazardous pins. Two young women strolled in front of her. They hung on each other's arms, talking lazily. They had just come out of an eating-house, and a happy digestion was in their eyes. The skirt on the outside was a soiled mauve, and the bodice that went with it was a soiled chocolate. A broken yellow plume hung out of a battered hat. The skirt on the inside was a dim green, and little was left of the cotton velvet jacket but the cotton. A girl of sixteen, walking sturdily, like a little man, crossed the road, her left hand thrust deep into the pocket of her red cashmere dress. She wore on her shoulders a strip of beaded mantle; her hair was plaited and tied with a red ribbon. Corpulent women passed, their lips liquid with invitation. The huge bar-loafer, the man of fifty, the hooked nose and the waxed moustache, stood at the door of a restaurant, passing the women in review. Two young men, with betting book and bar-room on their face, swaggered out of a tobacconist's. The doors of the public-houses were open, and the tapers could be seen sitting on high stools in varnished interiors."

Passages as good as this abound, and they are not mere purple patches, but all calculated to produce a required effect. In conclusion, it may be remarked, as it is stated that one lending library has refused to circulate this novel, that its tendency is eminently moral.

The Rubicon. By E. F. Benson. 2 vols. (Methuen & Co.)

MR. BENSON must beware of repeating himself: the smart, heartlessly impertinent heroine of 'Dodo' was amusing enough as a novelty, but a second book about the same sort of woman will not quite do. Of course Lady Hayes has some points to distinguish her from Dodo—she shows, perhaps, rather more heart than her prototype; but, unfortunately, it is just there that she fails most egregiously. The whole business of Eva's breaking off with Reggie strikes one as forced and melodramatic; her suicide seems improbable, and introduced only to clear the ground for "Reggie" and "Gerty"; and as for the great scene at the performance of 'Tannhäuser,' on which Mr. Benson stakes much of the interest, it is not credible that even a person of Reggie's mean intellect would have taken it in the way he did. However, there is a superficial cleverness about the conversations which makes the book quite worth skimming. It is true the characters, who are supposed to belong to the well-bred classes, exchange repartees with one another in a way that suggests the amenities of costers and fishwives; still, though unreal enough, they are occasionally rather funny. The most life-like character is Reggie Davenport; he is a fool, but he is a pleasant fool, whose folly we suffer gladly for its honest freshness, and he finds a fitting mate in Gertrude Carston.

The Prisoner of Zenda. By Anthony Hope. (Bristol, Arrowsmith.)

IT is not often that such a delightful novel falls into the reviewer's hands as this fantastically amusing tale by Anthony Hope of a three months' adventure. Once taken up, it is impossible to put it down before the end, for it is told with all that swish of uninterrupted motion which accounts for nearly all the success of the great storytellers like Scott and Dumas. The idea of the story, which hangs on the close resemblance between the king of a Central European state and an English tourist, and the complications that arise therefrom, is not novel; but the turn which is given to the story, its humorous presentation, and the exciting character of the incidents are sufficient to vindicate the author's originality. Not the least matter for gratitude in this book is the delightful simplicity of the characters: the hero is an honest, albeit slightly cynical Englishman of the old stamp, who performs prodigies of valour and behaves like a gentleman to the much-tried heroine; the villain is one of the blackest dye; the ladies think only of love and have no advanced views; and the stolidly faithful Col. Sapt contrasts excellently with the trickiest and impudent ruffian, Rupert Hentzau. In a word, it is a book that will bring joy to all true lovers of Dumas, a race that still thrives in spite of many adverse circumstances.

The Constable of St. Nicholas. By Edwin Lester Arnold. (Chatto & Windus.)

MR. ARNOLD in his new venture shows a considerable power of describing war and bloody deeds. The scene of his story is laid at Rhodes when the Knights of St. John successfully resisted the attacks of the Turkish hosts. The bombardment by the fleet, the desperate hand-to-hand encounters on the ramparts, and the final battle in which the Moslem is repulsed, are told with remarkable vigour and rapidity; and, if for nothing else, the book is worth reading for the exciting account of Margaret Walsingham's adventure with the ladder. But except for these isolated scenes, which, it is true, fill up more than half the space, the story is not particularly successful. The characters are mere dummies with the usual attributes of heroes in the mediæval novel: the hero has reckless daring, but atrocious morals and manners; the heroine is the proud and lily-white English maid, the heiress to countless broad acres of good English land, and dauntless to boot; there is the clinging and foolish Greek maiden, and the wily Greek usurer who takes the place of the usual Jew, and the honest English knight who marries the heiress, but is too dull to appear much. The old-fashioned language which Mr. Arnold affects, occasionally proves too much for him: "he irked to leave me," for instance, was never English, any more than the ugly word "grateless"; and sentences like this are decidedly bewildering:—

"No fairy palace that afreets of the mystic old world—upon whose shore he could see eastwards from Rhodes, a faint white line, the Egean waves tumbling—could have fashioned for her out of gold and ivory would have been shrino sweet enough, his heart said, for this priceless bud."

Needs Must. By Amelia S. C. Young (Pamela Sneyd). (Osgood, McIlvaine & Co.)

THE next time that Miss Young undertakes a novel she should determine clearly in her mind what she intends to be the chief centre of interest. In the present volume she first directs the reader's attention to a dealer in second-hand dresses, and then, without satisfying a legitimate curiosity about her career, goes off into an account of a lady who plays poker and picks up a husband on the Underground Railway, and who, after a short but bewildering contention for the reader's interest with other ladies in her set, eventually secures the first place. It is true that the excitement aroused by any of the characters is but languid, for they are all dull, and their conversations at tea-parties and social functions are too much detailed; while the incident of the marvellous green diamond, for which, it may be presumed, the story was written, turns out to be a very feeble affair, which might in competent hands have been made much more of.

The Mystery of Landy Court. By Fergus Hume. (Jarrold & Sons.)

'THE MYSTERY OF LANDY COURT' has other merits than shortness, though this one is not to be despised. The plot is brisk and stirring, and runs in free, uncongested channels. The dialogue is lively, although the story is mainly one of incident. The "intelligent reader" finds himself perhaps too much in the secret from the first, and therefore loses some of the real excitement the situation should offer. It turns on the disappearance of a valuable heirloom and the murder of its possessor, Sir Piers Lametry. Three people—a priest, an impecunious nephew, and a mysterious house-keeper—are in turn suspected by a clever detective, a quondam thief. In many particulars this man's career resembles that of the celebrated French thief-catcher. Mistakes are made, false clues followed; but Mr. Drage is not a genius who sees through brick walls and beyond them just because he is a detective in a novel. Had he solved the enigma more rapidly the tale had been shorter, which would hardly have answered. Being merely a quick-witted, keen-sighted mortal, complications ensue. The rather too obvious reserve and neglect which cover the true culprit will identify him but too surely in some eyes. The story is of the kind that comes as a boon and a blessing to those who go down to the sea in ships, or merely by train.

A Dish of Matrimony. By Madame Armand Caumont. (Stock.)

'A DISH OF MATRIMONY' is amusing in places if not as a whole. There are some clever bits of character drawing and dialogue, with other things that do not exactly "come off," or that fail to interest. The story opens in a country town, but the little world of men and women concerned in it soon gravitate to a place near London. "Our Common," presumably Clapham Common, becomes the stage of further events, and amusement and, in a way, instruction follow. The small group of middle-class city folk and their manners and customs are drawn with some spirit and show of accuracy. Of the rather melodramatic undercurrent we need say nothing, except that it would not have been missed. But such people as young Mr. Ferber and his little wife, Mr. Wingle the inquisitive gentleman, the opulent and truculent Smorlsons, and, in some respects, the Carlinghams and the Garibaldis are alive and of the stuff of real average human and suburban nature. As such they have a certain value. It is not perhaps a pleasing picture either of manners or morals. Things have advanced "Clapham way" as well as elsewhere, and the pretty, heartless Olave is, as a young matron, allowed almost as much latitude as her social "belters." Whatever the book may or may not be, the author has had the good sense to write of what she knows. This fact and a certain power of original observation help to make it as readable as it is.

His Troublesome Sister. By E. T. E. Poole. (Digby, Long & Co.)

'HIS TROUBLESOME SISTER' is a tame, bodiless kind of volume charged with religious and other platitudes—those obvious platitudes that, unfortunately for a reader, may be reeled off by the yard. The sister of a wooden brother strikes us as being more an uninteresting than an embarrassing type. Whether she fell a victim to villainy, starvation, or dull respectability seems somehow immaterial; and one shrewdly suspects that the author is equally indifferent and not a whit carried away by her own situations. Why, under such conditions, write at all? one asks; and echo answers, why? The construction and material of the book are slipshod and unspectacular; yet there it is! By the way, if Mrs. Poole wanted to make use of Coleridge's opinion on the combined influences of love and wrath, was there anything to prevent her from quoting him accurately?

A Modern Xanthippe; or, Borrowed Plumes. By Walter T. Arnold. (Sonnenschein & Co.)

THOUGH the scene of 'A Modern Xanthippe' is laid in the Paris of to-day, and the text is pretty freely interlarded with French (to which, by the way, the printer has been most unkind), Mr. Arnold's treatment of his theme is decidedly old-fashioned. M. Présalé, a middle-aged and thoroughly respectable man of business, has married a rapid and selfish wife, who, while really tyrannising over him on every occasion, loves to pose as a martyr. Her social aspirations expose her to the wiles of a sham count and a bogus baron, and finally the henpecked husband asserts himself. It is a dingy little comedy unrelieved either by any distinction of style or freshness of handling.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL LITERATURE.

Catalogue of the Copinger Collection of the Editions of the Latin Bibles, &c. By W. A. Copinger. (Sotheran & Co.)—Dr. Copinger deserves the gratitude both of bibliographers and Bible students for his indefatigable zeal in collecting and describing no fewer than 543 different editions of the Latin Bible. When a bibliophile succeeds in amassing by his own zeal such a private collection he may well be forgiven much of the exaggeration and many of the defects which he displays in describing his precious volumes. The Copinger Collection, as the author proudly calls it, consists of 543, whilst the total number of editions which issued from the European press between the fifteenth and nineteenth centuries is about 1,150. The most interesting editions are those of the fifteenth century. Between 1450 and 1500 about 125 different editions of the Latin Bible alone were published. Of these Dr. Copinger collected no fewer than 66, or a little more than half. In the comparative tables which Dr. Copinger prints on p. vii he points out that, whilst the British Museum has 76 Bibles of the fifteenth century, his collection has 66. This statement, although it is literally correct, is most misleading. Every collector knows that the value of a collection does not depend upon the number of volumes, but upon the character, the rarity, and the condition of the books. Now the 66 fifteenth century Bibles in Dr. Copinger's collection are by no means so many duplicates of the same number of the British Museum collection. Thus, for instance, of the first ten Bibles in the British Museum, (1) the Mazarin Bible, 1450-55; (2) the Bamberg or Pfister, 1460; (3) the first Mentelin, 1460; (4) the Fust and Schoeffer, 1462; (8) the R. Bible, 1469; (9) the Cologne Bible, 1470; and (10) the first Beale Bible, 1470, are not to be found in the Copinger Collection at all; whilst of (5) the first Eggstein, 1466, Dr. Copinger has the New Testament only; of (6) the second Eggstein he has vol. i.; and of (7) the third Eggstein he has vol. i. alone, and that is imperfect. The number and dates we have taken from Dr. Copinger's own work entitled 'Incunabula Biblica.' Now these ten Bibles alone in point of importance and value far exceed the whole of the Copinger Collection. Of the sixteenth century Bibles the Copinger Collection has 203; and the author tells us that the British Museum has only 195, the Bodleian 67, the Cambridge University Library 56, and the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, 122. Here, again, the numbers are misleading, since the most interesting and most valuable Latin Bibles of this century, which are to be found in the other collections, are not to be found in the Copinger Collection. The first Latin Bible printed in England (not complete), in 1535, the same year in which our first English Bible appeared, is conspicuous by its absence. The Bible of 1590 is one of the most interesting and important of the century. After the Council of Trent had declared St. Jerome's version to be the authorized Scriptures of the Western Church, it was found that there was no authentic edition of the Latin Bible sanctioned by the Church. Hence Pope Sixtus V. undertook to provide one corrected by his own hand. This edition was proclaimed by a Papal Bull to be received under pain of excommunication as the only true and genuine one. But soon after its publication it was found to be full of blunders, and the copies were speedily called in, and in 1592 a second and revised edition of the Sixtine Bible was published as the standard text of the Vulgate. Neither of these is in the Copinger Collection. Not only are both in the British Museum, but the two editions were sold in the Sunderland Library in 1881. The original edition of Munster's translation from the Hebrew, 1534, which Dr. Copinger distinguishes by special notice, is common, and may be obtained for comparatively a few shillings. The praise which he bestows upon the Antwerp Polyglot is now out of date. The Complutensian Polyglot, which is of immeasurably greater value both for its rarity and for critical purposes, is not represented in the Copinger Collection. The remark that his collection contains "a perfect copy of the celebrated Polyglot of Hutter, in six volumes folio," is misleading, since it implies that this Polyglot, which was never completed, is complete. Still the Copinger Collection is a remarkable one, and it is to be greatly regretted that it has been sold to the General Theological Seminary, New York. Such a unique collection should not have been allowed to leave the country, for it is very doubtful whether a similar one could now be made again at any cost.

Printers' Marks. By W. Roberts. (Bell & Sons.)—The history of the printer's device is of interest both to the student of bibliography and to the student of wood engraving, and it is surprising that before the publication of the present volume no book specially devoted to the subject had appeared in England. Beginning with the mark of Fust and Schoeffer, which is first found in 1457, we have a sketch of the rise and progress of these marks in the various countries of Europe during the fifteenth century, their gradual decadence during the sixteenth century, and their revival in the nineteenth. Looking at the book in its artistic aspect, it is to be regretted that so many late examples have been given, larger, more elaborate perhaps, but infinitely less interesting and graceful than those of an earlier period. Of English marks a large number are given, forming a good representative selection. The French printers' devices have been so exhaustively treated by their own writers that Mr. Roberts wisely avoids the temptation of spending too much space upon them. A recent writer on German printers' marks supplies much information, and also a number of illustrations. These are the most elaborate of all, and nothing can be finer in its way than the great device of Crato Mylius, a beautiful specimen of wood engraving. The Italian and Spanish printers have hardly received their fair share of attention, and the illustrations chosen give a poor idea of the very graceful work of some of the Italian devices and the curious engraved work of Spain. The main value of the book lies in the illustrations, for though the majority have appeared before, and many more than once, they are here collected together into a handsome volume. Of the letterpress little need be said. It is pleasant reading for those who do not desire much information on the subject; but the numerous errors which occur on almost every page render it of little use as a reference book on the subject of which it treats.

M. OMONT has done admirable service as now to palaeography by his well-known series of facsimiles derived from the Greek manuscripts in the Bibliothèque Nationale. The last of his publications that has reached us, Catalogues des Livres grecs et latins imprimés par Aldus Manuce à Venise, reproduits en Phototypie, is of a somewhat different nature, belonging rather to the class of literary curiosities than to the stricter domain of science. Nevertheless it is a happy idea, carried out with the care and elegance which characterize all M. Omont's work. It consists of photographic reproductions of the first three catalogues of classical books printed by Aldus, issued respectively in the years 1498, 1503, and 1513. Since Aldus nearly monopolized the production of Greek books in these first years after the discovery of printing, his catalogues practically represent the Greek literature available at that date for scholars and readers. It is curious to see the list of books which he considered to be most in demand or most worthy of reproduction. His first catalogue contains fifteen volumes, including Musæus, Theophrastus's 'Historia Plantarum,' Aristotle's 'Logic,' 'Physics,' 'Magna Moralia,' and 'Historia Animalium,' Theocritus, Hesiod, Aristophanes, a Horn, and a Psalter, besides grammatical works and a dictionary. The second, in 1503, shows an advance in literary interest, adding to the previous list Thucydides, Sophocles, Herodotus, Lucian, Xenophon, and Euripides, but also Dioscorides, Philostratus, Pollux, Joannes Philoponus, and others, whom we should not include now in a list of libri desideratissimi. Homer appears in an autograph addendum to the catalogue, replacing an edition not printed by Aldus which he had included in his catalogue of 1498. He is accompanied by Demosthenes, Æsop, and Quintus Smyrnaeus; and Plutarch, Plato, and Pausanias are also promised. Finally, the 1513 catalogue adds some of the orators, Pindar, and Suidas. In all, thirty-one editions of principles of Greek authors were published by Aldus in twenty-six years. Latin works do not appear till the catalogue of 1503, and here he was not the pioneer. His list contains thirty-one works, including Iamblichus, Lucretius, Virgil, Horace, Juvenal and Persius, Martial, Cicero's 'Letters,' Lucan, Statius, Valerius Maximus, Ovid, Catullus Tibullus, and Propertius—in short, all the leading Latin poets; but the only editio princeps contributed by Aldus himself is that of the Christian poets. The only known originals of these catalogues are in the Bibliothèque Nationale, and M. Omont has done well to reproduce these unique records of early typography and the revival of learning. His preface analyzes the catalogues and brings out their points of interest; and the sumptuous print and paper in which the whole is set forth show that the publisher (M. Emile Bouillon) has done his part in producing a volume which any lover of the history of books may be glad to possess.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

It seems a pity that Mr. W. P. James has put in the forefront of Romantic Professions (Mathews & Lane) the least pleasing of his essays, and so done a certain amount of injustice to an otherwise charming volume. 'Romantic Professions' deals with the somewhat trite subject of the professions affected by novelists for their heroes, and discusses the reasons why certain callings have been almost unanimously tabooed by the writers of romance. The subject is treated, perhaps, as well as might be expected in a good leading article, and the examples are copious and interesting; but the paper wants motive, and reads too much as if it were hastily written hack-work by a clever writer. In one of his inferences Mr. James is wrong: he states that Scott was so much of a soldier at heart that "so soon as he had a son to serve, he made a soldier of him," whereas, writing in July, 1819, Scott says:—

"My own selfish wish would have been that he should have followed the law, but he really had no vocation that way, wanting the neatness and liveliness of intellect indispensable to making a figure in that profession."

But the rest of the volume comes as a delightful surprise after this first essay. There is, it is true, nothing startlingly original in any of the papers, but they display so much soundness of critical judgment, so conciliatory a manner, and such a wealth of illustration from all branches of romantic literature that they will repay more than a hasty perusal. They are concerned almost entirely with points of interest in the novelist's craft, such as the question of historical novels, or names in novels, or the romantic movement. There is very little to criticize in them, as they have a pleasant conversational tone which would disarm criticism, even if we did not find ourselves in general agreement with the author's conclusions. One great gift Mr. James has, that of describing a well known book, such as 'Madame Bovary' or 'Le Père Goriot,' in such a manner that he not only elucidates his own point by his commentary, but adds fresh interest to a familiar story. The most suggestive essay is the second, on Flaubert; if we found any fault with it we should say that Mr. James hardly makes enough of the impulsive cruelty of Flaubert's method—a cruelty which in some degree detracts from the beauty on which he very rightly insists. Shakespeare was even more impersonal than Flaubert, but he evidently loved men, and on that his sympathetic greatness largely depends: Flaubert hated and despised men, and that is a distracting element to his readers. He says in one of his letters: "Je dissi que sans cesse, cela m'amuse, et quand enfin j'ai découvert la corruption dans quelques choses qu'on croit pur, la gangrène aux beaux endroits, je lève la tête et je ris." He was very young when he wrote these words, but he never lost the feeling. Of the lighter papers, 'Names in Novels' is the best; it takes as its text an interesting story illustrating Balzac's well-known superstition about the significance of names, and discusses to what point the employment of significant names may be carried.

The very names of things we love are dear, writes a living poet with reference to names like Shelley and Milton, and these words are just as applicable to names like Lucy Deborrough, Di Vernon, and others. Mr. James, however, does not seem to notice what has always struck us as Miss Austen's curious infidelities in the names of her heroines: Emma Woodhouse and Elizabeth Bennet seem names singularly unsuggestive of the two most charming women in fiction.
And sounds will gather beauty from their sense.

Messrs. Cassell & Co. publish, under the title Municipal Taxation at Home and Abroad, an interesting volume by Mr. J. J. O'Meara, an Irish solicitor, who has collected, with praiseworthy care, a great number of facts relating to local taxation in all countries, and who discusses its principles. Amid much that is good in the book, there is this to be said against it, that the author affords no sufficient guidance upon the main difficulties of certain reforms which he discusses. For example, in attempting to graduate, in any form, taxes which in any sense are taxes upon income, there is the difficulty of discovering the income, unless securities are taxed as they pass through banks, and the difficulty of applying the principle of graduation according to amount of income to securities which may or may not belong to the same person. Again, there is the difficulty of levying local taxes upon personality—the ancient theory of the law, a revival of which has been suggested by many persons from time to time, and in 1892 by Lord Salisbury. How we are to decide in what particular parish the personality of a rich man having several houses is to be taxed, and in what proportion, and how the unfortunate local authorities are annually to value his pictures, cellars, and library, are very serious matters; and no adequate answer has ever yet been given to the natural questions upon such points.

THE Turkish Salnameh, or official almanac for the Mussulman year 1311, has just appeared at Constantinople. It is enlarged, and has now reached 968 pp., affording valuable material for the political geography of the Turkish empire. Many changes are recorded in the arrangement of provinces and districts and of the new villages, consequent on the recent large immigration of refugees.

A HANDSOME reprint of Mr. Crawford's Marion Darche (Macmillan & Co.), and the last addition to the cheap reprint of Mr. Blackmore's romances, Mary Anerley (Low & Co.), are on our table.

We have also on our table An Essay on Judicial Power and Unconstitutional Legislation, by B. Cox (Philadelphia, Kay);—The Marquis d'Argenson: a Study in Criticism, the Stanhope Essay, Oxford, 1893, by A. Ogle (Fisher Unwin);—Napoleon's Last Voyage: Extract from a Diary of Rear-Admiral Sir George Cockburn (Simpkin);—Barry Sullivan, by W. J. Lawrence (Baird);—Richard Jefferies: a Study, by H. S. Salt (Sonnenschein);—Francis Bacon the Author of Shakespeare, by G. James (Simpkin);—Mental Development in the Child, by W. Preyer, translated by H. W. Brown (Arnold);—Ulrich's German Prose, by A. J. Ulrich, revised by J. Gibson (Williams & Norgate);—A Classical Compendium, by C. E. Brownrigg (Blackie);—The Future of Silver, by E. Sueca, translated by R. Stein (Washington, Government Printing Office);—California State Mining Bureau: Eleventh Report of the State Mineralogist (Sacramento, State Office, Johnston);—The Nickel Ores of Sudbury, Canada, by J. D. Frossard (Philip);—The International Annual of Anthony's Photographic Bulletin, Vol. VI. (Peck);—Illustrated Manual of Hand and Eye Training, by Dr. W. Goetz (Newmann);—Practical Forestry, by A. D. Webster (Rider);—Electricity Up to Date, by J. B. Verity (Warne);—The Social Problem, by the Rev. A. O. Jay (Simpkin);—Readings from Great English Writers, by J. C. Wright (W. H. Allen);—A Commentary on the Works of Henrik Ibsen, by H. H. Boyesen (Heinemann);—The Lolland-Haff Legends, by L. Lollandilaff (Cassell);—Diamond Rock, by J. M. Oxley (Nelson);—For Life and Love, by R. H. Savage (Routledge);—Mimi's Marriage, by V. Mikoulitch (Fisher Unwin);—In Love with the Carina, by M. Jókai, translated by L. Felbermann (Warne);—The Golden Days of Youth, by J. H. Browne (Edinburgh, Hunter);—Black Beauty, the Autobiography of a Horse, by A. Sewell (Jarrold);—Behind the Veil, by James de Mille (Halifax, U.S., Allen & Co.);—The Hebrew Tivna, by the late S. Cox, D.D. (Fisher Unwin);—Self-Discipline in Relation to the Life and Work of a Priest, by E. C. S. Gibson (S.P.C.K.);—Speculum Sacerdotum; or, the Divine Model of the Priestly Life, by the Rev. W. C. E. Newbolt (Longmans);—Catechisms for the Young, by J. Palmer, First Series (C.E.S.S.I.);—A South London Parish, by C. H. Simpkinson (S.P.C.K.);—and Hymns Supplemental to Existing Collections, edited by W. G. Horder (Stock).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Biblical Illustrator (The): Leviticus—Numbers, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Brewster's (M. A.) Consulting Thoughts, 4to. 3/6 cl.
Chambers's (Rev. A.) Our Life after Death, 8vo. 2/6 net.
Geikie's (C.) The Bible by Modern Light, Vol. 4, 8vo. 4/6.
Gracey's (late Prof. D.) Sin and the Unfolding of Salvation, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Hardy's (H. G.) Christianity and the Roman Government, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Livingston's (Rev. L.) The Primitive Church and the See of Peter, 8vo. 16/6 cl.
Sayings of the Lord Jesus Christ, arranged by J. W. Markall, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
Stead's (W. T.) If Christ came to Chicago, 8vo. 2/6 cl.

Law.

Canyngbame's (H.) English Patent Practice, with Acts, Rules, Forms, and Precedents, 8vo. 25/6 cl.
Jenkins's (A. F.) The Law relating to Parish Councils, 10/6 cl.
Parker's (F. R.) The Duties of County Councils under the Local Government Act, 1894, 8vo. 6/6 cl.

Fine Art.

Brown's Drawing Cards for the Balance, 12mo. 2/6 net packet.
Poetry and the Drama.

Bard of Domboritz, Roumanian Folk-Songs, 2nd Series, collected by H. Vacaresco, 8vo. 10/6 parchment.
Beowulf, ed. with Textual Foot-notes by A. J. Wyatt, 8/6 cl.
Dutt's (R. C.) Lays of Ancient India, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Milton's Paradise Lost, Books 2 and 4, by A. W. Verity, 2/6 cl.
Paton's (F. N.) Bards and the Birds, illus. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Raggs's (F. W.) Quorum? The Cry of Human Suffering, a Poem, 8vo. 6/6 cl.
Smythe's (A.) Sir Dunstan's Daughter, and other Poems, 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Soplace's Electra, with Critical Notes by R. C. Jebb, 12/6

Misc.

Roskin on Music, ed. by A. M. Wakefield, 2nd. 8vo. 2/6 net.

Political Economy.

Brough's (W.) The Natural Law of Money, 8vo. 5/6 cl.
Webb's (S. and B.) The History of Trade Unionism, 14/6 cl.

History and Biography.

Brooke's (S. A.) Tennyson, his Art and Relation to Modern Life, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Cavour (Count) and Madame de Circourt, Unpublished Correspondence, ed. by Count Wign, tr. by Butler, 10/6.
Churchill's (J.) Duke of Marlborough, Life of, by General Lord Wolsley, 2 vols. demy 8vo. 35/6 cl.
Fitzgerald's (E.) Letters, 2 vols. 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Garrick (David), by J. Knight, with Facsimile Portrait by W. Boucher, 8vo. 10/6 net. cl.
Kirkham (Gavin), a Record and a Tribute, by P. Cockrem, 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Lott's (W. J.) A Brief Account of Westminster Abbey, illus. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Macaulay's (D.) Scottish Gypsies under the Stuarts, 8/6 net.
Matriculation Model Answers: English History, 8vo. 2/6.
Records of the Tercentenary Festival of the University of Dublin, July, 1892, 4to. 10/6 half bound.
Smith's (G. B.) Leaders of Modern History, Biographical Sketches, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Torrens's (W. M.) History of Cabinets, from Union of Scotland to the Acquisition of Canada and Bengal, 2 vols. 8vo. 30/6.
Wakeman's (H. O.) Europe, 1890-1910, 8vo. 8/6 cl.

Geography and Travel.

Hare's (A. J. C.) Suez, 8vo. 6/6 cl.
Montbard's (G.) Among the Moors, Sketches of Oriental Life, 8vo. 14/6 cl.

Philology.

Asiatic Origin of the Oceanic Languages, with Introduction by Rev. D. Macdonald, 12mo. 10/6 net. cl.
Cesar's Gallic War, Book 7, edited by Alcroft and Mason, 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Flores Historiarum, a First Latin Reader, edited by Marsh and Steel, 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Holden's (F. T.) Tripartita, Early Latin Exercises, 4th Series, 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Somerville's (A. A.) and Byrne's (L. S. R.) Primary German Exercises, 8vo. 2/6 net. cl.

Reviews.

Amateur Handicraft, by Author of 'The Lath and its Uses,' cr. 8vo. 2/6 bds.
Ballantine's (J. W.) Terminologia. Quarterly Contributions to Antiquarian Pathology, No. 1, 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Gore's (J. K.) The Worlds of Syon, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Matriculation Model Answers: Mechanics, Chemistry,
cr. 8vo. 2/ each, swd.
Mortimer's (J.) Cotton from Field to Factory, illus. 2/6 net.
Williams's (W. M.) A Vindication of Phrenology, 12/6 cl.
Wilson's (W. H.) A Manual of Practical Pattern-Making, 7/6

General Literature.

Amyand's (A.) Only a Drummer Boy, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Aubyn's (A.) The Master of St. Benedict's, 12mo. 2/ bds.
Baylor's (F. K.) Claudia, a Novel, 3 vols. cr. 8vo. 31/6 cl.
Brown's Paper Toy Making, Packets 1 and 2, 2 net each.
Donovan's (D.) Found and Fettered, 12mo. 2/ bds.
Dove Sono, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Francis's (M. B.) The Story of Dan, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Gould's (S. B.) Cheap Jack Zita, cr. 8vo. 4/ cl.
Harraden's (B.) In Varying Moods. Short Stories, cr. 8vo. 4/6
Houston's (J. D. C.) The Daughter of Leontine, cr. 8vo. 4/6
Keary's (C. P.) The Two Lancets, cr. 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Merriman's (H. S.) With Ridged Toils, 3 vols. 31/6 cl.
Middleton's (C.) The Fool of Destiny, cr. 8vo. 31/6 cl.
Olyphant's (Mrs.) A Country Gentleman and his Family, 3/6
Pryce's (E.) Winifred Mount, a Novel, 2 vols. cr. 8vo. 21/ cl.
Robb's (T. D.) In a Kingdom by the Sea, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Scott's (Sir W.) Betwixt and Between, 8vo. 12/ cl.
or. 8vo. 1/ cl.; Woodstock, Border Edition, 2 vols. 12/ cl.
Slma's (G. R.) Story of my Two Wives, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Smyrning's Builders' Prices, 1894, cr. 8vo. 4/ cl.
Zola's (E.) Money, translated by E. A. Vizetelly, cr. 8vo. 3/6

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Doberschütz (H. v.) Studien zur Textkritik der Vulgata, 6m.
Kattenbusch (F.) Die apokalyptische Symbolik, 12m.
Mittl (C.) Die Publiistik im Zeitalter Gregors VII., 16m.
Portmann (A.) Das System der theologischen Summe des hl. Thomas v. Aquin, 4m.
Texte u. Untersuchungen zur Geschichte der althebräischen
Literatur, hrsg. v. O. v. Gebhardt u. A. Harnack,
Vol. 10, Part 2, 14m. 50.

Fine Art.

Saye (J. de) Une Chaise de la Cathédrale d'Asiorga, sfr.
Histoire de l'Exposition de Chicago, 80fr.
Jungheandl (M.) Aegypten, 10m.
Montaillé, Le Costume féminin, Part 1, sfr.
Musée (Le) du Luxembourg, Part 1, 1fr. 50.

Drama.

Méilhac (H.) Décoré, 2fr.

Philosophy.

Bonhöffer (A.) Die Ethik des Stoikers Epictet, 10m.

History and Biography.

Mémoires (Les) d'une Inconnue, 1750-1816, 7fr. 50.

Physiology.

Holder (A.) Alt-celtischer Sprachschatz, Part 5, 8m.

Science.

Langenbuch (C.) Chirurgie der Leber u. Gallenblase, Part 1, 10m.

General Literature.

Doumic (K.) Écrivains d'Aujourd'hui, 1fr. 50.
Robida (A.) Le Portefeuille d'un très vieux Garçon, 2fr.
Schultz (J.) Ce qu'elles peuvent, 2fr. 50.

THE BREATH OF AVON.

TO THE PILGRIMS OF GREATER BRITAIN.

I.

WHAT'ER of woe the Dark may hide in womb
For England, mother of kings of battle and song—

Be it rapine, racial hate's mysterious wrong,
Blissard of Chance, or fiery dart of Doom—
Let breath of Avon, rich of meadow-bloom,
Bind her to that great daughter severed long—
To near and far-off children young and strong—
With fetters woven of Avon's flower-perfume.
Welcome, ye English-speaking pilgrims, ye Whose hands around the world are joined by him,

Who make his speech the language of the sea,
Till winds of Ocean waft from rim to rim
The breath of Avon: let this great day be
A Feast of Race no power shall ever dim.

II.

From where the steeds of Earth's twin oceans toss
Their manes around Columbia's chariot-way—
From where Australia's long blue billows play—
From where the morn, quenching the Southern Cross,

Startling the frigate-bird and albatross
Asleep in air, breaks over Table Bay—
Come hither, Pilgrims, where these rushes sway
Tween grassy banks of Avon soft as moss!

And, if ye found the breath of Ocean sweet,
Sweeter is Avon's earthy, flowery smell,
Distilled from roots that feel the coming spell
Of May, when all the flowers that loved him meet
In meadows that, remembering Shakespeare's feet,
Hold still a dream of music where they fell.

THEODORE WATTS.

Stratford-on-Avon, April 23rd.

THE BOOKSELLERS' TRADE DINNER.

Brighton, April 21, 1894.

I THINK "A London Bookseller" rightly protests against this misleading designation as applied to the dinner of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, which cannot be considered as representative of more than a small proportion of the bookselling trade. Many booksellers, like myself, have held aloof from that institution, through disapproval of the principles on which it is conducted—principles not calculated to attract business men, who prefer to know what benefits their subscriptions will entitle them to, instead of being in doubt as to what relief, in time of need, a committee may be good enough to allow them or theirs.

If any society has a right to use the designation in question for their dinner, the London Booksellers' Society must be that one, as it is fairly representative, at least of the retail trade, and has undoubtedly been working on lines calculated to be beneficial to the trade at large, publishers as well as booksellers.

The former society should, I think, be renamed the Booksellers' Improvident Institution, as the rules are so arranged as practically to offer a premium on improvidence.

EDWARD NORTH.

143, Oxford Street, April 23, 1894.

IN Mr. J. Shaylor's letter, which appeared in your last week's issue, in reference to that excellent society the Booksellers' Provident Institution, he thought fit to bring into the controversy the London Booksellers' Society, which he refers to as "those whose annual dinner takes place in October, and who are just now attempting to coerce the publishers into giving better terms."

I wish to protest against the idea of any attempt at coercion being brought into the question of publishers' terms. This was not the spirit of the meeting held on April 5th, and I am surprised that if Mr. Shaylor thought coercive measures were contemplated (considering he is a member of the council of the London Booksellers' Society, and was present at that meeting) he did not then take exception to the resolutions passed.

I, for one, believe that the publishers are reasonable, and, if approached in the right spirit and shown that the bulk of the booksellers are pledged to stop any further ruinous cutting, that equitable terms will be accorded, and help given to bring any delinquents to book. This, I maintain, is the view that the great majority of the booksellers hold.

"Coerce" is an unfortunate word to use in a question of this kind, and is likely to militate against a better understanding if publishers get the idea that booksellers look upon the matter in that light.

JOSEPH TRUBLOVE.

PROBABLY your readers are little concerned as to the point raised by "A London Bookseller." They may be better able to judge whether there is any impropriety, as Mr. Shaylor suggests, in the "Society which dines in October" endeavouring to prevent booksellers needing the funds raised by the "Society which dines in April." About one thousand retail booksellers think there is not.

T. BURLINGH.

Hon. Sec. London Booksellers' Society.

CHAUCER'S 'CLERKS TALE' AND PETRARCA'S VERSION OF THE 'GRISELDA STORY.'

THE ingenuity of the critics has been much exercised to explain how Petrarca's version of the story of Griselda came into Chaucer's hands. In the introduction to vol. i. of his complete edition of Chaucer's works, recently published at the Clarendon Press, Prof. Skeat remarks: "It is clear that in writing the 'Clerkes Tale,' Chaucer actually had a copy of Petrarca's Latin version before him; and it is difficult to see how he came by it unless he obtained it from Petrarca himself or by Petrarca's assistance." The learned Chaucer scholar here admits the possibility that the poet obtained Petrarca's version of the story in some indirect way. I venture, therefore, to throw out the suggestion, which, in fact, occurred to me long ago, that Chaucer got a copy of it from Boccaccio, directly or indirectly. There is no evidence, I believe, that the English poet was at Padua in 1373, whilst we know that he stayed in that year at Florence, where Boccaccio, to whom Petrarca sent his translation in this very year, then occupied the chair of "Dantean Professor." It seems to me, therefore, plausible enough that Chaucer obtained a copy of it from or through the author of the 'Decamerone.' The statement in the Prologue to the 'Clerkes Tale,' that he learned the story at Padua from "Fraunceys Petrark," need not be taken literally, but as a mere literary compliment, as a handsome acknowledgment of Chaucer's indebtedness to Petrarca for the Griselda story, since he followed his version so closely. Analogous literary acknowledgments might be found, I think, in other poetical works, and the fact that the Prologue was written, as is generally assumed, about fourteen years after the main body of the Tale, would also tend to prove that the mention of Petrarca was a grateful recognition of an indirect literary service only.

C. A. BUCHHEIM.

THE ENGLISH ANCESTRY OF WASHINGTON.

Manacorn, Cornwall, April 16, 1894.

UNLESS Canon Lodge, in his excellent monograph on 'Scrivelsby,' is quite wrong, General Read has fallen into a second error in the letter (ante, p. 446) in which he corrects his first mistake.

"Margaret de Ludlowe," through whose marriage with Sir John Dymoke the Dymokes obtained Scrivelsby, was not the daughter, but the granddaughter of Thomas de Ludlowe and Joane de Marmayon. Her father was also named Sir Thomas de Ludlowe, but her mother's name seems to be unknown.

Another error seems to be implied, rather than expressed, in the letter. The championship of England is not, as is often supposed, an hereditary office, but is attached by knight serjeantry to the manor of Scrivelsby. This was decided by the Court of Claims at the coronation of Richard II., when Sir John Dymoke successfully asserted the claim of "little Scrivelsbays" against the Frovilles, who had inherited Tamworth from the marriage of their ancestor with the elder sister of the Joane de Marmayon aforesaid. Thus the younger sister and the smaller manor claimed successfully against the elder co-heiress and the large estate.

ALEX. R. EAGAR, D.D.

THE BURIAL-PLACES OF RACHEL BRIGHAM AND OF HER FATHER NICHOLAS.

THE memory of this little girl has been so much associated with the tomb of Chaucer in Westminster Abbey that a few facts in relation to the tradition may be worth collecting from manuscript authorities. Her father, Nicholas Brigham, the famous and faithful servant alike of his sovereign and of "the Muses nine," had removed the mortal remains of Chaucer from the Cloisters, where they had lain since 1400 A.D., into the interior of the Catholic Abbey in 1555, and had erected above them the canopied marble altar-tomb which still exists. In Darb's 'Westminster' it is said:—

"Near Chaucer's tomb was buried Nicholas Brigham, who erected the monument over him, a gentleman equally valuable for his Knowledge of Poetry, History, and the Municipal Laws....He died in Westminster, December, 1555, and is supposed to be here buried; nor is it improbable, since in his life he buried his daughter Rachel here, a child of four years old, as appears by this inscription, visible in Mr. Camden's time, but now gone:—

Unica que fueram proles spesque alma parentis
Hec Rachel Brigham confita sum tumulo Vixit Annos quatuor, mensibus tribus, diebus quatuor, horis 18.

Through some error of the scribe, the death of this dearly loved daughter is recorded in the Register Books of St. Margaret's, Westminster, under another Christian name: "(1557) 22nd June, Sara Briggam of a burning ague." She is one of the few whose cause of death is recorded. That "Sara" is really intended for "Rachel" can be proved in two ways: by the record of her "crysening," and by the receipt of her burial expenses. Among the "crysenings" of St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, appears "1552, 19th March, Rachel Briggam." The difference between the two dates is four years, three months, and three days, so that, if Camden's epitaph is correct, she must have been christened very shortly after birth. The dates are too harmonious to be believed to refer to different people.

The receipts of the churchwardens of St. Margaret's refer to the burial of a Rachel, and of a Rachel only, at this date. In "The Account of Edmund Lord and Nicholas Culwycke" from May 18th, 2 & 3 Philip & Mary, to May 18th, 4 & 5 Philip & Mary, we find:—

The weekly Receipts of Tapers, Torches, Graves and belles in the second yere of this accompt.
.....4th week. Of Rachel Briggam for 4 tapers, 1js viii^d

Of Rachel Briggam for her grave, 2^d for the Belles, xvij^d 4^d
Of Rachel Briggam for the herse cloth, liij^d 6^d

Hers was evidently a handsome funeral. The cost for her grave is as high as that of any mentioned; the cost of the candles much higher. Some of the graves cost as little as 3d., none of them cost more than 2s. Most of the tapers cost 4d. for the four; few more than 8d.; so it was evident that those ordered for little Rachel were extra large or fine. The grave seems to have been really within the parish church.

It was a common practice then to hang in the Abbey memorial tablets of those buried elsewhere, a practice that has caused considerable perplexity to biographers. Such a tablet, most likely set up in the Abbey by the sorrowing father, at the fresh marble tomb that he haunted, or possibly removed there from St. Margaret's by the mother after the death and burial of Nicholas, contained the epitaph recorded by Camden, and repeated by Dart. But these churchwardens' accounts prove the evidence, even of an epitaph, inadmissible in this case.

In regard to Nicholas himself, we can prove by his will, preserved at Somerset House, that he died in 1558, and not in December, 1559, as Wood and Dart and others state. His widow had married again, drawn up her will, and died before the date they give. Briggam seems to have been ill at Westminster, as the witnesses to his nuncupative will were Westminster residents. That will decides no place of burial. There is no entry of his death or burial in the parish registers. If we study "The Account of Richard Hodges and Robert Davyes, Churchwardens," from May 22nd, 4 & 5 Phil. & Mary, to May 25th, 2 Elizabeth, we find no entry of his burial receipts as in St. Margaret's, the parish where he resided. But at the end of the "Receytes" appears a separate paragraph entitled "Foryen Receytes in the first yere," in which his name appears:—

Item, at the buriall of Mr. Mighell Wentworthe in reward, viij^d viij^d 4^d

Item, at the buriall of Nycholas Bryggam, xliij^d vi^d 4^d

Item, at the buriall of Willm. Jemynges, xliij^d liij^d

These foreign receipts imply that these deceased parishioners were buried elsewhere than in the parish church, and that some remembrance or reward was considered due to their own parish for the loss of the small ordinary profits. The "foryen" burial of Nicholas Briggam might mean that his body had been conveyed to his brother's tomb at Caversham, or that he had died and been buried elsewhere. There was no apparent reason, however, that he should have been buried in any other parish than Westminster. His dying imaginations might have been kindled by a desire to lie at the feet of his beloved Master, or his widow may have selected the fresh-cut marble tomb as his most suitable resting-place and most permanent memorial. The Abbey books of the period are lost, and no light can be gained from direct authority. The question is whether the word "foryen" can correctly be applied to a burial in the Abbey, which lay within the parish, though beyond the churchwardens' sphere of accounts.

I am inclined to believe that it can, as the same books refer to a "Foren payment, Item paid to Roger Weston for taking downe of our Lady Tabernacle at Rounceyvall," the chapel at Charing Cross dependent upon St. Margaret's Church.

But the one point proved by the different entries of the churchwardens is this—that the little Rachel and her father do not both lie in or near Chaucer's grave. She does not, but her father may.

CHARLOTTE CARMICHAEL STOPES.

Literary Gossip.

MR. OSWALD CRAWFORD has accepted the chairmanship of Chapman & Hall, Limited.

MR. HALL CAINE's novel, 'The Manxman,' is to be published in the first week in September by Mr. Heinemann in London and Messrs. Appleton in New York. It displays, so far as it has appeared in the Queen, a strong bias in the direction of what has been called "the revolt of the daughter," depicting the evil results of ambition and of the compulsion exercised by a father on his child's feelings. Mr. Caine, by the way, has written for the Manx people a small book, entitled 'The Little Man Island,' a title borrowed from John Speed's 'History.' A quarter of a million copies are to be distributed.

A SEMI-PUBLIC meeting will be held on Monday week in support of the appeal which the Council of King's College are about to make to the Church party in view of the withdrawal of the Government grants, to which we referred in a previous number. The Bishop of London, we believe, has strongly urged the uncompromisingly conservative policy which the Council appear to have adopted in this matter.

THE Royal Irish Academy will issue, as an appendix to Mr. Mahaffy's 'Petric Papyri,' a facsimile of the historical narrative of the Syrian soldier—a fragment which is exciting much interest in Germany.

WE regret to announce the death on Friday, the 20th of April, at his house the Willows, Walker, Newcastle-on-Tyne, of Mr. Frank Carr, long well known throughout Tyneside under his literary pseudonym as "Launcelot Cross." His 'Hesperides' and his 'Characteristics of Leigh Hunt,' as well as his 'Brandon' and 'Business,' won a good deal of popularity. His latest work was an Arthurian poem entitled 'Palomide.' His large heart and refined intellect endeared him to a wide circle of literary intimates.

To fill a vacancy caused by the death of M. H. Taine, M. Chas. Bémont, of the École des Chartes, has been elected a corresponding fellow of the Royal Historical Society. M. Bémont's interest in the sources of English mediæval history is well known from his critiques in the Revue Historique; and his 'Chartes des Libertés Anglaises,' on the lines of Bishop Stubbs's 'Select Charters,' is a standard work in this country. He is the new editor of the 'Rôles Gascons,' published under the sanction of the English and French Governments, and scholars who have been anxiously expecting vol. i. of the new series will be glad to learn that it is now in the press.

AT the dinner of the Printers' Corporation on Tuesday last Mr. Hodson, the Secretary, announced contributions to the amount of 2,120*l*. In this was included a sum of 400*l*. in Colonial Railway Debenture Stock, yielding 4 per cent., with the proceeds of which an annuity of 12*l*. a year was to be paid. The donor is the Rev. J. Ind Smith, whose father was formerly one of the printers to the Cambridge University, and whose name will be attached to the pension. A pleasing feature in connexion with the dinner is that at the same time as it was taking place in London the old people in the almshouses were being entertained at a substantial dinner at Wood Green.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON have in the press a new novel in three volumes by Mr. Fogerty, entitled 'A Hunted Life,' in which the scenes—like those in 'Juanita,' his last work—are chiefly laid on the western coast of Ireland, and in the lawless counties bordering Lough Dearg, on the river Shannon. Miss Beatrice M. Whitty, author of 'The Awakening of Mary Fenwick,' has turned her attention to literature for the young, and has written a tale for children called 'I Remember, I Remember,' which will run through the pages of Sunday before being issued in book form. Miss Mary Rowsell will bring out in May a novel styled 'The Friend of the People.'

THE Institut de France is to celebrate next year the centenary of its foundation. The old academies having been suppressed in 1793, the Institut was created in their place by a law of the Convention of October 25th, 1795. It consists of five academies, including, of course, as three of them, the Académie Française, the Academy of Sciences, and the Academy of Fine Arts. Count de Franqueville, a member of the Institut, is preparing for the centenary a work entitled 'Le premier Siècle de l'Institut de France,' which will be published by M. Rothschild, of Paris, and will contain, besides an historical account of the Institut, a short notice of each of the members of the five academies.

MESSRS. SWAN SONNENSCHN & Co. will publish a volume, by Mr. Sponser Wilkinson, on the present international situation in so far as it affects the British Empire. Mr. Wilkinson advocates a national policy, and bases his argument on a review of the two principal European questions of the day, the rivalry between France and Germany and that between Austria and Russia. He discusses the connexion between war and national policy, and examines in some detail the Egyptian Question, the colonial disputes of England with Germany and France, and the question of the Indian frontier. Under the title of "The Great Alternative" he discusses the policy of Great Britain, and concludes with a chapter on "The Revival of Duty."

A DEFENCE of tithe and landed property, which Mr. J. H. Slater has written for the Anti-Liberation Society, will be issued early next month under the title of 'God and our Right.' This work, though primarily a defence of private ownership of tithe and real estate, is an attack upon the position taken up by the Fabian and other societies with regard to property of the kind mentioned.

THE Austrian Chamber of Deputies ratified last month the convention between Austria-Hungary and this country respecting literary copyright.

It is with much regret we record the death of Mr. W. Gage Spicer, a partner in the well-known firm of stationers, Spicer Brothers. Mr. Spicer was a large contributor to the funds of the various institutions connected with the Congregationalists, of which body he was a prominent member. He was also a liberal supporter of the charities in which newsvendors and booksellers are directly interested. Messrs. Spicer Brothers were the first to manufacture paper in large rolls, and to the Exhibition of 1851 they sent a roll of paper 46 inches wide and 2,500 yards in length which attracted considerable attention.

DR. HEDLEY, the Benedictine Bishop of Newport and Menavia, is preparing for the press 'A Retreat, consisting of Discourses and Meditations for the Clergy, Convents, and Educated People in General.'

THE next International Congress of the "Old Catholics," which is expected to be largely attended by delegates from the principal European countries and from America, will be held from August 28th to 30th at Rotterdam. The last Congress met in 1892 at Lucerne.

AMONG those who have accepted the invitation of Mr. J. J. Baddeley, chairman, to the literary dinner of the Guildhall Library Committee, to be held on the 7th of May, are, besides the Lord Mayor and the American Ambassador, Lord Justice Davey, the Dean of St. Paul's, Archdeacon Farrar, Mr. Lewis Morris, Dr. Jessopp, Mr. Armitage, Prof. Herkomer, Mr. Holman Hunt, and Dr. Garnett.

AMONG the candidates for the Sir Thomas Adams chair at Cambridge, vacant by the lamented decease of Prof. Robertson Smith, are Mr. Bevan, Prof. Salmon, and General Tweedie, for many years Consul-General at Bagdad.

MR. POLLARD, of Exeter, is going to print the autobiography of a Cornish smuggler, H. Carter, who was a prisoner in France from 1793 to 1795, and for some years a Wesleyan preacher. Mr. J. B. Cornish will supply notes and an introduction.

MR. ALFRED AUSTIN's new book, 'The Garden that I Love,' with illustrations, will be published on Tuesday week.

WE have to apologize to Mr. Footman for having accused him, in our notice of his monograph on Lambourne Church, of omitting to print the original of Canute's charter. It is given in an appendix. Also a couple of antiquaries learned in rood-lofts have attacked our statement, in the same review, that an altar in a rood-loft is "a new thing" in England. They have adduced sundry instances to the contrary, and shown us we were mistaken.

THE Times announces the death of its able correspondent at Brussels, M. A. Couvreur, the founder of the Société d'Études Sociales et Politiques, and the husband of Taama.—The death has also to be recorded of the Rev. J. N. Simpkinson, formerly an assistant master at Harrow, author of 'The Washingtons' and a biography of the Rev. G. Wagner. He is to be distinguished from Mr. C. H. Simpkinson, who is writing a life of Laud.

SCIENCE

MATHEMATICAL LITERATURE.

A Treatise on the Mathematical Theory of Elasticity. By A. E. H. Love, M.A. 2 vols. (Cambridge, University Press.)—A History of the Theory of Elasticity and of the Strength of Materials, from Galileo to the Present Time. By Isaac Todhunter, F.R.S. Edited and completed by Karl Pearson, M.A. 2 vols. (Same publishers.)—Every student of theoretical mechanics is familiar with the conception of a "rigid body"; and the action of forces upon such a body occupies a prominent place in courses of mathematical physics. But no such body occurs in nature, and the departure of actual solid substances from the ideal of a perfectly rigid substance has only recently begun to occupy the attention it deserves. Previous to the publication of Thomson and Tait's treatise on natural philosophy the subject was relegated to the province of engineering technology, except, indeed, when it was necessary to formulate a mechanical explanation of the propagation of waves in the luminiferous ether. The broad features of the science of elasticity, as distinguished from elaborate applications, ought to occupy a prominent place in the training of every mathematician. The first thing is to form a clear conception of the "stress" at a point in the interior of a body; that is, of the forces which a small portion of the body at and around this point can experience from the contiguous portions. A simple analysis shows that six independent variables are required for specifying this stress. The variables usually taken are three direct pulls or pushes in mutually perpendicular directions, and three tendencies to slide. The next thing is to conceive and analyze the possible deformation of the said small portion. Deformation is now called "strain," and its analysis, which belongs to pure geometry, brings out the fact that "strain" (like stress) involves six independent variations. The alphabet of the subject having thus been laid down, we are in a position to specify, in a definite way, the elastic properties of a substance. Elasticity is the resistance which matter opposes to being strained, and is a much more complicated thing than either stress or strain, inasmuch as it involves relations between each of the six elements of the one and the whole six elements of the other. It may require as many as twenty-one independent numbers for its specification, each denoting one particular component of elastic resistance. This, at least, is the conclusion which results from discussing elasticity as a mere matter of fact apart from a priori theories as to the molecular constitution of matter. But many of the pioneers of the science, especially in France, have started from the hypothesis of mutual attractions and repulsions between molecules, acting in straight lines from centre to centre without any twisting tendency; and this hypothesis when worked out has been found to impose certain restrictions, in virtue of which, instead of twenty-one as above stated, the independent elasticities cannot number more than fifteen. On this point a mighty controversy has raged, of which a clear account is given in both the works before us. Both works are ably executed, and to a great extent they cover the same ground; but one follows in the main the order of thought, and the other the order of time. Mr. Love's treatise is sprightly and attractive in its style, eminently adapted to the wants of students, and each of his volumes begins with a very able "historical introduction." The 'History,' of which the first volume is mainly the work of Dr. Todhunter, and the second of Prof. Pearson (their respective contributions being suitably distinguished by brackets), bears obvious marks of laborious and careful research on the part of both its authors, and discusses in a judicial tone the various points of controversy which arise. Prof. Pearson has found it necessary to reduce the babel of terms and symbols employed by different authors to a uniform system, and the terms which he has selected or coined are short and expressive. Commenting on the use of the phrase simple shear by Thomson and Tait to denote a certain distortion, he says (Vol. II., Part II., p. 386):—

"This is unfortunate, for that word was introduced by George Stephenson to denote the transverse stress in rivets, and has been consistently used in this sense of stress by Rankine and the majority of engineers since. Its present confused use partly for stress and partly for strain has been avoided in our own work by the introduction of the term slide for shearing strain."

Both works have excellent indexes and are conveniently arranged for reference.

Plane Trigonometry. By S. L. Loney, M.A. (Cambridge, University Press.)—So many trigonometries have come under our notice of late that we must confess to feeling a certain prejudice against each fresh one. Mr. Loney's is unquestionably well arranged, clearly written, amply supplied with good diagrams and examples, and quite up to date as far as it goes; but we cannot honestly say that we have detected any great advantages which it possesses over some of its recent predecessors. The book is divided into two parts. The first part contains the usual elementary theorems (including the solution of triangles and the determination of heights and distances) with various geometrical problems and chapters on simple series and elimination. The second part is entirely analytical, and deals with more advanced matters, such as De Moivre's theorem, hyperbolic functions, logarithms of complex quantities, &c.—all of which the author treats in the manner of a practised teacher.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES.

THE planet Mercury will not be visible during the month of May, being in superior conjunction with the sun on the 20th. Venus is a morning star in the constellation Pisces; she will be in conjunction with the horned waning moon on the 1st and on the 31st prox. Mars rises about an hour after midnight, and passes next week from Capricornus into Aquarius; he will be very near the moon (then just past her last quarter) on the morning of the 28th, the conjunction taking place after daylight. The only other planet visible to the naked eye next month is Saturn, which is still in the constellation Virgo, about 5° due north of Spica on the 1st, and in conjunction with the moon (then within three days of being full) on the 16th.

It appears that the announcement of the discovery of comet c, 1894, by Mr. Holmes, of Islington, on the 9th inst., was founded on mistake, the object seen being really a nebula. The elements of the orbit of comet b, 1894, discovered by Mr. Gale at Sydney on the 3rd inst., have been calculated by Prof. H. Kreutz, of Kiel, from observations made at the Cape of Good Hope. The comet was in perihelion on the 14th inst., at the distance from the sun of 0.986 in terms of the earth's mean distance, and the inclination of its orbit is nearly perpendicular to the plane of the ecliptic. So rapid has been

THEATRICAL ENGINEERS &c.—'The Relation of Mathematics to Engineering.' By J. H. Phipps. (James Forrest Lecture.)
 — Society for the Advancement of the Fine Arts.—'Women in Relation to High Art.' Miss Z. Tomblin.
 FINE ARTS.—'United Service Institution, 3.—National Methods for securing a Supply of Menus.' Lieut. W. T. Crutchley.
 — Philosophical, &c.—'Analysing.' Paper by Prof. A. B. Napier, President.
 — Royal Institution, 8.—'Sound Production of the Lower Animals.' Prof. C. Stewart.
 SAT.—Royal Institution, 2.—'Colour Vision.' Capt. Abney. (Tyndall Lecture.)

FINE ARTS

THE SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.

THERE is, we are glad to say, a larger proportion than usual of figure pictures of merit in this the hundred and twenty-first exhibition of the Old Society; otherwise the collection is neither very much above nor very much below the average of the last ten years or so. It would have been better if Mrs. Allingham had not been working for the Fine Art Society; if Mr. Alma Tadema and Mr. David Murray had not been occupied by their contributions to Burlington House; if Mr. Bulleid had sent more contributions; if Mr. Crane had sent some of importance; if Mr. Dobson had filled his accustomed space on the walls near Sir J. Gilbert, who is likewise unrepresented; if Mr. Marks had contributed something more ambitious than his pretty parrots; and, finally, if two or three other members had either done themselves justice or omitted to appear at all.

The most striking things in the gallery are Mr. H. Herkomer's exceedingly fine drawing of the dying Daphne and his portrait of Mr. MacWhirter, Sir E. Burne-Jones's subject from the 'Morte d'Arthur,' Mr. Wallis's 'Street View in Cairo,' Mr. E. R. Hughes's idyl of wedded lovers at table, and a lovely English girl's head by Mr. Poynter. The Daphne (No. 27) is a life-size bust, and her dark hair is crowned with laurel, so that the wreath's shadows make more dim the pallid and motionless features. Not only is an extremely difficult and poetical idea embodied in this capital piece, but the painting—at once subtle and swift—of the bloodless carnations, and their exquisite softness are as rare as they are admirable, and so is the true and tender modelling of the flesh, without the aid of higher lights, in the broad and homogeneous mass of perfectly transparent shade which covers the face. How much of the success of this striking work is due to a mere tour de force, not to be repeated, we cannot say, yet it is immensely more delightful than the same painter's portrait of John Herkomer, Esq. (127), a work more curious than commendable, which nobody but that gentleman's son would think of exhibiting before he had put the eyes in accord with each other, made the full white beard look less like soiled cotton, and brought its tone into harmony with the roughly handled, though masterly features above it, while he refined the touch throughout, and reduced the hotness and darkness of the shadows, which are much too crude. On the other hand, we think (it is the highest praise we can offer) that few painters in water colours, except William Hunt, could or would have given us so fine a work as Mr. Herkomer's John MacWhirter, Esq., R.A. (222), a little luminous gem of flesh painting, animated, full of colour and tone, and very pleasant to look at. The miniature of H. H. Spielmann, Esq. (229), is very slightly out of drawing, and the shadows on the flesh are too dark. Otherwise it is first rate in every respect.

Sir E. Burne-Jones's large picture in body colour, which occupies the place of honour, is rather more opaque than we like, or expect from him. It represents those valiant and holy Knights of the Table Round Bors, Percival, and Galahad at the Chapel of the Sangraal (64). The poetry of the subject is suitably, if not very powerfully, expressed by the softened tones and colours of the work; by the strangeness of its quasi-Byzantine figures of the type of Cinnabue at Asaisi, tall and slender to excess, and clad in ancient armour and classic robes; by the scene haunted by shadows; and, above all, by the still passion of the whole, which seems to intensify itself while, bringing our fancy into harmony with it, we look upon the picture. Fine as this example is, it fails somewhat in robustness, and hardly conveys the profound sense of awe implied in the legend to which it refers.

On the other hand, Mr. Wallis's Street in Cairo (115), resplendent in light and colour, leaves nothing to the imagination. We have, in powerful sunlight, the clearest air, and vivid hues, buildings of sandstones in bands of red and yellow alternately, and figures of Egyptians buying and selling, or loitering along the narrow way. The whole is carefully and brilliantly painted, with a firm crisp touch which ensures that there shall be no lack of breadth and solidity. Technically speaking, this is one of the finest works in the gallery; it wants nothing but a subject to attract popular admiration.—Except Rossetti's 'Il Ramocello,' which it resembles in respect to the purity and animated charm of the expression, we do not remember any painting of a young damsel's head and shoulders so brilliant, so finely drawn, and, for its solidity, so delightful to artistic eyes as Mr. Poynter's Rose in Bloom (192), a half-length figure of a comely and vivacious maiden in a ball dress, daintily adjusting a full-blown rose at her bosom, and looking as if she asked her mirror or a friend whether the flower was rightly placed. In her eyes some child-like wonder yet remains, although she is grown to womanhood. The drawing and modelling of every part are consummate.—The last first-rate example we have to notice is Mr. E. R. Hughes's 'Trifles of this Sort' (152), the chief shortcoming of which is the awkwardness of its subject, not to say its unfitness for painting. The title is due to Lamb, and refers to the remark of a wedded lover to his wife while they are at table, and he, touching a choice piece of Wedgwood, congratulates her upon the improvement of their circumstances which has allowed of the purchase of costly rarities. The man's uninteresting figure is awkwardly posed, and wanting in spirit and movement; besides, seated as represented against the light of a window, quite incredible as a piece of painting from life. Nor is his face worth much, being flat and, in its colouring and solidity, far below the keys of nature. The picture, too, as a whole, though not without a certain charm derived from its simplicity and its breadth and modesty of treatment, is dry, and rather dull in tone and colour. On the other hand, so delightful are the lady's face and figure that all our dissatisfaction with the rest of the work vanishes the moment we recognize the tenderness and grace of her expression and of her figure, demurely clad in silvery grey, and wearing a white muslin fichu. Nor are her bare arms and hands, naturally resting on the table, of inferior artistic value to the other portions, or less true to the life.

Turning to the other figure pictures of importance, we may begin with Mr. G. L. Bulleid's interior of a Roman chamber lined with white and yellow marbles and paved with mosaics. Called A Morning Greeting (1), it represents a dark-haired and stately young matron sleeping, or pretending to sleep, while her pretty daughter, flowers in hand, stoops to kiss her mother's brow. Thoroughly learned and delicate as the execution is, difficult as was the task which the artist set himself—that of depicting open and bright daylight without strongly contrasting shadows—and much as we admire the drawing of the figures, draperies, and faces, it cannot be denied that the figures are somewhat stiff, while, though not flat, the picture is rather hard.—There is some good painting in the background of Desolate and Oppressed (2), by Mr. T. Lloyd, and it possesses breadth, richness of colour, and luminosity, while the figures of wayfarers halting by a roadside, near a park wall, are appropriate enough. Sunrise on the South Downs (112) represents truly a good effect of light, and displays wealth of colour which is somewhat scattered. The composition has been carefully, but too obviously, studied. Potatoes (195) is a better picture, and its limpid illumination and pleasing and rich colour are attractive. We like, too, Grandmother (210), although the subject is trite and vague.—Mrs. Allingham's In the Garden (36) shows a lady seated musing after reading or sleeping (it is a defect that it is not made clear which), with a background of flowers, herbage, and foliage. The grace and truth of the attitude, the disposition of the white dress, and the keeping of the whole picture are worthy of the artist, who has, however, often painted figures with a firmer touch, and depicted trees and flowers with far more crispness and brilliancy. These parts are rather woolly.

Some friends of the Society were not over pleased when Mr. J. R. Weguelin, whose imitations of Mr. Alma Tadema are too well known, was elected to succeed Mr. Holman Hunt. They will, however, feel relieved when they see the new Associate's Battle of Flowers (43), girls in an antique garden pelting each other hilariously with handfuls of roses. Although it is a little like an opera scene, thin, and rather more showy than sound, it evinces plenty of spirit and action, and glows with dainty colours of the gayest sort. Still more encouraging is the same artist's Venetian Gold (176), of which the scene is a sunlit, but rather misty roof of a Venetian palace, where the abundant tresses of a damsel are spread out upon the broad rim of a crownless hat and exposed to the light, this being a device for producing, where nature had not favoured fashion, the golden, ruddy hue the Venetians of the sixteenth century so much affected. The subject of this interesting process is attended by a woman, an awkwardly designed figure, who combs out her hair. The composition is bad and the actions are tame, not to say lifeless. In developing highly the face of the lady, which is pretty and animated, and suppressing the solidity of the rest of his materials (for which mere half-empty sketching suffices to him), so as to enhance its force and tone, Mr. Weguelin adopts the technical methods of the late Mr. Pinwell. Apart from the leading face there is much bad drawing, and none that is good, in the figures, and modelling is not even aimed at. There is, however, much that is acceptable in the harmony of the colours and tones.—Mr. W. Crane's Enigmas of Spring (146), three graceful, but most unlovely maidens, prettily clad in dresses which by their colour and shape indicate vernal flowers, and standing in a place so damp as to be distressingly suggestive of rheumatism and colds in the head, is one of his most characteristic flights of fancy, exquisite in its colour, elegant in its draperies, and possessing artistic points of rare value and originality. Nobody but a master of his art could, or would, give us a thing which is at once so choice and—so far as the girls' faces and their purposeless expressions and attitudes go—regrettable.

The first of the landscapes and minor subjects is Mr. R. W. Allan's Mount Etna (3), a powerful piece of sunlight and heat, reminding us of M. Montenard. Passing other commendable drawings of Mr. Allan's, we come to Benbecula Market (126), a sort of panorama, with cleverly designed figures, in which the mid-distance and vast distance are fine in their way.—A Kincardine Village (4), by Mr. E. A. Waterlow, possesses spirit, solidity, and characteristic brightness, but it is rather deficient in airiness. At Tilford (132), a beautiful drawing, may be praised for its warmth, wealth of colour, and homogeneity.—Mr. M. Hale's Ponte Vecchio, Florence (8), in glowing golden evening light, is more charming than any of his previous drawings, numerous as they have been. His Ben Sioch, Loch Maree (104), is broad, full of air, and refined. Winter (118) is rich and masterly in colour, line in tone, and true throughout, not the less so because it is highly poetical and impressive; and the same artist's Moonlight (249) is nearly as admirable. —Among luminous and powerful sketches of a blue sea and waves breaking heavily on a sandy shore, we know none more to be coveted than Mr. Crane's superb study of long, sluggish billows and a resplendent atmosphere, which he calls White Horses (11). An Unseen Harvest (20), acres of horse-daisies (?) in full bloom, is as rich, brilliant, and strong, but it has not its splendour or its solemnity. In its way nothing could be more brilliant and solid than The Abbot and Bishop's Palace, Wells (82), where the surface (strewn with flowers and weeds) of the placid pool is a masterpiece of hand-drawn perspective. Approach to the Chapter House, Wells (213), depicts the famous staircase and vaulted roof in warm, glowing golden light.

Mr. H. M. Marshall's Old Swan Pier, a Frosty Evening (12), the river at sunset; his River below Bridge (38), Dordrecht (34), and other drawings here, really differ in no respect from numerous instances which have preceded them on these walls. The subjects are changed, but that is all. Each of them is at once artistic and natural. —Mr. E. J. Poynter is not always particularly happy as a landscape painter, and his Le Grand Nucereux (sic) (15), a panorama of pine-clad hills and narrow valleys, distinguished as it is by velvety textures, solidity, finish, limpidity, and beautiful drawing, shows why such works are not always pictures in the higher sense. It lacks naming, simplifying of its innumerable details, and breadth. —On the contrary, these qualities are conspicuously present in Mr. G. A. Fripp's On the River Swale (19), a drawing which is painted in a key of colour that, compared with Mr. Poynter's, is faint, though pearly. It is as massive as it is full of light, and as simple as it is firmly touched. On Burnham Sands (92) is an exquisite rendering of a charming effect of morning on the sea. The drawing of the foreground is a lesson for all students, being as solid as it is crisp and firm. For similar qualities applied to an entirely different subject the visitor should turn to No. 121, Distant View of Hornham, a vast panorama in low tones, seen in pure warm and grey light. Cere Mill (900) could not be more homogeneous, solid, broad, or tender. Nor should the visitor overlook Mr. Fripp's other contributions; these are examples of high style, and they exhibit no trace of manner. —Mr. S. P. Jackson is another master of style, and he adds to it profound sentiment and a touching pathos not within the reach of his colleagues, but, it must be owned, rather more monotonous than critics could wish. His Marquas Porth (21), seen in greenish light, is quite majestic. Mr. Jackson's numerous pictures attest, by their numbers at least, the facility with which he produces them. Of those here the visitor will prefer Bedruthan Steps (63), that strangely romantic cove seen under a telling effect of grey and misty evening light. There is more freshness of motive, however, about the view of Ozwick Bay (73), in which the composition, as is usual with the painter, is first rate, and combines into a grand and simple whole the vanishing clouds, grey shadows, cliffs, and rocky islets of the shore. Portreath Harbour (102), a view looking seaward, into which a ship has been most cleverly introduced, is one of the ablest compositions in the exhibition, while the effect of fading light upon the long, parallel lines of billows rushing to the land is decidedly solemn. Bamborough Castle (154) is a fine design. But the influence of the lamp is more than usually obvious in this well-studied piece, which is less solid than ordinary. —Mr.

C. Rigby is happiest this year in his River Bela (25), a sober and delicate example, the modesty of which may blind the visitor to its merits, especially as it is rather flat and low in tone. Although rather mannered, Blea Turn (143) is beautifully delicate, and the sky is extremely pleasing. We care less for the rest of this artist's contributions, although none of them is unworthy of praise.

The Calm (30), Sir F. Powell's solitary contribution, is a noble representation of a white calm upon a placid, macerous sea so vast that the summits of its far rolling waves, shallow as their hollows are, are half a mile apart. So serene and silent does it seem that one might fancy it was a sea in fairyland. The chiaroscuro of light is charmingly illustrated, and, although the view abounds in reflections exquisitely subdued in tone and tint, there is not a shadow anywhere. —A contrast to this halcyon scene is presented by the turmoil and unrest of Mr. A. Goodwin's St. Hilda's Abbey (34), where the sky just escapes the charge of being pyrotechnic, and the middle-distance is, as usual with Mr. Goodwin, the best part of the picture, for the foreground, although well drawn, is thin and rather flat. Salisbury (101) is much less hackneyed and more refined. Arignon (203) is a happy specimen of Mr. Goodwin's better art; the composition of Corfe Castle (216) is less happy and less well concealed; and on the whole Mont St. Michel (227), in intense moonlight, is the most acceptable. Its loveliness is irresistible, while its firm drawing, softness, vigour, and breadth are so many additional charms. —The Abbey of Mont St. Michel (37) marks a new departure on the part of Mr. T. M. Rooke; it is simple, solid, and accomplished, but lacks airiness. Even better is the West Porch, St. Stephen's, Beauvais (37), remarkable for its breadth, solemn effect, and the just treatment of ancient purplish-grey stone in twilight. —Sir O. W. Brierley never pleased us so much as with his two studies from the Grecian Archipelago, Grecian Island (45) and Island of Samos (46), the solidity of which is almost stereoscopic. There is more poetry in these small things than we expected from the clever draughtsman. —In Mr. A. H. Marsh's The First from the Lifeboat (51) the furiously breaking sea is portrayed with vigour, and so is the rocky coast. A rescuing party has landed at a little quay, their leader extending to the eager charity of the women a child rescued half dead from a wreck; but these figures, though conscientiously designed and carefully drawn, are not quite above the level of respectable conventionalities. —Softly falls the Erentide (57) is Mr. B. Bradley's refined picture of moonrise and the afterglow upon a sloping meadow where lazy calves are already dreaming. There is much in this capital piece which reminds us of Mason, it is so soft, tender, and rich in harmonious colours; and it has a dash of sentiment Mr. Bradley does not often indulge in. —Mr. A. W. Hunt has not, so to say, risen to the level of the subject of Naparn (106), which is the only faint and artificial example we have seen of his. So different from his ordinary work is it that at first sight it seems not very remote from that of Mr. S. P. Jackson. A second look reveals, of course, considerable differences, still the drawing does not grow upon the visitor.

We can praise the following excellent and fresh works by various artists: Mr. W. Collingwood's Shepherd's Warning (70), and his delicate and good Brantmoor (98); Mr. C. N. Hemy's Freshening Breeze (80), and A Head Wind (89), fishing boats at sea, the former being, but for the paintiness of the sea, thoroughly good. A Tower Turret (85) is a capital piece of draughtsmanship and rich, solid colouring by the Earl of Carlisle, whose Algerian Garden (147) is a contrast to its companion, but is not less skilful. No. 97, Tomb of the Emperor Maximilian, by Mr. S. J. Hodson, wants only a little more force to become a finer picture. The same artist's Prout-like Street in Innsbruck (103); Shorham and Brighton (100), by Mr. R. Thorne Waite, and his pretty Haymaking (119), also deserve mention. Mr. C. Haag's Mecca Pilgrims returning to Cairo (109), though mannered and rather artificial, is the best picture of his we remember. Mr. B. Foster's Market at Seville (125) is a little hard and chalky, but the figures are charming in In a Wood, Witley (183). Mr. G. H. Andrews's Fighting at Sea long ago (139) is founded upon another drawing he painted some years ago, and is full of spirit, tragedy, and original impulses in art. The effect is cloudy moonlight. Altogether the burning ships make up a lurid scene. Finally we may enumerate Mr. C. B. Phillip's Spring Evening (148); Mr. E. Walker's Nightfall (162), a stream in a narrow glen; Mr. H. Moore's brilliant sea piece in splendid sunlight, called Off the Hampshire Coast (185), a magnificent sketch of a sea like a sapphire; Pilot Cutter on the Looe-out (194), almost equally fine, but quite different; and Mr. Marks's Joseph (218), a green bird, painted with the force of Veronese.

NOTES FROM NUBIA.

IV.

THE temple-tomb of Gebhel Addeh, hewn in the rock, like many others, some miles south of Abu-Simbel, on the east side of the river, is well preserved, and also covered with various Coptic inscriptions. The access to some of these tombs is very difficult: into one we were hauled by a rope, after our sailors, whose bare feet took a good grip of the rough sandstone, had climbed into it. We copied as much as we could of these inscriptions, as here, if anywhere, the dialect must be that southern speech which is so much more esteemed by Coptic scholars than the Memphitic.

While walking about Fernig in search of inscriptions, we came upon an open-air mosque — a row of small stones laid across and in front of three mud-brick steps. The people kneel along the line of the stones while the Koran is read from the top of the steps. The women's hair was dressed after the manner of the old Egyptian wigs — a quantity of thin plaits encircling the head like a mass of twine, while the shorter fringe across the forehead was coloured or plaited with gold or some yellow substance. The whole headdress was well steeped in castor oil. Among other scratches along the rocks which bound the river, Mr. Sayce found wp, vi, which looked very like a Roman engineer's mark of mileage; but we failed to find any other such mark save on the south cliff of Kaas Ibrim, where I saw XXXXXIV, in well-cut characters, four inches high.

The rock tombs of Farns contain more, and more complete, Coptic inscriptions than all the other shrines we saw, and one of them at least is historical. We copied some twenty of them. The walk across the desert to this spot is diversified by great humps of what seems from a distance to be rock, but is really tamarisk fibre, from which here and there tamarisk shrubs are still sprouting. The size of these masses of fibre is quite extraordinary. In very ancient days there must have been quite a forest here, and we know that even now tamarisk branches are used (in the second cataract I saw an instance myself) for fencing off the force of the stream from the edges of cultivated fields on the river. This is the process called παπαφρυγανισμός in the Petrie papyri, a word which puzzled me long, till I found the practice mentioned in books upon the Indus. Now I found it in Nubia. All the country from Farns to Halfa shows traces of a far larger population, and indeed the level of the land shows that it could be easily irrigated to a width of some miles. But when all the young Nubians go off to service in Cairo and Alexandria, it is not easy to find hands for cultivating a larger area; we must rather anticipate that the sand will enroach still further, and cover much that is now fruitful.

The temple close to Sereh, recently excavated by Capt. Lyons, R.E., proves to be one of Ramses II.'s monuments, in which he depicts on one side all the Syrians, on the other all the Ethiopians, whom he professes to have conquered. It is remarkable that while the string of Ethiopian captives is all of the same nigger type, the Asiatics vary widely both in type and dress, Assyrians being especially remarkable. This is also the case in the analogous series of captives at the entrance to the great temple of Abu-Simbel. Unfortunately the Syrian names written under the figures are here covered with a sort of sand incrustation, as hard as cement, and almost impossible to remove without destroying the hieroglyphics.

We were not permitted by the military authorities at Wadi Halfa, who showed us every kindness, to go south further than Matouqa, a great fort built by Usertesen III. on the west side of the second cataract. The fortification consists of a pair of mud-brick walls set together, each about twelve feet thick, and then about thirty yards outside another encircling fortification. Within, in the centre, is a small shrine. Another great fort seems to be situated on one of the islands facing Matouqa, but we had no means of crossing the stream to examine it. But the temple of Thothmes III. over against the lines at Wadi Halfa is of far more interest. Its Egyptian historical stèle is well known. I have already mentioned the names of Greek mercenaries cut upon one of the pillars in letters five inches high, viz.:—

· ΠΑCΙΜΕ ΝΗC KYPHNAIOC B

and under it

· ΙΑΣΩΝ KYPHNAIOS A.

On the next pillar is lightly scratched

ΑΔΑΜΑΣ,

and on the door jamb a name in archaic Greek characters, but of which I could only read

R.....ΑΑΙΞ.

On the south wall (inside) was a considerable inscription in Carian characters. It is, therefore, certain that Carian and Greek mercenaries came here—the Greek at two different epochs, for the more recent come from the time when C and Z were written indifferently, and that cannot be till the end of the fourth century B.C. But the archaic letters and the Carian writing point, I think, to the same expedition as that commemorated at Abu-Simbel, and make me inclined to think that Kerkis is to be found here. The smaller and ruder temple immediately to the north of this building was, like the shrine at Matouqa, set in the middle of a great fort, at least ninety yards each way, though not forming a regular figure. There is the same plan of a double wall, and both, though now almost hidden in sand, are of enormous size. Round the top of a conical rock, high above these temples, are many old Egyptian graffiti; some were in very ancient hieratic character.

The negative evidences already mentioned against the earlier Ptolemies having conquered and occupied Nubia is corroborated by a number of stelai which I copied at Gizeh and at Alexandria, commemorating the dangers of navigating the Red Sea, and of hunting elephants in the south country on its west coast. There is also among the Petrie papyri a letter which speaks of the elephant transport bound to Berenike going down in the sea, so that we are now justified in assuming that the first four Ptolemies, carrying out the proposed policy of Alexander to reach South Arabia by sea, organized a traffic route on the Red Sea, while it is not till the ninth king (Evergetes II.) that we find any considerable number of monuments built even in Lower Nubia.

J. P. MAHAFFY.

A "SABELLIC" AMULET!

Hotel Transmontano, Naples, April 11, 1894.

AMONG several new Italic inscriptions which I have met with in the last week or two, and which I hope to publish together as soon as I get back, there is one which seems to deserve immediate notice. It is in the so-called "Sabellic" alphabet, which appears in the archaic inscriptions of Picenum (not yet interpreted), Zvetaioff, 'Ital. Inferioris Insc. Dialectica,' 1-8; but I cannot recognize the language as one known to me (not even by dint of reading it backwards). The text is as follows:—

38V8K38V9
V038V0T0T
100A M0ND0

The only point to which doubt attaches in my mind is the sixth sign of line 1. There is an injury to the stone or gold to the left of the letter, and only 7 is absolutely clear.

3, 8, and 9(?) are equally possible. If we leave blanks for this and for the doubtful □ (which in the inscription of Castrignano Pauli, 'Die Veneter,' p. 221, reads as o), the text is:—

dubek.ube
t.t.ube.u n.ma.vi

These letters, then, are written either in the bed of the setting of a large amethyst or on the under side of the stone, in a large gold ring seven-eighths of an inch in diameter, of rough workmanship. The amethyst is an oval half an inch long, and has cut on its upper (i.e., outer) surface a lizard (or crocodile) walking with a small lizard (or crocodile) on its back. I can only conjecture, as an historien in archaeology, that it must be an amulet of some kind: the position of the letters on the under side of the stone shows they are not a seal, though the lizard may be. The ring was found by Signor Salv. Pascale, of Curti, in the necropolis of the ancient Capua, and is at present in his collection. Is it too much to hope that such a unique object may be obtained for the British Museum? It is impossible, I think, to credit a forger with the sign □, and the only recently successful forger in Capua is dead.

R. SKYMOCK CONWAY.

SALES.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS sold on the 21st inst. the following, from various collections. Drawings: Mrs. Allingham, Old Farm, Pinner, 60*l.*; Old Cottages, Pinner, 63*l.* C. Fielding, Minehead, Dunster in the distance, 220*l.* B. Riviere, A Midsummer Night's Dream, 136*l.* Thorne Waite, Hungerford Marsh, 63*l.*; Litlington, Sussex, 72*l.* J. W. Whittaker, Capel Curig, North Wales, 94*l.* Pictures: H. Woods, Venetia Benedetta, 194*l.* H. Moore, Off Poole, Dorsetshire, Purbeck Island in the distance, 215*l.* B. Riviere, Armed Neutrality, 168*l.* C. E. Perugini, Corona, 105*l.*; Katherine, 105*l.* B. W. Leader, A Green Lane, Capel Curig, North Wales, 115*l.* L. Filde, Doubts, 149*l.*; A Daughter of the Lagunes, 309*l.*; A Daughter of the Ghetto, 262*l.* A. Moore, Silver, 558*l.* F. Goodall, An Episode in the Spanish War of Independence, 231*l.*; Mater Purissima, 162*l.* V. Cole, Meeting of the Thame and Isis at Dorchester, 472*l.* Mauve, A Wood Scene, with a peasant and a cart on a road, winter, 131*l.* C. de Groux, Regrets, 110*l.* B. Foster, Bellaggio, 105*l.* B. W. Leader, A Welsh Landscape, 147*l.* G. Morland, Credulous Innocence, and the engraving, by J. Young, 185*l.* Marcus Stone, "Two's Company, Three's None," 451*l.* K. Hulse, Contadini waiting for the Blessing of Pius IX., 472*l.*; Glenorchy and Kilchurn Castle, Loch Awe, 152*l.* P. R.

Morris, The First Communion, 110*l.* P. Graham, Sunshine after Shower, a Highland scene, with cattle, 330*l.* R. Wilson, An Italian Lake Scene, with ruins and figures, 136*l.* J. Constable, Hampstead Heath, 1,837*l.* J. MacWhirter, Corrie Burn, Isle of Arran, 126*l.*

The same auctioneers sold on the 23rd inst. the following from the collection of the late Mr. W. Barlow. Engravings: After J. L. Meissonier, "1807," by Jacquet, 31*l.* After J. Constable, by D. Lucas, The Lock, 47*l.*; The Cornfield, 63*l.*; The Vale of Dedham, 115*l.*; Salisbury Cathedral, 26*l.* After Sir T. Lawrence, by S. Cousins, Master Lambton, 59*l.*; Miss Peel, 27*l.*; Lady Auckland, 32*l.*; Lady Grey and Children, 37*l.*; Lady Dover, 33*l.*; Lady Gower, 42*l.* After Sir J. Reynolds, Mrs. Braddyll, by S. Cousins, 31*l.* After Raoux, The Love Letter, by S. Cousins, 48*l.* After Sir E. Landseer, by T. Landseer, Dignity and Impudence, 40*l.*; Night, and Morning (a pair), 57*l.*; Stag at Bay, 94*l.*; Monarch of the Glen, 72*l.*; by C. G. Lewis, Hunters at Grass, 78*l.* Mezzotints: After Sir J. Reynolds, Garrick 'twixt Tragedy and Comedy, by E. Fisher, 31*l.*; The Marlborough Family, by C. Turner, 27*l.*; Lady Caroline Howard, by V. Green, 53*l.*; Lady Betty Delmé and Children, by V. Green, 99*l.*; Lady Louisa Manners, by V. Green, 141*l.*; Mrs. Beresford, Mrs. Gardiner, and Lady Townshend, as Graces sacrificing to Hymen, by T. Watson, 66*l.*; Miss Sarah Campbell, by V. Green, 89*l.*; Lady Betty Compton, by V. Green, 33*l.*; Mrs. Carnac, by J. R. Smith, 56*l.*; Viscountess Townshend, by V. Green, 107*l.*; Mrs. Tollemache, as Miranda, by J. Jones, 57*l.*; Mrs. Hale, as Euphrosyne, in 'L'Allegro,' by J. Watson, 38*l.*; Mrs. Polham feeding Chickens, by W. Dickinson, 153*l.*; Lady Bamfylde, by T. Watson, 162*l.*; The Countess of Harrington, by V. Green, 130*l.*; The Countess of Salisbury, by V. Green, 189*l.* After Sir T. Lawrence, Miss Farran, by Bartolozzi, 31*l.*

Corot's Souvenir de la Villa Borghese was sold the other day in Paris for 15,200 fr.; his La Vallée Heureuse for 7,600 fr.

Fine-Art Gossip.

THE private view of the Royal Academy will be given on Friday, May 4th, from 10 A.M. till 7 P.M. The public will be admitted on Monday, May 7th next.

THE exhibition of paintings by artists of the schools of Ferrara, Bologna, and the Emilia, now in preparation at the Burlington Fine-Arts Club, will contain many interesting examples, beginning with the work of Marco Zoppo when he was fresh from the school of Squarcione, and ending with the first fruits of the art of Correggio. Among the chief contributors will be Lord Wimborne (whose collection is particularly rich in examples of this school from the Casa Conestabili), Sir Francis Cook, Mr. Salt- ing, Mr. R. H. Benson, Mr. Ludwig Mond, and Mr. Ruston. Prof. Venturi, of Rome, whose recent researches have thrown so much light on the history of this school, will contribute an introduction to the catalogue; and the collection of pictures will be supplemented by one of photographs designed to put before students as complete an illustration of that history as possible.

A NAPOLEON memorial, interesting both in itself and for its history, has just come into the possession of the Junior United Service Club. This is the colossal bust of the conqueror done from life by G. B. Comolli, one of the most distinguished of the followers of Canova, who was Professor of Sculpture at Turin from 1806 to 1814. Comolli had several sittings from the emperor, and designed both the colossal statue intended to decorate the triumphal arch outside Milan, and the bust now in question, which is fully described by General Sir Robert Wilson in his "Private Journal" dated Turin, June 7th, 1814. At that date the changed complexion of affairs had caused the owner of the bust to regard it as a dangerous possession; Sir Robert Wilson no sooner saw it than he bought it. Subsequently he left it by will to the late Admiral Sir Provo Wallia, in whose hands it remained until his death. It has now been presented to the Club by Capt. Bedford Wilson, a grandson of the original purchaser.

An interesting collection of objects discovered at Silchester during the past twelve months has been on view at the rooms of the Society of Antiquaries.

The forty-first annual exhibition of pictures by British and foreign artists at the French Gallery, Pall Mall, will be opened to the public on Monday next. The private view is appointed for to-day (Saturday).

It is reported that the civic authorities at Glasgow have prohibited the exhibition in their municipal gallery of 'The Bath of Psyche,' by Sir F. Leighton; 'Diana and Endymion,' by Mr. Watts; 'A Visit to Esculapius' (probably a repetition of the picture at South Kensington), by Mr. Poynter; and two works by Messrs. Hacker and S. J. Solomon. If such is the case, it is an example of mock modesty of a very crass kind.

MR. CROMBIE, of 5, Taviton Street, Gordon Square, will feel indebted to owners of Reynoldses if they will favour him with the names or titles for insertion in a catalogue of the works of Sir Joshua which he is preparing.

"FEW more interesting documents," writes a Correspondent, "have ever been discovered than that relating to Leonardo da Vinci's 'Vierge aux Rochers,' which has lately been unearthed at Milan, and published separately by Signor Motta in the Archivio Storico Lombardo, and by Signor Frizzoni in the last number of the Archivio Storico dell' Arte. In the first place it throws new light on the position of the Milanese painter Ambrogio Preda or de Preda, hitherto only known by his signed portraits of the Emperor Maximilian at Vienna and of a young man in the Fuller-Maitland collection, the latter of which was one of the principal objects of interest in the recent exhibition at the New Gallery. On the strength of these several other portraits in the manner of Leonardo da Vinci had been assigned to this master by Morelli and his school. The new document exhibits Ambrogio in the light not of a mere distant imitator of Leonardo, but of his intimate associate and partner in art undertakings. It consists of a petition, signed by the two artists in common, to the Duke of Milan requesting his interposition to secure them proper treatment from the confraternity of the 'Scolari della Concezione' of St. Francis at Milan. They allege that having executed for that body an altarpiece in gilt relief work, two pictures of angels, and one of Our Lady (the latter specially defined as the handiwork of 'il dicto fiorentino,' i.e., of Leonardo himself), they have only received payment for the amount they are actually out of pocket on the gilt altar-work, and that the said scholars are trying to defraud them in regard to the rest by valuing the picture of Our Lady at only twenty-five ducats, whereas it is worth a hundred ducats, and an offer has actually been made for it for that sum by a person from outside. They therefore petition either that a fresh valuation may be made on oath by properly qualified experts, or that they may be allowed to take possession of the painting and dispose of it to the bidder of the higher figure from outside. Now that the picture thus in dispute is Leonardo's original 'Vierge aux Rochers' is beyond a doubt. But which version of the picture? that formerly belonging to Francis I. and now in the Louvre, or that which was actually seen by Lomazzo in the chapel of the Conception at the church of San Francesco, and which afterwards passed, through the collections of Lord Lansdowne and Lord Suffolk, into the National Gallery? Those who hold on internal evidence by the originality of the Louvre version will infer from this document that the petitioners were allowed to repurchase themselves of Leonardo's work and sell it to the outside bidder (presumably from France) whom they mention, replacing it in the church of San Francesco by a pupil's copy done at the price the confraternity were willing to pay, which copy would be the version now in the National Gallery. Those, on the other part, who see the true hand of Leonardo in the London version, must conclude that the confraternity were allowed to retain Leonardo's work, presumably on payment of the full demand, and that a copy was made to be sent to France. Unluckily no answer to or judgment on the petition is preserved to decide the point. I understand that the question is to be fully discussed in an article by Dr. J. P. Richter in the forthcoming number of the Art Journal."

A HIGHLY important discovery is announced from Dahshûr by M. de Morgan, the Director of the Egyptian Museum at Ghizeh. Not far from the Pyramid at Dahshûr, to the north, this gentleman has found a royal tomb containing the remains of a new king, probably of the thirteenth dynasty, called Heru-âu-Râ; the sarcophagus chamber was found at a depth of 32 ft. Like so many fine tombs of this period, it was ravished in ancient days, but the mummy, though in a bad state of preservation, has been found intact, together with the wooden sarcophagus decorated with plates of gold inscribed with the royal cartouches and titles, and a number of gilded paste ornaments. Near the sarcophagus was found a gilded wooden shrine, also inscribed with the royal cartouches and inscriptions, and in it a gilded ebony statue of the king about 4 ft. 8 in. high. Two broken "Canopic" vases, an alabaster table of offerings inscribed with lengthy religious texts and the king's names, and a very large number of smaller objects complete the "find." M. de Morgan has reason to believe that he is on the eve of finding the tombs of the kings who built the brick pyramids at Dahshûr, and he is pressing on the work with renewed activity. It is early to decide where this new king is to be placed, but it is pretty certain that we must consider him to belong to the early part of the period of the thirteenth dynasty, when names of the kind were in use; as many copies of the name have been found, there can be no doubt about the accuracy of the reading of the signs. Egyptologists will anxiously await news of M. de Morgan's further discoveries in this new field.

ONE of the most powerful and attractive pictures in the Salon, which will be opened to the public, as usual, on the 1st of May, is M. Clairin's 'La dernière Messe.' M. P. L. Couturier contributes 'Un Coin de Basse-Cour'; M. Moreau de Tours 'Obsession.' M. Fremiet's statue of Meissonier will figure in the garden; it is at present in plaster.

PROF. D. H. MÜLLER, of Vienna, will publish shortly in the Denkschriften of the Royal Academy of Sciences of Vienna a lengthy communication upon some Himyaritic and Ethiopic inscriptions in Abyssinia, printed from "squeezes" made at Aksum, Yeha, and other places by Mr. J. T. Bent in 1892. A few of these texts supply new facts for the ancient history of Abyssinia, and the copies of those which have before been published may now be emended in many important particulars. In addition to the complete texts printed in Oriental characters, Prof. Müller will give four photographic copies of the "squeezes," and a table showing the development of the Ethiopic alphabet. The work will be entitled 'Epigraphische Denkmäler aus Abessinien.'

THIS season will be an active one for exploration in Asia Minor. The excavations are being renewed for the German Government at Hisarlik in the Troad, the Turkish Government requiring that the objects discovered shall be placed at its disposal, the German Government taking casts. Herr Busson, an eminent archaeologist of Leipzig University, has already arrived in Smyrna, and proceeded to the interior. M. Jacques Boni, Inspector of Monuments in Italy, is engaged on a mission to the European and Asiatic provinces of Turkey and to Greece. In Albania, in repairing the old mosque at Elbassan, a great mass of old Mussulman and Austrian coins have been found.

PROF. HALBHERR writes to us from Crete:—"Since my last 'Notes from Italy' were penned (Athen. No. 3465) a postscript has become necessary. The commission appointed by the Ministry of Public Instruction to examine the site where it was said a new Vetulonia had been discovered has concluded that there are no traces there of a real city, but only of some ancient building, perhaps a temple. There are, however, some archaeologists who, relying on the texts of certain authors, maintain that the site of the Vetulonia of historic times was more in the direction of Massa Maritima, while that of the archaic period would remain identified with the acropolis excavated by Cav. Falchi."

DURING a recent excavation in the Römerkastell at Nieder-Bieber, near Neuwied on the Rhine, a bronze bust of the Emperor Gordian (it is not said which of the Gordians) was unearthed. The bust, which is larger than life size, is a splendid piece of work, and will be placed in the Provinzial-Museum at Bonn.

THE first lines of the Psean which we mentioned last week as discovered at Delphi run as follows:—

Πυθίαν ιερόκτινον ναίων Δελφῶν ἀμφὶ πέτρῃ δαί θεοποιόμαντιν ἱδραν, ἵημι Παιάν,
Ἄπολλον, Κοῖον τε κόρας
Λατοῖς στήθεσσι δάμαλ' ἀγαλμα καὶ
Ζηνὸς ἐπίστυον, μακάρον βουλαῖς, ὧ ἱε Παιάν.

It was found in the treasury of the Athenians. "The characters," says Prof. Lambros, "belong to the last three centuries before the birth of Christ; a more precise date Prof. Weil declines to commit himself to. The text contains several new words which are not to be found in the dictionaries: ιερόκτινος, θεοποιόμαντις, χλωρότομος, αἰπίσιος, ἐξαβρίνυ. On this list of Prof. Weil's I may be allowed to remark that Hermann introduced εἰσέστυος into the text of Sophocles; and it occurs in the scholia to Joannes Scholasticus (Migne, 'Patrol. Gr.,' lxxviii., 676b)."

A CORRESPONDENT writes:—

"The old style of carpet design in Turkey is being stimulated by the demand for restoration of the mosques, which throughout the country are profiting from the improved administration of the revenues by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. Thus the former carpets of large size are being replaced in the same designs, and the designers in the Smyrna district belong to the ecclesiastical body, following ancient traditions. Presents of carpets are also yearly made to Mekka and other holy places. Some branches of art have, however, passed into the hands of Armenians, working under Italian inspirations."

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

QUEEN'S HALL.—Philharmonic Concerts.
ST. JAMES'S HALL.—Stock Exchange Orchestral Society.

A LARGE audience attended the third concert for the present season of the Philharmonic Society, which took place on Thursday last week, the promised reappearance of M. Sapellnikoff probably constituting the principal attraction. The Russian pianist was heard to great advantage in Schumann's Concerto, although his interpretation of this masterpiece was, in some respects, widely divergent from the traditional reading of Madame Schumann and her most gifted pupils. Though by no means too vigorous or wanting in delicacy, it was more noteworthy for intellectuality than dreamy tenderness. M. Sapellnikoff's manipulation was superb, and the audience, recognizing the highly praiseworthy features in his performance, recalled him several times, and at last exacted an encore, the response to the demand being one of Liszt's Rhapsodies. Dr. Hubert Parry's Overture in A minor, 'To an Unwritten Tragedy,' was first performed at the Worcester Festival on September 13th last year, and was then fully described (Athen. No. 3439). Further acquaintance only serves to confirm the first impression as to its virility and musicianly qualities generally. What the composer seeks to convey by his music we do not know, nor is it a matter of much consequence; enough that the themes are striking individually and well contrasted, while their treatment shows the hand of a consummate musician. Another novelty at these concerts was Berlioz's early Overture to 'King Lear,' in which all the passion and eccentricity of the young French composer's nature are fully illustrated. The symphony was Beethoven's in B flat, No. 4, a fine rendering of which was secured under the direction of Dr. A. C. Mackenzie. Madame Amy Sherwin, who was to have been the vocalist of the evening, could not appear, but at the last moment Miss Ella Russell kindly consented to take her place, and sang with much expression 'Deh! vieni,' from Mozart's 'Le Nozze di Figaro.'

A most interesting, but much too lengthy programme was offered by the admirable amateur orchestral and vocal society associated with the Stock Exchange at its third subscription concert of the present season on Tuesday evening. Two overtures were heard for the first time in London, one being that to the late Sir Robert Stewart's cantata 'The Eve of St. John.' A melancholy interest attached to this, as the composer had promised to come from Dublin to conduct it. The cantata itself was performed at the Crystal Palace a few years ago. Its overture is a picturesque, if not particularly original piece, and is effectively scored. The other work is from the pen of that talented young musician Mr. Learmont Drysdale, and is entitled 'Herondale,' after a Lowland glen in the Moorfoot Hills. The themes are extremely bright and appropriately Scottish in character, although the working out is a little crude, and would bear compression, and the orchestration might be more varied, too much of the work being given to the violins. Mr. Drysdale, however, should persevere, for he has ability beyond the average. Mr. George Kitchen's fine body of players rendered a large measure of justice to Mozart's Symphony in E flat and a selection from Sir Arthur Sullivan's incidental music to 'The Tempest.' The performance of Beethoven's Pianoforte Concerto in C minor by Miss E. Torrens-Johnson was clear, correct, and refined, and the young pianist introduced a beautiful cadenza by Madame Schumann. Mlle. Jeanne Ystella, a light and well-trained soprano, made a favourable impression in airs by Rossini and Saint-Saëns. The male-voice choir was admirable in some glees and part-songs, but Schubert's fine though difficult 'Song of the Spirits over the Waters' scarcely received justice, the intonation being very faulty at times.

Musical Society.

THE Royal Academy of Music has just completed the seventy-first year of its existence, the first lessons having been given on March 24th, 1823. In order to celebrate the event a special concert will be given at the Queen's Hall on May 10th. The programme will be made up of compositions by past students of the institution, including such eminent musicians as Sterndale Bennett, Mr. F. Corder, Mr. Edward German, Sir George Macfarren, Dr. A. C. Mackenzie, and Sir Arthur Sullivan, while all the performers will be either past or present pupils. Among those whose offers have already been accepted are Mrs. Mary Davies, Madame Clara Samuelli, Miss Hilda Wilson, Miss Zimmermann, and Messrs. Arthur Oswald, John Radeliffe, and W. Shakespeare. The proceeds of the concert will be devoted to a fund for reducing the fees of poor and deserving students.

THE first issue of the prospectus relative to the next triennial Chester Festival is to hand. The celebration will take place on July 25th, 26th, and 27th, but will be prefaced by special services in the cathedral on Sunday, the 22nd. Mendelssohn's 'Hymn of Praise' being announced to be rendered in the evening. The principal features of the festival programme are Mendelssohn's 'Elijah' and 'Hear my Prayer,' Beethoven's C Minor Symphony, Verdi's Requiem, Cherubini's Mass in D, Schubert's Symphony in C, No. 9, Handel's 'Messiah,' Dr. Hubert Parry's 'Judith,' and a new sacred cantata, 'The Soul's Forgiveness,' by Dr. F. J. Sawyer. These performances will take place in the cathedral, but there will be a concert in the music hall on Thursday evening, the 26th, at which a new Symphony in E, specially composed for the festival by Dr. J. C. Bridge, the conductor, and Sullivan's 'Golden Legend' will be presented. The principal vocalists engaged are Mesdames Anna Williams, Antoinette Trebelli, Medora Henson, Marian McKenzie, and Clara Butt, and Messrs. Lloyd, Iver McKay, Andrew Black, and Bantock Pierpoint.

THE first of a brief series of Saturday afternoon orchestral and choral performances at the Queen's Hall was given last week, under the direction of Mr. Robert Newman and with Mr. F. H. Cowen as conductor. 'The Golden Legend' was performed, and Sir Arthur Sullivan's favourite cantata received, on the whole, a worthy interpretation, although the newly formed choir might have sung with more crispness and with clearer enunciation of the words. As the soloists, Miss Ella Russell, Miss Greta Williams, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. John Sandbrook, and Mr. Watkin Mills were entirely satisfactory.

THE final concert of the regular series at the Crystal Palace took place last Saturday with a familiar programme. Beethoven's Symphony in C minor, Dr. A. C. Mackenzie's picturesque Overture to 'Twelfth Night,' and Wagner's to 'Tannhäuser' were the orchestral items; and a very brilliant and powerful rendering of Liszt's Pianoforte Concerto in E flat was afforded by Madame Sophie Menter, the work of the Weimar virtuoso suiting her to a nicety. Making allowance for pardonable nervousness, Miss Jessie Huddleston may be complimented on her first appearance at these concerts, as she sang airs by Mozart and Goring Thomas with sweetness and expression. Mr. Mann's well-earned benefit concert takes place this (Saturday) afternoon.

THE memorial to the late Madame Jenny Lind in Poets' Corner at Westminster Abbey was unveiled by Princess Christian on Friday morning last week. A considerable number of musicians were present, and the proceedings were impressive.

PROF. BRIDGE has delivered his Easter term musical lectures in connexion with Gresham College at the City of London School during the past week. The subjects were: 'Pelham Humfrey and his Music'; 'On the Road to the String Quartet,' illustrating old German, French, and Italian composers; and Mace's work, 'Musick's Monument.'

ON Wednesday evening there were two concerts by amateur orchestral societies. The older association, which styles itself the "Royal," gave its third performance for the present season at the Queen's Hall. The programme, curiously enough, did not contain a symphony, the items for orchestra alone being the Prelude to 'Lohengrin,' which Mr. George Mount took at an unusually quick pace; Sterndale Bennett's overture 'Paradise and the Peri,' Mr. Mount's dainty little Pizzicato for strings, and the Overture to 'William Tell.' A further selection from Rossini's opera was well rendered by Mlle. Biancoli, Miss Minnie Price, Mr. Iver McKay, Mr. John Sandbrook, Mr. A. J. Puttick, and the Queen's Hall Choral Society. The powerful and spirited style of Madame Sophie Menter was displayed to advantage in Chopin's Andante Spianato and Polonaise Brillante in E flat, Op. 22.

FORMAL record can alone be made concerning the Westminster Orchestral Society's concert. The programme included Mozart's Symphony in A minor, Schubert's 'Rosamunde' Overture, a Concert Overture in C minor by Mr. A. Barclay Jones, and Henselt's enormously difficult Pianoforte Concerto.

MR. ALFRED J. EYRE, who has been organist at the Crystal Palace for the last fourteen years, has just recovered from a serious illness, the result, it is said, of overwork. He has, therefore, placed his resignation as organist in the hands of the directors. Mr. Walter W. Hedgcock has been appointed organist and accompanist in the place of Mr. Eyre, and will begin his duties on Whit Monday, May 14th.

MISS ELLA RUSSELL has been engaged to sing on the rehearsal and selection days of the Handel Festival at the Crystal Palace in the place of Miss Emma Juch, who will be unable to come to England in June to fulfil her engagement.

MR. CECIL SHARP announces a series of ten lectures on Wagner at the Hampstead Conservatoire on Friday afternoons, commencing next week. The course will embrace comments on all the music dramas, the literary works, and the general tendencies of the post-composer's theories and art works.

ACCORDING to returns referring to State-aided schools in England and Wales in 1892, the staff notation was used in 2,413, and the tonic sol-fa in 17,503 schools. Ten years ago 18,593 schools taught singing by ear; in 1893 only 9,655. The total grant for music in 1892 was 183,480*l.* as against 114,068*l.* in 1884.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

- | | |
|------|---|
| Mov. | Signor Kruderi's Concert, 3, St. James's Hall. |
| Mov. | Madame Hopper Menter's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Princess's Hall. |
| Mov. | Miss Mathilde Verne and Miss Emma's Piano and Violin Recital, 3, St. James's Hall. |
| Mov. | Cardinal Vaughan's Lecture and Concert, 8, St. James's Hall. |
| Mov. | Signor Todorov's Concert, 8, Princess's Hall. |
| Mov. | Mr. F. Dawson's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall. |
| Mov. | Miss K. Waters and Miss A. V. Mable's Orchestral Concert, 8, St. James's Hall. |
| Mov. | Madame Sophie Menter's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall. |
| Mov. | Philharmonic Concert, 8, Queen's Hall. |
| Mov. | Gluck's 'Orpheus,' 2, Drury Lane Theatre. |
| Mov. | Miss Carrie Townshend's Concert, 3, Queen's Hall. |
| Mov. | Nativity of Universal Philanthropy's Concert, 8, Queen's Hall. |
| Mov. | The Laureate Choir Concert, 8, St. James's Hall. |
| Mov. | Miss Clara Oswald's Pianoforte Recital, 8, St. James's Hall. |
| Mov. | Miss Pauline Barrett's Recital, 8, Prince of Wales's Club. |
| Mov. | Musical Players' Amateur Orchestral Society's Concert, 8, 30, Queen's Hall. |
| Mov. | Mr. Cecil Sharp's First Wagner Lecture, 8, Hampstead Conservatoire. |
| Mov. | Royal Engineers' Band Concert, 3, Queen's Hall. |
| Mov. | Herr Josef Hofmann's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall. |
| Mov. | Wagner Concert, 3, Queen's Hall. |
| Mov. | Mr. W. H. Wing's Concert in aid of the Great Northern Central Hospital, 3, Princess's Hall. |
| Mov. | Miss Anna Knecher's Concert, 8, Queen's Hall. |

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

AVENUE.—'Arms and the Man,' a Play in Three Acts. By Bernard Shaw.

HAYMARKET.—'A Bunch of Violets,' a Four-Act Play of Modern Life, founded on 'Montjoye.' By Sydney Grundy.

MR. BERNARD SHAW may claim to have invented a drama which Polonius, with his far-reaching capacity for classification, would have hesitated to qualify. In the spirit of banter in which the whole is conceived and executed he describes it as a romantic comedy, and in an epilogue, disguised as a speech, he spoke of it as intended for tragedy. It is, in fact, farce with a leaven of satire, and more than a suspicion of burlesque. Whatever may be its genre, it is at least not the genre ennuyeux. It was received with acclamation by an audience delighted, tickled, and amused. Some offence was bred. There were those present who resented its impertinences and saucinesses. This is to take the piece in the wrong spirit. Saucy and impertinent it intentionally and, so to speak, avowedly is. Its spirit is as mocking as that of Mr. Gilbert's 'Engaged,' and the confidential servant who encourages his sweetheart to marry her master instead of himself, since there will then be more to be made out of her, belongs to the same family as Mr. Gilbert's hero, who offers to the lady of his choice any form of service short of pecuniary disbursement. Sympathy is thrown to the winds, moral responsibility even is put on one side, and the whole is idle, brilliant, fantastic. Mr. Shaw's characters are the shallowest impostors ever seen. His Bulgarian hero has won a battle by leading, in defiance of the rules of war, a charge of cavalry against a battery of Maxim guns. He none the less knows himself to be a coward. His heroine has the prettiest possible affectations of superiority and worth. Her looks have the limpidity of conscious purity, and her manners the repose that stamps the caste of Petkoff, owners of an electrical bell and of the only private library in Bulgaria. She, too, is a transparent humbug to herself, and when her statement that she has only told two lies in her life is received with ungallant incredulity by a somewhat matter-of-fact lover, she only asks him how he came to find her out. Others have believed her, and why not he? Whatever its name, Serbian or Bulgarian, this world is part of the Palace of Truth, or, if you will, the domain of fairyland. The first act, in which a Swiss mercenary in the pay of Serbia, hotly pursued by the Bulgarians, takes refuge in the bedroom of a Bulgarian matron, by whom he is protected, is pretty and almost tender. When, peace having been declared, and prisoners having been exchanged, the fugitive officer returns and is accepted as a guest in the house of which, unconsciously to its proprietor, he has been a previous inmate, the whole goes off into burlesque. Mr. Shaw's spitting is in the main gently and cleverly done. Once only, when he paused to preach, did he come to grief. His piece produced incessant manifestations of amusement, and might well obtain an enduring success. It owed much to a fascinating performance by Miss Alma Murray of the heroine. Mr. Yorke Stephens and Mr. Bernard Gould were also seen to advantage.

Mr. Grundy's second adaptation of 'Montjoye' is wholly different from and more shapely than the first. Out of the curious, perverse, and ill-constructed piece of M. Feuillet, Mr. Grundy has obtained a not very probable, but fairly efficient melodrama. Not wholly successful is the manner in which the difficulties in suiting the original to English views have been faced. The relations between Montjoye and the mother of his children are frankly unconventional. She is his mistress, and the children are legally not his. Mr. Grundy's hero meanwhile has committed bigamy, and the woman who succeeds in disturbing his domestic relations has the best right to do so, seeing that she is his wife. She has herself contracted second nuptials, and the main story of the play deals with the attempt of the husband number one, with her aid, to swindle husband number two. This exemplary scheme miscarries. The wife is jealous of her daughter. One still remembers in M. Feuillet's piece the resentment of M. Lafont as Montjoye—one of that admirable actor's greatest parts—when the mistress seeks to obtain the jewels of the girl, and is ordered by her lover out of his house. In Mr. Grundy's piece the heroine tries fruitlessly to seize the bunch of violets which is the child's daily present to her father. Unwilling to undergo defeat, she makes wild offers until practically the father stands between the violets and his fate. Let him yield these, and peace, prosperity, and success (all of the most dishonouring kind) are his; keep them, and ruin, despair, and death are their price. He keeps them and commits suicide. Pretty enough may be the idea of this. It is, however, forced and fantastic. A character such as Mr. Grundy has depicted is not likely to be so squeamish. Wholly unlike the Montjoye of M. Feuillet is Sir Philip Marchant. He is a swindler of the most atrocious and transparent type, seeking to sell to his dupe a diamond mine which has no existence, and under the veil of sanctimony committing the most pitiful of crimes. He is unsuccessful, moreover, checked by his underlings, and with all the appearance of affluence is, in fact, at the last gasp. For a character such as this there is, of course, no redemption. The frankly ridiculous termination of 'Montjoye' is accordingly rejected, and the hero falls a victim to his blunders as much as to his crimes. Inconsistent as it is, the character furnishes Mr. Tree with a part in which his admirable method is seen to advantage. A riper, more thoughtful, or more artistic piece of acting has rarely been witnessed. Mrs. Tree plays with artistic conscientiousness and admirable subtlety one of the most cat-like and repellent of adventuresses. A performance admirable in ensemble is supplied by Miss Lily Hanbury, Mr. Nutcombe Gould, Mr. Lionel Brough, and other actors.

Dramatic Gossip.

We ought to have chronicled before now the death of Count F. A. von Schack, the author of the celebrated 'Geschichte der dramatischen Literatur in Spanien.' Ticknor met him in Madrid, and described him as a simple-minded German who toiled like a dog. His three volumes remain to the present day unsurpassed and indispensable to the student of the drama, who owes their author a deep debt of gratitude. Besides being an historian of the drama, Schack was himself a dramatist and a poet. He was a great translator too, and wrote an excellent account of the 'Poesie und Kunst der Araber in Spanien und Sicilien.' For nearly forty years past he had lived at Munich, where he formed a picture gallery, which became one of the sights of the capital. Schack used to complain of German indifference to literature, and say that had he been an Englishman he would have enjoyed a high reputation.

'GENTLEMAN JACK' is the title of a melodrama in which Mr. James J. Corbett, known as a prizefighter, made his appearance on Saturday last at Drury Lane. It is to the credit of two English actresses that they declined to take part in the entertainment. Neither piece nor performance calls for comment.

A VARIETY entertainment given at the Gaiety on Monday afternoon for the benefit of Mr. Meyer Lutz was supported by Mr. Toole, Mr. Lionel Brough, Mr. Arthur Williams, and many other comedians. The occasion was remarkable inasmuch as it celebrated the twenty-fifth year of union, or the silver wedding, between the conductor and the theatre. Such an occasion is naturally rare, since nowhere are the uncertainty of life and the mutability of fortune illustrated so clearly as on the stage.

'HER DEAREST FOE,' an adaptation of Mrs. Alexander's novel, is promised at the Criterion at an afternoon representation on Wednesday next.

MR. CHELTNAM'S 'Charming Mrs. Gaythorne,' produced on Thursday afternoon in last week at the Criterion Theatre, is a piece of the class of 'The Scrap of Paper' ('Les Pattes de Mouche'). It is more than a little out of date, and was received with no special favour.

'A SOCIETY BUTTERFLY' is the title finally adopted for the forthcoming novelty at the Opéra Comique.

THE COURT Theatre will shortly reopen with a version by Mr. Clement Scott of 'Denise,' in which Miss Olga Nethersole will play the heroine.

MISCELLANEA

Wafer-stamps.—It must come as a surprise to many of your readers to learn that the term "wafer-stamp" is something new and strange. Will you allow me, then, to quote an instance of the use of the term by Dickens, some fifty years ago, in his 'Martin Chuzzlewit,' chap. xxxix., when Tom Pinch and John Westlock call on Mr. Fips at his office in Austin Friars? In a pause in the conversation we are there told that Mr. Fips "took up the wafer-stamp, and began stamping capital F's all over his legs"; that he took off "a very deep impression of the wafer-stamp upon the calf of his left leg"; and that he put down "the wafer-stamp." When the great 'New English Dictionary' gets to the letter W, I doubt not that our great-grandchildren will find there many other instances quoted of the use of this term.

P. A. DANIEL.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—T. G. O.—C. H. R.—W. G. B.—A. G.—J. S.—J. P.—received.
No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION BY POST.
To all parts of the United Kingdom.

For Twelve Months...	15	0
For Six Months...	7	6
For all Countries within the Postal Union.
For Twelve Months...	18	0
For Six Months...	9	0

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S NEW NOVEL.

NOTICE.—The FOURTH EDITION of 'MARCELLA,' 3 vols., by Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD, is now ready at all the Libraries.

From the NATURALIST REVIEW.—"Marcella" is undoubtedly stronger in interest than anything the author has written.....The novel comprises scenes of striking power, is skilfully developed, and strong in the qualities of observation and characterisation."

From the MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.—"Artistically, beyond all dispute, her best novel. We are safe in predicting for 'Marcella' a popularity which will both command and outlast the season of its first appearance."

MARCELLA.BY
Mrs. HUMPHRY
WARD.MARCELLA.BY
Mrs. HUMPHRY
WARD.

From the CHRISTIAN WORLD.—"Marcella" is worthy of a great reputation, and will be read hereafter as a living picture, boldly outlined and vividly coloured, of a complex, a difficult, but withal a profoundly interesting age."

From the SPEAKER.—"Of the thousand good things it contains we have no space to speak. Mrs. Ward with a master-hand paints for us the very movement of the time. It is a big book as we have said, a great book, and one to be enjoyed by all. It cannot fail to add materially to an already brilliant reputation."

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE SLAVE OF THE LAMP.'

Ready this day at all the Libraries, in 3 vols. post 8vo.

WITH EDGED TOOLS.

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN,
Author of 'The Slave of the Lamp,' &c.NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION OF HON. EMILY
LAWLESS'S 'GRANIA.'

READY THIS DAY, crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

GRANIA: the Story of an Island. By the Hon.
EMILY LAWLESS, Author of 'Hurribah,' 'With Essex in Ireland,' &c.

NEW ONE-VOLUME NOVEL.

EARLY IN MAY, crown 8vo. 6s.

STANHOPE of CHESTER: a Mystery. By
PERCY ANDREAR.NEW VOLS. OF SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S POPULAR
2s. AND 2s. 6d. SERIES.IN THE PRESS.
Fcap. 8vo. boards, pictorial cover, 2s. each; or limp red cloth, 2s. 6d. each.FROM ONE GENERATION to ANOTHER.
By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN, Author of 'The Slave of the Lamp,' &c.DARK: a Tale of the Down Country. By Mrs.
STEPHEN BATSON.CHEAP POPULAR EDITION OF MRS. HUMPHRY
WARD'S 'DAVID GRIEVE.'

On MONDAY NEXT, crown 8vo. limp cloth, 2s. 6d.

The HISTORY of DAVID GRIEVE. By Mrs.
HUMPHRY WARD, Author of 'Robert Elanore,' &c.

READY THIS DAY, Sixpence (New Series), No. 131.

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE for MAY, containing MATTHEW AUSTIN, by W. E. Norris. Chaps. 17-20.—THE CARNARVON PENINSULA.—CHARACTER NOTH.—THE CHILD.—HACHISCH EATING.—
COLOUR-SERGEANT RHODES.—TOFT and OMOFT.—RAMFABAS RABBITS
RAIN-CLOUD.—THE LAST GOVERNOR of the BASTILLE.—WITH EDGED TOOLS. Chaps. 40-42.NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'WHERE TOWN AND COUNTRY MEET.'

EARLY IN MAY, 2 vols. post 8vo.

RICHARD DARE. By Mrs. ALFRED BALDWIN,
Author of 'The Story of a Marriage,' 'Where Town and Country Meet,' &c.A Short History of the Renaissance in Italy.
Taken from the Works of John Addington Symonds. By Lieut. Col.
ALFRED FRANKON. With a Most Engraving of a recent Portrait of Mr Symonds. Demy 8vo 12s. 6d.Voltaire's Visit to England, 1726-1729. By ARCHIBALD BALLANTYNE. Crown 8vo 5s. 6d.The Life and Letters of Robert Browning.
By Mrs. AUSTERLAND ORR. With Portrait and Steel Engraving of Mr Browning's Study in De Vere Gardens. Second Edition.
Crown 8vo 12s. 6d.A Selection from the Poetry of Elizabeth
BARRETT BROWNING. First and Second Series. Crown 8vo
2s. 6d. each.A Selection from the Poetical Works of ROBERT BROWNING. First and Second Series. Crown 8vo.
2s. 6d. each.Shakespeare's Predecessors in the English DRAMA. By JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS. Demy 8vo 18s.Shakespeare Commentaries. By Dr. G. G.
GEHVINUS, Professor at Heidelberg. Translated, under the Author's superintendence, by F. R. H. MINTY. With a Preface by J. FURNIVALL. Fifth Edition. 8vo 16s.An Agnostic's Apology, and other Essays. By LESLIE STEPHEN. Large crown 8vo 10s. 6d.Life of Henry Fawcett. By LESLIE STEPHEN.
With 2 Steel Portraits. Fifth Edition. Large crown 8vo 12s. 6d.The White Company. By A. CONAN DOYLE,
Author of 'Misth Carlo,' &c. Eleventh Edition. Crown 8vo 6s.Hours in a Library. By LESLIE STEPHEN.
New, Revised, Rearranged, and Cheaper Edition, with Additional Chapters. 3 vols. crown 8vo 6s. each.All the Year with Nature. By P. ANDERSON
GRAHAM. Crown 8vo 1s.Life of Frank Buckland. By his Brother-in-Law, GEORGE C. POMFAR, Editor of 'Notes and Jottings from Animal Life' with a Portrait. Crown 8vo 6s., gilt edges, 6s.Notes and Jottings from Animal Life. By the late FRANK BUCKLAND. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo 3s., gilt edges, 6s.The Gamekeeper at Home. By RICHARD JEFFERIES. New Edition, with all the Illustrations of the former Edition. Crown 8vo 6s.Wild Life in a Southern County. By RICHARD JEFFERIES. Crown 8vo 6s.The Amateur Poacher. By RICHARD JEFFERIES.
Crown 8vo 1s.Woodland, Moor, and Stream: being the Notes of a Naturalist. Edited by J. A. OWEN. Second Edition. Crown 8vo 1s.Forest Tithes; and other Studies from Nature.
By the Author of 'Woodland, Moor, and Stream,' &c. Edited by J. A. OWEN. Crown 8vo 5s.Last Essays on Church and Religion. By MATTHEW ARNOLD. With a Preface. Crown 8vo 7s.Mixed Essays. By MATTHEW ARNOLD. Second Edition. Crown 8vo 9s.Passages from the Prose Writings of Matthew ARNOLD. Crown 8vo 1s. 6d.Literature and Dogma: an Essay towards a better Apprehension of the Bible. By MATTHEW ARNOLD.
Popular Edition, with a New Preface. Crown 8vo 2s. 6d.God and the Bible: a Sequel to 'Literature and Dogma.' By MATTHEW ARNOLD. Popular Edition, with a Preface. Crown 8vo 2s. 6d.St. Paul and Protestantism; with other Essays.
By MATTHEW ARNOLD. Popular Edition, with a New Preface.
Crown 8vo 2s. 6d.Culture and Anarchy: an Essay in Political and Social Criticism. By MATTHEW ARNOLD. Popular Edition.
Crown 8vo 2s. 6d.Irish Essays, and Others. By MATTHEW ARNOLD. Popular Edition. Crown 8vo 2s. 6d.On the Study of Celtic Literature. By MATTHEW ARNOLD. Popular Edition. Crown 8vo 2s. 6d.

* * Messrs. SMITH, ELDER & CO. will be happy to forward, post free on application, a CATALOGUE of their PUBLICATIONS, containing particulars of Works by:—

W. M. Thackeray.
Robert Browning.
Mrs. Browning.
John Addington Symonds.
Mrs. Humphry Ward.
Mrs. Oliphant.
Sir Wm. Muir, K.C.S.I.

Matthew Arnold.
Leslie Stephen.
Miss Thackeray.
Sir A. Helps. | G. H. Lewes.
The Author of 'Molly Bawn.'
The Author of 'John Herring.'
W. E. Norris.

James Payn.
H. Rider Haggard.
Stanley J. Weyman.
Henry Seton Merriman.
Hon. Emily Lawless.
George Gissing.
Hamilton Aubrey.

Anthony Trollope.
Holmes Lee.
Mrs. Gaskell.
The Brontë Sisters.
The Author of 'The Gamekeeper at Home.'
And other Popular Writers.

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

AMONG THE MOORS: Sketches of Oriental Life.

By G. MONTBARD,
Author of 'In Egypt,' &c.

Superbly Illustrated. Royal 8vo. cloth, 16s.

LARGE-PAPER EDITION, strictly limited to 100 Copies, each numbered and signed by the Author, printed on Japanese Vellum, THREE GUINEAS each, net.

M. Montbard, whose skill as an artist has been rendered familiar to every one through the pages of the Illustrated London News, recently explored the highways and byways of Morocco, and made himself acquainted with the manners and customs of the natives; the characteristics of the scenery, the architecture of the cities and mosques, and every aspect of the social life of the people in town and country.

DANTE G. ROSSETTI

AND THE

PRE-RAPHAELITE MOVEMENT

Viewed in Relation to the Problems, Tendencies, and Purposes of Modern English Art.

By Mrs. J. W. WOOD.

With 8 Photogravure Reproductions of Rossetti's Paintings. 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.

The book contains some unpublished reminiscences of Rossetti's student days and career in art, and describes the Founding of the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood and its long conflict with academic traditions.

"The best book yet written on Rossetti and the Pre-Raphaelites. Besides being a work of philosophical value, the book is a most attractive record of comradeship, inspired by the noblest and most generous ideals of youth. The illustrations from some of Rossetti's greatest paintings are beautifully executed. In her treatment of the tragically pathetic incidents in Rossetti's life Mrs. Wood displays the greatest tact and delicacy."—Daily News.

NEW NOVELS AND STORIES.

SARAH: a Survival. By Sydney CHRISTIAN, Author of 'Lydia.' 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth. (Next week.)

A BAIREUTH PILGRIMAGE. By EDITH E. CUTHELL. 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth. (In a few days.)

THE STORY OF MY TWO WIVES. By ONE of their HUSBANDS. Crown 8vo. cloth. (Just ready.)

FIRE ISLAND. By George MANVILLE FENN, Author of 'The Black Bar.' 1 vol. crown 8vo. Illustrated, cloth. (In a few days.)

CHEAP EDITIONS AT ALL BOOKSELLERS.

Uniform crown 8vo. Volumes, bound in cloth, HALF-A-CROWN each.

MARY ANERLEY. By R. D. BLACKMORE.

A STRANGE VOYAGE. By W. CLARK RUSSELL.

MARY MARSTON. By George MAC DONALD.

NOW READY, price One Shilling, SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE, MAY NUMBER.

Contents.

A CORNER in a MARKET. Painted by Jules Breton. Philip Gilbert Hamerton (Pencil-point).
SOME KINDESS of MOUNTAIN-REILING, by a CASTAL AMATEUR. Edwin Lord Weeks. Illustrations by the Author.
JOHN MARSH, MOUNTAIN-REILING. Chaps. 20-24. George W. Cable. (Begin in January number—to be continued.)
THE PROVINCIALS. Sketches of American Types. Octave Thanet. Illustrated.
A PRINCE of CERE: a Story of Monte Carlo. Chaps. 4 & 5. William Henry Bishop. (To be concluded in June.)
THE AMERICAN CONGO. John O. Hooke. Captain U.S.A. Illustrations from drawings made in the Congo region by Gilbert Gaul.
WOMAN-LINGERS as a PHOTOGRAPH. Allan Garrod.
AFRODITE. Charles G. D. Roberts.
A NEW PORTRAIT of FRANKLIN. Paul Leicester Ford. Illustration from a recently discovered terra-cotta medallion.
WORKING-GIRLS CLUB. Clara Sidney Davidge. Illustrated.
THAT GOOD MAY COME. Edith Wharton.
TWO SONNETS. A Telling Race—To One who Sleeps. Edith M. Thomas.
CLIMBING for WHITE GOATS. George Bird Grayson. Illustrated.
THE ETHICS of DEMOCRACY—LIBERTY. F. J. Schreiner.
THE POINT of VIEW.

London:

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER'S LIST.

THIS DAY, in crown 8vo. 6s.

THE

DAUGHTER OF LEONTIUS;

Or, Phases of Byzantine Life in the Fifth Century.

By J. D. CRAIG HOUSTON, B.D.

This work tells the romantic story of the Athenian maiden who rose to be Empress of the East, and describes the social and religious life of the Graeco-Asiatic community amongst whom her life was cast.

NEW NOVEL BY T. BANKS MACLACHLAN.

Nearly ready, in 1 vol.

WILLIAM BLACKLOCK, JOURNALIST. By T. BANKS MACLACHLAN, Editor of the Weekly Scotsman.

OLIPHANT'S POCKET NOVELS.

Paper covers, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

THE SILVER BULLET. By P. Hay HUNTER, Joint Author of 'My Ducats and My Daughter.'

THE SONS OF THE CROFT. By the SAME AUTHOR. Paper covers, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

MR. P. HAY HUNTER'S NEW STORY.

Nearly ready, in 1 vol.

JAMES INWICK: Ploughman and Elder.

Now ready, 3s. 6d. cloth (post free).

CONFIDENTIAL TALKS with YOUNG MEN. By LYMAN B. SPERRY, M.D. With a Recommendation Note by Prof. A. R. SIMPSON, M.D., of Edinburgh University, who says:—

"This is an eminently healthy book. It deals lucidly and delicately with a subject confessedly difficult to handle, but loudly calling for treatment."

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, with 80 Original Illustrations by Wm. Hole, R.S.A., printed in Brown Ink, 2s.

THE BOOK OF OLD EDINBURGH. By JOHN CHARLES DUNLOP and ALISON HAY DUNLOP.

MAGGIE SWAN'S NEW STORY.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, with Illustrations, 3s. 6d.

FOR THE SAKE OF THE SILLER: a Fife-shire Story of Forty years Ago. By MAGGIE SWAN.

"GOLDEN NAILS" SERIES.—New Volume.

This day, 1s. 6d. cloth extra.

PLEASANT PLACES. Words to the Young. By Rev. R. S. DUFF, D.D.

SECOND EDITION, now ready, Fourth Thousand, 1s. 6d.

GOLDEN NAILS, and other Addresses to Children. By Rev. GEORGE MILLIGAN, B.D.

"Twenty very excellent addresses worth reading and repeating."

Sunday School Teacher.

Now ready, 2s. 6d. antique laid paper.

BUNYAN CHARACTERS. Second Series. By Rev. ALEXANDER WHYTE, D.D., of St. George's Free Church, Edinburgh.

"This completes the most beautiful and suggestive commentary on the 'Pilgrim's Progress' ever written."—British Weekly

"FIRST SERIES, Fifteenth Thousand, now ready, 2s. 6d."

Crown 8vo. 6s.

THE CHURCH and SOCIAL PROBLEMS. By the Rev. A. SCOTT MATHESON, Author of 'The Gospel and Modern Substitutes.'

NEW BOOKS FOR FAMILY READING.

Crown 8vo. cloth elegant, with Frontispiece, 2s.

UNDER THE LIVE OAKS. By T. M. BROWNE, Author of 'The Musgrave Ranch.'

Crown 8vo. cloth elegant, with Illustrations, 2s.

HER DAY OF SERVICE. By Edward GARRETT, Author of 'By Still Waters,' &c.

ANNIE S. SWAN'S BOOKS are favourites in every Library. List of 40 vols. (6d. to 6s.), post free on application.

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER,
Edinburgh and London.

L. REEVE & CO.'S NEW WORKS.

To be published in Ten Parts, royal 8vo. each with 6 beautifully Coloured Plates, price 1s. 6d. for the complete work only, 16s. 6d. or 4s. 11s. 6d. for the complete work if paid in advance.

FOREIGN FINCHES IN CAPTIVITY.

By ARTHUR G. BUTLER, Ph.D. F.L.S. F.Z.S. F.E.S.,

Corresponding Member of various Foreign Societies.

A Part will be issued every six weeks commencing June 15th. The whole will form a large and handsome volume of between 300 and 400 pages, with 60 Plates, by F. W. Frohawk, beautifully coloured by hand. Only 500 copies will be printed, early application is therefore necessary to prevent disappointment. Should 40 copies remain unsold after the completion of the work the price will be raised to Six Guinea net, or more. Prospectus on application.

Now ready, Part XX. 7s. 6d.; also Vol. VI. 8s.

FLORA OF BRITISH INDIA. By Sir J. D. HOOKER, K.C.B. C.R. F.R.S. &c. Assisted by various Specialists. Parts I. to XIII. 10s. 6d. each. XIV. to XIX. 5s. each. Vols I. to IV. cloth, 2s. each; Vol. V. 2s.

THE HYMENOPTERA ACULEATA OF THE HOUTTIGIANIS. By EDWARD SAUNDERS, F.L.S. Parts I. to IV. with 4 Coloured Plates, 2s. each. Prospectus and Form for Subscribers may be had on application.

THE HEMIPTERA HETEROPTERA OF THE HOUTTIGIANIS. By EDWARD SAUNDERS, F.L.S. Complete in 1 volume. Small Edition, with a Structural Plate, 14s. Large Edition, with 21 Coloured Plates, 60s.

THE LEPIDOPTERA OF THE BRITISH ISLANDS. By CHARLES O. HARRITT, F.R.S. Vol. I. RHODOPHAGIA. With 6 Coloured Plates, 10s. Part II. to XVI. each with 4 Coloured Plates, 2s. Prospectus and Form for Subscribers may be had on application.

THE COLEOPTERA OF THE BRITISH ISLANDS. By the Rev. Canon FOWLER, M.A. F.L.S. Large Edition, complete in 2 vols., with 160 Coloured Plates, 16s. Small Edition, complete in 2 vols., with 2 Structural Plates, 60s.

CATALOGUE OF BRITISH COLEOPTERA. By D. SHARP, M.A. F.H.S., and Rev. Canon FOWLER, M.A. F.L.S. Price 1s. 6d.; or printed on one side only, for Sale, 2s. 6d.

THE BUTTERFLIES OF EUROPE. Described and Figured by H. C. LANG, M.D. F.R.S. With 80 Coloured Plates, containing upwards of 500 Figures. 2 vols. super-royal 8vo. 10s.

THE PHYSIOLOGY OF THE INVERTEBRATA. By H. C. GRIFFITH, Ph.D. F.R.S. (Edin.), F.C.S. 10s. 6d. with 10 Illustrations, 10s. 6d.

BRITISH FUNGI, PHYCOMYCETES and UTICULAGINAE. By GEORGE MARRAS, 2 Plates, 7s. 6d.

HANDBOOK OF THE BRITISH FLORA. By O. BENTHAM, F.R.S. Sixth Edition. Revised by Sir J. D. HOOKER, C.R. K.C.B. F.R.S. 10s. 6d.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE BRITISH FLORA. Drawn by W. R. Fitch, F.L.S. and W. O. Smith, F.L.S. 1,216 Wood Engravings. Third Edition. Revised and Enlarged. 10s. 6d.

British Insects. By E. F. STAVELEY. 16 Coloured Plates, 16s.

British Beetles. By E. C. RYE. New Edition. Revised and in Part Rewritten by the Rev. Canon FOWLER, M.A. F.L.S. 16 Coloured Plates, 10s. 6d.

British Butterflies and Moths. By H. T. STANTON. 16 Coloured Plates, 20s. 6d.

British Bees. By W. E. SHUCKARD. 16 Coloured Plates, 10s. 6d.

British Spiders. By E. F. STAVELEY. 16 Coloured Plates, 10s. 6d.

The Edible Mollusca of Great Britain and IRELAND. With Recipes for Cooking them. By M. A. LORRILL. Second Edition. 12 Coloured Plates. 10s. 6d.

British Zoophytes. By A. S. PENNINGTON, F.L.S. 24 Plates, 10s. 6d.

British Wild Flowers. Familiarly Described in the Poet's Language. By THOMAS MOORE, F.L.S. 24 Coloured Plates, 10s.

British Grasses. By M. FLUKE. 16 Coloured Plates, 10s. 6d.

British Ferns. By M. FLUKE. 16 Coloured Plates, 10s. 6d.

British Seaweeds. By S. O. GRAY. 16 Coloured Plates, 10s. 6d.

Synopsis of British Mosses. By C. P. HOOKER, F.L.S. Revised Edition, 7s. 6d.

No NEW MAY, 2s. 6d.

THE BOTANICAL MAGAZINE: Figures and Descriptions of New and Rare Plants. By Sir J. D. HOOKER, F.R.S. &c. Third Series. Vols. I. to XLIX. each 6s. Published Monthly, with 5 Plates, 2s. 6d. Coloured Annual Subscription, 42s.

A SET OF

CURTIS'S BOTANICAL MAGAZINE, complete from the commencement to the end of 1892. 118 vols and Index to the first 25 vols in 16 vols. The first 75 vols and Index in 56 vols. half from Morocco, the remaining 30 vols. now, in cloth, price 12s. 6d. each set.

L. REEVE & CO.,

Publishers to the Home, Colonial, and Indian Governments,
6, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

LAWRENCE & BULLEN'S PUBLICATIONS.

SHIPS THAT PASS in the NIGHT. By BEATRICE HARRADEN. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

NOTICE.—The large Twelfth Edition of SHIPS THAT PASS in the NIGHT having been exhausted, a THIRTEENTH EDITION will be issued immediately.

Ships that pass in the night, and speak each other in passing,
Only a signal shown, and a distant voice in the darkness;
So on the ocean of life we pass and speak one another,
Only a look and a voice, then darkness again and a silence.

MAURICE JOKAI.

EYES LIKE the SEA: a Novel.

Translated by R. NISBET BAIN from the Hungarian of MAURICE JOKAI. 1 vol. 6s.

[New and Cheaper Edition ready next week.

"That it is the work of a man who has both seen and suffered much is evident, whilst the brightness of the wit, the exuberance of the fancy, and the shrewdness of the judgment shown in the telling of the story, will convince most persons that Hungary is not without justification when it claims for Jokai a foremost place among living novelists." Speaker.

GEORGE GISSING'S NOVELS.

The ODD WOMEN. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s. [New and Cheaper Edition.

The EMANCIPATED. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s. [New and Cheaper Edition.

DENZIL QUARRIER. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

W. B. YEATS.

The CELTIC TWILIGHT. Men and Women, Devils and Fairies. 18mo. 3s. 6d.

"For a pleasant, pathetic, charming view of Irish people and Irish manners no modern writer is to be matched with Mr. Yeats.....Many of the essays are short, but, as we wish them longer, Mr. Yeats has succeeded."

ANDREW LANG in the Illustrated London News.

KATHARINE TYNAN.

A CLUSTER of NUTS: being SKETCHES AMONG MY OWN PEOPLE. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Kindly Irish of the Irish,
Neither Saxon nor Italian.

"Admirable reading—tender, restrained, and winning."—National Observer.

ANGLO-INDIAN STORIES.

TOLD in the VERANDAH. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

A BLACK PRINCE, and OTHER STORIES. By the Author of 'Told in the Verandah.'

"The author does not in the least imitate Mr. Kipling, but tells his tales in his own way; the result is we have a very amusing, lively volume, whereas with the imitators of Kipling we are generally very weary."—Glasgow Herald.

LAWRENCE & BULLEN,

16, Henrietta-street Covent-garden, London.

CHAPMAN & HALL'S
NEW BOOKS.

The FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.
MAY.

WOMAN and LABOUR. By Professor Karl Pearson.

The ORIGIN of CULTIVATION. By Grant Allen.

The MINES (EIGHT HOURS) BILL. By D. A. Thomas, M.P.

SOME RECENT PLAYS. By William Archer.

The PROBLEM of CONSTANTINOPLE. By Frederic Harrison.

The ROYAL PATRIOTIC FUND. By Hudson E. Kearley, M.P.

The APPRECIATION of GOLD. By Robert Barclay (Director of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce).

L'IMPÉRIUM BONTÉ. By Ouida.

The STAMP-COLLECTING CRAZE. By W. Roberts.

CYCLING and CYCLES. By Creston.

ENGLISH and FRENCH MANNERS. By Frederic Carrel.

A SOCIALIST in a CORNER. By W. H. Mallock.

LORD WOLVERTON.

FIVE MONTHS' SPORT in SOMALILAND. By Lord WOLVERTON. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo.

REV. H. N. HUTCHINSON, F.G.S.

CREATURES of OTHER DAYS.

By Rev. H. N. HUTCHINSON, F.G.S., Author of 'Extinct Monsters.' With Illustrations by J. Smit. Large crown 8vo.

BULA N'ZAU.

TRAVEL and ADVENTURE in the CONGO FREE STATE and its BIG-GAME SHOOTING. By BULA N'ZAU. With Illustrations from the Author's Sketches. Demy 8vo. [Next week.

JOHN FISKE.

EDWARD LIVINGSTON

YOUNG MAN: Interpreter of Science to the People. A Sketch from his Published Writings and Extracts from his Correspondence with Spencer, Huxley, Tyndall, and others. By JOHN FISKE. Crown 8vo. [Next week.

NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

ALFRED HARCOURT.

FOR LOVE AND LIBERTY:

A Tale of the Sixteenth Century in Spain.

By ALFRED HARCOURT.

2 vols. crown 8vo. [This day.

BESSIE HATTON.

ENID LYLE.

By BESSIE HATTON.

2 vols. crown 8vo.

"Miss Bessie Hatton has inherited from her father, Mr. Joseph Hatton, the gift of easy narrative, graphic description, and picturesque characterisation.....Not only excellent as a first attempt: it is intrinsically good."—Globe.

"The frank, simple, and unpretentious style of 'Enid Lyle' is likely to prove very attractive.....A straightforward story in a straightforward manner."—Daily Telegraph.

H. C. CHATFIELD-TAYLOR.

AN AMERICAN PEERESS.

By H. C. CHATFIELD-TAYLOR.

2 vols. crown 8vo.

"A delightful story—happily conceived and told with admirable literary skill. The scene lies in America, but chiefly in England.....Will be read with pleasure." Scotsman.

CHAPMAN & HALL, LIMITED, London.

A NEW ENGLISH DICTIONARY.

THE ROYAL
ENGLISH DICTIONARY
AND WORD TREASURY.

By THOMAS T. MACLAGAN, M.A.,
Of the Royal High School and the Heriot-Watt College, Edinburgh.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The Dictionary consists of 714 pages, printed in a clear, distinctive type.

The Derivation or Source of each word is given, and the pronunciation shown.

The Definitions and Meanings are stated in simple terms, and following the meaning is a LIST OF SIMILAR OR SYNONYMOUS WORDS—a specially useful feature and literary help, which will commend itself to all users of a dictionary, not only materially assisting to a clear understanding of the word sought, but providing a choice of alternative words, from which the most appropriate for any purpose may be selected.

Besides the Dictionary proper there is an Appendix containing Words, Phrases, and Note-worthy Sayings, from the Latin, Greek, and Modern Languages; Abbreviations in common use; Prefixes and Affixes; and List of Geographical Roots, with Meanings.

"One of the best of the smaller dictionaries that we have seen."—Westminster Gazette.
"Mr. MacLagan merits high praise for his work, and has given good grounds for enrolling his name among scholarly British lexicographers."—Educational News.

Post 8vo. cloth, price 2s. 6d.

T. NELSON & SONS, 25, PATERNOSTER-ROW,
London, E.C.
Parkside, Edinburgh; and New York.

DIGBY, LONG & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

THIS DAY AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.
THE NEW NOVEL BY JEAN MIDDLEMASS.

THE MYSTERY OF CLEMENT DUNRAVEN.

In 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'A GIRL IN A THOUSAND,' &c.

DORA RUSSELL'S NEW NOVEL.

A HIDDEN CHAIN. By the Author of 'Footprints in the Snow,' 'A Great Temptation,' &c. In 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d. [In May.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

THREE EMPRESSES.

Josephine, Marie-Louise, Eugénie. By CAROLINE GEARHY, Author of 'In Other Lands,' &c. With Portraits. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

FALL MALL GAZETTE.—"This charming book..... Gracefully and graphically written, the story of each Empress is clearly and fully told.....This delightful book."

BY ALFRED SMYTHE.

SIR DUNSTAN'S DAUGHTER,
and other Poems. By the Author of 'The Warlock,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. With Portrait. [Just out.

LOVE, MARRIAGE, and HAPPINESS. By "ISIDORE." Crown 8vo. elegant cloth, 2s. 6d.

YORKSHIRE POST.—"A thoroughly sensible, a thoroughly practical, and prettily got-up volume."

DIGBY LONG & CO. 18 BOUVERIE-STREET E.C.

"That delightful repository of forgotten lore,
NOTES AND QUERIES."

Edinburgh Review, October, 1880.

"That useful resuscitant of dead knowledge, yclept
NOTES AND QUERIES, the antiquaries' newspaper."

Quarterly Review.

"When found, make a note of!"—CAPTAIN CUTLER.

Every SATURDAY, 34 Pages, Price 4d., of all Booksellers.

NOTES AND QUERIES:

A Medium of Intercommunication for Literary
Men, Artists, Antiquaries, Genealogists, &c.

CONTAINING EVERY WEEK AMUSING ARTICLES
ON SOME OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTTISH HISTORY.

Illustrated by Original Communications and Inedited Documents.

BIOGRAPHY.

Including unpublished Correspondence of eminent Men, and unrecorded Facts connected with them.

BIBLIOGRAPHY.

More especially of English Authors, with
Notices of rare and unknown Editions of their Works, and Notes on Authorship of Anonymous
Books.

POPULAR ANTIQUITIES and FOLK- LORE.

Preserving the fast-fading Relics of the old
Mythologies.

BALLADS and OLD POETRY.

With Historical and Philological Illustrations.

POPULAR and PROVERBIAL SAYINGS,

Their Origin, Meaning, and Application.

PHILOLOGY.

Including Local Dialects, Archaisms, and Notes
on our Old Poets.

GENEALOGY and HERALDRY.

Including Histories of Old Families, completion
of Pedigrees, &c.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES, QUERIES, and REPLIES.

On points of ECCELESTIASTICAL HISTORY, TOPO-
GRAPHY, FINE ARTS, NATURAL HISTORY, MIS-CELLANEOUS ANTIQUITIES, NUMISMATICS,
PHOTOGRAPHY, &c.

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS,
Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

And may be had, by order, of all Booksellers and News-vendors.

THE EXPOSITOR.

Contents for MAY. Price 1s.

ON SOME OBJECTIONS to the ETHICAL TEACHING of CHRIST.
By Rev. Prof. Marcus Dods, D.D.

THE GALATIA of the ACTS. A Criticism of Prof. Hamann's Reply. By Rev. F. H. Chase, D.D.

ST. PAUL'S CONCEPTION of CHRISTIANITY. 16. THE LAW. By Rev. Prof. A. R. Bruce, D.D., Glasgow.

HEATH IN THE WILDERNESS. By Rev. Prebendary Whitelock, M.A.

THE RIBBON and AGENCER. A. ANTI-MILITARIANS and the DELUGE.
By Sir J. W. Dawson, C.M.G. F.R.S.

MATERIALS for the STUDY of VARIATION. By Prof. Macmillan,
M.D. F.R.S., Cambridge.

FAITH the SIXTH SENSE. By Rev. John Watson, M.A.

RECENT BIBLICAL LITERATURE. By Rev. Prof. Marcus Dods, D.D.

London: Hodder & Stoughton, 27, Paternoster-row.

THE BOOKMAN. An Illustrated Monthly Journal for Bookreaders, Book buyers, and Book-sellers.

Price 6pence.

Contents for MAY.

PORTRAITS: Professor Robertson Smith, Miss Beatrice Harrison.

MONTHLY REPORT of the WHOLESALE BOOK TRADE.

NEW WRITERS. Mr. Knighley Snowden.

PROFESSOR ROBERTSON SMITH.

MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS. 1. From her Birth to her Coronation. By D. May Fleming.

IN the DUNDEEVILLE COUNTRY. With Illustrations.

RARELY EDITIONS. By T. J. Wise.

NEW BOOKS—NOVEL NOTES—NEWS NOTES—The BOOKMAN'S
TABLE.—The BOOKSELLER, &c.

London: Hodder & Stoughton, 27, Paternoster-row.

THE HUMANITARIAN.

Edited by VICTORIA WOODHULL MARTIN.

New ready MAY. Price 6pence.

1. THE TREATMENT of MENTAL DEPENDENCIES. Norman Kerr,
M.D. With Portraits.

2. LAW and COMMON SENSE. The Editor.

3. WOMEN and GAMBLING. Mrs. Aubrey Richardson.

4. THE ILLITERATE VOTER. R. G. Webster, M.P.

5. SPORTS that are CRUEL. The Rev. F. Lawrence.

6. ANARCHISTS and the RIGHT of ASYLUM. W. H. Wilson.

7. A DREAM of an IDEAL CITY. Albert E. Owen.

8. THE GIRL at the GATE. Short Story. Mrs. Kingsley Tarpey.

NOTES and COMMENTS and REVIEWS.

CORRESPONDENCE and OPEN COLUMN.

Urban Science-press and Co. Paternoster-square, E.C.

NATURAL SCIENCE.

A MONTHLY REVIEW of SCIENTIFIC PROGRESS.

Price ONE SHILLING net.

Contents of MAY Number.

1. CONTINENTAL GROWTH and GEOLOGICAL PERIODS. T.
Mellor Head, F.G.S.

2. WIND and LIGHT. F. W. Huxley, M.A.

3. NATURAL HISTORY of the FLOWER. John C. Willis, M.A.

4. THE GEOGRAPHICAL DISTRIBUTION of SCORPIONS. H. I.
Peters.

5. RECENT WORK on INSECTS. G. M. Carpenter, B.Sc.

NOTES and COMMENTS. REVIEWS. NEWS.

London: Macmillan & Co.

JOURNAL of the INSTITUTE of ACTUARIES.

No. CLXXIII. APRIL, 1894. Price 2s. 6d.

Contents.

Mr. WILLIAM J. H. WHITTALL. 'On the Methods of deducing the Rate of Mortality from the Experience of Assured Lives, with some mention of a method adopted in insuring the experience of the Civilian, Medical and General Life Assurance Society,' with Discussion.

Dr. THOMAS BOND SPRAGUE. 'On the Tabulation of the Facts extracted from the Records of a Life Office for the purpose of investigating its Mortality Experience,' also 'On the Mortality among the Healthy Female Lives Insured with the Scottish Equitable Life Assurance Society.'

Mr. JAMES MEIKLE. 'On a Mode of Tabulating the Facts for the purpose of ascertaining the Numbers exposed to Risk, and calculating the Rate of Mortality experienced by Assurance Companies.'

DISCUSSION on the PAPERS of Dr. SPRAGUE and Mr. MEIKLE.

ACTUARIAL NOTE.

London: C. & E. Layton, Farringdon-street.

TALES and SKETCHES of MODERN GREECE.

By NEIL WYNN WILLIAMS.

London: H. Kail, 270 Strand, W.C.

Dedford: Dedford Publishing Company, High-street.

DEVIL'S PRONOUN, and other Tales. By Miss

F. FORRESTER-ROBERTSON. With Illustrations. 18mo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Reeves & Turner, 5, Wellington-street, Strand.

This day, post 8vo. cloth, with Illustrations, 2s. 6d.

TWELVE YEARS' RESIDENCE on the WEST COAST of SCOTLAND. By Captain JAMES MASON, late of the 66th and 91st Regiments.

Glasgow & Jackson, 1, Paternoster-row (Mr. Van Nostrand's successors).

FIRST LESSONS in BUSINESS.

Second Edition, Revised. 1s. 1d. post free. 1s. 1d.

Macmillan, 20 Bedford-street, London, W.C.

"How should I draw a Cheque?"

"How to Write to my Banker," &c.

New ready. Eighth Edition, thoroughly Revised and much Enlarged.
2 vols. paper-bound 6s. 250 pages. cloth gilt edges, price 8s. 1s.

GENEALOGICAL and HERALDIC HISTORY of the LANDED GENTRY of GREAT BRITAIN and IRELAND By Sir HENRY DUNDAS, 1. B.L.D., Under King of Arms, Author of 'The Peerage and Baronage' &c. Edited by Mr. GOSN.

London: Harrison & Sons, 50, Pall Mall.

THE ANGLO-AMERICAN LIBRARY of FICTION.

Ready NEXT TUESDAY.

MRS. AMELIA B. BARR'S NEW NOVEL.

Crown 8vo. 208 pp., paper cover, 1s. 1d. cloth, 1s. 6d.

GIRLS OF A FEATHER.

A Story of New York Society Life.

By Mrs. AMELIA B. BARR.

London: James Henderson, Red Lion House, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C. New York: Robert Pomeroy's Sons.

New and Cheaper Edition, price Two Shillings.

Celestial MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy. Eighth Edition. With 3 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, R.A. F.R.S.

"I have seen you glad to see, reached an eighth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the facts of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Gardner.

Edward Stanford, 25 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

Second Edition, price 6pence, cloth.

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Parts in the History of Cometary Astronomy.

By W. T. LYNN, R.A. F.R.S.

"Well adapted to accomplish their purpose."—Dr. R. A. Gours, Editor of the Astronomical Journal.

Edward Stanford, 25 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

W. C. BENNETT'S POEMS.

The GOLDEN LIBRARY—Square 16mo. cloth, 2s.

SONGS for SAILORS.

Morning Post—"Spirited, melodious, and vigorously graphic."

Daily News—"Very spirited."

Pall Mall Gazette—"Really admirable."

Morning Advertiser—"Sure of a wide popularity."

John Bull—"Very successful."

Review—"Full of incident and strongly expressed sentiment, and having a simple, dashing, musical roll and movement that reminds one of some songs that are favourable to all sailors and the touch of humour is introduced as a variety of the kind that they will relish."

Graphic—"We may fairly say that Dr. Bennett has taken up the mantle of Ibsen."

Scotsman—"Dr. Bennett's heart is thoroughly in his work.... All spirited and vigorous. There is a healthy, manly, free-air dash about them which ought to make them popular with the class for whom one and pleasure they are designed."

Review—"These songs bear a true literary mark, and give out the genuine ring."

Literary World—"It seeks to quicken the pulse of our national life.
It is to be hoped these spirit-stirring songs may be sung in all parts of the world by our gallant tars, north and south, east and west—wherever, in short, the strong sea breeze blows over the sea. We heartily commend Dr. Bennett's Songs for Sailors to the public at large."

Review—"With admirable felicity he combines national sentiments and emotions which stir the hearts of the people."

Leeds Mercury—"There is no one nowadays who can compete with Dr. Bennett as a popular song-writer. In his volume of sea songs we find the qualities which must secure his success."

Liverpool Post—"Dr. Bennett has devoted his lyrical powers to a noble object in this comprehensive yet inexpensive work. This gem deserves to be patronized not only by our entire Royal Navy, but by all our sailors' homes and all our Mercantile Marine Associations."

Exeter—"These songs are literally written for sailors, and they are precisely the kind of songs that sailors most enjoy."

Retrospect—"Insistent with patriotic fire."

Illustrated London News—"Right well done."

News of the World—"There is real poetry in these songs."

Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s.

PROMETHEUS the FIRE-GIVER. An Attempted Restoration of the Lost First Part of the Trilogy of Æschylus.

Clotie & Windsor, Piccadilly.

READY NEXT WEEK AT ALL LIBRARIES.

NEW EDITION OF MR. MILNER'S IMPORTANT WORK,

ENGLAND IN EGYPT.

By ALFRED MILNER, formerly Under-Secretary for Finance in Egypt.

New and Cheaper Edition, with an Additional Prefatory Chapter on Egypt in 1894.

Large crown 8vo. with Map, cloth, 7s. 6d.

NEW STORY OF IRISH LIFE.

MISTHER O'RYAN. An Incident in the History of a Nation.

By EDWARD McNULTY.

Small 8vo. elegantly bound, 3s. 6d.

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.

THE "BORDER" WAVERLEY.

READY MAY 1st.

WOODSTOCK. 2 vols.

10 Original Etchings by W. HOLE, R.S.A.

Introduction and Notes by ANDREW LANG.

London: JOHN C. NIMMO, 14, King William-street, Strand.

This day is published, crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

LEADERS OF MODERN INDUSTRY.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

By G. BARNETT SMITH,

Author of 'Women of Renown,' &c.

London: W. H. ALLEN & Co., LIMITED, 13, Waterloo-place.

G. CARDELLA'S SECOND NOVEL.

Messrs. SWAN SONNENSCHN & CO. beg to announce that the New Novel by the Author of 'A KING'S DAUGHTER,' one of the most successful Novels of the year 1892, is now ready in 3 vols. at all the Libraries, entitled

THE PERFECT WAY OF HONOUR.

Of 'A King's Daughter' some of the leading papers said: "The name of G. Cardella is new to us, but we venture to predict that if she or he puts out more books of the character and strength of 'A King's Daughter' it will not be long before her name is familiar to all who like wholesome, well-written, interesting fiction." "The novel is so good that we should be glad to see another from the same pen"; "Extremely attractive"; "Instinct with humanity"; "Powerful and pathetic"; "A careful, conscientious performance."

SWAN SONNENSCHN & Co. London.

MR. MURRAY'S LIST.

WILL BE READY NEXT WEEK.

3 vols. crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. net each volume.

THE EPISTLES OF ST. PAUL TO THE THESSALONIANS, GALATIANS, AND ROMANS.

WITH NOTES AND DISSERTATIONS.

Including an Essay on the Interpretation of Scripture, originally published in 'Essays and Reviews.'

By the late B. JOWETT, M.A., Master of Balliol College.

Regius Professor of Greek in the University of Oxford, Doctor in Theology in the University of Leyden.

Edited and Condensed by LEWIS CAMPBELL, M.A., LL.D.,

Emeritus Professor of Greek in the University of St. Andrews.

This work was first published in 1856. A second and thoroughly revised Edition appeared in 1859, and was rapidly exhausted, but the author did not resume the work during his lifetime.

The present Edition is so divided that the text of the Epistles, together with the Notes and Introductions, forms the First Volume, whilst the Essays and Dissertations are contained in the Second Volume.

The Volumes will be sold separately.

A NEW, ENLARGED, AND REVISED EDITION.

8vo. 16s.

SIR WILLIAM SMITH'S CLASSICAL DICTIONARY OF

MYTHOLOGY, BIOGRAPHY, AND GEOGRAPHY. A New, Enlarged, and Revised Edition, with many New Plans and Illustrations. Edited by G. E. MARINDIN, M.A., formerly Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. With over 100 Illustrations.

BOOKS TO READ.

3 vols. 8vo. 38s.

LIFE and CORRESPONDENCE of ARTHUR PENRHYN

STANLEY, late Dean of Westminster. By ROWLAND H. PROTHERO, M.A.

(Third Edition.

8vo. 16s.

CORRESPONDENCE of MR. JOSEPH JEKYLL with his SISTER-IN-LAW, LADY GERTRUDE BLOAN STANLEY. Edited, with a Brief Memoir, by the Hon. ALGERNON BOURKE.

Crown 8vo. 24s.

The PAMIRS. By the Earl of Dunmore. 2 vols. With Maps and Illustrations.

(Second Edition.

Medium 8vo. 18s.

ALONE with the HAIRY AINU. Travels in Yezo and the Kurile Islands. By A. H. SAVAGE LANDOR. Maps and Illustrations.

8vo. 12s.

A POLICY of FREE EXCHANGE. Essays by various Writers.

Edited by THOMAS MACKAY, Editor of 'A Plea for Liberty.'

Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

The JACOBAN POETS. By EDMUND GOSSE. Forming a Volume

of "MURRAY'S UNIVERSITY EXTENSION MANUALS." Edited by Professor KNIGHT.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE

RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.

NOTES and QUERIES for DECEMBER 10th and 20th, 1893, and JANUARY 7th and 21st, 1894, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of MR. GLADSTONE.

Price of the Four Numbers, 1s. 6d.; or free by post, 1s. 8d.

John C. Frazer, Notes and Queries Office, Brown's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL OF BRACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.

NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 13th, 27th, JUNE 10th, 24th, and JULY 8th, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL of BRACONSFIELD. This includes KEYS to 'VIVIAN GREY,' 'CONSCIENCE,' 'LOTHAIR,' and 'ENDYMION.'

Price of the Six Numbers, 2s.; or free by post, 2s. 2d.

John C. Frazer, Notes and Queries Office, Brown's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE

COMPANY INSURES AGAINST

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS,

PERSONAL ACCIDENTS,

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY.

Capital, 1,000,000. Established 1848.

64, CORNHILL, LONDON.

W. D. MARRY, } Secretaries.
A. VIAN. }

ALLEN'S SOLID LEATHER PORTMANTEAUS.

ALLEN'S VICTORIA DRESSING BAG.

ALLEN'S STRONG DRESS BASKETS.

ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE, post free.

37, West Street, London. Discount 10 per cent.

GUARANTEED SPECIALITIES

OF THE

SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.

Manufactured in three sizes, at 10s. 6d., 16s. 6d., and 25s. each. For a Present or Memento you could not give a more faithful, ready, or willing friend than a SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.

1. 14-carat Gold—therefore never corrodes.
2. Iridium tipped—therefore never wears out.
3. Instantly ready for use.
4. Writes continuously to many hours.
5. Economical—outlasting 20,000 steel pens.
6. Saves fully 16s. in cost of steel pens and ink pots.
7. Ink in reservoir always limpid—no evaporation.
8. For every writer in every land a necessity.

FINALLY.

A pen so nearly perfect as the inventive skill of the day can produce.

FOR WEDDING AND COMPLIMENTARY PRESENTS, THE IDEAL OBJECT.

We only require your steel pen and handwriting to guide us in selecting a pen.

GOLD PENS, IRIIDIUM TIPPED.
Everlasting Wear.GOLD PENS, IRIIDIUM TIPPED.
From 4s. to 19s. each.GOLD PENS, IRIIDIUM TIPPED.
Short, Long, Broad, Fine Nibs.GOLD PENS, IRIIDIUM TIPPED.
Made to suit your Handwriting.

Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application.

MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.; or 95A, REGENT-STREET, W.

SHAVING MADE EASY

AND BLOTCHES AVOIDED

BY USING

"VINOLIA" SHAVING SOAP.

STICKS—Premier, 6d.; Toilet, 1s., 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d.; Vestal, 2s.

CAKES—Premier, 1s.; Toilet, 2s.; Vestal, 3s.

EPPS'S COCOAINE.

COCOA-NIB EXTRACT. (TEA LIKE.)

The choicest roasted nibs (broken-up beans) of the natural 'Cacao,' on being subjected to powerful hydraulic pressure, give forth their excess of oil leaving few see a finely flavoured powder—'COCOAINE,' a product which, when prepared with boiling water, has the consistency of tea, of which it is now successfully taking the place with many. Its active principle, being a gentle nerve-stimulant, supplies the needed energy without unduly exciting the system. Sold only in Tins and Tins, labelled 'JAMES EPPS & CO. (Ld.), Homoeopathic Chemists, London.'

EPPS'S COCOAINE.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for

ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN,

HEADACHE, and INDIGESTION.

And Sufferers Avert for Delicate Constitutions,

Children, and Invalids.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S RECENT AND FORTHCOMING PUBLICATIONS.

NEARLY READY.

MY PARIS NOTE-BOOK.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'AN ENGLISHMAN IN PARIS.'

In 1 vol. 8vo. cloth, 14s.

READY MAY 10th.

THE ART OF TAKING A WIFE.

From the Italian of PAOLO MANTEGAZZA.

Crown 8vo. buckram, gilt top, 3s.

THE ROMANCE OF AN EMPRESS—Catherine II. of Russia. From the French of R. WALISZEWSKI. Portrait. A New Edition, in 1 vol. 7s. 6d."In conclusion, it may be said that the translation of M. Waliszewski's work has been creditably carried out. The result presents a faithful idea of the original—one of the best accounts of the famous Empress that have yet appeared."—*Morning PostCHARLES III. OF NAPLES AND URBAN VI. Also CROCCO D'ASCOLI. Port. Astrologer, Physician. Two Historical Essays. By ST. CLAIR RADDELEY. With Illustrations. Imperial 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

"Noteworthy monographs showing considerable research, and containing several interesting architectural illustrations."—*AcademyQUEEN JOANNA I. OF NAPLES, SICILY, AND

JERUSALEM: Countess of Provence, Portugal, and Piedmont. An Essay on her Times. By ST. CLAIR RADDELEY. Imperial 8vo. with numerous illustrations, 16s.

"Mr. Raddeley draws a vigorous picture of Joanna, her times, and contemporaries."—*TimesVILLIERS DE L'ISLE ADAM: his Life and Works.

From the French of Vicomte ROBERT DU PONTAVICE DE HEUSSEY, by Lady MARY LOYD. With Portrait and Facsimile Letter. Crown 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

"Among poets in prose it is hardly too much to say that there has never been a finer than De l'Isle Adam. Unhappily his writings are not so well known in this country. The present volume is, therefore, all the more welcome, and it is to be hoped that it may serve to introduce exquisite work into quarters where it is as yet strange."—*Daily PostMEMOIRS. By Charles Godfrey Leland (Hans Breitmann).Second Edition. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Portrait, 7s. 6d.
"From first to last a very entertaining book, full of good stories, strange adventures, curious experiences, and not inconsiderable achievements."—*TimesTHE KINGDOM OF GOD IS WITHIN YOU. Chris- tianity not as a Mystic Religion, but as a New Theory of Life. By COUNT LEO TOLSTOY. Translated from the Russian by CONSTANCE GARNETT. Popular Edition, in 1 vol. crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Also a Library Edition, in 3 vols. crown 8vo. 10s.

FICTION.

NEW LIBRARY NOVELS.

SECOND EDITION.

A DAUGHTER of MUSIC. By G. Colmore, Author of"A Conspiracy of Silence," &c. In 3 vols.
"A fine story. 'A Daughter of Music' has appeared very early in the season of 1894, but it will live to the end, and long after."—*Daily ChronicleBENEFITS FORGOT. By Wolcott Balestier, Author of"The Average Woman." In 3 vols.
"The story is full of fine feeling, subtle appreciation, and careful observation, and the reading of it awakens even the regret that the author's career should have been so early and so abruptly terminated."—*Literary WorldTHE SURRENDER of MARGARET BELLARMIN.

By ADELIN SHERBANT, Author of "The Story of a Penitent Soul," &c. In 2 vols. 12s.

"Absorbing in its intense interest."—Observer

SECOND THOUSAND.

A SUPERFLOUS WOMAN. In 3 volumes."One is fascinated, and devours the whole three volumes at a sitting."—*QueenNEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY NOVELS.*THE HOYDEN. By Mrs. Hungerford.*THE PENANCE of PORTIA JAMES. By Tasma.*MR. BAILEY-MARTIN. By Percy White.*THE COPPERHEAD. By Harold Frederic.*COME LIVE WITH ME AND BE MY LOVE. By Robert*WRECKAGE. By Hubert Crackanthorpe. Second Edition.

A NEW VOLUME OF

HEINEMANN'S INTERNATIONAL LIBRARY.THE GRANDEE. Translated from the Spanish of Don PALACIO VALDES. With an Introduction by EDMUND GOSK. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d., paper cover, 2s. 6d.
(In preparation)REMBRANDT:

HIS LIFE, HIS WORK, AND HIS TIME.

By ÉMILE MICHEL.

Translated from the French by FLORENCE SIMMONDS.

Edited by FREDERICK WEDMORE.

In 2 vols. 4to. on superfine paper, containing 33 Photographs and 33 Coloured Plates, and upwards of 250 Text Illustrations. Price 2l. 2s. net.

An ÉDITION DE LUXE, limited to 160 copies for England. Price 12l. 12s. net.

A FRIEND OF THE QUEEN: Marie Antoinette—

Count de Fersen. By PAUL GAULOT. Translated from the French by Mrs. CASHEL HOBY. In 2 vols. 8vo. with 2 Portraits, 24s.

"M. Gaulot's work tells, with new and authentic details, the romantic story of Count Fersen's devotion to Marie Antoinette of his share in the celebrated Flight to Varennes, and in many other well-known episodes of the unhappy Queen's life."—*TimesBRAND: a Dramatic Poem in Five Acts. By Ibsen.

Translated in the Original Metres, with an Introduction and Notes, by C. H. HERFORD. Small 4to. uniform with 'Hedda Gabler' and 'The Master Builder,' 7s. 6d.

"Professor Herford's translation can be read with admiration and delight."—*BookmanA COMMENTARY ON THE WORKS OF IBSEN.

By HJALMAR HJORTH BOYSEN. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d. net.

"An important contribution to the literature of Ibsenism."—Times

THE NEW REVIEW.

MAY, 1894. Price ONE SHILLING.

SECRETS from the COURT of SPAIN

TELEPHONES Past, Present, and Future By J.

A CHARACTER SKETCH—The Night Men. H. H.

THE TWO BAYLONS London and Chicago. By

W. T. Wood

ANNIVERSARIES By Paul Verlaine

OUR DOMESTIC SERVANTS By Lady Jeanne

LONDON TRIPS (Illustrated) By Sir Herbert

Maxwell, M.P.

KEATH and NEVERN By William Graham

THE TRUTH ABOUT the LONDON BAKKING

By the Editor of the Daily News

THE TYRANNY of WOMAN By Mrs. Edmund

Gosse

ENGLISH CRICKET and CRICKETERS. By F. R.

Spedding

DAMOSA HEREDITAS (A Short Story) By Eva

Asquith

CHERIE (With Problems) By I. Gansberg

THE NOVELS of IVAN TURGENEV.Translated from the Russian by CONSTANCE GARNETT.
Small crown 8vo. uniformly bound in cloth, 3s. 6d. each.Vol. I. RUDIN.

(Ready in May.)

Vol. II. LIZA.

(Ready in August.)

NEW ONE-VOLUME NOVELS, 6s. each.THE STORY of a MODERN WOMAN.

By ELLA HEPPWORTH DIXON.

(Nearly ready.)

THE COUNTESS RADNA. By W. E. Norris.

By SARAH GRAND.

OUR MANIFOLD NATURE. With a Portrait of the Author.

IDEALA: a Study from Life. Sixth Edition.THE HEAVENLY TWINS. Thirty-fifth Thousand.

By I. ZANGWILL

THE KING of SCHNORRERS: Grotesques and Fancies. With 96 Illustrations.

CHILDREN OF THE GHETTO: a Study of a Peculiar

People. Eighth Thousand.

THE PREMIER AND THE PAINTER: a Fantastic

Romance. By I. ZANGWILL and LOUIS COWEN. Third Edition.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-builings, Chancery Lane, E.C.
Printed by JOHN C. FARRER, Aldersgate Press, Bream's-builings, Chancery Lane, E.C., and Published by the said JOHN C. FARRER at Bream's-builings, Chancery Lane, E.C.
Agents for Scotland, Messrs. Bell & Breidbach and Mr. John Macdonald, Edinburgh.—Saturday, April 28, 1894.

SATURDAY, MAY 5, 1894.

PRICE
THREEPENCE
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

LIBRARIAN (MALE) WANTED for HAWICK
A PUBLIC LIBRARY Cataloguer's Indicator used Salary 600
Applications, stating age, and marked "Librarian," to be sent Hawick, Public Library, Hawick, before May 15. Canvacating a discriminatory.

DIPLOMA, and TITLE of L.L.A. to WOMEN.
The centre of Examination are at Andrews, Atteridge, Bedford, Belfast, Birmingham, Bournemouth, Bristol, Cambridge, Cardiff, Colchester, Cork, Dover, Dublin, Dundee, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Hull, Inverness, Leeds, Leicester, Liverpool, London, Loughborough, Manchester, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Olan, Oxford, Paris, Scarborough, and Truro.

For Prospectus, &c., apply to the Secretary, L.L.A. Scheme, at

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents,
14, CECILIA STREET, CHANCERY CROSS, E.C. 4.
Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible price. Special terms to LITERARY SCHOOLS Publishers.
Southampton &c. on application.

On view the Saturday prior 12 till 4 and morning of sale, and Congress hall.

WEDNESDAY NEXT.

Electrical Engineering Apparatus.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on WEDNESDAY NEXT May 3, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, a large quantity of APPARATUS removed from the SCHOOL of ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING 15, Prince-street, Hanover-square, and the Stock of the PRIMARY SYNCHRONIC (in Liquidation).
On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogue had.

FRIDAY NEXT.—Artists' Colours and Materials, &c.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT May 11 at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, a small STOCK of ARTISTS' COLOURS and MATERIALS, also Photographic Apparatus—Scientific Instruments—Electrical and Galvanic Apparatus—Lanterns and slides—Upson Glass—Miscellaneous Property.
On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogue had.

Salvage of the valuable Library of a Nobleman: Scientific and Philosophical Libraries of Two Gentlemen, and other Collections: Two Pen-and-Ink Sketches by Thackeray; Engraving after Constable, 'The Cornfield,' &c.

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C., at 1 o'clock each day, as under:—

On TUESDAY, May 2, SALVAGE from the valuable LIBRARY of a NOBLEMAN, including Goussier's Grand Works on Ornithology, of rare and other important Works on History, Science and Art, Bibliography, &c., being only externally injured, are capable of being rebound.

On WEDNESDAY, May 3, and Two Following days, the REPRINTED and PHILOSOPHICAL LIBRARIES of TWO GENTLEMEN, including the Writings of G. H. Lewis, H. B. Harter, Spencer, Mill, Hamilton, Lange, Lotze, Ueberweg—Friedrich's Isaia—Waller's Isaia—Bismarck's—Duguy's Moltwage—Cohn's Monarchie der Nationen, 2 vols.—Koch's Deutsche Geschichte, 5 vols.—Journal and Proceedings of Learned Societies—Annals of Edinburgh and Quarterly Reviews—Theological Works in handsome bindings by Riviere, Bedford, Clarke, Mackenzie, &c.—Notes and Questions a new set, 2 vols.—Early Editions of the Works of Lever, Bakewell, and Thackeray—Two original Sketches by Thackeray—Drawing by Constable and an Album of Plates by G. Cruikshank—Franks and Autographa—Engraving, 'The Cornfield,' after Constable—Schloss's Hijos Almaines for 1895, &c.

To be viewed, and Catalogue had.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
MAY, 1894.

THE LOVE OF THE HONOUR (Five Specimens). By the Right Hon. W. R. Gladstone, M.P.

SHALL INDIAN PRINCES SIT in the HOUSE OF LORDS? By the Right Hon. the Earl of Meath.

DEMOCRATIC IDEALS. By William Barry, D.D.

INTELLECTUAL PROGRESS in the UNITED STATES. By George F. Parker, United States Consul, Manchester.

SIMON EVAN the PETERITE. (Concluded.) By the Rev. Dr. Joseph.

ASPECTS OF TENNESSEE. VII. AS A HUMOURIST. By E. D. Trail.

MODERN HUNGERY. By Hugh Perry Dunn, F.R.S.

THE ENGLISH LIBRO D'ORO. By J. H. Round.

THE PROFITS OF COAL PITS. By G. F. Riddler, G.C.

LIFE in a RUSSIAN VILLAGE. By J. D. Ross, C.I.E.

THE NEW and the OLD ART CRITICISM. By Mrs. Coatsworth.

SUNSHINE and MICROBE. By Professor Perry Fensholt, F.R.S.

RECENT ANTHROLOGY. By Professor Mahady.

NILE REMINISCENCES and PHILIP. By Sir Benjamin Baker, K.C.M.G.

London: Sampson Low, Marston & Company, Ltd.

Monthly, price Half-a-Crown.

THE CONTEMPORARY REVIEW.

Contents for MAY.

DISARMAMENT. By Julius Simon.

MR. GLADSTONE. By Richard Holt Hutton.

PHILOSOPHY in the MARKET-PLACE. By Frederick Greenwood.

DISMEMBERMENT.

1. The Church and Nonconformity in Wales. By Thomas Darling.

2. The Established Church in Ireland. By Arthur Houston, G.C.

THE ETHICS OF DYNAMITE. By the Hon. Ashurst Herbert.

THE SCHOOLS SCHOOL UNION. By Walter Pomeroy.

THE HOUSE OF LORDS and RETIREMENT. By Lord Hobhouse.

PERSONALITY as the OUTCOME of EVOLUTION. By Emma Marie Child.

PRACTICAL OXFORD. By L. A. Selby-Slego.

BOGNIA and HERZEGOVINA. By E. R. Laska.

London: Longman & Co., Limited, Covent-garden, W.C.

THE NEW REVIEW.

Contents for MAY. Price One Shilling.

SECRETS from the COURT of SPAIN.

TELEPHONE. Past, Present, and Future. By J. H. Bennett, M.P.

A CHARACTER SKETCH. The Right Hon. H. H. Asquith, M.P.

THE TWO BABYLONS. London and Chicago. By William T. Stead.

AMITYERAIKE. By Paul Verlaine.

OUR DOMESTIC SERVANTS. By Lady Jenson.

LONDON TREASURES. (Illustrated.) By Sir Herbert Maxwell, M.P.

KEATH and ABERN. By William Graham.

THE TRUTH about the LONDON BAKERS. By the Editor of the Baker's Times.

THE TRAMWAY of WOMAN. By Mrs. Edmund Ouse.

ENGLISH CRICKET and CRICKETERS. By F. R. Spofforth.

DAMMOBA HEREDITARY (A short story). By Eva Anscombe.

CHERRY. (With Problems). By I. Galsworthy.

London: Wm. Heinemann, 51, Bedford-street, W.C.

New and Cheaper Edition, price Two Shillings.

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy. Eighth Edition. With 3 Plates. By W. V. LYNCH, F.R.S.

"Has, we are glad to see, reached an eighth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the facts of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian.

Edward Stanford, 35 and 37, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

SCIENCE PROGRESS.

A Monthly Review of Current Scientific Investigation.

Edited by J. BRITLAND FARMER, M.A.

With the co-operation of an Editorial Committee.

Contents for MAY.

THE DETERMINATION of the AVAILABLE PLANT FOOD in SOILS. By R. Warington, F.R.S.

THE ENERGOLOGY of the FORIFERA. By E. A. Mitchen, B.A., Fellow of Hertford College, Oxford.

SOME ASPECTS of the IMMUNITY QUESTION. By O. A. Ewen, M.D., Lecturer on Physiology at St. George's Hospital, London.

EXPERIMENT in MINERALOGY. By H. A. Miles, M.A., British Museum (Natural History Department).

ALOE. By O. Murray, F.L.S., British Museum (Natural History Department).

JOTTINGS from RECENT NEUROLOGICAL PROGRESS. By C. S. Sherrington, M.D. F.R.S.

Price Half-a-Crown (Subscription price, 3s. per annum, post free).

London: The Scientific Press, Limited, 439, Strand, W.C.

THE EDUCATIONAL REVIEW.

Contents for MAY, 1894.

1. HOW to LEARN GEOMETRY. By E. M. Langley, M.A., Secretary of the Association for the Improvement of Geometrical Teaching, and Senior Mathematical Master in the Modern School, Bedford.

2. THE FULLER STUDY of GEOGRAPHY. (Concluded.) By Arthur Macdonald.

3. PHYSICAL EDUCATION in the UNITED STATES. By Madam Morgan Oosterveld, of the Physical Training College, Hampton.

4. THE READING of OLD SCHOOL-BOOKS. By Foster Watson, M.A.

5. PHONETIC NOTER. By Miss Laura Semmes.

6. MARLBOROUGH COLLEGE.

7. METAL WORK.

8. THE MONTH: Oxford, Cambridge, Women, and General Notes.

9. NEW BOOKS and NEW EDITIONS.

Price SIXPENCE net.

London:

At the Office of the Educational Review, 71, Chancery-lane, W.C.

THE GEOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL.

Contents for MAY. Price 1s.

A JOURNEY to MONGOLIA and to TURK. By W. Reiche.

PRINCE HENRY the NAVIGATOR—THE EARLY CARTOGRAPHY of JAPAN. By Collingridge.

BARON TOLL'S EXPEDITION to AEGYPT, SIBERIA and the NEW HIRRIA TAIANDS. The FRANCO-GERMAN STRAITS and the "WINTERLAND" of CAMEROON.

THE SAHARA—THE EXPLORATION of the LUKUGA—THE MISSING SWEDISH EXPEDITION—THE MONTHLY RECORD—ORITARY.

Verney Lovett Cameron. By E. O. Havemann.—CORRESPONDENCE.

Book 22 (Geographical Notes). By Lord Col. R. H. Godwin-Austen.

MEETINGS of the ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY, APRIL 1894.—GEOGRAPHICAL LITERATURE of the MONTH.—MAPS and ILLUSTRATIONS.

Edward Stanford, 35 and 37, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

BAEDEKER'S
TOURIST GUIDE-BOOKS.

Illustrated with numerous Maps, Plans, Panoramas, and Views, 18mo. cloth.

GREEN. 6s.

GRAND BRITAIN. 10s.

LONDON and its ENVIRONS. 6s.

BELGIUM and HOLLAND. 6s.

THE RHINE. 7s.

NORTHERN GERMANY. 8s.

SOUTHERN GERMANY, AUSTRIA, HUNGARY, and TRANSYLVANIA. 8s.

THE EASTERN ALPS. 8s.

NORTHERN ITALY. 8s.

CENTRAL ITALY and ROME. 6s.

SOUTHERN ITALY and SICILY. 6s.

NORWAY and SWEDEN. 10s.

NORTHERN FRANCE. 7s.

SOUTHERN FRANCE. 6s.

PARIS and its ENVIRONS. 6s.

SWITZERLAND. 6s.

LOWER EGYPT. 10s.

UPPER EGYPT. 10s.

PALESTINE and SYRIA. 12s.

UNITED STATES. 12s.

THE TRAVELLER'S MANUAL of CONVERSATION in ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, and ITALIAN. 5s.

CONVERSATION DICTIONARY in FOUR LANGUAGES: English, French, German, and Italian. 5s.

THE THOROUGH GUIDE SERIES.

Illustrated with numerous Maps and Plans.

Edited by M. J. B. BADDELEY, B.A., and C. S. WARD, M.A.

THE ENGLISH LAKE DISTRICT. 5s.

SCOTLAND. Part I. The Highlands. 7s.

SCOTLAND. Part II. Northern Highlands. 5s. 6d.

SCOTLAND. Part III. The Lowlands. 5s.

NORTH DEVON and NORTH CORNWALL. 3s. 6d.

SOUTH DEVON and SOUTH CORNWALL. 4s.

THE PEAK DISTRICT. 3s.

THE EASTERN COUNTIES. 3s. 6d.

NORTH WALES. Part I. 3s.; Part II. 3s. 6d.

SOUTH WALES. 3s. 6d.

IRELAND. Part I. Northern Counties. 4s.

IRELAND. Part II. Southern Counties. 4s.

SURREY and SUSSEX, including Tunbridge Wells. 3s. 6d.

YORKSHIRE. Part I. (East). 3s.

YORKSHIRE. Part II. (West). 3s. 6d.

ORKNEY and SHETLAND. 1s.

MADEIRA: its Climate and Scenery.

A Handbook for Invalids and other Visitors, with Chapters on the Fauna, Flora, Geology, and Meteorology. By JAMES TAYLOR JOHNSON. With Plans and Maps. Third Edition. 7s. 6d.

DULAU & Co. 37, Soho-square.

NOW READY,

RECTORIAL ADDRESSES

DELIVERED AT THE

UNIVERSITY of St. ANDREWS

1863-1893,

Sir William Stirling-Maxwell to the Marquis of Bute.

Edited, with an Introduction,

By WILLIAM KNIGHT, LL.D.,

Professor of Moral Philosophy, University of St. Andrews.

Demy 8vo. price 10s. 6d.

"The volume should command an appreciative welcome from a far larger circle of readers than that represented by the graduates and students of St. Andrews."—Times.

"The volume, in fact, is a memorial of what St. Andrews has done for the cause of education in the North, and a singularly interesting epitome of the views on the same subject of many clear and courageous minds."—Daily Telegraph.

"This is a volume of very deep and very varied interest."—Freeman's Journal.

"Besides being of special interest to all whose student days are recalled by them, appeal more generally to those who wish to understand the aims and ideals of our Scottish universities during the latter half of the nineteenth century."—Glasgow Herald.

"Materials so brilliant required the support of no editorial sponsor. The value of the book is, however, increased by the interesting introduction by Professor Knight."—Aberdeen Free Press.

"This is a volume that will be treasured by alumni of St. Andrews whereever the fates may have borne them. It will revive sunny memories of days departed, and vividly recall scenes that time has obscured but not obliterated."—Dundee Advertiser.

"The volume is both valuable and attractive, and it is got up in a style worthy of the 'City of the Sorleir Gown,' of which it is meant to be a memorial."—Scotsman.

NOW READY,

SANTA TERESA:

Being some Account of her Life and Times, together with some pages from the History of the last great Reform in the Religious Orders.

BY

GABRIELA CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM.

In 2 vols.

Illustrated with Two Autogravure Frontispieces.

Demy 8vo. price 33s.

"She has not merely studied much original and previously inaccessible material for the life and times of Saint Teresa, but is also specially qualified for the work she has undertaken by her intimate acquaintance with the country and countrymen of the saint. She has patiently and not unfruitfully examined the difficult psychological question of Teresa's mysticism, and her study of the rise of the Discalced Carmelite Order may be acknowledged to throw an interesting light on the general history of the period."—Times.

"A truly noble work, written with such profound knowledge and understanding sympathy that the book has spirit and vitality which no merely graphic skill could impart to it."—Review.

"Exceedingly well written, very picturesque, complete, accurate, sincere, enthusiastic, and, above all, extremely readable."—Full Mail Gazette.

"The work is of great and enduring interest."—Aberdeen Free Press.

"No one can take up the book without quickly perceiving that it is written with care as well as with enthusiasm."—Leeds Mercury.

"A notable biography of a remarkable character. It is impossible to withhold admiration for the zeal and devotion of Teresa di Cepeda as depicted in the glowing pages of Mrs. Cunningham-Graham."—Dundee Advertiser.

"The secret hiring of houses, the surreptitious midnight entries of two or three faithful nuns or friars, the conspirations by stealth of these make-shift convents in town after town, together with the fertility of resource displayed by their founders in keeping them out of the clutches of this or that outraged authority—all this fills up hundreds of pages of almost exciting and certainly profoundly interesting history. The difficulties, triumphs, and death of the saint and her subsequent canonisation are subjects exhaustively and well depicted. Such honest labour as the biographer has devoted to her elaborate monograph deserves the frankest recognition. Her glimpses of sixteenth-century life in Spain are vivid and fascinating."—St. James's Gazette.

"By the power of sympathy and of patient and self-sacrificing labour Mrs. Cunningham-Graham may be said to have performed a miracle as remarkable as any attributed to Teresa the nun; she has painted a saint who is also a living and breathing woman."—Scotsman.

A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, London.

NEW WORKS OF FICTION.

A NEW NOVEL AT ALL LIBRARIES.

IF MEN WERE WISE.

By E. L. SHEW.

In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"A work of rare charm and excellence; it is real literature, and real life too—of an out-of-the-way kind, but convincing, and consistent with the theatre of the events and its occupants. It is a story of a woman and two men; the men are more clearly and strongly portrayed than the woman; and the husband (supposed to be dead), who returns to blight the dear-bought happiness of Wrayburn and Mary, is a consummate scoundrel of a curious and almost fascinating kind. It needed no little courage to adopt so well-worn a theme, but the treatment of it entirely justifies the seeming rashness. The strength and the beauty of Wrayburn's character; the pure and simple tragedy of his life; the passages of thought, observation, and reflection, which arrest and hold attention; the very unusual power of the writer so deeply to interest us in the catastrophe that we want to implore him to change it, even while we recognize that it is inevitable, lend to this novel the importance of an exceptional and most welcome event."—World.

A NEW NOVEL BY MISS BROUGHTON.

A BEGINNER.

By RHODA BROUGHTON,

Author of 'Nancy,' 'Cometh Up as a Flower,' &c.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"That, when all the tendenz-novels we have raved about and quarrelled over shall have ceased from troubling an over-troubled world, the eternal smiles and tears locked within the covers of Rhoda Broughton's novels will be as fresh as ever they were, is our confident prediction. Even the present tense cannot seriously affect our appreciation of a story-teller who can afford us two hours of genuine amusement."—Manchester Guardian.

A NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'MASTERS OF THE WORLD.'THOROUGH.

By MARY A. M. MARKS,

Author of 'Dr. Willoughby Smith,' &c.

In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"A remarkable book, written with an unobtrusive quaintness of style, as if it were the record of a chronicler writing soon after its events took place. 'Thorough' has no continuous narrative outside the story of the political intrigues and bloody tumults of Irish history during Charles I.'s reign and the Commonwealth. With these intrigues and tumults are blended their result on the private lives of a few concerned in them. Apart from its historical value it abounds in quaint touches of character, humour, and shrewdness, and in exquisite bits of Irish landscape."—Scottish Leader.

NOW READY,

The DAUGHTER of the NEZ

PERCÉS. By ARTHUR PATERSON, Author of 'A Partner from the West,' &c. 2 vols. crown 8vo.
Some shadow! Faintly Cooper's mantle has surely fallen on the author of this novel. —Manchester Guardian.
"An admirably told, stirring story." —World.
"Brightly and pleasantly written, we can recommend the book to those who love the novel of adventure." —Full Mail Gazette.

NOW READY,

EVE'S APPLE. By M. Deane.

3 vols. crown 8vo.
"We are not sure that this is a book which will impress the crowd; many of its effects have too much subtlety of truthfulness for ordinary popularity, but it is a singularly careful imaginative study both of a society and a character." —Spectator.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

MESSRS. MACLEHOSE & SONS, GLASGOW.

THIS DAY, crown 8vo. 236 pages, 4s. 6d. net.

ETHICS OF CITIZENSHIP.

By JOHN MAC CUNN, M.A.,

Professor of Philosophy in University College, Liverpool.

CONTENTS:—The EQUALITY of MEN—FRATERNITY—"The RIGHTS of MAN"—CITIZENSHIP—The RULE of the MAJORITY in POLITICS—PARTY and POLITICAL CONSISTENCY—ELEMENTS of POLITICAL CONSISTENCY—DEMOCRACY and CHARACTER—SOME ECONOMIC and MORAL ASPECTS of LUXURY.

JUST PUBLISHED, demy 8vo. 624 pages, 10s. 6d. net.

THE NATURAL HISTORY of THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

BEING A STUDY OF THE DOCTRINE OF JESUS AS DEVELOPED FROM JUDAISM AND CONVERTED INTO DOGMA.

By WILLIAM MACKINTOSH, M.A. D.D.

"Dr. Mackintosh's treatise is one of no little importance. It is to be valued, among other things, for gathering together a great deal that has been diffused simply as matter of talk or that has found a place in publications of a lesser or larger kind. This is done with great ability, the writer displaying wide and accurate knowledge of the subject, which is treated by him in a sincere, earnest, and reverent spirit." —Scottishman.

"No more revolutionary book has ever appeared in Scotland, and though many of Dr. Mackintosh's positions are really not more advanced than those of Prof. H. Caird in his great work on 'The Evolution of Religion,' they are stated in a way which makes them far more intelligible to the common man, and with an almost brutal plainness which leaves no room for misunderstanding." —Glasgow Herald.

SECOND EDITION, extra post 8vo. 3 vols. 14s. net.

THE EVOLUTION OF RELIGION.

THE GIFFORD LECTURES DELIVERED BEFORE THE UNIVERSITY OF ST. ANDREWS FOR 1896-97.

By EDWARD CAIRD, M.A. Oxon. LL.D. D.C.L.,

Master of Balliol College, Oxford.

"We believe it would be difficult to over-estimate the importance of this book. It may serve, as no English book has yet served, to mediate between philosophy and life." —Mind.

JUST PUBLISHED, crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

TENNYSON'S IDYLLS OF THE KING AND ARTHURIAN STORY FROM THE SIXTEENTH CENTURY.

By M. W. MAC CALLUM, M.A.,

Professor of Modern Literature in the University of Sydney.

"In regard to Mr. Mac Callum's criticism of the 'Idylls' separately or as a series, it is to pay him a high compliment, but one well merited, to affirm that admirers of the poet will lose both pleasure and profit if they fail to avail themselves of this masterly book." —Speaker.

"The history of a great legend and its literary fruits has seldom been written more conscientiously and learnedly." —Times.

"We cannot leave this book without testifying to its rare literary merit, its comprehensiveness, and its masterly treatment of the whole subject." —Glasgow Herald.

"Certainly no one would assert that the labour of love which this book represents was wasted on an unworthy subject. Prof. Mac Callum has written a most valuable book." —G. L. Gwynn in the Scotsman.

JUST OUT, demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

STOICS AND SAINTS.

LECTURES ON THE LATER HEATHEN MORALISTS AND ON SOME ASPECTS OF THE LIFE OF THE MEDIEVAL CHURCH.

By the late JAMES BALDWIN BROWN, M.A.,

Minister of Bristol Independent Church.

"We can say advisedly that the absolute value of these lectures is great." —Guardian.

"The lectures are prolific in thought, illustrated by adequate scholarship, and written in simple, nervous English." —Baptist Magazine.

"The ripe scholarship, the keen historical discernment, the width of view, the warmth of generous enthusiasm, the lofty and almost austere conscience, which were characteristic of their author, are all apparent in these noble lectures." —Independent.

Immediately, 2 vols. crown 8vo. with Map.

LITERARY ASSOCIATIONS OF THE ENGLISH LAKES.

By Rev. H. D. RAWNSLEY,

Honorary Canon of Carlisle; Author of 'Valere,' &c.

Glasgow: JAMES MACLEHOSE & SONS, 61, St. Vincent-street.

CLARENDON PRESS LIST.

Nearly ready, in 2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth.

EDMUND LUDLOW, The MEMOIRS of, Lieut.enant-General of the Horse in the Army of the Commonwealth of England, 1625-1672. Edited, with Appendices of Letters and Illustrative Documents, by C. H. FIRTH, M.A.

Nearly ready, in 2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth.

An ESSAY CONCERNING HUMAN UNDERSTANDING. By JOHN LOCKE. Collated and Annotated, with Prolegomena, Biographical, Critical, and Historical, by A. CAMPBELL FRASER, Hon. D.C.L. LL.D.

Also, by the SAME AUTHOR.

4 vols. 8vo. 2l. 18s.

BERKELEY.—The WORKS of GEORGE BERKELEY, D.D., formerly Bishop of Cloyne; including many of his Writings hitherto Unpublished. With Prefaces, Annotations, and an Account of his Life and Philosophy.

Nearly ready, crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. net.

STUDIES in FORESTRY; being a Short Course of Lectures on the Principles of Sylviculture delivered at the Botanic Garden, Oxford, during the Hilary and Michaelmas Terms, 1893. By JOHN NISBET, D.Occ., of the Indian Forest Service.

Immediately, crown 8vo. cloth, with numerous illustrations, 10s. 6d. net.

ALTERNATING GENERATIONS. A Biological Study of Oak Galls and Gall Flies. By HERMAN ADLER, M.D., Schleswig. Translated and Edited by CHARLES R. STRATON, F.R.C.S. Edin., F.E.S.

Just published, Second Edition, demy 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.

ELEMENTS of PROJECTIVE GEOMETRY. By LUIGI CREMONA, LL.D. Edin., &c., Professor of Mathematics in the University of Rome. Translated by CHARLES LEUDESORF, M.A., Fellow of Pembroke College, Oxford.

Just published, Second Edition, Revised, crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

An INTRODUCTION to the MATHEMATICAL THEORY of ELECTRICITY and MAGNETISM. By W. T. A. EMTAGE, M.A., Pembroke College, Professor of Physics, University College, Nottingham, late Examiner in the School of Natural Science, Oxford.

Just published, crown 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

SELECT STATUTES and other CONSTITUTIONAL DOCUMENTS, illustrative of the Reigns of Elizabeth and James I. Edited by G. W. PROTHERO, Fellow of King's College, Cambridge.

Just published, 8vo. with a Map, cloth, 12s. 6d.

The LIFE and TIMES of JAMES the FIRST, the Conqueror, King of Aragon, Valencia, and Majorca, Count of Barcelona and Urgel, Lord of Montpellier. By F. DARWIN SWIFT, B.A., formerly Scholar of Queen's College, Oxford.

THE OXFORD CHAUCER.

In 6 vols. demy 8vo. with Portrait and Facsimiles.

Now ready, Vol. II., price 18s., pp. lxxviii-506, demy 8vo. with Facsimile from the Harleian MS.

The COMPLETE WORKS of GEOFFREY CHAUCER. Edited from numerous Manuscripts. By Prof. W. W. SKEAT.

Contents of Vol. II.

INTRODUCTION to BOETHIUS.	INTRODUCTION to TROILUS.
BOETHIUS de CONSOLATIONE PHILOSOPHIE.	TROILUS and CRISEYDE.
NOTES to BOETHIUS.	NOTES to TROILUS.

The remaining Four Volumes will be published at short intervals during the present year.

The Complete Set of Six Volumes is offered to subscribers at Three Guineas net, payable in advance.

The Subscription List will be closed before the issue is completed, and the names of original subscribers will be given at the end of the Sixth Volume.

*. Three hundred numbered copies only are printed on Large Paper.

Nearly ready, small 4to. gilt top, half-vellum, 21s. net.

LATIN PROSE VERSIONS. Contributed by Various Scholars. Edited by GEORGE G. RAMSAY, M.A. LL.D., &c.

Nearly ready, demy 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

INFAMIA: its Place in Roman Public and Private Law. By A. H. J. GREENIDGE, M.A., Hertford College.

Just published, demy 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

A TREATISE on the FOREIGN POWERS and JURISDICTION of the BRITISH CROWN. By WILLIAM EDWARD HALL, M.A., Barrister-at-Law.

This book raises several questions of importance with regard to protectorates, &c., which have not hitherto received sufficient attention, and is exceedingly important in connexion with the recent adjourned debate in the House of Commons with respect to Uganda.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR,

INTERNATIONAL LAW. By W. E. HALL, M.A. Third Edition. 8vo. 22s. 6d.

Just published, demy 8vo. cloth, 14s.

The PRINCIPLES of MORALS. By THOMAS FOWLER, D.D., President of Corpus Christi College, and sometime Wykeham Professor of Logic in the University of Oxford; and JOHN MATTHIAS WILSON, B.D., late President of Corpus Christi College, and sometime Whyte's Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of Oxford.

*. The Gelasian Sacramentary is among the books prescribed for the Honour School of Theology, in the Section of "Liturgies."

Just published, medium 8vo. cloth, with Two Facsimiles, 18s.

The GELASIAN SACRAMENTARY. Liber Sacramentorum Romanæ Ecclesiæ. Edited, with Introduction, Critical Notes, and Appendix, by H. A. WILSON, M.A., Fellow of St. Mary Magdalen College.

Just published, crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

HEGEL'S PHILOSOPHY of MIND. Translated from the 'Encyclopædia of the Philosophical Sciences.' With Five Introductory Essays. By WM. WALLACE, M.A. LL.D., Fellow of Merton College, and Whyte's Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of Oxford.

FULL CLARENDON PRESS CATALOGUES WILL BE SENT POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

London: HENRY FROWDE, Clarendon Press Warehouse, Amen Corner, E.C.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

The "HIGHER CRITICISM" and the VERDICT of the MONUMENTS. By the Rev. A. H. Sayce, Queen's College, Oxford. Demy 8vo. Second Edition, buckram, bevelled boards, 7s. 6d.
 "A really valuable and important work, perhaps the best which Prof. Sayce has yet written."—Academy.

The CHRISTIAN CHURCH in these ISLANDS before the COMING of AUGUSTINE. By the Rev. Canon BROWN, B.D. D.C.L. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 1s. 6d. (Ready shortly.)

The CELTIC CHURCH in SCOTLAND. Being an Introduction to the History of the Christian Church in Scotland down to the Death of St. Margaret. By the Right Rev. JOHN DOWDES, D.D., Bishop of Edinburgh. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 3s. 6d.

The CHRISTIAN MINISTRY in the NEW TESTAMENT. By the Rev. A. R. Egar. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

RELIGION in JAPAN, SHINTOISM, BUDDHISM, and CHRISTIANITY. By the Rev. G. A. Cobbold. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

The OFFICIAL YEAR BOOK of the CHURCH of ENGLAND for 1894. Furnishing a Trustworthy Account of the Condition of the Church of England, and of all Bodies in Communion with her throughout the World. Demy 8vo. paper boards, 2s.; cloth boards, red edges, 4s.

VERSES. By Christina G. Rossetti. Reprinted from 'Called to be Saints,' 'Time Flies,' and 'The Face of the Deep.' Small post 8vo. printed in red and black on hand-made paper, cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

The FACE of the DEEP. A Devotional Commentary on the Apocalypse. By CHRISTINA G. ROSSETTI, Author of 'Time Flies,' &c. Demy 8vo. cloth boards, 7s. 6d.

EMINENT CHRISTIAN WORKERS of the NINETEENTH CENTURY. By G. BARNETT SMITH, Author of 'Every-day Heroes,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 3s.

The Lives selected are the following:—Archbishop Taft, Paterson the Martyr-Bishop, the Earl of Shaftesbury, Bishop Daniel Wilson, Arnold of Rugby, Bishop Wilberforce, George Moore the Philanthropist, Hannington the East African Hero, and Bishop Selwyn.

The LIFE of GEORGE HERBERT, of BEMERTON. With Portrait. Demy 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

A new life of Herbert, in which a minute inquiry into his career, and the times in which he lived, has brought many new facts to light.]

BUTLER'S 'ANALOGY' and MODERN THOUGHT. By the Rev. A. R. EGAR, D.D. T.O.D. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 3s. 6d.

EARLY CHRISTIAN MISSIONS of IRELAND, SCOTLAND, and ENGLAND. By Mrs. BUNDLE CHARLES, Author of 'The Chronicles of the Schönberg-Cotta Family,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 4s.

SIDE LIGHTS on CHURCH HISTORY:—HISTORY of EARLY CHRISTIAN ART. By the Rev. E. L. CUTTS, D.D. Demy 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

FOUNDATIONS of SACRED STUDY. By C. J. ELICOTT, D.D., Lord Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol. Small post 8vo. cloth boards, 2s.

ANGLICAN ORDERS and JURISDICTION. By the Rev. EDWARD DENNY, M.A. Small post 8vo. cloth boards, 3s.

LIFE in ALGOMA; or, Three Years of a Clergyman's Life and Work in that Diocese. By H. N. B. Post 8vo. cloth, 2s.

SELF-DISCIPLINE in RELATION to the LIFE and WORK of a PRIEST. Six Lectures on Pastoral Theology, delivered in the Divinity School, Cambridge. By the Rev. EDGAR C. S. GIBSON, M.A. Small post 8vo. cloth boards, 2s.

NON-CHRISTIAN RELIGIOUS SYSTEMS: Hinduism. By Sir M. MONIER WILLIAMS, M.A. D.C.L. A New and Revised Edition. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

LESSONS from EARLY ENGLISH CHURCH HISTORY. Three Lectures delivered in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, London, by the Rev. Canon BROWN, B.D. D.C.L. Small post 8vo. cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

STORY of a MELANESIAN DEACON—CLEMENT MARAU. Written by HIMSELF. Translated by the Rev. R. H. CODRINGTON, D.D. With Portrait and several Illustrations. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 1s.

EVOLUTION, CREATION, and the FALL. Lecture to Men. By the Ven. J. M. WILSON, M.A., Archdeacon of Manchester. Small post 8vo. paper cover, 2d.

EVOLUTION as a REPLY to MATERIALISM, PESSIMISM, and AGNOSTICISM. Lecture to Men. By the Ven. J. M. WILSON, Archdeacon of Manchester. Small post 8vo. paper cover, 2s.

CHRISTIANITY as the CROWN and GOAL of all the ANCIENT RELIGIONS. A Lecture to Men. By the Ven. J. M. WILSON, M.A., Archdeacon of Manchester. Small post 8vo. paper cover, 2d.

SIMPLE EXPERIMENTS for SCIENCE TEACHING. With numerous Diagrams, including 300 Experiments fully illustrating the Elementary Physics and Chemistry Division in the Brexton School Continuation Code. By J. A. BOWER. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

MANUALS of HEALTH. Notes on the Ventilation and Warming of Houses, Churches, Schools, and other Buildings. By Prof. E. H. JACOB. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, 1s.

ROMANCE of LOW LIFE AMONGST PLANTS: Facts and Phenomena of Cryptogamic Vegetation. By M. C. COOKE, M.A. LL.D. A.L.S. With numerous Woodcuts. Cloth boards, 4s.

VEGETABLE WASPS and PLANT WORMS. By M. C. COOKE, M.A. LL.D. A.L.S., Author of 'Tollers in the Sea,' &c. Illustrated. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 5s.

FREAKS and MARVELS of PLANT LIFE; or, Curiosities of Vegetation. By M. C. COOKE, M.A. LL.D. A.L.S. With numerous Illustrations. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

DISEASES of PLANTS. By Professor Marshall Ward. With numerous Illustrations. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

The MAKING of FLOWERS. By the Rev. Professor GEORGE HENSLOW, M.A. F.L.S. F.G.S. With several Illustrations. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 3s. 6d.

FLOWERS of the FIELD. By the late Rev. C. A. Johns. New Edition, with an Appendix on Grasses by C. H. JONES, M.A. With numerous Illustrations. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

WILD FLOWERS. By Anne Pratt, Author of 'Our Native Songsters.' 2 vols. with 100 Coloured Plates, 16mo. cloth boards, 8s.

The FERN PORTFOLIO. By Francis George Heath. 1 vol. (16 in. by 12 in.), cloth, 8s. Fifteen Plates, life size, exquisitely Coloured from Nature, and accompanied by Descriptive Text—all the Species of British Ferns, which comprise a large proportion of the Ferns of America and many other parts of the world.

NATURE and her SERVANTS. By Theodore Wood, F.R.S., Author of 'Our Insect Allies,' &c. Large post 8vo. with numerous Woodcuts, cloth boards, 6s.

BRITISH BIRDS in their HAUNTS; being a Popular Account of the Birds which have been observed in the British Isles, their Haunts and Habits. By the late Rev. C. A. JONES, B.A. F.L.S. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

MAN and his HANDIWORK. By the Rev. J. G. Wood, Author of 'Lave and Field,' &c. Large post 8vo. with about 400 Illustrations, cloth boards, 10s. 6d.

WAYSIDE SKETCHES. By Prof. Hulme, F.L.S. F.S.A. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

PICTORIAL ARCHITECTURE of FRANCE. By the Rev. H. H. BISHOP, M.A. With numerous Engravings. Oblong 4to. cloth boards, 7s. 6d.

PICTORIAL ARCHITECTURE of the BRITISH ISLES. With about 150 Illustrations. Letterpress by the Rev. H. H. BISHOP. Revised and Enlarged Edition. Oblong 4to. cloth boards, 4s.

PICTORIAL ARCHITECTURE of GREECE and ITALY. By the Rev. H. H. BISHOP. Oblong 4to. with numerous Engravings, cloth boards, 6s.

PICTORIAL GEOGRAPHY of the BRITISH ISLES. By MARY E. PALGRAVE. Oblong 4to. with numerous Engravings, cloth boards, 6s.

LONDON; NORTHUMBERLAND AVENUE, W.C.; 43, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, E.C. BRIGHTON: 135, NORTH-STREET.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

EIGHT HOURS for WORK. By John Rae, M.A., Author of 'Contemporary Socialism.' Crown
8vo. 4s. 6d. net.

SOCIAL EVOLUTION. By Benjamin Kidd. Third Thousand. 8vo. 10s. net.

The LETTERS of EDWARD FITZGERALD. Edited by W. Aldis Wright. 2 vols. New Edition. Globe 8vo. 10s. [The Everyday Series.]

READINGS on the INFERNO of DANTE, chiefly based on the Commentary of Benvenuto da
IMOLA. By the Hon. WILLIAM WARREN VERNON, M.A. With an Introduction by the Rev. EDWARD MOORE, D.D., Hon. D.Litt. Dublin, Principal of St. Edmund Hall, Oxford. In 2 vols. crown 8vo. 30s.

* Uniform with 'Readings on the Purgatorio of Dante,' by the Same Author.

ACADEMY.—"Long residence in Italy, and thorough mastery of its language and literature, have specially fitted Mr. Vernon for the task of translation, enabling him to render difficult idioms and fine shades of meaning with a precision scarcely to be attained by distant scholars whose knowledge of Italian is chiefly derived from books. Mr. Vernon's present work, built on the same lines as the 'Readings on the Purgatorio,' is an equally valuable and even more comprehensive guide."

DAILY NEWS.—"A more valuable aid to serious students than this admirably complete and conscientious piece of work it would be difficult to imagine."

SOURCES of the CONSTITUTION of the UNITED STATES, considered in Relation to Colonial and English History. By C. ELLIS STEVENS, LL.D. D.C.L. F.R.S. (Edinburgh). Crown 8vo. 6s. 6d. net.

The LAWS and JURISPRUDENCE of ENGLAND and AMERICA. Being a Series of Lectures delivered before Yale University. By JOHN F. DILLON, LL.D., Storrs Professor, Yale University, 1891-2, Author of 'Commentaries on the Law of Municipal Corporations.' 8vo. 16s. net.

TIMES.—"To Englishmen it will be recommended by the strong attachment manifested by the author to the traditions of Westminster and Lincoln's Inn."

A PRIMER of NAVIGATION. By A. T. Flagg, M.A., Head Master of the Marine School of South Shields. Felt 8vo. 1s.

PRACTICAL BOTANY for BEGINNERS. By P. O. BOWNE, D.Sc. F.R.S., Regius Professor of Botany in the University of Glasgow, Author of 'A Course of Practical Instruction in Botany.' Globe 8vo. 3s. 6d.

MATERIALS for the STUDY of VARIATION. Treated with Especial regard to Discontinuity in the Origin of Species. By WILLIAM BATESON, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 8vo. 31s. net.

NATURAL SCIENCE.—"It is impossible to exaggerate the skill and care with which this has been done, and there can be no question that a most excellent introduction to the study of variation has been written."

Prof. A. MACALISTER, F.R.S., in the EXPOSITOR.—"This volume is the record of prodigious labour, both of actual observation and also of bibliographical research. It is so full of facts that it is not easy reading, but the arrangement is good, and the illustrations are excellent. Since the publication of the 'Origin of Species' there has scarcely appeared such another monument of individual labour."

A MANUAL of MICROCHEMICAL ANALYSIS. By Prof. H. BEHRENS of the Polytechnic School in Delft, Holland. With an Introductory Chapter by J. W. JUDD, F.R.S., Professor of Geology at the Royal College of Science. With 84 illustrations drawn by the Author. Crown 8vo. 6s.

CHEMICAL NEWS.—"Prof. Behrens is an exceedingly accurate and delicate worker, and the student who follows his instructions will not be led astray. The work well deserves to be strongly recommended."

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"Prof. Judd has done good service to students of a very interesting branch of geology by introducing to them Prof. H. Behrens's 'Manual of Microchemical Analysis' in English dress. The book contains a remarkably clear account of the methods by means of which very minute quantities of mineral substances can be subjected to chemical tests, and their character recognized."

A TREATISE on HYDROSTATICS. By Alfred GEORGE GREENHILL, F.R.S., Professor of Mathematics in the Artillery College, Woolwich. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

GUARDIAN.—"For those who require a special knowledge of the subject the book is invaluable, and the most complete treatise we have seen."

The THEORY of HEAT. By Thomas Preston, M.A. (Dublin), Fellow of the Royal University of Ireland, and Professor of Natural Philosophy, University College, Dublin. 8vo. 17s. net.

Prof. CAREY FOSTER in NATURE.—"He has produced a very valuable and useful book, which we earnestly recommend to all serious students of the subject."

MODERN PLANE GEOMETRY. Being the Proofs of the Theorems in the Syllabus of Modern Plane Geometry, issued by the Association for the Improvement of Geometrical Teaching. By G. RICHARDSON, M.A., Second Master of Winchester College, and A. S. HAMSBY, M.A., Mathematical Master of Fettes College, Edinburgh. Globe 8vo. 3s. 6d.

GUARDIAN.—"The book is replete with well-chosen examples, and should be of the greatest use to boys in the highest division."

A MODERN BUCCANEER. By Rolf Boldrewood. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.—"Excellent descriptions of scenery and people abound." SPEAKER.—"Mr. Boldrewood possesses something of the secret of Defoe. He tells his tale with so much precision and so much detail that he compels the reader to accept it." GLASGOW HERALD.—"Singularity vivid and natural in its description of the most desperate and startling incidents."

A VALIANT IGNORANCE. By Mary Angela DICKENS. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

BOOKMAN.—"She is an analyst of character, merciless often, always unflinching, but honest, serious, and capable." WORLD.—"The most skilfully constructed, most evenly written, most progressively and consistently interesting novel she has yet produced. There is strong drawing in the character of Mrs. Romayne."

The FLOWER of FORGIVENESS. By Flora ANNIE STEEL. 2 vols. Globe 8vo. 13s.

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"The two volumes of short stories which Mrs. Steel calls 'The Flower of Forgiveness' will confirm the reputation of this admirable writer. The best of them are a pure delight, most cunning, most delicate, most pathetic." MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.—"Much sympathy with humanity, however dark the skin, and a delicate touch in narrative raise Mrs. Steel's Indian stories into a high rank. There is a pathos in them not common among Anglo-Indian story-tellers." SCOTSMAN.—"They have a rich imaginative colour."

MACMILLAN'S SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.—NEW VOLUMES.

MARION DARCHE. By F. Marion Crawford. Crown 8vo. 6s.

NATIONAL REVIEW.—"Eminently charming, entertaining, and readable from beginning to end." SATURDAY REVIEW.—"Charming in style, and very easy to read."

PIETRO GHISLERI. By F. Marion Crawford. Crown 8vo. 6s.

ATHENÆUM.—"There are no dull pages in this elaborate and engrossing study of contemporary manners and morals." SPEAKER.—"Mr. Crawford is an artist, and a great one, and he has been brilliantly successful in a task in which ninety-nine out of every hundred writers would have failed."

MACMILLAN'S THREE-AND-SIXPENNY SERIES.—NEW VOLUMES.

A COUNTRY GENTLEMAN and his FAMILY. By Mrs. OLIPHANT. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The SECOND SON. By Mrs. Oliphant. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

BARRACKS, BIVOUACS, and BATTLES. By ARCHIBALD FORBES, LL.D. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

MACMILLAN'S MAGAZINE.

No. 415. MAY. Price 1s.

Contents.

1. PERLYCROSS. By R. D. Blackmore. Chaps. 30-39.
2. The PARLIAMENTS and MINISTRIES of the CENTURY. By C. B. Roylance-Kent.
3. A DISCOURSE on SEQUELS.
4. DITAS.
5. The MELANCHOLY MAN.
6. BRIGGING LETTERS and their WRITERS.
7. The CLIFF-CLIMBERS.
8. The LAST FIGHT of JOAN of ARC. By Andrew Lang.

MACMILLAN & CO. London.

WALTER SCOTT'S NEW BOOKS.

MR. GEORGE MOORE'S NEW NOVEL
Cloth, crown 8vo. price 6s.

ESTHER WATERS: a Novel.

By GEORGE MOORE.

"As we live the book through again in memory, we feel more and more convinced that Mr. Moore has done for all vindicated his position among the best living novelists of whom the historians of English literature will have to take account."—Daily Chronicle

"I can only compare it with the best of Hawthorne's work, and what greater praise could one give than that 'best'—namely, that it is a novel in detail, nothing is omitted, all the things that the complexity of life itself."—Mr. A. H. Wainwright in the Morning Leader

OTHER NOVELS BY GEORGE MOORE.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s. 6d. each.

A DRAMA IN MUSLIN. Seventh Edition.

A MODERN LOVER. New Edition.

A MUMMER'S WIFE. Twentieth Edition.

VAIN FORTUNE. 6s. With Illustrations by Maurice Greiffenhagen. A few large paper copies at One Guinea.

SECOND EDITION, crown 8vo. cloth, price 6s.

MODERN PAINTING. By George Moore.

SOME PRESS NOTICES.

"Of the very few books on art that painters and critics should not on account leave unread this is surely one."—Standard

"His book is one of the best books about pictures that have come into our hands for some years."—St. James's Gazette

"A more original, a better informed, a more suggestive and let us add, a more amusing work on the art of to-day we have never read than this volume."—Chicago Herald

CONTEMPORARY SCIENCE SERIES.

LATEST VOLUME—Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6s.

MAN AND WOMAN: a Study of Human Secondary Sexual Characters. By HAYDON RILES.

Author of 'The Criminal,' 'The Nationalization of Health,' &c. With numerous illustrations.

"Altogether we must congratulate Mr. Riles upon having produced a book which, apart from its high scientific claims, will by its straight forward simplicity upon points of delivery appeal strongly to all those readers outside purely scientific circles who may be curious in these matters."—Pall Mall Gazette

VOLUME IN PREPARATION.

READY IN MAY.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s. 6d. with numerous diagrams.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODERN CAPITALISM. A Study of Machine Production. By JOHN A. ROBINSON, M.A.

NEW VOLUME READY MAY 10.

THE CANTERBURY POETS.

SPECIAL EDITION with the original Frontispiece, price 2s.

POEMS AND LYRICS OF NATURE.

Edited by Mrs. R. WINGATE KIMBER.

This volume contains contributions by Arthur Christopher Benson, R. B. Crockett, John Davidson, Lord Dunsany, John Galsworthy, Richard Le Gallienne, John Galsworthy, William Morris, George Moore, Ernest Rhys, A. Mary F. Robinson, Christian Rossetti, Algernon Charles Swinburne, Arthur Symonds, Francis Thompson, Katherine Tynan, William Watson, Oscar Wilde, W. H. Wills &c.

NOW READY, crown 8vo. paper cover, price 1s. cloth, 2s.

FROM BONDAGE TO BROTHERHOOD: a History of the Workers. By J. C. KENNEDY, Author of 'The Anatomy of Misery,' &c.

"This little book will certainly inspire with a worthy purpose and a deep human feeling all who honestly read it."—Daily Chronicle

NOW READY, New and Cheaper Edition, on antique paper, with Index specially prepared for the edition, crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

AUTHORISED TRANSLATION, COPYRIGHT.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS WITHIN.

YOU, or Christianity not as a Mystical doctrine, but as a New Life-Concept. With a Preface for this edition by Count Leo Tolstoy. Translated from the Original Russian text by A. DIELAND.

JUST ISSUED, crown 8vo. paper cover, price 1s.

FAMILY HAPPINESS: a Novel. By Count LEO TOLSTOI.

JUST READY, crown 8vo. cloth, price 3s. 6d.

DRAMATIC ESSAYS BY LEIGH HUNT.

Edited and Edited with notes and Introduction, by WILLIAM ARCHER and HERBERT W. LOWE. With an Engraved Portrait of Leigh Hunt as Frontispiece.

This volume contains the Criticism collected by Leigh Hunt himself in 1850 (long out of print), and the admirable Articles which he contributed more than twenty years later to the Times, and never republished.

JUST READY, crown 8vo. half-antique, paper boards, price 1s. 6d.

The THEATRICAL "WORLD" for 1894. By WILLIAM ARCHER.

"As a record of the year's doings in the theatre Mr. Archer's volume stands unrivalled."—Daily News

A NEW ISSUE OF THE

WORKS OF NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE.

In 12 vols. crown 8vo. antique paper with Frontispieces in Photogravure, the Cover designed by Walter Crane, price 12s. 6d. per vol.

LATEST VOLUME, JUST ISSUED.

A WONDER BOOK FOR GIRLS and BOYS.

With a Frontispiece by James Torrance.

Fourth and Revised Edition, illustrated, price 3s. 6d. cloth.

The LAND OF THE VIKINGS: a Popular Guide to Norway. By C. F. JOHNSON. Containing Maps, Itinerary, Routes, Tables, and all information useful to Tourists.

COMPACT and PRACTICAL. In slip cloth for the Pocket.

Price 1s. each.

THE EUROPEAN CONVERSATION.

ENGLISH—FRENCH—SPANISH—ITALIAN—GERMAN—RUSSIAN.

Concise arranged to permit direct and immediate reference. Hints to those unacquainted with foreign travel.

London: WALTER SCOTT, LIMITED,
24, Warwick-square, Paternoster-row.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S NEW BOOKS.

Messrs. METHUEN will issue on Monday, May 7th, a New Novel by STANLEY WEYMAN, entitled 'UNDER the RED ROBE.'

The Third Edition of 'The RUBICON' being nearly exhausted, a Fourth Edition is in preparation.

E. F. Benson.—The RUBICON. By E. F. BENSON, Author of 'Dodo.' 2 vols. crown 8vo. 31s.

"The anticipations which must have been formed by all readers of 'Dodo' will in no wise be disappointed by 'The Rubicon.' The new work is well written, stimulating, unconventional, and, in a word, characteristic. Intellectual force is never absent, and the keen observation and knowledge of character of which there is abundant evidence are aided by real literary power."—Birmingham Post

"In Gerlie Carston Mr. Benson quite surprises us with the skill he shows in drawing a simple and lovable girl."—Westminster Gazette

"We congratulate Mr. Benson upon an exceptional achievement. He has conceived and executed unforgettably an analytical study of modern life in which a certain salt of humour serves, at least, to keep the pages wholesome. The change and fusion of character amid the flow of passion have been rightly felt and justly depicted from the beginning, events have fallen out in a natural sequence, and the whole story conveys an impression of reality. The book is a notable advance upon Mr. Benson's previous work."—National Observer

"The Rubicon" seems to us more promising than "Dodo."—Literary World

"An advance upon 'Dodo'."—Spectator

"Mr. Benson's very clever and deeply interesting novel—a novel far superior to 'Dodo.'—Stamford Daily News

"Mr. Benson's second novel is better artistically than his first. The character-drawing is excellent."—Globe

Baring-Gould.—The QUEEN of LOVE. By S. BARING-GOULD, Author of 'Mehalah,' 'Cheap-Jack Zita,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

A story of the Cheshire salt region—a new district for the exercise of Mr. Baring-Gould's original and powerful gifts.

Richard Pryce.—WINIFRED MOUNT. By RICHARD PRYCE, Author of 'Miss Maxwell's Affections,' 'Time and the Woman,' &c. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

A story of society by Mr. Pryce, "whose clever pen," says the Athenæum, "has the lightness and ease of Octave Feuillet."

Mrs. Oliphant.—The PRODIGALS. By Mrs. OLIPHANT. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

Stanley Weyman.—UNDER the RED ROBE. By STANLEY WEYMAN, Author of 'A Gentleman of France,' &c. With 13 Illustrations by E. Oslen Woodville. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

Gilbert Parker.—The TRANSLATION of a SAVAGE. By GILBERT PARKER, Author of 'Pierre and his People,' 'Mrs. Falchion,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6s.

A story with a powerful and pathetic motive by a writer who has rapidly made his way to the front.

Constance Smith.—A CUMBERER of the GROUND. By CONSTANCE SMITH, Author of 'The Riddle of Lawrence Harland,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

[Nearly ready.]

NEW EDITIONS.

EIGHTH EDITION NOW READY.

Marie Corelli.—BARABBAS: a Dream of the World's Tragedy. By MARIE CORELLI, Author of 'A Romance of Two Worlds,' 'Vendetta,' &c. Eighth Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

Miss Corelli's new romance has been received with much disapprobation by the secular papers, and with warm welcome by the religious papers. By the former she has been accused of blasphemy and bad taste; "a gory nightmare"; "a hideous travesty"; "grotesque vulgarisation"; "unworthy of criticism"; "vulgar redundancy"; "shocking details"—these are some of the secular frowns of approval. On the other hand, the religious papers praised the dignity of conception, the reserve and reverence that characterized the book.

E. F. Benson.—DODO: a Detail of the Day. By E. F. BENSON. Thirteenth Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

Baring-Gould.—CHEAP-JACK ZITA. By S. BARING-GOULD. Crown 8vo. 6s.

A Cheap Edition of a story which has been recognised as Mr. Baring-Gould's most original effort since 'Mehalah.'

SEVENTH EDITION now ready.

Rudyard Kipling.—BARRACK-ROOM BALLADS, and other Verses. By RUDYARD KIPLING. Twenty-third Thousand. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Mr. Kipling's verse is strong, vivid, and full of character..... Unmistakable genius rings in every line."—Times

Henley and Whibley.—A BOOK of ENGLISH PROSE. Collected by W. E. HENLEY and CHARLES WHIBLEY. Crown 8vo.

Also small Limited Editions on Dutch and Japanese Paper, 21s. and 42s. net.

A companion book to Mr. Henley's well-known 'Lym Heroica.' Each piece, whether containing a character-sketch or incident, is complete in itself. The book will be finely printed and bound.

Waldstein.—JOHN RUSKIN: a Study. By CHARLES WALDSTEIN, M.A., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. Post 8vo. 5s.

Also a Small Edition on Hand-made Paper, demy 8vo. 15s.

This is an appreciation of Mr. Ruskin's work and influence—literary and social—by a critic who has enough admiration to make him sympathetic, and enough discernment to make him impartial.

Norman Gale.—CRICKET SONGS. By NORMAN GALE. Crown 8vo. linen, 2s. 6d.

Also a Limited Edition on Hand-made Paper, demy 8vo. 10s. 6d. net.

Also a Small Edition on Japanese Paper, demy 8vo. 21s. net.

[In the press.]

METHUEN & CO. 36, Essex-street, W.C.

CHATTO & WINDUS, PUBLISHERS.

'A DAUGHTER of TO-DAY,' the New Novel by SARA JEAN-NETTE DUNCAN (Mrs. EVERARD COTES), Author of 'A Social Departure,' will be ready in 2 vols. at all Libraries on May 10.

ALAN ST. AUBYN'S New Novel, 'IN the FACE of the WORLD,' by the Author of 'The Old Maid's Sweetheart,' is now ready in 2 vols. at all Libraries.

Mr. W. E. NORRIS'S New Novel, 'SAINT ANN'S,' by the Author of 'The Regent,' has been Reprinted, and the SECOND EDITION may now be had in 2 vols. at all Libraries.

"It is the feeling of having been among well-bred, well-mannered, well-conducted people, which Mr. Norris, with his tactful sense of what is tellable and what is not, never fails to convey, that will refresh and charm the novel-reader—who has lately, it must be owned, been forced into rather wild company."—Daily Chronicle.
"A happy vein of humorous reflection, a power of easy transition from grave to gay, and a stock of worldly wisdom, make the author of 'Saint Ann's' a welcome companion."—Morning Leader.
"Mr. Norris is a literary artist who is both too fastidious and too conscientious to slur his work.....Mr. Norris gives a very dramatic turn to the story, and it is told with his accustomed ease."—Lancet Mercury.

By R. E. Francillon.—JACK DOYLE'S DAUGHTER. 3 vols. at every Library.

"Mr. Francillon long ago conquered the secret of a readable novel, and his latest book shows that his hand has not lost its cunning.....The story is bright and amusing.....It is in fact, a very book."—Lancet Mercury.

By G. A. Henty.—DOROTHY'S DOUBLE. 3 vols. at all Libraries.

"Mr. Henty is a past-master in the art of ennobling the story of incident, and we could hardly wish for a better example of this particular order in fiction than he has provided for us in 'Dorothy's Double'.....A thoroughly interesting and readable story."—Speaker.

By L. T. Meade.—A SOLDIER of FORTUNE. 3 vols. at all Libraries.

"People will read 'A Soldier of Fortune' with a great deal of pleasure. Not only is the story good, and conceived on original lines, but the studies of human nature are excellent.....The author is to be congratulated on an eminently readable novel."—Standard.

By D. Christie Murray.—IN DIREST PERIL. 3 vols. at all Libraries.

"We are tempted to use up the reviewer's kindly stock of phrases in connexion with 'In Direst Peril'—'not a dull page throughout,' 'capitally written,' 'a bright, readable story,' and so on.....For Mr. Christie Murray's book is certainly all this, and a great deal more besides."—Standard.

By Mrs. Campbell Praed.—CHRISTINA CHARD. 3 vols. at every Library.

"Mrs. Praed generally contrives to write not merely a readable but a very novel, and 'Christina Chard' is a case in point.....The plot is fresh and clever, and the usual virtues of the book are often shown and sometimes sparkling. Mrs. Praed knows the sort of life which she describes, and her pictures of society are in the main true to life. 'Christina Chard' is written with easy grace, and its insight into certain phases of life is occasionally remarkable."—Lancet Mercury.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY NOVELS.

TOM SAWYER ABROAD. By MARK TWAIN. With numerous Illustrations by Dan Beard. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

"A new book by Mark Twain is good news for all who have the taste, inborn or acquired, for a serious humor, and this time the new book has the additional advantage of enabling us to renew acquaintance with our old friends Tom Sawyer and his trusty comrade Huckleberry Finn, together with Negro Jim, who lingers curiously long agreeably in the memory of Mr. Clemens's readers.....Tom Sawyer Abroad, with its Jules Verne-like invention and quiet odyssey of thought and of passion, ought to be an especial delight to boy readers."—Daily News.

VASHTI and ESTHER: a Story of Society To-day. By "BELL" of the World. A New Edition immediately.

"The book will presently, I imagine, cause excitement in circles which were lately stirred by 'Dodo.' Every one will read the book, which will pretty surely be talked about. 'Vashti and Esther' will give the cap-dimere plenty to do, for it is full of types, if not of people.....It is a clever book, written by one who knows, who will be voted daring, no doubt—even audacious."—Temple News.

A PROTÉGÉE of JACK HAMLIN'S, &c. By BERT HARTE. With 26 Illustrations.

"Mr. Bert Harte's new volume of stories is just as fresh and delightful as the earliest of his productions.....The author has not forgotten any characteristic of the wild life of which he is such a master, he makes his readers breathe the very air of the great West.....The whole volume is charming."—World.

The REBEL QUEEN. By WALTER BESANT. With a Frontispiece by A. Birkenhead.

"The Rebel Queen" is a remarkable work. It is fascinating as a fiction, and it is instructive and suggestive as a study in sociology to an extent which is not to be taken in at a first reading."—World.

MONEY. (L'ARGENT.) By ÉMILE ZOLA. Translated, with a Preface, by E. A. VIZETELLY.

A DOG and HIS SHADOW. By R. E. FRANCILLON.

"In 'A Dog and his Shadow' we have a study of a man and his circumstances that, in default of the Byronic himself, might have satisfied George Meredith.....A Dog and his Shadow has a wealth of character study and playfully distasteful."—Morning Leader.

MY TWO WIVES, &c. By GEORGE R. SIMS (DAQUEST). Post 8vo. Illustrated boards, 2s. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Mr. Sims is sometimes called an English Zola, sometimes a present-day Dickens. He is something of both; but that he has qualities of his own, and is without a peer in his peculiar line of alternate mirth and pathos, is proved once again by this welcome volume."—Weekly Dispatch.

POST-PRANDIAL PHILOSOPHY. By GRANT ALLEN, Author of 'The Evolutionist at Large,' &c. Crown 8vo. Irish linen, 3s. 6d.

"We admire Mr. Allen's lucid style and his admirable grip of his own language. His humour, too, also appeals to us.....His 'Post-Prandial Philosophy' suggests that Mr. Allen enjoys his poem, and is generally very well worth listening to upon the composition of that meal."—Black and White.

ASTROPHEL, and other Poems. By ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 7s.

"The death of Browning and Tennyson has given a new prominence to Mr. Swinburne, whom the popular voice would no doubt place first in the succession of poetic genius, and any new volume from his hand possesses now a special interest.....This new work is a considerable addition to the poetic literature of the time. While ripe and mellower in thought than many of its predecessors from the same hand, it exhibits all Mr. Swinburne's distinctive qualities, his glowing imagery, high aspirations, magical power of phrase and rhythm, love of nature, and strong human sympathy."—Times.

TWENTIETH YEAR.—On May 7, ONE SHILLING.

ACADEMY NOTES. By Henry Blackburn.

ACADEMY NOTES is profusely illustrated. ACADEMY NOTES is the only Handbook published on the Opening Day of the Royal Academy Exhibition. ACADEMY NOTES is the only book which contains a descriptive summary of the contents of the Exhibition. ACADEMY NOTES is the only book which gives a Plan of the Galleries and the Positions on the walls of the Principal Pictures. ACADEMY NOTES is the only book used by collectors and kept as a permanent record of the Exhibitions. An important feature of the issue of ACADEMY NOTES for 1894 is the large number of pictures and sketches which appear in no other publication.

A VINDICATION of PHRENOLOGY. By W. MATTIEU WILLIAMS, F.R.S. F.R.A.S., Author of 'Science in Short Chapters,' &c. With a Photogravure Portrait of the Author and over 60 Illustrations. Demy 8vo. cloth extra, 12s. 6d.

The GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE. One Shilling Monthly. Contents for May:—A SHADY, SHY MAN. By G. B. O'Halloran.—DICKENS'S CURIOS. By Percy Fitzgerald, M.A.—A PREP at the FRENCH. By George Withington.—A CLEVER YOUNG MAN. By Foster Watson, M.A.—LIFE in the SAGE-BUSH LANDS. By G. H. Bailey.—THE GENESIS of the STEAMSHIP. By F. M. Holmes.—FRANCIS WRIGHT, FIRST WOMAN LECTURER. By Elizabeth Lee.—IN the HEART of the COTSWOLDS. By C. Parkinson.—The HUMES of POLWARTH. By Sylvanus Urban.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE SLAVE OF THE LAMP.'

At all the Libraries, in 3 vols. post 8vo.

WITH EDGED TOOLS.

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN, Author of 'The Slave of the Lamp,' &c.

"A very clever, bright story.....Mr. Merriman's delineation of Meredith as the beau idéal of the Society young man (before Africa brought out the hero in him), of Mill-cent, the beautiful flirt, of Meredith's cynical old father, is the work of a literary artist."—Daily News.
"Fresh in scheme and bright in treatment, and emphatically a story to be read."—Globe.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S NEW NOVEL.

NOTICE.—The FOURTH EDITION of 'MARCELLA,' 3 vols., by Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD, is now ready at all the Libraries.

CHEAP POPULAR EDITION OF MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S 'DAVID GRIVVE.' NOW READY, crown 8vo. limp cloth, 2s. 6d.

The HISTORY of DAVID GRIVVE. By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD, Author of 'Robert Kiamore,' &c.

Stapence (New Series), No. 131.

The CORNHILL MAGAZINE

for MAY, containing MATTHEW AUSTIN, by W. E. Norris. Chaps. 11-20.—The CARMARVON PENINSULA.—CHARACTER NOTE: The Child.—HACHISCH EATING.—COLOUR-SERGEANT RHODES.—TOFT and CROFT.—BARNABAS RABBITS' MAIN-CLOUD.—THE LAST GOVERNOR of the BASTILLE.—WITH EDGED TOOLS. Chaps. 40-42.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION OF THE HON. EMILY LAWLESS'S 'GRANIA.' NOW READY, crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

GRANIA: the Story of an Island.

By the Hon. EMILY LAWLESS, Author of 'Hurriah,' 'With Essex in Ireland,' &c.

NEW ONE-VOLUME NOVEL.—On MAY 10, crown 8vo. 6s.

STANHOPE of CHESTER: a Mystery. By PERCY ANDREAS.

NEW VOLUMES OF SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S POPULAR 2s. and 2s. 6d. SERIES. IN THE PRESS.

Post 8vo. boards, pictorial cover, 2s. each; or limp red cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

FROM ONE GENERATION to ANOTHER. By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN, Author of 'The Slave of the Lamp,' &c.

DARK: a Tale of the Down

Country. By Mrs. STEPHEN BATSON.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'WHERE TOWN AND COUNTRY MEET.'

On MAY 26, 3 vols. post 8vo.

RICHARD DARE. By Mrs.

ALFRED BALDWIN, Author of 'The Story of a Marriage,' 'Where Town and Country Meet,' &c.

* Messrs. SMITH, ELDER & CO. will be happy to forward a CATALOGUE of their PUBLICATIONS post free on application.

London:

SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

THE BADMINTON LIBRARY.

NEW VOLUMES.

Edited by the DUKE of BEAUFORT, K.G., and
A. E. T. WATSON.

YACHTING.

Vol. I. CRUISING, CONSTRUCTION,
RACING RULES, FITTING-OUT, &c. By Sir EDWARD
SULLIVAN, Bart., LORD BRASSEY, K.C.B., C. E.
SETH-SMITH, C.B., G. L. WATSON, R. T. FRITCHETT.
"THALASSA," the MARL of PEMBROKE and MONT-GOMERY, R. F. KNIGHT, the Rev. G. L. BLAKE, &c.
With 31 Plates and 93 Illustrations in the Text by R. T.
Fritchett, G. L. Watson, J. M. Soper, &c., and from Photographs. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d. (On May 15.)

Vol. II. YACHT CLUBS, YACHTING in AMERICA and the COLONIES, RACING, &c. By the MARQUIS of DUFFERIN and AVAL, K.P., G.
CHRISTOPHER DAVIES, LEWIS HERRSHOFF,
the MARL of UNSLOW, G.C.M.G., H. HOEN, Sir GEORGE LACH, K.C.B., &c. With 35 Plates and 160 Illustrations in the Text by R. T. Fritchett, G. L.
Watson, J. M. Soper, &c., and from Photographs. Crown
8vo. 10s. 6d. (On May 15.)

NEW BOOK BY ANDREW LANG.

BAN and ARRIÈRE BAN: a
Rally of Fugitive Rhymes. By ANDREW LANG.
Crown 8vo. 6s. net.

THE HISTORY OF TRADE

UNIONISM. By SIDNEY and BEATRICE WEBB.
With Coloured Map and a Full Bibliography of the Subject. 8vo. 18s.

CHRISTIANITY and the
ROMAN GOVERNMENT: a Study in Imperial Administration. By E. G. HARDY, M.A., formerly
Fellow of Jesus College, Oxford. Crown 8vo. 1s.

The PRIMITIVE CHURCH and
the BISHOP of PETER. By the Rev. LUKK RIVINGTON,
M.A., Magdalen College, Oxford. With an Introduction
by the CARDINAL ARCHBISHOP of WESTMINSTER.
8vo. 16s.

MANCHESTER COLLEGE, OX-FORD. Proceedings and Addresses on the Occasion of the Opening of the College Buildings and Dedication of the Chapel, October 18, 19, 1903. With 6 Illustrations.
Royal 8vo. 6s. net.

Now ready, price 5s. 6d.

LONGMAN'S MAGAZINE.

MAY.

The MATCHMAKER. By L. E. Walford. Chaps. 36-38.
HUGH FRANKSON. By A. K. H. B.
APOLOGIA PRO SCRIPTIS SUIS. By Austin Dobson.
A POT o' BEER. By Mrs. Stephen Bacon, Author of "Dark."
THE BROOKINGS of SPENCER. By Grant Allen.
THE SILVER OTTER. By Horace Hutchinson.
THE UNBIDDEN GUEST. By E. W. Hornung. Chaps. 1-4.
AT the SIGN of the SHIP. By Andrew Lang.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN & Co.
New York: 15, East 16th-street.

Second Edition, price 5s. 6d.

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy.
By W. T. LYNN, R.A. FRAS.

Well adapted to accomplish their purpose.

Dr. H. A. GOULD, Editor of the Astronomical Journal,
Edward Stanford, 36 and 37, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S. W.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.

NOTES and QUERIES for DECEMBER 10th and
26th, 1893, and JANUARY 7th and 21st, 1894, contains a BIBLIO-GRAPHY of MR. GLADSTONE.

Price of the Four Numbers, 1s. 6d., or free by post, 1s. 6d.

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Brown's-buildings, Chancery-
lane, E. C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL OF BEACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.

NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 13th,
27th, JUNE 10th, 24th and JULY 12th, 1894, contains a BIBLIO-GRAPHY of the EARL of BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEYS to "VIVIAN GRAY," "CONINGBEY," "LOTFAIR," and "BRYAN.".

Price of the Six Numbers, 2s., or free by post, 2s. 6d.

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Brown's-buildings, Chancery-
lane, E. C.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON'S NEW BOOKS.

'The GREEN BAY TREE: a Tale of To-day,' in 3 vols., by W. H. WILKINS and HERBERT VIVIAN, is published this day simultaneously in London and New York.

*. The Moral possesses several new features. Although written in collaboration, the authorship of each chapter is indicated. It treats of things as they are, and not as they should be. The motive is the flourishing of the wicked; and the work deals largely with university life, politics, and society.

MRS. DIEHL'S NEW NOVEL.

A WOMAN'S WHIM. In 3 vols.

"A novel concerning music and musical life from the pen of one who has been herself so thoroughly in it as Mrs. Diehl has an intrinsic value apart from the literary merit for which her name is a guarantee. The novel is written with spirit and with knowledge, and stands fully on the level of the best of its predecessors."—Graphic.

MRS. ROBERT JOCELYN'S NEW NOVEL.

PAMELA'S HONEYMOON. In 3 vols.

"The writing is excellent. Mrs. Jocelyn has never told a story more admirably."—Daily Chronicle.
"Brerly, fresh, and healthy. A story which shows reveals Mrs. Jocelyn's cleverness and skill."—Scotsman.

The Spectator says:—"It is, we think, a good time since we have had in English fiction anything so strong and impressive as the latter half of 'A YELLOW ASTER'; nor do we believe that there will be found one person competent to judge who does not see in it art of rare and remarkable excellence." (Third Thousand. In 3 vols.)

SECOND EDITION. BY THE HON. MRS. HENNIKER.

OUTLINES. In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, with Portrait, 6s.

"Distinctly the best thing she has yet done. Close observation, sympathetic insight, and a very real literary gift combine to make 'Outlines' a book to be treasured."—Speaker.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'STILL LIFE OF THE MIDDLE TEMPLE'

MIDDLE TEMPLE TABLE TALK. By W. G. Thorpe, F.S.A., a Barrister of the Society. In demy 8vo. cloth gilt, with Photogravure Portrait of the Author, 15s.

"His keen sense of the humorous, his broad sympathies, all endear him and his pages to the reader."—Globe.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'I FORBID THE BANNS.'

A JOURNALIST'S NOTE-BOOK. By Frankfort Moore. In demy 8vo.
cloth, gilt top, with Photogravure Portrait of the Author, 15s.

The Times says:—"The author is a raconteur of undeniable humour. Unquestionably those in search of a racy and entertaining book will find something to satisfy them in Mr. Moore's volume."

The Saturday Review says:—"From beginning to end it is capital reading, and full of excellent stories."

BY PROFESSOR F. HARALD WILLIAMS.

CONFESSIONS of a POET. By the Author of 'Twixt Kiss and Lip,'
'Women must Weep,' &c. In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6s.

The LIFE and TIMES of SIR GEORGE GREY, K.C.B. By W. L. Rees.
Demy 8vo. buckram gilt, with Photogravure Portraits. 2 vols. 32s.; 1 vol. 12s.
(Third Edition.)

The Daily Telegraph says:—"A work of extraordinary interest."

NEW STORY OF INDIAN ADVENTURE.

The TEMPLE of DEATH. By Edmund Mitchell. In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, with Frontispiece by G. H. Edwards, 6s.

"In point of style, in capacity for picturesque and vivid description, in powerful imagination, in skilful construction and development of plot, Mr. Mitchell shows himself a story-teller not unworthy to take rank with veteran favourites."—London Mercury.

HUTCHINSON'S SELECT NOVELS.

Each Volume in crown 8vo. handsome cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

NEW VOLUME.

A MARRIAGE CEREMONY. By Ada Cambridge.

"Brightly written, with a really original plot, well sketched characters, touches of humour, and unfurled pathos. We congratulate Miss Ada Cambridge on her latest work."—Full Mail Gazette.

ALREADY ISSUED.

The HERITAGE of LANGDALE.
By Mrs. ALEXANDER, Author of 'The Wooting of', &c.

The CUCKOO in the NEST. By Mrs.
OLIPHANT. With Illustrations by G. M. Edwards.
Sixth Edition.

The TRAGEDY of IDA NOBLE. By
W. CLARK RUSSELL. With 46 Illustrations by Everett Hopkins.

The STORY of an AFRICAN FARM.
By OLIVE SCHREINER. Seventy-third Thousand.

DICK DONOVAN'S NEW BOOK.

FOUND and FETTERED. A Series of Detective Stories. By the Author of 'The Man from Manchester,' 'From Clue to Capture,' &c. In crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.; paper boards, 2s.

TWO NEW VOLUMES OF HOMESPUN SERIES.

With Full-Page Original Illustrations. In cloth gilt, 1s. 6d.; in paper, 1s.

BY ANNIE S. SWAN.

BY MRS. COGHILL.

A FOOLISH MARRIAGE.

THE TRIAL of MARY BROOM.

*. These Volumes are uniform with 'Homespun,' now in its Thirty-third Thousand.

HUTCHINSON & CO. Paternoster-row.

MURRAY'S EUROPEAN HANDBOOKS.

- HOLLAND and BELGIUM. 18 Maps and Plans. 6s.
- DENMARK and ICELAND, SCHLESWIG HOLSTEIN, COPENHAGEN, JUTLAND, and ICELAND. Maps and Plans. 7s. 6d.
- SWEDEN, STOCKHOLM, UPSALA, GÖTHEBURG, The SHORES of the BALTIC, &c. Maps and Plans. 6s.
- NORWAY, CHRISTIANIA, BERGEN, TRONDHJEM, The FIELDS and FIORDS. With Special Information for Fishermen and Cyclists. By T. MICHELL, C.B., H.M.B. Consul-General for Norway. Maps and Plans. 7s. 6d.
- RUSSIA, ST. PETERSBURG, MOSCOW, FINLAND, CRIMEA, CAUCASUS, &c. Edited by T. MITCHELL, C.B., H.B.M. Consul-General for Norway. Maps and Plans. 18s.
- FRANCE, Part I.: NORMANDY, BRITANNY, The SEINE and LOIRE, TOURAINE, BORDEAUX, The GARONNE, LIMOUSIN, The PYRENEES, &c. 36 Maps and Plans. 7s. 6d.
- FRANCE, Part II.: CENTRAL FRANCE, AUVERGNE, The CÉVENNES, BURGUNDY, The RHONE and SAONE, PROVENCE, NIMES, ARLES, MARSEILLE, The FRENCH ALPS, ALSACE, LORRAINE, CHAMPAGNE, &c. 23 Maps and Plans. 7s. 6d.
- The RIVIERA, &c.—FROM MARSEILLES to PISA. With Outlines of the Routes thither, and some introductory information on the Climate and the choice of Winter Stations for Invalids. With 16 Maps and Plans of Towns. 6s. 1892.
- The RHINE and NORTH GERMANY, The BLACK FOREST, The HARTZ, THURINGENWALD, SAXON SWITZERLAND, RUGEN, The GIANT MOUNTAINS, TAUNUS, ODERWALD, KESASS, and LOTHARINGEN. 42 Maps and Plans. 10s.
- SOUTH GERMANY, AUSTRIA, TYROL, WURTEMBERG, BAVARIA, SALESBURG, STYRIA, HUNGARY, and The DANUBE from ULM to the BLACK SEA. Two Parts. 34 Maps and Plans. 12s.
- SWITZERLAND, ALPS of SAVOY and PIEDMONT, ITALIAN LAKES and Part of the DAUPHINÉ. Maps. Two Parts.
- Part I. BERNESE OBERLAND, GENEVA, LUCERNE, ENGADINE, &c. 6s.
- Part II. ALPS of SAVOY and PIEDMONT, ITALIAN LAKES, and Part of the DAUPHINÉ. 6s.
- The special attention of Travellers is called to the New and carefully prepared Maps engraved on a large scale
- SPAIN, MADRID, The CASTILES, The BASQUE PROVINCES, LEON, The ASTURIAS, GALICIA, ESTREMADURA, ANDALUSIA, BONA, GRANADA, MURCIA, VALENCIA, CATALONIA, ARAGON, NAVARRA, The BALEARIC ISLANDS, &c. In Two Parts, 20s.
- PORTUGAL, LISBON, OPORTO, CINTRA, MAFRA, with an Account of Madeira, the Azores, and Canary Islands. Map and Plans. 12s.
- NORTH ITALY and VENICE, TURIN, MILAN, The ITALIAN LAKES, VERONA, PADUA, VENICE, BOLOGNA, RAVENNA, PARMA, MODENA, GENOA, &c. Edited by H. W. PULLEN, M.A., Author of 'Dante Europa's School.' With 34 Maps and Plans. 10s.
- CENTRAL ITALY and FLORENCE, TUSCANY, UMBRIA, The MARCHES, &c. Edited by H. W. PULLEN, M.A. With 24 Maps and Plans. 6s.
- ROME and its ENVIRONS. 10s. [Nearly ready.]
- SOUTH ITALY, NAPLES, POMPEII; SORRENTO; CAPRI, &c.; AMALFI, PESTUM, TARANTO, BARI; BRENDISI, &c. Edited by H. W. PULLEN, M.A. With 10 Maps and Plans. 6s.
- SICILY, PALERMO, SYRACUSE, &c. Edited by H. W. PULLEN, M.A. With 9 Maps and Plans. 6s.
- GREECE, The IONIAN ISLANDS, The ISLANDS of the ÆGEAN SEA, ALBANIA, THESSALY, and MACEDONIA. In Two Parts. Maps and Plans. 24s.
- CONSTANTINOPLE, BRÜSA, and The TROAD. Edited by General Sir CHARLES WILSON, R.E. G.C.B. Maps and Plans. 7s. 6d.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

MESSRS. BELL'S BOOKS.

Now ready. New and Enlarged Edition (1072 pp.), with numerous illustrations, demy 8vo. cloth, 9s. net.

JOHNSON'S GARDENER'S DICTIONARY. A New Edition, thoroughly Revised and considerably Enlarged. By C. H. WRIGHT, F.R.M.S., and D. DUNN, Curator of the Glasgow Botanic Garden.

"We are glad to see the publishers of this valuable work again in the field with a new edition, thoroughly revised and considerably enlarged. It is without doubt one of the most reliable and important gardening dictionaries that has ever been published; in fact, as a dictionary and guide for gardeners, amateur or professional, its equal is not to be found in horticultural literature. . . . Forms a marvellous digest of matters horticultural, and a standard work for the guidance of all interested in the art and science of Gardening. It is beautifully printed, and the style in which it is turned out is highly creditable to the eminent publishers."

Horticultural Times.
 "The revision . . . is so considerably enlarged and improved, after a lapse of thirty years since the last revision, as to be practically a new work. From a careful examination . . . we find the revision and the additional matter deserving of all praise. Every gardener, and every one who loves a garden, or owns one, should possess this book. With the best features of older works, such as Paxton's Dictionary, it supplies also valuable information with regard to all kinds of gardening operations, culture, insect pests, and other matters of utility."—Saturday Review.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

POUSHKIN'S PROSE TALES. The Captain's Daughter—Dobrotsky—The Queen of Spades—An Amateur Peasant Girl—The Shot—Kirdjal, &c. Translated from the Russian by T. KEANE.

Fcap. 8vo. 3s. 6d. net.

EARLY and LATE POEMS. By C. J. BENTMÜLLER.

"Some tuneful and graceful lyrics, which decidedly deserve not the burial 'under a miscellaneous mass of literature,' of which the author speaks in the preface. 'Men of England' and 'The Parting of Comrades' are stirring songs, and 'Oblivion' is not less excellent in a very different style of sentiment."—Saturday Review.

"Such pieces as 'Artist and Statesman,' the many ballads, and the three closing poems, make one wish for more of these cheerful strains."—Liverpool Mercury.

Large post 8vo. 7s. 6d.

RAMBLES in SEARCH of WILD FLOWERS, and How to Distinguish Them. By M. PLUES. With 96 Coloured Figures and numerous Cuts. Third Edition.

"This little book has already, we are pleased to note, attained its third edition. We sincerely wish it that continuance of public favour which it so well deserves."—Saturday Review.

Fcap. 8vo. cloth limp, 4s. 6d.

The BOTANIST'S POCKET-BOOK, containing in a tabulated form the Chief Characteristics of British Plants, with the Botanical Names, Soil or Situation, Colour, Growth, and Time of Flowering, of every Plant, arranged under its own order, with a copious index. By W. E. HAYWARD. Seventh Edition.

3 vols. post 8vo. 7s. 6d. each.

BRITISH FUNGUS - FLORA. A Classified Text-Book of Mycology. By GEORGE MASSER, Author of 'The Plant World.' With numerous illustrations.

"A Supplementary Volume, completing the work, is in the press."

"A text-book of mycology worthy both of the importance of the subject and of the confidence of the student."—Westminster Review.

NEW VOLUMES OF THE CAMBRIDGE MATHEMATICAL SERIES.

The ELEMENTS of APPLIED MATHEMATICS. Including Kinetics, Statics, and Hydrostatics. By C. M. JESSOP, M.A., late Fellow of Clare College, Cambridge, Lecturer in Mathematics in the Durham College of Science, Newcastle-on-Tyne. Crown 8vo. 6s.

ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY for BEGINNERS. Part I. The Straight Line and Circle. By the Rev. T. G. YVYAN, M.A., Mathematica Master at Charterhouse. 2s. 6d.

"An elementary treatise, dealing with the subject only so far as the right line and circle, and intended specially for candidates for the Army and London Intermediate Examinations."

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
 York-street, Covent-garden.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

"A great study of a great man."
LEEDS MERCURY.

THE LIFE OF JOHN CHURCHILL, DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH, To the ACCESSION OF QUEEN ANNE.

BY
GENERAL VISCOUNT WOLSELEY.

2 vols. demy 8vo.

With Portraits and Plans, 35s.

"This remarkable book—remarkable alike for its subject, its author, and their very felicitous association—will be eagerly sought by a multitude of readers. It cannot but add greatly to the literary reputation of Lord Wolseley."—Times.

"The book is interesting at every page as a direct, forcible, and inspiring narrative of the life of one of our greatest soldiers."—Army and Navy Gazette.

"It is a distinct gain to historical literature to have this defence of Marlborough on record, especially when it is combined with a brilliant account of his military and political exploits, written with the pen of a competent judge."—Graphic.

"A real and lasting contribution to history, which will remain as the standard authority on Marlborough."—Manchester Guardian.

"A very brilliant piece of work, written not only with abundant knowledge, but in a graceful and picturesque style."—World.

Notice.—The TEMPLE BAR MAGAZINE for MAY contains, among other Articles of interest:—A BEGINNER. By Rhoda Broughton. Chaps. 12, 14.—VOLTAIRE'S FAVOURITE MORALIST.—A LEGEND OF GRANADA.—THE LAST OF THE THURSTONS.—HORACE WALPOLE.—RALPH INGLEFIELD'S REVENGE.—BY RIGHT OF WOMANHOOD. An INTERLOPHER. By F. M. Peard. Chaps. 12-16. 8s.

BY COLONEL BAKER.

The HISTORY of the HONOURABLE ARTILLERY COMPANY of LONDON. By Col. G. A. BAKER, F.S.A. 2 vols. with Portraits, Coloured Illustrations, and Maps, demy 8vo. 35s. 6d. each.

BY THE DUKE OF TARENTUM.

The RECOLLECTIONS of MARSHAL MACDONALD, during the Wars of the First Napoleon. Translated by STEPHEN LOUIS SIMON. A New Edition, with Notes and Portraits. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

NOW READY.

FREDERIC HILL: an Autobiography of Fifty Years in Times of Reform. Being the Reminiscences of a Beloved Civil Servant. Edited by his Daughter, CONSTANCE HILL. 1 vol. demy 8vo. with Portraits, 16s.

NOW READY.

WOMEN of LETTERS. By Gertrude Townshend Mayer. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s.

SECOND EDITION.

PRIVATE LIFE of NAPOLEON. From the French of ARTHUR LEVY. By STEPHEN LOUIS SIMON, Translator of 'The Youth of Frederick the Great,' &c. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 25s.

NOW READY.

The ONE HUNDREDTH VOLUME of 'The TEMPLE BAR MAGAZINE.' Being an Alphabetical List of the Titles of all Articles appearing in the previous Ninety-nine Volumes. In demy 8vo. 3s.

* For Works of Fiction, see page 560.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S PUBLICATIONS.

NEW NOVELS.

The FOOL of DESTINY. By Colin MIDDLETON, Author of 'Innocent of Malraux.' 3 vols.

The HUSBAND of ONE WIFE. By Mrs. VENN, Author of 'Some Married Fellows,' &c. 3 vols.

"The theme is a good one, but one requiring delicate handling. Mrs. Venn has treated it excellently, so much so that the interest increases instead of diminishing as she proceeds, and the third volume in our opinion, is much the best of the set. 'The Husband of One Wife' is good work, and its personal may easily be recommended."—Graphic Herald.

"The Husband of One Wife" is an excellent book, in which all healthily-minded novel-readers will find something to interest them."—Dundee Advertiser.

ORCHARD DAMEREL. By Alan ST. AUBYN, Author of 'A Fellow of Trinity,' &c. 3 vols.

"Taken altogether, the work is the strongest that has come from the author's pen, and does not add its strength by any abandonment of the secular refinement which characterises this writer's books. It is a thoroughly enjoyable story."—Scotsman.

JANET DELILLE. By E. N. Leigh

FRY, Author of 'A Bitter Thistle,' &c. 3 vols.

"We like Janet Delille as a novel, and no reader will feel his time wasted in perusing it, which cannot be said of most novels."—Graphic Herald.

IN CUPID'S COLLEGE. By Mabel HART, Author of 'Two English Girls,' 'From Harvest to Haytime,' &c. 3 vols.

"The writing is always bright and pleasant, the dialogue is natural and characteristic, and some of the situations are exceedingly pathetic. 'In Cupid's College' is well above the average novel in tone, in feeling, and in writing."—Literary World.

HETTY'S HERITAGE. By Noel JENNER, Author of 'The Aftermath,' 3 vols.

"Has an interesting and well-contrived plot, while the number of personages is wisely limited to that necessary for its development."—Morning Post.

The WHITE AIGRETTE. By Vin VINCENT, Author of 'Cathedral Bells,' 'Wrong on Both Sides,' &c. 3 vols.

"The 'White Aigrette' should find favour with the old-fashioned hunter of circulating libraries, however, and to each a due, if she still exist, we commend it."—Athenæum.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

Now ready, in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

TO RIGHT the WRONG. By Edna LYALL, Author of 'Donovan,' 'We Two,' &c.

Uniform, each in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

NOVELS BY EDNA LYALL.

DONOVAN: a Modern Englishman.
WE TWO. IN the GOLDEN DAYS.
KNIGHT ERRANT. WON by WAITING.
A HARDY NOBSEMAN.

A SELECTION FROM
HURST & BLACKETT'S
STANDARD LIBRARY.

EACH IN A SINGLE VOLUME. PRICE 6s.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'JOHN HALIFAX.'

JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLE. CHRISTIAN'S MISTAKE.
MAN. A NOBLE LIFE.
A WOMAN'S THOUGHTS. HANNAH.
ABOUT WOMEN. THE UNKIND WORD.
A LIFE for a LIFE. A BRAVE LADY.
NOTHING NEW. STUDIES from LIFE.
MISTRESS and MAID. YOUNG MRS. JARDINE.
The WOMAN'S KINGDOM.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'SAM SLICK.'
NATURE AND HUMAN NATURE. THE OLD JUDGE; or, Life in a Colony.
WISDOM AND MODERN INSTANCES. TRAITS of AMERICAN HUMOUR.
THE AMERICANS at HOME.

BY DR. GEORGE MAC DONALD,
DAVID BLOOMSBOD. ALSO FORBES.
ROBERT FALCONER. SEE GIBBS.

BY MRS. OLIPHANT.
ADAM GRANGE. LIFE of IRVING.
LAIRD of NORLAW. A ROSE in JUNE.
AGNES. FRODO, JUNIOR.

IT WAS A LOVE and HIS LAMB.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

Ready immediately at all Libraries and Booksellers.
POLAR GLEAMS.

An Account of a Voyage in the Yacht "Eleonora" through the Kara Sea to the Yenesei River.

By HELEN FREEL.

With a Preface by the MARQUESS of DUFFERIN and AVA.

And Contributions by Capt. JOSEPH WIGGINS and FREDERICK G. JACKSON.

With numerous Full-Page Illustrations.

Demy 8vo. cloth, 15s.

Ready this day at all Booksellers.
NEW EDITION of MR. MILNER'S IMPORTANT WORK, ENGLAND in EGYPT. By Alfred MILNER, formerly Under-Secretary for Finance in Egypt. New and Cheaper Edition, with an Additional Prefatory Chapter on Egypt in 1894. Large crown 8vo. with Map, cloth, 7s. 6d.

NEW STORY OF IRISH LIFE. MISTHER O'RYAN. An Incident in the History of a Nation. By EDWARD MCNULTY. Small 8vo. elegantly bound, 3s. 6d. Uniform with "Stephen Remarx."

Sixteenth Thousand now ready.

STEPHEN REMARX: a Story of Society and Religion. By the Hon. and Rev. JAMES ADDERLEY. Small 8vo. paper, 1s.; elegantly bound, 3s. 6d.

Parts I.-IV. now ready.

WILD FLOWERS in ART and NATURE. An entirely New and beautifully illustrated Work. By J. C. L. SPARKES, Principal of the National Art Training School, South Kensington; and F. W. BURBIDGE, M.A., Curator of the University Botanical Gardens, Dublin. In Six Parts, 2s. 6d. each.

"The illustrations are really beautiful. They are of the nature of the artist, excellently grouped, and the colour-printing is exceptionally good."—Guardian.

"The letterpress is excellent and the drawings are admirable."—Black and White.

EDUCATIONAL BOOKS.

A New French Text-Book, Edited by Mr. J. BOILLER.
Le MILLION du PÈRE RACLOT. By EMILE MICHELET. Cloth, 1s. 6d. net.

A FIRST FRENCH COURSE. By JAMES BOILLER, B.A. (Univ. Coll.), Officer d'Académie, Senior French Master at Irish College. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d.

A FIRST FRENCH READER and EXERCISE BOOK. By W. J. GREENSTREET, M.A., Head Master of the Marling School, Streech. With Vocabulary. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s.

BALZAC.—Une TÈNÉBREUSE AFFAIRE. Edited by JAMES BOILLER. Cloth, 1s. 6d. net.

STAHL.—MAROUSSIA. Edited by JAMES BOILLER. Cloth, 1s. 6d. net.

HUGO.—QUATRE-VINGT-TREIZE. Edited by JAMES BOILLER. 2s. 6d. net.

DUMAS.—MONTE CRISTO. Edited by FRANCIS TAYLER, M.A. 2s. 6d. net.

GRÉVILLE.—PERDUE. Edited by JAMES BOILLER. 2s. 6d. net.

DUMAS.—Les TROIS MOUSQUETAIRES. Edited by Prof. BUCHHEIT. Cloth, 6s. 6d. net.

FRENCH REVOLUTION READING BOOK. Edited by A. JAMSON SMITH, M.A., and C. M. DIX, M.A. Square 8vo. cloth, 2s. net.

MODERN FRENCH READINGS. Edited by A. J. SMITH, M.A. 8vo. cloth, 3s.

WORKS BY DR. WORMELL.

The MERCANTILE ARITHMETIC. By Dr. WORMELL, Head Master of the Central Foundation Schools of London. Large crown 8vo. Complete Work, 3s. 6d., with Answers, 6s. Parts I and II, separately, 2s. each; Answers only, 1s.

AN ELEMENTARY

TEXT-BOOK of MECHANICS. Specially adapted for the Science and Art Departments and other Examinations. Fully illustrated. Crown 8vo. 1s. net. A Volume of SOLUTIONS for Teachers and Private Students, 3s. net.

LECTURES on SOUND, HEAT, and LIGHT. Popular Courses of Instruction for Junior Students and Evening Classes. Each in 1 vol., with numerous illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s. net each.

AN ELEMENTARY TREATISE ON

FOURIER'S SERIES, and SPHERICAL, CYLINDRICAL, and ELLIPSOIDAL HARMONICS. With Applications to Problems in Mathematical Physics. By W. R. WYLLIE, Ph.D., Professor of Mathematics in Harvard University. 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.

London:

EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street, W.C.,
Publisher to the India Office.

SATURDAY, MAY 5, 1894.

CONTENTS.

LORD AUGUSTUS LOFTUS'S RECOLLECTIONS	569
A COMMENTARY ON DANTE'S INFERNO	570
A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE HAPTEMERON	571
THE AGE OF THE SAINTS	572
VERALL'S EDITION OF THE CHRONOLOGY	573
REMAN'S HISTORY OF ISRAEL	573
NEW NOVELS (A Valiant Ignorance; A Soldier of Fortune; Pamela's Honeymoon; Build Lyle; A Modern Amazon; An American Peccore; A Beguiler; My Dead Self; The Sailor of the Istar; A Threshold Mystery)	573-575
CANADIAN HISTORY	575
SHORT STORIES	575
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS	576-577
LADY GRANVILLE'S LETTERS: THE BOOKSELLERS' TRADE DINNER; SOCKETT'S SOT ; 'ENGLISH BARDS AND SCOTCH REVIEWERS'; SALIS	577-579
LITERARY GOSSIP	579
SCIENCE—MEDICAL BOOKS; ASTRONOMICAL NOTES; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS; GOSSIP	580-581
FINE ARTS—MORSEBROOK'S CONVERSATIONS; THE ROYAL ACADEMY; A "GABRIEL" ANNUET; SALIS ; NOTES FROM ATHENS; GOSSIP	581-589
MUSIC—THE WEEK; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	589-590
DRAMA—THE WEEK; GOSSIP	590

LITERATURE

The Diplomatic Reminiscences of Lord Augustus Loftus, P.C., G.C.B. Second Series. 2 vols. (Cassell & Co.)

THE sixteen years of European history reviewed in these volumes were more eventful than the two dozen traversed by Lord Augustus Loftus in the first half of his 'Diplomatic Reminiscences,' and in this later period his relations with sovereigns and statesmen were more intimate and influential. Consequently the second series, if less crowded with amusing gossip, is more instructive than its predecessor. It tells us little of importance that is new about the causes and effects of the three great wars of our generation—those between Prussia and Austria, France and Germany, and Russia and Turkey; for Lord Augustus was not acquainted with all their secrets, and he had to be discreet in his handling of such as he knows; but his volumes furnish many welcome and suggestive side-lights on momentous affairs, and some characteristic anecdotes about men like Prince Bismarck, Prince Gortschakoff, and his own superiors at the Foreign Office, from Earl Russell to the Marquis of Salisbury.

Lord Augustus had filled more responsible posts at Vienna and Berlin before he was transferred at the end of 1862 to Munich, but his three years' service as minister to the Bavarian Court, following a breakdown of his health which "necessitated repose and relief from all mental occupation," was in the nature of an acceptable holiday. The first chapter introduces us to the late King Louis II. in the early days of his reign, when "his taste for music brought him unfortunately into frequent intercourse with the composer Herr Wagner." Lord Augustus appears to have entertained no liking for the great musician, but he enjoyed some of the gaieties so lavishly provided by the reckless monarch, and he found special delight in the society of Baron Liebig, who was just then adding to his fame as a chemist by the introduction of his essence of meat:—

"He used frequently to dine with me, and always brought something of interest to amuse and to instruct my children: one time an aërolite—giving an explanation of it; another time a looking-glass—for which he had discovered a new silvoring preparation—and other objects of interest. His mind was always occupied with the development of science, and in his garden he engaged in various experiments for the improved culture of tobacco, potatoes, beet, and other similar products. He explained to me that useful agricultural system which he had introduced into Southern Germany for the maintenance of the fertility of the soil, and for the benefit of the farming population. Its leading feature was the formation of the country into circles, which he called in German 'Verzuchs' stations. For each circle there was an agricultural chemist, thoroughly acquainted with the properties of land, whose duty it was to advise the expedients to be applied for its enrichment, the crops to be grown, the manures to be used; it was also his duty to analyse the guano or other applications for the improvement of the soil, so as to develop its intrinsic worth; to recommend the course to be taken in regard to fattening animals; to analyse—as far as possible—the soil, in order to know, if unfertile, what remedy to apply to it; and to hold frequent lectures within his circle, for the purpose of instructing the farmer in regard to agriculture in general, and the process of store-feeding of cattle, sheep, etc. His theory was that the same amount of fertilising elements taken from the land by the crops should be annually restored to it, and for this purpose each crop was weighed previous to its being housed. In every farmhouse was hung up a printed form of the requisite quantity of manure to return to the land for each crop, by which means the fertility of the land was maintained. Baron Liebig observed to me that it was proved that only those countries which had followed the principle of restoring to the land what had been taken from it had maintained their agricultural wealth, and he cited China and Japan. The system exists in Bavaria and Hesse-Darmstadt, and has been found to answer."

The political interest of these volumes starts, however, with Lord Augustus's return to Berlin in February, 1866, when already, as he says, "the political atmosphere was very loaded." Count Bismarck had begun to threaten Austria, and the dispute about the Elbe duchies helped to hasten the crisis for which he was eager, but from which King William shrank. All the expostulations offered by Lord Augustus at Lord Clarendon's instigation, by Count Benedetti, the French Ambassador, and others were futile. Bismarck felt that the time was propitious for the assertion of Prussian supremacy in North Germany, and his English critic, who questions "the honesty of the policy," while admitting that it was "a grand idea, worthy of a great statesman and a zealous patriot," was not prepared for the thoroughness with which his plans were laid or the rapidity with which they were brought to a triumphant conclusion:—

"I was with Count Bismarck late on the evening of June 18th. We had been walking and sitting in his garden till a late hour, when, to my astonishment, it struck midnight. Count Bismarck took out his watch, and said, 'A l'heure qu'il est nos troupes sont entrées en Hanovre, Saxe, et Hesse-Cassel.' He added, 'The struggle will be severe. Prussia may lose, but she will, at all events, have fought bravely and honourably. If we are beaten,' Count Bismarck said, 'I shall not return here. I shall fall in the last charge. One can but die once; and if beaten, it is better to die.'"

Three weeks before that:—

"In talking to me on the subject of peace or war, Bismarck observed—'Why, after all, Attila was a greater man than your Mr. John Bright. He has left a greater name in history. The Duke of Wellington will be known in history as a great warrior, and not as a pacific statesman.'"

Lord Augustus sets forth and discusses in detail the negotiations, after the seven weeks' war was over, between Count Bismarck and M. Benedetti which led to the secret treaty published in the Times in 1870, and the proposals that were made with a view to Franco being compensated for the aggrandizement of Prussia by assistance in her designs on Belgium. In these negotiations, as in others that were not so unproductive, the German was more than a match for the Frenchman:—

"At Berlin Count Bismarck always wore a general's uniform, and there was a table in an ante-room on which his helmet was placed. After a dinner at Count Bismarck's, M. Benedetti approached this table, and took up the helmet. On replacing it, he observed, 'Décidément il a la tête plus forte que moi,' an observation which subsequent events proved to be too true."

The antecedents of the Franco-German war, so far as they came under his observation, are dealt with at considerable length by Lord Augustus, but he attaches no blame to the Berlin authorities for the complications that arose. He somewhat rashly throws the whole responsibility on the Emperor Napoleon and the Duc de Gramont and his other advisers. The English ambassador's sympathies were clearly on the side of Germany in this struggle, although, while it lasted, he was zealously employed on behalf of the French Government in looking after the interests of those of its subjects who remained voluntarily or were kept as prisoners in Prussia. It was a matter of surprise to him that Bismarck objected to this arrangement:—

"On Count Bismarck's visit to me on the 18th of July I mentioned to him—with a view, as I thought, of calling forth his appreciation of the impartial and good intentions of Her Majesty's Government—that the French Government had requested that French subjects should be placed under the protection of Great Britain during the war, and that Her Majesty's Government had consented thereto, reserving to Her Majesty's Government the power to render the same service to Prussian subjects in France. Count Bismarck appeared to be much disconcerted by this announcement, observing that it would produce a bad impression in Germany. 'There is already,' he said, 'a feeling that Her Majesty's Government have a partial leaning towards France, and this incident will tend to confirm it.'"

For some time Lord Augustus had nearly 300,000 prisoners under his care, who had to be supplied every month with their "solde de captivité." The most illustrious of these prisoners gave him some trouble:—

"On the arrival at Cassel of Marshal Bazaine as prisoner, his secretary wrote to me by his orders to ask for his 'Solde de captivité.' I replied, through Mr. Dering, that on the official list sent to me by the French Minister of War there was no 'Solde de captivité' for a Marshal of France. He replied to me himself by a letter written in curious English, requesting me to send the highest 'Solde de captivité' on my list, which accordingly I did. He was the only Marshal of France who claimed this 'consolation,' and I reported the demand to the French Ministry."

Soon after the close of the war, Lord Augustus was transferred from Berlin to St. Petersburg, and he was in Russia from 1872 till 1879, when he left the diplomatic service to try his hand at colonial governorship in New South Wales. His Russian experiences fill the concluding volume, of which the most important part is the long appendix of original documents. At the Czar's Court he was doubtless an efficient and a courteous exponent of Downing Street policy, and a careful, if not very sagacious observer of such movements as appeared on the surface. But there is something grotesque in his remarks and reports about Russian operations in Asia and the south of Europe, the tedious preliminaries and the development of the Russo-Turkish war, and all the phases of the Eastern Question during these memorable seven years. After one of his numerous interviews with the Russian Chancellor concerning affairs in Central Asia, Lord Augustus says:—

"I read to Prince Gortschakoff the report I had sent at his request to Lord Derby of the observations he had addressed to me, the accuracy of which he fully admitted, complimenting me on my memory. I subsequently informed him that Lord Derby, in a private letter to me, fully participated in his opinions, stating that a frank and truthful exchange of opinions was always the surest mode of maintaining a good understanding. He then indulged in a species of homily on the truthfulness of the Emperor, and, of course, of himself, adding: 'Dites à Lord Derby, que je suis comme Adam, tout nu—je ne cache rien.'"

He was a devout admirer of Prince Gortschakoff, and was easily persuaded to adopt the notions conveyed to him by his instructors. He was a keener student of court functions than of political manoeuvres:—

"The Court is very brilliant and admirably maintained. It has something of an Oriental grandeur. The Court balls, with the romantic appearance of the Circassian Guard—the brilliant variety of uniforms—the Oriental costumes of the 'negroes' posted at the various doors—the picturesque appearance of the Cossacks—the magnificence of the ladies' toilettes (the perfection of a certain Mr. Worth) and the splendour of their jewels (especially turquoises, diamonds, and sapphires)—and the stately rooms of the Winter Palace, lit with thousands of wax candles, are unsurpassed in beauty and splendour at any Court where I have resided. The guests are received by their Majesties with that grace and courtesy which at once gratifies and sets them at ease, and there are no fêtes more enjoyable than those at the Winter Palace. There is one special fête, called 'Le Bal des Palmiers,' where the supper, in a salon transformed into a Winter Garden, is served at round tables encircling each palm-tree. These palm-trees are brought on each occasion from the conservatories at Zarsko-Séloe, and I was told that they require three years to recover from the exposure they undergo in one night's decoration. During the ball there was a tea-room for the Emperor and Empress and the Imperial family, to which the Ambassadors were invited. It was in that part of the palace which the Empress Catherine inhabited, and is said to have been the scene of her gaieties."

While the war with the Porte was growing and proceeding, and yet more after the English fleet had been sent to watch over Constantinople, Lord Augustus had an awkward position to fill, but he filled it gracefully:—

"The Emperor had a favourite dog called 'Milord,' which never left him. We were dining at the palace, and it being a small party (there were only the Imperial Family and Court attendants), we retired after dinner to the Emperor's private apartments. I suddenly heard the Emperor calling 'Milord!' and supposed that he was calling for me; but it was his dog that was wanted, to receive the biscuits which His Majesty was in the daily habit of bestowing on his favourite. I immediately hastened to His Majesty and learnt the explanation from the Emperor, who was highly amused by the incident. At the time His Majesty was seated in an inner saloon (a sort of alcove), and placed near him was a small table, on which were the Illustrated London News, Punch, and other journals. It was the number of Punch in which a cartoon represented the Sovereigns of Austria, Russia, and Germany at a whist table, the Emperor of Russia holding down his hand with a card. The Emperor put the paper in my hand, and said, 'Expliquez-moi cela.' I felt the difficulty of the explanation, and to collect my thoughts asked to be permitted to study it. After a short time I said: 'Oh, Sire, it is quite clear. The political European position is here represented by a whist party, and your Majesty is represented apparently as hesitating whether to continue the game.' It was a perplexing question, and I felt very much as Daniel may have felt when called upon to explain Nebuchadnezzar's dream!"

Lord Augustus is scarcely correct in saying of his forty years' 'Diplomatic Reminiscences' that "they give a general outline of the political history of Europe, and of the policy of the Governments of the Great Powers, during that period"; but they are amusing.

Readings on the Inferno of Dante, chiefly based on the Commentary of Benvenuto da Imola. By the Hon. W. Warren Vernon. Introduction by the Rev. Dr. Moore. 2 vols. (Macmillan & Co.)

THE author of the deservedly prized 'Readings on the Purgatorio' here comes forward with a companion work of a most substantial kind. When we say that the two thick volumes on the 'Inferno' run to no fewer than 1,410 pages, the reader will understand that the term "substantial" applies fully in a literal sense, and it is amply warranted in a metaphorical or critical sense also. The 'Paradiso' is to be treated in like manner; and, when that shall be done, Mr. Vernon may certainly say that very few Dante scholars in this country, of any time, have rendered a more elaborate service than himself to the study of the great poet.

These two volumes contain the whole of the 'Inferno' in the original text, given in successive extracts of a few lines at a time. The extracts are followed by a translation into English prose, done by Mr. Vernon. Then come most copious expositions and remarks, supplemented by a vast multitude of footnotes upon all sorts of points—historical, textual, philological, &c. As the title says, the "Readings," or (as we have just termed them) expositions and remarks, are chiefly based on the 'Commentary' of Benvenuto da Imola, who delivered lectures on Dante, in the Latin tongue, at the early date of 1375. They have only lately been published, and to the majority of English readers will be new in Mr. Vernon's pages. Benvenuto may be regarded as on the whole a judicious and also an ingenious commentator. He constantly found out meanings or allusions in Dante which, on the surface, are not apparent, in this respect resembling several other commentators, whether of old or of recent times. One result of this habit of mind on Benvenuto's part is that a good deal of what he says is not to be found stated or suggested elsewhere; he followed his own line, which often differed from the line of other expositors. In many instances he appears to us to have overshot the mark, attributing to Dante notions and undermeanings which are not in the 'Inferno' at all, but which are vamped up by the seal of a commentator who allows himself a free hand, and endeavours to impress his audience with a sense of his sagacity and insight. Dante had certainly quite meaning enough of his own, without being burdened with that which the scholar of Imola chose to read into him. However, we must take commentators as they come, and may at least be obliged to Benvenuto for much that he says in the way of direct elucidation, as well as pleased to have from him one more sample of what was thought by instructed men about Dante and his poem at a date not very long after that of the master's death.

Mr. Vernon is a son of that munificent Dantophilist the late Lord Vernon. With regard to his own part of the work there is little to say, except that he gives his readers not only enough, but perhaps even more than enough. If he had limited himself mainly to the analysis of Benvenuto's 'Commentary,' the historical and biographical details, and from time to time a discussion of some leading difficulty in diction or text, we incline to think that his book, while more compact and special, would have been not less serviceable than it now is to most of those students who will wish to use it. Dante is so many-sided that to attempt to work up, in one publication, his material from very many points of view is a labour which almost defeats itself, while it exhausts the reader.

Such a book as this bristles with matter for controversy. We will refer to only two comparatively small instances in which Mr. Vernon seems to have made a mistake.

In treating of the "Beauties of the 'Inferno'" he speaks of "the wretches who were rejected both by Heaven and Hell, with the comparison of them to autumn-leaves"; but, in fact, the comparison in question applies to a different group of spirits—those who have just arrived from the upper world to be ferried over by Charon, and many of whom must no doubt be destined for the circles of Hell itself. In a note to canto ii. he quotes a description of Dante's appearance, and ascribes this description to Benvenuto da Imola. Is not the real author Boccaccio (in his 'Life of Dante')? Whether or not Benvenuto may, in some part of his lengthy commentary, have reproduced it from Boccaccio, we are not prepared at the moment to say. We may add that it is more than doubtful whether the 'Questio de Aquâ et Terrâ' (referred to in a note to canto xi.) was written by Dante at all; and Mr. Vernon—though not strictly bound by his context to do so—might as well have called attention to this point.

The following observation as to the spirits in the "Circles of Fraud" is, so far as we remember, an original observation due to Mr. Vernon's discernment. It is introduced in immediate relation to Count Guido da Montefeltro, who is punished among the Evil Counsellors. We quote the passage just as it stands; but later on, in speaking of the Fomentors of Discord, Mr. Vernon (following Dr. Moore's lead) indicates that three of these last-named sinners form an exception to the general rule which he has here defined for the Circles of Fraud:—

"Benvenuto thinks it worthy of notice that Count Guido deliberately refuses to have his name mentioned in the world, a thing many other spirits in Hell have eagerly desired; but Benvenuto omits to point out that none have done so from the moment that the Poets descended into the Circles of Fraud. The last shades who seem to have expressed a wish to be remembered on earth were the three noble Florentines in xvi. 85, who, on parting with Dante, exclaim, 'Fa che di noi alla gente favella.' Contrast this with xviii. 46; xxiv. 133-135; and canto xxiii.; and in fact one may sum up by saying that in the Circles of Incontinence and Violence the shades desire to be remembered on earth, but that in all the subdivisions of the two Circles of Fraud they desire concealment. Benvenuto thinks that Guido's wish to be forgotten is probably to be found in the fact that the Count had first repented of his sins, had renounced the world and its pomps, and then had relapsed into worse by returning to his ancient frauds."

The Heptameron of the Tales of Margaret, Queen of Navarre. Newly translated into English from the Authentic Text of M. Le Roux de Lincy. With an Essay by George Saintsbury, M.A. 5 vols. (Society of English Bibliophiles.)

THE Society of English Bibliophiles has produced an acceptable edition of the novels of the Queen of Navarre. The translation is not perfect, but it will pass; there is more than one date misprinted, more than one dubious judgment, in the introduction, but on the whole it is sensible and well informed; there are some two hundred odd engravings from the original copperplates engraved by Freudenberg and Dunker for the Berne edition of 1778-81; and then, above all, there is the critical essay by Mr. Saintsbury, which, together with the acumen of that learned writer, possesses a ripeness and charm less frequent in his work. If there be students of the French Renaissance who read no French, or who possess not already the edition of Le Roux de Lincy, they will do well to procure these five well-appointed volumes. Such a public is doubtless limited, but that is the affair of the Society of English Bibliophiles. It is fair to say that the tone and style of their edition betray no desire to cater for readers of a less respectable and far more numerous class.

Mr. Saintsbury makes out an excellent case for the Queen of Navarre. He will not hear of her stories being pooh-poohed as a pale imitation of Boccaccio. And he is quite right: if the tales here and there have a family likeness, the setting is different by near two hundred years, and by a whole abyss betwixt the personal temper of the authors. It surprises us, however, that so exact a scholar has not a word to say for Messer Baldassare Castiglione, whose 'Cortigiano'—published more than sixteen years before the Queen of Navarre took to writing stories in her litter, as she jogged busily along the roads of France—bears so striking a likeness to the framework of 'The Heptameron.' The Queen of Navarre must certainly have read a work of such European celebrity. And, as certainly, she cannot have read the 'Dialogue on the Beauty of Women,' published in the very year of her death by Angelo Fiorentino. Yet this book also has an air of 'The Heptameron,' only the stories have all dropped out of the setting. Both these books in different degrees—in very different degrees, for Messer Angelo writes often but poor stuff, while the 'Courtisan' is one of the most charming works of sixteenth century literature—both books possess that richness of culture, that brilliant differentiation of character, that abundant, passionate sense of the beauty and honour of life, which are the salt of 'The Heptameron.' What Queen Margaret added to the spirit of the age was the ever-present thought of death used—and used by a truly pious woman—as a stimulant to the enjoyment of carnal pleasures.

Mr. Saintsbury has noted with great delicacy this "combination of voluptuous passion with passionate regret and a mystical devotion":—

"It is that same peculiarity which appears in places and persons and things so different as Spenser, as the poetry of the Pièade, as Montaigne, as Raleigh, as Donne, as the group of singers known as the Caroline poets. It is a peculiarity which has shown itself in different forms at different times, but never in such vigour and precision as at this time. It combines a profound and certainly sincere—almost severe—religiosity with a very vigorous practice of some things which the religion it professes does not at all countenance. It has an almost morbidly pronounced simultaneous sense of the joys and sorrows of human life, the enjoyment of the joys being perfectly frank, and the feeling of the sorrows not in the least sentimental."

This is as true as it is well put. It is difficult for a modern reader to glance through 'The Heptameron' without remembering more than once the strange contrasts of the comedy of 'Measure for Measure,' without recalling to the inner eye that wonderful sepulture of Valentine de Biragues, at present in the Renaissance Museum of the Louvre. There, beneath the portrait of the gracious court lady in her ruff and purples, with her tiny lap-dog and her story-book (perhaps her Bible) at her side, the sculptor has engraved, in grim and terrible realism, the skeleton mouldering in the grave, the sightless eye-sockets, the friable disjointed fingers:—

"Où sera alors ma baulté si je n'en ay nulle? Les narines pourrissent qui ores se délient en diverses odeurs. Mes yeuxul seront retournés dans ma teste.....Où est le col eslevé, où est vaillance de paroles, arnement de vesteures, variété de delices, force, legeresse, seigneurie, richesse? Hélas, douz Dieu, je te cry: Mercy!"

For two hundred years the literature of the gayest people in Europe rings with the same cry—from the prayers of Gaston Phébus to the amatory tales of the Queen of Navarre, to the tomb of the Lady of Biragues. The odd thing is that this note, so perfectly distinct in 'The Heptameron' to the ear of the modern reader, was apparently inaudible (or unattended to) a hundred years ago. The reputation of 'The Heptameron' is exclusively and unjustly (because exclusively) erotic. It is amusing to turn from the pages of Mr. Saintsbury to the illustrations of the excellent Freudenberg, which afford the most extensive exhibition of night-gear, bed furniture, and candle-light effects. Both points of view are perfectly admissible; and Freudenberg can give chapter and verse for every wanton revel. But we think Mr. Saintsbury has penetrated more deeply to the heart of the queen who sighed when dying, "Ah yes, I know there is Paradise; but then we lie so long under the earth before we get there!"

Mr. Saintsbury touches with measure and sagacity the fascinating problem of the share belonging to Bonaventure Desperiers in the authorship of 'The Heptameron.' It is possible in fact, and most probable, that more than one of the literary lions of the day had a hand in correcting 'The Heptameron.' But we are glad that Mr. Saintsbury has resisted the evident temptation to ascribe any principal part in the book to the interesting, unlucky Desperiers. Desperiers (so little is left of him!) survives—poor deeper-gifted elder brother of Gérard de Nerval—as a legend rather than a talent; he has left nothing that could quite warrant our presenting him with 'The Heptameron.' His unquestioned ability has not the roundness, the ripeness, the mellow full-bloodedness of the style of 'The Heptameron.' Mr. Saintsbury remarks with much discretion that Queen Margaret's own correspondence shows little enough of this delightful style. True; but nothing in all literature is so like the peculiar tone of 'The Heptameron' as one or two speeches of the queen's, as repeated by Brantôme. The beautiful little story of Mademoiselle de la Roche ought to have been told in 'The Heptameron' by Dame Oysille or Longarine. "Elle lui a été dérobée."

On one point it is impossible wholly to agree with Mr. Saintsbury. He resents with unaccountable warmth the attribution of the characters of 'The Heptameron' to real historical personages. The weight of tradition is against him, though that is but a feather weight. We would, however, ask him to consider the probability of a writer, of reflective and observant rather than dramatic temper, who is placed in the heart of a brilliant and gifted society, attempting to paint a portrait of that same brilliant and gifted society, in its opinions and its character rather than its actions, without once recurring to the models so advantageously at hand. From Plato to Baldassare Castiglione, from the Queen of Navarre to Mr. Mallock—we had almost written, to M. Anatole France—the writers of dialogues have taken the people of their acquaintance for their models. There is nothing of the fancy picture in the character of Parlamente or Hircan or Dame Oysille; they strike us as portraits seen at a sale, their names and pedigrees lost, but their air of real life so striking that involuntarily we cry, "Oh, what a wonderful likeness!" Where we agree with Mr. Saintsbury is in admitting that, though no doubt a most amusing pastime, it is probably a waste of time to attempt to identify the lineaments of an original so long since dead and done with.

The Age of the Saints: a Monograph of Early Christianity in Cornwall, with the Legends of the Cornish Saints, and an Introduction illustrative of the Ethnology of the District. By William Copeland Borlase. (Truro, Pollard.)

'THE AGE OF THE SAINTS' is an appropriate title for Mr. Borlase's monograph. It conveys just what is wanted to any one who is acquainted with the more remote history of Cornwall, but for those who have not made some progress in Celtic learning it will possess very little meaning. To many people all saints are of the same kind. There is a vague impression abroad, even among some of those who should know better, that from the sub-apostolic time to the present day some process of what is called canonization has taken place.

We are not writing an essay on sainthood or canonization, but for the sake of clearness we may remark that in early times almost every state differed from its nearest neighbours in the way those persons were selected who have come down to us with the name of saint or some equivalent title attached to their names.

Ireland and Cornwall were so much alike in this respect that no one can comprehend Cornish ecclesiastical history in early times without having acquired no insignificant knowledge of that of Ireland. This is possible now, though still by no means easy. The jungle-growth of seventeenth and eighteenth century dreaming has been in great part cleared away, and such of the old legends as survive have undergone a process of sifting by native antiquaries which renders them, even to an outsider, in some degree intelligible. The legendary lore of Cornwall, as it has come down to us, is quite as wild as that of the Green Isle, but it has not been in anything like the same degree the sport of theological disputants. Cornwall has, it is true, not escaped entirely. There were until lately some persons—who would be flattery to call them a school—who taught that Cornwall received the faith from the East direct, without any intervention on the part of Ireland, Gaul, or Italy. We need hardly tell our readers that Mr. Borlase teaches no nonsense of this kind. He sees, indeed, faint traces of architectural parallelism between some of the few remains of Celtic art and what may be found in many Oriental lands. This he accounts for by the well-established fact that pilgrims from Ireland and Celtic Britain were wont to visit the holy places of the East. In this we think he is undoubtedly correct. The likeness is in some instances too close to be accidental. When, however, he goes further than this, and finds in the records of Celtic asceticism a copy of the manners of Oriental hermits, and indirectly of the non-Christian ascetics of lands still further away, we cannot follow him. We admit the parallelism, of course, but see no sign whatever of borrowing. Self-torture is a disease inherent in the nature of man; we find it in every clime, among every race, and in all degrees of civilization. In the early days of the Christian Church it was at times violent to a degree which almost reached, if it did not at times overpass, the limit of sanity. When a distorted ideal of this kind had been formed it was natural that the ardent and poetic Celtic mind should rush to extremes hardly surpassed by the recluses of Syria or the Nile.

There is now no doubt that Ireland received Christianity by way of Gaul, and that it was Irish missionaries who planted the faith in Cornwall. We do not question that there may have been Christians in Cornwall in Roman times. A few remnants may even have remained down to the time when the Irish missionaries came over. Judging by analogy, this does not seem unlikely. We believe it is now a well-ascertained fact that traces of the Christianity of Japan, which was planted three centuries ago, have been come upon by modern missionaries, although the "stamping out" process was carried on there with at least as much vigour as it ever can have been in Cornwall.

The first bishops of Ireland were not diocesan. Their authority seems to have been concurrent, and only limited by the ocean. The position taken by these missionary prelates brings to one's mind the great religious teacher of the last century—one who, notwithstanding all divergences, had much in common with these early preachers of the "glad tidings." When John Wesley was remonstrated with for his want of reverence for ecclesiastical rule, he is reported to have said, "The world is my parish." We imagine each one of these Hibernian bishops would have said, "Ireland is my diocese." How a state of things such as this, not only so irregular, but so inconvenient also, can have been brought about we can but guess. Ignorance cannot have been the cause, for those prelates were familiar with Gaul, where a diocesan episcopate had long ruled.

From Ireland came over bishops and priests to evangelize Cornwall. Their status when they got there is a complete puzzle. Nothing in the shape of jurisdiction or mission, as we understand these words, can have been given to them, yet they preached the faith with marked success, and founded many—perhaps most—of the churches which have come down to the present day. Mr. Borlase explains this far better than any of his predecessors whose writings we have encountered:—

"In order to understand how our Cornish churches came to bear the name of saints at all, we may here add a notice of the usage which the British Church retained from early times, in contradistinction to the formal system of dedication set up in the churches of the Continent during the period of the isolation of the former. It was customary that when any holy man, were he bishop or priest, wished to found a church or monastery to be devoted to the service of God, he should come himself to the spot on which the future edifice was to be raised, and there continue forty days engaged in prayer and fasting.....This done, the ceremony was completed, and all that was required by way of consecration was effected."

For ever after he was regarded, not only as the consecrator, but the founder of the church, and very soon took local rank as a saint.

No fault can be found with Mr. Borlase, so far as he goes, but he seems to imply, though this is probably not really his meaning, that no formal office of dedication or consecration was used. This is extremely unlikely. During the long period of prayer and fasting which occurred before the dedication was complete the bishop, we may be quite sure, used some service appropriate to the occasion. That nothing of the kind has come down to our time is no evidence that such services did not once exist. No one knows better than Mr. Borlase how terrible has been the shipwreck of Celtic literature, not in Cornwall only, but wherever the scattered remains of the race continued to maintain themselves.

The 'Choephoroi' of Æschylus. With an Introduction, Commentary, and Translation by A. W. Verrall, Litt.D. (Macmillan & Co.)

EVERY interpreter of a poem, be he actor, translator, or editor, must impress more or less of his own individuality on his rendering of his author. Dr. Verrall carries this natural tendency to excess, giving a large percentage of Dr. Verrall's 'Choephoroi' and very little of Æschylus's. And with all our admiration for Dr. Verrall's brilliant talents, the tamer and simpler treatment of the subject with which the old poet has hitherto been credited seems to be more antique and Hellenic in spirit than the modern editor's ingenious travesty.

Dr. Verrall declares that the conception of Pylades and Orestes as "a mutually devoted pair is irrelevant and inadmissible as a whole"; for he assumes that the taking of a joint oath to carry through a perilous enterprise was dictated by religion mainly, and hardly at all by friendship. If Æschylus had intended to exhibit Pylades as a devotee who cared much for Apollo and comparatively little for Orestes, surely he would have intimated as much in unmistakable terms. The reticence of Æschylus as to the relations between the two youths implies nothing at all except that the poet was too busy with other matters to take notice of them. Again, poor Strophios's character is blackened by the ingenious suggestion that Orestes was sent to him by Clytemnestra to purchase his acquiescence in her criminal plot. This notion seems to be based on an unwarrantable interpretation of δῖκός ἐπαδόν as "I was the object of a bargain corrupt on both sides." Moreover, Strophios is, according to Dr. Verrall's 'Choephoroi,' not Pylades's father. The following extract from a note on p. xix is a typical specimen of our editor's method:—

"According to Pindar, who is our only applicable authority, Strophios and Pylades did not even live in the same place. The home of Pylades in the 'rich fields' of Cirrha is distinguished clearly from that of Strophios on the 'foot (spur) of Parnassus,' that is to say at Crisa ('Pyth.' xi. 13-17, 35). Neither Pindar nor Æschylus suggests any connexion between them."

Not being gazetteers, they did not deem it necessary to explain that Cirrha was the port of Crisa, and that the lord of the one was also lord of the other.

The recognition (ἀναγνώρισις) has especially exercised Dr. Verrall, and cost him about thirty pages of introduction, the main feature of his essay being the contention that Electra recognized the family foot in the footprint of Orestes, and the family hair in his lock, she and he not being of pure Hellenic blood, but octoroon Lydians. What Dr. Verrall really means by this airy hypothesis would have been clearer if he had exhibited in a cut or coloured illustration a fancy portrait of Pelops.

Dr. Verrall has invented a novel method of dealing with passages which his predecessors have regarded as corrupt. Instead of altering the letters given by MSS., he prints here and there dots as a mark of emotional incoherence, thus doing away with the alleged necessity of assuming that there must have been sense and syntax in the original words. The effect is shown by the translation as well as by the text, as, for instance, by the version of vv. 744-750:—

"Those sorrows with patience I wore through, but.....to hear.....Oh my Orestes, the babe I spent my soul on, whom I took to nurse from the womb,.....and at each loud restless cry.....and a trouble it was, Oh dear!.....and nothing for it had I!.....For an infant, that cannot think, you needs must rear (how else?) by guessing its mind."

The treatment of vv. 132-7 is a good example of our editor's disregard of current principles and methods of criticism. The Greek according to the best MS. runs:—

πεπραγμένοι γὰρ νῦν γί πως ἀλώμεθα πρὸς τῆς τελευτῆς (ἄνδρα δ' ἀπηλλάξατο Αἰγισθον, ὅσπερ σὸν φόνου μεταίτιος), κἀγὼ μὲν ἀντιδούλος, ἐκ δὲ χρημάτων φεύγειν Ὀρίωντες ἐστί, οἱ δ' ὑπερκάπτες ἐν τοῖσι σοῖς πόνοισι χλίωντιν μέτα.

This is rendered:—

"For now are we vagabonds as it were, bargained away by our mother (to purchase for a husband Aegisthus, partner with her in thy death), I into slavery, and Orestes into banishment from his wealth, while they proudly revel in that which thy labour won."

The forced rendering of πεπραγμένοι is defended by citing Mr. Bury's view of ξένος, 'Nem.' 5, 36, which is in connection of Pindar's use of the verb, though Dr. Verrall pins us down to Æschylus's usage when he questions the admissibility of φεύγειν ὅτιν, which is, of course, proved by Sophocles's δεινὸς ἀθρῶν μὴ βλέπων ὁ μάντις ἦ, 'Oed. Rex,' 747. But the supplying of πεπραγμένη αἶμι with κἀγὼ μὲν and of πεπραγμένους with Ὀρίωντες, the equating φεύγειν with ὥστε φεύγειν, and the rendering μέτα "instead" (note) are little short of audacious.

Although Dr. Verrall has a strong propensity for creating difficulties, he does not always solve those which lie ready to his hand; for instance, we are told nothing about δὲ καὶ v. 251. He still adheres to his theory of the emphatic αὐτός, e.g., on v. 118, where he seems to imply that when we hear retribution spoken of we do not expect it to fall on the offender unless attention is specially drawn to the fact that its incidence is directed aright. It would have been better if there had been in his note on 'Choeph.' 151, a more frank acknowledgment of the mistake of denying the middle use of αὐδόμααι, made when commenting on 'Theb.,' 665.

It is a sad pity that Dr. Verrall allows his weaknesses to counterbalance his excellences so decidedly, for he is a bright and sympathetic interpreter when he does not go out of his way to be rash and eccentric.

Histoire du Peuple d'Israël. Par Ernest Renan. Tome V. (Paris, Calmann Lévy.)

This last volume of M. Renan's history of Israel, which was finished on the 24th of October, 1891, just two years before his death, contains the ninth and tenth books, embracing the history of the Jewish autonomy and of the people of Israel under the Roman domination. Since there have been no new documents discovered concerning the political state of Palestine during these periods, we cannot expect to find in M. Renan's book new facts. Indeed, our author relies mostly on Schürer's excellent and exhaustive 'History of the Jewish People in the Time of Jesus Christ,' of which we may expect soon a third edition; and as to the scanty Talmudic documents for the epoch treated of, M. Renan quotes M. J. Derenbourg's 'Essai sur l'Histoire et la Géographie de la Palestine d'après le Talmud et les autres Sources Rabbiniqes' (which appeared in 1867) and Graetz's 'History of the Jews.' For the last, M. Renan did not use the latest edition of 1888, which is not only fuller than the previous editions, but has many parts completely rewritten. What we have chiefly to note in M. Renan's posthumous work is, as in all his writings, the elegant style, the clearness of his exposition, and his parallels with classical, mediæval, and even modern facts; the last are perhaps superfluous, if not tasteless. The style in this his last book is as vivid and elegant as in his earlier ones, and no one will discover a trace of the author's bodily sufferings while writing it. Wherever a description is worth supplying, M. Renan has done it with the greatest success. We may point out, for instance, the chapters on Herod and Philo, the one political and the other theological. The greater part of the present volume is occupied by the progress of the Messianic ideas of the Jews, and of their notion of the immortality of the soul.

In the chapter on the Apocalypse of Enoch M. Renan mentions M. Bouriant's discovery of a great portion of the Greek text of it, but Mr. Charles's translation (based on a new Ethiopic manuscript) came out too late. Enoch is, according to M. Renan, the work of an Essene, whilst Ecclesiastes was composed by a Sadducee, near to the epoch of the Roman conquest of Palestine. M. Renan explains the name of this sect as Sadoki, of the family of Zadok, already taken in this sense by the late A. Geiger, whilst the word Pharisee is derived from פָּרַשׁ, "separated" from unclean matter. The Essenes are the Hasidim, "the pious," "Essene" being derived from the Syriac נְסָן, "pious." M. Renan does not accept Graetz's view that the early Christians were Essenes. The word is unknown in New Testament literature. Our author says: "Entre le christianisme et l'essénisme, le commerce direct est douteux; mais les ressemblances sont profondes." In the note he adds: "Notez la Cène, la communauté des biens," &c. M. Renan ought, perhaps, to have mentioned that the name "Essene" nowhere occurs in the Talmudical books.

It seems that recent English workers on apocryphal literature are not known to French serants. Speaking of the Psalms of Solomon, M. Renan does not quote the excellent edition with a most learned preface by Prof. H. E. Ryle; and in another place he does not accept Prof. Margoliouth's views concerning the book of "Wisdom." But Prof. Margoliouth wrote on Sirach, and not on Wisdom. In the chapter concerning the Agadah M. Renan is not particularly complimentary to the English race. He says:—

"La foi alors était libre; car elle n'était que l'imagination; ce sont nos races logiques qui en ont fait un dogme, une chaîne. Rien ne limitait l'agada; toute combinaison possible des mots du texte sacré était vite affirmée. La pesanteur intellectuelle de nos races occidentales, surtout de la race anglaise, admettant comme premier principe que tous les pays et tous les siècles se ressemblent, ne peut comprendre cela."

The last chapter, which we may call M. Renan's views on the future, far or near, had been given in many daily papers before the appearance of the volume; we believe a repetition here, therefore, to be unnecessary. We prefer rather to reproduce M. Renan's page on the problem of Philo's remaining a Jew, whilst having been so deeply acquainted with Greek culture. M. Renan says:—

"Comment Philon reste-t-il Juif? C'est ce qu'il serait assez difficile de dire, s'il n'était notoire que, dans ces questions de religion maternelle, le cœur a des sophismes touchants pour concilier des choses qui n'ont aucun rapport entre elles. Platon aime à éclaircir ses philosophèmes par les mythes les plus gracieux du génie grec, Proclus et Malebranche se croient dans la religion de leurs pères, le premier en faisant des hymnes philosophiques à Vénus, le second en disant la messe. La contradiction, en pareille matière, est un acte de piété. Plutôt que de renoncer à des croyances chères, il n'y a pas de fausse identification, de biais complaisant qu'on n'admette. Moïse Maimonide, au XII^e siècle, pratiquera la même méthode, affirmant tour à tour la Thora et Aristote, la Thora entendue à la façon des talmudistes, et Aristote entendu à la façon matérialiste d'Ibn-Roschd. L'histoire de l'esprit humain est pleine de coquilleux contresens. Ce que faisait Philon il y a dix-neuf cents ans, c'est ce que font de nos jours tant d'esprits honnêtes, dominés par le parti pris de ne pas abdiquer les croyances qui se présentent à eux comme ayant un caractère ancestral."

NEW NOVELS.

A Valiant Ignorance. By Mary Angela Dickens. 3 vols. (Macmillan & Co.)

If a boy has had an unscrupulous speculator for a father, who came to a bad end, is he bound to speculate unscrupulously and to end badly? In other words, is heredity an iron law from which there is no escaping? Miss Dickens propounds the question, and it is difficult to say, after reading her story, whether she answers it with ay or no. To interpret her comments and moral sentiments in a natural sense, one would say distinctly, no; but then it is a curious coincidence that the son does speculate unscrupulously, very much on his father's lines, which does not look as though a free choice had been open to him. "There is no hereditary wrongdoing," the author seems to argue, "for here you have a man who repeated his father's obliquity; yet he stood his punishment and repented." It is not conclusive; but the story is readable enough.

A Soldier of Fortune. By L. T. Meade. 3 vols. (Chatto & Windus.)

It was the inspiration of John Smith's sister ("Oh, what a romantic little thing you are, Aggie!") to compare that estimable but weak young man to a soldier of fortune. The educated son of a wealthy farmer, starting on a continental tour before choosing his profession, is about as unsuited to the simile as well may be. Perilously hurt in his first action, he gives up soldiering—in other words, having surrendered at discretion to a perfectly frivolous beauty, who promptly jilts him, he speedily recognizes the more permanent charms of an amiable girl with whom he has been familiar from childhood, and settles down in his early twenties to matrimony and the pursuit of literature. Though he certainly gives no indication of talent, it is pleasant to learn that he is highly successful as a novelist, and we could wish that the plot of the serial story which so rapidly immortalizes him had been imparted to the reader. It might have enhanced the merit of the narrative before us, which is somewhat crude in that respect. The remorseless tyranny exercised by Mrs. Vincent over the limp Miss Prettyman is based on so frail an excuse that it is impossible to believe it could have been submitted to, even by an imbecile with a heart complaint. Though it is difficult to praise the story, one or two characters are not without interest. Phyllis herself, rapid and heartless at first, learns self-knowledge and acquires tenderness in a natural and very womanly fashion; while in Nancy Brown, whose heart and head are just the sound organs we are glad to expect in a gentle, unsophisticated Englishwoman, we think we find a portrait drawn from life.

Pamela's Honeymoon. By Mrs. Robert Jocelyn. 3 vols. (Hutchinson & Co.)

A NOVEL which can be read without any severe mental strain is a boon to be thankful for in itself nowadays. 'Pamela's Honeymoon' adds to this recommendation a fair amount of sprightly talk and a tangled web of foolish but high-minded deception on the part of an adoring husband, which brings a great deal of unnecessary affliction upon the head of his devoted bride. However, if Sir John Hamilton had not conducted himself very much after the manner of an over-conscientious schoolgirl, Pamela would have enjoyed her honeymoon with him and would have remained without a history, which might have been a pity. Fortunately there was an old servant in the house to represent the missing element of common sense in the establishment, and the slight but eventful history has a happy ending.

Enid Lyle. By Bessie Hatton. 2 vols. (Chapman & Hall.)

THE author of 'Enid Lyle' is probably fresh to the novelists' craft—at any rate, one name only figures on her title-page; but there is more than merely negative evidence to go upon. The writing is very unequal and unassured; at times it seems to pick up a little, but the main impression is of crude inexpressiveness. Country life in a French convent is the best part, because it seems most drawn from real experience, though without much power to convey it. The greater part of the story and most of the people are not successful. As it advances the raw, inexperienced handling shows more clearly, and the promise of better writing dwindles. Amongst other things, Miss Hatton appears to be an observer of mouths—various kinds are described with some emphasis. The man with the "small, full, red mouth" is the villain; a youth whose "top lip lightly projects" is easily led; another man owns "a tight, cruel mouth"—he is the nephew of the villain, and the worst thing about him is his manners. They are atrocious. He belongs to what Mark Twain calls "a passel of young men"—wearers of "open-work socks, coloured sashes, high heels, and perforated shoes." It is true that a not very attractive group of young men are about the world at present; but Miss Hatton has not hit off their peculiarities very cleverly, any more than she has succeeded with her great and good actor, Alec Meadows, who is always "God-blessing" or "my-dearing" somebody. The life of the convent-bred girls in St. John's Wood is, perhaps, more "unconventional" than the author intended.

A Modern Amazon. By George Paston. 2 vols. (Osgood, McIlvaine & Co.)

GOOD novels, or novels conspicuous throughout for a general mediocrity of goodness, are as common in these days, and the essentials of human interest are so limited, that one cannot feel much surprise on coming across another well-written romance of a lovely wife who has to be wooed and won by her husband after marriage, and who is brought to her senses by a strong dose of suffering and humiliation. Regina Houghton, the high-spirited beauty who marries Humphrey Kenyon, M.D., on the time-honoured "one condition" of wilful and fastidious maidens, is drawn by Mr. Paston as a lady journalist, up to date, yet remarkably innocent and unsuspecting, just a little Ibsenite, a little "Woman's Rights," a little emancipationist, but as selfish in disposition and as farouche in manner as the most unlovely of her type. It has been said that this story is well written. Some of the characters are particularly well drawn, such as the philandering editor, who nearly captures Regina, and who is dismissed by Mr. Paston, after due exposure and denunciation, in the act of swallowing a—seidlitz powder. The book will amuse more than it will engross. It does not plumb the depths of its strongest situations, but in most of them it gets well below the surface.

An American Peeress. By H. C. Chatfield-Taylor. 2 vols. (Chapman & Hall.)

A GOOD deal of novelistic capital has been made of late years out of the situation—doubtless suggested by many cases in real life—in which the central figure is an unsophisticated American girl suddenly confronted, owing to her marriage with an English aristocrat, with a host of unfamiliar responsibilities. Mr. Chatfield-Taylor is the latest writer to exploit this idea, and he cannot be congratulated on having bettered the achievements of his predecessors. Neither in his pictures of Chicagoan nor of English society does he succeed in conveying the impression of one who writes from an inside knowledge. Still, the story of Laura's long duel with an old flame of her husband's is pleasantly told, nor is any reader likely to grudge so loyal a heroine her ultimate triumph over her rival.

A Beginner. By Rhoda Broughton. (Bentley & Son.)

'A BEGINNER' is devoid of anything approaching a plot. Were it not for the lightness, vivacity, and sense of movement inherent in Miss Broughton's touch, it would hardly be even what is called "a story without a plot." What story there is consists in the fact of a clever young male writer having unfavourably criticized a novel by the heroine, who is the object of his devotion. As she signs herself "A Beginner," and bears no outward and visible signs of a connexion with the inky sisterhood, he fails to identify her as the parent of 'Miching Mallecho.' The name is provoking, and we are told little else about the volume except that it is concerned with "passion." Yet it is the principal feature of 'A Beginner.' Miss Broughton's own book is in the present tense, a custom of the author's—we believe a custom as ancient as her first essay in fiction. It is not an admirable fashion; but Miss Broughton, if she does not exactly conjure with it, at least uses it better than her numerous imitators. Miss Jocelyn, the heroine, is introduced to the reader in a characteristic first sentence: "Miss Jocelyn rings the bell a second time, and pulls down the handle with a vigour that shows that this time she will have it answered, or like the 30,000 Cornish men will know the reason why." This pardonable anxiety is caused by the non-arrival of 'Miching Mallecho' from the publishers. When it does make its appearance the reader feels that Miss Broughton does not provide all the situation might seem to offer. Little interest is awakened in the fortunes of the book and their effect on Miss Jocelyn and her surroundings, though they are the sum and substance of the story. At first curiosity is aroused, then, as the reporters say, nothing "transpires"—at least of an exciting kind. Other interest there is of an incidental sort. We may venture to mention that, as a rule, Miss Broughton's young women are not conspicuous for self-control and dignity. Compared with those of many of her predecessors, however, Miss Jocelyn's manners really have something of the repose that distinguishes, not, perhaps, the Vere de Vere family, but ordinary human nature. Lesbia, a frisky matron, acts as a counterfoil to her staidness. If she has not all the rollicking self-abandonment and "rompishness" of Miss Broughton's earlier heroines, it is not for the want of trying. Tears, chaff, poutings, are all in her repertory, as well as the use of crystal balls, divining-rods, and the modes of the moment generally. She whiles away an evening with a "mud student" from the Agricultural College in innocent horseplay, ending in a mutual pursuit, in a blindfold and shoeless condition, across the room and over and under the billiard-table. There are some more types, and plenty of repartee, clever or morely flippant. 'A Beginner' has upon it most of the marks of ephemeral literature, but also on every page the signature of Miss Broughton, and not another.

My Dead Self. By William Jameson. (Chatto & Windus.)

THE reader should sit down to 'My Dead Self' in a listless, uncritical mood; not particularly anxious for a novel, expecting nothing, quite ready to draw another blank in the lottery of the circulating library; and then we can promise him that he will like it. This would not happen with a worthless book. There is plenty of fiction in regard to which one can say, Blessed is he that expecteth nothing. But Mr. Jameson will reward the reader who does not anticipate the highest art, the most energetic strain, or the most delicate fancy. He tells a convict's story in a spirit of wholesome optimism—the story of a bank manager who has gone wrong through speculation, and who rises from his dead self to higher things. "Fourpenny Bit," as his friends call him, because he has changed names at Portland with a man named Silver (one amongst several improbabilities in the story), holds up his head as a boardman, and as an outdoor tradesman in Whitechapel Road; and he has the good fortune to fall in with a theosophic colonel, under circumstances which would justify any man in considering that he had a special Providence all to himself. His adventures are full of interest and sentiment, though somewhat matter-of-fact in their narration. Mr. Jameson may write a better novel, but it will be enough if he never writes a worse.

The Sailor of the Istar. By El Jady. (Griffith, Farran & Co.)

HALF romance and half dry chronicle of recent events in Tonga, 'The Sailor of the Istar,' stiff and stilted as some portions of the narrative are, is not without the special kind of interest which should attach to everything in the shape of fiction. Many a reader may pick up in this volume a few ideas on Fijian politics and characteristics who would not think of seeking for proleptic information in a book which professed to inform. But with a little more art "El Jady" might have conveyed all her facts under a decent cloak of romance, whereas she seems rather to give us our facts and our fiction in slices. It may be taken for granted that the author is a woman—not that women are more apt to spell incorrectly than men, or that women never understand the laws of a game, but from cumulative internal evidence. Here is a billiard puzzle which may perplex any one who is accustomed to handle a cue:—

"Bless my soul, Lorna! that's a stroke of seven you've made. A capital hit! Red in left-hand pocket, three; cannon off spot into right pocket; and here I am left with both in baulk."

It should be added that the purely romantic pages of the story are both brightly and tenderly written.

A Threefold Mystery: a Tale of Monte Carlo. By Constance Serjeant. (Stock.)

SILLINESS in novels is often aggressive, but occasionally pathetic; and the silliness of 'A Threefold Mystery' is pathetic enough to disarm a Bludyer. "I kiss Cissy, and Bee does the same, and then we go to our room and dress"; this is a fair sample of the artless prattlings with which Miss Serjeant entertains her readers. The dénouement, in which the ex-gambler and would-be suicide reappears in the character of a "wonderful preacher," is strangely ludicrous.

CANADIAN HISTORY.

The History of Canada, by William Kingsford (Toronto, Rowse & Hutchinson; London, Kegan Paul & Co.), is now in its sixth volume. The historian maintains the high level to which he rose at the outset, and each succeeding volume justifies our forecast when the first appeared. The present one is even more interesting than some which preceded it. This is partly because the principal topics are of great historical interest. Among them are the siege of Quebec by Montgomery and the unfortunate expedition under Burgoyne. Mr. Kingsford makes it clear that if Carleton had been in Burgoyne's place the capitulation at Saratoga would not have occurred, while he emphasizes what other writers have said about the possibility of Burgoyne saving his army if he had been strong-minded enough to retreat when to advance meant ruin. Carleton, as well as Burgoyne, was one of Lord George Germain's victims. We commend the volume to every student of North American history, and we shall quote a few sentences which are as just as they are well written:—

"Carleton will ever retain one of the first places in Canadian history. The work he performed remained after him. It was he who in a great measure laid the foundation for the Quebec Act, on the broad ground of rendering justice to the new subjects.....It was administered by Carleton with judgment and moderation, and he was enabled to set at defiance the clamour of discontent with which the English-speaking minority had assailed Murray. Not the least striking feature in his character is the dignity with which he met the insolent persecution of Lord George Germain. Carleton's government remains to us to show what can be achieved in difficult circumstances by a man sustained by high principle and a sense of duty. He offers to us an example for imitation in every respect by his patriotism, his untiring zeal in the fulfilment of his duty, by his private integrity and worth, unaffected by narrowness of spirit, and what is often the bane of great powers, fanciful, unspractical theories."

MR. DOUGLAS BRYMNER'S Report on Canadian Archives for 1892 (Ottawa, Dawson) is fifty-nine pages in length and full of matter. He is as painstaking in this report as in those which have preceded it. The period treated is the beginning of the century, when Canada was in a formative condition. Some alarm was felt lest the French Canadians would display their sympathy with France, when that country was at war with our own. General Hunter, who was then Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada, was able to report as follows in September, 1804, to Mr. Merry, British Minister at Washington:—

"I must in justice to the Canadians observe, that the state of the country has never been more tranquil, and the deportment of the people throughout the Province more apparently loyal than it is at the present moment, and the knowledge I have of the character of the Canadians, who are naturally a very quiet people and much attached to their homes, leads me firmly to believe that they never would be induced to dispose of their cattle and horses for the purposes mentioned by Wing."

This Wing was a Canadian settled in the State of New York who had concocted a story about his countrymen. The attack upon Canada which the French meditated was averted by the defeat of the French navy. The country was prepared for defence, and the inhabitants, among whom the French element was well represented, contributed large sums for the purpose. The details and extracts given in this volume must prove of great service to the student who makes a careful study of Canadian history.

SHORT STORIES.

A Protégée of Jack Hamlin's, &c. By Bret Harte. (Chatto & Windus.)—While none of these six stories equals some of the author's earlier work, they are in themselves excellent, and if any other name were on the title-page would be especially remarkable. Here there is no opportunity for the pathetic gift of which the author has shown himself so distinguished a master; but, on the other hand, in the first four stories he has ample scope for displaying that kind of humour which, in its genuine form, is almost confined to American writers, and to a few of them. The dry, imperturbable American, sarcastically cynical, yet tender-hearted and unexpectedly ready for every emergency, has become almost proverbial; but Mr. Bret Harte is one of the few who can describe him without exaggeration. Jack Hamlin in the first story and Bill in the second are delightful examples of this genuine article, and the next two stories have slighter sketches of the same character. 'A Protégée of Jack Hamlin's' is the most ambitious story in this volume, and, on the whole, it is the best; the incongruous situation in which the rousé finds himself when playing the rôle of heavy father is described with excellent feeling, and the tragic ending is made the more impressive by its delicate treatment. 'The Heir of the M'Hulishies' depends for its fun on the way in which the canny Scot outwits the astute American, and the irrelevance of the American girl's appearance may be excused for her amusing talk. 'The Mystery of the Hacienda' is a pretty ghost story, but 'An Episode of West Woodlands' has hardly enough distinctness to make it successful; it seems as if it were a slice taken out of a longer story, and, as it stands, it is almost a defect in an otherwise pleasant collection.

Our Manifold Nature. By Sarah Grand. (Heinemann.)—This book shows a terrible falling off from 'The Heavenly Twins,' which, in spite of obvious temptations, steered commendably clear of the vice of preaching; but of these six stories the three bulkiest are really little more than tracts, exhibiting all the splendid disregard of probability and the irritating attitude of superiority which characterize that form of instruction. Of course tracts have their uses, and there can be no legitimate objection to their production; but then their authors should not write pretentious prefaces to draw attention to the art of their performances. We do not profess, even after two perusals of the preface, exactly to understand what Sarah Grand's views on the art of novel-writing are, but from one statement which is intelligible we entirely dissent: she falls foul of some critics who have very properly objected to her first story that it is "melodramatic and utterly impossible," and ventures to put up the absurd plea that all the facts in the story actually occurred in real life. This may very possibly be true, and all that can be said is that Sarah Grand has either not understood the facts and has given them a wrong complexion, or has omitted some facts which materially affect the issue. The lady who wears tight stays, and whose nose gets red in consequence, may very possibly have committed suicide, but if so Sarah Grand has not understood her character: at any rate, she has not made her fate appear probable to the reader. In the same way the nobleman in the second story is perfectly absurd. A man who has been in polite society and has lived the life of a man of the world could not behave in the fatuous and insufferable manner that the author represents; in her possibly laudable desire to expose the foibles of a man about town she exaggerates his defects, and so entirely spoils the effect of the picture, even from her own point of view. 'Ah Man' and 'Boommellen,' where the didactic tendency is less obvious, are far more successful. The first is an amusing sketch of a strong-minded and devoted Chinese, while the second is a really powerful picture of the half-idiotic son of an old Irish family. If Sarah Grand would only stick to pictures like these and those of the Twins, and would avoid obtruding the observer in the first person singular, she might still retain the position she secured by 'The Heavenly Twins.'

My Two Wives, and other Stories. By George R. Sims. (Chatto & Windus.)—It has been stated that there is a certain class of readers who consider Mr. Sims "like Dickens, only more refined," and they doubtless will hail the present volume with appropriate satisfaction. It is true that here there is only one story, 'That Act of Parliament,' which the utmost ingenuity could torture into a resemblance to the inferior author, and that is distinctly the best in the book; for the ill-used writer is decidedly amusing, and Mr. Sims is certainly read to better advantage when he deals with the low comedian than when he soars to the higher flights of melodrama or sentimentalism. Nevertheless, it cannot be denied that Mr. Sims has the somewhat rare gift of making the most of his subject. In all these stories, though the motives are commonplace enough and the sentiment is cheap, one feels that the author has produced exactly the effect he desired, and that no point is missed from lack of directness and lucidity of statement; and after all it is no mean thing in England to be able to write a book which reminds one of the French chroniclers of "faits divers."

The Hon. Stanbury, and Others. By Two. "Pseudonym Library." (Fisher Unwin.)—Of the two authors of this little trio of stories, the one who writes the first two over the signature C. certainly shows the more talent. The last story, like the others, is of a lugubrious nature, but it is more diffuse and less direct and pointed than a short story should be, so that, though the heroine's fate is really the most sad of all, she arouses less of the reader's sympathy. 'Poor Miss Skeet,' by C., treats with much originality of an old maid, whose lonely estate is to some extent consoled by the sight of the Apollo Belvidere and the Antinous in the Vatican. The subject is a little difficult, but it is handled with great dexterity, and the rather vulgar remarks of the narrator's wife enhance the pathos of poor Miss Skeet's enthusiasm. This is the best story; but 'The Hon. Stanbury,' showing how a man may find salvation in a ballet dancer, has considerable humour and an affecting conclusion. The "Pseudonym Library" has succeeded in more ambitious books than this, but of the quite slight and unpretending volumes this is among the best.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

In his Life of Benito Juárez (Remington & Co.) Mr. Ulrick R. Burke has managed to compress as much as most English readers will care to know respecting the late constitutional President of Mexico and the country he saved from anarchy. During fifty years of this century the name of that republic was almost synonymous with disorder and disgrace; civil war and brigandage were rife, and, strange as the statement may seem, the annexation of Texas by the United States, although morally indefensible, was really a blessing in disguise. For the Apache and other horse-riding Indians had for some time been distinctly pressing the Mexicans southwards from the Rio Grande del Norte, and their systematic raids for the purpose of carrying off white women were resulting in the production of a dangerous race of half-breeds, brought up as fierce nomads, and endowed with all the evil qualities of both races. The iniquities of Santa Anna furnished an excuse for invasion by the United States, and after the appropriation of Texas the Indians found themselves pressed upon by white men of a sterner mould. The introductory portion dealing with the independence of Mexico and the American aggression is very well written, though there is a slip in stating that the taking of "Monterrey in California (September 23rd, 1846)" was a serious victory. The little presidio of that name on the west coast had surrendered to Commodore Sloat in the previous July, and its capture was of no importance at the time; it was the strongly fortified town across the Rio Grande which, under General Ampudia, resisted for three days the attack of those gallant Marylanders whose names live in the stirring lyric:—

With Ringgold's spirit for the fray,
With fearless Lowe and dashing May,
With Watson's blood at Monterey.

But while Northern Mexico was given over to intrigue and warfare, there was a man in the extreme south-west of the country who was making a reputation as a model ruler in his native state of Oaxaca, on the shores of the Gulf of Tehuantepec. Born in 1806, Benito Juárez was a pure Indian; but under this comprehensive term are included races which differ as widely as the Rajput does from the Cingalese in our Eastern empire, and Juárez belonged to the nation of the Zapotecs, who had bravely resisted Toltec, Chichimec, and Aztec, and even under the Spaniard might be defeated, but were never enslaved. Their capital and sacred city, Mitla, still contains the ruins of a palace worthy of comparison with Palenque or Uxmal, and Viollet-le-Duc goes so far as to say that "the monuments of the golden age of Greece and of Rome alone equal the beauty of the masonry of this great building. The facings dressed with perfect regularity, the well-cut joints, the faultless bonds, and the edges of unqualified sharpness, bear witness to knowledge and long experience on the part of the builders." From the indomitable yet highly cultivated founders of this city was Juárez descended, and, although his early life was that of an Indian peasant, he gradually worked his way upwards through the seminary, the institute, the law courts, and the Congress, until, in 1847, he was elected the constitutional governor of his native state, which he ruled wisely and well until 1852. Arrested by the usurping Dictator, Santa Anna, he managed to escape to the United States, from which he returned in 1856 to take office in the new Liberal cabinet as Minister of Justice and Religion. Henceforth he became involved in an unceasing struggle with the clerical party, which declared open war against him when, as Vice-President of the Republic, he legally became President on the abdication of Comonfort at the end of 1857. For three more years he held his own against Miramon and Zuloaga; in 1861 he entered the capital in triumph; and then came the episode of the squabble over the Mexican debt, followed by the armed intervention of England, Spain, and France. How the three powers disagreed, and how France alone remained on Mexican soil—to bring in the unfortunate Maximilian, and afterwards to abandon him—is matter of recent history, and is, we think, very fairly told by Mr. Burke. The savage manner in which the French carried on the war is shown by the verbatim order of Bazaine as given by his apologist M. Duvernois, in which the Marshal enjoins that no prisoners are to be made, and every one taken with arms is to be shot. Subsequently (on October 3rd, 1865) Maximilian issued that most sanguinary decree in which it was ordained that any man belonging to the National army, and assisting it with warning, notice, arms, food, or horses, should be put to death within twenty-four hours; and, but for this, there can be no doubt that his life would have been spared after his capture at Querétaro. It must be remembered that this decree was not a mere brutum fulmen, but quite the contrary; on October 22nd General Artéaga,

Brigadier-General Salazar, three colonels, and a number of officers of lower grade were shot in cold blood. Yet, in spite of all the tremendous provocation to reprisals, there is ample evidence from the Princess Salm-Salm and others that every opportunity was given to Maximilian to effect his escape, but he was infatuated with the belief in his immunity, and justice was obliged to take its course. Even at the last moment the dignified courtesy of Juárez to the interceding princess, as well as to the wife of Miramon, is worthy of the highest praise. In 1872 the best president that Mexico or any other Spanish-American republic ever possessed died in harness, regretted by a nation, because, "undaunted by fierce opposition, undismayed by constant danger, unshaken by enormous temptation, he set Law above Force." Mr. Burke has done well in writing the history of such a man.

MISS EDWARDS has taken to heart some of our criticisms on her first volume of France of To-day (Rivington, Percival & Co.), but unluckily the second part, which we have on our table, is not particularly readable. Scientific agriculturists will doubtless value her technical knowledge of manures used in certain regions, as shown in the following and other passages: "Other manures used are the scoria of dephosphated metals, alluded to in a former page, also Kainite, a German product, consisting of sulphate of potassium and magnesia," &c. The book is prefaced with an extract from a private letter from Mr. Frederic Harrison, informing Miss Edwards that she is "our first living authority on France." As Mr. Harrison's distinction is not as an agriculturalist, we suspect that he attached some occult significance to the personal pronoun "our." The idea which, however, Miss Edwards evidently wishes to be conveyed by the printing of the testimonial is that she is the first British authority on France—an opinion which, putting her work above that, for example, of an accurate and impartial writer of good English like Mr. Hamerton, we cannot subscribe to. The best conceived portion of the book is relegated to the appendix, in which the author essays to summarize French progress under the Republic; but here again an excellent idea is ill carried out. We once heard it said that there is internal evidence in Miss Edwards's works that she has never been in France, and she certainly tries to disguise the fact that her knowledge comes from personal observation, even in this appendix devoting pages to second-hand extracts from old Paris correspondence printed and read long ago in London journals. The impression left by a perusal of the book is one of regret that a writer who has evidently enjoyed unusual opportunities of studying the country should have so little faculty for imparting her knowledge. Miss Edwards might do well to secure a good collaborator, who can write English, to verify and arrange in attractive order her masses of confused information.

Count Cavour and Madame de Circourt: some Unpublished Correspondence, edited by Count Nigra (Cassell & Co.), is a bad title for letters that have already been published on the Continent. The letters are readable, but they cannot be said to add much to our knowledge of Cavour. Mr. Butler's translation is of unusual excellence, and the publishers ought to deem themselves fortunate in securing his aid. Such scholarly work is not common among English translators.

MR. LANG's criticisms of Woodstock in the introduction to the Border edition of that romance are sensible and to the point. His annotations are good, but not numerous. Perhaps a better quotation than that given in his first note, regarding the habit of carrying small Bibles, would have been from the career of Selden, who tormented the Presbyterian ministers by telling them that "in your little pocket bible with gilt leaves.....the translation may be thus, but the Greek or the Hebrew signifies thus." Mr. Hole is the illustrator of these volumes, which do Mr. Nimmo great credit. —Messrs. A. & C. Black have printed The Betrothed and The Highland Widow together in the Dryburgh edition. Mr. Hindley's designs show a good deal of cleverness.

A Book of the Heavenly Birthdays (Stock), which E. V. B. has compiled with the skill to be expected of her, is an anthology that will be pleasing to many readers. The gentle melancholy that pervades it should prove acceptable.

Messrs. Macmillan have sent us neat reprints (each in one volume) of The Second Son, by Mrs. Oliphant, and A Country Gentleman and his Family, by the same indefatigable writer; and also of Mr. Archibald Forbes's Barracks, Bismarck, and Battles. —Messrs. Sampson Low & Co. have reprinted A Strange Voyage, by Mr. Clark Russell, and Wright and Wanting, by Dr. Mac Donald. —Messrs. Smith & Elder have published a cheap edition (the tenth) of David Grieve; but the type is too small.

We have on our table A History of Philology, by Dr. W. Windelband, translated by J. H. Tufts (Macmillan). —The Beginnings of the English Romantic Movement, by W. L. Phelps (Boston, U.S., Ginn). —An Old and Middle-English Reader, by G. E. MacLean (Macmillan). —The Principles of Chess in Theory and Practice, by J. Mason (Cox). —Infants' Drawing Books, Books IV. and V. (Griffith & Farran). —Meteorology, by H. N. Dickson (Methuen). —Rosemary Lane, by P. M. Notrad (Wells Gardner). —The Auld Scotch Precentor, by N. Dickson (Glasgow, Morison). —The Wooing of Oseith, by K. T. Sizer (Jarrold). —Life's Philosophy, by A. S. Cody (New York, privately printed). —Wayside Music, Lyrics, Songs, and Sonnets, by C. H. Crandall (Putnam). —A Mammal, a Poem, by J. E. Howell (New York, Howell Publishing Co.). —Doorstep Ditties, by J. Morison (Blackwood). —Truth in Story, by E. Hodder (Hodder Brothers). —The Story of the New Gospel of Interpretation, by E. Maitland (Lamley). —One Fold and One Shepherd, by G. Trobridge (Speirs). —The Transfigured Life, by J. R. Miller, D.D. (S.S.U.). —Some Recent Contributions to the Unitarian Pulpit, by J. W. Brown (Sutton). —English Poetry from Blake to Browning, by W. M. Dixon (Methuen). —La Vie Humaine: Vêrène, by A. Pianelli (Paris, Journo). —L'Educazione fisica della Gioventù, by A. Momo (Milan, Treves). —Studi di Storia antica e di Topografia storica, by Dott. Gabriele Grasso, Part I. (Ariano, Appulo-Irpinio). —Ein individualistischer Pessimist, by Dr. S. Rubinstein (Leipzig, Edelmann). —La Poésie lyrique et satirique en France au Moyen Age, by L. Clélat (Paris, Lucien & Oudin). —Giornale della Società Asiatica Italiana, Vol. VII., 1893 (Rome, Loescher). —and Stimori Mondani, by G. Negri (Milan, Hoepli). Among New Editions we have The Epistles and Hymn of St. Patrick, edited by the Rev. T. Olden (S.P.C.K.). —The Roman Missal and Supplement (Washbourne). —The Catholic Religion, by the Rev. Vernon Staley (Mowbray). —Stammering, by E. Behnke (Fisher Unwin). —The Monastery of the Grand Chartreuse, by a Carthusian Monk (Burns & Oates). —The Girl in White, and other Stories, by A. Deir (Stock). —and Sprains, their Consequences and Treatment, by C. W. M. Moullin (Lowis).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

- Theology.*
Allon (H.). Pastor and Teacher, the History of his Ministry, by Rev. W. H. Harwood, cr. 8vo. 6s. cl.
Bennett's (W. H.). The Book of Chronicles, cr. 8vo. 7s. 6d. cl.
Cheetham's (S.). History of the Christian Church during the First Six Centuries: Early Period, cr. 8vo. 10s. 6d. cl.
Controversy of Zion (The), being the Miscellaneous Works of the late T. W. Christie, 8vo. 5s. cl.
Fleischer's (O.). Philosophy and Development of Religion, 2 vols. cr. 8vo. 15s. net, cl.

LAW.

- Practical Statutes of the Session 1893*, with Notes, Ac., Part 3, edited by J. S. Cotton, 12mo. 4s. cl.
Wright's (E. B.). The Law of Principal and Agent, 8vo. 18s. cl.

FINE ART AND ARCHÆOLOGY.

- Illustrated Archæologist, a Quarterly Journal*, edited by J. H. Allen, Vol. I., cr. 4to. 12s. 6d. cl.
Royal Academy Pictures, 1894, 4to. 7s. 6d. cl.

POETRY AND THE DRAMA.

- Clough's (A.). Poems, Selections from, 12mo. 2s. 6d. net, cl.
Parker's (G.). A Lover's Diary, Songs in Sequence, 12mo. 5s. cl.
Tollemache's (B.). The Early Bird, and other Drawing-Room Plays, cr. 8vo. 2s. 6d. cl.
Vee's (M. C.). The Fairest of the Angels, and other Verse, 12mo. 3s. 6d. cl.

MUSIC.

- Brühl's (A.). Celebrated Pianists of the Past and Present Time, with Portraits, cr. 8vo. 7s. 6d. cl.

POLITICAL ECONOMY.

- Rae's (J.). Eight Hours for Work, cr. 8vo. 4s. 6d. net, cl.
Taylor's (E. W. C.). The Factory System and the Factory Acts, cr. 8vo. 2s. 6d. cl.

HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY.

- Loftus's (Lord A.). Diplomatic Reminiscences, Second Series, 3 vols. 8vo. 32s. cl.
Men of Achievement: Statesmen, by N. Brooks; Explorers and Travellers, by A. W. Greely, cr. 8vo. 2s. 6d. each, cl.
Stevens's (C. E.). Sources of the Constitution of the United States, cr. 8vo. 4s. 6d. net, cl.

GEOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL.

- Cole's (G. A. J.). The Gipsy Road, a Journey from Krakow to Koblenz, cr. 8vo. 4s. cl.
Douglas's (R. K.). Society in China, illus. 8vo. 18s. cl.
Prior's (H.). Ascents and Passes in the Lake District, with Map, 8vo. 3s. 6d. roan.
Tristram's (H. B.). Eastern Customs in Bible Lands, cr. 8vo. 4s. cl.

PHILOLOGY.

- Edipus at Colonus, translated by A. C. Auchmuty, 2-ewd.
Stoffel's (C.). Studies in English, First Series, 8vo. 7s. 6d. cl.

SCIENCE.

- Adler's (H.). Alternating Generations, a Biological Study of Oak Galls and Gall Flies, illus. cr. 8vo. 10s. 6d. net, cl.
Bouchard's (C.). Lectures on Auto-intoxication in Diarrhoea, cr. 8vo. 10s. cl.
Bower's (P. O.). Practical Botany for Beginners, 12mo. 3s. 6d. cl.
Dutton's (T.). Domestic Hygiene, cr. 8vo. 2s. cl.
Senn's (C. E.). Syllabus of Lectures on the Practice of Surgery, cr. 8vo. 10s. cl. limp.
Trimble's (H.). The Tannins, a Monograph of the Vegetable Astringents, Vol. 2, cr. 8vo. 10s. 6d. cl.

GENERAL LITERATURE.

- A. L. Register of Summaries, No. 92, folio, 5s. cl.
Angiers' Evenings, cr. 8vo. 6s. cl.
Cardella's (G.). The Perfect Way of Honour, 3 vols. 31s. 6d. cl.
Emerson's (F. H.). Welsh Fairy Tales and other Stories, 2 cl.
Evans's (G. D.). The Non-Commissioned Officer's Guide to Promotion, cr. 8vo. 2s. 6d. cl.
Gervard's (D.). The Rich Miss Kildell, cr. 8vo. 4s. cl.
Golden Thoughts for Noble Men and Women, selected by M. M. Braddell, 18mo. 2s. 6d. net, cl.
Gordon's (J.). A Puritan Pagan, a Novel, cr. 8vo. 5s. cl.
Hueffer's (F.). The Queen who Flew, a Fairy Tale, 3s. 6d. cl.
Hunter's (F. H.). James Iwick, Ploughman and Elder, 2s. 6d. cl.
Jokai's (M.). Byes like the Sea, translated by E. M. Bain, 4s. cl.
MacCann's (J.). Rites of Citizenship, cr. 8vo. 4s. 6d. net, cl.
McNulty's (R.). Myther O'Ryan, 12mo. 3s. 6d. cl.
Middlemass's (J.). The Mystery of Clement Duvaren, 3 vols. cr. 8vo. 31s. 6d. cl.
Olliphant's (Mrs.). The Prodigals and their Inheritance, 2 vols. cr. 8vo. 21s. cl.; The Second Son, cr. 8vo. 3s. 6d. cl.
Parker's (G.). The Translation of a Savage, cr. 8vo. 4s. cl.
Poushkin's (A.). Prose Tales, translated by T. Keane, 6s. cl.
Powell's (Lieut.-Col. W. H.). The Army Officer's Examiner, cr. 8vo. 20s. cl.
Read's (T. B.). Reginald Craden, cr. 8vo. 5s. cl.
St. Aubyn's (A.). In the Face of the World, 3 vols. cr. 8vo. 21s. cl.
Savage's (H. H.). The Anarchist, cr. 8vo. 2s. 6d. cl.
Weyman's (S.). Under the Red Rose, 2 vols. cr. 8vo. 21s. cl.
Wilkinson's (G.). The Great Alternative, a Plan for a National Policy, 8vo. 7s. 6d. cl.
Youl's (S.). His Wife by Force, cr. 8vo. 3s. 6d. cl.

FOREIGN.

THEOLOGY.

- Belshelm (J.). Codex Veroleensis: Quatuor Evangelia ante Hieronymum Latine translata, 8m. 70.

FINE ART.

- Chamberlayne (T. J.). Lacrimæ Nicotianenses, Vol. 1, 22fr.
Rivoli (Duc de). Les Miroirs vénitiens, Part 1, 30fr.

BIBLIOGRAPHY.

- Papalopoulos-Keramous (A.). Hierosolymitica Bibliotheca, Vol. 2, Parts 1 and 2, 30m.

PHYSIOLOGY.

- Binet (A.). Introduction à la Psychologie, 2fr. 50.
Brunschwig (E.). Spinoza, 8fr. 75.
Goffmann (A.). Le Sentiment et la Pensée, 8fr.
Pillon (F.). L'Année philosophique, 8fr.

HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY.

- Cogordan (G.). Joseph de Maistre, 3fr.
Faire (J.). Jeanne d'Arc Libératrice de France, 3fr. 50.
Faire (J.). Le Mois de Jeanne d'Arc, 3fr. 50.
Gorce (F. de la). Histoire du second Empire, Vols. 1 and 2, 16fr.
Martine (P.). Histoire du Monde oriental dans l'Antiquité, 3fr. 50.
Mémoires de Constant, premier Valet de l'Empereur, Vol. 2, 3fr. 50.
Souvenirs de Guerre du Baron Sévraz, 3fr. 50.
Spuller (E.). Figures disparues, 3fr. 50.

GEOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL.

- Jacollot (L.). Voyage au Pays des Jungles, 4fr.
Verchur (G.). Voyage aux trois Guyanes et aux Antilles, 4fr.

PHYSIOLOGY.

- Topolovsek (J.). Die bacteriologische Sprechhebel, Vol. 1, 8m.

SCIENCE.

- Behring: Die Bekämpfung der Infektionskrankheiten, 12m.
Schaumann (O.). Zur Kenntnis der Echinococcus-Anämie, 8m.
Sommer (H.). Diagnostik der Geisteskrankheiten, 8m.

GENERAL LITERATURE.

- Bataille (A.). Causes criminelles et mondaines, 3fr. 50.
Benot (C.). La Politique, 4fr.
Ohnet (O.). Le Droit de l'Enfant, 3fr. 50.
Xanrof: L'Amour et la Vie, 3fr. 50.

LADY GRANVILLE'S LETTERS.

I SHALL be glad if you will allow me, as one of the very few now living who really know anything about the person so mysteriously alluded to in one of the Countess Granville's recently published letters (vol. i. p. 98), to correct the gross and unwarrantable misrepresentations concerning her, which have given no little pain to her surviving relatives. After a somewhat ill-natured sneer at Madame de Staël's evident affection for this "granadier in petticoats," as the Countess so elegantly calls her, she goes on to inform her correspondent that "she was the daughter of a clergyman," &c. Now, in the first place, this cherished companion of Madame de Staël was not the daughter of a clergyman; and as to the rest of the story, it is quite true that her name had been in some way mixed up with certain events which had taken place many years before, indicative of the romantic spirit of a warm-hearted girl, little more than twenty years of age, who sacrificed herself on the altar of friendship in order to save a person most unworthy of her chivalrous heroism—in short, that she was the dupe and victim and voluntary scapegoat for the sin of an artful and designing woman.

I have said enough, I think, to convince any candid reader that the statements thus ignorantly and recklessly made by Lady Granville—however excusable in a private letter, doubtless intended for no eyes but those of the sister to whom it was written—ought never to have been printed. Again, personal appearance may be thought a matter hardly worth notice; but even here Lady Granville seems to show but little regard for facts; she tells of "an immense fierce-looking girl, with a head of straight black hair," &c. Unfortunately for Lady Granville's story, there is something much stronger than mere probability to condemn it, for there is a portrait yet in existence, painted on ivory by one of the most eminent miniature painters of the day—Miss Charlotte Jones—in which Miss — is represented with blue eyes, light brown hair, and a very sweet expression of countenance, as far as possible removed from "fierce-looking."

Further, as to her intimacy with Madame de Staël: something of this may be gathered from more than one of the many books which bear upon the history of her life (Sismondi, Stevens, &c.); but the origin of it is known to few, and certainly has never been made public. The acquaintance was first made at the house of a banker in Geneva (a friend of Necker, the famous financier), who had married one of her sisters. This acquaintance with Necker's illustrious daughter soon ripened into an attachment which was yet more firmly cemented when, at great personal risk, this young lady rendered invaluable assistance to her distinguished friend by aiding her to escape from Coppet when the agents of Bonaparte were known to be on their way thither to make her a prisoner. The story of her devotion to Madame de Staël in her last days is well known, who on her deathbed confided her infant son by M. de Rocca to the care of her friend, who faithfully fulfilled the trust, and acted towards him as a mother, and was beloved by him as such, while from that time she resided entirely with the De Broglie family till 1834, when she died in Paris, at the house of the Duc, who had married Madame de Staël's only daughter. Miss —'s piety, her devotion to the sick and poor, especially during the period of the cholera, were well known, winning for her the love and esteem of a large circle of friends, including royalty; for the King Louis Philippe, on the occasion of her brother (an English officer) being presented at Court, singled him out in order to express to him his regret at "the loss of one of the best friends he ever had."

By desire of the family, she was buried in their own vault at Broglie. VERAX.

THE BOOKSELLERS' TRADE DINNER.

I AM not concerned in defending Mr. Joseph Shaylor from the protests made against his letter by correspondents whose communications appeared in your issue of the 28th ult. Mr. Shaylor is quite competent to defend himself. But I do feel called upon to protest against the charges brought against the Booksellers' Provident Institution and its management, for the good and sufficient reasons that I have been for about thirty years a member, and for more than one-third of that time a director of the Institution.

Your correspondent Mr. Edward North makes the grave charge against the B.P.I. that it cannot be considered as representative of more than a small proportion of the trade. This is not the fault of the Institution, but rather of those who, to my certain knowledge, have for long years vilified and vituperated it and its management. Mr. North wishes the Institution to be conducted on what he terms business principles, which, I suppose, means that each member is to get something out of the funds of the concern in proportion to what he puts in. On the other hand, it seems to me that the principle on which the Institution is conducted is the right one. I have had for years the privilege of seeing the vast amount of good that has unostentatiously been effected by the members of its Relief Committee, with the cordial sanction of the whole body of directors. I have had the great pleasure and happiness of witnessing the ungrudging liberality of the directors to all deserving objects of relief in so far as the funds at their disposal will permit. If Mr. North will be good enough to take my word for it, he will no longer be in doubt that, should he become a member, he may rely with confidence on the Institution to relieve him to the utmost of its ability if misfortune unhappily overtake him. I can with confidence affirm that few institutions of the kind have conferred more substantial benefits on their members in times of trouble (at so little outlay on their part or in the expenses of its administration) than has the Booksellers' Provident Institution.

If Mr. North were a member of the Institution he would know that the whole question of putting money into the Institution and knowing exactly what everybody was going to get out of it was threshed out years ago.

With regard to the London Booksellers' Society and its meeting, the report of the proceedings certainly seemed to show a desire to coerce the publishers, and to extort from them more discount. To the principle of putting a stop to the giving away of discounts to the public no sane member of the trade can object; but, with an experience of the trade of forty years, I venture to doubt if Mr. Truslove's belief be well founded. I was under the impression that discount bookselling, as it is termed, was commenced by two or three firms only, and that, the question having been arbitrated upon in favour of the discount booksellers, the rest of the trade were forced to give way. If this were so, how can the publishers suppose that the pledge of the bulk (not all) of the trade will now avail to stop underselling?

By all means let the retail trade individually and collectively pledge itself to stop underselling, and then let it approach the publishers with a view to joint action on the part of all publishers and booksellers to stop this evil, which threatens to ruin, morally as well as pecuniarily, the bookseller, to whom I venture to think the public owe so much.

J. LORRAINE HEELIS.

SOCKET v. SOT.

6, Gray's Inn Square, April 22, 1894.

IN a notice of Mrs. Gomme's 'Traditional Games of England,' &c., in the Athenæum of April 14th, I see an old familiar nursery rhyme quoted in a distressingly modern guise. In my nursery, more than sixty years ago, our version was:—

Who comes here?—
A grenadier.—
What do you want?—A pot of beer.—
Where's your money?—I've forgot it.—
Get along, you drunken socket.

The rhyme, or assonance rather, of the concluding couplet proves, I think, that we had the true text; but some modern editor, I suppose, didn't know the word "socket," so he altered it to "sot," and then, of course, had to change the preceding line. Stubbs, in his 'Anatomic of Abuses,' 1583, did know the word, and he tells us, in his chapter "Of Musick in Ailgna," &c., of "suche drunken sockets and bawdy parasites as range the Countreys, ryming and singing of vncleane, corrupt, and filthie songs in Tauerne, Ale-houses, Innes," &c.

P. A. DANIEL.

* * Mr. Daniel's version is, perhaps, the more ancient form (it is a pity he does not say in what part of the country he heard it); but it does not follow that the version we gave was the work of "some modern editor, who did not know the word 'socket,' so he altered it to 'sot'"; for, to our knowledge, it was in use in Durham and Yorkshire fifty-seven years ago, and at that time "modern editors" did not concern themselves much about such things, and folk-lore rhymes were left to take care of themselves. By the way, Mr. Daniel's "drunken socket" comes curiously near a North-Country term of good-humoured contempt, "Get along, you drunken little candlestick!"

'ENGLISH BARDS AND SCOTCH REVIEWERS.'

THE bibliography of this satire wants looking after. The following note in a recent second-hand catalogue caused me to examine my copy of the "third edition":—

"English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, a Satire by Lord Byron, 8vo, half calf neat, portrait inserted, third edition, scarce. James Cawthorn, 1810. "This is a third edition to an ordinary observer; the title-page is certainly dated 1810, but the water-marks in the paper are dated 1818, showing that the book was printed eight years before the paper was made?"

My copy answers to this description, except as regards the water-mark, which is dated two years earlier, "Allnutt, 1816." The printer is "T. Collins, Harvey's Buildings, Strand, London."

The story of 'English Bards' as told in Moore's 'Life of Byron' shows that before Byron returned to England in the summer of 1811 a fourth edition had been published; that Byron prepared a fifth edition, which, at the instance of Rogers, he suppressed; and that in September, 1814, Byron, hearing from Cawthorn that 'English Bards' was being published in Ireland, requested Murray to endeavour to stop this piracy. In a letter to Murray dated "Ravenna, 16th Feb., 1821," Byron writes:—

"In the Letter on Bowles.....after the words 'attempts had been made' (alluding to the republication of 'English Bards') add the words, 'in Ireland'; for I believe that English pirates did not begin their attempts till after I had left England the second time [April, 1816]."

* One copy escaped destruction, and from it the text in Murray's collective editions of Byron's works is printed. The editor seems to have been unaware of the existence of two "fourth" editions, or of the spurious "third." See one-volume edition, 1837, p. 120, note.

In the letter to Murray ('On Bowles's Strictures') Byron says it is "no fault of mine that it ['English Bards'] has ever been republished. When I left England in April, 1816.....almost my last act, I believe, was to sign a power of attorney to yourself to prevent or suppress any attempts (of which several had been made in Ireland) at a republication."

Byron had forgotten that such attempts were not confined to Ireland, for within a month of his departure Murray had occasion to seek an injunction against Cawthorn! At Sotheby's on May 1st (or 2nd), 1888, there was sold (lot 243) a letter written by Sharon Turner (Murray's solicitor), dated May 10th, 1816, and addressed to Messrs. Arch & Co. (the booksellers of Cornhill), giving them notice that, in the case of Lord Byron v. Cawthorn, the Court of Chancery had on that morning "granted an Injunction to restrain the printing or publishing of Lord Byron's Poem entitled 'English Bards and Scotch Reviewers,' a Satire, or any part thereof." Cawthorn was probably seeking his revenge on Byron for having passed him by in the publication of 'Childe Harold.' He was baffled at the time, but he it may have been who reprinted surreptitiously the copies of the "third edition" under notice. The use of paper with the tell-tale water-marks of 1816 and 1818 may have been either well-calculated recklessness or mere inadvertence. I have no copy of the genuine "third edition," and my spurious one seems to be identical with the "fourth" as published by Cawthorn in 1810—the advertisement of his circulating library in both being dated "March 30, 1810."

I particularize the "fourth" as published by Cawthorn in 1810, because I possess another "fourth edition" which differs materially from it. It is printed, not by Collins, but by "Cox, Son, & Baylis, Gt. Queen Street, London," for "James Cawthorn, British Library, 24, Cockspur Street; and Sharpe and Hailes, Piccadilly," is dated 1811, and contains not, as in the third and fourth editions of 1810, 1,050 lines, but 1,052. I have not gone over the two versions line by line, but the passage following line 740 seems to account for the extra couplet. In the "fourth" edition of 1810 the text runs thus:—

Though Bell has lost his nightingales and owls, (41)
Matilda snivels still, and Haffz howls,
And Crues's spirit, rising from the dead,
Revives in Laura, Quix, and X.Y.Z.

In the "fourth" of 1811 these four lines have been altered and expanded into six (they remained so in the suppressed "fifth"):

Though Crues's birds no more our journals fill, (41)
Some stragglers skimish round their columns still;
Last of the howling host which once was Bell's,
Matilda snivels yet, and Haffz yells;
And Merry's metaphors appear anew
Chain'd to the signature of O.P.Q.

I know of no reason for doubting the genuineness of either version of the "fourth edition." That of 1810 was a reprint of the third, which was itself a mere reprint of the second, both having been issued during Byron's absence from England. With regard to the "fourth" of 1811, I can only conjecture that, on his return in the summer of that year, Byron thought proper to have fresh copies struck off with the slight alteration noted above, thinking it not worth while to call the reissue a "fifth edition." I do not know why "Sharpe and Hailes's" name was added to the title-page.

Francis Hodgson contributed a passage to the first edition, but I think it was either omitted or rewritten by Byron when he prepared the second. Hodgson published in the same year (1809) a volume of verses—'Lady Jane Grey, and Miscellaneous Poems in English and Latin'—which contained a little attack of his own on the Edinburgh Review for its treatment of his noble friend. It is entitled 'A Gentle Alternative for Reviewers,' and a stanza will show how needful it was for Byron to take care of himself. The force of feebleness could hardly further go:—

Dare ye then lash our Southern Schools and toast
The brighter judgment of your red-hair'd host,
Dare ye decry the lure ye never knew,
And spurn the Fountain unapproach'd by you?

How many copies of the suppressed fifth edition of the 'English Bards' are known to exist? Moore speaks of working from the single copy which escaped destruction. Was it the same that was used by an anonymous correspondent of the Athenæum (September 10th, 1831) who "had the good fortune to obtain a copy at the time," from which he proceeds to give a list of all Byron's alterations? This, of course, was some years before Moore published the text in which he incorporated the alterations. J. D. C.

SALES.

THE sale of the Buckley library concluded last Saturday at the rooms of Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge. The following are the more important prices realized:—Early English Text Society, Nos. 1 to 97, and 1 to 59 of the Extra Series, 32*l.* Dürer, Figure Passionis D. Jesu Nostri, 16*l.* Poems and Memorials of Richard Gough, in two volumes, 20*l.* Hros-vite Opera, 1501, 17*l.* 10*s.* Heures à l'usage de Paris, N. Vostre (1525), 17*l.* Notes and Queries, Series I. to VII. and Indexes, 25*l.* 10*s.* Musée Français et Musée Royal, 6 vols., 18*l.* 10*s.* Oxford Almanacks, 23*l.* The Gospels of the Four Evangelists, translated in the Olde Saxons tyne out of Latin into the Vulgare Toung of the Saxons, 1571, 14*l.* 8*s.* Dr. Grosart's Occasional Issues, 10*l.* 6*s.* The Huth Library, 29 vols., 15*l.* Declaration as to the Titles of Prince Charles to the Duchy of Cornwall, 1613, 14*l.* Dugdale, Monasticon Anglicanum, 8 vols., 1817, 18*l.* 6*s.* The Roxburghe Club Publications, 1814 to 1890, 401*l.* 16*s.* Shakespeare, second folio (1632), imperfect, 14*l.* 15*s.* Sir H. Spelman, three volumes of copies and original letters from and addressed to Sir H. Spelman, 1600-1642, 41*l.* Sterne, Sentimental Journey, first edition, on large paper, 1768, 17*l.* 6*s.* Surtees Society Publications, Vols. 1 to 88, 29*l.* Solitude Regia, a Musée Westmonasteriensibus adumbrata anno 1732, a manuscript bound in morocco covered with gold tooling, with the Westminster School arms in the centre, 24*l.* 10*s.* Wilkins, Concilia Magnæ Britannicæ et Hiberniæ, 18*l.* 15*s.* Walton's Lives, first edition, 1670, 10*l.* 10*s.* Wood, Athens Oxoniensis, 5 vols., 1813-20, 13*l.*

At the dispersal of the library of the late Mr. Robertson Gladstone, by Messrs. Branch & Leete, of Liverpool, last week, extra-illustrated copies of The Chase, The Turf, and The Road, by Nimrod, fetched together 55*l.*; Mr. H. Scott's Racing went for 14*l.*; Jardine's Naturalist's Library for 13*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*; and Gould's ornithological and other works brought 700*l.*

Literary Gossip.

THE Historical Manuscripts Commissioners will issue as an appendix to their fourteenth report some accounts of collections in Scotland, which have been drawn up by Sir William Fraser, late Deputy Keeper of the Records in Scotland. They will include those of the Duke of Roxburghe, the Earl of Strathmore, and the Countess of Seafield. The last-named collection consists chiefly of the correspondence of Lord Chancellor Seafield, temp. Anne. The Marchmont papers belonging to Sir H. Hume Campbell will also be reported upon; these are still at Marchmont, Berwickshire, and are quite distinct from the documents edited in 1831 by Sir G. H. Rose, which had been removed from Marchmont to Hemel Hempstead before the end of the last century.

THE Bishop of Manchester has put together, under the general title 'Church

Work: its Means and Methods,' a series of addresses delivered in the course of his recent visitation of his diocese. The addresses deal practically with all the subjects, whether ecclesiastical or social, which affect the relations of the Church to the people. One of the longest addresses is devoted to the vexed question of 'A Living Wage.' Messrs. Macmillan & Co. are to publish the volume in the course of the present month.

DR. J. T. GILBERT, of Dublin, has completed for the Historical Manuscripts Commission the second and concluding volume of his selections from the correspondence of the first Earl of Charlemont. This portion covers the years 1784 to 1799; the literary interest of it will, it is expected, prove quite as great as the historical, for among Charlemont's correspondents were Malone, Richard Lovell Edgeworth, Horace Walpole, and Edmund Burke. A long letter from Robert Stewart, afterwards so well known as Lord Castlereagh, written from Spa in September, 1791, gives a striking picture of the state of France at that time.

MESSRS. CHAPMAN & HALL will publish in a few days a work by Mr. W. S. Lilly on 'The Claims of Christianity.' The author deals with his subject from what may be called a publicist's point of view. The book consists of seven chapters, entitled respectively, "Christianity and the World," "Christianity and Buddhism," "Christianity and Islam," "Christianity and Christendom," "Christianity and the Renaissance," "Christianity and the Reformation," and "Christianity and the New Age."

THE 'Life of Sir Bartle Frere,' which Mr. Murray has announced for publication, will not, a correspondent says, at the earliest be ready before September. The family of the late Sir Bartle have taken a very active part in the preparation of his biography.

A CORRESPONDENT WRITES:—

"The connexion of Defoe in his earlier days with the brickmaking industry has been asserted by more than one of his biographers, though little has come to light about it. It may therefore be worth while to record that in the course of a recent examination of the accounts relating to the building of Greenwich Hospital an entry, under date March 6th, 1696(-7), was found, of payment of 20*l.* to 'Daniel Foe, brickmaker.' That the 'bricks are,' presumably, 'alive to this day to testify' to this episode in the career of the author of 'Robinson Crusoe' is surely a fact not without interest."

We published (Athen. No. 3207) a note by Mr. Aitken on Defoe's brick-kilns at Tilbury.

AMONG the deaths we have to record are those of Mr. Andreas Edward Cokayne, a well-known Derbyshire antiquary and publisher; and of the Public Librarian of Sheffield, Mr. T. Hurst, who died on April 21st. Mr. Hurst held office for twenty-one years, before which time he had been an assistant for about seventeen years.

DR. MARSHALL, Rouge Croix, is printing a very limited number of copies of the Register of Worksop, Notts.

THE Rev. J. K. Hewison is engaged on a second volume of 'The Isle of Bute in the Olden Time,' and has lately visited Brittany to trace the history of the royal Stewarts there. Whether the Stewarts sprang from Banquo or not, his researches go to prove that their FitzAlan ancestry had a settlement in Brittany and probably also in Normandy, and came to England in the eleventh century. These investigations will throw light on a subject which has received little attention, and should prove romantic and interesting both to the historical and to the general reader.

DR. ALDIS WRIGHT writes:—

"In the Athenæum of last week there is an announcement that Prof. Bevan is a candidate for the Adams' Professorship of Arabic. I have the best authority for stating that this announcement is at least premature, and that Prof. Bevan is not at present a candidate."

M. PAUL MEYER hopes to bring out about a month hence the second part of the 'Histoire de Guillaume le Maréchal,' which scholars have for some time been impatiently awaiting. This volume will prove of even greater interest than its predecessor, being a contemporary narrative, and will constitute a distinct addition to the sources of English history. M. Meyer will be able, by the evidence of records, to establish its chronological accuracy and fidelity. The author of the poem displays, we learn, much ingenuity in his politics; he avoids anything that might savour of rebellion in the doings of the Marshal's family; and, save for one guarded allusion, he abstains from any reference to the evils of John's reign. The third volume of M. Meyer's work will contain not only the notes and glossary, but an abridged translation of the whole poem.

AT Colne, in Lancashire, the Free Libraries Act has been adopted by the small majority of three votes. Last week a free library, which had cost nearly 5,000*l.*, was opened at Kidderminster.

THE new volume of Mr. Elliot Stock's "Popular County Histories" will be 'Westmoreland,' by Chancellor Ferguson, who wrote 'The History of Cumberland' in the same series. The volume is said to contain fresh material and some unpublished information relating to the Roman occupation.

THE intention of 'The Protected Princes of India,' by Mr. William Lee-Warner, which Messrs. Macmillan & Co. will publish, is "to bring together in one view, from sources of information which, if they are somewhat concealed, are yet accessible to the public, a short account of India under home rule." It will be a surprise to many readers to learn that, if the Burmese states are included, the number of "protected princes" does not fall far short of seven hundred.

OUR Correspondent writes from Athens:

"The first instalment has appeared of the long-expected memoirs of the veteran man of letters Alexander Rhangabé, who died two years ago. The volume extends from the birth of the author in 1809 to the arrival of King Otho at Nauplia in 1833. Reminiscences of private life and public events are mixed together in a highly readable book."

THE Spanish Government has purchased for the Academy of History the Arabic manuscripts and books belonging to the veteran scholar Don P. de Gayangos. The MSS. number about four hundred, and many of them are rare and curious.

MISS AUGUSTA THEODORA DRANE, who died on Sunday in the Dominican Convent at Stone, was the writer of a 'Life of St. Catharine of Siena,' which is the most exhaustive that has appeared; and her 'Christian Schools and Scholars' had a large number of readers outside the bounds of her own communion. Among her minor works were a 'Life of St. Dominic' and 'Songs in the Night.' Miss Drane—whose name in religion was Mother Francis Raphael—was also the anonymous editor of 'The Autobiography of Archbishop Ullathorne.'

MR. FRANK B. SANBORN, of Concord, Massachusetts, is preparing a much enlarged edition of Thoreau's letters, which will be published in Boston, U.S., in the summer, under the title 'Familiar Letters of Henry Thoreau.'

We greatly regret to record the death of Mr. McCullagh Torrens at the age of eighty. Just a fortnight ago he was present at the dinner of the Correctors of the Press, and was then in excellent health and spirits; but on the following Tuesday he was knocked down by a hansom cab, and died in a couple of days. Besides being for many years actively engaged in politics, he found time to publish many volumes. His earliest work of importance was his 'Industrial History of Free Nations,' which appeared in 1840. He wrote biographies of Shiel, Sir James Graham, Lord Melbourne, and the Marquess Wellesley; and at the time of his lamented decease he was engaged on a history of Cabinet Government in England, of which two volumes were finished. He was at one time proprietor of the Examiner, and a few years ago he contributed occasional reviews to this journal. A kindly, warm-hearted man, a shrewd observer, an excellent talker, and possessed of great knowledge of English politics, he will be much missed by his friends.

MR. CLAUDIUS JOHN LABIB, a professor in the Coptic clerical college at Cairo, has just published the first part of a Coptic grammar written in Arabic, a sign that the Copts have at length taken steps to help their children to learn their mother tongue.

We have to chronicle the decease of Mr. Ffoulkes, author of 'The Church's Creed or the Crown's Creed,' and many other theological works.

The publisher of the narrative of the Cornish smuggler H. Carter, which we mentioned last week, is to be Mr. Pollard of Truro, not Mr. Pollard of Exeter.

THE Parliamentary Papers this week include a Return showing with regard to each Parliamentary Constituency the Number of Electors on the Register now in force (2d.); and Labour Commission, Report on Russia (8d.).

SCIENCE

MEDICAL BOOKS.

Lectures and Essays on Fevers and Diphtheria, 1849 to 1879. By Sir William Jenner, Bart. (Rivington, Percival & Co.)—This collection of the most important works of one of the most original physicians of this century will be welcome to every reading member of the medical profession. The original editions of the works reprinted are rarely to be obtained, and the examples which now and then appear in second-hand bookshops and those in public libraries are generally so much soiled by use that every one will be glad to obtain a clean, well-printed copy of treatises which all studious medical men value for their practical use. They have the further merit of being models of clinical investigation and of careful deduction from well-ascertained series of observations. Louis in France had raised the question whether there were not two distinct species of fever in what was known in his time as continued fever, and Alexander Stewart in Great Britain about 1843 had endeavoured, with some success, to show that two altogether distinct maladies, typhus fever and typhoid fever, were included in the common term "continued fever." Two-thirds of the present volume are occupied by the exhaustive treatise in which Jenner established, on indisputable clinical and anatomical premises, the conclusion that these two fevers were altogether distinct, and so thoroughly described all the peculiarities of each that no one has ever since thrown the least doubt on the point. We now think of typhus and typhoid as diseases as distinct as scarlet fever and measles, and the name "typhoid" is the relic of the time when the old view of continued fever was shaken, but not quite overthrown. Jenner's observations first appeared in the Edinburgh Monthly Journal of the Medical Sciences for 1849-50, and were republished in book form in 1850. Dr. Theodore Gulston, a learned physician in the reign of Charles I., founded a lecture at the College of Physicians which is usually delivered in each year by the most distinguished in medicine of the fellows elected in that year, and Jenner in 1853 delivered this lecture in three parts on acute specific diseases. It forms the second section of his present book. The third consists of lectures on diphtheria, originally published in 1861, a time when that fatal malady had reappeared and was slowly spreading in England. In these lectures the firmness with which their author declines to move one inch from the results of his own exact observations is remarkable, and it is this resolute adherence to a rigid scientific method and determination to arrive at conclusions only from what has been actually observed that have been the chief characteristics of the greatest physicians in all ages and countries. In a science and art which offer so many temptations to looseness of thought and argument, few writers have attained this merit, and hence many medical books are ephemeral. Those books, however, in which this method is maintained are all of permanent value, and are read in every generation, and in this class this volume must be placed. Its contents entitle Jenner to a place in the group which includes Sydenham, Laennec, and Heberden.

Healthy Hospitals: Observations on some Points connected with Hospital Construction. By Sir Douglas Galton. (Frowde.)—This book is mainly a compilation from two large treatises which have appeared in the last few years, both of which have been fully noticed in the Athenæum—the work of Mr. H. C. Burdett and that of Dr. Mouat and Mr. Saxon Snell; and it must be added that the work of compilation has been performed with no great care. The first chapter is a singularly inaccurate introduction to the history of hospitals, containing errors on easily ascertainable dates and facts. The second chapter deals with the definition of a hospital, and is merely an imperfect abstract of Mr. Burdett's remarks on the same subject. The third chapter discusses the factors of a healthy site for a hospital, while the fourth deals with the elementary chemistry of the air. Three chapters on ventilation follow, then three on warming and one on lighting; and in all elementary facts of physics are curiously mixed with accounts of structure, and details of the work of particular constructors. After a summary on the subjects of warming and lighting, five chapters on the arrangements of wards and of administrative buildings follow; and three more on hospitals for special purposes conclude the book. The author has had a good deal of experience in relation to construction and drainage, but he scarcely ever states his own observations or his original conclusions. He often quotes passages from the writings of Miss Florence Nightingale, and has evidently read her books carefully, but himself shows none of the firm grasp of principles which characterizes them, and which gives them a permanent value. In the preface Sir Douglas Galton describes his book as a collection of notes. The notes scarcely suffice to give continuity to the extracts and abstracts which make up its chief bulk.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES.

THE brightness of Gale's comet (b, 1894) is now diminishing, though it is still five times as great as at the time of discovery. To-night it crosses the equator, a few degrees to the south of the fourth-magnitude star ϵ Hydre; and early next week it will pass into the eastern part of the constellation Cancer, continuing to move in a north-easterly direction.

The volume of the Comnaissance des Temps for 1896 has recently been published. It is the 218th issue of a work which has suffered no interruption since the publication of the first volume in 1679. The only alteration made in the data on the present occasion is the addition of a table of the heliocentric co-ordinates of the planets, referred to the mean ecliptic and equinox for 1900, which is intended to facilitate the calculation of the ephemerides of small planets and comets.

The Report of the Superintendent of the Natal Observatory (Mr. Nevill) shows a continuation of good work with the slender means available. It is both astronomical and meteorological. The reduction of the observations of Mars made during the opposition in 1892 has thrown much extra work upon the observatory. The planet will be again observed for the determination of solar parallax at the opposition in the present year, when the observatory will be far better equipped for the purpose than it was on the last occasion.

We have received the number of the Memorie della Società degli Spettroscopisti Italiani for March. It contains Prof. Mascari's account of the solar protuberances observed at Catania during the year 1893, and a note by the editor, Prof. Tacchini, on the heliographical latitudes of the solar phenomena seen at Rome in the third quarter of the same year.

SOCIETIES.

ROYAL.—April 26.—Right Hon. Lord Kelvin, President, in the chair.—Prof. Baillon, Prof. Poincaré, and Prof. Suess were elected Foreign Members.—The following papers were read: 'On the Specific Heats of Gases at Constant Volume,' Part II.: Carbon Dioxide; Part III.: The Specific Heat of Carbon Dioxide as a Function of Temperature,' by Mr. J. Joly; 'A Contribution to the Study of the Yellow Colouring Matter of the Urine,' by Dr. A. E. Garrod; 'Some Points in the Histology of the Nervous System of the Embryonic Lobster,' by Mr. E. J. Allen; 'The Refractive Character of the Eyes of Horses,' by Veterinary-Capt. F. Smith; 'Correction of an Error of Observation in Part XIX. of the Author's Memoirs on the Organisation of the Fossil Plants of the Coal Measures,' by Mr. W. C. Williamson; 'Report on some of the Changes produced in Liver Cells by the Action of some Organic and Inorganic Compounds,' by Drs. Brunton and Delaplace; and 'Note on the Production of Sounds by the Air-bladder of certain Silurid Fishes,' by Prof. Bridge and Prof. Haddon.

GEOLOGICAL.—April 25.—Dr. H. Woodward, President, in the chair.—Messrs. J. O. Burrow and C. Davison were elected Fellows.—The following communications were read: 'Further Notes on some Sections on the New Railway from Romford to Upminster, and on the Relations of the Thames Valley Beds to the Boulder Clay,' by Mr. T. V. Holmes; 'On the Geology of the Pleistocene Deposits in the Valley of the Thames at Twickenham, with Contributions to the Flora and Fauna of the Period,' by Dr. J. R. Leeson and Mr. G. B. Laffan; and 'On a New Goniatite from the Lower Coal Measures,' by Mr. H. Bolton, communicated by Mr. G. C. Orlik.

LINNEAN.—April 19.—Prof. Stewart, President, in the chair.—Sir J. Hooker exhibited a portrait of Jeremiah Bentham, father of Jeremy and Sir Samuel Bentham, b. 1710, d. 1792.—Dr. Prior exhibited specimens of Pinus pinaster with undeveloped catkins, like berries, and other specimens of conifers in flower.—Mr. J. R. Jackson exhibited an Afghan knife, the sheath of which was bound with bark of Carragana decoratiana, selected on account of its bronze-like appearance, and gave some account of the various native uses to which this bark is put.—On behalf of Mr. G. Mayor and Mr. F. R. Maw some photographs of abnormally situated nests of the robin were exhibited, one of which had been built upon a bookshelf in one of the studies at Tunbridge School, and another in an old tin teapot which had been hung aside as useless and had lodged in a poplar.—Mr. B. Shillito exhibited and made remarks upon an abnormal hyacinth.—An account of British trap-door spiders was then given by Mr. F. Enock, and by the aid of the oxy-hydrogen lantern and some excellent slides their appearance and mode of life were graphically delineated and described.—In view of the approaching anniversary meeting, the election of auditors was next proceeded with, when Mr. Batters and Prof. Howes were nominated on behalf of the Council, and Mr. Michael and Mr. J. Groves on behalf of the Fellows.—In the absence of the author, Mr. G. Murray gave an account of Graf zu Solms Laubach's monograph on the Acetabulariæ, and the principal points were illustrated with lantern slides. The limits of the group were defined as excluding Dasycladæ, and containing the living genera Acetabularia, Polyphyma, Halicoryne, and Pleiophyes, of which the author maintained only the first and third named. The extinct forms, principally Acicularæ, were dealt with very exhaustively, and their relation to the living ones indicated. The paper consisted of a morphological account of all the forms as well as a detailed systematic review of them, and the author's views of the relationship of the group to the forms of Dasycladæ, Cymopolia, Neomeria, Bornetella, &c., possessed much novelty and interest.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—May 1.—Mr. A. Giles, President, in the chair.—The paper read was 'On the Manufacture of Briquette Fuel,' by Mr. W. Colquhoun.—It was announced that the Council had recently transferred three gentlemen to the class of Member, and had admitted twenty-one Students. The monthly ballot resulted in the election of three Members and of thirty-eight Associate Members.

ROYAL INSTITUTION.—May 1.—Annual Meeting.—Sir J. Crichton-Browne, Treas. and V.P., in the chair.—The Annual Report of the Committee of Visitors for the year 1893 was read and adopted. The real and funded property now amounts to above 102,000*l.*, entirely derived from the contributions and donations of the Members and of others appreciating the value of the work of the Institution.—The following gentlemen were elected as officers for the ensuing year: President, The Duke of Northumberland; Treasurer, Sir J. Crichton-Browne; Secretary, Sir F. Bramwell; Managers, Sir F. Abel, Capt. W. de W. Abney, Right Hon. Lord Belhaven and Stenton, J. Birkett, E. Frankland, Sir D. Galton, R. Hannah, W. Huggins, A. B. Kempe, G. Matthey, L. Mond, H. Müller, Sir A. Noble, W. S. Playfair, and B. W. Smith; Visitors, C. E. Beever, F. W. Braine, A. Carpmæl, J. G. Gordon, Carl Haag, D. W. C. Hood, J. Inray, R. Meldola, H. Leonard, L. M. Ratz, B. Redwood, Sir O. Roberts, J. B. Sedgwick, F. M. White, and W. H. White.

SOCIETY OF ARTS.—April 30.—Mr. F. Cobb in the chair.—Mr. H. C. Jenkins delivered the first of a course of two Cantor Lectures 'On Typewriting Machines,' devoting the lecture to an historical summary and description of the early forms of machines, which were illustrated by lantern slides. May 2.—Prof. C. Le Neve Foster in the chair.—A paper 'On Nickel' was read by Mr. A. G. Charleston, and was followed by a discussion.

SOCIETY OF BIBLICAL ARCHÆOLOGY.—May 1.—Mr. P. le P. Renouf, President, in the chair.—A paper was read by Mr. P. le P. Renouf 'On Greek and other Legends of the Deluge.'

PHYSICAL.—April 27.—Prof. A. W. Rücker, President, in the chair.—A paper 'On the Mechanism of Electrical Conduction: Part I. Conduction in Metals,' was read by Mr. C. V. Burton.—A communication 'On the Design and Winding of Alternate-Current Electro-magnets,' by Messrs. S. P. Thompson and M. Walker, was read by the former.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

- Mon. Victoria Institute, 4.—'Chinese Philosophy,' Surgeon-General Gordon.
Tue. Royal Institution, 5.—General Monthly.
 Engineers, 7.—'A Deep Posing near Vindicta, Austria, by the Canadian System,' Mr. R. N. Boyd.
 Institute of British Architects, 8.—Annual General Meeting.
 Society of Arts, 8.—'Typewriting Machines,' Lecture II., Mr. H. C. Jenkins (Cantor Lecture).
 Geographical, 9.—'The Himalayan Mountains and Upper Himalayas,' Lieut. Col. H. A. Sayer.
Wed. Horticultural, 1.—Orchids.
 Royal Institution, 3.—'Rabies, their Nature, Origin, and Morphology,' Prof. J. W. Judd.
 Colonial Institute, 4.
 Society of Arts, 5.—'Foster,' Mr. J. S. Gardner.
 Society of Architects, 8.—'Prose-masonry in Architecture,' Dr. D. P. Manning.
 Civil Engineers, 8.—'Further Discussion on "The Manufacture of Briquette Fuel,"' Mr. W. Colquhoun.
 Society of Arts, 8.—'Telegraphs and Trade Routes in Persia,' Col. Wells.
 Geological, 8.—'Carrack Fell: a Study in the Variation of Igneous Rock-masses. Part I. The Gabbro,' Mr. A. Harker.
 Theology of Mount Zion, 8.—'Messrs. A. M. Davies and J. W. Gregory: A Synoptic Outline on the Correlation of High-Grade in North Wales,' Mr. J. W. Gregory.
 Huggins, 9.—Annual General Meeting, President's Address.
Thurs. Royal Institution, 8.—'The Solid and Liquid States of Matter,' Prof. Dewar.
 Mathematical, 8.—'On the Kinematical Discrimination of the Euclidean and Non-Euclidean Geometries,' Mr. A. E. H. Love.
 'Stability of a Tube under External Pressure,' Prof. Greenhill.
 Electrical Engineers, 8.—Continued Discussion on 'The Cost of Electrical Energy.'
 Antiquaries, 8.
Fri. United Service Institution, 2.—'Recent French Operations in Western Africa,' Capt. G. P. Oliver.
 Physical, 5.—'Electro-magnetic Induction in Plane, Cylindrical, and Spherical Current Sheets,' Mr. G. H. Bryan, 'Dielectricity,' Mr. R. Appleyard.
 Architectural Association, 7½.—'Practical Remarks on the Working of Wrought Iron, with Examples,' Mr. R. Longden.
 Astronomical, 8.
 Royal Institution, 9.—'English Folk Song,' Rev. S. Baring-Gould.
 Royal Institution, 9.—'Colour Vision,' Capt. Abney. (Tyndall Lecture.)

Science Society.

THE vice-presidents of the Oxford meeting of the British Association will be the Earl of Jersey, Lord Wantage, the Earl of Rosebery, the Bishop of Oxford, Lord Rothschild, Lord Kelvin, the Vice-Chancellor, Sir W. R. Anson, Sir Bernard Samuelson, Sir H. Dyke Acland, the Master of Pembroke, and Prof. Sylvester. Prof. A. W. Rücker will preside over Section A, the vice-presidents being Mr. R. E. Baynes, Prof. R. B. Clifton, Prof. E. B. Elliott, and Mr. R. T. Glazebrook; Prof. H. B. Dixon over Section B, and the vice-presidents Prof. Meldola, Prof. Odling, and Prof. Emerson Reynolds; Mr. L. Fletcher over Section C, the vice-presidents being Prof. A. H. Green and Mr. J. J. H. Teall. Prof. Balfour will be president of Section D, the vice-presidents being Prof. Ray Lankester, Canon Tristram, and Prof. Vines. Section E will have for president Capt. Wharton, and for vice-presidents Mr. Mackinder and Mr. Seeborn. Prof. Bastable will preside over F; the vice-presidents are to be Prof. Edgeworth, Prof. Nicholson, and Mr. Price. G will have for president Prof. Kennedy, and for vice-presidents Prof. Vernon Harcourt and Mr. Jeremiah Head. The president of Section H will be Sir W. H. Flower, and the vice-presidents Prof. Max Müller, Dr. Munro, and Dr. E. B. Tylor. Section I will be presided over by Prof. Schäfer, and its vice-presidents will be Prof. McKendrick and Prof. Burdon Sanderson.

THE conversations of the Royal Society on Wednesday was a marked success.

FINE ARTS

Conversations of James Northcote, R.A. By William Hazlitt. Edited, with an Essay on Hazlitt as an Art-Critic, and a Note on Northcote, by Edmund Gosse. (Bentley & Son.)

In his last will and testament Northcote left a thousand pounds to defray the cost of a monument to himself, to be executed by Chantrey; but his most enduring memorial will assuredly be this little book, of which Mr. Gosse has produced an excellently well-edited reprint, the first which has appeared since 1830. Although it hardly justifies the title of 'Boswell Redivivus' ambitiously given to the chapters which first saw the light in the New Monthly Magazine, the 'Conversations' is certainly one of the brightest specimens in the not too well-filled department of English ana, and it is surprising that it should have lain neglected for more than sixty years. It has another claim to attention in these latter days. Hazlitt was the first "interviewer," and this reprint may prove to be of some service if used diligently as a text-book and model by the mob which now plies in left-handed fashion the vocation he initiated. It shows what may be made of the "interview" when the interlocutors are sufficiently well matched to permit of the operation being conducted on the principle of give and take. Under the new conditions, the ranks both of interviewers and interviewed might be thinned, but of that the world would probably make no complaint.

The compensating advantage of the neglect which had overtaken the 'Conversations' is that it comes to us practically as a new book. How much of Northcote, and how much of Hazlitt, went to its composition will never be known exactly, but in judging that "there may not be much" of the former element, Mr. Gosse may not improbably be under-estimating the painter's share. The many interesting reminiscences of Sir Joshua and of his set must be credited entirely to Northcote, and so must be all the depreciatory harangues about Hogarth and Fielding. Besides these certainties, we have the testimony of P. G. Patmore, who took an active part in several of the interviews, that Hazlitt reported the painter's speeches with almost verbal accuracy; and there is yet another witness, not cited by Mr. Gosse, who declares that he had seen some of the proof-sheets of the volume corrected by Northcote's hand. This witness made his statement in a letter to the editor of the Athenæum, which was printed in the number for May 4th, 1833. It is signed "Veritas," but may be conjecturally but plausibly assigned to Haydon. "I know," writes "Veritas,"

"that Northcote was (privately) delighted with them [the 'Conversations'], and that he corrected the proofs of the volume! This I know—for I saw some of the proofs myself, with his corrections; and Hazlitt complained bitterly to me that he had spoiled many of the best things—at times from some conceit as to phrases, &c.—at others, because he was afraid of offending certain persons by having his own expressions, when particularly piquant, repeated."

In common with Patmore, "Veritas" granted that the book owed, both directly and indirectly, much of its brilliance to Hazlitt, and he even permits himself to go the length of saying that he feels "satisfied that all the ill-nature in the volume is Northcote's," and all, or almost all, the talent Hazlitt's. The truth is there is very little ill-nature in the book, for though the confederates were peers in the art of saying venomous things, the senior partner's prudence was shown when the time came for printing.

Hazlitt's own statement of the case, on which Mr. Gosse mainly relies, will hardly bear the weight put upon it. Not merely does it seem to be too conventional in its terms, but at best it can only be taken as applicable to the first chapter (to which it was prefixed) and to the writer's intentions for the future—for it is not very likely that Hazlitt wrote more than one chapter (or at most two) in advance of publication. If Mr. Gosse had quoted a sentence or two more from this prefatory note to "Boswell Redivivus, No. I," the exaggeration of its terms would have been more apparent. "I have, however," Hazlitt writes,

"generally taken him ["Mr. N—"] as my lay figure or model, and worked upon it, selon mon gré, by fancying how he would express himself on any occasion, and making up a conversation according to this preconception in my mind. I have also introduced little incidental details that never happened; thus, by lying, giving a greater air of truth to the scene—an art understood by most historians. In a word, Mr. N— is only answerable for the wit, sense, and spirit there may be in these papers. I take all the dulness, impertinence, and malice upon myself."

The lack of consistency between the substance of this politely deprecatory preface—which is really a "preface," and not the "envoy" which usually serves—and either the direct evidence furnished by Patmore regarding the actual conversations as compared with the original reports, or the statements of "Veritas" as to the volume, is obvious. Moreover, in the volume itself Northcote is represented (in the last conversation of all) as taking full responsibility for what is set down in his name. He is terrified, he exclaims, by what Hazlitt makes him say, and fears that Sir Walter will think him a babbler. "Authors are glad to be talked about," replies Hazlitt, who thinks Sir Walter sensible enough to take the rough with the smooth. "I do not well know what to do," continues the reporter. "You seemed to express a wish that the conversations should proceed, and yet you are startled at particular phrases, or I would have brought you what I had done to show you. I thought it best to take my chance of the general impression." To which the interviewed answers that nothing in the reported dialogues appears very striking to him, adding naively, "One reason may be, what I observe myself cannot be very new to me. If others are pleased, they are the best judges." Of one thing we may feel persuaded, that amusing as the book undoubtedly is, it was a good deal more so before the old cynic had passed the flat-iron of his timidity over the proof-sheets. "If you happened," said Patmore, "to meet Hazlitt anywhere on the evening of the day on which he paid one of these visits of business [to Northcote], he was sure to be unusually entertaining."

One little episode marked the serial publication of these "Conversations" which it would have been worth Mr. Gosse's while to go into somewhat more minutely. He seems to have taken his story mainly from the "Memoirs," where it is told baldly and imperfectly. For five months all went well with "Boswell Redivivus," and Northcote lay placidly basking in the sunshine of his revived fame as a talker, when a storm was raised by the publication of No. VI. The too faithfully reported "conversation" positively bristled with scandal about the distinguished Plymouth family to whose constant kindness he had owed his start in life—"his sacred Muddes," as Mr. Gosse irreverently describes the revered friends of Dr. Johnson and Sir Joshua—and the old painter was roused to fury by the mocking echo of his own voice. There was nothing "theatrical" about his rage, as Mr. Gosse has been led to suppose. It was real enough, for the moment at least. He was reported to have blasphemed the founder of the clan, and to have hinted that its living members were "a poor lot"—though "still respectable," deservedly obscure. The skeleton of "old Mr. Mudge" had been dragged from its cupboard, and with mischievous glee made to dance for the amusement of a world which, caring as little as Mr. Gosse cares for the departed, enjoyed the antics of the quondam "idol of Burke, Dr. Johnson, and the rest of them." Northcote, it seems, had procured some particulars of the life of the Rev. Zachary for the purposes of a memoir which Sir Joshua intended to prefix to a volume of sermons; but the particulars proved to be unedifying, and Sir Joshua and the other friends took no notice of the MS. "The truth is," said Northcote, when retailing the savoury morsels to Hazlitt,

"they were mortified to find one they had been in the habit of crying up, not only as a person of the highest capacity (which he was), but as a saint and a model of a Christian pastor, turn out little better than a vagabond and a mountebank. It was, besides, an imputation on their own sagacity. . . . N— then showed me a print of him after Sir Joshua, which appeared to me a complete high-priest, bullying and insincere. This wife (the same Moll Faux [his father's housemaid], whom he afterwards married, and who continued a violent Dissenter to the last) used to say—'There he goes up into the pulpit, and prates away as if he knew all the secrets of heaven and earth, and all the time does not believe one word of it.'"

All this, and much more of the same kind (which having been turned out of the volume does not appear in the reprint), set Plymouth in a blaze, and brought up Mr. Rosdew, a nephew of the slandered Zachary, to the slanderer's studio. Denial or evasion would have been useless, all the names having been paraded in full, so that to Rosdew's expostulations Northcote could only bend his head and call his reporter "a papist, a wretch, a viper, whom he would stab if he could get at him." He declared that "when he first read the article he thought for three days it would have killed him," and so deeply touched was Rosdew by the old man's remorse that he "left him with as warm feelings of regard as before."

Then followed a letter from Northcote to Thomas Campbell, the editor of the magazine, full of abuse of Hazlitt. "I have often," he wrote,

"in my vain moments said that I should be pleased to receive morning visits at times from the devil, because I might be amused by his knowledge of the world, and diverted by his wit, and should be sufficiently on my guard to avoid his anæra. This impious desire has indeed been granted unto me, and 'Boswell Redivivus' is the consequence."

He begs that Campbell will no longer enable this "devil" to "sow discord between friends and make them detect each other, and all for a little profit or a little fun." Campbell was "afflicted beyond measure," and promised that the "devil" should "never more be permitted to write for the New Monthly." A copy of the correspondence having been forwarded to Rosdew, that gentleman declared himself satisfied, and the incident seemed to be closed. But the poor octogenarian soon learned that the living dog was more to him than the dead lion, and that life was unendurable without the stimulant to which Hazlitt had accustomed him—and the viper was taken back to his bosom. This faithlessness drew fresh remonstrances from Rosdew, but they evoked so unsatisfactory an explanation that Rosdew made an end by solemnly casting out Northcote's portrait from its honoured place among the Devon worthies Sir Joshua had painted for him. The episode is treated at length in the sixth volume of Allan Cunningham's "Lives of the Painters," to which it furnishes one of the most entertaining chapters.

Mr. Gosse's introductory paper on "Hazlitt as an Art-Critic" leaves nothing to be desired. It is full of knowledge, of judicious criticism and sympathetic appreciation, and his views carry all the stronger conviction to the reader from the circumstance that they are essentially identical with those formed by a contemporary judge who was not merely highly competent, but quite unprejudiced—Haydon, to wit, who wrote thus in his diary on November 3rd, 1817:—

"Hazlitt called in. . . . He said some fine things, things that when he writes them will be remembered for ever. . . . We then disputed about art. . . . Hazlitt is a man who can do great good to the art. He practised painting long enough to know it; and he has carried into literature a stock of art-knowledge which no literary man ever did before him. All his sneers and attacks at my views I take as nothing."

The reader who is well acquainted with Hazlitt's delightful essays on art and artists will not gather very much that is new to him from these "Conversations," but he will find that the views with which he is familiar take a fresh interest from their juxtaposition with those of Northcote, which are, of course, purely academic. On the other hand, it is to be hoped that this reprint will serve to guide many readers who know nothing of the essays to the far richer treat which there awaits them. Hazlitt was never so amiable, never so sympathetic both with himself and the world, as when he recalled the golden hours spent in the Louvre. It was his lost Paradise, but his regrets at losing it were stifled by the knowledge that he had not been expelled, but had voluntarily marched out and with the honours of war. There are both pride and humility in all that he wrote of his early labours with the brush, and one of the most curious instances of the constant struggles which engaged his mind and feelings on the subject occurs in the essay "On Great and Little Things." Across a purple patch, inspired by a recollection of the early Louvre days, he brushes his sleeve by means of a capricious foot-note:—

"As I look at my long-neglected copy of the Death of Clorinda, golden gleams play upon the canvas as they used when I painted it. The flowers of Hope and Joy springing up in my mind, recall the time when they first gleamed there—" and so on. And here is the foot-note:—

"I beg the reader to consider this passage merely as a specimen of the mock-heroic style, and as having nothing to do with any real facts or feelings."

The reader of the "Conversations" has much reason for gratitude to Mr. Gosse for the admirable industry with which he has struggled to identify the "incessant initials and blank spaces" with which the text of 1830 is starred. His efforts have been so largely successful that an attempt to add a few more identifications may be welcome. "Jack T—" was Jack Taylor, chief proprietor of the Sun newspaper, so familiar a figure in the autobiography of William Jordan and other contemporary memoirs; "Lord B—" was Lord Boringdon (the name was given in full in the magazine); "Lord G—" was clearly Lord Grosvenor; "J—" was probably Jeffrey; the "H—" of p. 99 probably Holcroft; "the third series of —" (p. 163) probably Hook's 'Sayings and Doings'; and the "W—" on p. 202 and thereabouts is most likely to be Wilkie. The actor called "Y—" at pp. 116, 117, Mr. Gosse supposes to be Yates, but the Athenæum reviewer of the 'Conversations' in 1830 silently assumed that Charles Mayne Young was meant. Mr. Gosse's assumption (p. 7) that it was Haydon whom Hazlitt proposed to introduce to Northcote is not readily tenable. In the magazine the initial was "F—," and in the immediately preceding paragraphs this clearly stood for Leigh Hunt. In the volume all the F's were altered into H's, and there is no apparent reason why Hunt should now be ousted from his place in this sole instance. The applicability of Northcote's remarks to Hunt may not be strikingly apparent, but they are much more obscure if applied to Haydon, between whom and Northcote there was bitter war, both official and personal. Among Hazlitt's slips of the pen, one has been left uncorrected: "Michael Angelo's statue of Cosmo de Medici, leaning on his hand, in the chapel of St. Lorenzo at Florence" (p. 42), should read, of course, "Lorenzo de' Medici."

Mr. Gosse has been fortunate enough to secure for his frontispiece the hitherto unpublished portrait of Northcote, painted by the artist himself in 1802, and now in the Tabley Park collection. It gives a much more pleasing impression of the painter than is to be gathered from contemporary records of him as an old man. These are nearly unanimous, and are perhaps best summed up in Fuseli's amiable remark, as reported to Haydon by Mrs. Opie, "He looks like a rat that has seen a cat."

The first edition of the 'Conversations' was published by Colburn & Bentley, having been "subscribed" in the week ending August 28th, 1830—only three weeks before the author's death. But the present publishers' hereditary connexion with Northcote was not confined to the 'Conversations,' as is interestingly proved by the facsimile of a letter inserted at the end of the present volume. It refers to his life of Sir Joshua, published for him by his "dear friend" "Richard Bentley, Esq., of New Burlington Street," nearly twenty years before; but though the letter is dated only a few months before his death, there is nothing in the bold firm handwriting to suggest that the writer had already passed his eighty-fourth birthday.

THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

(First Notice.)

THE result of a general survey of this exhibition is, except as regards the Water-Colour Room, disappointing. There is, it cannot be denied, a marked and rapid decrease of serious studies, learning, and research. It may be that the increase of "one man" exhibitions, tending to increase the number rather than to elevate the qualities of each artist's productions, has something to do with this lowering of the pictorial standards at Burlington House; but the principal cause of disappointment is, no doubt, the failure of conspicuous painters like Sir John Millais, Mr. T. Faed, Mr. Calderon, Sir John Gilbert, and one or two eminent outsiders, such as Mr. A. W. Hunt, to contribute at all. Again, several of our best artists—Mr. Alma Tadema, for instance, Mr. Marks, Mr. Lealie, and Mr. H. Moore—are inadequately represented, some of them sending a single picture only, and that not a considerable one. Nor does it seem to us that any one of the younger men who attracted attention last year or the year before has done much to increase his reputation. It is possible that closer examination of the pictures may lead the visitor to form a higher opinion of the exhibition as a whole, but at present we see no grounds for hoping that such may be the case. Meanwhile we may proceed to notice the pictures that have struck us most in looking round the galleries.

SIR FREDERIC LEIGHTON.

Of Sir Frederic's contributions we prefer Summer Slumber (No. 111). Studied and refined as the others are, this richly toned and coloured picture is all the more successful because its elegance as well as its completeness reflect the painter's idiosyncrasies. The devotion to art for art's sake which it manifests in so delightful a manner has enabled the painter to treat his piece of classic genre (for such, in fact, it is) in such a way that it has required a series of preliminary studies of the nude, of draperies, faces, colour, and chiaroscuro, to achieve so much. His enthusiasm for such preliminary studies is highly honourable to him; and he never flinches from them, or, to speak more accurately, he takes a positive delight in them, a trait especially to his credit in days when serious studies are out of fashion, and learned art does not pay. Several weeks ago we very briefly described 'Summer Slumber,' a Greek room lined with marble, adorned with statues of 'Silence' and 'Repose,' and other sculptures of subjects suggestive of peace and slumber. Facing us is a large opening affording, between two lofty columns, an ample view of a landscape in glowing twilight, which is deepening into gloom. This landscape is as restful in its sentiment as the nearly life-size figure of a young damsel extended supine upon the margin of a marble tank filled with water, which reflects the darker azure of the sky without, while its colour has been ably harmonized with the pale asburn of her hair and the deep tender rose of her draperies. These draperies are fine examples of those strenuous studies of which we have spoken, and they veil, without concealing, the fine lines of her body and her virginal contours. Her limbs and face are charmingly drawn, and modelled with delicate research. Some doves roosting near her are quite in keeping with the subject, and their whiteness aids the coloration and chiaroscuro of the whole. Warm as it is, 'Summer Slumber' is not less harmonious than Fatidica (20), an exercise in pure marble-white, which depicts a stately dame, half reclining and half sitting in a silver chair upon one of the elbows of which one arm rests, while the other arm supports her head. Her pale face and its abstracted air suggest that she is brooding over the future. She sits on a platform set in a large niche or the ambo of a temple, and the walls behind her are covered with silver, where pallid gleams and shadowy reflections seem to play, adding to the mystery of the design. A silver tripod at her side sustains a sullen, slowly burning fire. At her feet lies a long branch of golden laurel appropriate to the divinity whose minister and mouthpiece she is. The graceful and reposeful luxury of the sleeper in the twilight contrasts powerfully with the severe stateliness of the soothsayer, and in each picture there is evidence of the versatility as well as the resources of the artist.

Chromatically speaking, The Spirit of the Summit (190), another life-size, tall, and stately virgin, dressed in a different sort of white, is the complement to 'Fatidica.' The so-called spirit sits on a natural throne, formed in the highest peak of a mountain, while white clouds rise out of the valleys far beneath her, and climb to the firmament behind her. The intense azure of the sky supplies very deep tones, contrasting with the spirit's pale, but not wan carnations, the snowy clouds, and the marble whiteness of the draperies, upon the designing and execution of which the President has lavished the best of his knowledge. We do not care so much for the subject of this picture as for that of 'Summer Slumber,' nor is it so pleasant as The Bracelot (135), a large, upright canvas which displays a comely Greek maid of those lofty proportions Sir Frederic affects, draped from head to foot in a fine tissue of primrose colour, open at the side to show a massive thigh and shapely leg. Lifting one elbow, she alips along her rounded arm a bracelet, at which she looks admiringly. Behind her stands a chair with drapery thrown over it; behind this again are the rich tints and deep tones of an autumnal landscape, consisting of vines and a dark blue sky, features of great value in contrasting with and supporting the damsel's dress and flesh. A little child at her feet holds a casket of jewels from which she has taken the armlet. Pictorially speaking, this is an exercise between the richer glow and darker tones of the sleeping virgin, the marble and silver of the oracle, and the icy white of 'The Spirit of the Summit,' which, being in perfect harmony with itself, although intensely cold, neither chills nor shocks us. At another time we shall complete our notes on the President's contributions.

MR. POYNTER.

The new Director of the National Gallery exhibits a delightful nudity in Idle Fears (253). The scene is the interior of a Roman bath, the clear, placid water in front reflecting the architecture and figures facing the spectator. The principal figure is a tall, slender young girl, entirely naked, who clings to her companion, a handsome adult damsel clad in white and purple, and is manifestly reluctant to take the first plunge. The girl's figure is beautiful and beautifully drawn, and modelled with exquisite care and researchful skill; her carnations are of a rich, rather dusky gold, the half-tones are of a tender grey, and the light is reflected upon the flesh, the morbidness of which is such as Mr. Poynter never painted so happily before. In fact, he has overcome a tendency to an excess of yellowish brownness which we have often regretted to find in his flesh painting. The figures do not lose in animation by being statue-like. The faces are quite worthy of the artist, famous as he is for comely heads and fair faces, as well as of the charming nudity who forms the leading element, if not the raison d'être, of this picture. The walls behind the figures are lined with coloured marbles, while the floor is paved with white mosaics. An opening, from which a purple portière is drawn back, reveals an inner room where a servant is pouring hot water into a smaller bath than the cold one at our feet. Mr. Poynter exhibits a larger and more ambitious picture, called Horæ Serenæ (163), representing a lofty garden terrace over whose rich green parapet of cut box, adorned with vases, we see the calm Mediterranean and distant mountains, the purple sides and bluish shadows of which bespeak the height of summer. Summer's glowing light pervades the scene; the vines, climbing over summerhouses at each end of the platform of sward, wave their long tendrils in the placid air, and mix with the flowering plants, that show out clearly against the dark ilexes, and the slender cypresses that, further off, gently away themselves to rest. It is a scene fit to illustrate Pliny's remarks on gardens. On one of the vine-clad bowers, which resemble modern pergolas, a splendid piece of gold drapery is cast, while near it a peacock flames in the sun. In the centre of the canvas six girls are dancing in graceful fashion, touching hand with hand, while their fluttering draperies veil, without disguising, their limbs. Fair and tall, these maids are clad in various tints, artfully employed to aid the coloration of the design, to which their draperies supply the highest notes. Overhead, as if the dancers' movements or the music had attracted them, and, at all events, brilliant elements in the picture, a number of doves circle with flashing plumage through the sunny air. The music is that of a band of Egyptians, wanderers welcomed to this Arcadian villa, who sit under the pergola on our right. Under the opposite pergola, where the peacock and the gold drapery are placed, a handsome lady, seated in a silver chair, looks on sympathetically; behind her stands a younger maiden, lyre in hand, perhaps waiting her turn to play; a little girl, dressed in rich blue, leans on the matron's knee, and seems to be eagerly discussing the performance. This charming picture, full of light, action, and colour as it is, is rather less limpid in its tones and less brilliantly pure in its tints than 'Idle Fears.' Other contributions of Mr. Poynter we shall describe by-and-by.

MR. ALMA TADEMA.

Occupied with one of the most brilliant of his Roman processions, a splendid piece introducing a whole population of moving figures, Mr. Alma Tadema has not been able to finish anything more ambitious than a small panel at the New Gallery and the charming upright painting, No. 252, of a fair Greek maiden standing at the summit of a flight of marble steps, part of a terrace of the same material, and leaning over the parapet to gaze upon the expanse of a lake, from the calm surface of which grey mists rise in the deepening twilight, while the moon grows brighter and less golden as she climbs from the hills beyond the lake. The self-forgetfulness of the attitude, the delight the damsel's features evince, and the way in which her interlocked fingers knit themselves together, combine to indicate how much she is moved by the serene loveliness depicted in At the Close of a Joyful Day. Her dress of citron and greyish blue, the rich auburn of her hair, the beautiful colour of her flesh, the flush of the sun's gold upon the marble where it faces us, the serene opalescence of the lake, the richer hues of the darkening hills—wonderfully drawn and modelled as they are—delightful elements in a delightful picture, at which the more one looks the more admirable does it prove itself. Mr. Alma Tadema further sends a life-size portrait of Mrs. Theyrre Smith (260), an elderly lady wearing a black dress under a shawl of elaborate Brussels lace; a white cap nearly covers her white hair. Upon her animated face plays a half-suppressed smile. It is almost needless to add that the drawing, modelling, and flesh painting are complete and sound. Mr. Tadema has not the least leaning towards that Impressionism which pretends to so much while doing as little as possible.

MR. LESLIE.

Postponing for a while a larger and more elaborate work, this Academician has sent Tea (42), a figure, half the size of life, of Olivia rising from her chair in a gentle and animated way, and holding an old-fashioned blue teacup in one hand, while, resting the tips of her fingers on a table near the family tea tray, she, with a courteous look of inquiry, offers "another cup?" Soft, choice, and rich, the colouring of this most engaging picture excels in these respects several of the artist's previous works; it excels likewise in the harmonies of its tone, the broad simplicity of its coloration, and its equable, undemonstrative light and shade. The white mob cap with a black ribbon—black, we suppose, because the Vicar disliked "colours" in his daughter's caps, although he had not the least objection to the white fichu which is crossed upon her bosom, her dainty breast-knot of primroses, or her maroon gown over a yellow petticoat—sets off the fresh complexion, ruddy lips, and bright eyes of Miss Olivia Primrose of Wakefield.

MR. HOOK.

Four fine pictures by Mr. Hook fully make up for last year's disappointment. Having already briefly described the new works, we shall repeat only so much about them as seems absolutely necessary. Placing first that which we admire most, we begin with the smallest, called Before Sundown (774), which represents, during the later hours of an autumn afternoon, a great expanse of sea where multitudinous wavelets and larger billows ruffle a surface that resembles a vast plain, extending to where the lofty and darker horizon is drawn like a straight level line against a sky saturated with light. Our standpoint is on a high cliff, where a pool of fresh water drains into the sea and is studded with rushes and other plants, and dashed with reflections of the declining sun, whose intensely luminous path extends from our feet to the remotest edge of waves and divides the wide expanse. In the fresh pool a cow is wading, followed by an eager milkmaid, who calls to her loitering charge. It would be hard to say whether the shining pool; the salt water breaking in lines of foam which, huge as they are, distance makes to resemble threads, while they are surging and resurging against a small dark rock, the much-dreaded "Shark's Fin"; or the exquisite grading of the clouds which subdue and partly hide the splendour of the sun, is the more admirable portion of the picture. Suffice it that Mr. Hook never painted anything more beautiful than the far-reaching ocean and the finely graded atmosphere, or combined with greater breadth such silvery and pure hues, such wealth of colours all in harmony. Although his largest picture, Seedtime (55), is less charming, it cannot be described as inferior to any other of his works; rather is it broader and fresher than most of them, depicting as it does a vast panorama of a sandy, shallow valley clad with heather. The foreground is occupied by a group of country folks tending a patch of poor land which, with the aid of a donkey, they have just ploughed, and afterwards cleaned with a bush-harrow. Mr. Hook has borrowed from Gray the motto:—

Let not Ambition mock their useful toil,
Their homely joys, and destinies obscure;
Nor Grandeur bear with a disdainful smile
The short and simple annals of the poor.

It is not at all derogatory to Mr. Hook to say that the real subject of the picture is the restful charm that pervades the long valley, its slow-flying shadows and soft gleams, the serene sky that is loaded with clouds whose inter-spaces open to the firmament's pale blue, the vast atmosphere, and the broad and lovely harmonies of a peaceful scene. Technically speaking, the painter is at his best in the aerial perspective, the delicate, yet crisp modelling and full colouring of the distance and mid-distance, and in the half-defined greyish vapours with rosy edges of the sky. This noble idyl is, we think, the largest of his works. There is much subtle art in the manipulation and harmony of some trees in the further foreground, where spring foliage brightens the masses of dark leaves. The picture would be simpler if the figures were brought closer together, and indeed some critics venture to say that the landscape would be much improved if the figures were taken out. There is no want of spirituality or sentiment in that long valley and its grey clouds, or in the solemn majesty of the distance, which the unrest, to call it nothing else, of the foreground greatly disturbs and does not ennoble. Practising without Diploma (134) illustrates a sort of rustic surgery, and the figures are far superior to those we have just mentioned. The picture is another Surrey landscape, but differs in all particulars from the last. We are at a sudden turn of a bright and full stream hurrying on its way between a copse of beeches and thin underwood and a sunlit meadow. On the bank facing us sit a bright little boy in blue, and his buxom sister in blue, rose, and warm grey, who is extracting a thorn from his shrinking finger. The trustful air with which the lad submits to the operation, the nervous clenching of his disengaged hand, and the tender way in which he presses against his sister's plump shoulder, to say nothing of her comely face, are points finely felt and designed. We are sure Mr. Hook never did anything better in the way of figure painting; indeed, we doubt if he has designed anything so good before. The group, as opposed to the lustrous, many-tinted stream, is invaluable on account of its tonality and colour, to say nothing of its composition and its lines. There stands at the girl's feet a well-filled basket of blackberries, touched with a brush so frank and firm that Sir John Millais would like to claim them. Indeed, as a piece of painting pure and simple, even the basket of fish—and in painting fish no Dutchman except Teniers could vie with Mr. Hook—in the next picture of his we have to examine hardly rivals these blackberries. The fish will be found in Herring Packers (238), a scene in a Northumbrian harbour, where some boats lie alongside the little quay and the crews are carrying their catch to the foreground, where three plump and comely damsels are gaily filling casks with herrings from a pile at their feet. These incidents are not very new ones, of course, but the real subject is the calm sea and sky, varied with a thousand tints, and the soft cloud-broken line of the horizon and its tremendous masses of cumuli; to these must be added the blue ocean extending far as the eye can reach, and the splendidly painted heaps of fish.

THE BROTHERS WYLLIE.

The elder of these capital painters may be said to have surpassed himself in the resplendent sea-piece which he calls The Roaring Forties (4), where, in an enormous expanse of heaving waters and fast-flying clouds, huge low waves rise and sink to rise again in prodigious ranks, urged on by the tide. The air laden with vapour bespeaks a quick and powerful breeze, against which even the gulls have much ado to keep their places. Right in the middle of the picture, a tall ship—with all her sails, even to the lofty royals, set—rushes towards us, hardly rising as she cuts the crests of the waves. The animation and breadth of this telling picture will divide admiration with the apt and vigorous painting of the sea, and the firmness with which the clouds are depicted, in which respect Mr. Wyllie is not far behind Mr. Hook, who, by the way, whatever he may do with waves rushing shoreward and prodigious breakers, rarely delineates skies in the stress of tumult such as those of the "Roaring Forties," where a wilderness of clouds move all as one and with enormous speed. The simplicity of this capital work is almost majestic. "Yea, sah! sirpence, sah!" (381) is such a lovely picture of the sea that we could wish the incidents which made a subject for the artist had been omitted. It appears that if you approach Bridgetown, in Barbadoes, your ship is hailed by hordes of diving boys from the shore and of all sorts of olive and brown colours, who shout to you, "Throw sixpence, sah, and me capsize!" If you throw the sixpence overboard, half a dozen of them go diving and tumbling in the transparent blue water, amongst the shoals of grey or glancing fish, their brown bodies taking odd zigzag forms before they disappear in the lustreless depths of the sea. Mr. Wyllie has painted a magnificent tropical sea in resplendent sunlight, and floating upon it the grey-black iron hull of a great liner, while for the indispensable complement of yellow or gold in the chromatic scheme of his picture he has had to rely chiefly upon the shining skins of the naked boys who are struggling and gesticulating. There is wonderful vivacity in the designing of the archins, but they are out of place in such a glorious scene, and we wish Mr. Wyllie had "got his yellow," as painters say, by some other means. Let us, nevertheless, not be ungrateful to the accomplished artist who has so ably and sympathetically depicted the deep indigo and ivory of the "Roaring Forties" and the multitudinous hues of the Barbadian seas.

Nor can we be ungrateful for the next picture, "At eventide there shall be light" (455), the mouth of the muddy Thames near Gravesend just at the time when the sun goes down. Innumerable craft are passing out and in. The many-coloured surges break upon each other and take darker hues than their own from the overhanging clouds, as well as from the tawny sails of the barge which rushes towards us on her seaward path, her solid canvas contrasting with the clear and luminous sky behind her, while, lower down, drifting masses of lurid smoke from the remote metropolis are transmuted by the sun into dusky gold, or assume more sombre and seemingly unnatural hues. Above the horizon, and from behind the evening band, the rays of the sun pierce the air almost to the zenith, and touch with sanguine tints the edges and spire-like peaks of the great greyish-white clouds that hover there. Such are the elements of "At eventide there shall be light," to depict which brilliantly, harmoniously, and with veracity demanded singular skill and thorough sympathy with nature. In achieving this Mr. Wyllie has, as we have said of another work of his, outdone himself. His Butterflies and Working Bees (864) is made up of quite different materials, although the scene is again near the mouth of the Thames. A racing yacht, with all her white sails set, is lightly skimming the surface near a group of boats in front, the crews of which are laboriously sweeping the bottom of the river for an anchor; close by some fussy tugs emit clouds of smoke. The local colours of the water are pale olive, brighter green, and "old gold," touched here and there with white and blue reflections. Such are the elements of a charming work which we cannot criticize more truly than by saying that the painter has failed with none of them, and succeeded with most of them.

Mr. C. W. Wyllie, devoted to the representation of pure English summer sunlight flooding flowery meadows with its splendour, has contributed The Fringe of the Island (328), a riverside scene of singular tenderness and delicacy, where, under an atmosphere saturated with lustre which a slight excess of vapour partially diminishes, he has portrayed a field enamelled with giant daisies and almost shadowless in the diffused light, the polished surfaces of the herbage reflecting like a mirror the white of the sky. There are lustrous spaces in the meadow where the gentle breezes touch them. Interspersed with these—the effect is similar to what Constable often attempted with a somewhat heavy hand—are darker masses of broad-leaved wild carrots, and the tones and tints of all the parts are charmingly harmonized. In the middle of the picture a group of children loiter amid the tall grasses, thus giving solidity to the scene, while on the crest of the higher down beyond the meadow, distinct against the sky, stand the red roofs of some cottages, and the square grey mass of an ancient church tower. Overhead, huge masses of cloud, white and almost shadowless, float without moving. The whole picture is a choice study of bright, white, and pure light arranged in masses of great breadth and extreme simplicity. In its deeper tones and tints and less simple masses The Hard (348) contrasts strongly with "The Fringe of the Island," by the same subtle and sympathetic hands. It depicts a village street of old brick houses, and, in front, a landing place upon the Thames, where many boats and larger craft are collected. The evening light is strong, but not bright; the effect of growing twilight is rendered with feeling; and the colour—more especially the greyish-black hulls of the old tarred boats, and the ruddy brown and deep reds of the cottage walls and roofs behind—is sober and powerful.

MR. J. CHARLTON.

After the Battle, Sedan (475), a remarkable picture by the artist who painted "Horses flying from the Front," and, for Her Majesty, the "Procession of the Jubilee, 1887," claims attention. It refers to one of those terrible incidents which, because they follow still more terrible catastrophes, have hitherto escaped the notice of painters of military subjects. It depicts a furious stampede of riderless chargers whose masters have been slain or otherwise dismounted during the conflicts about Sedan. The horses, which are represented here at nearly life size, are known to have remained in groups upon the field of battle until—partly from terror and partly because they were half starved—forming in masses of hundreds and more, they rushed headlong over the plain, galloping desperately, and in their purposeless charge crushing the dead or killing outright the wounded, who, for want of succour, still lay there. In the picture they are advancing towards us breathless, rearing, plunging, staring wildly, and with their accoutrements flying loose about their heads and haunches. Above and behind them large clods of earth struck up by their hoofs are seen in the air. The passion with which Mr. Charlton has inspired the terror-stricken creatures fairly appeals the spectator; he has shown a great deal of invention in designing the various attitudes and expressions of the horses, and drawn and painted them with a skill which is worthy of his reputation as one of the best horse-painters of the day. The impressiveness of the scene is enhanced by the brooding grey-ness and dull gloom of the landscape.

MR. BRITON RIVIERE.

His Ganymede (232), which, on the whole, is the finest picture Mr. Riviere has contributed, is not the largest nor the most ambitious of the five he has sent, but it is the most original and vigorous of them, as well as that which was designed with the most spontaneity. Jove's eagle is soaring to the Olympian courts, with its talons fixed in a red girdle bound about the chest of Ganymede. The boy's body hangs, as in nature it would hang after he had swooned, relaxed and effortless. The design is first rate, and has not a little of that masculine sort of invention which we associate with the art of Italy's best period. The drawing and modelling of the nudity are rather above the modern average, and yet so much are we in love with the design that we could wish Mr. Riviere had expended all his skill upon a thing so fine. The eagle could not, we think, be better than it is, and the land and sea below this capital group, though a little rough and, perhaps, somewhat painty, are well composed to suit the figures in the air. Beyond Man's Footsteps (169), the largest of Mr. Riviere's contributions, represents part of a glacier or berg floating in the extreme north. The degrees of transparency in the ice, as well as the shining reflections from the sky, must have exercised the knowledge of the artist, much as Mr. Alma Tadema's is exercised when he paints marble under conditions showing its nature when variously affected by light. Here and there the ice is tinged with rosy or golden tints upon its loftier needle-like points. From one of the highest of the sloping plateaux a huge white bear gazes upon the sun sinking in lurid gold behind the evening band, which, like a wall of gloomy purple and dun, veils the horizon and masks the edge of the sea. Such being the case, the observer is bound to inquire how it can be that there is so much light in this picture as suffices to show the full, almost shadowless whiteness and colours of ice and snow, and how it can be that there is not much more colour as well as more intensity of tone in the sky. Of course, Mr. Riviere knows about this, but, as yet, we do not understand his intention. Apart from this, it is our duty to admire the knowledge displayed by the painter's drawing and handling of the ice cliffs and monstrous blocks tumbled at their feet. The Most Devoted of her Slaves (608) is a study of a robust damsel, such as Mr. Macbeth delights to paint, still quite young, yet a little worn with work. She stands at a cottage door, about to milky forth a milking, while a sheep-dog, all alive with joy, crouches upon the pavement. The girl is naturally and sincerely painted; her face is healthy and true, the colour and illumination of the picture are artistic and charming, and the dog is a delight to look at. Still, one cannot help wishing for more finish, a lighter touch, and a finer surface to what at present counts as an admirable sketch only. Eyes to the Blind (691) depicts a mendicant sitting at a doorway. The reason for this picture's existence is the admirable painting of the sharp white terrier who, intensely well informed about his business, and thoroughly sympathetic with it, sits at his master's knee. He is a model dog. Mr. Riviere once again appears in the Sculpture Room at the Academy, and deserves honour for his statuette in bronze of a lion called A Dying King (1843), badly wounded by an arrow that, piercing his loins, has paralyzed his lower extremities, which he drags after him, roaring terribly and quivering with agony and fury as he tears the cliff in front with his fore claws. The animation of this striking design is of the greatest value, and worthily supported by the learning and skill of its execution.

MR. J. B. BURGESS.

No Academician has made of late years more progress as a painter than the author of Rehearsing the 'Miserrere,' Spain (227). The sense of style is somewhat weaker in him than in John Phillip. Yet Mr. Burgess displays greater lightness of touch and delicacy in half-tones. Luminous, soft, and broad, the interior of this capital piece is among the happiest efforts of the painter. The attitude and expression of the cura of the village supply a pathetic element to the design. His attention has been diverted by the music from the teaching of the ragged urchins before him to some far-off memory. Looking up, his blank eyes show that while discordant strains assail the physical ear he is listening to the music of other days and places. The lapse of his chief's attention brings to a stop the performance of the precentor or music master, a tall, lean mortal in a seedy black cassock, armed with a violin, who stands behind his chair and checks the bow descending on the strings while, half amused and half surprised, he looks at the day-dreamer. The pathos of the incident gains force from the humour of the violinist's attitude and air. The boys are first rate in their way. Mr. Burgess has been fortunate in having as a sitter for her portrait a lady so fair and "paintable," so animated and so full of character, as Mrs. Wydliffe Taylor, whose likeness is No. 145. It is a half-life-size, three-quarters-length figure seated in a chair, wearing a dark dress and roses in her breast. Charming in its modelling and deftly finished as it is, it seems to us that the vivacious eyes are not quite rightly drawn.

As our next group comprises land and sea scenes, the honours of the art they illustrate lie with one of the finest of marine painters.

MR. HENRY MOORE.

The loss of his remaining brother and recurring ill health have sadly limited the working powers of Mr. H. Moore. Still, a splendid sea-piece is hung in the New Gallery, and an even more splendid one, entitled Outward Bound (845), is here, a world of lovely, mauve-like waves under a sky that is heavily laden with clouds all glorious with gold, and strongly shown by the flood of light which illuminates the open ocean and imparts an amethystine hue to all we see. This light issues from a gap in the centre of the sky, the largest of those which reveal that intense azure of immeasurable air that lies above, and hardly seems to belong to a world where such turbulent waves roll. Not less delightful for its harmonies of light, colour, and tone than on account of its intense brilliance, this picture is almost surpassed by the converse study, called Coming Home (856), a serene afternoon effect upon a sea full of motion, but not turbulent. The faint and rather pale purplish evening band marks the otherwise invisible horizon, between which and our standpoint the atmosphere has been graded with exquisite tact and skill. Still this picture is not more expansive and full of colour and light, more tenderly graded, or more powerful than the picture to which we come next, and which is in no way inferior. Lowestoft Boats running in in a Breeze (177) possesses all that force and delicacy to which the painter has accustomed us. Here the sea is a blue-grey, half in shadow in the front, where many a white-crested billow breaks on the purple sand. As we look along the sea it is evident that Mr. Moore has successfully depicted the way in which floating lines of foam from former breakers lie like lace upon the dark blue surface, and are lifted again by their successors. Jets of spray in the mid-distance betray the shoals below; the extreme distance is marked by a bar of darker blue, while along it fishing craft fly before the wind. White cumuli, with warm edges of light, attest how carefully this painter always models clouds, although most landscapists seem to think them formless objects, without lights or shadows, impenetrable by the sun and equally dense throughout. Such seems to have been the way in which the Italian painters—even Titian and Giorgione, to say nothing of the Florentines—regarded clouds. The best Dutch artists in skies hardly gave more attention to them. It was reserved for Turner to bring cloudland within the realm of art.

MR. DAVID MURRAY.

The Stream with Ox-eyes Fringed (862) is the chief contribution of this original and resourceful landscapist. Rarely exhibiting a tithe of what he paints, he is one of the most prolific of artists, and yet so fresh and good is his work that we never wish to see less of it, or find him repeating himself. We have often asked ourselves in what part of a landscape Mr. Murray is at his strongest and best, and always concluded that it is in the distance of a level, silvery horizon. The works before us confirm this idea. No. 862 depicts a large, newly-mown meadow; in front are a stream that has cut its way deep in the soft soil, a little bridge, and the lush, unshown herbage of banks richly strewn with pearl and ox-eyed daisies. Beyond the meadow is a glimpse of a high chalk down, the grey-blue of which harmonizes finely with the swathes of a similar colour lying on the surface of the meadow, as well as with the more remote village church and the towers of a ruined castle. The pale blue of the sky assort, too, with the tender summer haze which pervades the scene, softening everything and imparting to it something of that mystery which is the rarest charm of poetry in landscape. Every feature in this fine thing indicates that Mr. Murray's admiration for Claude, especially for his mastery of composition as an art of itself, has of late been growing. Indeed, Long After (585) is so finely composed that it might be called an exercise in Claudian design, not without the repose and somewhat artificial grace of the master, and somewhat less limpid in its shadows and half-tints than he would have given us, while the lights, being rather less than rich and clear, do not attain the level of Claude. What was just said about Mr. Murray's sympathy with the pathos of nature is illustrated by The Stream with Ox-eyes Fringed not less than by Long After, in which the subject, a ruined castle on a knoll which once guarded an inland pass against sea-rovers, lends itself to sentiment. The dismantled fortress, with its encircling of lower walls and central mass of sheltered towers, looks from on high over a lofty meadow, once a camp and town, to where the sea gleams faintly and a tender bar marks the horizon. Great is the spaciousness of the view, rich are the colours of the mid-distance and foreground, and among the most telling parts of the picture are the grey clouds, to the colour as well as to the lines of which the painter has not forgotten to impart that touch of pathos which does much for his art, and yet is never thrust in the visitor's face. Dorset Downs (159) is admirably painted, and possesses all the charms of Long After and the pathos of a wider prospect. From a chalk down we are able to look upon the sea some ten miles off, while nearer us lies a fine expanse of gently swelling verdure, which was painted with loyal attention to the truth of the local colours, the coloration of nature as a whole, and the fine gradations of the atmosphere. As in former cases, there is a suspicion of opacity (we dare not say paintiness), especially in the middle tints, and more so in the tones of an otherwise charming work. Peace at Ewe (568) is a not less expressive picture of the same vast grey ruin, its many walls and mighty towers aloft upon its hill, and makes it look like what it is, or has been—nothing less than a Castle Perilous, a refuge of the Saxon, Norman, and Stuart, that reigned supreme until treachery surrendered it to the Parliament. Especially to be admired in Mr. Murray's work is a quality which may become a snare to him as to scores of capital artists—we mean the charming crispness and forthright precision of touch which make possible his astonishing facility.

MR. J. W. WATERHOUSE.

This painter sends to the Academy The Lady of Shalott (245), dressed in white, which assort finely with the splendid tints and deep tones of her surroundings. She seems to have just risen from the embroidery frame at her side, where she has been weaving sumptuous blue, red, and gold pictures. She has risen—perhaps because their weapons clashed, or perhaps because their voices rang out clear in the summer air—to look eagerly at the living knights whose forms are reflected in the mirror on the wall behind, where the wind-swept stream and gleaming meadows, the flashing armour and the flying plumes, are seen in splendid light, but separated from her, as if to shut her from them hopelessly, by the strong black mullions and stanchions of the narrow casement which is supposed to be behind us. The blue thread she has been using in the picture has fallen from the lady's lap and rolled upon the floor, entangling the flowers she has been copying, and seems to be lost beyond recall. This vision (for such it is) of gorgeous colours and ominously dark tones forms a masculine picture, of which the design is all that could be hoped for, and where the passion of the lady's attitude and expression is, as such, admirable. All we miss is more of an aristocratic and noble sort of beauty in her form and face, such as, if we are to take the painting as a pictorial romance, we must needs look for; or if that mystical view Rossetti and Mr. Holman Hunt took of the subject is to prevail, then we crave something that is at once etatelier and more spiritual than Mr. Waterhouse's masterpiece. The artist further sends a strongly painted portrait of Mrs. C. Newton-Robinson (436), at life size, dressed in white muslin and placed against a deep-toned yellow ground: an excellent and lifelike portrait, and, as a picture, of unusual quality and keeping.

MR. STANHOPE FORBES.

From the romance of Mr. Waterhouse's Lady of Shalott to the homely prose of Mr. Stanhope Forbes, which, however, has a dignity and poetry of its own, the transition cannot fail to be strongly marked. The Quarry Team (461), with steady strength, are dragging a huge grey block of granite upon a trolly which slowly grinds its way along the gritty road before us from an inland quarry to the neighbouring harbour. The low banks on either side of the road are rich in colour, and make up for the lack of foliage upon the high treeless plateau, while they have supplied Mr. Forbes with so much colour as he needed to assort in strong harmonies and contrasts with the silvery grey of the granite, and the sadder, yet warmer grey of the clouds that brood overhead, and will soon descend upon and shut out the purple dawn which gently rises behind the team, as well as the rosy bars and pale intervals of sky that form so characteristic a background to a capital picture. The finest part of this work is the team itself. The horses are painted almost at life size, with a sense of style that is a rare quality in English art. Mr. Forbes sends, besides, an expressive portrait of John Storn, Esq. (468), a portly and comely old gentleman, seated in a chair.

MR. GOW.

Mr. Gow has found a capital subject, The Emperor's Coming! (667) of the kind Meissonier liked to paint, and the result is very much the best picture Mr. Gow has painted. An atafette, an humer of the First Empire, has brought the news of Napoleon's approach to a provincial mairie. His horse is thoroughly blown, and stands so that its forward-planted feet relieve its labouring chest while it has halted at the gate. We admire the highly accomplished execution, the neatness and precision of its draughtsmanship, the careful archaeology of the costumes and other details, including the architecture, which belongs to the later days of Louis XIV. (but has received more recent additions), the arched opening, columns, and colour-washed stone. The sunlight, too, has been studied with Pro-Raphaelite brilliancy and a clever sense of the nature of light and shade, so that, replete as it is with golden reflections, bluish shadows, and cool lights, it is right, homogeneous, and loyal to nature. When he painted God save King James! (233) Mr. Gow had not, we suppose, yet resolved to part with those Jacobite friends whose chivalric loyalty he has so often illustrated. At any rate, here is a group of fox-hunters assembled in a mandpit, and attentively listening to a proclamation of "the King." Beyond the fringe of oaks which partly screens the put a red-coated servant keeps a look-out in case the enemy should see or hear what his masters are about. The clever grouping, varied characterization, and uncommon neatness of this bright picture are acceptable, but it is not so original or interesting a picture as 'The Emperor's Coming!'

MR. VAL. PRINSEP.

Mr. Prinsep's "A Versailles!" (277) a large picture, is filled with life-size figures—rather heavily painted, but in every way solid, learned, and masculine—of rebels of another sort from Mr. Gow's friends: the women marching to Versailles in October, 1789. They follow the red flag, while their leader, a young virago, not without comeliness, rides on a gun-carriage which a party of ill-favoured patriots drag afloat. The lady in the front of the picture, a capably painted figure, seems to have been captured by the apostles of freedom, and is haled along, willy nilly. When, as it is easy to do, we have got over the effect of a certain hardness and over-definition which mar the first impressions of this remarkable work, its extraordinary merit forces itself upon us. But before this happens we have to discount the artist's most manifest error in making his figures, not tattered and soiled, but in the cleanest of various sorts along a lengthy road, but neat, and, if ragged, cleanly-clad patriots of a more "respectable" class. It appears to us (but we urge the point with becoming humility) that Mr. Prinsep lost much by not depicting the people as they were; for through the inevitable contrasts of costumes, actions, intelligence, and emotions, to say nothing of the wealth of pictorial elements freer methods of treatment offer, he might, even in dirty garments and besotted faces, have produced something much more impressive than this large canvas.

MR. B. MACBETH.

Somerset orchards and cider culture still attract this able artist, and he has sent a splendid picture of cider-making to the New Gallery. But, not to desert Lincolnshire, he has contributed to the Academy The Coming Storm (504), a larger canvas than usual with him, a view of a fen lode or land drain in rainy weather, while a straw-boat laden with girls and boys is being towed away from us by a strong damsel. Behind this slow craft walk a group who are towing a second boat which is out of sight. The company in front have been gleaming, and rudely bound sheaves fill their boat. Among the passengers is a buxom lass playing with a chubby boy, while a younger woman (a statuesque figure such as Mr. Macbeth loves), holding to the towing-pole, looks up at the thunder-laden sky. The natural grace of these stalwart figures distinguishes this important work, that gains much from its vivid colours as well as from the vigour of its lighting. It would gain still more if it had been more completely finished, and had attained a finer surface.

MR. T. C. GOTCH.

An artist who paints Biblical subjects without the conventionalities of older Italian art, and imitates the grave and sincere naturalism of some Flemish masters of the seventeenth century, is nowadays nothing less than a phenomenon. Such is Mr. Gotch, whose progress critics have watched with interest from the time when he painted the outside of Cornish cottages and genre subjects of a humble sort. His large picture of The Child Enthroned (540) is, with all its extreme, but highly refined and elevated motives and technical style, quite a remarkable and noble outcome of that mood of which Bastien-Lepage is the most popular representative, although he did not by any means invent it. There is something almost Byzantine in the still sweetness and joyous serenity of the comely boy with Flemish features, about which long straight tresses of pale golden hair fall to his shoulders. Seated, he rests a hand upon each arm of his throne, and remains motionless, yet graceful. The expression of his pure and delicate features is extremely touching. He wears red and blue draperies enriched with Flemish embroideries, of which the colours are somewhat crude as well as pale. The head of this beautiful, and to many, we fear, enigmatical figure, is distinct against an aureole of metallic gold of the palest sort, while the light background and brilliant ornaments in the picture add to its somewhat startling freshness. Bright, pure, beautifully drawn, and very delicately modelled, all the parts, especially the face and hands, will please the artist. The same painter exhibits a life-size and luminous portrait of Mrs. R. Jackson (506), seated in black upon an amber couch, as well as a second portrait of Col. Kennard (133).—Mrs. Gotch contributes a pleasant picture of Day-dreams (1), a damsel dressing a child's hair.

MR. HAYNES WILLIAMS.

The genre pictures of this clever painter receive a noteworthy addition in the attractive and ably-painted Winning (783), where the comely and plump sweethearts we know so well and like so much as to wish they were fairly wedded at last, sit vis-à-vis at a chessboard, when she, moving her king, gives her lover "check," and finishes the game in triumph. Lost in love, he contemplates his fate with equanimity. In spite of some excess of paint, its mannerisms (which are rather of the subject than the style of the artist), and the feebleness of the subject, this is a pretty and vivacious piece of work; still, the man's face is below the mark.

MR. DENDY SADLER.

This entertaining painter of domestic genre in the days of William IV.—a period to which no other artist has given much attention—outdoes himself this year in all the qualities which distinguish his work. The first of his pictures, No. 810, portrays the humours and demonstrative jollity of a village club of tradesmen assembled in the oak-panelled room of an old inn. The leader of the party, a capital figure, pipe and glass in hand, stands with his back to the fire, and cheerily leads the song,

Let others sing the praises of wine,
Give me of steaming punch a bowl.

Here are at least a dozen capably designed figures, firmly and carefully painted, all of them being as original as they are true to nature. Although the workmanship is rather hard and metallic, it is only fair to praise the veracity, animation, and dexterity of the artist who has succeeded so well with a difficult and rather unpromising theme. The crisp touching of every portion of the picture—from the faces to the boots of the figures, from the china and other characteristic ornaments to the treatment of the light, shade, and effect at large—is worthy of high encomiums. A certain horniness, however, injures the coloration. For Fifty Years (888) possesses great spirit and genuine, though rather sardonic humour. The soft, clear lighting of the room is a first-rate piece of painting. The lady's ebony crutch stick, her lace cap and silvery hair, and the gentleman's ancient finery are worth noticing. Mr. D. Sadler's sense of humour is at its best in the lady's tender look at her companion, which is not without sadness and brimming with memories of what "might have been." This is, on the whole, the better of Mr. Sadler's contributions.

MR. G. A. STOREY.

Mr. Storey's more ambitious works remain to be finished, and he has contented himself with exhibiting exactly such a subject as his favourite Metax would have delighted in, First Practice (212), a picture of a comely British maiden, dressed in white and seated before a table on which a music-sheet is propped. She holds a guitar, on the strings of which her fingers are rather nervously touching as she looks with stringent attention on the paper before her. The attitude and expression of the girl are good, there is pleasing colour throughout the picture, and the light and shade have been carefully studied, so that the whole is clear and broad. A finer, if not a smoother surface would add much to the attractiveness of this pleasant picture.

MR. SHANNON.

It would not be an injustice to Sir Thomas Lawrence if we said that Mr. Shannon recalls his best work, adding a better style and finer skill, in the portrait of The Countess of Radnor (500), a life-size, three-quarters-length figure turned to our left, and a capital, animated, and solidly painted work, full of character and extremely clear in tone. The painter sends likewise a capital portrait of Mrs. Claude Magniac (129).

MR. FILDES.

Portraiture has proved irresistible to the painter of 'The Doctor.' His best apology is the excellence of the whole-length, life-size, and lifelike portrait of Mrs. Robert Yerburgh (78) in white. The artist has selected a meditative mood, when a smile is slowly changing the lady's expression. This charmingly soft and fresh picture is the best of three such works. The next in merit is a highly attractive, life-size, three-quarters-length likeness of H.R.H. the Princess of Wales (239), wearing a black low-cut dress, and holding a dog in her lap, her dark brown hair being arranged compactly about the finely poised, graceful, and well-proportioned head, and enclosing a face whose high-bred look must have been grateful to the painter. It is a most telling, luminous, and richly toned portrait of first-rate quality. Mrs. P. Ralli (294), by the same accomplished hands, is a life-size, three-quarters-length figure standing, fan in hand, and wearing an evening dress of a very pure and brilliant yellow satin. She carries her head a little on one side with a very natural sort of espièglerie, which imparts a rare charm to the portrait. The rich and deep-toned carnations assort well with the lady's dress and the grey background.

We may conclude by mentioning a few pictures to which we shall return: Mr. J. W. Nicol's 'Last of the Florentine' (No. 5), Highlanders saving wreckage from a ship of the Spanish Armada; Mr. W. A. Toplis's brilliant landscape 'Nature's Architecture' (7); Mr. E. A. Waterlow's charming idyl 'Cloudy June' (14), which is the best of his contributions; Mr. H. W. B. Davis's 'April Afternoon' (26), a meadow in spring sunlight, and his more brilliant 'Al Fresco' (140); Mr. O. Lutyan's 'The Vicar's Daughter,' dressed in white (41); Mr. W. Langley's 'Never Morning wore to Evening but some heart did break,' an old woman consoling a weeping girl (49); Mr. MacWhirter's 'Subsiding Flood' (48) and his more luminous, rich, and ambitious 'Flowers of the Alps' (196), a sort of sequel to the best of his pictures of last year; Mr. F. Goodall's portrait of his daughter 'Rita,' in very pale blue (99), and his 'Palm Grove' (172); Mr. S. Goetze's original work, the death of 'St. Sebastian' (116); Mr. R. Owtram's sober and artistic 'Portrait of a Gentleman' (122); Mr. W. Logsdail's 'Feeding the Pigeons in Piazza San Marco, Venice' (151); Mr. P. Graham's characteristic 'Head of the Loch' (183), furious breakers and rocks clad with mussels; 'Mid Channel,' a fine sea-piece, with a rolling ship, by Mr. W. E. Norton (180); M. W. A. Bouguereau's charming nude figure of the boy Cupid called 'Amour piqué' (210); Mr. H. S. Marks's old gentleman at a bookstall, named 'An Odd Volume' (211); Mr. G. F. Watts's 'J. Passmore Edwards, Esq.' (221), and his single draped Oriental figure of the rich man who "had great possessions," a noble study in colour (259); Mr. H. Woods's 'Colosseum Statue, Venice' (250), which is incomparably his best piece of sunlight painting; Mr. H. S. Tuke's 'August Blue' (307), brilliant light upon a pure sea; Mr. E. Parton's pure, delicate, and pearly 'Water Meadows of Picardy' (308), which is a good example of his landscape art; Miss J. Macgregor's 'Arrested' (311), a Russian historic tragedy designed with unexpected force and well painted; Mr. H. Herkomer's life-size realistic nudity, a female model in a wood and sunlight, called 'All beautiful in naked purity' (340); Sir G. Reid's masculine portrait of 'Prof. Blackie' (343); Mr. H. J. Draper's catching a mermaid in a net, called 'The Sea Maiden' (370); Mr. H. G. Riviere's 'The Argonauts and the Sirens' (375); Miss M. T. Dicksee's Goldsmith reading 'She Stoops to Conquer' to 'Little Comedy' and 'The Jessamy Bride' (392); Mr. A. J. Hook's 'Salvage after a Fog' (414); Mr. Eyre Crowe's 'The Brigs of Ayr' (415) and his 'Foundling Hospital' (687); Mr. A. Parsons's 'Sunset after Rain' (417); Mr. B. Berkeley's telling charge of French cuirassiers at Waterloo, 'The Sunken Road of Ohain' (424), and its complement here, Mr. W. B. Wollen's 'Black Watch at Bay, Quatre-Bras' (435); Mr. J. Brett's solid 'Promise of a Wild Night' (534), the sea off the Land's End, and his oddly named coast piece 'The Parting Hour,' with the motto, 'They had habitually lain in wait to throw stones at him' (546); Mrs. H. Rao's 'Psyche before the Throne of Venus' (564); Mrs. Alma Tadema's 'Silent Persuasion' (627), lovers at a window; Mr. W. F. Calderon's 'Reigate Heath Cattle Fair' (741); Mr. E. A. Abbey's picturesque, dramatic, and original 'Fiammetta's Song' (797); Mr. B. Hook's 'Start Bay' (861), with a fine breaking sea; M. Jan V. Obelminski's 'Surprised Cosacks' (903); and Mr. A. O. Taylor's 'Gentlemen! the Queen!' (920) a military banquet.

A "HABELLIO" AMULET?

Kemnal Manor, Chislehurst, April 28, 1894.

THE last two lines of Mr. Conway's inscription are surely TO TOY ΘΕΩΥ ΟΝΟΜΑ ΟΣΙ(ΠΙΣ). The first line is possibly ΠΥΣΕ Κ ΟΥΣΕ (γ), in which case the whole would mean, "The Name of the God Osiris both defends and destroys."

R. J. WALKER.

SALES.

MESSERS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS sold on the 28th ult. the following, from the collections of the late Mrs. Hemming, Mr. Birket Foster, and others. Drawings: J. Holland, Venice, under the Rialto, 300s.; Venice, 315s. W. Hunt, Chaffinch's Nest and Wild Rose, 115s.; Black Grapes, Peaches, and Strawberries, 90s.; Greenhouses and Orleans Plums, 64s.; Three Drawings, in one frame, 135s.; Snowdrops, 63s. E. R. Johnson, The Anxious Mother, 94s. J. F. Lewis, The Mendicant, interior of a Turkish house, with figures, 241s.; The Harem, 183s. J. Linnell, A Pastoral Scene, boys tending sheep, 152s.; Barley Harvest, 203s.; Fen Country, 55s. S. Palmer, The Morning of Life, 73s. G. J. Pinwell, The Princess and the Ploughman, 283s. J. M. W. Turner, Luxembourg, 84s.; In the Rhone Valley, 68s.; ditto, 94s.; Sidon, 273s.; Ehrenbreitstein, 75s.; Amalfi, 50s. F. Walker, The Chaplain's Daughter, 320s. Pictures: Sir E. Burne-Jones, Seven Pictures, The Story of St. George and the Dragon, 2,100s. L. Alma Tadema, The Seasons: Spring, 273s.; Summer, 241s.; Autumn, 252s.; Winter, 483s. L. Deutsch, The Mosque Guard, 131s. B. Constant, Arab Courtship, 210s. V. Cole, Oxford, from Ilfley, 556s. J. O. Hook, "Little to Earn and Many to Keep," 798s.; Spring, 252s. J. Linnell, Philip baptizing the Eunuch, 367s. J. Pettie, Burgomaster of the Time of Cromwell, 215s. J. Brett, The Highland Summer, 111s. J. Elsiey, The Biggest, 110s. J. Forneley, The Quorn Hunt, 210s. J. Wilson, jun., Running into Port, off the Dutch coast, 110s. J. B. Pyne, A Regatta on Lake Windermere, 132s. Henriette Browne, A Rhodian Girl, 120s. Ary Scheffer, Dante and Beatrice, 483s. Sir E. Landseer, Chevy,

3,937l. W. Mulready, The Barber's Shop, 252s. J. Phillip, The Water-Carrier of Seville, 252s.; Antonia, 157s. Sir T. Lawrence, Mrs. Whittington, wife of Jacob Downing Whittington, 750s. T. Gainborough, View near King's Bromley on Trent, Staffordshire, 3,750s. W. Collins, The Dead Robin, 483s. J. Constable, A Scene on the River Stour, 6,510s. The price last mentioned is a notable one.

At a sale by the same auctioneers on the 30th ult., Dedham Mill, by Constable, fetched 117l.

The following prints were sold after the library of Mr. Buckley by Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge. Arundel Society, a nearly complete set of the publications from the commencement, 61l. The Frescoes by Correggio and Parmigiano at Parma, by Toschi (41), 32l. 11s. The Last Supper, after Leonardo da Vinci, by R. Morghen, 26l. 5s. The Madonna di San Sisto, by F. Muller, 33s. 12s.

NOTES FROM ATHENS.

THE Delphic hymn to Apollo was sung thrice at Athens in the first two weeks of April in the public concerts of the Society of Lovers of Music, by the same quartet which had already given it on March 29th before the royal family and a crowded audience at the French Archeological School. The Parnassus Society is preparing another concert, at which the pieces of ancient music ascribed to Dionysius and Mesomedes shall be sung by a chorus, accompanied by an orchestra.

Besides the Pæan mentioned in last week's Athenæum, Prof. Weil has printed the inscribed hymns, accompanied by musical notes, that have been discovered. There are in all six of these, of which A and B are the most important. They contain a Pæan, written in pæonic measure, of which the text given by the French professor runs as follows:—

1. [Τὸν καθαρί]σσι κλιτὸν παῖδα μεγάλου [Διὸς]
2. [ς ἐρῶ σ' ἄ τε πα]ρ' ἀκρονική τόνδε πάγον αἰμ-
3. [βροτα πρό]εσι θνατοῖς προφαίνει[ει.]
4. [ς λόγια, τρ]ίποδα μαντεύειον ὡς εἰλ- [λες, ἔχ-]
5. [θρὸς ὦν ἐφ]ρονύρει δράκον, ὅτε τε- [οῖσι]
6. [βέλεσιν ἐτ]ρηησας αἰῶλον ἐλκτὰν [φιδῶν]
7. σινύριμαθ' υἱὲς ἀθῶπ[εντος]
8. δὲ Γαλατᾶν ἀρης
9. ν ἐπέρασ' ἀσπε[ρος]
10. ΣΑΛΛΙΩ γένειαν
11. ν θάλος φίλον
12. ε διαμορῶ λο
13. ρῶν ἐφορ
14. τεον κν
15. ανακ
16. ν θη

1. ιστον θεὸν αἶ
2. [Ἐλικῶ]να βαθύθενδρον αἶ λά[χε-]
3. [τε, Διὸς] ἐ[ρ]μβρομονον θύγατρίς ἐνώλε [τοις]
4. μόλε[τε], συνόμαινον ἵνα φοιῶσον ὠδαί-
5. σι μέλψητε χρυσεόμαν, ὅς ἀνὰ δικορύν- [μα]
6. ια Παρνασσίδος ταῦδε πετέρης ἔδρανα [μ[ε]-]
7. τὰ κλιταῖς Δελφίσιν Κασταλίδος
8. εὐνέδρον νῆματ' ἐπίνεπται, Δελφὸν ἀνὰ
9. [πρ]ωῶνα μααντεῖον ἐφέπον πάγον
10. [Ἰθι], κλιτὰ μεγαλόπολις Ἀθθῆς, εὐχα-
11. [ισ]ε φερρόπλωι νύκτωρ Τριτωινίδος δά[πε-]
12. [δ]ον ἄθραυστον ἀγῶις δὲ βωμοῖσιν Ἀ-
13. [φ]αστος αἰείδε[ι] νῶν μῆρα ταῦρων ὁμον-

14. οὐ δέ νιν Ἀραψ ἀτμός ἐς Ὀλυμπον ἀνα- κιδῶ[α-]
15. ται· λγῶν δὲ λωτοὺς ὑρέμων αἰόλοισις [μέ-]
16. λειν ὠδαῖν κρέκει, χρυσία δ' ἀδύθ- ρου[ς κί-]
17. θαρς ἡμῶσιν ἀναμέλκεται ὁ δὲ [θ-]
18. [ε]ω[ρ]ῶν πρόως ἴσμος Ἀθθῆδα λαχῶν.

The mention of the Galatians lends an air of probability to the professor's conjecture that the hymn was composed a few years after the march of the Gauls on Delphi in 278 B.C. It is probable that there was in Delphi an Attic Theoria for celebrating the miraculous preservation of the holy place and of the rest of Greece. The pæonic feet follow one another from beginning to end without admixture of heterogeneous feet, without stay, and almost without pause, so that it was difficult to make out the ends of the verses or, more correctly speaking, of the rhythmical periods.

M. Bikelas has published in Hestia some information regarding the Greek painter of the sixteenth century Domenico dello Greco, whose real name was Thotocopolos. His native place was till now unknown, but M. Bikelas has found under the picture of St. Maurice painted for the Escorial, beside the signature of the artist, who always wrote his name in Greek characters, the word Krps. Consequently he was a Cretan, but whether he was born there or in Venice remains unknown.

The Corfiote painter in water-colours Yalinas, who is well known in England, has opened an exhibition in Corfu of a hundred new drawings, which will presently be transferred to London. It consists mainly of landscapes from Corfu, Egypt, Spain, and Venice, along with drawings of Athenian antiquities.

The pupils and admirers of Prof. E. Curtius propose to present him on his eightieth birthday with a volume containing archaeological and philological essays of theirs. In celebration of the same event the bust of the distinguished historian and archaeologist which his friends at Berlin have had executed is to be unveiled at Olympia on the 2nd of September. The Greek Government has given permission for its being placed in the Museum at Olympia.

Two Greek students from Livadia, in the ancient Beotia, believe they have discovered the site of the oracle of Trophonius. North of Livadia, opposite the stream of Herkyna, is an unnamed hill, on the east bounded by the Herkyna, on the west by the brook Probation, on the north by the hill of Laphystion, and on the south by the town. On the western side of this hill lies a little church of St. Sophia. Beneath it, however, is a grotto-like crypt, 4-30 metres deep, a depth that would correspond pretty well to Pausanias's eight ella. Pausanias, from his own account (ix. 39, 10), had not measured the depth himself. This quite small grotto is not natural, but artificial, and it answers to the description of Pausanias. On the south side of the grotto are steps which lead to a throne with three hollow seats. Pausanias says it was the seat of Mnemosyne. Close by one sees other seats placed in a winding line which reaches to the river; but opposite the stream are niches and a construction designed for ablutions. On the east of the grotto is a cliff shaped like a bank (the κρίβανος of Pausanias), upon which are to be seen niches and other traces of ornament. A little further off is a natural hole. Can it be the concealed entrance? It is stopped, and when it is knocked the sound is dull. The northern side lies somewhat higher than the others, and is connected with the eastern by a step hewn in the rock and a door of which only a fourth part is preserved. So far as the report goes of the supposed discovery, the Inspector of Antiquities, to whom application was made, thought it reasonable to make further investigation, and grant the means necessary for continuing the examination. The whole description is a trifle mystical; but that is quite in harmony with the cave of Trophonius. Schliemann, it may be remembered, occupied himself some years in searching for the cave, and made some excavations which led to no result. In 1839 Stephani conjectured that the oracle was under the church of St. Sophia, and Hettner opposed the idea.

A fearful earthquake, which occurred in Greece on the evening of the 20th of April, destroyed several villages in the neighbourhood of Atalante in Locris, and also desolated the whole north-east of Greece, has injured many historical and archaeological monuments. In Athens itself a great block of marble fell from the Gate of Hadrian and a capital of the so-called market gate (the gate of Athena Archegetis), in Livadia the mediæval tower, in Chalcis a portion of the fort, the Turkish mosque, and the tower of the Church of the Holy Preparation, which originally was a basilica of the sixth century.

SP. LAMBROS.

P.S.—In the last shocks of the earthquake the monument of Philopappus at Athens and some columns of the Parthenon have suffered in a degree. At the suggestion of the Archaeological Society of Athens, which has offered to bear the expense, the Greek Government has nominated a commission of architects to see to the security of these monuments.

Fine-Art Society.

HARD-WORKING Londoners will be glad to hear that the governors of Dulwich College have arranged to open the Dulwich Picture Gallery on Sunday afternoons from 2 o'clock to 5 during the months of May, June, and July.

TO-DAY (Saturday) the Fine-Art Society has appointed for two private views at its gallery in Bond Street. The works exhibited are a collection of drawings of Venice, by the late Mr. C. E. Herne, an Australian artist of repute, and productions of other painters of that continent, as well as "Some Paintings and Sketches of Military England of To-day," by Mr. J. P. Beadle. On Monday next the public will be admitted to see these examples.

UNDOUBTEDLY we may congratulate the country on having secured Mr. Poynter as Sir F. Burton's successor in the Directorship of the National Gallery, a position in which his accomplishments, energy, and fine taste will find full play, while he will be able to employ that indispensable technical knowledge which only one trained and practised as a painter can possess. As we said some time since, when his appointment was rumoured, the history of the National Gallery proves the advantage of placing a painter at its head. Under Sir Frederick Burton it has thriven prodigiously, improving in quality as well as quantity. It is to be hoped Mr. Poynter's term of office may be as long and successful. As to Sir Frederick, it is a public duty to say that no one subject to limitations such as hamper all Directors in Trafalgar Square has achieved anything like so much, either here or abroad. The National Gallery is not only, in effect, a new building immensely enlarged since his appointment just twenty years ago, when it consisted of 902 pictures all told, but it has been enriched beyond all comparison with other Directors' terms of office, exclusive, of course, of the days (1824-43) of Mr. Seguer, the first Keeper, when the Angerstein, Beaumont, and Holwell-Carr collections established the institution, so that he left it with 184 works. Sir Frederick's latest purchase is the 'Annunciation' by Fra Angelico, which we described at length on the 24th of March last, and his final official act was putting that admirable diptych in the hands of those trusted to effect what trivial repairs it required. It is understood in artistic circles that, should the new Director find his duties seriously interfere with his painting, he will not retain the post; but of this we are, of course, not in a position to speak positively. Still, looking at Mr. Poynter's pictures now in the Academy and the New Gallery, it would seem extremely improbable that he will, on any account, abandon the practice of art.

MESSERS. BRONER & TURNER exhibit, at 46, Pall Mall, Mr. G. D. Giles's picture called 'The Derby, 1893'; and Mr. J. Ichenhauser has on view at No. 68, New Bond Street, a collection of portraits of beautiful women and famous men.

The controversy regarding the removal of the casts of antique sculpture from the hall built for them at South Kensington, to make way for tapestries, is still raging. It is impossible to help feeling that Mr. Middleton has made a mistake in banishing these specimens of the masterpieces of Greek sculpture to the corridor. They cannot be seen to advantage in the crossing lights of the windows, and the windows themselves are too low for them; while the tapestries, on the other hand, do not need a lofty hall for their adequate exhibition, and even if they did, they cannot claim anything like the artistic importance of the casts. It is to be hoped this unfortunate step may be retraced, and the sculptures replaced in their old position.

M. DE MORGAN's excavations at the Pyramid at Dahshûr decidedly increase in interest as they proceed. A correspondent this week sends us the announcement of the opening of a tomb containing the mummy of a royal princess, Noub-Hotep, of the twelfth dynasty. This time the tomb had not been violated in antiquity. The mummy case and the box containing canopic vases are both plated in gold. Among the jewellery placed on the mummy are necklaces and ornaments in gold; the diadem is in silver. It bears the uræus and the vulture's head, both emblems of royalty.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—Mr. Manna's Benefit Concert.
QUEEN'S HALL.—Wagner Concert: Philharmonic Concerts.

APART from the well-deserved popularity of Mr. Manna, there were features of interest in the programme of his annual benefit concert last Saturday which should have induced amateurs to flock to Sydenham in larger numbers than were actually present. The first item was Dvorák's 'In der Natur,' the section of the so-called Triple Overture that had not previously been heard. It is a fresh and charming piece, and although suggestive of the sights and sounds of nature, Beethoven's 'Pastoral' Symphony is not in the slightest degree plagiarized. Another item new at the Crystal Palace was M. Saint-Saëns's curious, but highly effective Fantasia in a minor for pianoforte and orchestra, to which he has given the title of 'Africa.' It was played as the French composer's "exercice" when he took the honorary degree of Doctor in Music at Cambridge last year. The executant of the solo part on the present occasion was Miss Fanny Davies, who, of course, rendered it full justice. Beethoven's Symphony in A, No. 7; Schubert's 23rd Psalm for female voices, both beautifully performed; and Spohr's Dramatic Concerto for violin, played, of course, to perfection by Lady Halle, were included in an over-lengthy programme. The vocalists were Miss Marie Brema, Mr. Andrew Black, and Miss Rina Allerton, the last a young soprano who made a favourable impression in Beethoven's 'Ah! Perfido.'

The Wagner Concert last Saturday, under the direction of Mr. F. H. Cowen, was chiefly interesting on account of the performance of the third act of 'Lohengrin' in its entirety for the first time in London. This may appear a strange statement, but it is nevertheless true. Portions of the Bridal Duet and the orchestral movement, in which twelve trumpets should be employed, are usually omitted, and the splendid concerted music when the assemblage entreat Lohengrin not to leave them has never been heard in our theatres. Mr. Cowen merits congratulation on a singularly effective performance. Miss Ella Russell and Mr. Lloyd were both admirable in the leading parts, and useful service was rendered by Miss Winifred Ludlam as Ortrud and Mr. David Bispham as the King. The choir lacked refinement, but the orchestra was, on the whole, excellent. The items in the first part were the overtures to 'Rienzi' and 'Die Meistersinger,' the 'Siegfried Idyl,' and the 'Walkürenritt.' The only defect calling for mention in the interpretation of these pieces was a sense of tameness, passages needing intensity of expression being delivered in a cold and colourless manner. The 'Walkürenritt' went well, and was redemanded, but Mr. Cowen wisely declined to repeat it.

There is not very much to be said concerning the Philharmonic Concert on Wednesday, but the engagement of M. Paderewski of course resulted in an overflowing attendance. The favourite pianist played his piquant and delightful 'Polish' Fantasia, if possible, more brilliantly than ever, and after a tedious number of recalls granted Mendelssohn's 'Lied ohne Worte,' Adagio in F, No. 22, as an encore. The striking merits of Mr. Edward German's Norwich Symphony in A minor, No. 2, have been fully admitted on more than one occasion, and it will suffice to record a remarkably fine performance under the direction of Dr. MacKenzie. Mendelssohn's overture 'Meeresstille' and Beethoven's to 'Egmont' completed the instrumental selections. Mr. Oudin contributed songs by Tchaikowsky and César Franck with much effect.

Musical Society.

Gounod's charming little opera 'Philémon et Baucis' was performed at one of Sir Augustus Harris's afternoon entertainments at Drury Lane on Thursday last week, for the first time in London in the English language, an excellent version having been prepared some time since by Mr. Joseph Bennett. The representation was worthy of much praise, Madame Fanny Moody as Baucis, Mr. Charles Manners as Jupiter, and Mr. Bispham as Vulcan being especially artistic.

On Thursday afternoon this week Gluck's 'Orpheus' was given in English with Mlle. Olitzka in the titular part. The Polish mezzo-soprano displayed a voice compass of two and a half octaves, and she not only looked the character well, but acted with much grace and intelligence, the only weak point in her performance being the apparent inability to blend the vocal registers. This weakness was especially perceptible in Berton's florid air at the end of the first act, which might well be spared, as it is entirely out of character with Gluck's stately and graceful music. Mlle. Biancoli as Eurydice and Mlle. Pauline Joran as Eros were acceptable, but the general performance, alike in orchestra, chorus, and scenic arrangements, was open to amendment.

The performance of 'Elijah,' with which the Royal Choral Society concluded its labours for the season at the Albert Hall on Thursday last week, was singularly fine as regards Sir Joseph Barnby's choir, and Mr. Andrew Black's embodiment of the titular part was vocally and dramatically impressive. Mrs. Elene Eaton, Miss Clara Butt, Miss Jessie Hudleston, and Mr. Edward Lloyd also sang with the utmost effect.

SIGNOR SIMONETTI'S concert on the same evening, at St. James's Hall, was successful, but we have no space for a detailed notice. The Italian violinist displayed his refined style in his own melodious Piano and Violin Sonata in c minor (in which he received valuable assistance from Miss Fanny Davies), Dr. Mackenzie's 'Highland Ballad,' and other pieces. An excellent performance of Brahms's 'Gipsy Songs,' Op. 112, was given by Miss Louise Phillips, Miss Agnes Janson, Mr. W. Shakespeare, and Mr. David Bispham.

OPINIONS are by no means unanimous in favour of the scheme for the registration of qualified teachers of music. At the conference held on Thursday last week views in its favour were expressed, chiefly by letter, by Sir Arthur Sullivan, Sir Joseph Barnby, and Prof. Villiers Stanford; and against it by Sir George Grove and Dr. A. C. Mackenzie. The meeting, however, was overwhelmingly in favour of the legislation suggested. Whether the results would be commensurate with the expectations of those who have the movement in hand is a matter open to question, though, of course, the endeavour to exclude unqualified persons from a profession in which fraud and chicanery are extensively practised must command sympathy and encouragement.

THE widow of Sir George Elvey has prepared a record of his life for publication shortly through Messrs. Sampson Low & Co., tracing his career from a chorister at Canterbury Cathedral to the time of his leaving Windsor. The book contains, it is said, many personal reminiscences of the well-known organist. It has been dedicated, by permission, to the Duke of Cambridge, who was one of Sir George's pupils.

A DETAILED description of the imposing ceremony on Wednesday morning, when the Prince of Wales formally opened the new Royal College of Music, is, of course, not required in this place; but a word or two concerning the musical arrangements may fitly be given. Mr. Swinburne's 'Ode to Music' is a little vague in phraseology, but the music of Mr. Charles Wood, formerly "Morley Scholar" at the Royal College, shows much promise. It consists of three connected movements, a chorus for female voices, a soprano solo delicately and piquantly accompanied, and an impassioned full chorus. Wagner's Overture to 'Die Meistersinger' was excellently rendered by the students' orchestra under Prof. Villiers Stanford.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

- Mon. Mr. Lieblich's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
 — Highbury Philharmonic Society, 'The Martyr of Antioch,' &c., at Highbury Athenæum.
Tues. Signorina Todorova's Concert, 8, Prince's Hall.
 — Royal Amateur Orchestral Society's Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
 — 'Marriva,' 145, Fanny Lane Theatre.
 — Miss Frances Allinson's Concert, 2, Sunway Hall.
 — M. Papellier's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
 — Bach Choir's Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
 — Miss Edith Mackenzie and Mr. Arthur Appleby's Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
 — Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch's Concert, 8.45, "Downland," West Finchley.
Wed. Mr. George Aspinall's Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
 — M. Tivadar Barcz's Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
 — Westminster Orchestral Society's Concert, 8, Westminster Town Hall.
 — Miss Emily Blinnar's Chamber Concert, 8, Prince's Hall.
 — Eastern Choir's Concert, Max Bruch's 'The Lay of the Bell,' &c., at St. James's Hall.
Thurs. 'Chivalric Rhapsody,' &c., 145, Fanny Lane.
 — Mrs. C. A. Webster's Pianoforte Recital, 8, Queen's Hall.
 — Miss Keaney's Concert, 8, Prince's Hall.
 — Mr. Charles Fry's Recital, 8, Queen's Hall.
 — Messrs. Bosch and Cummings's Concert, 8.30, St. Martin's Town Hall.
Fri. Mr. Cecil Sharp's First Wagner Lecture, 8, Hampstead Convalescing Home.
Sat. More Josef Hofmann's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

ST. JAMES'S.—'The Masqueraders,' a Play in Four Acts. By Henry Arthur Jones.

WHAT further triumph is reserved for love? Have not writers of all ages celebrated his victories? and is there any existing province outside his empire? Vesta herself,

Kindling holy fires,
 Circled round about with spies,
 Never dreaming loose desires,
 Doting at the altar dice.

Mr. Jones has devised a triumph new in a sense for love, but anticipated—as what form of praise or consecration is not?—in some respects by previous writers. His hero wins by noble service the woman he loves. His all when he is poor he bids for a kiss which, in an exquisitely pretty scene, he gets; but he loses the prize on which his heart is set. His all when he is rich he stakes for her, and he wins. Palpitating with love, she makes surrender, and she quits on his arm the presence of her husband, who has gambled away her honour on a card, and subjected her to every form of indignity and outrage. He takes her to his own house and clasps her once more where none may intrude. Is there more he can do? Yes. He can settle on her his fortune, and go away to die, preserving thus her honour, and leaving her after his death a prey to a husband who so soon as he hears of her wealth will resume the rights which no human power can deny him. Here is the latest and most "fantastic triumph" of love enforced in a brilliant, paradoxical, delightful, and wholly unconvincing play. "People do not do such things," says Judge Brack in 'Hedda Gabler.' They do not indeed, nor should they. If there are beings of such high-souled purity, let them be canonized, not put on the stage.

Esseu lasciato da cotanto amante, and then withdraw to resume normal and honourable avocations, may be pious and commendable. For those capable of such heroism there is no place in the inferno of lovers. It happens that a poet not regarded as among the sensuous and libertine has dealt with this very state of affairs. Mr. Philip James Bailey, the author of 'Festus,' asks—the utterance is dramatic:—

Who ever passed on passion's fiery wheel?
 Or, trembling by the side of her he loved,
 Whose lightest touch brings all but madness, ever
 Stopped coldly short to reckon up his pulse?

This is practically what David Remon, the hero of 'The Masqueraders,' does. He is, it is true, a dreamer, a visionary, an astronomer. Looking at the stars, he falls into the ditch, and the only moral he supplies is one familiar in literature—that he who will win must not be denied. Something, too, of the old notions of physical chastity seems to underlie the whole. When a woman rhapsodizes, "He loves me! He loves me! He loves me and I'm not ashamed of it, and I don't care who knows it"; when she tells her husband that she loves another; when she accepts that lover's embrace, and, quitting her husband's roof and presence, goes out into the midnight, leaning upon the arm which has just clasped her in delirium, what rag of moral raiment is retained?

Putting aside this crowning defect, there is very much to be said for a powerful and brilliant play. Two scenes are there, each dangerous and difficult, and each faced and conquered. Mr. Jones's instinct is safe. When a kiss of the heroine is put up for auction some shock is experienced. Mr. Jones would, indeed, do well to make the ladies—the dowagers at least—leave the room. An insult is in the end converted into a compliment, the delicacy of the heroine is saved, and a man thenceforward to be regarded as a scoundrel behaves with chivalric courtesy. When a woman stands aside and watches two men playing for her possession and that of her child, the passions aroused are so deadly that we have not time to be scandalized and do not dare to scoff. The play, indeed, though it has dull passages and is not without blemishes, some of them sufficiently obvious, is absorbing. It is well written, moreover, and presents a picture—faithful in the main, and highly diverting—of contemporary manners. It is acted with admirable ensemble, and supplies many thoroughly lifelike pictures. The three principal characters are finely played, though Mrs. Patrick Campbell as the heroine should take more pains to be audible. Here is a very trying part, since during two acts she is always on the stage and has scarcely anything to say. Mr. Herbert Waring's husband is an excellent impersonation, and Mr. Alexander as the hero produces an electrical effect upon the audience.

Dramatic Gossip.

'AS YOU LIKE IT' was revived on Monday at Daly's Theatre, Miss Ada Rehan repeating her vivacious and imaginative performance of Rosalind. This impersonation has lost nothing of its fragrance. The cast, which included Mr. William Farren as Adam, was competent, and the entertainment rendered the concluding week of Mr. Daly's season as brilliant and prosperous as any by which it has been preceded.

ARRANGEMENTS for the production at the Court of Mr. Clement Scott's adaptation of 'Denise' have fallen through, and the theatre will pass into the hands of Mr. Brandon Thomas, whose first production will consist of his own comedy, 'Marriage,' which originally saw the light at an afternoon representation at the same house a couple of years ago.

MISS FORTESCUE has played during the week at the Grand Theatre, Islington, in Mr. Stuart Ogilvie's adaptation of 'Hypatia.'

MR. BEEBOHM TREE will, it is announced, visit America at the beginning of next year, and will play a ten weeks' engagement in Hamlet, Falstaff, and the hero of 'A Bunch of Violets,' returning to England for Easter.

AN adaptation, in five acts, of Mrs. Alexander's novel 'Her Dearest Foe' was given for a charitable purpose on Wednesday afternoon at the Criterion. Miss Henrietta Landley, by whom it was made, took part in the representation. The play is not without merit, and the interpretation was commendable.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—J. G.—B. E. B.—J. F.—J. A. L.—B. C.—E. J.—E. D.—received.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION BY POST.

To all parts of the United Kingdom.

For Twelve Months...	15 0
For Six Months...	7 6

For all Countries within the Postal Union.

For Twelve Months...	15 0
For Six Months...	7 6

CHAPMAN & HALL'S PUBLICATIONS.

THE FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW. MAY.

WOMAN and LABOUR. By Professor Karl Pearson.
 The ORIGIN of CULTIVATION. By Grant Allen.
 The MINES (NIGHT HOURS) BILL. By D. A. Thomas, M.P.
 SOME RECENT PLAYS. By William Archer.
 The PROBLEM of CONSTANTINOPLE. By Frederic Harrison.
 The ROYAL PATRIOTIC FUND. By Hudson M. Kearley, M.P.
 The APPRECIATION of GOLD. By Robert Barclay (Director of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce).
 L'IMPÉRIUM BONTÉ. By Ouida.
 The STAMP-COLLECTING CRAZE. By W. Roberts.
 CYCLING and CYCLES. By Cresson.
 ENGLISH and FRENCH MANNERS. By Frederic Carrel.
 A SOCIALIST in a CORNER. By W. H. Mallock.

LORD WOLVERTON.

FIVE MONTHS' SPORT in SOMALILAND.

By Lord WOLVERTON. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo.

REV. H. N. HUTCHINSON, F.G.S.

CREATURES of OTHER DAYS. By Rev. H. N.

HUTCHINSON, F.G.S., Author of 'Extinct Monsters.' With Illustrations by J. Smit. Large crown 8vo. 14s. [This day.]

BULA N'ZAU.

TRAVEL and ADVENTURE in the CONGO

FREE STATE and its BIG-GAME SHOOTING. By BULA N'ZAU. With Illustrations from the Author's Sketches. Demy 8vo. 14s. [Next week.]

W. S. LILLY.

The CLAIMS of CHRISTIANITY. By W. S. LILLY. Demy 8vo. [In May.]

JOHN FISKE.

LIFE and LETTERS of EDWARD LIVINGSTON

YOUNG. Comprising Correspondence with Spencer, Huxley, Tyndall, and others. By JOHN FISKE. Crown 8vo. 8s. [Next week.]

HERBERT SPENCER.

APHORISMS from the WRITINGS of HERBERT

SPENCER. Selected by JULIA RAYMOND GINGELL. With Portrait of Herbert Spencer. Crown 8vo. 3s. [New Edition nearly ready.]

CHARLES DIXON.

The NESTS and EGGS of BRITISH BIRDS:

When and Where to Find Them. Being a Handbook to the Oology of the British Islands. An Enlarged Edition, with Coloured Plates. [Nearly ready.]

NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

COLONEL HARCOURT.

FOR LOVE AND LIBERTY:

A Tale of the Sixteenth Century in Spain.

By COLONEL HARCOURT.

3 vols. crown 8vo.

[This day.]

BESSIE HATTON.

ENID LYLE.

By BESSIE HATTON.

3 vols. crown 8vo.

H. C. CHATFIELD-TAYLOR.

AN AMERICAN PEERESS.

By H. C. CHATFIELD-TAYLOR.

3 vols. crown 8vo.

MAURUS JOKAI.

'MIDST THE WILD CARPATHIANS.

By MAURUS JOKAI.

Translated by R. NISBET BAIN.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

[In a few days.]

FRANCES MINTO ELLIOT.

OLD COURT LIFE in SPAIN. By FRANCES MINTO

ELLIOT, Author of 'Old Court Life in France,' 'Diary of an Idle Woman in Italy,' &c. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 24s.

MAJOR ARTHUR GRIFFITHS.

SECRETS of the PRISON-HOUSE; or, Gaol Studies and Sketches. By Major ARTHUR GRIFFITHS, H.M. Inspector of Prisons, Author of 'Chronicles of Newgate,' 'Memorials of Millbank,' &c. Illustrations by George D. Rowlandson. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 30s.

FREDERICK BOYLE.

ABOUT ORCHIDS. A Chat. By FREDERICK BOYLE.

With 8 Coloured Illustrations, reduced from the superb Drawings by Mr. Moon. Large crown 8vo. 8s.

PRINCE HENRI D'ORLÉANS.

AROUND TONKIN and SIAM. By Prince HENRI

D'ORLÉANS. Translated by C. B. PITMAN. With 28 Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 14s.

HON. MRS. GREVILLE-NUGENT.

A LAND of MOSQUES and MARABOUTS. By the Hon. Mrs. GREVILLE-NUGENT. Illustrated. Demy 8vo. 14s.

PROF. JOHN WRIGHTSON, M.R.A.C. F.C.S., &c.

PRINCIPLES of AGRICULTURAL PRACTICE

as an INSTRUCTIONAL SUBJECT. By Prof. JOHN WRIGHTSON, M.R.A.C. F.C.S., &c. With Geological Map. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 5s.

PROF. JOHN WRIGHTSON, M.R.A.C. F.C.S., &c.

FALLOW and FODDER CROPS. By Prof. JOHN

WRIGHTSON, M.R.A.C. F.C.S., &c. Crown 8vo. 5s.

PROFESSOR JOSEPH LE CONTE.

EVOLUTION: its Nature, its Evidences, and its Relations to Religious Thought. By Professor JOSEPH LE CONTE. A New and Revised Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

FRANK G. JACKSON.

THEORY and PRACTICE of DESIGN. By FRANK

G. JACKSON, Author of 'Decorative Design.' With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. [In the press.]

F. G. JACKSON.

DECORATIVE DESIGN. An Elementary Text-

Book of Principles and Practice. By F. G. JACKSON. Fully illustrated. Large crown 8vo. [Third Edition next week.]

EDWARD R. TAYLOR.

ELEMENTARY ART TEACHING. By EDWARD

R. TAYLOR, Head Master of Birmingham Municipal School of Art. With over 600 Diagrams and Examples. Second Edition. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

J. WARD AND G. AITCHISON.

PRINCIPLES of ORNAMENT. By JAMES WARD.

Edited by G. AITCHISON, A.R.A. Fully illustrated. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

JAMES WARD.

ELEMENTARY PRINCIPLES of ORNAMENT.

By JAMES WARD, Head Master of the Macclesfield School of Art. 8vo. 5s.

WILFRID J. LINEHAM.

A TEXT-BOOK of MECHANICAL ENGINEER-

ING. By WILFRID J. LINEHAM, Head of the Engineering Department at the Goldsmiths' Company's Institute, New Cross; Member of the Institute of Mechanical Engineers, &c. Fully illustrated. [In the press.]

CHAPMAN & HALL, LIMITED, London.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S
NEW BOOKS.

DANTE G. ROSSETTI

AND THE

PRE-RAPHAELITE MOVEMENT

Viewed in Relation to the Problems, Tendencies, and Purposes of Modern English Art.

By Mrs. J. W. WOOD.

With 8 Photogravure Reproductions of Rossetti's Paintings.
8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.

"Regarded as an appreciation of the wider significance of the Pre-Raphaelite movement, and a critical account of Rossetti's art and poetry, her book is a fresh and luminous contribution to the literature of the subject. The photogravures of Rossetti's pictures in themselves make the book one to be coveted by all who are interested in art."—Times.

"The best book yet written on Rossetti and the Pre-Raphaelites."—Daily News.

"A notable feature of the book is its wealth of illustration in the shape of reproductions (in tint) of Rossetti masterpieces."—Globe.

The book contains some unpublished reminiscences of Rossetti's student days and career in art, and describes the Founding of the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood and its long conflict with academic traditions.

AMONG THE MOORS.

Sketches of Oriental Life.

By G. MONTBARD,
Author of 'In Egypt,' &c.

Superbly Illustrated. Royal 8vo. cloth, 16s.

LARGE-PAPER EDITION, strictly limited to 100 Copies, each numbered and signed by the Author, printed on Japanese Vellum, THREE GUINEAS each, net.

"What he saw in Morocco gave rich material in the way of incident and colouring both for pencil and pen."—Times.

"A series of infinitely more vivid and brilliant pictures of Morocco than are to be found in other and solid works on that dilapidated and crumbling bulwark of Islam."—Northmen.

The TRAGEDY of FAUSTUS by GOETHE. Translated in Original Rhyme and Metres by ALFRED H. HUTCH. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

SARAH: a Survival.

By SYDNEY CHRISTIAN,
Author of 'Lydia.'

2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, 21s.

THE STORY OF MY TWO WIVES.

By ONE OF THEIR HUSBANDS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

NOW READY, price One Shilling.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE, MAY NUMBER.

Contents.

A CORNER in a MARKET. Painted by James Houston. Philip Gathers. Illustration. (Frontispiece.)

SOME EPISODES of MOUNTAIN-CLIMBING, by a CASUAL AMATEUR. Edwin Lord Weeks. Illustrations by the Author.

JOHN MARSH, SOUTHERNER. Chaps. 20-24. George W. Cooke. (Began in January Number—to be continued.)

THE PROVINCIALS. Sketches of American Types. Octave Thanet. Illustrated.

A POUND of CURE, a Story of Monte Carlo. Chaps. 4 & 5. William Henry Bishop. (To be concluded in June.)

THE AMERICAN CONGO. John O. Reardon. Captain U.S.A. Illustrations from Drawings made in the Rio Congo region by Gilbert Gail. WOMANLINESS as a PROFESSION. Alice Corcoran.

AFROOT. Charles G. D. Roberts.

A NEW PORTRAIT of FRANKLIN. Paul Langester Ford. Illustration from a recently discovered terra-cotta medallion.

WORKING-GIRLS CLUBS. Clara Whitney Davidson. Illustrated.

THAT GOOD MAY COME. Edith Wharton.

TWO SONNETS: A Talking Man—To One who Sleeps. Edith M. Thomas.

CLIMBING for WHITE GOATS. George Bird Grinnell. Illustrated.

THE ETHICS of DEMOCRACY—LIBERTY. P. J. Simmons.

THE POINT of VIEW.

London:

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD.,
51, Dancaster's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & CO., LTD.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES.

A COSTLY FREAK. A New Novel. By MAXWELL GRAY, Author of 'The Silence of Dean Maitland,' &c. With Frontispiece by Everard Hopkins. Crown 8vo. 6s.

MR. LEWIS MORRIS'S NEW VOLUME.

SONGS WITHOUT NOTES. By LEWIS MORRIS, Author of 'The Epic of Hades,' &c. Fcap. 8vo. 5s.

"We cannot refuse to admire his healthy optimism, his glowing faith, and his attempts to idealize the more sordid aspects of modern life."—Times.

"At a Country Wedding' is an agreeable example of the chastened expression of his lyric verse. It is a pretty epithalamium, and decidedly unconventional. Charming also is 'The Voice of Spring,' with its refrain-like close."—Saturday Review.

"Readers of the most varied tastes will each find in this book a pleasure of his own. It will be welcome to lovers of poetry wherever English is read."—Scotsman.

DAVID GARRICK: a Biography. By JOSEPH KNIGHT. With Etched Portrait by W. Boucher, from a Painting by Gainsborough (never before engraved) in the possession of Mrs. Kay. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d. net.

A few Large-Paper Copies, printed on Hand-made Paper, price 31s. net.

INTRODUCTION to the STUDY of the NEW TESTAMENT. Critical, Exegetical, and Theological. By the Rev. S. DAVIDSON, D.D. LL.D. New Edition, thoroughly Revised and Enlarged. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 30s.

PREBENDARY EYTON'S NEW SERMONS.

The TEN COMMANDMENTS: Sermons Preached at Holy Trinity, Chelsea. By the Rev. ROBERT EYTON, Rector of Upper Chelsea. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"Full of that well-known preacher's spiritual insight and practical capacity."—Times.

A LIFE of ARCHBISHOP LAUD. By a Romish Recusant. With Portrait from a rare Engraving prefixed to 'The Recantation of the Prelate of Canterbury,' 1641. Demy 8vo. 16s.

"A vast mass of material, which may well be of service to historical students of Laud and his times."—Times.

"Always readable and not seldom decidedly amusing.....We confess to a pleased astonishment that a 'Romish Recusant' has been able to take such a view of such a man."—Saturday Review.

"A deeply interesting book."—Church Times.

IMMEDIATELY.

The FIRST DIVORCE of HENRY VIII. as TOLD in the STATE PAPERS. By Mrs. HOPE, Author of 'The Early Martyrs,' 'Life of St. Thomas of Canterbury,' 'The Conversion of the Teutonic Races,' &c. Edited, with Notes and Introduction, by FRANCIS AIDAN GASQUET, D.D. O.S.B. Crown 8vo. 6s.

TRUBNER'S ORIENTAL SERIES.

NEW VOLUME.

LAYS of ANCIENT INDIA. Selections from Indian Poetry, rendered into English Verse by ROMESH CHUNDER DUTT, C.I.E. 8vo. 7s. 6d.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

HISTORY of CIVILIZATION in ANCIENT INDIA based on SANSKRIT LITERATURE. With Maps. By ROMESH CHUNDER DUTT, C.I.E. Revised Edition. 2 vols. 21s.

SHORTLY.

The ELECT LADY. By GEORGE MAC DONALD. New and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

CRITICAL SKETCHES. By A. E. STREET. Crown 8vo. 5s.

Contents:—Rousseau's Theory of Education—The Education of Gargantua—The Poetry of the Sea—Westminster Abbey—William Hazlitt—Dickens and Daudet—Diderot as Art Critic—The Realities of War (Tolstoi and Verestchagin)—The Realities of War (M. Zola)—"Originality in Art": a Letter to a Student in Architecture.

DOVE SONO: a Volume of Poems. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

SECOND EDITION, REVISED AND ENLARGED.

MODERN CREMATION: its History and Practice. With Information relating to the recently improved arrangements made by the Cremation Society of England. By Sir H. THOMPSON, F.R.C.S., President of the Society. Crown 8vo. 2s. Cheap Edition, 1s.

The MICROCOSM and the MACROCOSM. An Essay in Philosophy. By HOLTON WALLER, A.B. Crown 8vo. 2s.

GROWING CHILDREN and AWKWARD WALKING. By THOMAS WILLIAM NUNN, F.R.C.S., Consulting Surgeon to the Middlesex Hospital. Crown 8vo. 2s.

PATERNOSTER HOUSE, CHARING CROSS-ROAD.

CHRISTCHURCH CATHEDRAL, DUBLIN.—
Exterior View, and other Illustrations. Large Ground-plan and Descriptive Article.
The SHIELDS of May 5 contains above, being No. 2 of the IRISH
CATHEDRAL SERIES.
Price 4d. (post free).

ST. PATRICK'S, DUBLIN, appeared in April, and KILKENNY will follow in June.
Publisher of the Builder, 48, Catherine-street, London.

RADLEY SCHOOL CHAPEL.—For Interior
View see the BUILDER of May 5. Post free, 4d.
Publisher of the Builder, 48, Catherine-street, London.

NEW BOOKS ON PALESTINE.

A MOUND OF MANY CITIES; or, Tell el Hesi
Excavated. By F. J. WILSON, M.A. With 200 Illustrations. Crown
8vo. 6s.

Second and Revised Edition.
The TELL AMARNA TABLETS. Translated from the Cuneiform Characters by Major C. R. CONNELL, D.C.L., &c.
Crown 8vo. 6s.

INDEX to the QUARTERLY STATEMENTS.
1890-1892. Crown 8vo. paper covers, 2s.; cloth, 3s.
Published for the Palestine Exploration Fund by A. P. WATT & SON,
London.

TO ENGLISH AUTHORS DESIRING TO OBTAIN AN AMERICAN COPYRIGHT.

Messrs. GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS will be glad through their New York Branch to Copyright in the United States of America any Magazine Article or Novel, or other form of Literary Composition, for English Authors, and in many cases to undertake the publication of them in the United States.

London: BROADWAY, LUDGATE-HILL, E.C.

WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS' PUBLICATIONS.

PROFESSOR PFLEIDERER'S GIFFORD LECTURES.

THIS DAY IS PUBLISHED,

PHILOSOPHY AND DEVELOPMENT OF RELIGION.

BEING THE EDINBURGH GIFFORD LECTURES FOR 1894.

By OTTO PFLEIDERER, D.D.,

Professor of Theology, University of Berlin.

3 vols. post 8vo. 15s. net.

NEW NOVELS.

AT ALL LIBRARIES. RED CAP AND BLUE JACKET.

By GEORGE DUNN.

In 3 vols. crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS. THE RICH MISS RIDDELL.

By DOROTHEA GERRARD.

Author of 'Lady Baby,' 'Reeba,' &c.; Joint Author of 'Routa,' 'The Waters of Hercules,' &c.
Crown 8vo. 6s.

NEW BOOK BY THE AUTHOR OF 'SHIPS THAT PASS IN THE NIGHT.' IN VARYING MOODS.

SHORT STORIES.

By BEATRICE HARRADEN.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

THE STORY OF MARGREDEL.

BEING A FIRESIDE HISTORY OF A
FIFTHIRTY FAMILY.

By D. STORRAR MELDRUM.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

"A tale of passion and retribution....Told with brevity, force, and refinement."—British Weekly
"Like a bit of life thrown on a canvas by a sure and sympathetic artist."—Today
"A remarkable performance."—Bookman.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

THE ZOROASTRIAN GATHAS, with the Zend, Pahlavi, Sanskrit, and Pehlevi Texts. Translations (Literal and Free), and extended Commentary, now complete in 804 pages, large 8vo. By L. H. MILLS, D.D. To be had of F. A. Brockhaus, in Leipzig, or of Booksellers in Oxford. Price 5s.

Advertisement. April 18th, 1894.—"Mr. Mills is at present considered the best authority on the true interpretation of the ancient Gathas."
Göttingische gelehrte Anzeigen, May 12th, 1893.—"Unter Berücksichtigung der Gathas mächtig gefördert."—das Evangelische evangelische Arbeits- und mangelvollständiger Art.—Prof. J. J. G.

Review Critique, Sept. 15th, 1893.—"Tous ceux qui s'occupent de l'interprétation des Gathas rendront hommage à l'immense labeur scientifique de M. Mills....Indispensable pour l'étude."—Prof. D. N. S. S.

Rs. 6d. post free.

ON FISTULA; and its Radical Cure by Medicines. By J. COMPTON BURNETT, M.D.

London: James Nisbet & Co. Limited, 48, Threadneedle-street, and 170, Piccadilly.

Now ready, price 1s. 6d.

TALES and SKETCHES of MODERN GREECE.

By NEIL WYNN WILLIAMS.

London: D. Nutt, 370, Strand, W.C.

Redford: Redford Publishing Company, High-street.

Vol. II. No. 2, MAY, price 1s.

THE FREE REVIEW.

A Monthly Magazine.

Contents.

PROFESSOR ROBERTSON SMITH: a Problem. By Robertson.
The SHADOW of the TUDOR LEGEND. By S. Barker Booth.
The CRY of the CUBANAS. By C. N. Barker.
The UNFULFILLING of PROFIT-SHARING. By Leopold Kautsky.
MARRIAGE in EAST LONDON. By W. F. Dunton.
MORAL LUNACY. By A. L. Lee.
"INTIMATIONS of IMMORTALITY." By W. Knott Johnson.
The RIGHT to LABOUR. By J. T. Blanchard.
The FUTURE of CHRISTIANITY in INDIA. By a Native of India.
The MORALITY of a PEOPLE. By Arthur Lynch.
London: Swan Sonnenschein & Co. Paternoster-square, E.C.

ON NEURASTHENIA (Brain and Nerve Exhaustion, Weakness and Fatigue) and the NEURASTHENIAS of INFLUENZA. By T. STRETCH DOWSE, M.D. 2s. 6d.
Publishers, Tyndal & Cox, King William-street, Strand.

High Edition new ready, thoroughly Revised and much enlarged,
2 vols. super-royal 8vo. 250 pages, cloth gilt extra, price 21s.

BURKE'S LANDED GENTRY.

London: Harrison & Sons, 50, Pall Mall, S.W.; and all Booksellers.

The ANGLO-AMERICAN LIBRARY of FICTION.

Ready NEXT TUESDAY,

MRS. AMELIA E. BARR'S NEW NOVEL.

Crown 8vo. 280 pp., paper cover, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

GIRLS OF A FEATHER.

A Story of New York Society Life.

By Mrs. AMELIA E. BARR.

London: James Henderson, Red Lion House, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C. New York: Robert Bonner's Sons.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. with 2 Portraits, 24s.

JOHN FRANCIS AND THE 'ATHENÆUM.' A LITERARY CHRONICLE OF HALF A CENTURY.

By JOHN C. FRANCIS.

"A fascinating page of literary history."

Illustrated London News.

"Our survey has been unavoidably confined almost exclusively to the first volume; indeed, anything like an adequate account of the book is impossible, for it may be described as a history in notes of the literature of the period with which it deals. We confess that we have been able to find very few pages altogether barren of interest, and by far the larger portion of the book will be found irresistibly attractive by all who care anything for the history of literature in our own time."

Manchester Examiner.

"No memoir of Mr. Francis would be complete without a corresponding history of the journal with which his name will for ever be identified.....The extraordinary variety of subjects and persons referred to, embracing as they do every event in literature, and referring to every person of distinction in science or letters, is a record of such magnitude that we can only indicate its outlines. To the literary historian the volumes will be of incalculable service."

Bookseller.

"This literary chronicle of half a century must at once, or in course of a short time, take a place as a permanent work of reference."

Publishers' Circular.

"We have put before us a valuable collection of materials for the future history of the Victorian era of English literature."—Standard.

"A worthy monument of the development of literature during the last fifty years.....The volumes contain not a little specially interesting to Scotsmen."—Scotsman.

"Rich in literary and social interest, and afford a comprehensive survey of the intellectual progress of the nation."—Leeds Mercury.

"The thought of compiling these volumes was a happy one, and it has been ably carried out by Mr.
John C. Francis, the son of the veteran publisher."

Literary World.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street, W.,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

"LEARNED, CHATTY, USEFUL."—Athenæum.

"THAT DELIGHTFUL REPOSITORY OF FORGOTTEN LORE, 'NOTES AND QUERIES.'"

Edinburgh Review, October, 1880.

Every Saturday, of any Bookseller or Newsagent in England, price 4d.; or free by post to the Continent, 4½d.

NOTES AND QUERIES:

A MEDIUM OF INTERCOMMUNICATION FOR LITERARY MEN AND GENERAL READERS.

* * Subscription, 10s. 3d. for Six Months; 20s. 6d. for Twelve Months, including postage.

The Sixth Series of NOTES AND QUERIES, complete in 12 vols. price 10s. 6d. each Volume, contains, in addition to a great variety of similar Notes and Replies, Articles of Interest on the following Subjects:—

ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTTISH HISTORY.

The Plagues of 1605 and 1625—Wolves in England—Prices in the Middle Ages—Executions of 1745—The "Meal Tub Plot"—Episcopacy in Scotland—English Roman Catholic Martyrs—Hereward the Wake—Hiding-Places of Charles II.—Where did Edward II. die?—Battle between Armies of Suetonius and Boadicea—William III. at the Battle of the Boyne—"The Green Bag"—Confidential Letters to James II. about Ireland—Anne Boleyn's Heart—Hubert de Burgh—Henry Martin the Regicide—Lord Hussey and the Lincolnshire Rebellion.

BIOGRAPHY.

Luis de Camoens—Thomas Bell—Cromwell—William Penn—Nell Gwynne—Coleridge—Curll the Bookseller—Sir John Cheke—Gibson, Bishop of London—Thorpe the Architect—Sir Richard Whittington—Charles Wolfe.

BIBLIOGRAPHY and LITERARY HISTORY.

Shakspeariana—Chap-Book Notes—"Adeste Fideles"—"The Land of the Leal"—John Gilpin—Reynard the Fox—"Lead kindly Light"—Rabelais—London Publishers of 18th Century—The Welsh Testament—The Libraries of Balliol, All Souls, Brasenose, and Queen's Colleges, Oxford—Key to 'Endymion'—Early Roman Catholic Magazines—Stuart Literature—The Libraries of Eton, and Trinity College, Cambridge—"Dame Europa"—Bibliography—Unpublished Letters of Dr. Johnson—"Rock of Ages"—Eikon Basilike Deutera—William of Tyre—Bibliography of Skating—"The Book"—Notes on the 'Religio Medici'—Authorship of the 'Imitatio'—Tristram Shandy—Critical Notes of Charles Lamb.

POPULAR ANTIQUITIES and FOLK-LORE.

Slavonic Mythology—Folk-lore of Leprosy—Lycanthropy—North Italian Folk-lore—Friday unlucky for Marriage—West Indian Superstitions—"Milky Way"—Folk-lore of Birds—Feather Superstition—Medical and Funeral Folk-lore.

POETRY, BALLADS, and DRAMA.

The Drama in Ireland—"Tom Jones" on the French Stage—"Auld Robin Gray"—Harpings of Lena—MS. of Gray's "Elegy"—The "Mystery" of S. Pantaleon—Rogers's "Pleasures of Memory"—"Blue bonnets over the Border"—Swift's Verses on his own Death—Tennyson's "Palace of Art"—Ballad of "William and Margaret"—The Australian Drama—Poem by J. M. Neale—Shelley's "Ode to Mont Blanc"—Hymns by Chas. Wesley—"Cross Purposes"—Tennyson's "Dream of Fair Women"—"Logie o' Buchan."

POPULAR and PROVERBIAL SAYINGS.

"To rule the roast"—"Licked into shape"—"Boosh"—Joining the majority—Up to snuff—"To the bitter end"—Conspicuous by his absence—Play old Gooseberry—"The grey mare is the better horse"—Bred and born—Drunk as David's sow—Cut off with a shilling—Tin=money—Getting into a scrape.

PHILOLOGY.

Tennis—Puzzle—Rickets—American Spelling—Snob—Jolly—Boycotting—Argosy—Jennet—Bedford—Maiden in Place-names—Deck of Cards—Masher—Belfry—Brag—Bulrush—Tram—Hearse—Whittling—Beef-eater—Boom—At bay.

GENEALOGY and HERALDRY.

The Arms of the Popes—Courtesy Titles—Rolls of Arms—Book-plates—Earldom of Mar—Arms of the See of York—Fitzshardinges of Berkeley—Heraldic Differences—Barony of Valoines—Colonial Arms—Earldom of Ormonde—The Violet in Heraldry—Arms of Vasco da Gama—Seal of the Templars—Earldom of Suffolk.

FINE ARTS.

Hogarth's only Landscape—The 'Hours' of Raphael—Rubens's 'Daniel and the Lions'—Early Gillrays—Reizach's Outlines—Portraits of Byron—Velasquez and his Works—Tassie's Medallions—Copley's 'Attack on Jersey.'

ECCLÉSIASTICAL MATTER.

The Revised Version—Pulpits—The Episcopal Wig—Vestments—Temporal Power of Bishops—Easter Sepulchres—Canonization—The Basilican Rite—The Scottish Office—Tulchan Bishops—Seventeenth Century "Indulgence"—The "Month's Mind"—Clergy hunting in Scarlet—The Irish Hierarchy—Libraries in Churches—Lambeth Degrees—Fifteenth Century Road-screens—Franciscans in Scotland—Bishops of Dunkeld—Prayer-Book Rule for Easter—Fur Tippets—The Church in the Channel Isles—Metrical Psalms—Order of Administration.

CLASSICAL SUBJECTS.

'Pomii Satira'—Roman Arithmetic—The Alastor of Augustus—"Acervus Mercurii"—"Vaseus" in Georgics iii. 175—Oppian—Juvenal's Satire ii.—Transliteration of Iliad i.—Aristophanes' 'Rane'—Simplicius on Epictetus—Tablet of Cebes—Imitative Verse—"Felix quem facit," &c.

TOPOGRAPHY.

Grub-street—Porta del Popolo—"Turk's Head" Bagnio—The Old Corner of St. Paul's Cathedral—Thames Embankments—Statue in Brasenose Quadrangle—Middle Temple Lane—Ormond-street Chapel—Roman Villa at Sandown—Aashburnham House—Carow Castle—Rushton Hall, Westenhough—Welton House.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Christian Names—Election Colours—Buried Alive—O. K.—Ladies' Clubs—Zoedone—Berkeley-square Mystery—Wife Selling—The Telephone—Scrutin de Liste—Crocodile's Tears—Jingo—The Gipsies—Hell-Fire Club—Tarots—Tobacco in England—Sea Sickness unknown to the Ancients—Names of American States—Carucate—Female Soldiers and Sailors—Mistletoe—Giants—Jewesses and Wigs—Memories of Trafalgar—Green Eyes—Beaumontague—Secret Chambers in Ancient Houses—The Bonaparte-Patterson Marriage—Ace of Spades—Wig Curriers—Female Churchwardens—The Opal—House of Keys—Church Registers—Arm-in-arm—E. O.—Napoleon's Legacy to Cantillon.

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, London, E.C.

LONDON LIBRARY, ST. JAMES'-SQUARE, S.W.

President—LESLIE STEPHEN, Esq.

Vice-Presidents—The Right Hon. W. R. GLADSTONE, M.P., The Very Rev. the DEAN of LLANDAFF, Sir R. H. BUNBURY, Bart., Sir HENRY BARKLY, K.C.B.

Trustees—Rt. Hon. Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart., M.P., Rt. Hon. EARL of ROSEBURY, Rt. Hon. Sir M. GRANT DUFF, Committee—Rev. Canon ALGER, E. A. BOND, Esq., J. H. BRIDGES, Esq., Sir F. W. BURTON, R. COPELY CHRISTIE, Esq.,
Austin DOBSON, Esq., Sydney GEDGE, Esq., Edmund GOSSE, Esq., Frederic HARRISON, Esq., Prof. HUXLEY, F.R.S.,
Sir C. M. KENNEDY, O.B.E., K.C.M.G., D. C. LATHBURY, Esq., W. H. K. LECKY, Esq., Rev. Stanley LEATHES, D.D., Sidney
LEE, Esq., W. S. LILLY, Esq., Frank T. MARSDALE, Esq., St. George MIVART, Esq., Prof. Henry MORLEY, W. MUNK, Esq., M.D., Sir F. POLLOCK, Bart., Rev. Dr. RIGG, Herbert SPENCER, Esq., H. R. TEDDER, Esq.

The Library contains 130,000 Volumes of Ancient and Modern Literature, in Various Languages.
Subscription, 8l. a year; Life Membership, according to age. Fifteen Volumes are allowed to Country, and Ten to Town Members. Reading-Room Open from Ten to Half-past Six. CATALOGUE, FIFTH EDITION, 2 vols. royal 8vo. price 31s.; to Members, 16s.

C. T. HAGBERG WRIGHT, Secretary and Librarian.

PART I. now ready, price 4s. net.

A NEW SYRIAC LEXICON.

By Dr. C. BROCKELMANN, Breslau.

With a Preface by Professor T. NOELDEKE.

NOTE.—The Parts will be issued in steady succession, and it is hoped that the publication will be completed, in about 800 pages, early next year. The price (in Parts) will not exceed 2l. A detailed Prospectus, with Specimen Page, will be sent by the Publishers free on application.

Edinburgh: T. & T. CLARK, 38, George-street.

London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, HAMILTON, KENT & Co. Limited.

ROUTLEDGE'S HEARTH AND HOME LIBRARY.

100 VOLUMES NOW READY.

Total Sale since January, 1894, 200,000.

Well printed on good paper, and strongly bound in cloth, bevelled boards, with gilt tops.

The following will be published on May 7th, 1894:—

- | | |
|---|--|
| 76. PETER SIMPLE. CAPTAIN MARRYAT. | 88. COLERIDGE'S POETICAL WORKS. |
| 77. The TOWER of LONDON. W. H. AINSWORTH. | 89. A SILENT WITNESS. EDMUND YATES. |
| 78. VIDOCQ, the FRENCH POLICE SPY. | 90. WORDSWORTH'S POETICAL WORKS. |
| 79. The KING'S OWN. CAPTAIN MARRYAT. | 91. The HISTORY of the JEWS. DEAN MILMAN. |
| 80. Mr. MIDSHIPMAN KASY. CAPTAIN MARRYAT. | 92. MY BROTHER'S WIFE. AMELIA B. EDWARDS. |
| 81. NOTRE DAME. VICTOR HUGO. | 93. LOYAL. A Novel. |
| 82. SYLVESTER SOUND. HENRY COCKTON. | 94. GOLDSMITH'S COMPLETE WORKS. |
| 83. SETTLERS in CANADA. CAPTAIN MARRYAT. | 95. HARRY COVERDALE'S COURTSHIP. FRANK E. SMEDLEY. |
| 84. LIFE of LORD NELSON. ROBERT SOUTHBY. | 96. RUNNING the GAUNTLET. EDMUND YATES. |
| 85. MOORE'S POETICAL WORKS. | 97. FOGGERTY'S FAIRY. W. S. GILBERT. |
| 86. GRIMM'S HOUSEHOLD STORIES. | 98. CAMPBELL'S POETICAL WORKS. |
| 87. ANDERSEN'S HOUSEHOLD STORIES. | 99. HOLMES'S POETICAL WORKS. |
| | 100. MRS. HEMANS'S POETICAL WORKS. |

A List of the Series and Prices to the Trade will be sent on application to GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, LIMITED, Broadway, Ludgate-hill, London.

LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE.

PURCHASERS SHOULD SEE THAT EVERY BOTTLE OF THE ORIGINAL

WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE

BEARS THE SIGNATURE

LEA & PERRINS.

SOLD WHOLESALE BY THE PROPRIETORS, WORCESTER
CROSSE & BLACKWELL, LTD., LONDON.
RETAIL EVERYWHERE.

DAVID NUTT, 270-271, STRAND.

LATEST PUBLICATIONS
AT BOOKSELLERS' AND LIBRARIES.

BIOLOGICAL LECTURES and ADDRESSES by the late ARTHUR MILNER
MARSHALL, Professor of Zoology in Owens
College. Edited by C. F. MARSHALL, M.D.
Crown 8vo. upwards of 400 pages, cloth, uncut,
6s.

OLD CELTIC ROMANCES.
Translated from the Gaelic by P. W. JOYCE,
LL.D. Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged.
Crown 8vo. xx—444 pp., cloth, 3s. 6d.

* Both of these Works are published in the United States by Messrs. MACMILLAN & Co., New York.

WELSH FAIRY TALES, and other Stories. Collected and Edited by P. H.
EMERSON. Crown 8vo. 87 pp., boards, 2s.

The TRADITIONAL GAMES of ENGLAND, SCOTLAND, and IRELAND.
Collected and Annotated by ALICE BERTHA GOMME. Vol. I. (ACROBATIC—NUTS in MAY), xx—433 pp., demy 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d. net.

CIVILISATION DURING the MIDDLE AGES, especially in Relation to Modern Civilisation. By G. B. ADAMS, Professor of History in Yale University.
viii—463 pp., cloth, 10s. 6d.

A. M. EARLE.—CUSTOMS and FASHIONS in OLD NEW ENGLAND. Crown
8vo. 320 pp., 7s. 6d.

LISS CARMAN.—LOW TIDE
on GRAND PRÉ, and other Poems. Small 4to.
6s. net.

J. H. D. RAWNSLEY.—IDYLLS and LYRICS of the NILE. Crown 8vo.
144 pp., cloth, 3s. 6d.

Just out,

The HISTORY of REYNARD
the FOX, with some Account of his Family, Friends, and Associates, a Free Rendering into Verse of the Translation made in the Days of King Edward the Fourth by William Caxton, from the Dutch Prose Version of the Story, with the Addition of some Particular Matters not therein set down but very needful to be known. With Glossarial Notes in Vulpine Verse and Index-Summary of Chief Matters contained in the History, by F. S. ELLIS.
With Devices by Walter Crane. Fcap. 4to. 350 pages. Printed at the Chiswick Press at Hand Press on English Hand-made Paper in Old-Faced Type. Bound in blue Merton cloth, 1l. 5s. net.

345 SHAVES FOR SIXPENCE.

A STICK OF

"VINOLIA" SHAVING SOAP
is said to last a year.

VINOLIA SHAVING STICKS, 6d., 1s., 1s. 6d., 2s., & 3s. 6d.

VINOLIA SHAVING CAKES, 1s., 2s., 3s.

E P P S'S COCOAINE.
COCOA-NIB EXTRACT (TEA-LIKE).

The choicest roasted nibs (broken up beans) of the natural Cocoa, on being subjected to powerful hydraulic pressure, give forth their essence of oil leaving for use a finely flavoured powder—"COCOAINE," a product which, when prepared with boiling water, has the consistency of tea, of which it is now heartily taking the place with many. Its active principle, being a gentle nerve-stimulant, supplies the needed energy without unduly exciting the system. Sold only in Packets and Tins, labelled "JAMES EPPS & CO (Ld.), Homoeopathic Chemists, London."

E P P S'S COCOAINE.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN,
HEADACHE, GOUT,
and INDIGESTION,
And Relieves Agitation for Uterine Contractions, Children, and Lactation.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

CASSELL & COMPANY'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

NOTICE.—The Second Series of 'The DIPLOMATIC REMINISCENCES of LORD AUGUSTUS LOFTUS, P.C. G.C.B., 1862 to 1879,' is now ready, in 2 vols. price 32s.

"These delightful Reminiscences deal with the most eventful and interesting epoch of latter-day European history."—Daily Telegraph.

"These volumes form a continuation of the memories of his diplomatic career which Lord A. Loftus offered to the world nearly two years ago, and they may justly claim to open up to us a richer mine of interest than their predecessors."—Daily Chronicle.

"His animated sketches of great political personages and of great international transactions are not to be charged with a single indiscretion. He has known how to temper the wit and spirit of a raconteur with the reserve of a statesman and of the man of the world."—Daily News.

"The volumes now published, which carry the narrative up to 1879, treat for the most part of affairs still more important in the modern history of Europe."—Morning Post.

"Full of new light respecting the complex developments of this agitated period of European history... His pages are full of wit and enlightenment, and they will no doubt receive the wide international welcome which they deserve."—Speaker.

N.B.—A Third Edition of the FIRST SERIES of LORD AUGUSTUS LOFTUS'S DIPLOMATIC REMINISCENCES is now on Sale.

BY GRANT ALLEN.

The TIDAL THAMES. With

India Proof Impressions of 20 magnificent Full-Page Photogravure Plates, and with many other Illustrations in the Text after Original Drawings by W. L. WYLLIE, A.R.A. In One handsome Volume, half-morocco, gilt, gilt edges, 5l. 15s. 6d.

VOL. VII. OF THE NEW AND REVISED EDITION OF

CASSELL'S HISTORY of ENGLAND. With New and Original Illustrations. The Text thoroughly Revised throughout. 9s.

"The most interesting, instructive, and entertaining history of our country which has yet seen the light is 'Cassell's History of England.'"—Standard.

BY JOHN PENDLETON.

JUST PUBLISHED, 2 vols. price 24s.

OUR RAILWAYS: their Origin, Development, Incidents, and Romance. With nearly 300 Illustrations.

"In the infinite humour and adventures of the railway these volumes are rich."—Speaker.

"Mr. Pendleton's work bids fair to be the standard railway history."—Bookman.

BY G. A. SALA.

READY SHORTLY, 2 vols. price 21s.

THINGS I HAVE SEEN and

PEOPLE I HAVE KNOWN. This important Work, by one of the Leading Journalists of the present day, will be ready shortly. It embodies the Author's reminiscences on such subjects as Paris Fifty Years Ago, Dickens and Thackeray, Pantomimes and Opera, Travel in America, Cooks and Costumes, Songs and Pictures, the Fast Life of the Past, Noted Usurers, &c.

EDITED BY COUNT NIGRA.

COUNT CAVOUR and

MADAME DE CIR COURT, some Unpublished Correspondence. Edited by COUNT NIGRA. Translated by A. J. BUTLER. 10s. 6d.

"Cavour's letters teem with brilliant and sagacious aperçus."—Daily Telegraph.

"It shows Cavour's character in a very attractive light."—Morning Post.

"These letters give their readers a fair idea of what manner of man the great Italian was 'at home.'"—Daily News.

BY THE REV. W. HARDY HARWOOD.

NOW READY, price 6s.

HENRY ALLON, D.D., Pastor

and Teacher. The Story of his Ministry, with Selected Sermons and Addresses. With Portrait.

This work forms a worthy memorial of the great Islington divine. It gives graphic pictures of his career as a popular preacher and author, together with a selection of the choicest and most characteristic of his sermons and addresses.

NOW READY, price 6s.

STATESMEN, PAST and FUTURE.

"A clever series of sketches of contemporary public men which appeared originally in the columns of the Daily News. The style is incisive and pleasantly salted with epigram."—Times.

BY LESLIE KEITH.

POPULAR EDITION, NOW READY, price 6s.

'LISBETH. By Leslie Keith,

Author of 'The Chilcotes,' 'In Spite of Herself,' &c.

"Unqualified praise may be cordially and unhesitatingly accorded to 'Lisbeth,' in which are readily discoverable all the inventive, constructive, and literary elements that, when felicitously combined, furnish the material of which a really first-class novel may be fashioned by a master-hand."

Daily Telegraph.

ORDERS ARE NOW RECEIVED BY ALL BOOKSELLERS FOR

ROYAL ACADEMY PICTURES, 1894.

To be published in 5 Parts, 1s. each; or 1 vol. price 7s. 6d.

Part 1 ready early in MAY, the remaining Parts as soon thereafter as practicable.

NOTICE.—Reproductions of some important Pictures of the year will appear exclusively in the pages of 'Royal Academy Pictures.'

. Orders should be given immediately, so as to prevent disappointment, as Royal Academy Pictures has always been out of print a few days after publication.

CASSELL & COMPANY, LIMITED, Ludgate-hill, London.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Broom's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C. Printed by JOHN C. FALLEN, Athenæum Press, Broom's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C., and Published by the said JOHN C. FALLEN at Broom's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C. Agents for Scotland, Messrs. Bell & Brodrie and Mr. John Macnair, Edinburgh.—Saturday, May 5, 1894.

THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART GALLERY, 14, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON.

Is remarkable for its display of Copies of Celebrated Works of
THE GREAT MASTERS.

Reproductions of the most important Paintings in the following Collections—

NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON	LOUVRE, PARIS.
BUCKINGHAM PALACE	LUXEMBOURG, PARIS.
WINDSOR CASTLE	ROYAL, GALLERIES, DRESDEN.
UFFIZI, FLORENCE	HERMITAGE, ST. PETERSBURG.
PITTI, FLORENCE	PIAZZO, MADRID.
ACADEMY OF FINE ARTS, FLORENCE	VATICAN, ROME.
AMSTERDAM	MAARLEM.
THE HAGUE	FRANKFURT.

THE PARIS SALONS.

PAINTINGS AND DRAWINGS BY MILLET, COROT, BONAERTS, DAUBIGNY, EASTON, LEPAPE, and MERCIER.

Albums of Reference to the various Collections are provided, are easily looked over, and are of great interest to lovers of Art.

A LARGE COLLECTION OF EXEMPLES OF MODERN FRENCH AND ENGLISH ART IN SELECTED FRAMES, suitable for HALLS, LIBRARY, DRAWING-ROOM, BEDROOM, &c.

The AUTOTYPE FINE-ART CATALOGUE of 100 pages, with illustrated Supplement, containing nearly Seventy Miniature Photographs of Notable Autotypes, post free. One Shilling.

New pamphlet, "Autotype as a Decorative and Educational Art," free on application.

The AUTOTYPE COMPANY, London.

MUDIE'S

SELECT

LIBRARY.

BOOKSELLERS,

BOOK EXPORTERS,

BOOKBINDERS, AND LIBRARIANS.

ENGLISH, FRENCH, ITALIAN, GERMAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

THE LARGEST STOCK IN THE WORLD.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, Limited.

30 to 34, NEW OXFORD-STREET,

241, Brompton-road, S.W., and 40, Queen Victoria-street, E.C., London.

And 10 to 12, BANTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER.

Catalogues.

FOREIGN BOOKS AND PERIODICALS

promptly supplied on moderate terms.

CATALOGUES on application.

DULAC & CO. 27, BOND-STREET.

ELLIS & ELVEY,

Dealers in Old and Rare Books.

New ready-made.

A CATALOGUE OF RARE MUSIC.

25, New Bond-street, London, W.

ELLIS & ELVEY,

Dealers in Old and Rare Books and MSS.

GENERAL CATALOGUE NOW READY, 1 vol. with 15 illustrations of fine bindings, &c. richly illustrated, price 4s.
This Catalogue comprising nearly five thousand entries, is arranged under subjects for the convenience of Collectors, and is furnished with an ample index.

25, New Bond-street, London, W.

CATALOGUE OF BOOKS (Old and New) on

Architecture, Sculpture, Painting, Engraving, Writing, Costume, Decorative, Furniture, Pottery, Porcelain, Shipping, Galleries, Catalogues, Landmarks, Coins, Numismatics, Heraldry, Lives of Artists, &c. as a case, with fine plates, by Great Artists. Also lately published, other CATALOGUES OF ENGRAVINGS (OLD and MODERN), and TORIES, and Choice MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS with Prices.

James Buxton & Son, 41, Oxford-street, London, W.

FIRST EDITIONS OF MODERN AUTHORS,

Including DeQuincey, Thackeray, Lever, Alington; Books illustrated by G. and E. Craxford, 1891, 1 vol. 4s. The largest and cheapest Collection offered for sale in the World. Catalogues issued Monthly and sent post free on application. Books Bought—WALTER T. BRANSON, 27, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

BOOKS—PORTRAITS—CATALOGUE of

Best-Class SECOND-HAND BOOKS and ENGRAVED BRITISH PORTRAITS free to Collectors.
Specialties: American, Antiquarian, Australian, Dramatic, Early
Printed—First Editions of Ancient and Modern Writers, Craxford, Leach, Rowlandson, Parker, &c.—Best Library Editions and Handsome House Books.
U. Munn, Bookseller, 130 Church-street, Paddington, London, W.

TH. WOHLLEBEN, FOREIGN BOOKSELLER,

61, Great Russell-street (opposite the British Museum), supplies all FOREIGN BOOKS and PERIODICALS at the most moderate prices.
Catalogues on application.

PETER PINDAR'S WORKS FOR SALE, in Four Volumes. Published in 1794. Bound in cl. Gilt as new.

—Send orders to W. H. M., care of C. Marshall, 4, Abchurch-lane, Liverpool.

ANTIQUE JAPANESE CABINET, richly deco- rated in Gold and Red Lac, handsome Brass Mountings.—Owen, Chromatist Office, Gloucester.

BRITISH MUSEUM.—ASSYRIAN SCULP- TURE.

—Statues of Sennacherib, Assurbanipal, and his Queen.
Also reduced Facsimiles of the famous and beautiful "Garden of Eden," Winged Human-headed Lion and Bull, &c. Modelled from the famous Nineveh Sculptures and made in porcelain (Paris).
—Interesting and faithful reproductions.—Johnson, October 1, 1893.
Descriptive Prospectus by Application to ALBERT SARTIS (Sole Publisher), 6, White-road, London, N.W.

THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.

By the kind permission of the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, I am producing a large

BRONZE MEDAL of the Great Statesman, to order that his portrait may be preserved in a metallic and everlasting form.

Upon the reverse will appear the names of every member of the present Parliament.

The Medal will be one of the largest and finest executed this century.
Limited to 700 brilliant Proof specimens.

To Subscribers at 25s. each.

Maroon leather Case for same, 5s. each.

J. ROCHELLE THOMAS,

Granville Chambers, Orchard-street, Portman-square, W.

To the Queen and Royal Family.

PORTRAIT of GEORGE MORLAND.

In course of Reproduction,

The fine Mesopotam Half-Length Portrait of this Great Artist.

After the Painting by Robert Müller.

Engraved by W. Ward, 1890.

Size, 10 in. by 14 in.

Limited to 200 Numbered Proofs at One Guinea.

J. ROCHELLE THOMAS,

Fine-Art Publisher,

Granville Chambers, Orchard-street, Portman-square, W.

To the Queen and Royal Family.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD.

(The LEADENHALL PRESS, 124, 80, Leadenhall-street, London E.C.)

Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Slipcases each, 1s. per dozen, 10s. per dozen.

APARTMENTS (superior) in a well-appointed

Private Residence in Highgate. Easy access to City and West.
Quiet, with every refined home comfort. Rent 10s. to 15s. and West.
End—Write Humber, 11, 101, Piccadilly.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—APARTMENTS in a comfortably furnished house, seven minutes from R.R. Railway, close to Mount Ephraim.—E. G. 45, Upper Grosvenor-road, Tunbridge Wells.

TO LET, HOUSE, ten minutes from District

Station, close to train, thirty-three minutes from Charing Cross.
Four or five bed-rooms, three sitting-rooms, three-bath, good, well-lighted and dry offices, south aspect, garden on bank of river, perfect quiet, the view of open country, facilities for keeping boat, speaking tube and gas throughout, blinds. Rent, for a term, 20s.—Apply G. 26, Hammersmith-terrace, W.

Sales by Auction

Valuable Books on Numismatics, Indian Archaeology, Antiquities, Science and Art, Natural History, &c.

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION,

at his Great Rooms, 30, King-street, Covent-garden, on WED-NESDAY, May 12, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, WARD STUDIO, and two following days, at 1 o'clock, valuable MERRILLAN BOOB
BOOKS, comprising three James's Almanacs, 7 vols. Large Paper.
Nash's Worcester-shire, 2 vols. Large Paper—Lavater's Physiognomy,
2 vols. Royal Asiatic Society's Journal, 40 vols.—Books on Indian Cannibals—Royal Astronomical Society's Notices, 2 vols.—Dr. Whilmann's Works, 2 vols.—Kassia's Paintings, and Scenes of Venice, 5 vols.
Large Paper—James's Works, 2 vols.—The Reptiles, 1 vol. Large
Paper—Haller's Works, 16 vols.—Harris's Birds, 6 vols.—Jesse's Birds,
3 vols.—and other important works.

To be viewed, and Catalogues had.

FRIDAY NEXT.—Photographic Apparatus.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION,

at his Great Rooms, 30, King-street, Covent-garden, on WED-NESDAY, May 12, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, WARD STUDIO,
and two following days, at 1 o'clock, valuable MERRILLAN BOOB
BOOKS, comprising three James's Almanacs, 7 vols. Large Paper.
Nash's Worcester-shire, 2 vols. Large Paper—Lavater's Physiognomy,
2 vols. Royal Asiatic Society's Journal, 40 vols.—Books on Indian Cannibals—Royal Astronomical Society's Notices, 2 vols.—Dr. Whilmann's Works, 2 vols.—Kassia's Paintings, and Scenes of Venice, 5 vols.
Large Paper—James's Works, 2 vols.—The Reptiles, 1 vol. Large
Paper—Haller's Works, 16 vols.—Harris's Birds, 6 vols.—Jesse's Birds,
3 vols.—and other important works.

On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

MONDAY, May 11.

Valuable Collection of Sporting Books, Pictures, Guns, &c.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION,

at his Great Rooms, 30, King-street, Covent-garden, on MONDAY,
May 11, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of SPORTING
BOOKS and PICTURES formed by the late A. H. BRIDGEMAN, Esq., Editor of the Revue, also some fine Coloured Engravings—Prints—Paintings, many by Allen—expensive Guns and Cases—Fishing Tackle —Curiosities—Horns—Native Weapons—Horns and Horns of Animals, &c.

On view the Saturday prior 12 till 4 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

TUESDAY, May 12.

Collection of Natural History Specimens.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION,

at his Great Rooms, 30, King-street, Covent-garden, on TUESDAY, May 12, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of NATURAL HISTORY SPECIMENS, including a splendid Pair of Hesperia, formed by the late Mr. JACOB—Exotic Lepidoptera and Coleoptera—Hutterer's in Papers—Animal Bones—1874 Bones and Eggs—
Birds Mounted—Horns and Horns—Miscellaneous—Fossils—Rocks, &c.

On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS

respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's, square, the sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On WEDNESDAY, May 16, ENGRAVINGS, after
T. Rowlandson, the Property of a GENTLEMAN; MODERN ETCHINGS and ENGRAVINGS from various Private Sources.

On THURSDAY, May 17, choice WINES, the Property of a GENTLEMAN; the late EDMUND PARKER, Esq., the late BARBARA DILL, Esq., and from other Private Collections.

On THURSDAY, May 17, PORCELAIN and
DECORATIVE OBJECTS, the Property of the late ARTHUR ANDERSON, Esq., and PORCELAIN, OBJECTS OF ART, and FINEST
DECORATIVE FURNITURE, the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

On FRIDAY, May 18, CIGARS, the Property of G. H. WILKIN, Esq., J. C. ARMSTRONG, Esq., THOMAS CLAY-TON, Esq., and of a GENTLEMAN, deceased.

On FRIDAY, May 18, Old ENGLISH SILVER, the Property of G. BRIDGEMAN SMITH, Esq., and SILVER and SILVER-GILT PLATE, the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

On SATURDAY, May 19, important MODERN
PICTURES, the Property of the late ARTHUR ANDERSON, Esq.

On SATURDAY, May 19, and MONDAY, May 20, MODERN PICTURES and WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS, the Property of the late Dr. MEDWIN.

On TUESDAY, May 22, beautiful JEWELS,
MINIATURES, GOLD WATCHES, and OLD ENGLISH SILVER.

On WEDNESDAY, May 23, and Following Day,
the COLLECTION of ORIENTAL PORCELAIN of W. ARKINGTON, Esq.

On THURSDAY, May 24, MEZZOTINT POR-TRAITS, AUTOGRAPH LETTERS and CORRESPONDENCE of GEORGE MONNEY, the Property of the late Miss MONNEY.

On FRIDAY, May 25, important PICTURES by George Romney, the Property of the late Miss MONNEY.

On SATURDAY, May 26, important PICTURES from the COLLECTION of the late JOHN GIBBONS, Esq.

On THURSDAY, May 31, Old ENGLISH and FOREIGN SILVER and SILVER-GILT PLATE, the Property of a GENTLEMAN, and beautiful JEWELS, the Property of a LADY, deceased.

The ADRIAN HOPE Collection.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS

respectfully give notice that they will SELL by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, on SATURDAY, June 30, at 1 o'clock precisely, the renowned COLLECTION of PIC-TURES formed by the late ADRIAN HOPE, Esq. It comprises 20 masterpieces of the greatest painters of the Old Dutch and Flemish Schools in the best possible condition. The pictures are described in Smith's Catalogue Raisonné, selected with great taste and judgment from the most celebrated collections dispersed prior to 1890, also some important works of the French Italian and Spanish Schools, and a few choice works of the Modern Belgian School. Further particulars will be given in Illustrated Catalogues will be published, price One Guinea to subscribers.

SHREWSBURY.—COTTON HILL, at the Residence of the late GEORGE STANTON, Esq. (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. WM. HALL, WATERIDGE & OWEN

are favoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, as above, on WEDNESDAY, FRIDAY, and SATURDAY, May 31, 1, 2, and 3, the valuable CONTENTS, comprising about 1000 Cases of Antique Silver Old Sheffield Plate, Old Paintings by Old Masters—Water-Colours Drawings—Old Engravings—Books—Antiques—Furniture (several fine specimens)—1800 Bottles rare and choice Vintage Wines—and other valuable Effects.

Catalogues, 6d. each, to be obtained on application to the Auctioneers'
Office, Newmarket.
Sale each day at 11 precisely, in large Tent.

RÉPERTOIRE des VENTES publiques et catalogues de Livres, Autographes, Gravures, Estampes, Tableaux, en France, en Angleterre, en Belgique, en Hollande, en Suisse, en

Allemagne, en Italie, en Espagne, en Portugal, en Grèce, en
Russie, en Turquie, en Égypte, en Syrie, en Perse, en Indes, en Chine, en Japon, en Corée, en Annam, en Siam, en Birmanie, en Thaïlande, en Malaisie, en Indonésie, en Australie, en Nouvelle-Zélande, en Afrique du Nord, en Afrique du Sud, en Amérique du Nord, en Amérique du Sud, en Océanie.

Édité par M. J. B. DUBOIS, 25, Boulevard Poissonnière, Paris.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

MAY, 1894.

The LOVE OFS OF HORACE (Five Specimens) By the Right Hon.
W. E. Gladstone, M.P.

SHALL INDIAN PRINCIPLES BE IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS? By the Right Hon. the Earl of Mordaunt.

DEMOCRATIC IDEALS. By William Barry, D.D.

INTELLECTUAL PROGRESS IN THE UNITED STATES. By George
F. Parker, United States Consul, Manchester.

SIMON RYAN the FETTERED. Concluded. By the Rev. Dr. Joseph Aspinwall of Tenby.

THE ENGLISH LINGO-BOOK. By J. M. Hound.

THE PROPHET OF CHALF. By G. F. Hinder, G.C.

LIFE IN A RUSSIAN VILLAGE. By J. D. Rees, C.I.E.

THE NEW AND OLD ART CRITICISM. By Mrs. C. Weston.

SUNSHINE AND MICROBE. By Professor Percy Frankland, F.R.S.

RECENT ARCHEOLOGY. By Professor Max Müller, F.R.S.

WILE SUPPLEMENTARY AND PHILE. By Sir Benjamin Baker, K.C.M.G.

London: Sampson Low, Marston & Company, Ltd.

New and Cheaper Editions, price Two Shillings.

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of

Astronomy. Eighth Edition. With 5 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, F.R.A.S.

"Has, we are glad to see, reached an eighth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the study of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian.

Edward Stanford, 36 and 37, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

This day, price 1s.
HEBREW UNVEILED. Some Affinities of the Hebrew Language, collected with Special Reference to Letters "A" of the English Vocabulary.
Author & Co. 15, Bedford-street, Covent-garden.

Now ready, demy 8vo. 486 pages, with 11 Illustrations, 15s.
ODOROGRAPHIA. Second Series.
By J. CH. SAWER, F.L.S.
A Natural History of New Materials and Drugs used in the Perfumery Industry, including the Aromatics used in Flavouring.
Intended for the Use of Growers, Manufacturers, and Consumers.

(The First Series may still be had, price 12s. 6d.)

Gurney & Jackson, 1, Pall-mall-gate (Mr. Van Voort's Successors).

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

THE BADMINTON LIBRARY.

NEW VOLUMES.

Edited by the DUKE OF BEAUFORT, K.G., and
A. E. T. WATSON.

YACHTING.

Vol. I. CRUISING, CONSTRUCTION, RACING RULES, FITTING-OUT, &c. By Sir EDWARD SULLIVAN, Bart., LORD BRASSEY, K.C.B., C. E. SETH-SMITH, C.E., G. L. WATSON, R.T. FRITCHETT, "THALASSA," the EARL of PEMBROKE and MONTGOMERY, R. F. KNIGHT, the Rev. G. L. BLAKE, &c. With 21 Plates and 93 Illustrations in the Text by R. T. FRITCHETT, G. L. WATSON, J. M. SOPER, &c., and from Photographs. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d. [On Tuesday next.

Vol. II. YACHT CLUBS, YACHTING in AMERICA and the COLONIES, RACING, &c. By the MARQUIS of DUFFERIN and A.V.A. K.P., G. CHRISTOPHER DAVIES, LEWIS HERRESHOPF, the EARL of ONSLOW, G.C.M.G., H. HORN, Sir GEORGE LEACH, K.C.B., &c. With 35 Plates and 140 Illustrations in the Text by R. T. FRITCHETT, G. L. WATSON, J. M. SOPER, &c., and from Photographs. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d. [On Tuesday next.

NEW BOOK BY ANDREW LANG.

BAN and ARRIÈRE BAN: a Rally of Fugitive Rhymes. By ANDREW LANG. Crown 8vo. 2s. net.

The HISTORY of TRADE UNIONISM. By SIDNEY and MATRICE WEBB. With Coloured Map and a Full Bibliography of the Subject. 8vo. 18s.

CHRISTIANITY and the ROMAN GOVERNMENT: a Study in Imperial Administration. By E. G. HARDY, M.A., formerly Fellow of Jesus College, Oxford. Crown 8vo. 5s.

The PRIMITIVE CHURCH and the SEE of PETER. By the Rev. LUKE RIVINGTON, M.A., Magdalen College, Oxford. With an Introduction by the CARDINAL ARCHBISHOP of WESTMINSTER. 8vo. 16s.

MANCHESTER COLLEGE, OXFORD: Proceedings and Addresses on the Occasion of the Opening of the College Buildings and Dedication of the Chapel, October 18, 19, 1893. With 6 Illustrations. Royal 8vo. 2s. net.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN & Co.
New York: 15, East 16th-street.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

READY NEXT WEEK AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND LIBRARIES.

POLAR GLEAMS. An Account of a Voyage in the Yacht "Blencirena" through the Kara Sea to the Yenesei River. By HELEN PERL. With a Preface by the MARQUESS of DUFFERIN and A.V.A. and contributions by Capt. JOSEPH WIGGINS and FREDERICK G. JACKSON. With numerous Full-Page Illustrations. Demy 8vo. cloth, 15s.

NEW STORY OF IRISH LIFE.

MISTHER O'RYAN. An Incident in the History of a Nation. By EDWARD McNULTY. Small 8vo. elegantly bound, 2s. 6d.
(Uniform with "Stephen Remanz.")

NEW EDITION OF MR. MILNER'S IMPORTANT WORK.

ENGLAND IN EGYPT. By ALFRED MILNER, formerly Under-Secretary for Finance in Egypt. New and Cheaper Edition, with an additional Prefatory Chapter on Egypt in 1894. Large crown 8vo. with Maps, 7s. 6d.

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.
Publisher to the India Office.

SCIENCE PROGRESS.

A Monthly Review of Current Scientific Investigation.

Edited by J. HUNTERLAND PARKER, M.A.
With the co-operation of an Editorial Committee.

Contents for MAY.

The DETERMINATION of the AVAILABLE PLANT FOOD in SOILS. By E. Warington, F.R.S.

The EMBRYOLOGY of the PORIFERA. By E. A. Mincin, B.A., Fellow of Marischal College, Oxford.

SOME ASPECTS of the IMMUNITY QUESTION. By O. A. Duckmaster, M.D., Lecturer on Physiology at St. George's Hospital, London.

EXPERIMENT in MINERALOGY. By E. A. Miers, M.A., British Museum (Natural History Department).

ALGÆ. By G. Murray, F.L.S., British Museum (Natural History Department).

JOTTINGS from RECENT NEUROLOGICAL PROGRESS. By C. E. Sherrington, M.D., F.R.S.

Price Half-a-Crown (Subscription price, 5s. per annum, post free).
London: The Scientific Press, Limited, 43, Strand, W.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY of BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL of BEACONSFIELD, 1890 to 1893.

NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 13th, 25th, JUNE 10th, 24th, and JULY 8th, 1893. contains a WORLD-GRAPHY of the EARL of BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEYS to "VIVIAN GRAY," "CONINGBURY," "LOTHAIR," and "ENDYMION." From the Six Numbers, 2s., or free by post, 1s. 6d.
John C. Fennell, Station and Queens Office, Strand's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER.
EDINBURGH AND LONDON.

THIS DAY. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

JAMES INWICK, Ploughman and Elder. By P. HAY HUNTER, Author of 'The Silver Bullet,' 'Sons of the Croft,' &c.; Joint-Author of 'My Duncas and My Daughter.'

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION. This day, 1s. 6d.
MY DUCATS and MY DAUGHTER.
By P. HAY HUNTER and WALTER WHYTE.

Large crown 8vo. antique paper, cloth extra, gilt top, 6s.
The DAUGHTER of LEONTIUS; or, Phases of Byzantine Life, Social and Religious, in the Fifth Century after Christ. By J. D. CRAIG HOUSTON, B.D.

Mr. GLAISTONE, writing to the Author, says: "I am perusing it as well as the condition of my eyes will permit, and not without great interest and pleasure. The pages contain in it Sophia's are quite new to me." "Years very faithfully," April 24th, 1894. "W. E. GLAISTONE."

DR. WHYTE'S BUNYAN LECTURES—Now Complete.
Now ready, 2s. 6d. antique half paper.
BUNYAN CHARACTERS. Second Series. By Rev. ALEXANDER WHYTE, D.D., of St. George's Free Church, Edinburgh.

"This completes the most beautiful and suggestive commentary on the 'Pilgrim's Progress' ever written."—British Weekly.
* * * FIRST SERIES, 16th Thousand, 2s. 6d.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 5s.
The CHURCH and SOCIAL PROBLEMS. By the Rev. A. SCOTT MATTHESON, Author of 'The Gospel and Modern Substitutions.'

OLIPHANT'S POCKET NOVELS.—New Volume.
Paper cover, 1s., cloth, 1s. 6d.
The SILVER BULLET. By P. Hay HUNTER.

POPULAR NOVELS.—New Volume.
Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d.; paper cover, 1s.
The CURSE THAT CAME HOME.
By J. K. LAWSON, Author of 'A Vain Sacrifice.'

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER.
Edinburgh and London.

NOW READY,

RECTORIAL ADDRESSES

DELIVERED AT THE

UNIVERSITY of St. ANDREWS

1893-1893,

Sir William Stirling-Maxwell to the Marquis of Bute.

Edited, with an Introduction,

By WILLIAM KNIGHT, LL.D.,
Professor of Moral Philosophy, University of St. Andrews.

Demy 8vo. price 10s. 6d.

"The volume should command an appreciative welcome from a far larger circle of readers than that represented by the graduates and students of St. Andrews."—Times.

"The volume, in fact, is a memorial of what St. Andrews has done for the cause of education in the North, and a singularly interesting epitome of the views on the same subject of many clear and courageous minds."—Daily Telegraph.

"This is a volume of very deep and very varied interest."—Freeman's Journal.

"This is a volume that will be treasured by alumni of St. Andrews wherever the fates may have borne them. It will revive sunny memories of days departed, and vividly recall scenes that time has obscured but not obliterated."—Dundee Advertiser.

"The volume is both valuable and attractive, and it is got up in a style worthy of the 'City of the Soudan' Gown,' of which it is meant to be a memorial."—Scotsman.

"Beside being of special interest to all whose student days are recalled by them, appeal more generally to those who wish to understand the aims and ideals of our Scottish universities during the latter half of the nineteenth century."—Herald.

"Materials so brilliant required the support of no editorial sponsor. The value of the book is, however, increased by the interesting introduction by Professor Knight."—Aberdeen Free Press.

NOW READY,

SANTA TERESA:

Being some Account of her Life and Times, together with some pages from the History of the last great Reform in the Religious Orders.

BY

GABRIELA CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM.

In 2 vols.

Illustrated with Two Autogravure Frontispieces.

Demy 8vo. price 32s.

"She has not merely studied much original and previously inaccessible material for the life and times of Saint Teresa, but is also specially qualified for the work she has undertaken by her intimate acquaintance with the country and countrymen of the saint. She has patiently and not unconstructively examined the difficult psychological question of Teresa's mysticism, and her study of the rise of the Discalced Carmelite Order may be acknowledged to throw an interesting light on the general history of the period."—Times.

"A truly noble work, written with such profound knowledge and understanding sympathy that the book has spirit and vitality which no merely graphic skill could impart to it."—World.

"The exhaustive labour she has expended on it, her freedom from religious bias, and unrivalled knowledge of the surroundings and literature of Teresa's life, have resulted in by far the best and most complete biography of Teresa that has yet appeared."—Westminster Gazette.

"If ever a biography were a labour of love, surely these deeply interesting and curiously attaching volumes deserve to be so called."—Daily News.

"A notable biography of a remarkable character. It is impossible to withhold admiration for the zeal and devotion of Teresa di Cepeda as depicted in the glowing pages of Mrs. Cunningham-Graham."—Dundee Advertiser.

"It must be admitted that the authoress of the present chronicle has completed her labours, from her own point of view, with scientific thoroughness and a consistently cultivated skill."—Daily Telegraph.

"By the power of sympathy and of patient and self-sacrificing labour Mrs. Cunningham-Graham may be said to have performed a miracle as remarkable as any attributed to Teresa the nun; she has painted a saint who is also a living and breathing woman."—Scotsman.

"Exceedingly well written, very picturesque, complete, accurate, sincere, enthusiastic, and, above all, extremely readable."—Full Mail Gazette.

"The secret hiring of houses, the surreptitious midnight entries of two or three faithful nuns or friars, the consecrations by stealth of these make-shift convents in town after town, together with the fertility of resource displayed by their founders in keeping them out of the clutches of this or that outraged authority—all this fills up hundreds of pages of almost exciting and certainly profoundly interesting history. The difficulties, triumphs, and death of the saint and her subsequent canonization are subjects exhaustively and well depicted. Such honest labour as the biographer has devoted to her elaborate monograph deserves the frankest recognition. Her glimpses of sixteenth-century life in Spain are vivid and fascinating."—St. James's Gazette.

A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, London.

WARD, LOCK & BOWDEN'S 1s. ILLUSTRATED GUIDE-BOOKS. 1s.

EACH. ONE SHILLING EACH. Strongly bound in cloth, round corners. EACH.

WITH NEW ROUTE MAPS, COLOURED PLATES, NUMEROUS ENGRAVINGS, AND LATEST INFORMATION. Every care has been taken to render the Guides readable as well as useful for reference. The personal and historical associations of the various districts treated of have not been overlooked, while their local features have been carefully delineated; and the books have been made, by copiousness of illustration and clearness of typography, worthy of permanent preservation as well as indispensable travelling companions, for which they are so well adapted by the low price at which they are issued. They are undoubtedly the Cheapest and most Trustworthy Guides to the districts of which they treat.

ENTIRELY NEW EDITION, just ready, ONE SHILLING.
WARD, LOCK & BOWDEN'S NEW GUIDE TO LONDON.
360 Pages, 19 Maps and Plans, 130 Illustrations. Price ONE SHILLING. Cloth limp, round corners.

The Series comprises the following GUIDES, and others are in preparation:—
ENGLAND AND WALES.

LONDON.

"The best one for anything like the price we have ever seen."—Freeman's Journal.

WINDSOR and its CASTLE.

"A really good illustrated Guide."—Standard.

NORTH WALES and its Watering-Places.

"It is not merely a Guide, but a popular history.... and a capital book of reference."—Graphic.

NOTTINGHAM, SHERWOOD FOREST, and the Dukeries.

"Remarkable Places."

OXFORD: its Colleges, Halls, and Remarkable Places.

"Unquestionably the best travelling Guide to the Isle of Man ever produced."—Whitehall.

LIVERPOOL and its Environs.

"Will be found interesting to local readers, and most instructive to visitors."—Liverpool Echo.

SOUTHPORT and its Vicinity.

"We can bear testimony to the correctness of the information conveyed in it."—Evening Standard.

THE ENGLISH LAKE DISTRICT.

"Done... with considerable care."—Times.

FURNESS ABBEY.

"Contains a detailed account of the Abbey, with descriptions of the various routes by which it may be reached."

MORECAMBE BAY.

"Gives concise notices of Morecambe, Lancaster, and the many interesting towns and villages in their neighbourhood."

SCARBOROUGH and EASTERN YORKSHIRE.

"Compiled with considerable care, and the matter is brought down to the latest date."—Hull Packet.

BRIDLINGTON and FILEY.

"It seems carefully compiled, and in a brief and concise manner describes the chief objects of interest."—Bridlington Gazette.

WHITBY and other Places in the North Riding of Yorkshire.

"Will be found to contain much interesting and valuable information."—Whitby Times.

REDCAR, MIDDLESBROUGH,

"The work presents rare attractions to the numerous class of holiday-makers."—Daily Exchange (Middlesbrough).

SALTBURN-BY-THA-SEA, &c.

"A neat and portable compendium of all that is of interest in the locality."—Daily Exchange.

LEEDS and its Vicinity.

"A beautiful little guide.... full of information, and excellently illustrated."—Liverpool Daily Post.

YORK and its MINSTER.

"Gives a brief but interesting outline of the history and descriptive sketches of the chief buildings and 'Monas.'"—Manchester Guardian.

HARROGATE and its SPAS.

"Gives much useful information relative to Harrogate and other places of note in the district."—Hull Packet.

ILKLEY and its Surroundings.

"Fully describes Ilkley and Botten Abbey, with maps of the immediate neighbourhood."

BUXTON and the PEAK DISTRICT.

"To the many tourists who visit these beautiful spots the book will be an invaluable companion."—Daily Reporter.

MATLOCK and DOVEDALE.

"The book is well written; its descriptions are accurate and lucid."—Daily Reporter.

WARD, LOCK & BOWDEN'S SHILLING GUIDES. IRELAND.

DUBLIN and its NEIGHBOURHOOD.

"A welcome little handbook, which most people would enjoy with them from visiting the places described."—Lloyd's News.

COUNTY WICKLOW.

"Gives more complete and picturesque descriptions of the county districts than can be met with elsewhere."—Daily Express (Dublin).

KILLARNEY: its Lakes and Scenery.

"A more useful, entertaining, or beautiful little guide than this we have seldom encountered."—Waterford Standard.

CORK, OLENGARIFF, BANTRY.

"The scenery is well described; and all the legends and historical incidents connected with each spot are detailed."—Waterford Standard.

CARLINGFORD BAY and the MOUNTAIN MOUNTAINS.

"Describes a tour through, perhaps, the most romantic region in the Irish Isle."

BELFAST and its Neighbourhood.

"Is devoted to a history and description of the capital of Ulster, its public buildings, commerce, &c."

CONNEMARA HIGHLANDS, &c.

"Treats exhaustively of Connemara, the Joyce Country, and County Mayo."

GIANT'S CAUSEWAY and Antrim Coast.

"Contains interesting and gossip notes of the rocky wonders of the Coast of County Antrim."

LONDONDERRY and the DONNAL ISLANDS.

"Shortly."

THE NORTHERN LAKE DISTRICT OF IRELAND.

"Shortly."

WARD, LOCK & BOWDEN'S SHILLING GUIDES. SCOTLAND.

EAST COAST of SCOTLAND.

"Extremely full and... accurate. There are plenty of maps, and the routes are well arranged."

SOUTH-WEST of SCOTLAND.

"Continuously furnished with maps, plans, views, &c.... of inestimable value to the tourist."

HIGHLANDS and ISLANDS of SCOTLAND.

"Liberally supplied with maps, a master more to the point in a Guide-book than any amount of illustrations."—Advertiser.

EDINBURGH and its Environs.

"We have no hesitation in classing it among the best."—Leith Herald.

GLASGOW and the CLYDE.

"As a handbook for tourists in the West we know of nothing better."—Stirling Advertiser.

ABBOTSFORD, MELROSE, and the SCOTCH BORDER.

"Reverend and methodically arranged, and forms pleasant reading."—Border Advertiser.

ABERDEEN and DEESIDE, &c.

"The information has been carefully prepared, and the illustrations of places of interest are numerous and excellent."—Sanfords Journal.

AYR, ARRAN, DUMFRIES, and LAND OF RUBEN.

"As trustworthy, exact, and interesting as any book of the kind could possibly be."—Ayr Observer.

PIKE, KINROSS, DUNFERMILY, &c.

"Lays a... Contains historical and descriptive notices, fully illustrated, of the 'Kingdom of Fife,' and its chief towns and other features."

INVERNESS and the NORTH-ERN HIGHLANDS and ISLANDS.

"It is the completest work of the kind which has been issued for the northern counties of Scotland."

OBAN, FORT WILLIAM, and the WEST of SCOTLAND.

"The guide is really, while cheaply got up, the literary matter is carefully condensed, and the maps and illustrations are satisfactory and useful."

PERTH, DUNDEE, &c.

"Supplies a great amount of illustrated information, besides useful maps."—Liverpool Courier.

SKYE, ORKNEY, SHETLAND.

"The book is well worth the attention of all who contemplate a journey to the regions to which it is a guide."—Leith Chronicle.

THE TROSSACHS, LOCH LOMOND, &c.

"The descriptive matter is interesting and is informative, and excellent maps and views are provided."—Daily Review.

THE COMPLETE GUIDE to SCOTLAND: its Mountains, Lakes, Moors, &c.

"With 3 Coloured Plates, 39 Maps and Plans, and numerous Engravings. 2s. 6d. paper boards, 3s. cloth."

THE HIGHLANDS and ISLANDS of SCOTLAND.

"With Maps, Plans and Coloured and other Illustrations. 7s. 6d. cloth gilt, 3s. 6d."

THE LOWLANDS of SCOTLAND.

"With numerous Maps, Plans, and Coloured and other Illustrations. 7s. 6d. cloth gilt, 3s. 6d."

WARD, LOCK & BOWDEN'S SHILLING GUIDES. THE CONTINENT.

PARIS: How to Reach and See the City.

"A very full and complete Guide, abounding in Maps, Plans, and Illustrations, and one that the traveller can safely trust to."—Bristol Mercury.

SWITZERLAND: its Cities, Lakes, and Mountains.

"Quite the best we have seen.... It is a splendid map, now it can be brought out for the money is a perfect marvel."—England.

THE RHINE and RHINELAND.

"Travellers to the... Rhine and Rhineland will be largely indebted to Messrs Ward & Lock for their Guide, which, in the important matters of description, description, view, and general accuracy of information, is unsurpassable."—Pictorial World.

RIVIERA, NICE, CANNES, MENTONE, MONTE CARLO, MONACO, HYÈRES, GENOVA, &c.

"The literature is everywhere full of interest... both complete and useful."—Advertiser.

The above Guides can be obtained through any Bookseller or Railway Bookstall, and of WARD, LOCK & BOWDEN, LIMITED, Warwick House, Salisbury-square, London, E.C.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S
PUBLICATIONS.

NEW NOVEL
BY THE AUTHOR OF
'THE SLAVE OF THE LAMP.'

At all the Libraries, in 3 vols. post 8vo.

WITH EDGED TOOLS.

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN,
Author of 'The Slave of the Lamp,' &c.

"A very clever, bright story.... Mr. Merriman's delineation of Meredith as the bona fide ideal of the Society young man (before Africa brought out the hero in him), of Mill-cent, the beautiful flirt, of Meredith's cynical old father, is the work of a literary artist."—Daily News.

"Fresh in scheme and bright in treatment, and emphatically a story to be read."—Globe.

"An excellent novel. There are no dull and uninteresting or even irrelevant pages.... We congratulate Mr. Merriman and his readers."—Daily Chronicle.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S
NEW NOVEL.

NOTICE.—The FOURTH EDITION of 'MARCELLA,' 3 vols., by Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD, is nearly exhausted. A FIFTH EDITION will be ready immediately.

CHEAP POPULAR EDITION OF MRS.
HUMPHRY WARD'S 'DAVID GRIEVE.'

NOW READY, crown 8vo. limp cloth, 2s. 6d.

The HISTORY of DAVID
GRIEVE. By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD, Author of
'Robert Elsmere,' &c.

NEW ONE-VOLUME NOVEL.

Ready this day, crown 8vo. 6s.

STANHOPE of CHESTER: a
Mystery. By FREDY ANDREAR.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION OF THE HON. EMILY LAWLESS'S 'GRANIA.'

NOW READY, crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

GRANIA: the Story of an Island.

By the Hon. EMILY LAWLESS, Author of 'Hurrish,' 'With Essex in Ireland,' &c.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF
'WHERE TOWN AND COUNTRY MEET.'

On MAY 20, 2 vols. post 8vo.

RICHARD DARE. By Mrs.

ALFRED BALDWIN, Author of 'The Story of a Marriage,' 'Where Town and Country Meet,' &c.

* Messrs. SMITH, ELDER & CO. will be happy to forward a CATALOGUE of their PUBLICATIONS post free on application.

London:

SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

MR. MURRAY'S LIST.

READY THIS DAY.

Crown 8vo. 8s. net.

GLIMPSSES OF FOUR CONTINENTS.

LETTERS WRITTEN DURING A TOUR IN AUSTRALIA,
NEW ZEALAND, AND NORTH AMERICA IN 1893.

By the DUCHESS OF BUCKINGHAM and CHANDOS.

With Portraits and Illustrations from the Author's Sketches, &c.

A NEW, ENLARGED, AND REVISED EDITION. 8vo. 18s.

SIR WILLIAM SMITH'S CLASSICAL DICTIONARY of

MYTHOLOGY, BIOGRAPHY, and GEOGRAPHY. A New, Enlarged, and Revised Edition, with many New Plans and Illustrations. Edited by G. E. MARINDIN, M.A., formerly Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. With over 800 illustrations.

2 vols. crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. net each vol.

THE EPISTLE OF ST. PAUL TO THE THESSALONIANS, GALATIANS, AND ROMANS.

WITH NOTES AND DISSERTATIONS.

Including an Essay on the Interpretation of Scripture, originally published in 'Essays and Reviews.'

By the late B. JOWETT, M.A., Master of Balliol College,
Regius Professor of Greek in the University of Oxford, Doctor in Theology in the University of Leyden.

Edited and Condensed by LEWIS CAMPBELL, M.A. LL.D.,

Emeritus Professor of Greek in the University of St. Andrews.

This work was first published in 1866, a Second and thoroughly revised Edition appeared in 1889, and was rapidly exhausted, but the Author did not resume the work during his lifetime.

The present Edition is so divided that the text of the Epistles, together with the Notes and Introductions, forms the First Volume, whilst the Essays and Dissertations are contained in the Second Volume. The Volumes can be bought separately.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

NEW WORKS PUBLISHED BY EDWARD HOWELL,
LIVERPOOL.

I.

The CONTROVERSY of ZION; being the Miscellaneous Works of the late T. W. CHRISTIE, B.A. Camb., M.R.C.S. Eng., &c. Edited by THOS. WILLIAMSON.
A handsome 8vo. vol. nearly 600 pp. with Portrait of the Author, cloth, 5s.

II.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

The BOOK of REVELATION: a Sign of the End. Second Edition, Enlarged. 8vo. cloth, 7s.

III.

BEING and DOING. A Selection of Helpful Thoughts from Various Authors arranged for Daily Reading. Edited by C. M. W. (Dedicated to the members of
S. Barnabas Guild, whose object is to do all they can for the relief of suffering and misery.)
Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 4s. 6d. net. [Third Edition nearly ready.]

IV.

GOLDEN THOUGHTS for NOBLE MEN and GENTLE
WOMEN. Selected and Composed by MARY M. BRADDYLL. Fcap. 8vo. with blank pages for MS. Additions and for Autographs, elegantly printed within carmine lines, cloth gilt, price 2s. 6d. net.

* Copies of this beautiful little Book have been accepted by H.R.H. the Princess of Wales and H.R.H. the Duchess of Teck.

V.

PICTURE of WALES DURING the TUDOR PERIOD

(HENRY VII. to ELIZABETH). By J. BIRKBECK NEVINS, M.D., London, &c. 8vo. with Map, cloth, 3s. 6d. net.

* This Work contains in a collected form the Acts of Henry VIII relating to Wales (spoken of in the debate in the House of Commons, April 30, 1894, as the "Welsh Act of Union").

VI.

GLEANINGS in MANY FIELDS, being Explanatory and Critical

Notes on the New Testament, Collected by the late THOMAS HORNEY, M.A., Vicar of Walton-on-the-Hill, Lancashire. 2 vols. 8vo. cloth, 12s.

Here is a work which deserves to become popular. It is virtually a commentary on the New Testament, and has excellences possessed by no other; for instead of being the reflex of one man's judgment, and the theological bias towards one complexion of thought in the interpretation, it gives the opinions of many minds as brought together during half a century of wide, scholarly reading by a man who, whatever his own predilections may have been, was widely discursive and liberal in his study of books.

Liverpool: EDWARD HOWELL, Church-street. London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL & CO. LIMITED.

SWAN SONNENSCHN & CO.

2 vols, large 8vo. 32s.

PRIMITIVE CIVILIZATIONS:

THE HISTORY OF OWNERSHIP IN ARCHAIC COMMUNITIES.

By E. J. SIMCOX, Author of 'Natural Law,' &c.

THE GREAT ALTERNATIVE: a Plea for a National Policy.

By SPENSER WILKINSON, Author of 'The Brain of an Army,' &c. 8vo. 7s. 6d.

National Paralysis—The Eastern Question—Union of Germany—Partition of Turkey—The Use of Armies—The Secret of the Sea—Egypt—A Warning from Germany—Expansion of France—India—The Great Alternative—The Revival of Duty.

G. CARDELLA'S SECOND NOVEL.

Messrs. SWAN SONNENSCHN & CO. beg to announce that the New Novel by the Author of 'A KING'S DAUGHTER,' one of the most successful Novels of the year 1892, is now ready, in 3 vols., entitled

THE PERFECT WAY OF HONOUR.

OF 'A KING'S DAUGHTER' some of the leading papers said, "The name of G. Cardella is new to us, but we venture to predict that if she or he puts out more books of the character and strength of 'A King's Daughter,' it will not be long before her or his name is familiar to all who like wholesome, well-written, interesting fiction"; "The novel is so good that we should be glad to see another from the same pen"; "Extremely attractive"; "Instant with humanity"; "Powerful and pathetic"; "A careful, conscientious performance."

The ACTS of APOLLONIUS and other MONUMENTS of EARLY CHRISTIANITY.

Edited, with General Preface, Introduction, and Notes, by F. C. CONYBEARE, M.A., late Fellow of University College, Oxon. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

"A series of vivid pictures of the practical working of Christianity during the first three centuries of its history."—Daily Chronicle.
"Certain to attract attention, especially as bearing on the much-discussed but still obscure question of the relation between Christianity and the Roman Empire."—Glasgow Herald.

REFORMED LOGIC. A System Based on Berkeley's Philosophy, with an entirely New Method of Dialectics. By D. B. MACLACHLAN. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s.

"The strictly logical chapters are written with great clearness and undoubted ability. Many a good point is made, especially in the criticism of the syllogism."—Educational Times.

The NICENE CREED CATECHETICALLY

EXPLAINED, with Proofs and Illustrations from Holy Scripture. By the Rev. HENRY MORTON THOMSON, M.A. With an Introduction by the Rev. Canon T. T. CARTER, M.A. 6s.

The BIBLE and its THEOLOGY as POPULARLY TAUGHT: a Review and Restatement.

By G. VANCE SMITH, Ph.D. 3s.

DISEASE and RACE. Crown 8vo. with a few

Cuts, 2s. 6d.
"A clearly expressed outline of the genesis, kinship, and evolution of some of the principal diseases."—Echo.
"Tuberculosis is shown to be descended directly from scrofula, and scrofula from syphilis, which in turn is regarded as descended from leprosy."—Nature.

NEW SOLUTION OF AN HISTORICAL MYSTERY.

The STORY of LOUIS XVII. of FRANCE.

By H. E. EVANS. With 5 Engraved Portraits. 8vo. 10s. 6d.
"It is a beautiful and interesting book, and must take the leading place in the literature of the subject.....It makes out a strong case."
Mr. ANDREW D. WHITE, American Minister at St. Petersburg.

NEW ONE-VOLUME NOVEL AT ALL LIBRARIES.

3s. 6d.

IL MAL OCCHIO: the Evil Eye. By G. S.

GODKIN, Author of 'The Life of Victor Emmanuel.'

NEUROOMIA: a New Continent. A Manuscript

Delivered by the Deep. By G. McIVER. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

VOICES from AUSTRALIA: a Book of Australian Verse. By PHILIP DALE and CYRIL HAVILAND. Poap. 8vo. 5s.

DIARY of a CAVALRY OFFICER in the PENINSULAR and WATERLOO CAMPAIGNS. By the late Lt.-Col. TOMKINSON. Edited by his Son, JAMES TOMKINSON, J.P. 8 Maps and Plates, 15s.

"A delightful work. It is a thousand pities it was not published long ago, for it is one of the works that go to the making of history."—Daily Chronicle.
"Of the greatest interest to military and historical students. Excellent reproductions add to the charm of the book, which from cover to cover is full of good reading."—St. James's.
"Just the kind of material the historian rejoices to possess. Gives us a better idea of the daily life under Wellington's command than any made book could afford."—Liverpool Post.

NEW BOOK BY ARNOLD WHITE.

ENGLISH DEMOCRACY: its Promises and its Perils. Demy 8vo.

[Shortly.]

HISTORY of the ENGLISH LANDED IN-TEREST: its Customs, Laws, and Agriculture. By J. RUSSELL GARNIER. Vol. I. EARLY PERIOD. Vol. II. MODERN PERIOD. 8vo. 10s. 6d. each.

"He writes with a living knowledge of the rural England of to-day."—Times.
"Full of careful and far-reaching erudition."—Scotsman.
"Eminently readable."—Glasgow Herald.

SECOND EDITION.

RIDDLES of the SPHINX: a Study in the Philosophy of Evolution. By F. C. S. SCHILLER, M.A. Oxon., Instructor in Logic and Metaphysics in the Cornell University. Second Edition. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

"A complete system of philosophy in outline. Highly interesting, and will repay careful study.... We hope the student will not neglect such an earnest and careful study of metaphysical problems."—Philosophical Review.

THIRD EDITION, at a lower price.

The RUSSIAN PEASANTRY: their Agrarian

Condition, Social Life, and Religion. By STEPNIAK. Thick 8vo. 10s. 6d.

A CANDIDATE'S SPEECHES. By One who

HAS NEVER BEEN A CANDIDATE. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

"He shows wide knowledge and the capacity of handling political questions."—Western Daily Press.

"A handy 'crib' for candidates at the next General Election."—Bedford Recorder.

SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES.

NEW VOLUMES, each 2s. 6d.

74. The LABOUR COMMISSION: an Epitome of the Evidence and the Report. By T. G. SPYERS, B.A., Private Writer to the Commission.

73. TYRANNY of SOCIALISM. By Yves

GUYOT.

72. LAND SYSTEMS of AUSTRALASIA. By

WM. EPPS.

71. The RISE of MODERN DEMOCRACY in OLD and NEW ENGLAND. By CHARLES BORCHARD. With Introduction by C. H. FIRTH, M.A.

70. HOURS and WAGES. By L. Brentano.

THREE NEW AUSTRALIAN STORIES.

1. The NEW ARCADIA. By Horace Tucker.

2s. 6d.

2. OUR ALMA. By Henry Goldsmith. 3s. 6d.

3. TALES of the EARLY AUSTRALIAN DAYS.

By FRANK WABUNG. 2s. 6d.

SWAN SONNENSCHN & CO. London.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

"A great study of a great man."
LEADS MERCURY.

THE LIFE OF
JOHN CHURCHILL,
DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH,
To the ACCESSION OF QUEEN ANNE.
BY
GENERAL VISCOUNT WOLSELEY.
2 vols. demy 8vo.
With Portraits and Plans, 32s.

"A real and lasting contribution to history, which will remain as the standard authority on Marlborough."—Manchester Guardian.
"A very brilliant piece of work, written not only with abundant knowledge, but in a graceful and picturesque style."—World.

NEW WORKS OF FICTION.

A NEW NOVEL AT ALL LIBRARIES. IF MEN WERE WISE.

By E. L. SHEW.
In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"A work of rare charm and excellence; it is real literature, and real life, too—of an out-of-the-way kind, but convincing, and consistent. The strength and the beauty of Weyburn's character; the pure and simple tragedy of his life; the passages of thought, observation, and reflection, which arrest and hold attention; the very unusual power of the writer so deeply to interest us in the catastrophe that we want to implore him to change it, even while we recognize that it is inevitable, lend to this novel the importance of an exceptional and most welcome event."—World.

A NEW NOVEL BY MISS BROUGHTON.

A BEGINNER.

By RHODA BROUGHTON,
Author of 'Nancy,' 'Cometh Up as a Flower,' &c.
In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"We expect to be amused by Miss Broughton; but we do not think that for a long time past we have been so much exhilarated by any book of hers as by 'A Beginner.' It is a very shrewd, and yet genial, piece of satire, not too long, and sustained throughout with the most buoyant humour."—Saturday Review.

READY THIS DAY.

A NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'JOAN VELLACOTT.'

THE POWER OF THE PAST.

By ESME STUART.
In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

A NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'MASTERS OF THE WORLD.'

THOROUGH.

By MARY A. M. MARKS,
Author of 'Dr. Willoughby Smith,' &c.
In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"A remarkable book, written with an unobtrusive quaintness of style, as if it were the record of a chronicler writing soon after its events took place. Apart from its historical value it abounds in quaint touches of character, humour, and shrewdness, and in exquisite bits of Irish landscape."—Scottish Leader.

NOW READY.

The DAUGHTER of the NEZ
PERCÉS. By ARTHUR PATRICKSON, Author of 'A Partner from the West,' &c. 2 vols. crown 8vo.

"Brightly and pleasantly written, we can recommend the book to those who love the novel of adventure."—Full Tilt Gazette.

NOW READY.

EVE'S APPLE By M. Deane.
2 vols. crown 8vo.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S PUBLICATIONS.

SIR JOHN ASTLEY'S NEW WORK will be ready at all Bookellers and Libraries on FRIDAY NEXT, May 19, in 2 vols. demy 8vo. with Portraits, 30s.

FIFTY YEARS OF MY LIFE

in the WORLD OF SPORT at HOME and ABROAD. By Sir JOHN DUGDALE ASTLEY, Bart.

NEW NOVELS.

NEW NOVEL BY BEATRICE WHITEY.
Now ready at all Libraries, in 3 vols. crown 8vo.

MARY FENWICK'S DAUGHTER.
By BEATRICE WHITEY, Author of 'The Avenging of Mary Fenwick,' 'One Reason Why,' &c.

THE FOOL OF DESTINY. By Colin
MIDDLETON, Author of 'Tales of Hainaven.' 3 vols.

THE HUSBAND OF ONE WIFE. By

Mrs VERN, Author of 'Some Married Fellows,' &c. 3 vols.
"The theme is a good one, but one requiring delicate handling. Mrs. Vern has treated it credulously, so much so that the interest (arising instead of diminishing as she proceeds, and the third volume in our opinion, is much the best of the set. 'The Husband of One Wife' is good work, and its personal may safely be recommended."—Glasgow Herald.
"The Husband of One Wife" is an excellent book, in which all healthy-minded novel-readers will find something to interest them."—Dundee Advertiser.

ORCHARD DAMEREL. By Alan

ST. AUBYN, Author of 'A Fellow of Trinity,' &c. 3 vols.
"Taken altogether, the work is the strongest that has come from the author's pen, and does not gain its strength by any abandonment of the peculiar refinement which characterizes this writer's books. It is a thoroughly enjoyable story."—Edinburgh.

JANET DELILLE. By E. N. Leigh

FRY, Author of 'A Scots Thistle,' &c. 2 vols.
"We like 'Janet Delille' as a novel, and no reader will feel his time wasted in perusing it, which cannot in truth be said of most novels."—Glasgow Herald.

IN CUPID'S COLLEGE. By Mabel

MART, Author of 'Two English Girls,' 'From Harvest to Haytime,' &c. 3 vols.
"The writing is always bright and pleasant, the dialogue is natural and characteristic, and some of the situations are exceedingly pathetic. In Cupid's College is well above the average novel in tone, in feeling, and in writing."—Literary World.

HETTY'S HERITAGE. By Noel

DENE, Author of 'The Aftermath,' 3 vols.
"Has an interesting and well sustained plot, while the number of personages is wisely limited to that necessary for its development."—Morning Post.

Uniform, each in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

NOVELS BY EDNA LYALL.

DOHOVAN: a Modern Englishman.

TO RIGHT THE WRONG.

WE TWO. IN THE GOLDEN DAYS.

KNIGHT ERRANT. WON BY WAITING.

A HARDY NORSEMAN.

A SELECTION FROM

HURST & BLACKETT'S STANDARD LIBRARY.

EACH IN A SINGLE VOLUME, PRICES 6s.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'JOHN HALIFAX.'

JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN. CHRISTIAN'S MISTAKE.

MAS A WOMAN'S THOUGHTS. A NOBLE LIFE.

ABOUT WOMEN. HANNAH.

A LIFE FOR A LIFE. THE UNKID WORD.

NOTHING NEW. A BRAVE LADY.

MISTRESS AND MAID. STUDIES FROM LIFE.

THE WOMAN'S KINGDOM. YOUNG MRS. JARDINE.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'SAM SLICK.'

NATURE AND HUMAN. THE OLD JUDGE; or, Life

NATURE. in a Colony.

WISDOM AND MODERN. TRAITS OF AMERICAN

INSTANCES. HUMOUR.

THE AMERICANS at HOME.

BY DR. GEORGE MAC DONALD.

DAVID ELGINBROD. ALSO FORBES.

ROBERT FALCONER. SIR GILBERT.

BY MRS. OLIPHANT.

ADAM GRAEME. LIFE OF IRVING.

LAIRD OF HUNLAW. A ROSE IN JUNE.

AGNES. PHOEBE, JUNIOR.

IT WAS A LOVER AND HIS LAMB.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED.

CHATTO & WINDUS, PUBLISHERS.

'A DAUGHTER of TO-DAY,' the New Novel by Mrs. EVERARD COTES (SARA JEANNETTE DUNCAN), is now ready, in 2 vols., at every Library.

ALAN ST. AUBYN'S New Novel, 'IN the FACE of the WORLD,' by the Author of 'The Old Maid's Sweetheart,' is now ready, in 2 vols., at all Libraries.

W. E. NORRIS'S New Novel, 'SAINT
ANN'S,' by the Author of 'The Rogue,' has been Reprinted, and the Second Edition may now be had, in 2 vols., at all Libraries.

"It is the feeling of having been among well-bred, well-mannered, well-conducted people, which Mr. Norris, with his tactful sense of what is tellable and what is not, never fails to convey, that will refresh and charm the novel-reader—who has lately, it must be owned, been forced into rather wild company."—Daily Chronicle.

JACK DOYLE'S DAUGHTER. By
R. E. FRANTILLON. 3 vols. at every Library.

"The story is bright and amusing.... It is, in fact, a very book."—Leeds Mercury.

DOROTHY'S DOUBLE. By G. A.

HENRY 2 vols. at all Libraries.

"A thoroughly interesting and readable story."—Spencer.

A SOLDIER OF FORTUNE. By L. T.

MEADE. 3 vols. at all Libraries.

"Not only is the story good, but the studies of human nature are excellent.... The author is to be congratulated on an eminently readable novel."—Edinburgh.

ASTROPHEL, and other Poems. By ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 7s.

"A considerable addition to the poetic literature of the time. It exhibits all Mr. Swinburne's distinctive qualities: his glowing imagery, his aspirations, musical power of phrase and rhythm, love of nature, and strong sense of melody."—Times.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY NOVELS.

MR. SADLER'S DAUGHTERS, the
New Novel by HUGH COLEMAN DAVIDSON, is now ready.

MONEY (L'ARGENT). By Émile Zola.

Translated, with a Preface, by E. A. VISTELLI.

TOM SAWYER ABROAD. By Mark

TWAIN. With numerous Illustrations.
"Tom Sawyer Abroad," with its Jules Verne-like invention and quaint oddity of thought and expression, ought to be an especial delight to boy-readers."—Daily News.

A PROTÉGÉE of JACK HAMLIN'S,

&c. by BRET HARTE. With 20 Illustrations.
"Mr. Bret Harte's new volume is just as fresh and delightful as the output of its predecessor.... The whole volume is charming."—World.

The REBEL QUEEN. By Walter

BRERANT. With a Frontispiece by A. Hickenboth.
"The Rebel Queen" is a remarkable work. It is fascinating as a fiction, and it is instructive and suggestive as a study in sociology to an extent which is not to be taken in at a first reading."—World.

A DOG and his SHADOW. By R. E.

FRANTILLON.
"In 'A Dog and his Shadow' we have a study of a man and his circumstances that, in default of the dog himself, might have entitled George Meredith."—Morning Leader.

ACADEMY NOTES. By Henry Black-

BURN. Twentieth Year. Price 1s.
ACADEMY NOTES is profusely illustrated. ACADEMY NOTES is the only book which gives a Plan of the Galleries and the Positions on the Walls of the principal Pictures. ACADEMY NOTES is the only book used by collectors and kept as a permanent record of the Exhibitions. An important feature of the issue of ACADEMY NOTES for 1904 is the large number of pictures and sketches which appear in no other publication.

The NATIONAL SOCIETY OF FINE

ARTS. With Sketches. 3s. 6d.

The PARIS SALON (1894). With Sketches. 3s.

MY TWO WIVES, &c. By George R.

REMS (Lagnon). First 2 vols. illustrated boards, 1s., cloth, 2s. 6d.
"Mr. Rems is sometimes called an English Zola, sometimes a present-day Dickens. He is something of both, but that he has qualities of his own and is without a peer in his peculiar line of alternate mirth and pathos, is proved once again by this welcome volume."—Woolly Dispatch.

A VINDICATION OF PHRENOLOGY.

By W. MATTIE WILLIAMS, F.R.S. Author of 'Science in Short Chapters,' &c. With a Photographic Portrait of the Author and over 40 Illustrations. Demy 8vo. cloth extra, 12s. 6d.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

SATURDAY, MAY 12, 1894.

CONTENTS.

LORD WOLSELEY'S LIFE OF MARLBOROUGH	600
SCOTTISH LARD NAMES	606
MR. BRYTON'S LYRICS	607
MEMORIALS OF HAILEYBURN COLLEGE	608
NEW NOVELS (With Edged Tools: The Perfect Way of Honour; If Men were Wise; The Husband of One Wife; The Mystery of Clement Dunraven; Saint Ann's; England against the World; The Story of Margreid; A Son of the Forge; The Story of my Dictatorship)	610-610
BOOKS OF TRAVEL	610
SCHOOL-BOOKS	611
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS	612
PAUL VERLAINE'S LECTURE: CHAIO CROINACHAN: A JOURNAL ROOM FOR THE BRITISH MUSEUM: SACKETT V. SUT: A HORROR-BOOK IN FORM OF A CROSS; THE CAVALIER LETTERS: 'ENGLISH BARDS AND SCOTCH KAVIERS'; THE BOOKSELLERS' TRADE DINNER; SALE	613-614
LITERARY GOSSIP	614
SCIENCE—THE GREAT BARRIER REEF; LIBRARY TABLE: GEOGRAPHICAL NOTES; SOCIETIES: MEETINGS; GOSSIP	616-618
FINE ARTS—JAMES JONES AND WHEN; LIBRARY TABLE: THE NEW GALLERY: MISER EXHIBITIONS; SALES; GOSSIP	618-621
MUSIC—THE WEEK; GOSSIP: PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	622-623
DRAMA—LARD'S PLAYS; LIBRARY TABLE: THE WEEK; GOSSIP	623-624

LITERATURE

The Life of John Churchill, Duke of Marlborough, to the Accession of Queen Anne.
By General Viscount Wolsley, K.P.
2 vols. (Bentley & Son.)

PROBABLY few books in very recent times have been more eagerly anticipated, or will, we fear we must add, be closed with a keener sense of disappointment, than the two volumes which form the first instalment of Lord Wolsley's life of Marlborough. That they contain much that is of great and permanent value we should be the first to admit; it would, indeed, be strange if it were not so, when the personalities of the writer and his subject are taken into account. But the world had been promising itself the grateful labour of studying, under the guidance of an eminent soldier, the strategy and genius of the most famous of English commanders; of grasping at last the magnitude of Marlborough's designs and difficulties; of realizing how he accomplished the one and overcame the other. For this we find that we must still wait in hope, while we satisfy our cravings as best we may with fare of a very different kind.

The life of Marlborough, so remarkable for unity of design, is nevertheless sharply divided by a line which serves alike for the moralist, the historian, and the biographer; which separates the life of political dishonour tinged with military glory from that of military glory tinged with political dishonour, the life of suppressed power and enforced inaction from that of boundless scope and superb achievement, the life of dubious fortunes from that of assurance and triumph. It is the latter about which all English-speaking people desire to know; and a few introductory chapters, in addition to those which record Marlborough's military conduct in Ireland and in his earlier and less important campaigns, would have sufficed to deal with the political and social atmosphere in which he lived, and with that phase of his life which offers so little that is attractive. Lord Wolsley has thought otherwise. He has devoted a large portion of his eight or nine hundred pages to an object which we believe to be utterly unattainable, that of reversing, or at least greatly mitigating, the judgment which history has pronounced upon Marlborough's early career. He has taken up the task for which his training and transparent sincerity of purpose least fit him, and has claimed, upon grounds which would sink under a far flimsier structure, a verdict of acquittal, or at least an indulgent sentence, for acts which, in one century as well as another, have ever incurred, and ever will incur, the impatient disgust of honest men. And we find him, in pursuit of this aim, constantly mistaking explanation for excuse; blind, apparently, to the fact that for some crimes there can be no excuse; failing to produce new facts in the prisoner's favour; ignoring causes for base deeds on the part of an unscrupulous man which are patent to all, while with astonishing readiness he accepts as sufficient evidence of the purity of Marlborough's motives expressions of a devotional turn such as are familiar in the dock of a police-court, and may be found on the lips of most of Marlborough's fellow traitors, for whose selfishness and duplicity he can find no epithets too strong. The pity of it all is that Lord Wolsley's labour in this direction—the labour, we should think, of years—is as little likely to be appreciated as it is futile. "Que diable allait-il faire dans cette galère?"

"Very foolish advice, for soldiers cannot write," is Swift's note to Burnet, where the historian disclaims, upon Schomberg's counsel, the intention of discussing military affairs. Lord Wolsley has, at least, retorted effectively upon the satirist whom he hates so cordially. His writing is clear, unaffected, restrained, and temperate; and, on his own ground, he can be eloquent without design. He has given us one or two pieces of soldier work which are admirable, and which heighten at once our disappointment and our hopes; while, except in some unimportant details, his general history is accurate. A few, indeed, of these elaps in detail are almost grotesque; as, for instance, where he speaks of De Witt receiving his power from the mob, or where he describes Buckingham as "a staunch and loyal Cavalier who believed firmly that the king could do no wrong"—Buckingham, of whom a contemporary writes that he "would become Cromwell's groom to save his estate," and whose reputation among the respectable adherents of Charles II. Lord Wolsley will find amply set forth in the 'Clarendon Papers.' His industry is indisputable, and his conscientiousness in the matter of references to authorities almost overstrained. "Sir William Temple," indeed, is perhaps a little vague for an important quotation; but, on the other hand, the study of the Bible is not so entirely obsolete as to render necessary a reference to the chapter and verse of Proverbs for one of the tritest of Scriptural maxims. Our chief grievance against Lord Wolsley's book, in the matter of form, is its inordinate length. We do not complain of the inclusion of anything and everything in the remotest way connected with Marlborough himself or with his imperious mate. But Lord Wolsley has been, we think, ill advised in regarding it as necessary to rewrite that which is so familiar, and which, if not familiar, may be better studied elsewhere. The book is over-weighted with quite unnecessary matter, and so is the patience of the reader, who wants to get to Marlborough.

Before the measure of success with which Lord Wolsley meets in his attempt to vindicate Marlborough's character can be appreciated it is necessary to restate without comment a few of the awkward facts with which he has had to deal. We will choose only such as are absolutely certain, and we will draw them entirely from his own book, for his honesty in narrating them is conspicuous. What were the circumstances which preceded Marlborough's desertion of James II.? We leave out of account that to James he owed from the first everything he possessed of office and consideration; and we begin at the moment when by his supersession before the battle of Sedgemoor in favour of Feversham he acquired, as it were, the right to pay off his employer when he got a chance. In May, 1687, while in James's service and in close attendance on his person, he wrote a treasonable letter to William, in which he intimated, as plainly as words could, that if James pursued a Catholic policy, as he was already doing, he would leave him. In the same year he assured James personally that "no subject in all your three dominions would venture further than I would to purchase your favour and good liking"; and, while asserting his intention to live and die a Protestant, avoided giving a hint that he himself would desert to an invader, though he feared that the king's action might lead to "some consequences which I dare not so much as name, and which it creates in me a horror to think of." In August, 1688, he voluntarily wrote again, absolutely and unreservedly delivering himself and his "honour" into William's hands; and he was able, before William left Holland, to assure him that Anne would desert her father, and that she would take her husband with her. On November 7th, two days after William had landed at Torbay, Marlborough actually accepted from James the post of lieutenant-general, and the command of a brigade of 5,000 men. In this capacity he accompanied his master on November 17th when he marched to Salisbury. There, on the 21st—long after the die was cast, and long after all pretext for hesitation on the ground of religious scruple was over, but while open treachery was not yet quite safe—he vowed to James that "he would serve him to the last drop of his blood." It is only fair to say that Lord Wolsley, though without ostensible justification, assumes that this, as given by James himself, is an exaggerated account. On the morning of the 22nd James learned, in a letter which Marlborough left behind him, that he was in William's camp.

Lord Wolsley deprecates undue attention to all these circumstances. "It is not," he says, "to censure his amours, to despise him for his niggardliness, or to hate him for his double dealing, that we wish to study Marlborough's character and to follow his career." Why then has he devoted so much labour to the futile attempt to explain away this double dealing? "It is sorry work," indeed, "to dwell upon the errors of the mighty dead." But the ground is of Lord Wolsley's choosing.

"In his dealings with men and with nations, was he actuated by self-interest, or by faith in God, by honour, truth, justice, loyalty, and patriotism?" We are not going to enter into a controversy with Lord Wolsley as to what answer should be given to this question, but we cannot refrain from justifying our own position by pointing out a few of his reflections on the matter, with a mental query as to whether he fully understands the meaning of the terms he employs.

The "key-note" of Marlborough's conduct, then, is found in the well-known speech to Lord Galway in 1685, before the Monmouth rebellion: "If the king should attempt to change our religion I will instantly quit his service"; instantly, Lord Wolsley fails to note, and "quit his service," not join that of an invader. Other people will find a "key-note" in his supersession by Feversham. In 1687 Marlborough entered "most unwillingly" into correspondence with William. The letter of August, 1688, contains "a manly, honest, and steadfast resolution." In all he did he "was actuated by lofty motives," and "deliberately chose the upright course." While all the other traitors displayed "baseness," "absolute unscrupulousness," "turpitude," "consummate villainy," and the like, in Marlborough's case the same conduct was pursued "for what he conceived to be a duty to his God." "Every Englishman," we hear, "should cherish his memory for the part he took in bringing about the Revolution." Finally, the man who during two years had been plotting for the downfall of the master to whom he owed everything, and whose bread he took to the last, "did not violate any rule of the moral code of his day." For an instant, to be sure, Lord Wolsley permits himself to be severe when he says that "much that Marlborough did was out of harmony with our ideas of a pure Christian life." And once he lapses into a language understood of the people when he describes the God-fearing patriot as being "as careful as a modern bookmaker to hedge against every possible turn of Fortune's wheel."

It would, indeed, be "sorry work" to follow Lord Wolsley in his examination of Marlborough's second treason. Here, unfortunately, "patriotism" and "devotion to his God" can scarcely be pressed into the service, and Lord Wolsley has to be content with explaining the treachery on the ground that Marlborough had been coldly used by William. He grants that Marlborough betrayed the expedition to Brest, but appears to be greatly comforted by the discovery that it had previously been betrayed by some one else. What surprises us most is that Lord Wolsley nowhere seems to feel that this period of Marlborough's career throws back any light upon the former—that the man who was so complete a scoundrel at one time can scarcely be acquitted for former infamy on the ground of nothing better than one or two Scripture-reader appeals to his conscience and his God.

It is pleasant now to turn for a moment to that part of Lord Wolsley's laborious work where he is at his best, and from which we may cherish hopes of good things in store when he comes to treat of Marlborough's wars. His account of the Monmouth campaign and of the final tragedy of Sedgemoor is clear, full, and sympathetic, and Marlborough's part in it is well defined. The spirited descriptions of the campaign in Ireland, and especially that of the sieges of Cork and Kinsale, leave nothing for the layman to desire; for by the help of excellent plans he can comprehend and follow the movements with perfect ease. These accounts, which contain much that is new, are given—as is the case with every portion of Lord Wolsley's work—with the most conscientious attention to detail; but the interest nowhere flags, and a very valuable contribution to history has been secured. They afford, moreover, admirable instances of Lord Wolsley's power of effective writing when the fitting opportunity occurs, and as passages of what we may call unobtrusive biography have an interest of a personal character for all who know anything of Lord Wolsley's career. He is describing the abortive night surprise at Sedgemoor, and he writes thus:—

"Darkness carries with it an undefinable terror, and most men, when suddenly aroused from sleep, are strangely subject to a wild and unreasoning fright, which runs like an electric current through the ranks of a surprised army, and there is no predicting where it will stop. In the twinkling of an eye, a division may thus become a mad mob, dangerous only to itself, and an easy prey to any enemy who charges home. The appalling hum of alarm, the first symptom of panic, amongst troops at night, once heard, can never be forgotten; it haunts you always. It is the crisis of an instant, and the manner in which it is dealt with is a high test of the leader's nerve and force of character."

Even more graphic are the few sentences in which he describes Marlborough watching his men making their rush upon the breach at Cork:—

"As Marlborough watched his grenadier companies, who headed the assaulting column, plunge into the barely fordable river, under the gallant Lord Colchester, his blood must have tingled with suppressed excitement. With his fighting instincts he naturally longed to draw sword also, and lead his soldiers up the breach. None but those who in battle have been obliged, as responsible commanders, to stay behind, can realize the fullness of that misery. How dreadful are the words 'Go on!' to the man who longs to mingle in the fray and shout 'Come on!' instead! He who has never known the ecstasy of reckless daring which takes possession of the soldier in a storming party knows not the most intense excitement of which the human mind and body working together are capable."

In these passages we welcome the Lord Wolsley of the midnight desert march upon Arabi, and Capt. Garnet Wolsley of the 90th Regiment. We trust that in completing their joint labours on Marlborough's career they will always appear in uniform, and will leave the special pleader's gown to those who can wear it with greater familiarity and success.

Scottish Land Names: their Origin and Meaning. By Sir Herbert Maxwell, Bart., M.P. (Blackwood & Sons.)

THE Rhind lectures in archaeology have been notable contributions to antiquarian knowledge. The series by Dr. Joseph Anderson and Dr. Robert Munro of themselves have dignified the foundation. Last year a fresh department chosen was the elucidation of place-names, and Sir Herbert Maxwell, author of a previous work on the subject, was invited to deliver the course now published. His earlier book, issued in 1887, entitled 'Studies in the Topography of Galloway,' had, when examined critically—irrespective of its Gaelic, in which the author modestly confessed himself sadly imperfect—betrayed inadequate equipment historically. The very list of authorities aroused suspicion; it almost ignored the standard Scottish records.

In place-names as a branch of Scottish archaeology a noble subject presented itself, a great opportunity for reaching new truths. The obvious plan was to collect and collate dated spellings, and never to decide on etymologies unless their accuracy was plain. This latter limitation would cut off, on a moderate computation, at least half of the derivations in the otherwise valuable 'Place-Names of Scotland,' by the Rev. J. B. Johnston, whose dated word forms, though faulty and insufficient, display, so far as they go, real scientific method.

One of Sir Herbert's foremost principles in theory is that as names are not always what they seem, their history must be traced. In theory, we say, for his practice sets his precept at defiance. No criticism is here offered upon his Gaelic beyond a note that his own admission in 1887 must warrant the gravest mistrust. The substance of his work is a classified list of place-names, chiefly in Galloway, with Gaelic etymologies. It might be said that the classification is unsatisfactory, that the names chosen are rarely representative or illustrative, and that they form the induction to no new general proposition. But the explication of any body of names is meritorious, provided it be explication and not mere bubble manufacture.

At the outset Sir Herbert regrets his not giving exact references "to authorities quoted, and the different manuscripts from which old spellings have been collected"; and he goes on to say, "I can but offer an apology to my readers for the omission, with the assurance that they may rely on the care with which such extracts have been made." This mention of manuscript is somewhat of a rhetorical flourish, as we suppose about ninety-nine per cent. of the names dealt with are in print. An endeavour to test his guarantee of care has proved that even in his own Galwegian province his research has been meagre, and that when off his native heath, and not citing Dr. Skene for Celtic, and Capt. Thomas for Norse, his most important extracts, and even in some cases his conclusions, are due to Mr. Johnston's book already named. His reproof of Mr. Johnston for indulging in pure conjecture exemplifies a proverb about Satan and sin.

Since 1887 Sir Herbert has not greatly increased his familiarity with the national records; the chief of them, from the twelfth to the sixteenth century, he certainly has not studied; in 90 per cent. of his place words he makes no citations and names no date to prove either orthography or antiquity. His etymologies therefore do not, as they ought to do, carry with them the evidence on which they were based. They are almost wholly phonetic, and are tainted with the fault of being arrived at without exhaustive search after the primitive form. This, to use his own phrase, is the reverse of scientific. His excuse for not furnishing references is no excuse for denying scores on scores of additional and earlier variants of spellings. Here are a few samples of mistakes into which his habit of turning from the county directory or voters' roll to the Gaelic dictionary has led him. Tarbréoch he accounts for as "tir bréach, wolf ground," whereas in 1604 it was spelt Torbracho, and in 1585 Tarbraikoch. Drangower he gives as "draighnean gobhar (drannan gowr), blackthorns of the goats"—an instance of an attempt to graft grapes on an unsympathetic stem, for Drungangowir was the spelling in 1573-4. Drungans he similarly brings from draighnean, although it was Drungans in 1617. So Drumanee is accounted for precisely as spelt, whereas it was Drumananie in 1698. Some of these things may be capable of explanation, but the explanation is not given either in the former book or in the present, and the readings cited above are older than any vouchsafed by Sir Herbert. Sometimes he proves curiously his neglect of records. Thus he derives from saimir, white clover, the word Glenschamber, "as the mapmakers write it, mistaking the local pronunciation for the Scottish word 'chalmier,' a chamber." One would scarcely gather from this that Glenschalmier was, rightly or wrongly, the early seventeenth century spelling, well vouched in the land registers. The Galloway etymologies are mainly repetitions from the previous book of topography. In one item there is added in the present work a note that Kilhilt "is written Kynahilt in the Rotuli Scot., 1455," a citation doubtless taken at second hand from somebody, but when searched for in the Rotuli Scotie not found there in 1455, if, which we greatly doubt, it be in these rolls at all.

Whilst Sir Herbert is unsatisfactory in Galloway, he does not mend when he leaves it. Borrowdale in the Lake country he explains as borgh dair, whereas authentic record, circa 1211, spells it Borchedale. Mouswald he accounts for as Norse moss völrir, mossy field; yet early records pretty consistently spell its terminal syllable not wald, but fald. Delorain in Selkirkshire is, he says, "Dal Oran, Oran's land," as if that left one any wiser. It is spelt Dalloryane in 1456 and 1477. Did this dubious Oran, whoever he was, spell his name with a "y"? Another Border place, Ruthwell, is favoured with a highly original notice. "Locally pronounced Rivvel," says Sir Herbert, it was "really Rood Well, for so the holy well there was named, from the rood or cross so well known to antiquaries." This derivation constitutes a grievous offence against history. There was no such well and no such name: at least, it is reserved for Sir Herbert to prove the existence of either. The fourteenth century and earliest forms of the name are Ryvel and Revel, and our author has cited as facts a hypothetical well and a hypothetical name to support a trebly hypothetical etymology. Worse even than this remains behind. "Close to Ecclefechan," he says, referring to Gaelic eaglais, a church, "the same word appears in Eaglesfield." In what branch of his studies in manuscript he found this it is hardly worth inquiring. Certain it is, anyhow, that, rightly or wrongly, persons in the vicinity have long been under the impression that the village came into existence not in the Celtic period, but in the present century, and that it was baptized after the imposing Christian name of a local landowner, Mr. Eaglesfield Bradshaw Smith. Any evidence to the contrary will be gratefully received, and then we can consider the etymology. But as an effort in pure conjecture Sir Herbert surpasses himself in the following: "Langbedholm near Moffat is lann Bedleim, church of Bethlehem." The reader will observe the fine note of certainty there is about this statement, coupled, however, with the customary absence of any buttressing citation. It makes one ask, Why Bethlehem and not Bedlam? The latter would have been decidedly more fitting, for a wilder guess was seldom made. In the county valuation roll of 1671 it was Longbodom—"boddom" being a good Scots word descriptive of the waterside hollow! In a sentence rather shaky in its structure Sir Herbert states that the Welsh llan "has been altered to Long Newton, Long Niddrie, and Longformacus, because the mapmakers thought they had in llan the vulgar Scots lang for long." The assertion that llan was altered by the mapmakers to Long is a mere tangle of dubious hypothesis and indubitable error, in spite of the positive way in which it is put forward. What evidence is there save conjecture for llan having ever existed in any of these names? In all three the "vulgar Scots lang" was no mapmaker's mistaken supposition: it was an actual spelling used for five centuries. Besides, Long Newton so early as 1220—somewhat before the era of the mapmakers, we suppose—appears in a Latin charter as "longa Neuton." Sir Herbert's cross-bred half-Welsh etymology is thus opposed to thirteenth century testimony.

Chronology is, of course, the great finger-post of etymology. It is instructive to observe the attitude towards it of one who deals so learnedly with recondite and remote themes like pre-Celtic speech, Pictish vocabularies, the obliteration of Celtic, Norse traces, and the like—problems the very names of which presuppose historical scholarship. A fair test is to examine Sir Herbert's dated citations of place-names anterior to 1400. These reach—surely a very modest number—a total of about one dozen. No fewer than eight of these are taken from Mr. Johnston under conditions not usual with Rhind lecturers, and of these it were hypercritical to say much about the Cathcart reference dated 1158, as that seems to be only one year wrong. In the allusion to Nithsdale, however, a graver case arises. Mr. Johnston having written "c. 1350 Stranith, Stranid" (the c. standing for circa), Sir Herbert, nothing doubting, follows suit, but, disregarding the distinction imported by the circa, states boldly that Nithsdale "is written Stranid in 1350." Here the date is of equal importance with the word, and its trustworthiness and representative truth are of prime moment as bearing on the forces which displaced Strath Nith and substituted Nithsdale in a period of racial transition, the influence of which stamped itself on the place-names along the frontier of Pictish Galloway, Cumbrian

Strathclyde, and Teutonic Northumbria. Sir Herbert's knowledge of history—yet one might expect a Maxwell to know something of Nithsdale—and his fitness to handle the whole matter may be gauged from the fact that Stranitt and Stradnitt were spellings not under David II. in 1350, but in twelfth century charters of David I. That type re-emerging in 1350 would be so great an anachronism that Sir Herbert's guarantee of care will not persuade us that it is not an egregious error resulting from the unfortunate imperfection of his antiquarian methods. Similarly we deny his inference (also a blundered transfer from Mr. Johnston) that the dale in Annandale does not appear till 1295. It appears in the twelfth century. His error in Annandale is over one hundred years; in Nithsdale over two centuries—a fair criterion of the probable accuracy of too many of his speculations in place-names.

Lyric Poems. By Laurence Binyon. (Mathews & Lane.)

MR. BINYON'S poems are noticeable for certain quiet graces which are very little the fashion at present in poetry. They are entirely unmodern in the sense in which the word "modernity" is generally used and often abused. They have no perversities of substance, and no splendours of form. Most of them belong to the order of meditative poetry, and many of them are written under the very direct influence of Matthew Arnold; this one, for instance:—

Dear child, thou know'st, I blame not thee;
Thou too, I know, hast shared my smart.
Neither did wrong; 'twas only she,
Nature, that moulded us apart.

But not to have sinned, in Nature's eyes,
I find a brittle plea to trust:
She punishes the just unwise
More hardly than the wise unjust.

She placed our souls, like Heaven's lone spheres,
In separate paths, no power can move:
O truth too heart-breaking for tears!
Not even Love, not even Love!

This, despite a certain bareness in the language, is distinctly felicitous; and there is in the volume much similar work, similarly grave and dignified, a little cold and formal, but with a really poetic touch. The love-poems have a manner of their own, a point of view and a turn of phrase, both of which are evidently personal to the writer, and certainly not in accordance with the modes of the day. They have, it is true, no passion, no very vivid emotional quality; but, on the other hand, they are entirely free from that mawkish sentiment, amorous and domestic, of which we have lately seen so much. Somewhat lonely and aloof, yet with a shy sensibility which clings to human affection, and tastes quiet joys and sorrows with keen relish and sharp distress, the temperament of which these poems give evidence is one of singular simplicity and sincerity, and, in the matter of love, can speak thus:—

For us, since our joined hands have made us brave,
Not ev'n Love's boastful foe,
Estranging Time nor separating Death,
Can call us slave,

So that we keep perfect the name of those Who did not buy each other's hearts, but gave.

The whole conception of life, which colours with its even hue the manner and art of the form, is that of one who prizes mostly those temperate felicities, those quiet, intellectual delights, which are to be found in a meditative commerce with nature, a rare communion with certain chosen friends, and, above all, the self-communion of a mind which is prepared,

— patient in its purpose, to endure
The pity and the wisdom of the world.

Neither the temperament, apparently, nor the art, is capable of any great emotion, or of a poignant sharpness of sensation; but, however narrow may be its limits, the conception of life is full of dignity, and the conception of the poetic art is, at all events, simpler, older, less parvenu, than that theory of "emotional art," and the gospel of impressionism, which have been carried far beyond their real purposes and legitimate possibilities by many clever versifiers. At its worst, Mr. Binyon's work has something in it of the commonplace, combined with a certain severity of style which is too bare, too threadbare, for really poetic felicity. Yet how fine, in varying ways and degrees, are such meditative poems as the fifteenth, with its depth and subtlety; the tenth, which has a far-off note of Marvell; the ninth, so full of poetic thought and reflection; the thirty-ninth, a lyric which might have been written after reading Campon; and this one, which is, perhaps, characteristic of the writer's way of seeing and expressing things:—

Sweet after labour, soft and whispering night
Blows on dark fields and fragrant country here:
Here there is sleep, to weary limbs delight;
The world is far away, the stars are near.
The world is far away: but there, I know,
Night comes to few unanxious, happy eyes;
And cities, with their restless streets aglow,
Lamps upon lamps, outface the enkindled skies.
London lies there; an endless fiery maze,
Thronged with her millions, sleepless, vast, alone;
The stars are pale above her, where her gaze
Lights the wide heavens and makes the night her own.

There the hot wind blows over no dark fields:
Brief, hard-won rest despotic labours give:
Sleep, to how many spent-out spirits, yields
Life's only sweetness, to forget they live!

Mr. Binyon has a delicate way of writing about the delicate graces of nature, about flowers, certain flowers, about the sands, about certain gentle moods of the sea. And he has touched lightly and tenderly, with a sort of simple fervour, on love and friendship. Yet he is more himself in those poems in which abstract meditation is just coloured by outward nature or human emotion. And here the temperate felicity which is his chief characteristic is seen to excellent advantage: he is himself, and himself at his best.

Memorials of Old Haileybury College. By Frederic Charles Danvers, Sir Monier Williams, Sir Stuart Colvin Bayley, and other Contributors. (Constable & Co.)

It is both right and reasonable that the history of the East India Company's college for the education of their civil servants should have been written, and an endeavour made to record its traditions and the names of its students. The life of the college, though short, was full of interest, and it may be questioned whether any similar institution has sent forth from its doors a greater number of eminent men in proportion to the list of its students.

The origin of the Indian Civil Service was humble, and the qualification required from its members was modest. Factors, writers, and "supra-cargoes" were dispatched regularly to India, China, and the East to supervise the factories, taste tea, and measure muslin. If they lived and behaved well, in course of time they reached the dignities of junior and senior merchant. Candidates were required to be "bred to Writing and Accounts," and to have "learn'd the Rules of Three and Practice." Directors of the Company had to endorse each candidate's application for appointment, or petition as it was called, to the effect that they had received neither bribe nor gratification to induce them to make the necessary recommendation. The pay of the civil servants was small, and originally their sphere was limited; but as their influence increased the natural result of the junction of power with poverty followed. The India House became, as Macaulay has said, a lottery office, which held out ducal fortunes as prizes to the lucky few. Reform was attempted, but it was not till 1800, when the Marquess of Wellesley founded the Calcutta College for junior civil servants, that the necessity for their education was adequately recognized. His scheme was on so large a scale as to alarm the financial instincts of the Directors, who considered that the advantages might be secured in England at less expense, whilst the candidates would benefit by residence at home during the period of preparation. The Company, therefore, bought the estate of Haileybury, in Hertfordshire, and began to build a college; meanwhile Hertford Castle was rented and opened in 1806 under the name of the East India College, Herts. In 1809 the establishment moved into the new building, which was thenceforward known as Haileybury College. Its management deserved success, and the institution flourished till December 7th, 1857, when it was closed in consequence of the Indian Civil Service appointments having been thrown open to public competition. Such is, in short, the necessarily imperfect history of an institution which, as is well known, supplied India for half a century with men who for devotion to duty and integrity were second to none in the public service.

In the volume before us college life is described by Sir M. Monier Williams, first from the student's and next from the professor's point of view, a task for which he is qualified by having filled both positions; and he is, moreover, able to compare Haileybury with Oxford. This part of the book, though excellent, does not call for lengthened remark. Service in chapel, nourishment for the body, and food for the mind were provided; whilst the Wellesley whist club, five courts, cricket, boating, and football supplied recreation. Hunting, too, had its votaries, funds being provided by that friend in need the Persian dictionary, which could always be pawned for six guineas, a remarkable testimony to the value of the work. Literature was not neglected; various periodicals were issued, the best-known of which was the Haileybury Observer, which lived for twenty years, and "numbered among its editors such names as those of Monier Williams, John Strachey, R. N. Cust, W. S. Seton-Karr, C. J. Buckland, J. W. Sherer, and in later times of Auckland Colvin, Maxwell Melville, Val. Prinsep, and J. Beames." Amongst contributors were Sir Lacon Anderson, Sir A. Arbuthnot, Sir George Campbell, H. G. Keene, Sir R. Temple, Sir A. Lyall, and "Pundit" Waterfield.

But of greater interest than college life are the biographical sketches of the professors, of whom, amongst others, Malthus and Sir James Mackintosh enjoyed a European reputation. And most interesting of all would have been similar sketches of the careers of those students who in after life achieved distinction. The omission is, we think, to be regretted, though no doubt difficulty and delicacy are involved in selecting names where so many were eminent. There is, it is true, an interesting and valuable list of students who were educated at the college, but it is in some respects imperfect. The difficulty of preparing a correct one is extremely great, as even men concerned often neglect to supply information for which they have been asked. Hence we think it would have been better to have omitted altogether the mention of appointments held in India unless these were verified by careful search and reference to official returns. As it is, the situations recorded are in many instances by no means the highest held by the gentlemen opposite whose names they stand. There are other defects which are difficult to explain in a book edited by Anglo-Indian experts. For example, on p. 322 a list of the Governors-General of India is furnished, which commences with the Marquess of Wellesley. Surely Warren Hastings was the first Governor-General, and he had successors before Wellesley. Again, in the list of Lieutenant-Governors of the North-West Provinces we miss the name of James Thomason, who was, perhaps, the greatest administrator who ever held that office. Similarly, in the Punjab list Sir Henry Durand's name is omitted, possibly on the plea that he was not a Haileybury man nor a member of the Indian Civil Service; but the excuse is inadmissible, for he was as much connected with that service as were the majority of Governors-General whose names appear on the list, and the name of Sir Robert Montgomery, who never was at Haileybury, is duly recorded. The last-mentioned name appears among the Chief Commissioners of Oudh as Montgomerie, which is incorrect. The name of the present Governor of Madras is Wenlock, not "Wenloch." Under "Governors of Bombay," Sir William Hay Macnaghten is entered as acting from April 27th, 1841, to June 9th, 1842; it is, however, a matter of common knowledge that our ill-fated envoy at Kabul never acted as Governor, and was killed by Sardar Muhammad Akbar Khan on December 23rd, 1841. Now as a work of the sort under consideration is more likely to be used as a book of reference than to be read for its general interest, such errors are to be deprecated.

The volume is handsome, though heavy, the type is good, and the illustrations (some from pictures, others from old photographs) are well reproduced; and although the public to which it specially appeals is constantly diminishing, yet there must be many persons who care to know what manner of school it was which, amongst other scarcely less distinguished men, supplied for the public service persons of such eminence and value as James Thomason, John Colvin, Bartle Frere, Richard Temple, and John Lawrence.

NEW NOVELS.

With Edged Tools. By Henry Seton Merriman. 3 vols. (Smith, Elder & Co.)

A STIRRING tale of adventure in the heart of Africa, far from the laws which govern peaceful life at home, is varied by crisp and pointed dialogues in more sophisticated places between ultra-civilized personages. Mr. Merriman usually writes in a strong, masculine style, and at times with considerable smartness, whether he is describing African forests or London parties. Sir John Meredith, the well-preserved veteran of an old school, conducts himself charmingly towards his former flame and lifelong friend, Lady Cantourne. Their conversations are occasionally too stilted and artificial to be amusing, but as a rule the author accomplishes his purpose of pointing an excellent moral concerning the manners of past and present days with wit and ingenuity. Miss Millicent Chyne's parallel love affairs with Sir John Meredith's son and a large sportsman are considerably less interesting than the adventures of her lovers in search of a fortune. Jack Meredith's perfect manners and ineffable composure occasionally have an almost Ouida-esque flavour about them, but he is an agreeable person. The author apparently fails to see, however, that the recriminations addressed to him and his friend by Millicent, when brought to bay by both men at once, have very considerable truth in them, and that, for a person of quixotic politeness, Jack Meredith's behaviour at that crisis was far once greatly wanting in the repose of the Vere de Veres.

The Perfect Way of Honour. By G. Cardella. 3 vols. (Sonnenschein & Co.)

MARY ALSTON, who chooses "the perfect way of honour"—as G. Cardella sees it—is set before us as a flawless ideal, and the story of her life is a counsel of perfection throughout. She may be wholly lovable; but, if imperfection may presume to criticize perfection, she makes one or two mistakes of judgment which cause "the wages of sin" to be immeasurably greater than they need have been. A girl of her purity and enthusiasm for humanity should hardly have allowed herself to marry a handsome man of the world who was bound to have a more or less ugly past; and certainly she should not have accepted him at first asking, having never up to that moment dreamed of love. It seemed scarcely natural, under the circumstances, that she should have been so absolutely overwhelmed by the revelation of a youthful crime of her husband's four or five years before he knew her. She treats it in the grand style of the modern young woman destined to regenerate the world. It may be that her action is heroic; but it is disastrous, and, on the author's own showing, somewhat unnecessary. For the husband is a capital fellow, fundamentally good in spite of his early defect of will and taint of blood. From the day when he first met his wife he had revered her as she deserved to be revered, and for nine years he had steadily risen by his association with her. The revelation of his shame was a crushing blow, and imposed on her a harder and higher duty towards him; but if she had been a little more judicious, a little wiser and more finely tempered, she could have "paid his debt," as she called it, without wrecking his life, and her own, and her idolized son's, and the lives of the hundreds who depended on her. If this is a cold judgment of an enthusiastic romance, G. Cardella may regard it as more complimentary than impulsive praise would have been. If women are indeed destined to regenerate the world—which shall here be neither denied nor affirmed—at any rate the world may be allowed just one preliminary protest: "Mend us or end us, dear mothers, wives, and daughters; but regenerate along the lines of sanity, and remember that mere emotion can touch only one-half of the disease."

If Men were Wise. By E. L. Shew. 3 vols. (Bentley & Son.)

'IF MEN WERE WISE' is a story of a Canadian settler, Lawrence Wrayburn, who has been jilted in England in favour of his wealthier brother, and, straying out to British Columbia, takes up a small allotment, and buries himself among the pine trees. Thither also comes one Mary Ford as schoolmistress, who is in a somewhat similar plight, for her husband has deserted her. She passes as a single woman, and Wrayburn falls in love with her. The reader will understand that the villain husband is to turn up at awkward moments, and that the nice people are to get themselves into various kinds of trouble. In point of fact this story is full of disasters, and the author risks a great deal by making all her characters more or less miserable. She wants to fix our minds on things above; but her undoubtedly cogent arguments will scarcely console the average novel-reader for a certain lack of the optimism which he loves. Wrayburn is a freethinker in a community of pious Presbyterians and Methodists, and the situation, which is naturally a little strained, is rather humorously described. There is plenty of interest in the three volumes, and they are well written.

The Husband of One Wife. By Mrs. Venn. 3 vols. (Hurst & Blackett.)

SHADRACH TRUPPER, the ill-conditioned chorister-boy who became a curate, preached to Victoria Pengelly from the text: "Whose wife shall she be of the seven?" a question which she answered rightly, but which must have caused her some searchings of heart. For that very lovable, but very faulty widow, maintaining a passionate regret for the husband of her youth, first endeavoured "to earn a soul by marrying a divinity professor," and afterwards became human nature's daily food for an unimaginative, but healthy agriculturist. In the course of her history, too, she nearly united herself, as the result of a "toes" between the Canon and the Squire, with a polished and conventional diplomat, possessing neither the spiritual attractions of the one nor the wholesome unselfishness of the other. It is no small success to have so drawn this versatile character as to have made her natural without a tinge of coarseness, and to have justified the attachment with which her various lovers were affected. Not that she is worthy of any of them on first acquaintance, but through her bright simplicity she responds at last to natures of which at first she has but the most superficial comprehension. Some odd slips are irritating in so able a writer. "Whom" for who, and "Lady Peregrine" for Sir Peregrine's wife, Lady Goldenour, are among them, and they are more numerous than they should be.

The Mystery of Clement Dunraven. By Jean Middlemass. 3 vols. (Digby, Long & Co.)

SIR CLEMENT DUNRAVEN acted wrongly, though perfectly in harmony with his character as a "wicked bart," when he drowned Pierce Vaughan in the ancestral lake. Yet it must be admitted that an enemy so persistent and so uncanny was qualified to goad to the extremest measures any one suffering under "the twin demonesses," fear and remorse. For instance, when Pierce "elects" (if we may use a journalese word which is employed by the writer some eleven times too often) to inflict an unwelcome call on his cousin's unprotected wife,

"he sauntered in at the front door. He was just about to do so a second time when Lisbeth opened it."

With an adversary so mysterious surely no terms could be kept. For Dunraven's other crime there is certainly little justification, and still less for Lisbeth's acquiescence in a wrong so heinous. The story is not in any respect much like life, but in this point seems especially unreal. The minor characters to some extent atone for the defects of the plot. There is a country doctor of whom we had some hopes, and Elvira and her virtuous baronet are creatures of this world. Yet the best that can be said of the book is that it is "sensational," in a sense which is rather old-fashioned. There are more printers' errors than there should be, and a notable absence of French accents. It is too much to hope for local colour in a book of this sort, but surely "Aboyne Court" could hardly be the name of an English house, except a suburban villa. "Bellagarda" and "The Snuggery" suggest the same inspiration.

Saint Ann's. By W. E. Norris. 2 vols. (Chatto & Windus.)

WE have known more successful novels by Mr. Norris than this one. There is, it is true, in 'Saint Ann's' the unruffled gentlemanly style of narrative which is always found in his books, and which prevents their ever being anything but agreeable reading; but the characters are not all so carefully drawn as they might be: most of them are too stagey and conventional, taken as it were from the commonplace book of fiction without sufficient observation and attention to detail by the author. Lola Hamersley is a very fine creature, but we seem somehow to know that self-indulgent, contemptuous creole beauty almost by heart; and in his anxiety to set up an artificial contrast to her in the prim heroine, Mr. Norris makes Rhoda Meynell too cold-blooded and submissive to be particularly interesting. The most successful figure is that of the shy, reserved father, who hardly dares even to show his affection for his only son: he is unobtrusive and refined, and his rare remarks please by their tired cynicism. The old dowager also, like all Mr. Norris's old ladies, is good as far as she goes, but it is hardly far enough. On the whole, however, the criticism suggested by this book is that Mr. Norris should beware of taking things too easily; it has a sense of facility about it which is not the supreme facility given by the highest art, but rather that of mechanical regularity. Mr. Norris will probably never write an unpleasing book, but he might aim at something more positive.

England against the World. By John Littlejohns. (Digby, Long & Co.)

WITHOUT professing to have read through this marvellous novel, we feel justified in saying that it reaches the limits of incoherent pointlessness possible in a published book. Its extraordinary style, its strange mistakes of spelling, and the depressing confusion of its sentiments and plot are past belief, and we challenge anybody who is not obliged to do so by stern duty to get beyond the first two chapters. To say more of this ridiculous book would be doing it too much honour.

The Story of Margridel. By David Storrar Meldrum. (Blackwood & Sons.)

THE dealings of the domestic Erinnyes with the ill-starred family at Kirkcaldy are related by a capable annalist. He can impress a personality, as in the case of Douglas Oliphant's tender and tenacious wife, whose vigour and humour are strong enough to withstand neglect, disenchantment, physical suffering, and mental agony, and to keep her sound-hearted and true to the last, though the idol of her youth has feet of clay. A very womanly and very national type is Jean Maitland of Eden Braes. The author is a good mechanic. The form of the narration, as explaining an allusion not understood in boyhood by the discoveries made by the man in the course of family administration, is convenient and natural.

A Son of the Forge. By Robert Blatchford. (Innes & Co.)

IN many places, especially at the beginning, 'A Son of the Forge' has the effect of real experience. How far this is the case we do not, of course, know, but that is how it strikes the reader. Little or nothing happens during the earlier part in the way of people or incident that might not crop up in the life of any one obliged to battle single-handed against the world like William Horner, chain-maker in the Black Country. He tells his story in the first person with simplicity and directness. The tramp through England, the death of his sister and only friend, the chance meeting with another waif and stray on London Bridge, have to some extent the stamp of things seen and felt. What interferes most with the illusion is the manner of telling; this is more educated and cultured than could be expected from one supposed to be born early in the century, "dragged" rather than brought up. Eventually the Son of the Forge takes the Queen's shilling, and is found in the trenches at Sebastopol. Mr. Blatchford seems to be at home, if not exactly in Sebastopol, at least in barracks. Some of his scenes, but not the characters he sets in them, have an air of experience. The story is sober, by no means sympathetically presented, but still manly and straightforward, and with nothing clap-trap about it.

The Story of my Dictatorship. (Bliss, Sands & Foster.)

IT is only by a very elastic construction of the term that 'The Story of my Dictatorship' can be regarded as falling under the category of fiction. The anonymous author is an ardent advocate of land nationalization, and, instead of casting his views in pamphlet form, has preferred to ventilate them through the medium of a dream in which the narrator, after being suddenly elevated to the post of dictator, receives a number of deputations and demolishes their arguments. The book is dedicated, "without permission, to the Liberty and Property Defence League," and the author's method of conducting a controversy may be gauged from the fact that his typical bishop is styled the Right Rev. Caiaphas, D.D., LL.D.

BOOKS OF TRAVEL.

A Winter Jaunt to Norway. By Mrs. Alec Tweedie. (Bliss, Sands & Foster.) — It is pleasant in these days of pessimism to come across so bright and cheerful a book as Mrs. Tweedie's account of her travels and adventures in Norway. The author gallantly faced the boreal blasts of the North Sea in mid-winter; sleighed and skated in sub-arctic regions with the thermometer two degrees below zero; acquired some knowledge of the difficult, not to say perilous, pastime of ski-racing; and records her experiences with an enthusiasm which is stimulating and contagious. As the guest of that amiable Viking, Dr. Nansen, she was in an exceptionally favourable situation for seeing Norway and the Norwegians, and certainly seems to have made excellent use of her opportunities. Mrs. Tweedie also had the privilege of making the acquaintance of Ibsen, Bjørnson, and George Brandes, and supplies many interesting glimpses into the home life of those eminent writers. She is less satisfactory, however, when she proceeds to critical and biographical details. Her information is here obviously at second hand, and lamentably deficient. Bjørnson in particular has been somewhat unkindly dealt with. Even those who only know of Norwegian literature through translations are well aware that it was Bjørnson's charming series of peasant stories that first made his reputation, and that on them his fame must ultimately depend. In England, too, those beautiful tales 'Arne,' 'A Happy Lad,' 'Synnøve Solbakken,' and their fellows have long been popular, and no fewer than four editions of each of them have appeared among us during the last twenty years. Yet Mrs. Tweedie does not so much as mention them in her very perfunctory notice of Bjørnson, so that we are strongly tempted to doubt whether she has ever heard of them, otherwise she would scarcely have assured her readers, with perfect gravity, that those dismal and only very recently translated Tendens-Romanen 'The Heritage of the Kurts,' as she oddly rechristens 'Dot flager i byen og på havnen,' and 'In God's Way,' are "probably his two best known works." The style of this portion of the book, moreover, is slipshod and vapid as compared with the earlier chapters, and gives one the impression of extreme haste. Finally, the author would do well to be more cautious in the use of Scandinavian words. Skål, not "Skole," is the Swedish for "your health"; "Blackken" (the dun) is presumably intended for Blakken (the grey horse); and "nos" and "kan" on p. 146 are obvious misprints for nog and kan.

THE stupidity of Abroad with Twitly (Henry & Co.) is quite in character with its title. Mr. Mulliner apparently went for a voyage to the Cape. On his way he seems to have had some commonplace adventures and to have met some very dull people who told him a number of foolish stories, which are not rendered more amusing by the author's manner of retelling them. Mr. Mulliner's idea of being funny seems to be to tell a story with an elaborate air of forced simplicity, as if it were addressed to children of slender intellect; and when he indulges in the horrible, as he occasionally does, he jars still more on the reader's feelings. Mr. Mulliner has apparently published a book of the same sort before, so that he has not even the excuse of being a novice.

Sunny Manitoba, by Alfred O. Legge (Fisher Unwin), has a pleasant sound to dwellers on the banks of the lower Thames. Mr. Legge has endeavoured to state facts about the most notable province of the Canadian Dominion. What is chiefly required by intending emigrants from this country is an assurance that they will do wisely in choosing Manitoba. At the close of the fourth chapter Mr. Legge quotes figures, which are the best arguments. Several English farmers had visited the province and reported as to its attractions, and they declared that all whom they questioned "were unanimous in declaring their preference for Manitoba over Quebec, Ontario, England, Ireland, Scotland, Germany, or whatever country they happened to hail from." The foregoing appears on p. 168, the following on p. 269:—

"Believing, as I do, that for the right class of men no part of the world affords a better opening than Manitoba, I would earnestly counsel all who see their way to earning a tolerable livelihood at home, to forego emigration."

Wiser words have seldom been penned by the writers of books on new fields of enterprise. Mr. Legge has clearly described the condition of Manitoba, and no one who reads his book can be misled. Perhaps he has omitted to render full justice to the mosquitoes, which, in certain parts of the province, are more to be dreaded than wild Indians. His narrative is, however, worthy of perusal and of trust.

The Wilderness Hunter, by Theodore Roosevelt (Putnam's Sons), is a work by a mighty hunter who is also a good writer. He has lived for several years in a ranch on the Little Missouri, a part of the North American continent which is still wild, despite the fact of the Northern Pacific Railway traversing it. The day may never arrive when the "Bad Lands of Dakota," with which Mr. Roosevelt is familiar, will cease to be half cinder and half fire. He is a true sportsman, hunting for the sake of supplying himself and his comrades with food, and not simply to slaughter animals which are left to rot or to be eaten by others. There are few, if any kinds of big game in the West of which he has not killed one, and his narrative of experience and adventure while engaged in the pursuit of these wild animals is thrillingly told. Quite as good, however, as any of his hunting stories, is his description of a prairie fire. As a sight it is far less striking than that of a forest flaming to the sky. There is much smoke and a small, but wide tongue of flame. The air is stifling. The fire rushes forward with incredible rapidity, and a party may be encircled before being aware of the danger. The story of such a prairie fire is, as we have said, well told by Mr. Roosevelt, and those who have passed through the ordeal which he sustained can best understand the pluck which he displayed, and admire his graphic narrative.

The Yosemite, Alaska, and the Yellowstone, by William H. Wiley and Sara King Wiley (London, Offices of Engineering; New York, Wiley & Sons), is a quarto volume, well printed and illustrated, with a preface by Mr. James Dredge, to whom it is dedicated as "the best English advocate America ever had." Mr. Dredge recommends all those who purpose making the same journey to take "this little book" with them as a guide. What he considers a big book must be a gigantic one, if this be little. He gives many particulars in the preface which are to be found in guide-books, and he makes a statement which is unpardonable in an Englishman. It is "that the United States of North America stretch in an unbroken line—save for the incursion of the State of British Columbia—one quarter round the globe." Now British Columbia, as every English school-boy ought to know, is a Province and not a State, and Alaska was acquired long after it was formed, so that to write about its "incursion" is to write nonsense. As an Englishman, Mr. Dredge might have given the authors a hint to the effect that it is absurd to write about the Canadians being "more or less hostile," and unidiomatic to write "we would like to say right here." In short, the text stands in need of revision before it can be recommended as a guide to those who have room in their bags for a quarto volume. The illustrations are many, and superior to the letterpress, and give the reader an excellent notion of the places visited by the authors of the book.

Camp Fires of a Naturalist. By Clarence E. Edwards. (Sampson Low & Co.)—In the preface we are assured that this book deals solely with facts, and that these are taken from the note-book and diaries of Prof. Lewis Lindsay Dyche, of Kansas State University. The story of his fourteen expeditions in search of mammals for the museum of that institution has evidently been put in the form of a consecutive narrative by the addition of conversations with and questions by the professor's companions—a little in the 'Sandford and Merton' style—calculated to set the speaker going again whenever a topic becomes exhausted; but, apart from the sense of artificiality thereby produced, the book is full of excellent matter, and will delight boys of an adventurous turn. It is, perhaps, to be regretted that the book has been somewhat "written down" to suit their presumed tastes, for the information it contains is equally fitted for many of their seniors. Born in adversity, nursed by a squaw, and brought up in the backwoods, prairies, and Indian camps, young Dyche began trapping and hunting at the age of nine; by the time he was sixteen he had saved six hundred dollars, and started for Emporia, Kansas, to educate himself at the normal school there; three years more found him employed at the State University as a collector; and there, aided by those who recognized his worth, he steadily rose to his present position. It is a record of which any man might well be proud. The principal subject of the first expedition was the prong-horned antelope, of which a full-page illustration is given; next comes the mule-deer, with a capital plate; several chapters are mainly devoted to the grizzly bear, whose portrait is admirable; while wapiti and other deer, "big-horn" sheep, moose, the Rocky Mountain goat, &c., are treated and depicted in turn. One situation—with a herd of grizzlies behind the sportsman, no climbable timber handy, and a precipice in front—is certainly exciting enough, though the story is very modestly told; but with this exception there are no particularly thrilling personal experiences, because, as the author justly observes, "those who have spent pleasant hours in the woods know that such adventures are of rare occurrence." There are no fights with Indians or hairbreadth escapes, such as the public often considers that it has a right to expect in narratives of life in the backwoods; but for genuine descriptions of the life of a naturalist-hunter, and of his experiences of the animals he pursued, this little work is one of the best of those which have come under our notice. The natural history is remarkably accurate.

SCHOOL-BOOKS.

MR. E. R. WETREY, assistant master at the Bradford Grammar School, and author of A New Manual of Geography for Middle and Higher Forms in Schools (Rivington, Percival & Co.), is a staunch believer in oral teaching, as opposed to mere lesson-learning or reading. He objects to text-books as being usually dry, and to geographical "readers" as "being too diffuse," as the teacher has generally only an hour or two at his disposal during the week. His little 'Manual' is intended as a help to teachers who are willing and able to work on his system. The first section of this 'Manual' deals with North America and the West Indies. The "headings" and subject-matters contained in it have clearly been brought together with much judgment and diligence; the small maps are excellent, and the little book should prove serviceable in the hands of capable teachers. A few mistakes are unavoidable when dealing with so large a mass of information, but the only one at all serious which we have noticed is a statement that Mount St. Elias attains a height of only 13,500 feet, when its real elevation exceeds 18,000 feet.

Macmillan's Foreign School Classics: Colombia. Par Prosper Mérimée. Edited by G. E. Fasnacht. (Macmillan & Co.)—Colomba. By Prosper Mérimée. With Annotations and Vocabulary by the Rev. J. Hewetson. (Rolfes Brothers.)—Some five weeks ago we noticed an edition of 'Colomba,' and here are two more. Surely the multiplication of editions is folly on the part of publishers. Of those now before us M. Fasnacht's is, on the whole, preferable.

Primary German Translation. By H. S. Beraford-Webb. (Rivington, Percival & Co.)—This is a well-contrived volume of simple exercises which will be found useful. The only objection we have is to the selection of the vocabulary. It is best to teach a boy the words which he would most need in the affairs of ordinary life. He may travel through the Fatherland without knowing, or requiring to know, the German for a roebuck or hedgehog; but such words as Gabel, Löffel, Messer, he must learn. Now Mr. Beraford-Webb provides the former, and not the latter. This is to treat the language as a dead language. Again, while he does not give Gabel, he gives Gabelformig.

Introduction to Commercial Spanish. By Leon Delbos. (Macmillan & Co.)—The title of this volume is rather unfortunate. As the author recognizes in his preface, there is nothing commercial about declensions and conjugations, and the greater part of this volume is simply an elementary grammar accompanied by exercises, and not quite so well arranged as one or two grammars already in use. At the end a few pages are devoted to commercial correspondence, and will be found useful, but they are rather slight.

Practical German Readings for Beginners. By L. A. Happé. (Hachette & Co.)—This is an adaptation of the 'Lectures pratiques allemandes' of M. Beck, of the École Alsacienne, and will be found highly useful for beginners. It is quite simple and practical.

Théâtre Français.—Eugène Labiche: La Lettre chargée. Edited by H. Testard. (Hachette & Co.)—This diverting little piece is well suited for those who already know a modicum of French, and its low price is a great recommendation. Prof. Testard's notes, however, consist too exclusively of mere translations. For instance, instead of rendering j'ai failli en sauter "it nearly made me jump," he had better have explained the use of en.

Elementary Classics.—Selections from Quintus Curtius. Edited by F. Coverley Smith. (Macmillan & Co.)—This little volume contains a selection of interesting passages and some well-constructed exercises, besides notes and vocabularies.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

MR. GRANT ALLEN from his title and his preface evidently does not mean the opinions enunciated in Post-prandial Philosophy (Chatto & Windus) to be taken too seriously, so that the critic is saved a good deal of trouble; in fact, the author seems to claim some merit for not following out all his thoughts to their logical conclusion—an operation which in some cases might prove difficult, in others disconcerting to himself. Perhaps it is not unnatural to ask whether it was worth Mr. Allen's while to prolong such life as is conferred by a daily paper on this sort of talk, though after all he is the best judge of that. The kind of opinions enunciated here and their method of expression are just what one might hear at any dinner-party in town where there happened to be a fairly clever young Oxford man just fresh from college; there are just that half-paradoxical way of putting truisms, that affectation of adopting the unpopular cause ("Patriotism is a vulgar vice of which I have never been guilty," says Mr. Allen), and that outrageous advocacy of impossible propositions, which the young ladies think "so clever" when it is whispered over the soup, but which it is suicidal to publish, as it will all appear so silly the next time it is said. Take, for example, Mr. Grant Allen's paper on London, which he heads 'A Squalid Village.' We do not for a moment believe that Mr. Allen really thinks that London is like a squalid village, or that he really prefers Boston, Massachusetts, because it is a more "handsome, well-built, regular town," although there is just a suspicion cast on his playfulness by the allusions to the County Council and "vested interest" at the end; but we prefer to think that Mr. Allen is only upholding a tenet for the purpose, if it may be hinted, of provoking a correspondence in the gazette where this paper first appeared. Then, again, there is our old friend the Zeitgeist, with the well-worn allusions to the earnest young lady from the Abyss of Bayawater—should it not be Brixton, by-the-by? it used to be Bayawater five years ago—and the impressive truths honoured by special paragraphs, such as "The Zeitgeist has changed, and we have changed with it," or "This is just what all great men are for—to make the world accept as a truism in the generation after them what it rejected as a paradox in the generation before them." In one point Mr. Allen seems to us unfair: he favours the Conservatives rather immoderately by his really remarkable statements of Radical doctrines about such matters as the House of Lords and aristocracies; but this was probably his object. On the whole, we are inclined, in the interests of small talk, to blame Mr. Allen for his frank exposure of the habitual dinner-out.

In a pleasantly written monograph on Tennyson's Idylls of the King, and Arthurian Story from the Sixteenth Century (Glasgow, MacLehose & Sons), Mr. M. W. Macallum has stated all that is known of the origin of the story of King Arthur, tracing its course from remote Celtic tradition till it reached Britain and made itself at home there, since which time, as Mr. Macallum says,

"It has been absolutely neglected only when the poetic spirit was languishing; in periods of imaginative energy it has never wanted its witnesses, and has never failed to attract great minds."

But not the greatest. As he himself remarks, Chaucer and Shakespeare

"pass it by without ever seeming to think of using it, save for casual allusion; mostly of a humorous kind. Spenser borrows Arthur's name, but profoundly alters the Arthurian legend. Milton, like Dryden, takes it up to let it fall. Only when we come to Tennyson do we find a poet of acknowledged power busying himself in earnest with the stories of the Table Round."

Mr. Macallum is a great admirer of Tennyson; but he wanted a Dante or Goethe. Dantes and Goethes are rare. More than one of the lesser poets in England, France, and Germany has dallied with the idea of writing an epic of which "the blameless King" or Tristram was to be the hero. Mr. Macallum enumerates them all, and gives an admirable résumé of the works of those who carried out, or even attempted to carry out, their design. What, however, would any of these have been able to achieve had Geoffrey of Monmouth and Sir Thomas Malory not lived and written? Milton all but wrote an Arthurian epic, but found "later Arthurian tradition absolutely fictitious, and thirsted for truth of fact." That was scarcely to be looked for. Even Layamon, writing about the close of the twelfth century, after he had "journeyed wide over land to get the books," could not help saying, "The Britons loved him greatly, and often lied of him, and said many things of Arthur the King that never happened in the kingdom of this world." Milton gave up the history of Arthur, therefore, and what Scott calls its "striking Gothic incidents," and chose "Paradise Lost"; and in 1670 he had so far left his interest in the subject behind as to write in his "History of Britain":—

"Who Arthur was, and whether any such reigned in Britain, hath bin doubted heretofore, and may again with good reason.....But he who can accept of legends for good story may quickly fill a volume with trash."

Dryden was the next English poet of any eminence who seems to have thought of writing an Arthurian epic; but even he did not like to do it without "machinery," and his machinery was, Mr. Macallum says, to have been "the guardian angels of kingdoms" mentioned in the book of Daniel. They would scarcely have been so interesting as Merlin and the Lady of the Lake. Royalty bade "Glorious John" write a play instead, in which, in Arthur's single combat with the Saxon leader, the stage direction is:—

"They fight with sponges in their hands, dipped in blood; after some equal passes and closing, they appear both wounded: Arthur stumbles among the trees, Oswald falls over him; they both rise; Arthur wounds him again, then Oswald retreats."

When Dryden renounced his epic, Blackmore rushed in and wrote one by "catches and starts" while driving about town to see his patients. Even if it had been produced with more care it would not be read now. The fine old stories have, indeed, suffered much at the hands of many men in many lands. Mr. Macallum writes with much well-deserved appreciation of Matthew Arnold, Morris, Swinburne, and others, but considers that "in the Idylls is probably to be found the finest development that the cycle of Arthurian story has as yet attained, or will attain," and this verdict is, no doubt, a just one. So far, however, as it has been Tennyson's endeavour in the last Idylls to make each character which plays a prominent part in his poems an allegorical representation of this virtue or that vice, we by no means follow heartily in his track. We sympathize with Dryton, who was "disposed to regard the story as a genuine national tradition raised on a basis of historic fact"; and though fact, if ever there was any fact, has been a good deal embroidered on, we no more like to see Arthur turned into "the spiritual principle in conflict with sense" than to find him as a culture-hero with Gawain as an attendant sun-god. It is a fault on the right side, but Mr. Macallum's book by no means confines itself to the promise of its title. In reality it gives a sketch of "Arthurian Story" from the earliest times.

THE second volume of the highly competent translation by Mr. Charles Roche of Chancellor Pasquier's Memoirs (published by Mr. Fisher Unwin) deals with the period 1812 to 1814, and leaves Napoleon at Elba. We are not among those who find Pasquier, as edited by the Duc d'Audiffret-Pasquier, good reading; but his memoirs deal with a period so full of interest that, though they contain nothing that is new, they can hardly be dull. The present volume has a fairly interesting account of the De Maubreuil episode, in which Pasquier tries to clear Talleyrand of the guilt of plotting a private murder of Napoleon.

MR. BENTLEY has issued a translation of M. Lévy's 'Napoleon Intime' under the title of Private Life of Napoleon. In these volumes M. Lévy, as M. Jules Claretie remarked in these columns a year ago, tries to prove that Napoleon was no tiger, but a mild domestic cat; and cannot be said to succeed in the attempt.

HOLIDAY-MAKERS at Whitsuntide may be glad of Mr. Black's excellent guide-books to Belgium and Holland (A. & C. Black). The former is in a third edition; the latter is a new one, excellently put together. A short paragraph on the coinage would have been an advantage.

Little Loo is the latest addition to the cheap edition of Mr. Clark Russell's romances which Messrs. Low & Co. are issuing.—A six-shilling edition of Cheap Jack Zita, by Mr. Baring Gould, has reached us from Messrs. Methuen.

WE have received from Messrs. Burns & Oates a second edition of Mr. Pope's translation of Cardinal Capocci's Life of St. Philip Neri, written in that strain of undiluted panegyric which is inevitable in Italian books of the class.—Dr. Samuel Davidson has brought out a third and improved edition of his Introduction to the Study of the New Testament (Kegan Paul & Co.). The veteran author has carefully revised his volumes, which form a standard manual of the subject. He has taken notice, for instance, of the recently discovered Gospel of St. Peter.

As might be expected from his minute knowledge of the period, Mr. Aitken has prefixed an excellent memoir to the Aldine edition of The Poetical Works of Thomas Parnell (Bell & Sons), and added good notes.—We are indebted to Messrs. Dent & Co. for a handsome issue in two volumes of The Longer Prose Works of W. B. Lander, edited by Mr. Crump, and provided with an excellent index to the whole of his elegant reprint of Lander's writings. The title 'Longer Prose Works' is not particularly happy, but we may mention that it contains 'The Citation of William Shakespeare,' 'Pericles and Aspasia,' &c. Mr. Crump has fulfilled his editorial duties in a satisfactory manner. Messrs. Dent, who take as much care for the external as the internal appearance of their publications, have sent us another instalment of their edition of Dumas's delightful romances. The three volumes which contain The Two Dianas are printed at the University Press of Cambridge, Massachusetts, and are noticeable for neat binding and the excellence of their illustrations, which are, we fancy, of French origin. Those who have delighted in Mr. Stanley Weyman should read this splendid and bustling story of adventure by the great master whom he follows.

WE have on our table English History for Examination Purposes, 1727-1788, by F. Froeth (Relfo Brothers).—The Elements of English Grammar, by A. S. West (Cambridge, University Press).—A First Lesson in French, by F. Gouin, translated by H. Swan and V. Bétis (Philip).—Passages for Translation from French Authors, selected by W. Durnford (Stanford).—Report of a Conference on Secondary Education in England (Oxford, Clarendon Press).—The Distribution of Wealth, by J. R. Commons (Macmillan).—What Our Daughters can do for Themselves, by Mrs. H. Coleman Davidson (Smith & Elder).—Farewell, Love! by M. Sersao, translated from the Italian by Mrs. H. Harland (Heinemann).—In Various Moods, by M. A. B. Evans (Putnam).—The Pleasures of Home, and other Poems, by J. Thom (Edinburgh, Hunter).—Lessons on the Church Catechism, by the Rev. T. H. Barnett (C.E.S.S.I.).—The "Good Cheer" of Jesus Christ, by the Rev. C. Moinet (Low).—A Five Years' Course of Bible and Prayer Book Teaching: Lessons for the First Year (C.E.S.S.I.).—The Comedy of English Protestantism, edited by A. F. Marshall (Burns & Oates).—How to Read the Prophets, by the Rev. B. Blake: Part IV., Ezekiel (Edinburgh, T. & T. Clark).—Religion, by G. de Molinari, translated by W. K. Firminger (Sonnenschein).—Divine Humanity, by the Rev. H. C. Atwood (Wells Gardner).—The Earliest Life of Christ: being the Diatessaron of Tatian, with an Historical and Critical Introduction by the Rev. J. H. Hill (Edinburgh, T. & T. Clark).—Bourgeois et Gens de Peu, by A. Barine (Paris, Hachette).—Die vierzehn Nothelfer, by W. H. Riehle, edited by R. E. Macnaghten (Sonnenschein).—and Les Émules de Darwin, by A. de Quatrefages, 2 vols. (Paris, Alcan). Among New Editions we have Dante's Divine Commedia, by F. Hettinger, D.D., edited by H. S. Bowden (Burns & Oates).—Grammatisch-stilistisches Wörterbuch der deutschen Sprache, by J. E. Wessely (Williams & Norgate).—and Every Man's Own Lawyer, by a Barrister (Lockwood).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Cobbold's (G. A.) Religion in Japan, 19mo. 2/6 cl.
Discipleship the Scheme of Christianity, by Author of 'The King and the Kingdom,' 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Dowden's (J.) The Celtic Church in Scotland, 12mo. 2/6 cl.

Law.

Greenidge's (A. H. J.) Infamia, its Place in Roman Law, 10/6
Humphreys's (G.) The Law relating to Parish Councils, 7/6

Fine Art.

Scenes from Every Land, over 500 Photographic Views, Introd. by L. Wallace, ed. by S. L. Knox, 21/ net, cl.
Studio (The), Vol. 2, Imp. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Woodley's (W.) The Design of Buildings, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

Poetry and the Drama.

Pullarion's (E. N.) Lilian Songs and German Lyrics, 8/ cl.
Gale's (H.) Crickets Songs, cr. 8vo. 2/6 linen.
Hamilton's (M. L.) Sonnets of the Wingless Hours, 16mo. 2/6
Ibsen's (H.) Brand, a Dramatic Poem, trans. by F. E. Garrett, cr. 8vo. 10/6 net, half-parchment.

Music.

Daniel's (H. B.) Chapters on Modern Music, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Maitland's (J. A. F.) Masters of German Music, illus. 5/ cl.

Philosophy.

Locke's (J.) An Essay concerning Human Understanding, 2 vols. 8vo. 32/ cl.

Political Economy.

Booth's (C.) The Aged Poor in England and Wales, 8/6 net.
Helm's (K.) The Joint Standard, a Plain Exposition of Monetary Principles, cr. 8vo. 2/6 net, cl.
Root's (J. W.) Silver up to Date, 12mo. 2/6 cl.

History and Biography.

Ludlow (H.) Memoirs of, edited by C. H. Firth, 2 vols. 36/
Manchester College, Oxford, Proceedings and Addresses, October 19th-19th, 1893, 8vo. 5/ net, cl.
Warner's (W. L.) The Protected Princes of India, 8vo. 10/6
Youmans (E. L.) Life and Letters of, by J. Fiske, cr. 8vo. 8/

Geography and Travel.

Bower's (Capt. H.) Diary of a Journey across Tibet, 8vo. 16/
Conway's (W. M.) Climbing and Exploration in the Karakoram Himalayas, Illustrations and Map, 31/6 net, cl.
Finlayson's (C. B.) A Nubody in Mashonaland, cr. 8vo. 4/ cl.
Zau's (B.) Travel and Adventures in the Congo Free State, 8vo. 14/ cl.
Sealey's (A.) The Great Globe, First Lessons in Geography, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Wolverton's (Lord) Five Months' Sport in Sonali Land, illus. 8vo. 7/6 cl.

Paleontology.

Aristophanes's Wasps, ed. by C. E. Graves, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
Brockelmann's (C.) Lexicon Syriacum, Part 1, 4/ net, swd.
Latin Prose Versions, contributed by Various Scholars, edited by G. O. Ramsey, sm. 4to. 21/ net, half-vellum.
Select Specimens of the Great French Writers in the 17th, 18th, and 19th Centuries, ed. by E. Fasnacht, 7/6 cl.

Science.

- Bower's (J. A.) Simple Experiments for Science Teaching, 12mo, 2/6 cl.
 Bury's (J. S.) Clinical Medicine, 8vo, 31 cl.
 Bury's (J. A.) The Steam Engine, 8vo, 18 cl.
 Gibber's (A.) The Starry Skies, illus. 12mo, 2/6 cl.
 Gibson's (P. M.) The Amateur Telescopicist's Handbook, 3d ed.
 Hutchinson's (Rev. H. N.) Creatures of Other Days, 14 cl.
 Lister's (J. F.) Cotton Manufacture, illustrated, 8vo, 7/6 cl.
 Lydekker's (R.) A Handbook of the Mammalia, 2e, 6 cl.
 Marshall's (late A. M.) Biological Lectures and Addresses, 6 cl.
 Nisbet's (J.) Studies in Forestry, a Short Course of Lectures, cr. 8vo, 5 net, cl.
 Oliver's (J.) Milk, Cheese, and Butter, illustrated, 7/6 cl.
 Sharpe's (R. B.) A Handbook to the Birds of Great Britain, cr. 8vo, 6 cl.
 Smith's (J.) Monograph of the Stalactites and Stalagmites of the Cleeves Cave near Dairy, roy. 8vo, 7/6 cl.

General Literature.

- André's (P.) Stanhope of Chester, a Mystery, cr. 8vo, 6 cl.
 Austin's (A.) The Garden that I Love, cr. 8vo, 9 cl.
 Cotes's (Mrs. E.) A Daughter of Today, cr. Novel, 2 vols. 21 cl.
 Crumple's (J. F.) Questings in the Market, and other Social Sketches, cr. 8vo, 8/6 net, cl.
 Davidson's (H. C.) Mr. Sadler's Daughters, cr. 8vo, 3/6 cl.
 Dixon's (M. H.) The Story of a Modern Woman, cr. 8vo, 6 cl.
 Drew's (D.) Henry Standon, or Love's Debt to Duty, 3 vols. cr. 8vo, 31/6 cl.
 Dunn's (G.) Red Cap and Blue Jacket, 3 vols. cr. 8vo, 25/6 cl.
 Felton's (S.) Creation, its Law and Religion, cr. 8vo, 5 cl.
 Fiske's (S.) Jack's Partner, and other Stories, cr. 8vo, 2/6 cl.
 Gibson's (G. H.) Ironbark Chips and Stockwhip Cracks, illustrated, imp. 16mo, 5 bds., cl. tack.
 Harcourt's (A.) For Love and Liberty, 2 vols. cr. 8vo, 21 cl.
 History of the World's Columbian Exposition, edited by Hooton, W. B. Cameron, 4 parts, folio, 12/6 each, awd.
 Hugo's (V.) Les Misérables, trans. by C. R. Wilbour, 7/6 cl.
 Kelt's (L.) Lietha, cr. 8vo, 6 cl.
 Kennard's (Mrs. E.) Wedded to Sport, cr. 8vo, 2/6 bds.
 Labillière's (S. P. de) Federal Britain, cr. 8vo, 6 cl.
 Little Hests by the Way, by H. H. O., 12mo, 2/6 cl.
 Lynch's (L. L.) A Dead Man's Step, cr. 8vo, 2 bds.
 Mantegazza's (P.) The Art of Taking a Wife, cr. 8vo, 6 cl.
 Norris's (W. B.) The Countess Radna, cr. 8vo, 6 cl.
 Playne's (P. C.) Indian Pickles, illustrated, cr. 8vo, 2 cl.
 Roberts's (M.) The Purification of Dolores Silva, and other Stories, cr. 8vo, 3/6 cl.
 Sanborn's (E. A.) A Truthful Woman in Southern California, cr. 8vo, 3/6 cl.
 Smith's (C. E.) For Better, for Worse, cr. 8vo, 2 cl.
 Some Aspects of Disestablishment, ed. by H. C. Shuttleworth, cr. 8vo, 3/6 cl.
 Titmarsh's (M. A.) (W. M. Thackeray) Loose Sketches, from the Britannia, 1841, cr. 8vo, 5 net, cl.
 Wilkins's (M. E.) Pembroke, a Novel, cr. 8vo, 6 cl.
 Yachting, Vol. 1 by Sir E. Sullivan and others; Vol. 2 by H. T. Pritchett and others, cr. 8vo, 10/6 each, cl.

FOREIGN.

- Schürer (E.) Die Missionen Christengemeinden im römischen Reich, 1m. 20.
 Starck (H. v.) Palästina u. Syrien vom Anfang der Geschichte bis zum Siege des Islam, 4m. 50.
 Stramberg's theologische Studien, hrsg. v. A. Ehrhard u. E. Müller, Vol. 1, Parts 4 and 5, 2m. 40.

History and Biography.

- Filon (A.) Mérimée et son Amie, 3fr. 50.
 Lendire (G.) Le vrai Chevalier de Maison Rouge, Genève de Bougeville, 1761-1814, 3fr. 50.
 Weil (G.) Saint-Simon et son Œuvre, 3fr. 50.

Geography and Travel.

- L'Algérie de nos Jours, 24fr.
 Lallemand (C.) Le Caire, 30fr.
 Ory (P.) La Commune Annamite au Tonkin, 3fr. 50.

Philology.

- Monceaux (F.) Les Africaines, Étude sur la Littérature latine d'Afrique, 3fr. 50.

Science.

- Lodoe (B.) Traité de la Physiologie humaine, 12fr.

General Literature.

- Bujac (E.) L'Armée russe, 6fr.
 Calmettes (F.) Brave Fille, 3fr. 50.
 Case (J.) L'Étranger, 3fr. 50.
 Féral (P. G.) Un Amour de Belle-Mère, 3fr. 50.
 Larroumet (G.) Nouvelles Études de Littérature et d'Art, 3fr. 50.
 Lavedan (H.) Le Lit, 3fr. 50.
 Lemaitre (J.) Myrrha, 3fr. 50.
 Porto-Riche (G. de) Amoureuse, 3fr. 50.
 Silvestre (A.) La Kocake, 3fr. 50.
 Vaucaire (M.) L'Éclaircie de la Petite Vierge, 3fr. 50.

PAUL VERLAINE'S LECTURES

IN BARNARD'S HALL, OCTOBER 21, 1893.

Memento dédié à Edmund Gosse.

DANS ce hall cinq fois séculaire,
 Sur ce fauteuil dix fois trop grand,
 A ce pupitre révérend,
 Qu'une lampe, vieux cuivre, éclaire,
 J'étais comme en quel temps ancien !
 Et l'âme un peu du Moyen-Age
 M'investissait d'un parrainage
 Grave, à mes airs mûrs étant bien.

Ma parole, en l'antique enceinte,
 Ne jurait pas trop célébrant
 La foi du passé, sûr garant,
 L'éternel Beau, vérité sainte

J'entretenais de mon pays,
 De cette France athénienne,
 Une élite londonienne
 Dont les vœux furent obéis,
 Puisque de l'estrade sévère
 Il ne tombait, conformément
 Au réel devoir du moment,
 Que ces mots : " bien dire et bien faire,"
 Et tel bel autre M cetera,
 Dont s'est joint la bonne salle,—
 Coin de la ville colossale
 Où, ce soir, l'Esprit se terra.
 Je conserverai la mémoire
 Bien profondément et longtemps
 De ces miens sérieux instants
 Où je revêcis de l'histoire.

PAUL VERLAINE.

Paris, le 21 Mars, 1894.

CRAIG CHOINNACHAN.

1, Marlborough Road, Kensington, May 1, 1894.

CAN any Celtic scholar enlighten me as to the real meaning of the name of the hill where Montrose was defeated on the Oykel Kyle, opposite Inveran? I am accused by a critic of blundering in calling it "The Hill of Wailing." But the people call it "The Rock of Lamentation," translating thus Craig Choinnachan. Is this an erroneous Volks-etymologie? At all events, this is the local name and opinion.

ANDREW LANG.

A JOURNAL ROOM FOR THE BRITISH MUSEUM.

THE time must shortly arrive when the authorities of the British Museum will have to make a further differentiation among the persons attending the Reading Room. The crowds which throng that noble chamber are getting more multifarious every year. The lady journalist and the scholar, the compiler and the researcher, the generalist and the specialist, all compete for the attentions of the officials. It may fairly be contended that the first object of the British Museum is to supply conveniences for those who are attempting to add to the world's knowledge, rather than for those who are engaged in repeating what has already been gained. Yet the tendency is for the latter class to oust the former at the Bloomsbury institution. Something has been done of late years to give increased facilities to the specialist workers by setting apart a Students' Room, a Newspaper Room, an Assyriological Room, and the Large Room for their use. I desire to draw attention to the urgent need for another specialist room, if I may so call it, to be devoted to the display of current scientific journals.

Perhaps the most remarkable characteristic of modern research is the immense development of the scientific journal. Any one who wishes to keep abreast with the progress of his special study must either take in or have access to the periodical publications especially devoted to it. Nor is this all; science, while becoming more specialized, is becoming also more organized, and each special study has innumerable links with other branches of knowledge. To be au courant with one's subject one has often, therefore, to keep a sharp eye on specialist journals devoted to branches of science at first sight far remote from one's own.

One ought, in short, to have ready and constant access to almost all specialist journals; only a national institution like the British Museum can give such access, yet practically nothing is done to attain this end, whereas in most continental libraries, and even in such libraries as the London Library and Dr. Williams's Library in this city, the current scientific periodicals are laid upon an accessible table month by month and quarter by quarter. Nothing of this kind is done at the British Museum.

Not alone is it impossible to take a general and periodical survey of scientific journals at the Reading Room, but even the specialist journals, devoted to one's own subject, are not made accessible so promptly as might be wished. It is rare indeed that one can get a sight of the current number of any scientific periodical in which one is interested; as a general rule eighteen months elapse before one can have out a number in the Reading Room. Progress of science nowadays goes by such leaps and bounds that a lapse of eighteen months may practically destroy the utility of any such references to a periodical. Roughly speaking, half the value of such publications is exhausted within two years of their first appearance; so that by the present policy of the Museum authorities—doubtless forced upon them by circumstances—half the enormous sum which must be spent in acquiring the magnificent collection of specialist journals in the Museum is thrown away. If a Journal Room could be opened this dead loss could be obviated, and an enormous boon conferred upon English scholars.

There would doubtless have to be discrimination made, both in the periodicals to be displayed and in the persons who should have access to them. It would be obviously impolitic to render accessible by this means the popular English monthlies which are accessible in so many public libraries. Some amount of selection would even have to be adopted with regard to the foreign journals filed in the Journal Room; but such a selection would be easily within the power of the remarkable body of specialists who do such good work for English scholarship in their capacity as the officials of the British Museum.

On the other hand, it is a necessary part of the plan of such a room that the journals to be filed should be readily accessible to students, without the presentation of tickets for each journal consulted. It is often by a mere casual glance at the table of contents of the journal that one comes across something useful for one's special purpose. A certain amount of discrimination will therefore have to be exercised in the persons to be admitted to the room, since they must be trusted to replace the file in its accustomed niche. However, these are matters of detail, which Mr. Maunde Thompson and his colleagues could easily overcome.

I trust, therefore, that the authorities of the Museum will see fit to establish at an early date such a Journal Room as I have indicated above, and thus confer one more boon upon English scholarship.

JOSEPH JACOBS.

SOCKET v. SOT.

64, Canonbury Road, N., May 7, 1894.

I CAN fully confirm your assertion as to the use of "sot," and not "socket." More than fifty years ago, when I was a child in Derby, the nursery rhyme was always used precisely as you state, and I have since many times repeated it in that form to my own children.

T. PLACKETT.

"SOCKET," anyhow taken, is a poor rhyme enough. The last three lines can be turned to rhyme very neatly with "sot." Now, did Mr. P. A. Daniel see the word spelt? If not, probably it should be written "sucket" or "soket." A sucket is a sucking rabbit, or a conserve sweetmeat. This would have to do with sucking and drinking. A socket is any hollow pipe, more especially for a candle, and has nothing to do with sucking or drinking. But that "drunken little candlestick" is a curious coincidence. The play on the word seems to turn on the resemblance between "soket" and "socket." Brickett does not give the word in his vocabulary.

C. A. WARD.

A HORN-BOOK IN FORM OF A CROSS.

The Leadenhall Press, E.C.

KNOWING that I am engaged in writing a work on the horn-book, a friend recently drew my attention to an example in the shop of one Signor Chanteri, a Folkestone dealer in curiosities. It was purchased by a Parisian dealer who happened to be visiting Folkestone. Before the deal was concluded, Signor Chanteri wrote me that another horn-book in the form of a cross had been placed in his hands for sale. Evidence of a horn-book of this shape over having existed is but slight, and my curiosity was strongly excited. I wrote at once for particulars, stating that I should like to buy it; but by next post I learned that the Parisian dealer had called and purchased both horn-books, taking them away with him.

I have since used every possible argument to induce Signor Chanteri to give me the name and address of the purchaser of the "cross" horn-book, and I have offered him two or three guineas if he will obtain a photograph of it, I paying all expenses in advance. In return for the promise of a copy of my work when ready, Signor Chanteri has sent me a sketch from memory, and this is all I can get.

I believe that there is such a horn-book, and my motive for writing to the Athenæum is publicity—publicity here, in Paris, and in America, so that the dealer who purchased, or the collector who has acquired it, may courteously favour me with a full-sized photograph and description.

In making countless inquiries about horn-books, this is the only instance in which I have been deliberately and senselessly balked.

ANDREW W. TUCKER.

THE CAVOUR LETTERS.

May 9, 1894.

IN last week's issue your reviewer remarks that the title under which we publish the Cavour letters, 'Count Cavour and Madame de Circourt: some Unpublished Correspondence,' is "a bad title for letters that have already been published on the Continent." The impression conveyed by this remark to the average mind is doubtless that some considerable period has elapsed between the issue of the letters on the Continent and in this country. We shall be glad, therefore, if you will allow us to state that the publication was as nearly as possible simultaneous, there being barely a month's interval between the two issues.

CASSELL & Co., Limited.

. We were quite aware that the original letters were published only a few weeks ago; but we still fail to see why the English version should be styled "unpublished correspondence." "The impression conveyed" by such a title "to the average mind is doubtless that" the letters make their first appearance in the English translation.

'ENGLISH BARDS AND SCOTCH REVIEWERS.'

3, Letanou Gardens, Wandsworth, May 4, 1894.

ON reading the letter of last week under the well-known signature of J. D. C., my copy of the third edition of 1810 was at once referred to, and found to be identical with that described in the second-hand catalogue quoted by J. D. C., the water-mark on the title-page, and upon every sheet, being "Brasted Mill, 1818."

I leave to others the solution of this enigma, and only wish to add that J. D. C. is mistaken in thinking that the fourth edition is identical with the third, except in the substitution of the word "fourth" on the title-page. On p. 4, line 13, the word scowl appears instead of "crawl," an error in the third edition that must have given a terrible wrench to a sensitive nature like Byron's. On p. 76 the word "her" is inserted after "Lais rolls" in the fifth line. Three other variations are mere corrections of trivial misprints.

I may state that my copy of the fourth edition is dated 1810, and has the Collins imprint. There are not any water-marks on the paper of this edition.

JOHN R. BAGGULEY.

THE BOOKSELLERS' TRADE DINNER.

May 7, 1894.

MY contention that the trade dinner held on April 14th was not a booksellers' dinner has not been refuted by either Mr. William Bartram or Mr. Joseph Shaylor, or any one else. So weak is their position that they have both dragged in at the close of their letters to you—as if by pre-arrangement—the question of booksellers' discount, which has nothing at all to do with the matter, but which is being discussed elsewhere. They probably thought that by raising such a question they could score me off.

The Booksellers' Provident Institution is purely an affair for publishers and publishers' clerks. The publishers enter their sons as members, and the publishers aid their clerks in their subscriptions to become members of the Institution; but not half a dozen pure and simple London booksellers have sought admission during the last twenty years, simply because they have no belief in it. If it was an institution founded on a broad and liberal basis it would no doubt commend itself to the trade in general; but under its present constitution that prospect is in the dim future.

Your correspondents dwell feelingly on the fact that they bestow their funds on the necessities; but what else are they to do when they have funds to dispense? They must give them to somebody, and I do not deny that they may have done some good.

Mr. William Bartram poses as a bookseller; but if on any other day except April 14th I was to style him a bookseller, he would turn and rend me. I don't suppose he has sold half a dozen books in his life. Mr. Shaylor's position is a very different one, although I think he has shown somewhat bad form in denouncing "sellers of books" as unworthy of his attention, seeing that he obtains his living by supplying them with books, as well as the other class to which he refers.

The statement in the second paragraph of his letter quite confirms my standpoint, when he enumerates the status of individuals who were present at the Provident Dinner. If he could induce booksellers to be present, he would not require the attendance of bookbinders, printers, et hoc genus omne.

As a further evidence of my contention, I am ready to give him the names of six London booksellers who were not present for every one he had at the dinner.

A LONDON BOOKSELLER.

SALE.

MESSRS. SOTHERBY, WILKINSON & HODGE commenced the sale of Mr. Hugh Galbraith Reid's library on Thursday, the 3rd of May. The following are the more important prices realized in the first five days. Aldine Poets, 57 vols., 1835-52, 18l. Various Publications of the Bannatyne Club, sold separately in 109 lots, realized a total of 122l. Chronicon Nurembergense, Nuremberg, 1493, 16l. Reid, Catalogue of the Works of George Cruikshank, 3 vols., 1871, 14l. 5s. Dibdin, Bibliotheca Spenceriana, Ædes Althorpianæ, and the Cassano Catalogue, 1814-23, 24l. Bibliographical Decameron, 3 vols., 1817, 16l. Tour in France and Germany, 1821, 13l. 10s. Billings's Antiquities of Scotland, large paper, 4 vols., 1845, 13l. Drayton, Polycolbion, 1623, 10l. The sale will continue until May 18th.

Literary Gossip.

DURING a preliminary search in France for materials illustrative of English history, Mr. Round has noted two documents of which the existence seems to have been hitherto unknown. One is the final and elaborate treaty between Henry II. and his daughter-in-law, "the young queen," which should certainly find a place in any future edition of the Fœdera. The other is a writ of the Empress Maud in which, even after her expulsion from London, she treats the capital as still in her power, and speaks of England as "regnum meum," a phrase occurring, it is said, in only one other of her known charters.

MESSRS. REMINGTON & Co. have now in the press a new work by Lady Jeune, which will shortly appear in one-volume form.

A MEETING of the London Booksellers' Society was held last week to consider the question of trade terms from publishers (some of whom have been memorialized on the subject) for books above a certain price; but nothing definite appears to have been done, except the passing unanimously of a resolution pledging the members not to sell "net" books under the published price. It seems probable that a conference will be held between publishers and booksellers.

MR. FORD HUEFFER, son of the late Dr. Hueffer and grandson of Ford Madox Brown, and author of 'The Brown Owl,' has written a fairy tale, entitled 'The Queen who Flew,' which, with a frontispiece specially designed for it by Sir E. Burne-Jones, will be published shortly by Messrs. Bliss, Sands & Foster.

MESSRS. SONNENSCHEIN & Co. will shortly publish a biographical and critical essay on "Ossian" Macpherson and the rise and influence of the Ossianic legend, by Mr. Bailey Saunders, who contributed an article on the subject to the 'Dictionary of National Biography.' The volume, which will include a series of hitherto unpublished letters, partly from the Marquess of Abergavenny's MSS. at Eridge and partly from the British Museum, will throw a good deal of fresh light on Macpherson's life and character, and contain an account of his famous quarrel with Johnson, very different from that supplied by Boswell. It will have Romney's portrait of Macpherson as a frontispiece.

MISS VIOLET HUNT has been making the, for England, somewhat new experiment of writing a novel in dialogue, after the fashion of "Gyp," called 'The Modern Progress.' It is to be issued by Messrs. Osgood, McIlvaine & Co. about the middle of June. Some chapters of it have appeared in Black and White, and others in the Pall Mall Gazette; but the story is continuous.

THE death is announced of Mr. Wm. Alexander Abram, of Blackburn, a well-known Lancashire journalist and historian. He at one period was editor of the Blackburn Times, at the same time contributing items of local interest to the Preston Guardian. Amongst other works of note he wrote a 'History of Blackburn,' a bulky volume published in 1877, which has long been out of print. Mr. Abram died on the 2nd inst., aged fifty-nine.

MR. S. ARTHUR STRONG has in the press an edition of the Arabic text of the conquest of Abyssinia by Shihâb ad-Din, based upon the unique MS. in the British Museum. There are some other MSS. in the East, and others in private possession, but inaccessible at present. "Copies," says Mr. Strong in his prefatory notes, "of this work are extremely rare in Europe and those that exist in the East seem to be jealously guarded by their owners." The MS. in the British Museum was acquired from the late General Gordon. We believe that Mr. Strong has succeeded (with the help of Signor Nerazzini's detailed analysis of Shihab's work, published at Rome, 1891, with the title of 'La Conquista Mussulmana dell' Etiopia nel Secolo XVI.') in forming a tolerably good text.

We believe that, besides those we have already mentioned, Prof. H. Ethé, of Aberystwith; Dr. Vollers, Librarian of the Khedivial Library at Cairo; and Mr. S. Arthur Strong, M.A., of St. John's College, Cambridge, are candidates for the Adams Professorship at Cambridge.

A MEMORIAL tablet has been placed on the house in Castle Street, Edinburgh, where Sir Walter Scott resided for many years.

MR. WILLIAM A. SHAW, of Manchester, has written a 'History of Manchester,' which will be published at an early date. The late Mr. John Harland, who contributed so largely to Lancashire literature, contemplated the production of such a work many years ago.

THE Report of the Council of the Camden Society, read at the general meeting on Wednesday last week, apologizes for the delay in the appearance of 'The Accounts of the Earl of Derby' (afterwards King Henry IV.), which should have been published during the year 1892-3. This has been due entirely to the unexpected amount of labour involved in the production of the work, which, when completed, will no doubt be of special value in consequence. The difficulties in making out the itineraries, owing to the conflicting dates given in the MS., have been considerable, and the identification of the place-names has been no less troublesome. It is expected, however, that the volume will be out of the editor's hands this month. A new volume (the ninth) of the "Camden Miscellany" is also nearly ready, and the second volume of the 'Clarke Papers,' edited by Mr. C. H. Firth, is in an advanced stage of preparation.

MR. SPIELMANN, who has been for years engaged upon the literary and artistic history of Funch, has asked us to say that he would be deeply grateful to any contributor, past or present, who would communicate with him at the Arts Club.

MESSRS. TYLSTON & EDWARDS will shortly publish a new edition in small 8vo. of Blount's 'Boscobel.' The first edition, which appeared in 1660, is now scarce. The volume will also contain Charles's own account of his escape, dictated to Mr. Samuel Pepys, and first printed in 1766. The present edition has been edited, with an introduction and bibliography of the subject, by Mr. Charles G. Thomas; and Mr. C. W. Sherborn has engraved for it a plate of arms granted by Charles II. to Col. Carlos in memory of the time spent in the oak tree at Boscobel.

E. M. J. writes:—

"Some of the magazines consult the convenience of their readers by adopting the sensible plan of giving a list of the contents on the front of the covers. It is surprising that this is not done by all. But the circulating libraries have an aggravating way of pasting their labels over a portion of the contents, also over the publishers' names. This should be remedied by placing the labels on the last page of the covers. Or, if the libraries must have the first page, the publishers should leave a blank space where the label can be put without hiding anything."

MR. W. J. HAGGERSTON, Public Librarian of Newcastle-on-Tyne, died on Sunday night.

THE Library Association has unanimously decided not to co-operate with the Sunday Society and a kindred organization, as the objects are considered to be outside the work of the Association.

THE following letter explains itself:—

"With reference to the incident mentioned in your review of the 'Life of General Sir Hope Grant,' would you allow me to mention that I recollect the late Major-General John Dawson speaking of a cavalry regiment at Chillianwallah galloping away. He was so surprised at a British regiment behaving in such a way that he made particular inquiries about it. He learnt that the first line were on new mounts, and one of these turning, the others followed suit, and do what the men could, they were powerless to stop the stampede.—H. B. EVANS."

WE are glad to hear that Mr. Wellsman, the editor of the Newspaper Press Directory, is recovering from his recent severe illness.

THE Débat says that the 'Mémoires Diplomatiques' of Choiseul are to be published in a few months by M. Pierre Boutry, from the originals in the French Foreign Office.

THE next "Neuphilologen-Tag" will be held from the 15th to the 17th inst. at Carlsruhe. Among the papers to be read there will be one on 'Recent English Lexicography.'

THE Frankfurter Zeitung announces that the site for a "Schopenhauer-Denkmal" at Frankfurt has at last been fixed, and it ironically adds that the completion of the monument may be expected after some decades of "intuitive reflection."

THE Imperial Russian Geographical Society is busy in the collection of the ancient folk-songs of Russia. During the summer months of last year it sent "Song Expeditions" into the governmental provinces of Wjatka, Wologda, and Kostroma, and is preparing to send similar expeditions into other provinces this year. All the commissioners of the Society brought back the same melancholy news of the rapid dying out of the old songs. Only the most aged persons in several villages had preserved the ancient words and airs.

MISS WESTON has completed and annotated a translation in verse of 'Parzival,' by Wolfram von Eschenbach. It is to fill two volumes. The first, which contains the first nine books and an appendix on the Angevin element in the poem, is ready; and special appendices in the second will deal with the question of Wolfram's sources and the interpretation of the poem. Mr. Nutt is the publisher.

THE Parliamentary Papers of the most general interest this week are a Return showing the Expenditure from the Grant for Public Education in Scotland in 1893 upon Elementary Schools, and the Number of Elementary Schools on the Annual Grant List, &c. (3d.); Report of Progress of the Ordnance Survey (3s.); and a Return of Railway Accidents in 1893 (8d.).

SCIENCE

The Great Barrier Reef of Australia: its Products and Potentialities. By W. Saville-Kent, F.L.S. (Allen & Co.)

As regards its paper, printing, and binding, Mr. Saville-Kent's work has been produced almost without regard to expense. The author's photographs of the coral reefs—the mezzotype enlargements of which we have already noticed—are so beautiful, and so far superior to any illustrations of these wonderful formations hitherto attempted, as to be worthy of the most careful reproduction by the best known processes. This has been most admirably accomplished. If the work had contained only the forty-eight mezzotype plates of coral-reef scenery with their accompanying descriptions, we should have had little but praise to bestow upon it, especially if the plates had been arranged with more regard to the text. As it is, they are distributed throughout the book without relation to the descriptive letter-press, which occupies only the first chapter. Since the pages in this work are folio in size and of thick and heavy paper, they are difficult to manipulate, and are consequently a source of irritation to the reader, who has to follow the text on plates that are often scores of leaves ahead, whereas each might with little trouble have been placed in proximity to its own letter-press. We much regret that we are unable to speak in as favourable terms of the remaining plates and illustrations as of the coral-reef series, or of the textual portion of Mr. Kent's book. The second chapter deals with the "modifications of coral-reef structure," "with a précis of the newer interpretations" of coral-reef formation, consisting chiefly of long extracts from Darwin's 'Coral Reefs,' and lengthy quotations from the views of Murray, Dana, Guppy, Wharton, and Bourne, which might have been much more briefly and quite sufficiently summarized in Mr. Kent's own words. The third chapter is devoted "to a consideration of the general structure and more probable mode of origin of the Great Barrier Reef."

The first chapter, describing the mezzotype plates of the reef, might have been worked into the third with great advantage, and, thus amalgamated, it ought to have formed to the scientific reader the most important section of the book, dealing as it does with the debated question of reef formation. Mr. Kent's observations have convinced him that the formation of the Barrier Reef can be fully explained by Darwin's subsidence hypothesis. "This Barrier Reef," he says, "... could have been produced by no other telluric conditions than those of prolonged subsidence." As evidence of such extensive subsidence in this region he points to the affinity of many species of the fauna and flora of New Guinea to those of North Australia, and to the facts adduced by Wallace which indicate a now subsided connexion between North Australia and New Zealand. That there has been in this region an extensive sinking of the land is undoubted—indeed, there is good reason for believing that a part of North Australia which was separate from the rest of that continent was united to New Guinea and to New Zealand as part of a more extensive land. This, however, is not necessarily proof that the reef was formed wholly during subsidence. There has also as certainly been much elevation in the same region, and along the neighbouring coasts of New Guinea, including the Louisiade Archipelago, where numerous islets of coral stand elevated thirty to forty feet or more above sea-level. The author further predicates that "a logical interpretation" of the absence of coral reefs in deep water "can be found only in the fact, to which scarcely sufficient prominence has been hitherto given, that the solid coral-rock of which.....the greater mass of all coral reefs is composed, is constructed, exclusively, in tropical areas subject to alternations of complete submersion and atmospheric exposure with the rise and fall of the tide.....The thickest-growths of the deep sea Lophohelia, Amphihelia, and Dendrophyllia would act with equal efficiency as reef-builders if they were capable of translation to this higher, tidally-affected, plane."

Yet "with such an abundant supply of stony corals at these great depths [150-500 fathoms] coral reefs are not formed in deep water." And "the solid coral-rock which represents the chief constituents of all reef masses is . . . composed exclusively of the broken-down, more or less triturated, and subsequently re-consolidated calcareous elements of the peripherally growing corals." "The occurrence," therefore, "of typical consolidated coral-rock at a lower level than that of ordinary low spring tides will be a certain indication of degradation from its original plane of elevation." There can be no doubt that in the inter-tidal region coral conglomerate is formed in the manner here described by Mr. Kent, but that the solid compact coral-rock in all reefs is thus exclusively formed is disproved by the results of the investigations of Jukes-Browne and Harrison into the geology of Barbados, published in 1891. The reefs now elevated in that island far above sea-level are formed of as solid and compact coral-rock as those of Australia, and the competent geologists just named have shown that the reef rests on a true abyssal siliceous deposit, and that "the island itself affords proof of great and long-continued upheaval without the slightest sign of subsidence." This intertidal formation of conglomerate is Mr. Kent's chief argument in support of his belief that the Barrier and all other reefs have originated on a subsiding foundation; but it does not help far towards the final settlement of the question. It yet remains to be definitely ascertained whether "the stony copes [of Lophohelia], which cover the bottom of the sea for many miles," at depths of 900 ft., as Sir Wyville Thomson records in his 'Depths of the Sea,' are not actually forming coral-rock. Moreover, if Mr. Kent's supposition be true, the basal thirty fathoms of every reef must have a distinctly different texture from the rest, which in subsequently upraised reefs should at once be recognizable.

Passing over the next chapter, containing a description of the coral reef-making polype, written not for "the accomplished specialist," to whom it is an old story, but for the unscientific general reader, for whom it is too technical, we reach the section dealing with the various fisheries of the Barrier:

pearl and pearl-shell, béche-de-mer, the oyster, food and fancy fishes. These chapters are almost verbatim reproductions of the author's reports to the Queensland Government in the years 1889 to 1892. They contain a great deal of useful information as to the development of the "potentialities" of the various Queensland fisheries. In his official report on the béche-de-mer fisheries, Mr. Kent states that, with the literature accessible to him in Brisbane, he was unable to establish, with one exception, the technical identity of the numerous species known to commerce. He brought with him, however, to this country a number of specimens, which were submitted to Prof. Jeffrey Bell, of the British Museum, for identification. This well-known specialist named all those that were in a fit condition to be described, indicating in his report those not unlikely to prove new to science, which could not, on account of the condition of the material, be accurately determined. One is consequently surprised to observe that Mr. Kent has assumed the responsibility of assigning new names to these species and to others only "represented in photographs or sketches" in his "note-books," with the certain result of increasing the difficulties of future workers on this subject through his necessarily incomplete descriptions.

In the chapter on "Food and Fancy Fishes" the author, in drawing attention to the economic value of certain Australian species, reiterates the recommendation which Dr. Günther had already, nearly twenty years ago, made to these colonies in regard to the utilization of their representatives of our anchovies, sprats, and pilchards. Mr. Kent's reports were evidently written in Australia with the help of a handbook or two, of which the 'Introduction to the Study of Fishes' has not been the one to afford him least assistance, as is easily detected by the author's retaining even its original wording. Compare Kent, p. 271, with Günther's 'Introduction,' p. 456. He did not, however, have access there to the requisite literature or to a well-named collection. Ichthyologists, therefore, would have derived greater benefit from Mr. Kent's opportunities if he had taken the trouble to revise his work critically after his return to Europe. As it is, he has relied chiefly on the nomenclature of Mr. De Vis, which, unfortunately, is untrustworthy, and we thus find old friends of common occurrence appearing under De Visian names. It would be surprising if even the limited libraries of Australia did not contain the 'Voyage of the Erebus and Terror,' where the figures of Southern fishes, at all events, even if the descriptions be of a rather technical character, would have assisted the author. A careful revision of his book on his return to this country might also have resulted in a reconsideration of such doubtful statements as that "the Atherinidae, or sand smelts.....much resemble sprats," or of the inadmissibility of such hybrid specific names as cyano-centor, which even when relegated to the lumber of synonyms cannot redound to the credit of their bestower.

The illustrations of the fishes are of two kinds, photo-mezzotypes and chromo-lithographs. For the former the author claims particular credit, as they are said to reproduce the minute details of the species represented. We regret to differ widely from this view. We are, of course, not in a position to determine whether the reproductions do justice to the original negatives; but for the purposes of scientific specific determination these plates, with some exceptions, are not of a sufficiently clear definition; as examples, take the figures of plates 43 and 47. As cheap and popular representatives they will be of great assistance to the class of readers for whom the text is evidently written, and from this point of view it is a pity that Mr. Kent has not published more of them. With regard to the chromolithographs—of which there are sixteen plates in the book, representing anemones, corals, Holothuric, Mollusca, oysters, and fishes—the less said the better. In most of them the drawing is bad, and in all the coloration is crude, not to say startling. As regards the fishes it is greatly to be regretted that Mr. Kent has associated such sorry representatives of the finny tribe with his magnificent and unique photographs of the reefs. Faulty in every part of their structure as these drawings are, Mr. Kent may have the excuse of desiring to show to those unfamiliar with this fact the brilliance of the reef-living fishes. Still he might at least have arranged the figures so as not to offend against artistic taste. This, however, is a small matter compared with his transgressions in the determination of some of the species. Mr. Kent has ventured to give new names to "fancy" fishes which he has not even examined, but only seen in the water sufficiently well to produce a rough sketch of the colours, without a chance of making out their generic, or even their family characters—a proceeding in the highest degree unscientific. Imagine an ornithologist founding a new species on a bird that has flown across his vision in mid-air!

The closing chapter summarizes the "potentialities" of Queensland's "submerged territories." As we have said, the book is too expensively got up to reach, and too cumbersome to be used by, the class to whom it would be most useful. It might have been greatly reduced in size by the excision of such trivial and irrelevant matter as the Quetta narrative, and the four-page account of a mythical Barrier sea serpent, seriously figured, and placed under a new generic and specific name! The work might have also been improved in every respect by thorough revision. Its real ground for existing is the exquisite photo-mezzotype illustrations of the Barrier Reef, for nearly the whole of the rest of the information which the book contains is to be found in the author's far more accessible illustrated reports to the Queensland Government. If Mr. Kent had made a smaller volume out of the reef-plates and their description, he would have scored an undoubted success, which can scarcely be said for the volume under review in its present form.

Blasting: a Handbook for the Use of Engineers and others engaged in Mining, Tunnelling, Quarrying, &c. By Oscar Guttmann. (Griffin & Co.)—Of late years the introduction of a variety of new explosive agents has necessarily brought about considerable modification in the methods of conducting blasting operations. A manual explaining the modern practice was, consequently, rather needed. Mr. Guttman has been engaged in the manufacture of explosives, and has had considerable experience, we believe, at Hayle, in Cornwall. His work, written originally in German, is likely to be of much service to those who are called upon to use blasting agents in engineering operations, especially in mines. The author's historical inquiries lead him to attribute the invention of blasting rocks to a certain Caspar Weindl, who as early as 1627 fired shots in the mines of Schemnitz, in Hungary. Interesting as the historical notes may be, it is, however, the practical details which give character to the book. Great stress is naturally laid upon the value of the various "high explosives," or those which, like dynamite, require an indirect means of detonation; and not the least useful part of the book relates to the precautions required in the use of such agents.

GEOGRAPHICAL NOTES.

Mr. BENT is going to give a brief résumé of his explorations in the Hadramaut country at a special meeting of the Geographical Society on the evening of the 21st. He is placing the inscriptions found there in the hands of Prof. Müller, of Vienna. The latest number of the Epigraphische Denkwürter is entirely devoted to the inscriptions brought back by Mr. Bent from Axum.

Major Owen, who arrived at Mombasa in the beginning of this month, accompanied Col. Colville's successful expedition against Kabarega of Unyoro, and subsequently proceeded north to Wadelai, where he planted the British flag. Favourable news has been received from Mr. Scott Elliott, who is reported to have crossed the Kagera river on his road to the Ruwenzori. M. Lionel Declé, the French explorer, who was last heard of from Tanganyika, has since then visited Uganda, and is reported to have arrived at Mombasa with valuable scientific collections.

Another item of African news is, perhaps, worth placing on record, namely, the first ascent of Mount Gwiri, or Gurui, by O. Neumann. This mountain rises to a height of 14,000 feet, about 160 miles to the south-west of Kilimanjaro. There seems to be no crater, but cinders and pumice were found on its slopes.

The Bremen Geographische Blätter publish an account of a visit to the little-known West Indian island of St. Bartholomey, by Mr. R. Ludwig, who went there more especially in search of useful minerals. The results proved disappointing. The dykes of greenstone, which had been worked at one time, were found to contain neither argentiferous galena nor pyrites, nor could phosphatic deposits be discovered. The author ascribes the failure of so many mining ventures in the West Indies to the ignorance of the mining engineers and the dishonesty of the promoters of companies. St. Barth seems just able to exist, for it produces little, notwithstanding its fertile soil. The ladies of some of the better families eke out their scanty incomes by making fans and ornaments of shells, fish scales, and other materials, which find a ready market at Barbados.

The May number of the Geographical Journal contains the full text of Mr. W. W. Rockhill's narrative of his last journey in Mongolia and Tibet, in the course of which he partly covered ground traversed by Prejevalsky and Capt. Bower, but also explored several new tracts of country en route. The political result of Mr. Rockhill's expedition is to show that the approach to Lhasa from the north is as jealously guarded as ever. Another lesson to be derived from Mr. Rockhill's experiences will prove a feather in the cap of the tetotalers; for though during two months he and his people were travelling at an altitude of over 10,000 ft., soaked by the rain and blinded by snow and hail, with little or nothing to eat, and tea as their only beverage, yet not one of the party had a moment's illness from the day they left till they reached home again. The same journal contains the report of a meeting of the Geographical Society in commemoration of the fifth centenary of the birth of Prince Henry the Navigator, when Mr. Clements Markham delivered an interesting address, and a short paper by Mr. George Collingridge, who maintains that Marco Polo's Zipangu should be identified with Java, or perhaps Sumbawa, and not with Japan.

We look forward with interest to the publication of a report by the surviving members of Prince Eugenio Ruspoli's expedition, who are reported to have arrived at Zanzibar in the beginning of April. Prince Ruspoli's expedition, after having traversed the whole of the region between Berbera and the Jub, took an easterly direction, with the intention of reaching Kafa. Unfortunately, the leader was killed by an elephant on December 4th, 1893, in Gobo on the Omo river (supposed to flow into Lake Rudolf). His companions, Prof. Riva and Signor Luca, then conducted the expedition through British territory to Mombasa.

In the Scottish Geographical Magazine for May Mr. G. R. Parkin deals with 'The Geographical Unity of the British Empire,' illustrating his text with a set of interesting maps; whilst Mr. Dingelstedt introduces us into 'A Quiet Corner of the Alps,' namely, the Valley of the Vièze in Valais, whose inhabitants are absolutely under the dominion of the priests, and where the mothers, instead of telling their children fairy tales, relate to them the lives of Catholic saints.

SOCIETIES.

GEOGRAPHICAL.—May 7.—Mr. C. R. Markham, President, in the chair.—The following gentlemen were elected Fellows: Rev. J. Batchelor, Mr. A. E. Caddy, Capt. W. Fairholm, Mr. C. Maidment, Vet.-Lieut. H. M. Maxwell, Mr. L. E. North-Taitervary, Dr. G. Scriven, and Mr. J. T. Walsh.—The paper read was 'The Bakhtiari Mountains and Upper Elam,' by Col. H. A. Sawyer.

ARCHÆOLOGICAL INSTITUTE.—May 2.—Mr. E. Green in the chair.—Photographs of a large number of prehistoric objects from the drift deposits of Long Island, U.S.A., were exhibited and commented upon.—Mr. Stephenson exhibited and described a rubbing of the brass of Arthur Vernon, M.A., of Cambridge, from the church of Tong, Salop.—Mr. F. C. J. Spurrell exhibited specimens of the linen bandings, and also a photograph, of the mummy of Ra Nefer, a personage of the court of Senefru, first king of the fourth dynasty. This mummy was obtained by Mr. Flinders Petrie at Medum, and is now preserved in the Hunterian Museum. Mr. Spurrell also read a paper 'On Remedies in the Sloane Collection and Alchemical Symbols.' Special attention was called to the present unsatisfactory condition of Sloane's collection of materia medica.

LINNEAN.—May 3.—Prof. Stewart, President, in the chair.—Mr. J. H. Burkill was admitted, and Dr. J. Mueller, of Aargau, and Prof. K. Mitsuaki, of the University of Tokio, were elected Foreign Members.—Prof. Poulton exhibited the larvæ of certain Lepidoptera to illustrate the results of experiments which he had made in regard to the influence of environment upon their colours. Various coloured twigs and shoots, such as occur in nature, were shown to influence the appearance of many twig-like larvae in such a manner as to aid their concealment.—Prof. G. B. Howes exhibited and made remarks upon the eggs and young of Ceratodus fosteri, received from Prof. Semon, of Jena, who is engaged in working out the development of this fish. Prof. Howes also exhibited a specimen of Lepidosteus paradoxus (an extremely rare fish in collections) from the backwaters of the Upper Rio Paraguay, and made remarks upon its anatomy.—Mr. J. Saunders, of Luton, with the aid of the oxyhydrogen lantern exhibited Plasmodium in the act of forming sporangia. The species, which had been found on birch, was Didymium synanthropum.—On behalf of Dr. H. B. Guppy, the Secretary read a paper on the habits of three species of Lemna. In this paper the author detailed the results of experiments made by him during a period of twenty months, and showed that Lemna gibba can pass the winter either in the gibbous form, or with fronds which in appearance come to resemble those of Lemna minor. The flowering of Lemna gibba was observed in July, when it was found that the gibbous plants were producing thin flat fronds, which were also in flower, and floating detached. In both cases the flowers were hermaphrodite, but they had the appearance of being unisexual on account of the flowers of the gibbous plants protruding the pistil only, while those of the flat fronds evolved the stamens only. After describing the habits of the winter fronds of Lemna polyrrhiza and alluding to Lemna minor, the paper concluded with a table of temperatures relating to the germinating, budding, and flowering of these plants.—A paper was then read on the fertilization of certain Malayan orchids, by Mr. H. N. Ridley.

ZOOLOGICAL.—May 1.—Dr. A. Günther, V.P., in the chair.—The Secretary read a report on the additions to the menagerie during April, calling special attention to a collection of mammals presented to the Society by Dr. J. Anderson after his recent expedition to Egypt.—Dr. Günther exhibited and made remarks on specimens of a South African hornbill (Buccones melanoleucus) and of a portion of the tree in which the nest was placed, and spoke of its mode of nesting and of its extraordinary habits during that season. The specimens had been transmitted to the British Museum by Dr. Schönland, of Grahamstown.—Dr. H. E. Sauvage exhibited a vertebra of the earliest known snake from the gault of Portugal; and Mr. W. Bateson a large number of specimens of Gonioctena variabilis, a phytophagous beetle from Spain, in illustration of discontinuous variation in colour.—Prof. F. Jeffrey Bell gave an account of the echinoderms collected during the voyage of H.M.S. Penguin and by H.M.S. Egeria when surveying Maclesfield Bank. The collection, which had been made by Mr. F. W. B. Smith, Surgeon R.N., with the co-operation of Mr. J. J. Walker, chief engineer, was very extensive and contained examples of many new species, some of which were of a very remarkable character.—Mr. E. W. Holt, naturalist to the Marine Biological Association, gave an account of some of the results of his recent studies in teleostean morphology made at the Marine Laboratory at Cleethorpe. Mr. Holt spoke first of some specimens of the Birkelänge (Molva aphyronum, Nilsson). The regular occurrence of this fish off the Farø Islands and its occasional capture on the coast of Iceland were now recorded for the first time, the species having been previously observed only on the Scandinavian coasts. The specimens, six in number, all of considerable size, were described in detail, and the species was carefully compared with the allied form M. vulgaris (the common ling). Mr. Holt next proceeded to describe the recessus orbitalis, an accessory visual organ of the pleuronectoid fishes. The organ in question was stated to be a highly elastic muscular process of the membranous wall of the orbital cavity. It had been found to occur in all the flat-fishes examined, viz., the halibut, long rough dab, brill, plaice, flounder, lemon-sole, dab, and common sole, and was believed to occur in all flat-fishes with well-developed eyes. Finally, Mr. Holt spoke of an adult specimen of the common sole with symmetrical eyes, and discussed the bearing of this specimen on ambicoloration. The specimen in question, about 15 in. long, was perfectly normal in external configuration, except that the left eye had retained its position on the left side of the head, and was nearly opposite to the right eye. Antero-ventrally it had been somewhat overgrown by the skin. The coloration was normal, the right side being brown and the left side white.—Mr. O. Thomas gave an account of a collection of mammals from Oman, South-East Arabia, which had been transmitted to the British Museum by Dr. A. S. G. Jayakar, among which were examples of a new hare (Lepus omanensis) and of a new goat of the genus Hemitragus, proposed to be called jayahari, after its discoverer. Altogether seventeen species were represented in this collection, from a locality of which little was previously known.—A communication was read from Mr. St. George Littledale on the wild camel of Lob Nor.

ENTOMOLOGICAL.—May 2.—Capt. H. J. Elwes, President, in the chair.—Mr. S. Stevens exhibited a specimen of Argynnis aglaia var. charlotta, taken by the late Rev. J. Watson in the New Forest in 1870.—Mr. J. A. Clark exhibited a curious variety of Chelonia carya, having an extraordinary wedge-shaped marking extending from the outer margin to the base of the left hind wing, and also, on the same wing, a small spot which was brown and white in colour, and had the appearance of having been taken from the fore wing and inserted in the hind wing. The specimen was said to have been taken at Abbots Wood, Sussex, in July, 1892.—Prof. E. B. Poulton exhibited living specimens of the larvæ of Gastropacha quercifolia, surrounded respectively during the early stages of growth by black twigs and lichen-coloured twigs, the food being the same in both cases. All the larvæ were shown upon a white paper background, but examples of the surrounding twigs which produced the change of colour were shown beside each batch.—Mr. Merri- field made some remarks on the subject.—Mr. E. Mer- rick communicated a paper 'On Pyralids from the Malay Archipelago,' and Mr. C. J. Gahan one entitled 'A Supplemental List of the Longicorn Coleoptera obtained by Mr. J. J. Walker during the Voyage of H.M.S. Penguin.'—Prof. Poulton then took the chair, and a special general meeting was held for the purpose of obtaining the opinion of the Society as to the course recently taken by the Council in declining to interfere in private disputes between Fellows of the Society. The question having been put to the vote, a resolution supporting the Council was passed unanimously.

PHILOLOGICAL.—May 4.—Anniversary Meeting.—Prof. A. B. Napier, Ph.D., President, in the chair.—The Chairman read a preliminary paper on the nine or ten thousand Old English glosses which he has collected from some forty MSS. All but a fifteenth of these glosses are from the writings of Aldhelm, and show that two or three printed lists of glosses came from Aldhelm MSS. too. They contain old examples of many words, like "fledged," "flank," "hoop," "puck," &c., heretofore known only in Middle English. The gloss hopu, ligustra, is possibly connected with the femhopu and morpapu of Beowulf; the merchopa in the Isle of Thanet, and the Hopu of place-names. The old scribes often wrote only the first or last half of a gloss for the whole of it. The word lac, medicine, in Bosworth-Toller's 'Lexicon,' merely stands for the fuller common word lacnung.—Prof. Skeat read a paper on the non-Chaucer fragment B of the 'Romaunt of the Rose.' Chaucer breaks off in the middle of a sentence at the end of l. 1706; then a diffuse Northern writer begins fragment B, and runs on to l. 5813, corresponding with l. 5170 of the French. Then a third writer starts a poem (from Jean de Meun) against the friars, and stops when he has finished it. The author of fragment B is very fond of tags, "withouten wese, falle, drede," &c., and of do as a mere expletive. He not only rhymes close and open a together, but couples leve, manere, more, with deire, and were with dere, forfere. He uses Northern forms, though not consistently, criand, depeand, doand; thar, mar, hat, reat (there, more, hot, wet); brade, broad; fond, found. He tries to use Chaucer's final e, but constantly fails, writing dout for doute, hert for herte. He uses some 300 words that Chaucer does not, many of which are Northern, like grete (weep), dogged, gate (singular). Yet many are not pure Northern. The writer was probably from Lancashire, Yorkshire, or Lincolnshire. He imitates and borrows from both Chaucer and Gower, and probably wrote about 1400 A.D.—The officers elected were: President, Dr. J. Pells; Vice-Presidents, Drs. Stokes, Morris, Sweet, Murray, Skeat, and Bayce, and Mr. H. Bradley; Ordinary Members of Council, Messrs. Beuismaker, Brandreth, Chance, Elworthy, Kly, Fennell, Gollance, Heath, Henderson, Ker, Lacouperie, Martineau, Mayor, Napier, Postgate, Rieu, Ridgeway, Stevenson, Strahan, and Tylor; Treasurer, B. Dawson; Hon. Sec., F. J. Furnivall.

SOCIETY OF ARTS.—May 7.—Mr. F. Cobb in the chair.—Mr. H. C. Jenkins delivered the second and concluding lecture of his course of Cantor Lectures 'On Typewriting Machines.' Specimens of the most important modern machines were exhibited and shown in action.

May 8.—Prof. W. C. Roberts-Austen in the chair.—A paper 'On Pewter' was read before the Section of Applied Art by Mr. S. Gardner. A collection of examples in pewter work from the South Kensington Museum and from private owners was exhibited in illustration of the paper.

May 9.—Sir F. Goldsmid in the chair.—A paper 'On Telegraphs and Trade Routes in Persia' was read by Col. Wells.—A discussion followed.

ROYAL INSTITUTION.—May 7.—Sir J. Crichton-Browne, Treas. and V.P., in the chair.—The following Vice-Presidents for the ensuing year were announced: Sir P. Abel, Sir D. Galt, W. Huggins, J. Mond, H. Müller, B. W. Smith, Sir J. Crichton-Browne (Treasurer), and Sir F. Bramwell (Hon. Secretary).—The following were elected Members: Mrs. A. J. Moseley, Miss E. W. Smith, Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, Right Hon. G. Denman, Hon. Sir R. Samuel Wright, Messrs. A. H. Dawbarn, E. J. Duveen, R. E. Farrant, H. Grindley, B. Keightley, F. W. Passmore, H. Rofs, and E. Viles.

ARISTOTELIAN.—April 30.—Mr. S. H. Hodgson, President, in the chair.—Mr. R. J. Ryle read a paper 'On Epictetus.' Epictetus, the slave of one of Nero's freedmen, probably represents the best traditions of Stoicism, although he never professes to stand as the spokesman of a school. In his doctrine of reason he asserts the presence in man of a rational self-critical faculty which (1) distinguishes man from animals, (2) has a natural supremacy over all other human faculties, and (3) is essentially identical with the reason which is the divine moving principle of the universe. His doctrine of "life according to nature" is, in fact, a twofold principle, signifying in the first place conformity to that character or constitution which is specifically human, as explained in his account of the faculty of reason, and signifying in the second place conformity to nature in the sense of the reasonable or God-ordained order of nature. In the first of these senses the doctrine was taken up and systematically developed by Bishop Butler. The doctrine of human freedom held by Epictetus may be compared with that which is associated with Kant's doctrine of the practical reason. Although it is very crudely stated by Epictetus, it may fairly be considered to be that which has been expounded to English readers by the late Prof. Green. The teaching of Epictetus contains many unreconciled inconsistencies. The aim of his life was to do the work of a preacher rather than that of a systematic philosopher, and in the fulfilment of this object he has justly earned his reputation as one of the great moral teachers of antiquity.—The paper was followed by a discussion.

BRITISH RECORD SOCIETY.—May 3.—Annual Meeting.—The Marquess of Bute in the chair.—The report for 1893 set forth the work done, consisting of calendars of wills in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, at Lichfield, for Gloucestershire, and for Berkshire, together with Inquisitiones post mortem for London and for Gloucestershire.—The election of officers for the year took place; the Marquess of Bute was chosen President, while several new Vice-Presidents were also elected, namely, the Earl of Rosebery, Lord Coleridge, and Lord Amherst of Hackney. The Council and other officers were also re-elected.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

- | | |
|--------|---|
| Thurs. | Royal Institution, 3.—'Reptiles, their Nature, Origin, and Metamorphoses.' Prof. J. W. Sudd. |
| Wed. | Microscopical Club.—'Relative Frequency of Different Varieties of Wind.' Mr. W. Ellis. 'Audibility of the Rain' at West Norwood under certain Meteorological Conditions.' Mr. W. Marriot. 'Earth Temperature at Crombourne, Isle of Man, 1880-1893.' Mr. A. W. Moore. |
| Fri. | British Archaeological Association, 6.—'The Varied Forts of the North of Scotland.' Miss M. J. M. Russell. |
| Thurs. | Royal Institution, 3.—'The Solid and Liquid States of Matter.' Prof. Dewar. |
| | Chemical Club.—'Influence of Moisture on Chemical Change.' Mr. H. B. Baker. 'Volatile Compounds of Lead Sulphide.' Mr. J. B. Hannay. 'A Specimen of Early Scottish Iron.' Margaret B. Pugh. 'Mineral Waters of Cheltenham.' Prof. Thorpe. |
| | Society for the Encouragement of the Fine Arts.—'Conversations.' |
| Fri. | United Service Institution, 3.—'Signalling: Present Defects and Suggested Improvements.' Major A. R. Harrington. |
| | Royal Institution, 3.—'The Splendour of a Drop and Allied Phenomena.' Prof. A. M. Worthington. |
| Sat. | Royal Institution, 3.—'Colour Vision.' Capt. Abney. (Tyndall Lectures.) |

Science Gossip.

M. SCHULHOF has computed elliptic elements of the orbit of Denning's comet (a, 1894), and finds that its period is probably about 6½ years in length, and that the perihelion passage took place on February 9th. The comet is now exceedingly faint.

GALE's comet (b, 1894) is still nearly three times as bright as at the time of discovery; but by the end of the month the brightness will have diminished to the half of what it was then. It is now in the north-western part of the constellation Leo, and will pass into Ursa Major in the course of the month.

THE Rev. O. J. Vignoles has presented to the British Museum twenty-eight autograph diaries of the late Mr. Charles B. Vignoles, F.R.S., the well-known engineer. They contain minute details of his early work on the first English, Irish, and foreign railways, and much information about his negotiations with the Emperor Nicholas concerning bridge-building in Russia.

FINE ARTS

Inigo Jones and Wren; or, the Rise and Decline of Modern Architecture in England. By W. J. Loftie. (Rivington, Percival & Co.)

MR. LOFTIE has collected a number of good photographs, as well as some engravings of buildings taken from 'Vitruvius Britannicus' and other published works, and has had them well reproduced, and so he has made his book worth having as a picture book. It would have had more value as a history of our later English architecture if the writer had been less rash in assuming his facts, and more careful to state them accurately, and as a contribution to modern architectural literature if he had shown more familiarity with the subject upon which he undertakes to instruct his readers.

The first title is ornamental. There is, indeed, a chapter about Inigo Jones and two about Wren; but these together take up only about a third of the book. The second title, upon which we have learnt to understand Mr. Loftie's peculiar language, better describes the writer's object, which is to give an account of architecture in England from the time when it fell under the influence of the Italian Renaissance to the rise of the Gothic movement.

Mr. Loftie hates the Gothic movement with a sort of personal hatred, but he sees in it nothing more than a fashion for the imitation of mediæval forms. That such a fashion was created by the writings of Sir Walter Scott and others of the romantic school in the early part of this century is quite true, and to it we owe such works as Wyatville's at Windsor Castle, which, strange to say, Mr. Loftie admires. But the real Gothic movement, which was based upon reason and not upon fashion, and which laid down definite principles for architectural design, is of later date, and came of the teaching of Augustus Welby Pugin. Its connexion with mediævalism was accidental, and the teaching will survive that connexion, indeed it is scarcely too much to say that it has already done so. It has changed architecture from a purely academic study into a living art, and whatever future there may be for it, the beginning is in the Gothic revival.

All this, unfortunately, is to Mr. Loftie as the French of Paris was to the lady priores. He can chatter about buildings, and sometimes says a true thing about one, but his criticism has little to stand upon, and in his perpetual talk of proportion he does but repeat the watchword of the dilettanti of the eighteenth century, whose pedantry quenched the last spark of life in the old tradition. Proportion is a necessary element in good design; but the selection of it as the one quality in a work to be praised very often means either that the subject has not any other worth speaking of, or that the critic cannot understand it. Mr. Loftie's ideas of proportion are rather odd, or else he is very reckless in naming his examples. On p. 96 he says truly, "There is excellent proportion displayed in some Perpendicular churches"; but he adds, "as, for example, Wakefield, Newark, and Coventry." Now, the church of Wakefield took its form by degrees from the twelfth century to the sixteenth, and whatever merits it may have, certainly proportion is not one of them; that of Newark—which, by-the-by, owes its form to the fourteenth century and not to "Perpendicular" times—inherits from an earlier building a nave much too narrow for the aisles; and the great church at Coventry, which no doubt once, in its well-furnished state, was most picturesque, is now, in its unscreened, over-pewed, and "thoroughly restored" condition, a huge, sprawling, distorted building, without anything that can possibly be called proportion about it.

We have already referred to Mr. Loftie's use of words as being sometimes peculiar to himself. All work showing Italian influence is Palladian with him, and St. Paul's Cathedral is Romanesque. Our only objection to this is that the words happen to have been appropriated for other meanings, and therefore their use thus is likely to puzzle the unwary.

Mr. Loftie is sometimes amusing. We take leave of him with a quotation:—

"Let us suppose, for an instant, that Robert Poore, and William the Englishman, and Sir Reginald Bray could have had cast-iron girders, to what a noble use they would have put them. Their edifices would have rivalled the pyramids."

Pictures from Punch. Vol. I. (Bradbury, Agnew & Co.)—Although the selection of examples for this reissue has been made with less felicity than in former series, it is pleasant to meet again many old friends. The cuts have been reprinted with success greater than might be expected, yet some have suffered a good deal. A well-arranged table of contents refers to the original publication of all the satires, and gives their dates from 1842 onwards. Something like a memoir of Mr. Punch would be a welcome addition to the series of which this is the first instalment.

THE NEW GALLERY.

(First Notice.)

ALTHOUGH this gallery contains more than four hundred examples of very various degrees of merit, and representing very different kinds of art, it contains nothing of extreme interest, freshness, or importance. To the exhibition of last year the present one is distinctly inferior, but it is by no means so much below the mark as that of 1892, which was so egregiously bad that it seemed to portend the extinction of the New Gallery. As it is, the works of six painters and two sculptors stand this year conspicuous above the level of the rest of the collection. The most satisfactory of these, to our thinking, is Mr. Poynter's half-length, life-size figure of Barine (No. 102), which refers to Horace's Ode, the eighth of the second book. Mr. Poynter has depicted Barine slowly tearing, with a contumelious sort of coquetry which is as cruel as it is triumphant, a billet praising her beauty which some hapless swain has been weak enough to put into her hands:—

Sed tu simul obligasti
Perfidum votis caput, effrenas
Pulchrior multo juvenumque prodis
Pudica cura.

A large wreath of dark crimson roses, resting upon her dark brown hair, harmonizes charmingly with the deep-toned, rich, and ripe flesh tints of the sumptuous brunette, who has known so well how to dress that she has chosen for her palla a pure deep red silk shot with gold. From the hand which holds the billet hangs a carcanet in gold shaped like a snake—a piece of satire on the part of the hapless lover who made the gift and sent the billet. Technically speaking, the drawing and fine researchful modelling of Barine's face and hands, to which their delightful lifelike morbidity is due, are as precious as the design itself. In No. 62, Near the Lake of Geneva, Mr. Poynter figures as the painter of a solid and harmonious study of old houses.

The Benediction (163) is one more proof that Mr. Alma Tadema bestows as much pains on his smallest panel as he does on his most ambitious works. Within a frame which can be measured by inches he has placed matter and charms enough to furnish forth a dozen large canvases such as encumber the Academy even more than the New Gallery. Truth to say, comparing Tadema with Tadema, we do not care much for 'The Benediction'; but on the other hand, comparing it with the "acres of canvas paved with paint," we begin to wonder how their authors can have persuaded themselves to spread their incompetence upon such vast spaces, while a real master finds it easy to concentrate his marvellous skill and his indomitable industry on so small a work as this, which depicts two newly wedded lovers descending the brazen steps of a temple, strewn with splendid roses. The fair bride, crowned with jasmine and robed in white, presses to her bosom a richly chased casket of silver containing precious gifts, and her groom half furtively kisses the rosy taper finger of her left hand. Behind them, standing on the top of the steps near the altar and smoking tripod, the priestess of the temple, lifting high above her head the flaming bridal torches, bestows the benediction which supplies a title to the picture. Besides the bridegroom's handsome face, which is a gem in all respects (the face of the bride being much less handsome, though exquisitely touched, modelled, and finished), we admire the painting of the bride's white costume and the sculptured surface of the silver casket, a marvel of precision and brilliant fidelity.

The admirers of Sir E. Burne-Jones will be charmed by his highly characteristic Vesperina Quies (136), which may be taken as a sort of pendant to his 'Flamma Vestalis.' As in the latter, he has depicted a damsel dressed in the deepest, richest blue—a colour which is in accordance with the subject of the picture and its associations. She is standing in what appears to be the wooden balcony or gallery of a convent, while, behind her, the empty courtyard of a convent, its narrow doors and small windows, are visible in the soft, warm, almost shadowless evening light which pervades the quadrangle. The sweetness of the woman's features and their serene and restful purity indicate that inner peace which belongs to a pure soul in harmony with itself. Despite its beautiful sentiment and extremely original coloration, the Portrait of Miss Amy Gaskell (155) seems to require another name to be in accord with its pathetic motives and thoroughly unrealistic character and style. It may be there is no Miss Amy Gaskell, or that such a person's name has been borrowed for what might well be called a 'Nocturne without Stars.' The face is beautiful and extremely sorrowful. The carnations have the warm pallor of ivory that has been kept from the light; the dress is a deep black, and grey lights and warmer tones have imparted to it that broken character which belongs to whatever artists are wont to call "colour," and without which there is no real colour in the technical sense of the term. Love among the Ruins (106) is a replica in oil of the destroyed picture in water colours, which was reckoned one of the most admirable, if not the very best, of the painter's masterpieces. It is quite as successful a replica as we could dare to hope for. The background and draperies leave nothing to be desired, but the faces of the lovers are neither so subtly expressive as the originals, nor are they so beautiful. Danaë (164) is a small sketch or study for a picture of that unlucky virgin watching the erection of her brazen tower. It is quite different from a picture of the same subject and name, much larger and upright, which Sir E. Burne-Jones has previously exhibited.

Mr. Watts was not well advised in sending A Greek Idyll (76) in its present unfinished state. On the other hand, his Portrait of George Meredith, Esq. (111), though not one of his best pictures, is a welcome addition to this exhibition, as well as to the Holland House Gallery, that permanent record of the greatest Englishmen of our time which, at some, let us hope, very distant period, is to become national property. Although somewhat older-looking than the subject is as yet, this portrait of the author of 'The Shaving of Shagpat' and 'Richard Feverel' excels, as all Mr. Watts's portraits (except that of Dante G. Rossetti) excel, in its rendering of character and expression. Technically speaking, it combines (with art which in itself amounts to genius) the reddish flesh tints with a redder background, a light grey coat, and the lighter grey hair. Ariadne (114), abandoned and lamenting, by the same painter, is a much smaller version of an older picture of the subject.

The fiery ardour of Mr. Herkomer when intense crimsons and resplendent yellows come to his hands affords instructive contrast with the sober tones and sedate harmonies of Mr. Watts's portrait. The younger Academician seldom stays his hand or moderates his zeal. Nor does he temporize with regard to the attitudes, colours, and tone-schemes of pictures that are always vigorous, if not always admirable, as is abundantly obvious when No. 189, Portrait of Lady Ridley, by Mr. Herkomer, comes into view. Its crimson damask and cream white heavily embroidered with gold provoke surprise, which is not, at first, quite delightful. In the same place hung last year one of the most daring and successful of Mr. Sargent's portraits, and to it, doubtless, we owe the ultra-magnificence of Lady Ridley's portrait, which startles artistic eyes that desire repose and take pleasure in Mr. Watts's more cautious art. The glories of the lady's crimson curtain vie with the opulent splendours of her gown of gold upon white, to cope with which her carnations have been painted up to the highest keys the colour box affords, so that the whole is intensely vivid, while the lighting of the picture does not fail in strength. Gorgeous as the whole is, no one will venture to say that it is inharmonious or out of keeping, whatever he may think of the room where it must needs hang, which to support so much barbaric magnificence must be gorgeous indeed. Hoping Mr. Sargent may not attempt to outdo Lady Ridley's portrait, let us say that in this odd competition the prize for refinement, taste, and courage lies with him, while much might be said in praise of Mr. Herkomer, who has done so much with the coarser materials (which, by the way, he need not have chosen), crimson, gold, and white.—Just below Lady Ridley's portrait the visitor will find two exceedingly pretty genre pictures, charming interiors, by Miss M. L. Gow, which are lovely exercises in pure pearly whites and their harmonies and contrasts of gold, red, and black. The first of them is No. 185, A Secret, a young mother at play with a pretty child; the second, and even prettier and finer piece, is Dreams of the Future (196), a young matron looking at an infant and brooding about its future. In No. 196 the dresses of various whites, the red couch, and a black and gold Chinese cupboard behind the group constitute a gem of painting for which Miss Gow deserves the warmest thanks. The representation of daylight in both pictures is strikingly pure, delicate, and true.

Mr. Spencer Stanhope's picture of The Annunciation (1) may very justly be called a modern Botticelli. In the style of this master Mr. Stanhope has depicted Gabriel holding the lily of his function, and addressing the Virgin, who is kneeling with hands placed crosswise on her breast. Her pure and sweet face makes this excellent picture acceptable.—Mr. A. F. Hughes has produced an original version of the Girlhood of Perdition (2). He has placed her in front of a sandy landscape thickly overgrown with sea-holly and other wild flowers, and not "most goddess-like pranked up," but simply clad in a goat's skin and naked else, while the wind bends the flowers she is kneeling to gather, and blows her brown tresses before her face; her old father the shepherd trudges in the mid-distance near some trees which impart freshness to a sunlit landscape capably painted, and full of light and warmth. The girl's naked figure is excellent, but we confess to thinking its assignment to Florizel's fair mistress must be due to an afterthought.—Of Mr. Halle's four contributions the first is A Game of Cards (17), two pretty figures of girls in white of that ivory-like hue the painter so often adopts. As in his other pictures, the painting is rather thin, and, though not weak, the result seems to lack solidity as well as variety of touch. His Orpheus and Eurydice (94) contrasts unfortunately with No. 17, because it illustrates all the shortcomings of his technique and yet possesses none of his graceful sentiment. On the other hand, the Portrait of Mrs. C. Cratchley (97) is really pleasing, although the attenuated, ivory-like flesh and pale carnations betray some lack of substantiality in the painting, which firmer and more studious modelling might redeem. The expression of the face is natural and sweet, and the whole is, despite its tenuity, luminous. If it had more substantiality, the elegant, graceful, and pleasing picture called Honey-suckle (119) would be more highly appreciated. It represents Mr. Halle's favourite model and accustomed type of beauty, of whom we may be forgiven for saying we have had almost enough.

The Hermia and Helena (19) of 'A Midsummer Night's Dream' sit like "two artificial gods" in Mr. O. M. Gero's picture of two pretty children, who look more like boys than girls. Their dresses are blue and green, and the marble bench upon which they sit is inlaid with similar colours in mosaic. We like the good, sound drawing, firm modelling, bright and pure illumination, and rich colour of this highly promising example, where nothing is needed but a little softening and fusion of the tints.—Mr. W. Crane is not quite at his best in the beautiful group of Swan-Maidens (33) near a pool, where they have been bathing. They are really models with wings and otherwise clad, or half clad, in swans' plumage. The carnations, which, of course, constitute the chief charm of nudités such as these, are refined, although unfortunately, being all of the same tints and tones, they must have been painted from one person. We cannot admire the queer drawing of some of the limbs, nor refuse to see how disproportionate are several of the heads, torsos, and arms. In the Balcony of this exhibition (which the visitor will avoid if he does not wish to see some dreadful pictures) may be seen Mr. Crane's group of long and elegant nudités floating in the Clouds (265), while their pale golden flesh tints harmonize pleasantly with the cerulean atmosphere about them and the clouds which seem to sustain them in the air. It is a lovely decorative study, and deserves a better place. This cannot be said of the very inchoate Lilies (206), in the same balcony.—Compared with the good taste, homogeneous colour, and golden tones of Mr. Crane's decorations, the crude and tawdry inspiration and inharmonious methods of Mr. H. Schmalz, manifested in his A Gift for the Gods (47), a sort of overblown Hebe of the music-halls carrying fruit in a salver, are truly regrettable. Apart from the florid character of the design and colour, the painting of the face is of a lower type than befits the New Gallery, while the textures and colour of the features are like wax.—Mr. E. H. Fahey's pretty, but rather hard group of a girl with dogs, called The Favourite (84), is most acceptable and sincere, besides being amusingly animated.—No piece of pure genre painting in this gallery excels the picture (No. 100) of a young mother in a rapture of maternal bliss embracing her infant, with which Mrs. Alma Tadema has illustrated some charming verses by Miss L. Alma-Tadema printed in the Catalogue. The lady's face is expressive, but were it a little more beautiful the picture would be still more charming. The matron's silvery-white robe, the linen of the couch, the wealth of tones in the furniture of the room, and its ancient oaken panelling indicate the artist's honourable care to paint exhaustively.

Mr. J. W. Waterhouse's Ophelia (173) is not consonant with our ideas of the subject, because the damsel he has painted does not in the least suggest the fair and love-distraught maiden of high degree Hamlet desired for his bride. Little of Ophelia's madness and distress, and not much of her pain or sorrow, are visible in the damsel seated close to the branch of a tree which overhangs the bank of that weed-strewn, sun-flecked pool the accomplished Academician has depicted with so much spirit and force. To tell the truth, this picture is a fine piece of colour, bold, harmonious, and complete, and we should like it better with a more suitable title, but it is less admirable than the 'Lady of Shalott' we admired at the Academy last week.—In The Mermaids' Rock (199) Mr. E. M. Hale has worked up a marine melodrama, striking enough to increase his reputation even more effectually than his taking picture of sea rovers carrying off women, which was here last year, and to which the present picture may be called a sequel. In this work a crew of sea rovers are being lured to destruction by sirens. Effectively though the tale is told, sparkling as well as broad though its colouring and lighting are, the sea-maidens are more like little girls than sirens, and despite its extreme cleverness the whole design is theatrical. However, the movement of the bark rushing on towards the fatal rock is portrayed with singular spirit. Strangers on a Strange Shore (241), by the same artist, ought not to be overlooked; it is a sparkling and vivacious melodrama in paint, and we are bound to be pleased with anything that is fresh, vivid, and vivacious.

Mr. G. Hitchcock's Mother and Child (227) is much better than his self-contradictory and half-finished contribution to the Academy. It is, in fact, a charming piece of pearly colour and soft light. Unfortunately, the matron's figure is not well drawn, and her quaint features are clumsy, if not ill favoured.—In Mr. G. H. Boughton's robust and well-developed Evangeline (238), carrying a flagon of home-brewed ale to the reapers at noontide (for which act the painter has the authority of Prof. Langfellow), there is nothing that we have not found in many of Mr. Boughton's pictures. As a piece of colour per se, and without regard to the lighting and aerial effect of the whole, especially as to the background, it is by no means without charms of a sort which ought to be, and are, welcome, although the surface of the picture is distressingly harsh and dry, not to say crude, and the face—where the eyes have no speculation, and lips no vivacity—is like a mask, while the carnations, which ought to be clear and anything rather than so opaque as Mr. Boughton has made them, are rather flat and monotonous. The best part is Evangeline's pale blue bodice, which is so very rich and harmonious that it could not be better.

Among the best and most original of the portraits, besides those already mentioned, are the miniature whole-lengths Mr. P. Burne-Jones has sent, of which the first is not the least pleasing, Phyllis, Daughter of S. Buxton, Esq. (3), a child dressed in white and seated on a blue sofa. The design may be slightly stiff, the surface lacks a little smoothness, and the lighting is not so clear as it might be. On the other hand, the naïveté and grace of the figure, and the suggestions of good colour of which the work is full, are decidedly to be praised. Better still in the capital group of Hugh and Robert, Sons of F. Buxton, Esq. (21), young boys in white cricketing flannels. Sincere as well as harmonious as this and its companion portraits are, they would gain much from increased depths of tone and colour. Two similar groups by the same artist demand similar criticism. Still warmer praise is due to the Portrait of Mrs. S. Ralli (169), wearing a pale blush-coloured satin dress, and placed against an ashy-grey background. This is a highly luminous and artistic picture. The same artist's Sunset (289) possesses force, colour, and pathos equal to any of his landscapes.—The Hon. Mrs. Grosvenor's Miss L. Stillman (10) is excellent and expressive, while its rich blue and black are good in colouring. Few portraits by ladies are so solid and sober.—Not less excellent is Mrs. M. R. Corbet's Alfred Austin, Esq. (16), a fine piece, capably painted and a good likeness.—Miss D. and Miss K. Hawkshaw (37) of the Hon. J. Collier have pretty faces prettily painted, but they are rather lifeless and their poses are stiff; the arms are very badly drawn. Still, the face in profile could not be more cleverly sketched. Mrs. L. Sandwith (73), by the same, suggests the surface, colour, and texture of wax rather than of flesh. However, the face is animated, and the whole is effective if not sound.—Mrs. Swynnerton, who has had, to say the least of it, the courage of her art and with great vigour and skill painted nudités the most nude, has done herself injustice by sending for exhibition a portrait of a child so clumsily depicted, ill drawn, and crude as Lorna, Daughter of H. Martin, Esq. (29), which is quaint to grotesqueness and anything but beautiful. The hands are not only much too big, but redder than healthy nature could produce, while the child does not stand on her feet.—Mr. W. Llewellyn's Lady in a Grey Satin Gown (49) is so good that it resembles one of Mr. Shannon's best works. Good as it is in style and taste, the painting of the gown is the best part.—In its low tones and tints Mr. H. H. Brown's Miss V. Kennedy-Erskine (79) is enjoyable and harmonious; nevertheless it must not be forgotten that to paint thus is to evade half the difficulties which attend the achievement of colour in the artistic sense of that word.—Mr. E. A. Ward's Mr. Oddell (83), in a well-known character, is a Hals-like portrait of great vigour and spirit, and in its handling so firm and free as to be one of the best here. Mrs. A. and Daughter (211), by the same painter, a life-size, whole-length group standing among trees, is a trifle flat, thin in parts, and, as a whole, unsubstantial; still, it is redeemed by the fresh charm of the girl's face and figure as well as by the colour of her dress, which is exquisite in its way. On the other hand, the face of the lady is almost a failure, and her black gown has only so much of substance and colour as enables it to do pictorial duty towards the costume of the child. The Earl of Rosebery (284) hardly does justice to that statesman's courage and intelligence.

The harsh mask-like face of Miss H. M. Jones (105) and the crude green of her velvet gown are disagreeable in Mr. J. J. Shannon's portrait of her; but this brilliant artist does justice to his handsome and ladylike sitter in The Countess Bathurst (108), a life-size, whole-length figure of the lady in white, seated before a background of tapestry, which is mostly dark citron and dull blue. It is a portrait fit to rank with the masterpieces of the English school, and far better than its antithesis, No. 105, or that of Mrs. Charlesworth (207), a life-size, whole-length figure in pure chalk-white, which is thin and unsubstantial, and not so well drawn as it should be.—Mr. W. B. Richmond's Mrs. R. H. Benson (116), a half-length, nearly life-size picture of a young lady in a cloak, is graceful, natural, and sincere.—The Earl of Carlisle sends A Portrait (120) of a girl in green on a blue ground, which is vivacious and truthful. It is pretty in the best sense of that phrase, and is a sound, accomplished piece of painting.

MINOR EXHIBITIONS.

At the French Gallery, which has opened its forty-first annual summer exhibition, the lover of Turner will find in the place of honour a landscape no less admirable and renowned than The Meeting of the Waters (No. 26). It represents the junction of the Medway and Thames from the Nore Buoy; in the distance are Sheerness, Sheppey, and the Bligh Sand. Painted in 1815, and shown at Somerset House in the same year under its original and better-known title of 'The Bligh Sand, near Sheerness, Fishing Boats Trawling,' No. 6, it passed into the collection of Mr. T. N. Hughes, of Winchester, and thence to the gallery of Mr. Gillott and subsequently that of R. Hemming; it was No. 288 at Manchester in 1857, and at Leeds in 1868. It was Mr. Gillott who changed the name to the present one. This fine picture exhibits the master's vigour and learning, and his skill in composition, especially in the massive disposition of many active elements, such as ships and smaller craft borne along by the wind, furious currents of water, and gigantic clouds rushing before a strong breeze; and it is, besides, a masterpiece of chiaroscuro. We would rather have seen it without the adventitious aid of new varnish—which suggests, if it does not indicate, repairs—fine plate glass, and a gorgeous gilt frame. It is said that Mr. Agnew gave 4,350 guineas for this picture at the Gillott Sale, April, 1872, when everybody was more or less wild with excitement, and that Turner himself received 1,200 guineas for it. In the same gallery the lover of French landscape painting of the so-called Barbizon School will find charming, though small examples of Corot, Ville d'Array (1), Twilight (7), and Near Ville d'Array (10); a Daubigny, Banks of the Oise (2), almost as pearly as a Corot, and giving the river in a vista of fine colour and tone; M. C. Jacque's luminous, full-toned, and powerful Outskirts of Fontainebleau Forest (3), a capital illustration of style, though rather too heavy in its colour, and his Guardian of the Flock (6), which is rather black in the shadows; two Troyons: Autumn Tints (5), a charming sketch of spindling autumnal trees seen in glowing air, and La Mare (9); Millet's Retreat from the Storm, (14), a woman dragging her child in the teeth of a gale; and the artistic Bridge of St. Priest, by M. H. Harpignies, which is one of the most covetable landscapes in the room. Dupré's On the Oise (8) and Cabat's On the Seine (14) are also excellent, though not exceptionally so. Near these hang an old master-like Bonington, called the Bed-room of Henri IV. (21), and a representative specimen of Barker of Bath, named A Woodland Scene (23), which proves the artist to have been one of the ablest of his class and time. Sir J. Reynolds's Robinetta (25) is a much faded and deteriorated version of the engraved picture; Disconsolate (28) is by Hopper; Rest by the Way (29) bears Gainsborough's name on fair grounds; we like Stark's In Windsor Forest (32); while Raeburn's Lady Raeburn and Children (38) is respectable, and very like an inferior Romney. The gallery contains, besides the above, works by Calcott, G. Morland, M. Lagye, Prof. C. Heffner, Diaz de la Pena, A. G. Decamps, and E. Isabey.

In the Fine-Art Society's Gallery the visitor will be charmed by "A Collection of Pictures and Drawings of Military England of To-day," the works of Mr. T. Prinsup Bandle, whose zest for brilliant lighting and sparkling colours is happily supported by his exceptionally crisp, firm, and deft touch, and, above all, by his energetic sympathy with the duties, doings, costumes, and arms of soldiers. Mr. Bandle is a capital draughtsman of the sort most capable of delineating affairs military with spirit, knowledge, and the care that conceals itself. Among forty-five examples we commend specially Waiting their Turn (4), bombardiers of the Royal Horse Artillery; An Advanced Patrol (7), a group of horsemen, which reminds us of a Protas, so firm and full of character is it; The Recruit (14), where a needy "tradesman" attends a recruiting officer; The Watering Order (15), a double rank of splendid black horses in a barrack yard; The Sonit (24); Her Majesty's 1st Life Guards (27) in their state attire, following the kettledrums and mounted officers; The Queen's Guard (34); and Machine Gun to the Rescue (42).

SALES.

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods sold on the 5th inst. the following, from the collections of the late Mr. J. Graham and Mr. D. Dunbar. Drawings: D. Cox, A River Scene, with boys fishing, and cows, 215*l.* Sir J. Gilbert, Fairy Tales (three in one frame), 110*l.*; Illustrations to Shakespeare (three in one frame), 52*l.* J. Holland, A View in Venice, with gondola, and Venice, the companion, 90*l.* W. Holman Hunt, Jerusalem, moonlight, 73*l.* D. Roberts, A Market-Place in Spain, 69*l.* P. De Wint, *View of Lincoln, 530*l.; Neath Abbey, 68*l.* Pictures: J. Constable, The Dell, Helmingham Park, 241*l.* Sir E. Burne-Jones, Music, 598*l.*; The Building of the Brazen Tower, 362*l.* P. F. Poole, Midsummer Night's Dream, 110*l.* D. G. Rossetti, The Loving Cup, 45*l.* G. F. Watts, Love repelling Death, 290*l.*; Venus, 231*l.* G. Harlowe, Mother and Children, 194*l.* W. Linnell, Harvest, 110*l.* R. Andell, The Spanish Shepherd, Seville, 157*l.* T. Creswick, Autumn Morning, where brook and river meet, 262*l.* E. W. Cooke, A Dutch Galliot, running into the port of Aberdeen during a heavy gale, 183*l.* F. Goodall, Early Morning in the Wilderness of Shur, 315*l.* J. O. Hook, "Compass" by the Inviolable Sea, 215*l.* F. R. Lee and T. S. Cooper, A Park Scene and Cattle, 107*l.* D. Roberts, Interior of St. Anne's Church, Bruges, 267*l.*; Ruins of the Temple of the Sun at Baalbec, 320*l.* C. Stanfield, Capture of Smuggled Goods on the Old Antrim Road, dirty weather, 291*l.* Sculpture: J. Gibson, The Tinted Venus, on marble plinth, 84*l.*

The same auctioneers sold on the 9th inst. the following, from the collection of Mr. R. H. France. Engravings: Master Lambton, after Sir T. Lawrence, by S. Cousins, 42*l.* J. M. W. Turner, Liber Studiorum, frontispiece and seventy plates, 152*l.* Drawings: C. Biseo, Interior of a Turkish Café, 94*l.* D. Cox, The Pass of Killiecrankie, 52*l.* B. Foster, Flying the Kite, 71*l.* Sir J. Gilbert, Jack Cade with his Mob, 65*l.*; Scene in a Wood, brigands dividing spoil, 63*l.* A. C. Gow, Lord Foppington's Levee, 86*l.* Carl Haag, "La illa ha il Alla", 231*l.* L. Haghe, Interior of St. Peter's, Rome, 77*l.* H. G. Hine, Wilmington Holt, Sussex, 173*l.* H. Holiday, "Queen and Huntress Chase and Fair, Goddess excellently Bright", 63*l.* G. J. Pinwell, Strolling Players, 105*l.* S. Prout, The Fish Market, Rome, 86*l.* D. Roberts, The Church of St. Pierre, Caen, 64*l.* P. Walker, The Rescue, escape from the slave, 241*l.* P. De Wint, Near Lincoln, a river scene, with cornfield and cows, 92*l.* Pictures: E. Frère, Interior of a Cottage, with a mother and children, 105*l.* W. Muller, Cheess Players, 141*l.* Greuze, The Pet Lamb, 168*l.*

Messrs. Sothby, Wilkinson & Hodge sold the following coins last week in the collection of Mr. W. Whittaker: Henry VIII. Sovereign of the second coinage, 10*l.* 15*s.* George Noble, 11*l.* 15*s.* Edward VI. Sovereign, second coinage of the Southwark Mint, 12*l.* 5*s.* Elizabeth Noble, 16*l.* Portcullis est, Crown, Half-Crown, Shilling, and Sixpence, 18*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* James I. Noble, mint-mark coronet on both sides, 13*l.* 10*s.* Spur Ryal, m.m. spur rowel, 13*l.* 10*s.* Charles I. Oxford Mint Three-Pound Piece, 1644, 16*l.* 10*s.* Silver Pound Piece, 1642, 13*l.* Pound Piece "of fine work," 1643, 11*l.* 5*s.* Shrewsbury Mint Pound Piece, 1642, 27*l.* Siege Piece, Colchester, Two Shillings, 15*l.* 10*s.* Rebel Half-Crown, 14*l.* 10*s.* Cromwell Pattern Sixpence, 1658, 10*l.* 15*s.* Charles II. Ten-Shilling Piece, by Simon, 11*l.* Anne Proof of Farthing, 1714, in gold, 10*l.* 5*s.* George III. Pattern Two-Pound Piece, 1820, by Pistrucci, 12*l.* George IV. Pattern Crown by Mills, 1820, 13*l.* 10*s.*

FINE-ART GALLERY.

The diptych by Fra Angelico, 'The Annunciation,' which was Sir F. Burton's last purchase, has been hung in Room IV. of the National Gallery and numbered 1406. The joining of the two panels is only perceptible upon a close examination. We described this work at length some weeks ago. In Room XXI., and numbered 1408, is now hanging the 'Portrait of a Boy,' by John Opie (1761-1807), which has been presented to the nation by Mr. Edward Opie. It is an expressive head of a sorrowful aspect, with lank fair hair hanging about the forehead, and he wears a large frilled cambric collar.

Messrs. Agnew will publish the portrait of the Princess of Wales by Mr. Luke Fildes, which we mentioned last week in our notice of the exhibition of the Royal Academy. The reproduction of the picture has been entrusted, with the artist's approval, to M. Laguerrière, the well-known etcher. The size of the etching will be 21 in. by 16 in. A limited number of artist's proofs will, it is hoped, be ready before Christmas.

The directors of the Grafton Galleries have, following the example of the Salons in Paris, decided to open their summer exhibition, entitled "Fair Women," without a private view. Instead, they intend to have an "opening day," when the price of admission will be half-a-crown. This will be Friday, May 18th.

At the Goupil Gallery, 5, Regent Street, Pall Mall, a collection of water-colour drawings by Mr. Hamilton Aidé has been formed, of which the private view occurs to-day (Saturday). Similar appointments have been made with regard to Count Angelo Giallina's drawings of "Summer in the Mediterranean" and Mr. R. P. Staples's 'House of Commons, Feb. 13th, 1893,' which are at Messrs. Graves's, Pall Mall.

An important collection of Greek coins, that of Mr. R. Carfrae, of Edinburgh, is to be dispersed at auction by Messrs. Sothby, Wilkinson & Hodge before the end of the month. A catalogue adorned with collotype plates has been issued.

We have to record the death at Havre of M. E. Renouf, the distinguished landscape painter. He obtained a Second-Class Medal in 1880, a Gold Medal and the red ribbon of the Legion of Honour at the Exhibition of 1889. He has in this year's Salon 'Un Orage en Mer' and the portrait of a Jesuit.

The decease of Herr Ernest Slingineyer, the well-known Belgian painter, is announced as having occurred last week at Brussels, where he had lived during many years. He was born in 1823 at Loochristy, became a pupil of Baron Wappers in the Academy at Antwerp, and won a considerable reputation by exhibiting in 1842 'Le Vengeur,' a picture of that apocryphal incident in which Frenchmen still believe. The picture, after having been exhibited at the Salon of 1843 and later at the Hague, is now in the gallery at Cologne. Among his more important works are 'The Death of Classicus,' which was bought by the King of Holland; 'The Death of Jacobson,' which the King of the Belgians bought; and 'Canoons,' which the King of Portugal purchased. Many battle pieces of his are in the Palais des Académies at Brussels. He exhibited at various times 'An Episode in the Massacre of St. Bartholomew,' and 'Vesalius following the Army of Charles V., which is now at Brussels, and by many considered his best work; this, with Slingmeyer's more popular and more than once engraved 'A Martyr in the Reign of Diocletian,' was in the International Exhibition, 1862. The deceased was one of the very few artists who have ever taken an active interest in politics; he was one of the representatives of the capital in the Belgian Parliament, and an energetic Conservative of great influence. We are informed that there is no truth in the legend that his failure to get re-elected in 1892 hastened the death of this eminent artist.

A LONG gallery intended for the exhibition of prints and drawings, and thus far analogous to that annexed to the Print Room which forms part of the White Building in the British Museum, is being prepared in the basement of the Louvre, under the Long Gallery, and parallel to the Seine. It is 150 metres in length, and therefore a much more important gallery than that at present attached to the Chalcographie of the Louvre.

"AN ARTIST" writes:—

"All interested in the study of Greek art will endorse your remarks on the unfortunate relegation of the casts of Greek sculpture at South Kensington to a dark corridor. Sculpture, of course, should always be exhibited under a top light. It was thus shown in the large hall. At the same time, the statues were so crowded that none could be properly seen. This fact militates against their being replaced, but cannot the opportunity be seized of at last establishing a Museum of Casts worthy of the nation? It should be in a separate building. The mixing together in the same gallery of original sculpture and casts, as at the British Museum, simply vulgarizes the whole collection. The Museum of Casts need not be either at Bloomsbury or South Kensington. Why not give it to East or South London? It is useless crying over spilt milk, and Mr. Perry may well resign himself to the loss of the great hall, with its all too limited space, and devote his energies to securing a thoroughly representative collection, shown under a proper light, and in adequate exhibition room."

WITH the return to power of Nubar Pasha a brighter future is opening out to the interests of art and science in Egypt. It is well known that the efforts of H. E. Yacoub Artin Pasha, the enlightened Secretary of Public Instruction, to advance the course of culture and education were thwarted on every hand by the late administration. Now there is reasonable hope that the lost ground may be recovered. Last month his Excellency secured a grant of 38,000*l.* to erect a building for the National Library and Arab Museum; within the last few days he has obtained from the Premier a further sum of 150,000*l.* for the erection of a museum in Cairo to contain the collection of antiquities. We have special gratification in recording the latter event, since the Athenæum opposed the removal of the collection to Ghizeh, and has never ceased protesting against its remaining there.

M. G. DARESSY, of the Ghizeh Museum, Cairo, has issued a pamphlet in which he describes fully the temple of Amenophis III. at Luxor; he also discusses the repairs and additions thereto made by later kings of Egypt, and he gives a clear plan, showing the results of the excavations made during the last few years by the administration of the Ghizeh Museum. A list of the names of the Egyptian royal benefactors of the temple, printed in hieroglyphic characters, adds to the value of this work.

TURKEY will soon be a closed country to the archaeological amateur. At Kutahiyeh, in Asia Minor, the authorities have seized, on the premises of a foreigner, a carved marble slab he had purchased from a native. This has been sent to the Museum at Constantinople. At Vooria, on the Gulf of Smyrna, some sarcophagi have been found, and dispatched to the Museum after being examined by Mr. Humann, the archaeologist. The Turkish press is taking an interest in such matters, and hence a romantic paragraph about a tomb at Hissarlik in the Troad, which is assigned to "Andromache, wife of Hector, son of Priam, King of Troy." It is announced, however, that the inscriptions have not yet been deciphered, so this ascription is purely imaginary.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

ST. JAMES'S HALL.—Pianoforte Recitals by Josef Hofmann, M. Sapellnikoff, and Madame Sophie Monter. Laistner Choir Concert.

QUEEN'S HALL.—Bach Choir.

THE strong feeling of regret felt when it was announced six years ago that the health of the wonderful child pianist Josef Hofmann had broken down, owing to the undue strain on his mental and physical resources, may now be removed, as it was conclusively shown at his reappearance on Saturday last week that he was thoroughly restored in every respect. According to the official statement, after his withdrawal from public life Hofmann studied quietly for a time under Prof. Urban at Berlin, and subsequently, at his own earnest desire, under Rubinstein at Dresden. After tuition for two and a half years he played his master's Pianoforte Concerto in b minor at Hamburg, with such success that Rubinstein gave his consent for the resumption of his professional career. Some hesitation may reasonably be felt by discriminating listeners, but the impression left by last Saturday's performance was that Hofmann is rapidly developing into an artist of the foremost calibre. He commenced by giving a most brilliant and powerful rendering of Beethoven's Sonata in A, Op. 101, and after equally effective playing in Schumann's 'Fantasiestücke,' Op. 111, simply astonished all present by his execution of Rubinstein's phenomenally difficult Variations, Op. 88. After this exceptionally fine manipulative display came some Chopin pieces, including two of the Preludes, and the elaborate Polonaise in r sharp minor, which were all interpreted with deep feeling in addition to beautiful touch and phrasing. More decisive opinions may be offered after the second recital, which is fixed for this (Saturday) afternoon.

M. Sapellnikoff is a pianist of several moods. He can play with all the force and energy of Rubinstein or as tamely as a schoolgirl. He commenced his recital on Tuesday afternoon with a singularly quiet performance of Beethoven's Sonata in r minor, Op. 57, but was far more eloquent in touch and phrasing in some of Chopin's pieces, which came next in the programme; and Mendelssohn's Lied ohne Worte generally known here as 'The Bee's Wedding' has surely never been taken so rapidly and yet with perfect clearness and accuracy. A waltz from his own pen is a good salon piece, showy and brilliant. Madame Sophie Monter joined her gifted pupil in a duet for two pianofortes by Reinecke, and a more excellent ensemble is scarcely conceivable.

The gratitude of amateurs is due to Herr Max Laistner for the performance for the first time in London of Max Bruch's setting of Schiller's ode 'Das Lied von der Glocke' at his concert on Wednesday evening. The work was written by invitation for the Birmingham Festival in 1879, but it met with a somewhat unfavourable reception, and hence probably its neglect by choral societies. Another reason may be found in the popularity of Romberg's setting of the same poem, which is tuneful and well within the means of any ordinary choir. Max Bruch's work makes greater demands both on executants and listeners; but as an example of musical art it stands on a far higher plane, and if, on the whole, it is somewhat heavy, it contains many beautiful thoughts and much orchestration of a picturesque nature. The vocal part—writing is also that of a master. Though not perfect, the performance by the Laistner Choir, a competent orchestra, and Miss Fillunger, Mlle. Olga de Mohl, Mr. John Probert, and Mr. David Bispham as the leading artists, may be described as on the whole highly commendable.

There was a capital attendance at the Bach Choir concert, chiefly of unaccompanied part music, on Tuesday afternoon, in spite of what may be termed the severity of the programme. Interest in the laudable work carried on by this society would seem to be increasing. Three of Palestrina's motets were admirably rendered, namely, 'Assumpta est Maria' in six parts, 'Adoramus Te' in four parts, and 'Exultate Deo' in five parts. The first and last of these had not been heard previously at a public concert, and are fine examples of the Italian master's style. Another interesting feature was Beethoven's three 'Equale' for four trombones, sombre little pieces written in 1812 for performance on All Souls' Day at the request of the Kapellmeister at Linz. Mr. Bispham introduced three quaint old Italian songs by Fasolo, Caldara, and Legrenzi, and also sang with splendid energy Prof. Stanford's dashing 'Cavalier Songs' for baritone solo and male chorus, Op. 17. Very great success was made by a new violinist, M. Achille Rivarde, in Bach's Chaconne. His playing was at once brilliant and pure intone and intonation. Schütz's 'Lamentatio Davidi,' for bass solo, four trombones, and organ, was yet another item worthy of mention; and a most enjoyable and successful concert ended with Dr. Hubert Parry's splendid setting of Milton's ode, 'Blest pair of sirens,' which, like the rest of the programme, was admirably rendered under the direction of Prof. Stanford. We hasten to announce that it is intended to hold a Bach Festival next spring at the Queen's Hall, the dates fixed being April 2nd, 4th, and 6th, the programmes to be the 'St. Matthew' Passion Music, a miscellaneous selection, and the Mass in b minor. Guarantees are already invited, and they should be forthcoming in large numbers for so interesting a celebration.

Musical Society.

THE performances of Thursday last week included one by the Strolling Players' Amateur Orchestral Society at the Queen's Hall. This was certainly one of the best ever given by Mr. Norfolk Megone's steadily improving forces, much justice being rendered to Beethoven's Symphony in r, No. 8, the Prelude to 'Lohengrin,' Massenet's suite 'Scènes Alsaciennes,' and other selections. An interesting item in the programme was a new Pianoforte Concerto in d, by Mr. R. H. Walthew, a scholar at the Royal College of Music, on whose efforts as a composer we have previously made favourable comment. He has studied under Prof. Villiers Stanford and Dr. Hubert Parry, whose combined influences are reflected in a vigorous, melodious, and generally effective work, the solo part in which was admirably rendered by the young composer. Madame Fanny Moody and Mr. Braxton Smith were both highly commendable as the vocalists.

AN excellent impression was created by the efforts of Miss Carrie Townshend as a pianist at a recital given on Thursday last week at the Queen's Hall. The young executant displayed much technical capacity and artistic intelligence in Beethoven's Sonata in c, Op. 2, No. 3; various smaller pieces by Chopin, Rheinberger, Mozskowski, Grieg, and other composers; and in Mendelssohn's Variations in b for pianoforte and violoncello, Op. 17, in which she was ably assisted by Mr. W. E. Whitehouse. Miss Amy Allom, a contralto, showed feeling in some vocal pieces which she sang as a substitute for Miss Evangeline Florence, though she was, not unnaturally, influenced by nervousness.

THE last Saturday Wagner Concert for the present included the entire third act of 'Tannhäuser,' which was, on the whole, effectively rendered, with Miss Ella Russell, Miss Mabel Elliot, Mr. Edward Lloyd, and Mr. Andrew Black in the leading parts. The choir and orchestra, under Mr. Cowen's direction, did their work, on the whole, fairly well. Some selections from other works were previously performed creditably, the only drawback to the enjoyment of the audience being the absurd misprints in the book of words. This is a matter that could be remedied at small cost.

AN interesting orchestral and choral concert was given by Mr. W. H. Wing, on behalf of the Great Northern Central Hospital, at the Princes' Hall last Saturday evening; a feature of the programme being 'Selections from the Complete Angler, an Idyll in two days, after Izaak Walton,' the composer being Mr. Edward Davey Rendall. It is a somewhat singular work, with recitations, which were sonorously delivered by Mr. Kirwan, the music being in a mixture of styles, in which the madrigalian writers, Handel, and Wagner are about equally represented. It is, on the whole, cleverly written, and better things may be expected of Mr. Rendall. The solo parts were carefully rendered by Miss Gertrude Siebel, Miss Louise Phillips, and Messrs. E. Iles, J. Leyland, MacDonnell, and Marriott, and the orchestra and chorus were fully efficient.

A PIANOFORTE recital was given on Tuesday afternoon at the Princes' Hall by Madame Roger Mielos, whose brilliant technique was displayed in Beethoven's Sonata in c sharp minor, Op. 27, No. 2, at any rate in the final movement; in Schumann's 'Carnaval,' of which she gave a remarkably spirited, if not very Schumannesque reading; and various minor items by Schubert, Chopin, Grieg, Rubinstein, and Liszt.

THE first of three concerts was given by M. Tivadar Nachés at St. James's Hall on Wednesday afternoon with considerable success. The Hungarian violinist, whose popularity seems to be growing, was heard in Max Bruch's 'Scottish Fantasia—a somewhat unhappy selection, as it needs the orchestral accompaniment—and in pieces by Bach, Handel, Corelli, Paganini, and other composers. Vocal items were contributed with acceptance by Miss Zagury and Miss Schidrowitz.

THE Directors of the Crystal Palace have consented to permit a benefit concert to be given for Mr. Eyre, whose resignation as organist we recently announced. It will take place on Saturday, the 26th inst., with the aid of the Palace orchestra and several eminent vocal and instrumental artists, and, of course, Mr. Manns as conductor.

PROF. STANFORD writes:—

"My name has been given in the musical notes of this week's issue as a supporter of the scheme for the registration of musical teachers. I have never written or spoken a word in favour of the scheme, and I am totally opposed to it."

WE may mention some concerts which through lack of space we omitted to notice last week: a recital at the Steinway Hall by Miss Katie Leonard, an eight-year-old pianist, pupil of Mr. F. Berger, in which the child displayed much precocious ability in various selections from Handel, Beethoven, Chopin, Mendelssohn, and other composers; the first of three pianoforte and violin recitals at St. James's Hall by Miss Mathilde Verne (formerly known as Frau-lein Mathilde Wurm) and Miss Ethel Barns, a highly promising violin student at the Royal Academy of Music; Mr. Frederick Dawson's third and last pianoforte recital at St. James's Hall, in which he executed, with considerable intelligence and excellent manipulation, Beethoven's Sonata in a, Op. 101; Schumann's 'Fantasietücke,' Op. 12; Sterndale Bennett's three 'Musical Sketches,' Op. 11, and a number of pieces by Chopin and Liszt; and Signor Scuderi's concert at the Steinway Hall, in which he appeared as vocalist, violinist, guitarist, mandolinist, and composer. He was joined by that promising young pianist Miss Annie Burghes in Beethoven's 'Kreutzer' Sonata, and Miss Burghes was heard to much advantage in her pianoforte solos, which included Chopin's Ballade in a flat. As the vocalists Miss Delves Norton, Miss Edith Werner, and Mr. Oscar Noyes were favourably received.

SIGNOR EMILIO PIZZI's brief opera 'Gabriella,' with which, it is said, Madame Patti has scored a great success in the United States, will be given in concert-room form at the Albert Hall in June, with, of course, the celebrated prima donna in the principal part.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

- | | |
|--------|--|
| Mus. | Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 8.30, Production of Puccini's 'Manon Lescaut.' |
| Trin. | Miss Marie Tagore's Lecture on the 'Three Styles in Music,' 8. |
| | Hampstead Conservatoire. |
| | — Miss Minny Curteen's Concert, 8.30, Princes' Hall. |
| | — Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 8. 'Faust.' |
| Wdn. | — Amsterdam's Cappella Choir, 8.30, St. Martin's Town Hall. |
| | — Miss Maud MacArthur's Violin Recital, 8, Princes' Hall. |
| | — Musical Guild Concert, 8, Kensington Town Hall. |
| | — Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 8, 'Orfeo' and 'Cavalleria Rusticana.' |
| | — Amsterdam's Cappella Choir, 8.30, St. Martin's Town Hall. |
| | — Miss Agnes Bartlett's Concert, 8.30, Queen's Hall. |
| Thurs. | Royal Academy of Music Commemorative Concert, 8, Queen's Hall. |
| | — Mrs. Henschel's Vocal Recital, 8, Queen's Hall. |
| | — M. Stokley's Pianoforte Recital, 8, Princes' Hall. |
| | — Annual Festival of the Royal Society of Musicians, 7, Hotel Metropole. |
| | — Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 8, 'Poliutime di Braccio' and 'Pagliacci.' |
| Fri. | — Amsterdam's Cappella Choir, 8.30, St. Martin's Town Hall. |
| | — Mr. Cecil Sharp's Third Wagner Lecture, 8, Hampstead Conservatoire. |
| | — Miss Fanny Davies's Concert, 8, St. James's Hall. |
| | — Mr. Francis Walker's Concert, 8, Queen's Hall. |
| | — Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 8, 'Carmen.' |
| Sat. | — Amsterdam's Cappella Choir, 8.30, St. Martin's Town Hall. |
| | — Herr Josef Hofmann's Pianoforte Recital, 8, St. James's Hall. |
| | — Concert in Aid of the Tharing Cross Hospital, 8, Queen's Hall. |
| | — Messrs. Harrison's Field Concert, 8, Albert Hall. |
| | — Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 8, Production of Verdi's 'Falstaff.' |
| | — Amsterdam's Cappella Choir, 8.30, St. Martin's Town Hall. |

DRAMA

Plays and Dramatic Essays. By Charles Lamb. With an Introduction by Rudolph Dircks. (Scott.)

It would be hard to conceive of a book the contents of which should more inadequately respond to its title than this. Lamb's four plays, which of all his works were least worth reprinting, are here, but the dramatic fragment called 'The Witch,' which ranks as the best of his dramatic attempts, is absent. So are most of the essays the names of which will first occur to nine men out of ten who read Mr. Dircks's title-page—'On some of the Old Actors,' 'On the Artificial Comedy of the Last Century,' 'My First Play,' 'Stage Illusion'—the single exception probably being the paper 'On the Tragedies of Shakespeare,' which by some happy oversight has strayed into the volume. An explanation of the omissions is given, but it has the disadvantage of being quite as mysterious as the puzzle. It does not form a part of the introduction, but is supplied as a postscript to it, and was probably an afterthought: "Those of Lamb's essays which would otherwise have been included in this volume, appear in the 'Essays of Elia' (the companion volume to this) in the same series."

Here there is an implied assumption that the purchaser of the two volumes will secure a complete collection of Lamb's "dramatic essays"; but Mr. Dircks can hardly be unaware that this will not be the case. There will remain lacking 'The Old Actors,' 'Munden's Farewell,' 'John Kemble and Godwin's Antonio,' the notes to the 'Garrick Plays,' and all the Examiner criticisms—a list which, though incomplete, is, as it stands, long enough and important enough to show Mr. Dircks's quality as an editor, and how deceptive his title-page even when supplemented by the postscript. A really complete collection of Lamb's writings on dramatic subjects carefully edited as to the text would make a volume both valuable and attractive, especially if free from the encumbrance of an "introduction" such as is prefixed to the present collection of scraps. This proface is surplussage, and worse; for it casts no new light on Lamb and his works, and is disfigured by mistakes in the quotations and by errors as to matters of fact which a slight exercise of care would have avoided. One of the errors occurs in the opening sentence. The writer had heard that Coleridge once called Lamb "gentle-hearted Charles," but could not be troubled to search Coleridge's works for the occasion, thinking it enough for a "cheap edition" to refer the phrase to an apocryphal "early sonnet." On the second page Mary Lamb is said to have "outlasted" her brother by ten years, the fact being that she survived him by more than twelve. In the last page but one we are led to infer that the unnamed comic opera in Lamb's handwriting preserved in the British Museum has never been printed, whereas much the greater part was (quite superfluously) included in a cheap edition of Lamb's 'Works,' intended to be complete, which was published in 1875. A statement that Lamb submitted the MS. of 'John Woodvil' to Coleridge and Southey in "1779" (when all three were under eight years of age) may be assumed, as far as the date is concerned, to be a misprint—possibly for 1799, which would have made it almost accurate, but only as regards Southey. None of the errors noted is important in itself, but the presence of so many within the compass of a few pages exhibits on the part of the editor a lack of due respect both for his subject and his readers. The same may, perhaps, be said with regard to occasional lapses from clearness either of thought or expression. What, for example, are we to make of this passage?—

"Granting him [Lamb] fine, the finest qualities of manliness, is it not a little odd that this quaint humorous creature, addicted to his rubber or cribbage, to punning (often quite

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY'S NEW BOOKS.

FEDERAL BRITAIN; or, Unity and Federation of the Empire. By

F. P. DE LABILLIÈRE, Fellow of the Royal Colonial Institute, and Author of 'The Early History of the Colony of Victoria.' With Chapter on 'Imperial Defence' by Sir George S. Clarke, R.E. K.C.M.G. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

Professor Sir J. R. SEELEY says:—"Incomparably the greatest question which we can discuss."

DANTE G. ROSSETTI and the PRE-RAPHAELITE MOVEMENT.

By ESTHER WOOD. With 8 Photogravure Reproductions of Rossetti's Paintings. 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.

"Regarded as an appreciation of the wider significance of the Pre-Raphaelite movement, and a critical account of Rossetti's art and poetry, her book is a fresh and luminous contribution to the literature of the subject. The photogravures of Rossetti's pictures in themselves make the book one to be coveted by all who are interested in art."—Times.

"The best book yet written on Rossetti and the Pre-Raphaelites."—Daily News.

"A notable feature of the book is its wealth of illustration in the shape of reproductions (in tint) of Rossetti masterpieces."—Globe.

The book contains some unpublished reminiscences of Rossetti's student days and career in art, and describes the Founding of the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood and its long conflict with academic traditions.

M. TAINÉ'S 'LES ORIGINES DE LA FRANCE CONTEMPORAINE.'

The MODERN RÉGIME. By H. A. TAINÉ, D.C.L. Oxon., Author of 'A

History of English Literature,' 'Notes on England,' &c. Vol. II. just ready. Translated by JOHN DURAND. Demy 8vo. cloth, 16s.

AMONG the MOORS. Sketches of Oriental Life. By G. MONTBARD,

Author of 'In Egypt,' &c. Superbly illustrated. Royal 8vo. cloth, 16s.

LARGE-PAPER EDITION, strictly limited to 100 Copies, each numbered and signed by the Author, printed on Japanese Vellum, THREE GUINEAS each, net.

"What he saw in Morocco gave rich material in the way of incident and colouring both for pencil and pen."—Times.

"A series of infinitely more vivid and brilliant pictures of Morocco than are to be found in sober and solid works on that dilapidated and crumbling bulwark of Islam."—Scotsman.

CHINA to PERU: Over the Andes. A Journey through

South America. By Mrs. HOWARD VINCENT, Author of 'Forty Thousand Miles over Land and Water,' 'Newfoundland to Cochín China,' &c. With Appendix by Colonel HOWARD VINCENT, C.B. M.P. With numerous illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth.

[In preparation.]

IN the LAND of the TUI: my Journal in New Zealand.

By Mrs. ROBERT WILSON. Illustrated. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

[Shortly.]

REMINISCENCES of an INDIAN POLICE OFFICIAL.

By T. C. ARTHUR. Fully illustrated. Demy 8vo. cloth.

[Shortly.]

NEW NOVELS AND STORIES.

SARAH: a Survival. By SYDNEY CHRISTIAN, Author of 'Lydia.'

3 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, 12s.

[Just ready.]

The STORY of MY TWO WIVES. By ONE of THEIR HUSBANDS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

[Just ready.]

A BAIREUTH PILGRIMAGE. By EDITH E. CUTHELL,

3 vols. crown 8vo. cloth.

[In a few days.]

The ENGLISH CATALOGUE of BOOKS for 1893. A

List of Books published in Great Britain and Ireland in the Year 1893, with their Sizes, Prices, and Publishers' Names. Also of the Principal Books published in the United States of America. With the Addition of an Index to Subjects. Royal 8vo. 6s.

FRA PAOLO SARPI: the Greatest of the Venetians. By the Rev. ALEXANDER ROBERTSON, D.D., Author of 'Count Campello and Catholic Reform in Italy.' With illustrations and Facsimile Letter. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

CARTIER to FRONTENAC: a Study of Geographical Discovery in the Interior of North America in its Historical Relations, 1534-1760. By JUSTIN WINSON. Illustrated with Maps, Plans, &c. 8vo. cloth, 15s.

"One of those painstaking books wherein nothing is advanced without what the French call proofs in support."—Daily News.

TALES from WESTMINSTER ABBEY TOLD to CHILDREN.

By Mrs. FENWEN LORD. With a Portrait of Dean Stanley, and a Plan and View of the Abbey. New and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. boards, 1s.

The INSTRUCTION and AMUSEMENTS of the BLIND.

By Dr. GUILLER. With 23 Engravings. 8vo. cloth, 5s.

A TRUTHFUL WOMAN in SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

By KATH SANBORN, Author of 'Adopting an Abandoned Farm.' Small crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

[Ready.]

ON SHORT LEAVE to JAPAN. By Captain G. J. YOUNG-

HUSBAND, Queen's Own Corps of Guides, Author of 'Eighteen Hundred Miles on a Burmese Tat,' &c. With illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

[Ready.]

PERSEPHONE, and other Poems. By K. MCCOEN CLARK,

Author of 'A Southern Cross Fairy Tale.' Dedicated by permission to H.R.H. the Duchess of York. Crown 8vo. cloth.

[Next week.]

FIRE ISLAND. By GEORGE MANVILLE FENN, Author of 'The Black Bar,' &c. Numerous illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth.

[In a few days.]

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION IN ONE VOLUME.

The EMIGRANT SHIP. By W. CLARK RUSSELL, Author of

'The Wreck of the Grosvenor,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

[Ready.]

PREACHERS OF THE AGE SERIES.—Two New Volumes.

Uniform crown 8vo. vols., with Photogravure Portraits, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each.

By the Rev. E. J. GOUGH, M.A., of Dundee.—THE RELIGION of the SON of MAN.

[Next week.]

By the Rev. J. MORLAIS JONES, of Lewisham.—A CUP of COLD WATER.

"Mr. Morlais Jones has the fervour of the best Welsh eloquence. His book is well worthy to take its place with the best of the list."—British Weekly.

GLIMPSES of the FRENCH REVOLUTION: Myths,

Ideals, and Realities. By J. G. ALGER, Author of 'Englishmen in the French Revolution,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"A deeply interesting and most valuable work."—Daily Chronicle.

A MANUAL of OBSTETRIC NURSING. By MARIAN

HUMPHREY, British Lying-in Hospital, London; Diploma London Obstetric Society; Member Royal British Nurses' Association, and of its Registration Board. Dedicated to H.R.H. Princess Mary, Duchess of Teck. Crown 8vo. 300 pp. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The TRAGEDY of FAUSTUS by GOETHE. Translated in Original Rhymes and Metres by ALFRED H. HUTH. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.

LOW'S STANDARD NOVELS BY POPULAR WRITERS.

In Uniform crown 8vo. Volumes, bound in cloth, HALF-A-CROWN each.

By WILLIAM BLACK.

A DAUGHTER of HETH. With Portrait of the Author.
The STRANGE ADVENTURES of a PHANTOM.

A PRINCESS of THULE.
IN SILK ATTIRE.

KILMERY.
MADCAP VIOLET.

THREE FRATERS.
The MAID of KILMENA.

GREEN PASTURES and PICCADILLY.
MACBOD of DARE.

LADY SILVERDALE'S SWEETHEART.
WHISK WINGS.

SUNSHINE.

By R. D. BLACKMORE.

LORNA DOONE. Thirty-ninth Edition.
With Photogravure Portrait of the Author, specially prepared for this New Edition. Also Illustrated Edition for Presentation, gilt edges, 7s. 6d.

CLARA VAUGHAN.
CRIPPLE the CARRIAGE.

TOMMY UPMORE.

The BEAUTIFUL WRETCH.
SHANDON BELLS.

ADVENTURES in THULE.
YOLANDE.

JUDITH SHAKESPEARE.
The WISE WOMEN of INVERNESS.

WHITE HEATHER.
SABINA ZEMBRA.

THE STRANGE ADVENTURES of a HOUSE-BOAT.

IN FAR LOCHABER.
The PENANCE of JOHN LOGAN.

THE NEW PRINCE FORTUNATUS.
DONALD ROSS of RHIMRA.

STAND FAST, CRAIG ROYSTON!

CRADOCK NOWELL.
CHRISTOWELL.

ALICE LOHRAINER.
MARY ANERLEY.

EREMA.
KIT and KITTY.

SPRINGHAVEN. (Also Illustrated Edition, 7s. 6d.)

By THOMAS HARDY.

FAR FROM the MADDING CROWD. With a Photogravure Portrait of the Author from a Photo by Wheeler, of Weymouth.
The MAYOR of CASTERBRIDGE.
The TRUMPET-MAJOR.

A LAODICEAN.
The RETURN of the NATIVE.
THE HAND of ETHELBERG.
A FAIR of BLUE EYES.
TWO on a TOWER.

By W. CLARK RUSSELL.

The WRECK of the "GROSVENOR." With Photogravure Portrait of the Author.
AN OCEAN FREE LANCE.
The FROZEN PIRATE.
A SEA QUEEN.
LITTLE LOO.
The LADY MAUD.

MY WATCH BELOW.
JOHN HOLDSWORTH, CHIEF MATE.
JACK'S COURTSHIP.
A SEASIDE VOYAGE.
A SAILOR'S SWEETHEART.
BETWIXT the FORELANDS.
MRS. DINE'S JEWELS.

By GEORGE MAC DONALD.

The VICAR'S DAUGHTER. With Portrait.
ADELA CATHCART.
MARY MARSTON.
WEIGHED and WANTING.

GUILD COURT.
A DISH of OYSTERS, and other Essays. By Dr. Mac Donald.
STEPHEN ARCHER.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LIMITED, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, Fleet-street, E.C.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S
NEW BOOKS.
AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

NOW READY.

THE ART OF TAKING A WIFE.

Translated from the Italian of PAOLO MANTEGAZZA.

Fcap. 8vo. buckram, gilt top. 5s.

Contents:—Between Scylla and Charybdis; To Take or Not to Take a Wife?—Marriage in Modern Society—Sexual Choice in Marriage; the Art of Choosing Well—Age and Health—Physical Sympathy—Race and Nationality—The Harmony of Feelings—The Harmony of Thoughts—The Financial Question—Incidents and Accidents—Hell—Purgatory—Paradise.

NEW NOVELS.
THE STORY OF A MODERN WOMAN.

By ELLA HEPPWORTH DIXON.

In 1 volume, crown 8vo. 6s.

THE COUNTESS RADNA.

By W. E. NORRIS.

A New Edition.

In 1 volume, crown 8vo. 6s.

SECOND EDITION.
A DAUGHTER OF MUSIC.

By G. COLMORE.

In 3 volumes.

World.—"The people who 'yawn over a novel' would not yawn over 'A Daughter of Music'.....this story of passion and doom.....The catastrophe which involves the four actors lift the novel into the realm of tragedy."

Daily Telegraph.—"By artists and art-lovers the book will be read with deep interest and lively sympathy. It is in every respect a remarkable and memorable book."

Stefan.—"The work displays originality of treatment. It has imaginative and descriptive passages of much beauty and power. It is a book which musicians, at least, will read with keen interest."

Daily Chronicle.—"A fine story. 'A Daughter of Music' has appeared very early in the season of 1894, but it will live to the end, and long after."

BENEFITS FORGOT.

By WOLCOTT BALESTIER,
Author of 'The Average Woman.'

In 2 volumes.

"The story is full of fine feeling, subtle appreciation, and careful observation, and the reading of it awakens anew the regret that the author's career should have been so early and so abruptly terminated."—Literary World.

THE SURRENDER OF MARGARET BELLARMINE.

By ADELINE SERGEANT,
Author of 'The Story of a Penitent Soul,' &c.

In 2 volumes, 12s.

"Absorbing in its intense interest."—Observer.

NOW READY, THE SECOND EDITION OF
THE NEW REVIEW
For MAY, price One Shilling, containing
THE FIRST PART OF SECRETS OF THE COURT OF SPAIN.

London: WILLIAM HEINEMANN,
21, Bedford-street, W.C.

"LEARNED, CHATTY, USEFUL."—Athenæum.

"THAT DELIGHTFUL REPOSITORY OF FORGOTTEN LORE, 'NOTES AND QUERIES.'"—Edinburgh Review.

Every Saturday, of any Bookseller or Newagent in England, price 4d.; or free by post to the Continent, 4½d.

Subscription, 10s. 3d. for Six Months; 20s. 6d. for Twelve Months, including postage.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

A MEDIUM OF INTERCOMMUNICATION FOR LITERARY MEN AND GENERAL READERS.

The Sixth Series of NOTES AND QUERIES, complete in 12 vols. price 10s. 6d. each Volume, contains, in addition to a great variety of similar Notes and Replies, Articles of Interest on the following Subjects:—

English, Irish, and Scottish History.

The Plagues of 1605 and 1665—Wolves in England—Prices in the Middle Ages—Executions of 1745—The "Meal Tub Plot"—Episcopacy in Scotland—English Roman Catholic Martyrs—Hereward in Wake—Hiding-Place of Charles II.—Where did Edward II. die?—Battle between Armies of Gustavus and Boadicea—William III. at the Battle of the Boyne—The Green Bag—Confidential Letters to James II. about Ireland—Anne Boleyn's Heart—Hubert de Burgh—Henry Martin the Regicide—Lord Hussey and the Lincolnshire Rebellion.

Biography.

Lais de Camoens—Thomas Bell—Cromwell—William Penn—Neil Gwynne—Coleridge—Curll the Bookseller—Sir John Choke—Gibson, Bishop of London—Thorpe the Architect—Sir Richard Whittington—Charles Wolfe.

Bibliography and Literary History.

Shakespeareans—Chap-Book Notes—"Adieu Fideles"—"The Land of the Leal"—John Glyn—Reynard the Fox—"Lead, kindly Light"—Rabelais—London Publishers of 18th Century—The Welsh Testament—The Libraries of Balliol, All Souls, Brasenose, and Queen's Colleges, Oxford—Key to 'Endymion'—Early Roman Catholic Magazines—Stuart Literature—The Libraries of Eton, and Trinity College, Cambridge—"Dame Europa"—Bibliography—Unpublished Letters of Dr. Johnson—"Book of Ages"—Eikon Basilike Deputa—William of Tyre—Bibliography of Shetland—The Book—"Notes on the 'Belgic Mediol'—Authorship of the 'Imitatio'—Tristram Shandy—Critical Notes of Charles Lamb.

Popular Antiquities and Folk-lore.

Slavonic Mythology—Folk-lore of Leprosy—Lycanthropy—North Italian Folk-lore—Friday unlucky for Marriage—West Indian Superstitions—"Milky Way"—Folk-lore of Birds—Feather Superstition—Medieval and Modern Folk-lore.

Poetry, Ballads, and Drama.

The Drama in Ireland—"Tom Jones" on the French Stage—"Auld Robin Gray"—"Harplings of Lena"—Mr. of Gray's "Elegy"—The "Mystery" of S. Pantaleon—Rogers's "Pleasures of Memory"—"Blue Tonnets over the Border"—Swift's Verses on his own Death—Tennyson's "Palace of Art"—Ballad of "William and Margaret"—The Australian Drama—Poem by J. M. Keble—Shelley's "Ode to Mont Blanc"—Hymns by Chas. Wesley—"Cross Purposes"—Tennyson's "Dream of Fair Women"—"Ladle o' Bochan."

Popular and Proverbial Sayings.

"To rule the roast"—"Licked into shape"—"Boah"—Joining the majority—Up to snuff—"To the bitter end"—Compulsory by his absence—Play old Gooseberry—"The grey mare is the better horse"—Bred and born—Drunk as David's sow—Cut off with a shilling—Tin-money—Getting into a scrape.

Philology.

Tennis—Puzzle—Rickets—American Spelling—Snob—Jolly—Boycotting—Argosy—Jennet—Bedford—Maiden in Place-names—Deck of Cards—Masher—Selfy—Brug—Bulrush—Tram—Hearse—Whittling—Beef-eater—Boom—At bay.

Genealogy and Heraldry.

The Arms of the Popes—Courtly Titles—Rolls of Arms—Book-plates—Earldom of Mar—Arms of the Sea of York—Fitzhardings of Berkeley—Heraldic Differences—Barony of Valdes—Colonial Arms—Earldom of Ormonde—The Violet in Heraldry—Arms of Vasco da Gama—Seal of the Templars—Earldom of Suffolk.

Fine Arts.

Hogarth's only Landscape—The "Hours" of Raphael—Rubens's "Daniel and the Lions"—Early Gilbraye—Retzsch's Outlines—Portraits of Byron—Valasquez and his Works—Turner's Medallions—Copsey's "Attack on Jersey."

Ecclesiastical Matters.

The Revised Version—Pulpits—The Episcopal Wig—Vestments—Temporal Power of Bishops—Easter Sepulchres—Orationation—The Basilican Rite—The Scottish Office—Tulchan Bishops—Seventeenth Century "Indulgences"—The "Month's Mind"—Clergy hunting in Georgia—The Irish Hierarchy—Libraries in Churches—Lambeth Degrees—Fifteenth Century Book-covers—Franciscans in Scotland—Bishops of Dunblow—Prayer-Book Rule for Easter—Pur Tippetts—The Church in the Channel Isles—Metrical Psalms—Order of Administration.

Classical Subjects.

Peril Seltre—"Roman Arithmetic—The Alaster of Augustus—"Aeruvus Mercurii"—"Vasus" in Georgics, lit. 178—Oppian—Juvenal's Satire II.—Transliteration of Diod. I.—Aristophanes' "Rana"—Simplicius on Epictetus—Tabula of Cebes—Imitative Verse—"Felix quon factum." &c.

Topography.

Grub-street—Porta del Popolo—"Turk's Head" Baginle—The Old Corner of St. Paul's Cathedral—Thames Embankments—Statue in Brasenose Quadrangle—Middle Temple Lane—Ormond-street Chapel—Roman Villa at Sandown—Ashburnham House—Carew Castle—Rushdon Hall, Westenhagham—Wetton House.

Miscellaneous.

Christian Names—Election Colours—Buried Alive—O. K.—Ladies' Clubs—Zondone—Berkeley-square Mystery—Wife Selling—The Telephone—Bertin de Linte—Crocodile's Tears—Jingo—The Gipsies—Hell-Fire Club—Tarot—Tobacco in England—Sea Sickness unknown to the Ancients—Names of American States—Carnote—Female Soldiers and Sailors—Mistakes—Giants—Jewesses and Wigs—Memories of Tralgar—Green Eyes—Beaumont—Secret Chambers in Ancient Houses—The Bonaparte-Patterson Marriage—Ace of Spades—Wig Curious—Female Churchwardens—The Opal—House of Keys—Church Registers—Arm-in-arm—E. O.—Napoleon—Legacy to Castillon.

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

KERNER'S BOTANY.

Just published, PART I., to be completed in Sixteen Monthly Parts, Imperial 8vo.
price 2s. 6d. each, net.

THE NATURAL HISTORY OF PLANTS:

Their Forms, Growth, Reproduction, and Distribution.

From the German of ANTON KERNER VON MARILAU,

Professor of Botany in the University of Vienna.

By F. W. OLIVER, M.A. D.Sc.,

Quain Professor of Botany in University College, London.

With the Assistance of MARIAN BUSK, B.Sc., and MARY EWART, B.Sc.

With about 1,000 Original Woodcut Illustrations and 16 Plates in Colours.

KERNER'S 'NATURAL HISTORY OF PLANTS,' now for the first time presented to English readers, is one of the greatest works in Botany ever issued from the press. Its province is the whole realm of Plant Life, and its purpose, as conceived by the Author, Prof. ANTON KERNER VON MARILAU, of Vienna University, is to provide "a book not only for specialists and scholars, but also for the many."

* Detailed Prospectus post free on application.

London: BLACKIE & SON, Limited, Old Bailey.

Will be ready next week.

CLIMBING AND EXPLORATION

IN THE

KARAKORAM-HIMALAYAS.

By WILLIAM MARTIN CONWAY.

WITH NEARLY 300 ILLUSTRATIONS BY A. D. McCORMICK, AND A MAP.

Super-royal 8vo. 738 pp. cloth, gilt top, 31s. 6d. net.

London: T. FISHER UNWIN, Paternoster-square, E.C.

NEW NOVEL AT ALL LIBRARIES.

RED CAP AND BLUE JACKET.

By GEORGE DUNN.

In 3 vols. crown 8vo. 25s. 6d.

"Not many novels of recent times contain more original characters. Andrew Prosser, schoolmaster of Fownie, is really the hero of the story, though it is about far more distinguished personages; and Andrew is worth a place among the immortal dominions of fiction. Andrew's housekeeper, Mrs. Badger; Simpson, the smuggling innkeeper; Michael Burnside, the master of the lugger; Jasper Teague, the United Irishman, are among the minor characters, which are as real and as original as if they had been created by Scott.....The great merit of the book is its humour, which is rich and good and real and not artificial. It is never more effective than in the Luxembourg, under the shadow of the guillotine, with the tumbril making its horrid rounds. We make no attempt to tell the story. The author must be left to do that in his own way, which is all his own."—Scotsman.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

TO ENGLISH AUTHORS DESIRING TO OBTAIN AN AMERICAN COPYRIGHT.

Messrs. GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS will be glad through their New York Branch to Copyright in the United States of America any Magazine Article or Novel, or other form of Literary Composition, for English Authors, and in many cases to undertake the publication of them in the United States.

London: BROADWAY, LUDGATE-HILL, E.C.

FOR PUBLICATION by SUBSCRIPTION, The DISEASE and its TRANSLATION, with a Collection of above 200 Verses. Price 1s. 6d.—Subscribers Name to the Author, Rev C. P. A. WARREN, Longford, Coventry.

Foot 8vo. strongly bound, price 7s.

CAREY'S GRADUS AD PARNASSUM. With the English Metaphors Revised, Corrected, and Augmented by a Member of the University of Cambridge. London: published by the Stationers' Company, Stationers' Hall, Ludgate-hill.

New Edition, pp. 224, cloth, 1s. post free.

HOMOEOPATHIC FAMILY INSTRUCTOR. By Drs R. and W. EFTS. Describes fully and Prescribes for General Homoeos.

London: James Epps & Co. Limited, 44, Threadneedle-street, and 170, Piccadilly.

REALITIES OF ACCIDENT ASSURANCE.

£2,700

AID EVERY WEEK AS COMPENSATION FOR ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS.

RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO. 24, CORNHILL, LONDON

W. D. MARRY, } Secretaries.
A. VIAN, }

ALLEN'S SOLID LEATHER
PORTMANTEAUS.

ALLEN'S VICTORIA DRESSING BAG.

ALLEN'S STRONG DRESS BASKETS.

ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE, post free.

27, West Strand, London. Discount 10 per cent.

GUARANTEED SPECIALITIES

OF THE

SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN

Manufactured in three sizes, at 10s. 6d., 16s. 6d., and 25s. each. For a Present or Memento you could not give a more faithful, ready, or willing friend than a SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.

1. 14-carat Gold—therefore never corrodes.
2. Iridium tipped—therefore never wears out.
3. Instantly ready for use.
4. Writes continuously to many hours.
5. Economical—outlasting 20,000 steel pens.
6. Saves fully 15d. in cost of steel pens and ink pots.
7. Ink in reservoir always limpid—no evaporation.
8. For every writer in every land a necessity.

FINALLY.

A pen as nearly perfect as the inventive skill of the day can produce

FOR WEDDING AND COMPLIMENTARY PRESENTS, THE IDEAL OBJECT.

We only require your steel pen and handwriting to guide us in selecting a pen.

GOLD PENS, IRIIDIUM TIPPED.

Everlasting Wear.

GOLD PENS, IRIIDIUM TIPPED.

From 4s. to 19s. each.

GOLD PENS, IRIIDIUM TIPPED.

Short, Long, Broad, Fine Nibs.

GOLD PENS, IRIIDIUM TIPPED.

Made to suit your Handwriting.

Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application.

MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, CHEAPSIDE, E.C. or 95A, REGENT-STREET, W.

365 SHAVES FOR SIXPENCE.

A STICK OF

"VINOLIA" SHAVING SOAP

is said to last a year.

VINOLIA SHAVING STICKS, 6d., 1s., 1s. 6d., 2s., & 2s. 6d.

VINOLIA SHAVING CAKES, 1s., 2s., 3s.

E P P S'S COCOAINE.

COCOAINE EXTRACT. (TRADE-MARK)
The choicest roasted nibs (broken-up bones) of the natural Cocoa, on being subjected to powerful hydraulic pressure, give forth their essence of oil leaving for use a finely flavoured powder—"COCOAINE," a product which, when prepared with boiling water has the consistency of tea, of which it is now beneficially taking the place with many. Its active principle, being a gentle nerve-stimulant, supplies the needed energy without unduly exciting the system. Sold only in Packages and Tins, labelled "JAMES EPPS & CO. (Ld.), Homoeopathic Chemists, London."

E P P S'S COCOAINE.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for
AGENCY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, BRUISES, GOUT,
and INDIGESTION.
And Sufferers from Delicate Constitutions,
Children, and Infants.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & CO., LIMITED.

MR. LEWIS MORRIS'S NEW VOLUME.

SONGS WITHOUT NOTES. By LEWIS MORRIS, Author of 'The Epic of Hades,' &c. Fcap. 8vo. 5s.

"We cannot refuse to admire his healthy optimism, his glowing faith, and his attempts to idealize and draw a spiritual lesson from the more sordid aspects of modern life."—Times.

"At a Country Wedding' is an agreeable example of the chastened expression of his lyric verse. It is a pretty epithalamium, and decidedly unconventional. Charming also is 'The Voice of Spring,' with its refrain-like close."—Saturday Review.

"Readers of the most varied tastes will each find in this book a pleasure of his own. It will be welcome to lovers of poetry wherever English is read."—Scotsman.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

A COSTLY FREAK. A New Novel. By MAXWELL GRAY, Author of 'The Silence of Dean Maitland.' With Frontispiece by Bernard Hopkins. Crown 8vo. 6s.

Part II. ready in June, super-royal 8vo. of BIBLIOGRAPHICA. A Magazine of Bibliography. In Twelve Quarterly Parts. Subscription price, 30s. per annum (Four Parts), net. Single Parts, 10s. each, net. Prospectuses on application.

DAVID GARRICK: a Biography. By JOSEPH KNIGHT. With Etched Portrait by W. Boucher, from a Painting by Gainsborough (never before engraved) in the possession of Mrs. Kay. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d. net. A few Large-Paper Copies are also published, printed on Hand-made Paper, price 21s. net.

IMMEDIATELY.

HISTORY of S. FRANCIS of ASSISI. By the ABBÉ LEON LE MONNIER. Translated by a FRANCISCAN TERTIARY. Demy 8vo.

The FIRST DIVORCE of HENRY VIII., as TOLD in the STATE PAPERS. By Mrs. HOPE, Author of 'The Early Martyrs,' 'Life of St. Thomas of Canterbury,' 'The Conversion of the Teutonic Race,' &c. Edited, with Notes and Introduction, by FRANCIS AIDAN GASQUET, D.D. O.S.B. Crown 8vo. 6s.

A LIFE of ARCHBISHOP LAUD. By a ROMISH RECUSANT. With Portrait from a rare Engraving prefixed to 'The Recantation of the Prelate of Canterbury,' 1641. Demy 8vo. 12s.

"A deeply interesting book."—Church Times.

NEW VOLUME OF TRENCHER'S ORIENTAL SERIES.

LAYS of ANCIENT INDIA. Selections from Indian Poetry, Rendered into English Verse. By HOMESH CHUNDER DUTT, C.I.E. 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"Mr Dutt's graceful translations prove their author to possess no small skill in metrical English composition."—Times.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

HISTORY of CIVILIZATION in ANCIENT INDIA based on SANSKRIT LITERATURE. A.C. 3000 to A.D. 1000. With Maps. By HOMESH CHUNDER DUTT, C.I.E. Revised Edition. 3 vols. 71s.

THOUGHTS and REFLECTIONS on MODERN SOCIETY. With an Introduction on the Gradual Social Evolution of Primitive Man. By A. FRATHERMAN. Demy 8vo. 21s.

INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES.

NEW VOLUMES AND NEW EDITIONS.

The DISPERSAL of SHELLS: an Inquiry into the means of Dispersal possessed by Fresh-water and Land Molluscs. By H. WALLIS KREW, F.R.S. With Preface by A. R. WALLACE, F.R.S., and Illustrations, &c.

A HISTORY of CRUSTACEA: Recent Malacostraca. By Thomas R. R. STEBBING, M.A. With 19 Plates and 33 Figures in Text. 6s.

HANDBOOK of GREEK and LATIN PALEOGRAPHY. By E. MAUNDE THOMPSON. With Tables of Alphabets and Facsimiles. Second Edition. 5s.

MAN and the GLACIAL PERIOD. By G. F. WRIGHT, D.D. With 111 Illustrations and Maps. Second Edition. 5s.

COLOUR-BLINDNESS and COLOUR PERCEPTION. By F. W. EDRIIDGE GREEN, M.D. With 3 Coloured Plates. 6s.

SOCIALISM NEW and OLD. By W. GRAHAM. Second Edition. 6s.

MAMMALIA in their RELATION to PRIMEVAL TIMES. By Professor O. SCHMIDT. With 51 Woodcuts. 6s.

GEOGRAPHICAL and GEOLOGICAL DISTRIBUTION of ANIMALS. By Professor A. HENLPHIN. With Frontispiece. Second Edition shortly. 5s.

FUNGI: their Nature, Influences, Uses, &c. By M. C. COOKE. Edited by Rev. M. J. BERKELEY. With numerous Illustrations. Fifth Edition immediately. 3s.

The PASSING of the POET; and other Poems. By AQUILA. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

CRITICAL SKETCHES. By A. E. STREET. Crown 8vo. 5s.

Contents.—Rousseau's Theory of Education—The Education of Gargantua—The Poetry of the Sea—Westminster Abbey—William Hazlitt—Dickens and Diderot—Diderot as Art Critic—The Realities of War (Tolstol and Vereschagin) (M. Zola)—"Originality in Art"—A Letter to a Student in Architecture.

"There is plenty of good sense and sound judgment in its two hundred and fifty pages.... Worth perusal."—Speaker.

INTRODUCTION to the STUDY of the NEW TESTAMENT. Critical, Ksegetical, and Theological. By the Rev. S. DAVIDSON, D.D. LL.D. New Edition, thoroughly Revised and Enlarged. 3 vols. demy 8vo. 30s.

PREBENDARY RYTON'S NEW SERMONS.

The TEN COMMANDMENTS: Sermons Preached at Holy Trinity, Chelsea. By ROBERT RYTON, Rector of Upper Chelsea. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"Full of that well-known preacher's spiritual insight and practical sagacity."—Times.

SERMONS BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

The APOSTLES' CREED. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.—The LORD'S PRAYER. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.—The TRUE LIFE, and other Sermons. Crown 8vo. 1s. 6d.—The SEARCH for GOD, and other Sermons. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

CONSCIENCE: an Essay towards a New Analysis, Deduction, and Development of Conscience. By the Rev. J. D. ROBERTSON, D.Sc. Vol. I. NEW ANALYSIS of CONSCIENCE. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"In this publication the author has at one bound taken his place among the foremost philosophical thinkers of the day.... This most masterly treatise."—British Leader.

"His philosophy and literary ability is of a high order, and the second volume of his essay will be awaited with great interest."—Leeds Mercury.

MILITARY HANDBOOKS.

Now ready.

MILITARY LAW: its Procedure and Practice. By Lieut.-Col. S. C. PRATT. Eighth Edition, Revised throughout. Small crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

Very Shortly.

The ELEMENTS of MODERN TACTICS, Practically Applied to English Formations. By Lieut.-Col. WILKINSON SHAW. With Plates and Maps. Eighth Edition, Revised throughout. Small crown 8vo. 9s.

Now ready.

The MICROCOSM and the MACROCOSM: an Essay in Philosophy. By BOLTON WALLER, A.B. Crown 8vo. 2s.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

The ELECT LADY. By GEORGE MAC DONALD. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

Each complete in One Volume, crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

HOME AGAIN.
DONAL GRANT.
CASTLE WARLOCK.
MALCOLM.
MARQUIS of LOSSIE.
THOMAS WINOFOLO, CURATE.
ANNALS of a QUIET NEIGH-BOURHOOD.

PAUL FABER, SURGEON.
WHAT'S MINE'S MINE.
ST. GEORGE and ST. MICHAEL.
WILFREDE CUMBERMEDE.
THE SHABOARD PARISH.
THERE and BACK.
FLIGHT of the SHADOW.

[In the press.]

SECOND EDITION, REVISED AND ENLARGED.

MODERN CREMATION: its History and Practice. With Information relating to the Recently Improved Arrangements made by the Cremation Society of England. By Sir H. THOMPSON, F.R.C.S., President of the Society. Crown 8vo. 2s. Cheap Edition, 1s.

GROWING CHILDREN and AWKWARD WALKING. By THOMAS WILLIAM NUNN, F.R.C.S., Consulting Surgeon to the Middlesex Hospital. Crown 8vo. 2s.

DOVE SONO: a Volume of Poems. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

PATERNOSTER HOUSE, CHARING CROSS-ROAD.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Brewer's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C. Printed by JOHN C. FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Brewer's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.; and Published by the said JOHN C. FRANCIS at Brewer's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C. Agents for Scotland, Messrs. Bell & Boddart and Mr. John Macdonald, Edinburgh.—Saturday, May 12, 1894.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3473.

SATURDAY, MAY 19, 1894.

PRICE
THREEPENCE
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

ROYAL INSTITUTION OF GREAT BRITAIN, ALHAMBRA-STREET, PICCADILLY, W.

TUESDAY NEXT (May 22), at 3 o'clock, the Rev. W. H. DALRYMPLE, LL.D. D.D. F.R.S. First of Three Lectures on 'The Modern Microscope as an Instrument for Research and Research'—Half-Guinea the Course.

THURSDAY (May 24), at 3 o'clock, Professor W. M. FLINDERS PETRIE, D.C.L. First of Three Lectures on 'Egyptian Domestic Art'—Half-Guinea.

SATURDAY (May 26), at 3 o'clock, ROBERT W. LOWE, Esq., First of Three Lectures on 'The Stage and Society'—Half-Guinea the Course. Subscriptions to all the Courses in the Season, Two Guinea.

ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.

The ANNIVERSARY MEETING will be held (by permission of the Senate) in the HALL of the UNIVERSITY of LONDON, PORTICO, GARDENS, W. on SUNDAY, May 28, at 3 P.M. CLEMENTS R. MARKHAM, Esq., C.B. F.R.S. President, in the Chair.

The DINNER will take place at the WHITEHALL ROOMS, HOTEL METROPOLITAN, Whitehall-place, W. at 7.30 on the SAME DAY. CLEMENTS R. MARKHAM, Esq., C.B. F.R.S. President, in the Chair. Dinner Charge 7s. Tickets to be obtained and places taken at 1, Savile-row, Burlington-gardens, W. Friends of the Fellows are also admitted to the Dinner.

ROYAL HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

(Incorporated by Royal Charter.)

Patron—Her MAJESTY the QUEEN.

President—The Right Hon. Sir M. R. GRANT DUFF, G.C.B.

THURSDAY 26th May, at 3.30 P.M., the following Paper will be read—'The Educational Organization of the Medicines Priests in England,' by A. O. LITTLE, M.A.

30, Hanover-square, W.

THE FOLK-LORE SOCIETY.

The NEXT EVENING MEETING of the Folk-lore Society will be held at 22, ALBEMARLE-STREET, on WEDNESDAY, May 23, at 8 P.M., when the following Papers will be read viz—

'The Origins of the Things and their Relations to European Folk-lore of Birds and Beasts,' by P. REINHOLD, 'The Sacred Wells of Man,' by A. W. MOORE, M.A.; and 'Maxims Proverbs,' by F. A. MILNE, Secretary.

11, Old-square, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.

SOCIETY OF AUTHORS.—LITERARY PROPERTY.

The Public is urgently warned against answering advertisements inviting him to edit, or editing, place him, without the personal recommendation of a friend who has experience of the advertiser or the advice of the Society. By order, G. HERBERT THOMAS, Secretary.

4, Portugal street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.

P. R.—The AUTHOR, the organ of the Society, is published monthly, price 6d., by Messrs. Cox, Bream's-buildings, E.C.

PALL MALL CLUB.

29, SUFFOLK-STREET, PALL-MALL EAST, S.W.

Established December, 1888, for Social Purposes only.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.—Yours, 3s. 6d.; Country, 1l. 1s. Members elected this month are not liable for Resignable Subscriptions until July in next year.

NEXT ELECTION THURSDAY, May 26th, to fill vacancies for 100 New Members WITHOUT ENTRANCE FEE.

Full information on application to SECRETARY.

ROYAL SOCIETY OF BRITISH ARTISTS.

6, Suffolk-street, Pall Mall East, S.W.—10th EXHIBITION NOW OPEN daily from 10 to 6. Admission, One Shilling.

ADAM R. PROCTOR, Hon. Sec.

ROYAL SOCIETY OF PAINTERS in WATER COLOURS.

The ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY FIRST EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN, at Pall Mall East, from 10 to 6. Admission 1s. Catalogue 1s.

ALFRED D. SMITH, F.R.S., Secretary.

EXHIBITION of Mr. A. D. McCORMICK'S

ORIGINAL DRAWINGS, illustrating 'Climbing and Exploration in the Karakoram-Himalayas' in CHURCH'S INN HALL, 167, Fleet-street, E.C. May 21st to 26th, 10 to 6 P.M.—Admission 1s.

RUSSIA.—A FINE ARTS EXHIBITION.

WILLING to ACT as GUIDE to TWO or THREE GENTLEMEN of MEANS VISITING RUSSIA, (understands the Country and Language. References exchanged.—For conditions address first R. A., Post Reston, St. Petersburg.

A GENTLEMAN, well connected and of Public

School and University Education, will be glad to undertake LITERARY or RESEARCH WORK for M.P.s, Editors, or others. Excellent references and testimonials. No fee—no need apply.—L. B. R., Writing's 167, Piccadilly, W.

BROMLEY, KENT.—PUBLIC LIBRARY.

APPOINTMENT OF LIBRARIAN.

The PUBLIC LIBRARY COMMITTEE is prepared to receive applications from suitable persons for the post of LIBRARIAN. Previous experience in a Public Library is essential.

Salary 1000 per annum.

The Library will be opened at the end of October, and the services of the Librarian will be required on the 17th of September next.

Applications, stating age, &c., accompanied by copies of not more than three testimonials of recent date should be addressed to me as under-mentioned 'Librarian,' on or before the 31st of May instant.

Further information will be furnished upon application. By order, FREDERICK H. NORMAN, Clerk.

Local Board Offices, Bromley, Kent, May 18th, 1894.

POPULAR WRITERS OF FICTION wishing to secure the most extensive COPYRIGHTED PUBLICATION obtainable in the United States, Canada, and elsewhere, seek communications with P. F. COLLIER, 211, West Thirtieth-street, New York City.

TO PUBLISHERS.—Advertiser (aged 24) desires an appointment as MANAGER or HEAD CLERK in a PUBLISHING HOUSE (London or Country). Has had ten years' excellent experience in all branches of Book Publishing, including Travelling, Knowledge of Reading and Printing. Educated and trustworthy.—Apply to Mr. T. T. Fance, Chambers, Westminster, S.W.

WANTED, a post as CORRECTOR for the PRESS, or any similar position of a permanent character, by a Gentleman with twenty years' experience. Languages a specialty.—D. F. 14, Ridderminster-road, Croydon.

FAMILY HISTORY and GENEALOGY.—A Gentleman, who has much experience, undertakes RESEARCHES in these and similar subjects.—A. H. Williams, 185, Piccadilly, W.

PARTNERSHIP.—High-Class WEEKLY

JOURNAL.—A SHARE is offered to a Lady or Gentleman for 1000. The Property is well-established and capable of immense development, and is open to investigation.—Mr. A. M. Hume, 1, Paternoster-row.

TO BE SOLD, First-Class LIBERAL DAILY

NEWSPAPER in the Province. Modern Plant and Machinery.—Apply by letter, H. R. Gains, Solicitor, 30, Bedford-row, London.

TYPE-WRITING.—Literary, Commercial, Legal,

Medical, Dramatic, and all other MSS. COPIED 1d. 100 words. Micrograph Copies at low rates.—W. LUT. 94, Leominster-street, Watford, Herts.

TYPE-WRITING, in best style, 1d. per folio.

Customers please note change of address.—Miss HADDON, 22, Lansdowne-gardens, 8, Lambeth, S.W. late of 24, South Lambeth-road.

TYPE-WRITING.—Literary, Scientific, and every kind of MSS. Phys. &c., carefully and promptly COPIED by RAYNE & CO., 61, Norfolk-street, Strand, W.C. Highest references. Private Rooms for Dictation. Translations. References made.

TYPE-WRITING in all its branches by Male

Operators. Terms from 1s. per 1,000 words. Careful attention to MSS.—R. R. King & Co., 42, Haverly-road, Clapham, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all descriptions. COPIED. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing). Usual terms.—Miss R. H. & J. FARRAR, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 24, Southampton-street, Strand).

TYPE-WRITERS.—SECOND-HAND

MACHINES, equal to new FOR SALE, EXCHANGE, or LEASE on HIRE. Machines sold by Installments on terms to suit purchasers. Use of Machine taught free to buyers of machines. Remington, York, Hammond, Graph, New-lack, Pith, &c. from 25. MS. Copied with accuracy and despatch at lowest rates. Highest references. Illustrated Catalogue free.—M. TAYLOR, Manager, National Type-Writer Exchange, 14, Salisbury-street, London (Hobbs and Co.).

EDUCATION.—Particulars as to best University or Army, Navy, and Schools for Boys or Girls at Home or Abroad, may be obtained, free of charge, by sending a statement of requirements to R. J. HARVEY, M.A., 4, Lancaster-place, Strand.

TEACHERS' GUILD REGISTRY.

74, Gower-street, London, W.C.

The Registry, Miss A. G. COOPER, invites the attention of Heads of Schools and Parents to this Registry, which is a trustworthy means of procuring efficient Teachers of all kinds. Special care being taken that only well-recommended Candidates are entered on the Books. There are now several highly-qualified Teachers, English and Foreign, Graduates, Teachers of Art, Music, and other special subjects at liberty, and Miss Cooper is very careful in introducing only suitable Candidates.

The Registry is under the control of the Council.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINA-

TION to fill up not less than Seven Resident and Five Non-Resident QUEEN'S SCHOLARSHIPS and several valuable EXHIBITIONS will take place in JULY NEXT.—Detailed information may be obtained from the Head Master, Dean's-yard, Westminster.

ST. PAUL'S SCHOOL, LONDON.

FOUNDATION SCHOLARSHIPS.

An EXAMINATION for filling up about THIRTY VACANCIES on the FOUNDATION will be held on the 6th of SEPTEMBER NEXT. For information apply to the Bursar, St. Paul's School, West Kensington, W.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF NORTH WALES,

BANGOR.

In connection with the Day Training Department (for Men and Women), to be opened next October, the Council are about to appoint a LECTURER IN EDUCATION and MASTER OF METHOD, at a salary of £300 a year. Fifty printed copies of each application and set of testimonials to be received on or before THURSDAY, June 1st, by the Registrar, J. E. LLOYD, M.A., from whom all information may be obtained.

May 18th, 1894.

MASON COLLEGE, BIRMINGHAM.

PROFESSORSHIP OF ENGLISH LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE.

PROFESSORSHIP OF CHEMISTRY AND METALLURGY.

The Council invite APPLICATIONS for the above Professorships. Applications, accompanied by thirty-six copies of testimonials should be sent to the undersigned not later than May 26th, 1894.

The successful candidates will be required to enter upon their duties on October 1st, 1894.

Candidates are especially requested to obtain from me. Further particulars may be obtained from

DR. H. MORLEY, Secretary.

PRINTING and PUBLISHING.—To AUTHORS.

Special attention given to the above. Estimates free. Accounts verified by Chartered Accountant.—Address MAXMAN, Edinburgh Place, 3, Victoria-street, Westminster.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—

AMBIENS, ANTWERP, BRASSERIE-SUB-MER, MARRITE, BORDAUX, BOURGAINVILLE, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKERQUE, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLE, MENTON, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOULON, TOLLON.

And at the GALLIENI LIBRARY, 234, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

THE AUTHORS' BUREAU, Limited.—A Literary

Syndicate and Press Agency. "A Medium of Communication between Authors, Editors, and Publishers." Advances upon reviews, and negotiates MSS. Inscriptions by appointment only.—Address the Secretary, 3, Victoria-street, Westminster.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY. Established 1879.

Proprietor, Mr. A. M. MURDOCH, 1, Paternoster-row. The interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Twenty-five years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Commission free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. MURDOCH, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents,

10, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHANCERY SQUARE, S.W.

Inserts Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c. on application.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.

17 and 18, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

PICTURE REPAIRATION or CLEANING effected with every regard to safe and cautious treatment, by M. RAINE THOMPSON, Studio, 41, George-street, Portman-square, W.

A U T O T Y P E.

AUTOTYPE BOOK ILLUSTRATIONS are printed direct on the paper with suitable margins, any size up to 16cm. 72 inches by 17 inches. This process is noted for its exact lines in

COPIES OF ANCIENT MANUSCRIPTS;
COPIES OF COINS, SEALS, MEDALLIONS;
COPIES OF PEN-AND-INK SKETCHES;
COPIES OF ALL SUBJECTS OF WHICH A

PHOTOGRAPH CAN BE TAKEN;
and is employed by the Trustees of the British Museum, the Palaeographical, Numismatical, Antiquarian, and other Learned Societies, and by the Leading Publishers.

The AUTOTYPE COMPANY, for the Decoration of the Home with permanent Photographs from the most celebrated Paintings, Sculptures, and Drawings of the GREAT MASTERS, Ancient and Modern.

The AUTOTYPE FINE-ART CATALOGUE of 164 pages (New Edition), with illustrated Supplement, containing nearly Seventy Miniature Photographs of notable Autotypes. Post free, 1s.

New Pamphlet, 'Autotype a Decorative and Educational Art,' free on application.

The AUTOTYPE COMPANY, for the Decoration of the Home with permanent Photographs from the most celebrated Paintings, Sculptures, and Drawings of the GREAT MASTERS, Ancient and Modern.

The AUTOTYPE FINE-ART CATALOGUE of 164 pages (New Edition), with illustrated Supplement, containing nearly Seventy Miniature Photographs of notable Autotypes. Post free, 1s.

New Pamphlet, 'Autotype a Decorative and Educational Art,' free on application.

A U T O G R A V U R E.

The AUTOTYPE PROCESS adapted to Photographic Engraving on Copper. Copies of Paintings by Gainsborough, Holman Hunt, Herbert Behrman, of Portraits by Hall, R.A.; O'Connell, R.A.; Pettie, M.A.; Prinsep, A.R.A., of the Fresco in Guy's Hospital, 'Spring,' by Herbert Draper, &c. Auto-Gravure Reproductions of Photographs from Art Objects and from Nature, can be seen at the Autotype Gallery.

Estimate and particulars on application.

The AUTOTYPE COMPANY, 74, New Oxford-street, W.C.

Catalogues.

E L L I S & E L V E Y,
Dealers in Old and Rare Books.

New ready gratis.
A CATALOGUE of RARE MUSIC.
20, New Bond-street, London, W.

E L L I S & E L V E Y,

Dealers in Old and Rare Books and MSS.

GENERAL CATALOGUE NOW READY, 1 vol. with 15 Illustrations of fine Bindings, &c. cloth gilt lettered, price 4s.

This Catalogue, comprising nearly Five Thousand Entries, is arranged under Subjects for the convenience of Collectors, and is furnished with an ample Index.

20, New Bond-street, London, W.

BOOKS.—PORTRAITS.—CATALOGUE of

Better Class FINEST HAND BOOKS and ENGRAVED BRITISH PORTRAITS free to Collectors.

Specialities: Americana—Antiquarian—Australian—Dramatic—Early Printed—First Editions of Ancient and Modern Writers. Crispin, Leach, Rowlandson, Hatched, &c.—Best Library Editions and Hand-somely Bound Books.

U. MACON, Bookseller, 120, Church-street, Paddington, London, W.

DAVID NUTT,
270-271, STRAND, LONDON.

Now ready, fcap. 4to.

THE HISTORY OF REYNARD THE FOX.

A NEW RENDERING OF THE STORY INTO METRE.

By F. S. ELLIS,

Upon the Basis of the Old English Prose Version.

Frontispiece, Ornamental Title, and 48 Humorous Devices

By WALTER CRANE.

Printed on English hand-made paper, and strongly bound in Merton-blue cloth,

Price 25s. net.

THE HONOURABLE SOCIETY OF CYMMRODORION.

President.

The Most Hon. the MARQUESS OF BUTE, K.T.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

The TRANSACTIONS of the SOCIETY:

Session 1893-94. Containing Contributions by Prof. RHYS, LL.D.; ERNEST RHYS; W. LEWIS-JONES, M.A.; W. H. PEMBECH, P.R.S.; ISAAC POULKES (Llyfrwyf), &c. Price 1s. 6d. net.

The COURT ROLLS of the LORDSHIP of RUTHIN (1394-95). Edited, with Notes, Translation, and Preface, by H. ARTHUR ROBERTS, of H.M. Public Record Office. With Facsimile Reproduction of Original Membrane. Price 71s. net.

Issued free to Annual Subscribers of One Guinea, and sold to Non-Subscribers at the prices affixed, by the Society's Publisher, Mr. DAVID NUTT, 270, Strand. Applications for Membership should be sent to the Secretary, R. VINCENT EVANS, 27, Chancery-lane, London.

Vol. VIII. MAY, 1894. No. 2.

THE CLASSICAL REVIEW.

Contents.

- D. O. RITCHIE. On Aristotle's Metaphysics of Particular Justice.
H. RICHARDS. Critical Notes on the Republic of Plato.
G. W. HUFFORD. On the Beginning of the Athenian Hegemony.
K. K. ENGLAND. On Menander's Epitaphium Kameleuta.
SHORTER NOTES AND REVIEWS.
REVIEWS—
W. H. RAY. Metaphysics of Aristotle and Athen. R. M. WALKER.
F. C. RITCHIE. Metaphysics of Aristotle and Athen. R. M. WALKER.
ARCHÆOLOGY—
W. H. RAY. Inscriptions from the Cae and Hellenismum.
F. C. RITCHIE. Metaphysics of Aristotle and Athen. R. M. WALKER.
G. Y. HILL. The Metaphysics of the Parthenon.
W. H. RAY. Metaphysics of Aristotle and Athen. R. M. WALKER.
F. C. RITCHIE. Metaphysics of Aristotle and Athen. R. M. WALKER.
C. G. HILL. On the Metaphysics of Aristotle and Athen. R. M. WALKER.
MONTHLY LECTURE. RUMOROSA. BIBLIOGRAPHY.
Price for Single Numbers, 1s. 6d.
Yearly Subscription (Ten Numbers), 12s., or, 12s. 6d. post free.

LATEST PUBLICATIONS AT BOOKSELLERS' AND LIBRARIES

BIOLOGICAL LECTURES AND ADDRESSES
by the late ARTHUR MILES MARSHALL, Professor of Zoology in Owens College. Edited by C. F. MARSHALL, M.D. Crown 8vo. upwards of 300 pages, cloth, 10s. 6d.

OLD CELTIC ROMANCES. Translated from the Gaelic by P. W. JOYCE, LL.D. Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged. Crown 8vo. 1s. 4d. pp. cloth, 3s. 6d.
* Both of these works are published in the United States by Messrs. Macmillan & Co., New York.

TO BE PUBLISHED IMMEDIATELY.

PARZIVAL. By WOLFGANG VON ESCHENBACH.
Translated for the first time into English by JESSIE L. WENTON. Vol. I. Book I. 12s. With introduction, Notes and Appendix upon the Angels Element in the Poem. Crown 8vo. 320 pp. Prospectus on application.

Vol. II, completing the work, will appear later in the year.
CHILDREN'S SINGING GAMES, with the tunes to which they are sung. Collected and Edited by ALICE BRITHA GOMME. Features in Black and White by WINIFRED SMITH. Six 34 designed pages and 36 printed pages set within decorated borders, in specially designed cloth cover, 3s. 6d.
* In addition to the ordinary issue, there will be the following special issues for collectors—
(a) One Hundred Copies printed on Kilmacshannon paper by permission of Mr. William Morris. 21s. net.
(b) Eighty Copies on Japanese vellum. 18s. net.
Immediate application for them is necessary.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S NEW BOOKS.

THIRD EDITION.

E. F. Benson.—The RUBICON. By E. F. BENSON, Author of 'Dodo.' 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

"The anticipations which must have been formed by all readers of 'Dodo' will in nowise be disappointed by 'The Rubicon.' The new work is well written, stimulating, unconventional, and, in a word, characteristic. Intellectual force is never absent, and the keen observation and knowledge of character of which there is abundant evidence are added by real literary power."—Birmingham Post.

"In Gertie Carston Mr. Benson quite surprises us with the skill he shows in drawing a simple and lovable girl."—Westminster Gazette.

"We congratulate Mr. Benson upon an exceptional achievement. He has conceived and executed successfully an analytical study of modern life in which a certain salt of humour serves, at least, to keep the pages wholesome. The change and fusion of character amid the fires of passion have been rightly felt and justly depicted from the beginning, events have fallen out in a natural sequence, and the whole story conveys an impression of reality. The book is a notable advance upon Mr. Benson's previous work."—National Observer.

"The Rubicon seems to us more promising than 'Dodo.'—Literary World.

"An advance upon 'Dodo.'—Speaker.

"Mr. Benson's very clever and deeply interesting novel—a novel far superior to 'Dodo.'—Sunday Daily News.

"Mr. Benson's second novel is better artistically than his first. The character-drawing is excellent."—Globe.

Baring-Gould.—The QUEEN of LOVE. By S. BARING-GOULD, Author of 'Mehalah,' 'Cheap-Jack Zita,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

"The scenery is admirable and the dramatic incidents are most striking."—Glasgow Herald.

"Strong, interesting, and clever."—Westminster Gazette.

"The characters have the individuality which stamps Mr. Baring-Gould's works."—Speaker.

"You cannot put it down until you have finished it."—Punch.

"Can be heartily recommended to all who care for cleanly, energetic, and interesting fiction."—Sunday News.

Stanley Weyman.—UNDER the RED ROBE. By STANLEY WEYMAN, Author of 'A Gentleman of France,' &c. With 13 Illustrations by R. Cason Woodville. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s.

"A book of which we have read every word for the sheer pleasure of reading, and which we put down with a pang that we cannot forget it all and start again. It is, indeed, a most ingenious and excellent story, written with that care and unflinching sense of style which we have grown to expect from this writer."—Westminster Gazette.

"An extremely attractive and well-written story, which enchains one's interest from beginning to end. A genuine romance."—Daily Telegraph.

"Everybody who reads books at all must read this thrilling romance. From the first page to the last the breathless reader is held along. The book is an inspiration of manliness and courage."—Daily Chronicle.

Mrs. Oliphant.—The PRODIGALS. By MRS. OLIPHANT. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

"An excellently constructed story."—Daily Telegraph.

Richard Pryce.—WINIFRED MOUNT. By RICHARD PRYCE, Author of 'Miss Maxwell's Affections,' 'Time and the Woman,' &c. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

"The novel contains clever sketches of character, scenery, and manners."—Spekator.

"A delightful story. The writing is uniformly bright and graceful, and the sketches of fashionable life are exceedingly well done."—Sunday News.

"Mr. Richard Pryce is a deft and elegant story-teller, gifted with a lively imagination, a sprightly humour, and a keen insight into the intricacies of human character. He possesses, moreover, constructive ability of no mean order, and the plots of his refreshingly succinct romances, though slight in substance, are symmetrical in form. All these good qualities are agreeably exemplified in his new novel. An extremely clever story, utterly untainted by pessimism or vulgarity."—Daily Telegraph.

Gilbert Parker.—The TRANSLATION of a SAVAGE. By GILBERT PARKER, Author of 'Pierre and his People,' 'Mrs. Falcblon,' &c. Crown 8vo. 3s.

A story with a powerful and pathetic motive by a writer who has rapidly made his way to the front.

Constance Smith.—A CUMBERER of the GROUND. By CONSTANCE SMITH, Author of 'The Riddle of Lawrence Haviland.' 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

[May 20.]

Flinders Petrie.—TELL EL AMARNA. By W. M. FLINDERS PETRIE, D.C.L. With Chapters by Prof. A. H. SAYCE, D.D., F. L. GRIFFITH, F.S.A., and F. C. J. SPURRELL, F.G.S. With numerous Coloured Illustrations. Royal 4to. 30s. net.

Norman Gale.—CRICKET SONGS. By NORMAN GALE. Crown 8vo. linen, 2s. 6d.

Also a Limited Edition on Hand-made Paper, demy 8vo. 10s. 6d. net.

Also a Small Edition on Japanese Paper, demy 8vo. 21s. net.

Gilbert Parker.—A LOVER'S DIARY: Songs in Sequence. By GILBERT PARKER. With a Frontispiece by Will. H. Low. Crown 8vo. 3s.

SECOND AND REVISED EDITION.

Baring-Gould.—STRANGE SURVIVALS and POPULAR SUPERSTITIONS. By S. BARING-GOULD, M.A. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

CHEAPER EDITIONS.

NINTH EDITION IN THE PRESS.

Marie Corelli.—BARABBAS: a Dream of the World's Tragedy. By MARIE CORELLI, Author of 'A Romance of Two Worlds,' 'Vendetta,' &c. Eighth Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

Miss Corelli's new romance has been received with much disapprobation by the secular papers, and with warm welcome by the religious papers. By the former she has been accused of blasphemy and bad taste; "a gory nightmare"; "a hideous travesty"; "grotesque vulgarization"; "unworthy of criticism"; "vulgar redundancy"; "sickening detail"; "these are some of the secular flowers of speech." On the other hand, the religious papers praised the dignity of conception, the reserve and reverence that characterized the book.

E. F. Benson.—DODO: a Detail of the Day. By E. F. BENSON. Thirteenth Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

Baring-Gould.—CHEAP-JACK ZITA. By S. BARING-GOULD. Crown 8vo. 6s.

A Cheap Edition of a story which has been recognized as Mr. Baring-Gould's most original effort since 'Mehalah.'

METHUEN & CO. 36, Essex-street, W.C.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

NEW VOLUME OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY'S CATALOGUE.

CATALOGUE of SCIENTIFIC PAPERS Compiled by the ROYAL SOCIETY of LONDON.

Vol. IX. New Series for the Years 1874-1883. ABA-GIS. Royal 4to. cloth, 26s. net; half-morocco, 32s. net.

Vol. X. New Series for the Years 1874-1883. GIS-PET. Royal 4to. [Immediately.]

The COLLECTED MATHEMATICAL PAPERS of ARTHUR

CAYLEY, Sc D. F.R.S., Sadlerian Professor of Pure Mathematics in the University of Cambridge. Demy 4to. To be completed in 10 Volumes. Vols. I.-VI. now ready, 2s. each. Vol. VII. nearly ready.

The STEAM ENGINE and other HEAT ENGINES. By J. A.

EWING, M.A. F.R.S., M.Inst.C.E., Professor of Mechanism and Applied Mechanics in the University of Cambridge. Demy 8vo. 15s.

NEW VOLUME OF PROF. JEBB'S SOPHOCLES.

SOPHOCLES.—ELECTRA. Part VI. of the Plays and Fragments.

With Critical Notes, Commentary, and Translation in English Prose. By E. C. JEBB, Litt.D. M.P., Regius Professor of Greek in the University of Cambridge. Demy 8vo. 13s. 6d.

The CAMBRIDGE HOMER.—HOMER'S ILIAD. The Text

Edited in accordance with Modern Criticism by ARTHUR PLATT, M.A., late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. [Immediately.]

ANCIENT SHIPS. By CECIL TORR, M.A. With Illustrations. Demy

8vo. 10s. 6d.

BEOWULF. Edited, with Textual Foot-notes, Index of Proper Names, and Alphabetical Glossary, by A. J. WYATT, M.A. (Lond.), B.A. (Cantab.), sometime Scholar of Christ's College. Crown 8vo. 5s. 6d.

A NEW ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

The ELEMENTS of ENGLISH GRAMMAR. By A. S. WEST,

M.A. 2s. 6d.

"Will soon become a standard text in secondary schools, and mark an epoch in the teaching of English grammar." [Pitt Press Series.]

"The best book of its compass that we have met with.....We strongly advise all friends of education to examine it." [Guardian.]

New York Critic.

THE CAMBRIDGE HISTORICAL SERIES.

GENERAL EDITOR—G. W. PROTHERO, M.A., Fellow of King's College and University Lecturer in History.

The Volumes of this New Series will be of moderate size, and will be adapted to the requirements of University Extension Students as well as of more advanced readers.

The REVOLUTIONARY and NAPOLEONIC ERA, 1789-1815.

By J. H. ROSE, M.A., Christ's College.

[In the press.]

The EUROPEANS in INDIA. By H. MORSE STEPHENS, M.A., Balliol College, Oxford.

[In preparation.]

The UNIFICATION of GERMANY, 1815-1871. By J. W.

HEADLAM, M.A., Fellow of King's College.

* Other Volumes are in preparation.

NEW VOLUME OF THE CAMBRIDGE MILTON FOR SCHOOLS.

PARADISE LOST. BOOKS III. and IV. With Introduction, Notes,

Glossary, and Indexes by A. W. VERITY, M.A., sometime Scholar of Trinity College, Cambridge. 2s.

CAMBRIDGE NATURAL SCIENCE MANUALS.

PHYSICAL SCIENCE SERIES.

HEAT and LIGHT. By R. T. GLAZEBROOK, M.A. F.R.S., Assistant

Director of the Cavendish Laboratory. Crown 8vo. 5s.

The Two Parts are also published separately.

HEAT. By R. T. GLAZEBROOK. Crown 8vo. 3s. | LIGHT. By R. T. GLAZEBROOK. Crown 8vo. 3s.

"Teachers who require a book on Light, suitable for the class-room and the laboratory, would do well to adopt Mr. Glazebrook's work."—Nature.

* A further List of Forthcoming Volumes in this Series will be forwarded on application.

NEW VOLUMES OF THE PITT PRESS SERIES.

CASIMIR DELAVIGNE.—LOUIS XI. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by H. W. EVE, M.A., Head Master of University College School, London. 2s.

"Mr. H. W. Eve has done notable service to French teachers, but he has, perhaps, never done a better than when he prepared for the Pitt Press the Edition of Delavigne's 'Louis XI.' before us. The text itself is eminently suitable for boys in higher middle forms, and no one is better qualified than Mr. Eve, either by scholarship or teaching experience, to provide notes for them."—Guardian.

GUIZOT.—DISCOURS sur l'HISTOIRE de la REVOLUTION d'ANGLETERRE. Edited by H. W. EVE, M.A. 2s. 6d.

ARISTOPHANES.—The WASPS. By C. E. GRAVES, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 3s. 6d.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria-lane.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S
NEW BOOKS.

LETTERS of EDWARD FITZ-

GERALD. Edited by W. ALDIS WRIGHT. 2 vols. New Edition, Globe 8vo. 10s.

[The Everyday Series.]

GUARDIAN.—"No letters are more delightful than Fitzgerald's."

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"It is satisfactory to have his delightful letters so carefully and wisely collected and reproduced in so dainty a shape."

DAILY NEWS.—"The correspondence is full of pleasant talk about his friends, about music and musicians, pictures, and, above all, about the numberless books which he was reading."

The GARDEN THAT I LOVE.

By ALFRED AUSTIN. With Illustrations. Extra crown 8vo. 9s.

DAILY NEWS.—"Mr. Austin's discourse about the garden which he loves is the discourse of a poet....It is simple, rustic, spontaneous, free-and-easy enough for all except mercenously fastidious people."

TIMES.—"A charming volume, in which Mr. Austin's genius displays itself at its best."

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"He has written a charming book, and one that will bring pleasure to many another lover in many another garden."

A HISTORY of the CHRISTIAN

CHURCH DURING the FIRST SIX CENTURIES. By S. CHEETHAM, D.D. F.R.S.,

Archdeacon and Canon of Rochester, Honorary Fellow of Christ's College, Cambridge, Fellow and Emeritus Professor of King's College, London. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

TIMES.—"A brief but authoritative summary of early ecclesiastical history."

The PROTECTED PRINCES

of INDIA. By WILLIAM LEE-WARNER, C.S.I. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

TIMES.—"An able treatise on one of the most important and complicated problems of our Indian Empire."

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"He writes with the widest knowledge of his theme, and his conclusions show much sagacity and statesmanlike moderation."

The GYPSY ROAD: a Journey

from Krakow to Coblenz. By GRENVILLE

A. J. COLE, M.R.I.A. F.G.S. With Illustrations by Edmund H. New. Crown 8vo. 6s.

TIMES.—"A breezy narrative of a cycling tour in out-of-the-way regions, pleasantly written and attractively illustrated."

SELECTIONS from the POEMS of A. H. CLOUGH. Pott 8vo. 2s. 6d. net.

[The Golden Treasury Series.]

SELECT SPECIMENS of the GREAT FRENCH WRITERS in the SEVENTEENTH, EIGHTEENTH, and NINETEENTH CENTURIES. With Literary Appreciations by the most eminent French Critics, and a Historical Sketch of French Literature. Edited by G. EUGÈNE FASNAOCHT, late Assistant Master in Westminster School, Editor of Macmillan's Series of Foreign Classics. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

TIMES.—"A skilful and judicious selection for the use of advanced students."

MACMILLAN'S THREE-AND-SIXPENNY
SERIES.—New Volumes.

A SON of the SOIL. By Mrs.

OLIPHANT. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

SOUVENIRS of some CONTI-

NENTS. By ARCHIBALD FORBES, LL.D. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

MACMILLAN & CO. London.

THE SECOND EDITION NOW READY.
THE LIFE OF
JOHN CHURCHILL,
DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH,
To the ACCESSION OF QUEEN ANNE.

BY
GENERAL VISCOUNT WOLSELEY.

2 vols. demy 8vo.

With Portraits and Plans, 32s.

LIST OF PORTRAITS IN THE WORK.

CHURCHILL as ENSIGN. After Van der Meulen.
DUKE of MARLBOROUGH. From the Collection of the Duke of Buccleugh.
DUCHESS of MARLBOROUGH. After Kneller, from a Miniature by Harding.
DUCHESS of MARLBOROUGH. After Kneller, from the Portrait at Althorp.
JAMES II. From the Collection of the Duke of Buccleugh.
WILLIAM III. From the Collection of the Duke of Buccleugh.
DUKE of MONMOUTH. From the Collection of the Duke of Buccleugh.
DUCHESS of CLEVELAND. From the Collection of the Duke of Buccleugh.
Also Illustrations of HOLYWELL HOUSE, ASHE HOUSE, ROCHFES CASTLE at CORK in 1690, PLANS of MONMOUTH'S MARCHES in 1685, THE BATTLE of SEDGEMOOR, and of CORK and KINSALE, and of HOLYWELL-STREET.

"This remarkable book—remarkable alike for its subject, its author, and their very felicitous association—will be eagerly sought by a multitude of readers. It cannot but add greatly to the literary reputation of Lord Wolseley. It has been known for some time that the victor of Tel-el-Kebir was engaged on an exhaustive study of the life and character of the Victor of Blenheim, and expectation has in consequence been keen alike in the world of letters and in the world of arms. That expectation will not be disappointed. No previous biographer has devoted so much pains and study as Lord Wolseley has done to the elucidation of Marlborough's career, and we trace the pen of an accomplished soldier in nearly every page of these volumes. The military chapters, in particular those dealing with the battle of Sedgemoor and with Marlborough's brief but brilliant campaign in Ireland, are models of vivid narration, and wherever the pen of the soldier is allowed free scope its performances are admirable."—Times.

THE SECOND EDITION NOW READY.
MISS BROUGHTON'S NEW NOVEL.
A BEGINNER.

By RHODA BROUGHTON,
Author of 'Joan,' 'Dr. Cupid,' &c.

1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"Miss Broughton's humour has grown mellowed and subtler of late years. It is no longer merely a humour of phrase and dialogue; it is a humour of conception and situation as well. 'Mrs. Bligh' was the first to show this marked advance in artistic methods and means, and 'A Beginner' is no unworthy successor to that delightful story."

Manchester Guardian.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S
PUBLICATIONS.

SIR JOHN ASTLEY'S NEW WORK now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 3 vols. demy 8vo. with Portraits, 30s.

FIFTY YEARS OF MY LIFE
in the WORLD of SPORT at HOME and ABROAD. By SIR JOHN DUGDALE ASTLEY, Bart.

NEW NOVELS.

NEW NOVEL BY BEATRICE WHITBY.

Now ready at all Libraries, in 3 vols. crown 8vo.

MARY FENWICK'S DAUGHTER.

By BEATRICE WHITBY, Author of 'The Awakening of Mary Fenwick,' 'One Reason Why,' &c.

The FOOL of DESTINY. By Colin MIDDLETON, Author of 'Innocent Misdeeds.' 3 vols.

The HUSBAND of ONE WIFE. By Mrs. VENN, Author of 'Some Married Fellows,' &c. 3 vols.

"The theme is a good one, but one requiring delicate handling. Mrs. Venn has treated it effectively, so much so that the interest increases instead of diminishing as she proceeds, and the third volume, in our opinion, is worth the best of the set. 'The Husband of One Wife' is good work, and its personal may safely be recommended."

"The Husband of One Wife" is an excellent book, in which all healthy-minded novel-readers will find something to interest them."

ORCHARD DAMEREL. By Alan ST. ALBYN, Author of 'A Fellow of Trinity,' &c. 3 vols.

"Taken altogether, the work is the strongest that has come from the author's pen, and does not pain its strength by any abandonment of the peculiar refinement which characterizes this writer's books. It is a thoroughly enjoyable story."—Scotsman.

JANET DELILLE. By E. N. Leigh

FRY, Author of 'A Scots Yuletide,' &c. 3 vols.

"We like 'Janet Delille' as a novel, and so reader will find his time wasted in perusing it, which cannot in truth be said of most novels."

IN CUPID'S COLLEGE. By Mabel HART, Author of 'Two English Girls,' 'From Harvest to Haytime,' &c. 3 vols.

"The writing is always bright and pleasant, the characters are natural and characteristic, and some of the situations are exceedingly pathetic and in writing."—Literary World.

HETTY'S HERITAGE. By Noel

LEMER, Author of 'The Aftermath,' 2 vols.

"Has an interesting and well sustained plot, while the number of passages is wisely limited to that necessary for its development."

Uniform, each in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

NOVELS BY EDNA LYALL.

DOBOVAN: a Modern Englishman.

TO RIGHT THE WRONG.

WE TWO.

KNIGHT ERRANT.

IN the GOLDEN DAYS.

WON by WAITING.

A HARDY WORKMAN.

A SELECTION FROM
HURST & BLACKETT'S
STANDARD LIBRARY.

EACH IN A SINGLE VOLUME, PRICE 6s.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'JOHN HALIFAX.'

JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLE-CHRISTIAN'S MISTAKE.

MAS. A NOBLE LIFE.

A WOMAN'S THOUGHTS. HANNAH.

ABOUT WOMEN. THE UNKIND WORD.

A LIFE for a LIFE. A BRAVE LADY.

NOTHING NEW. STUDIES FROM LIFE.

MISTRESS and MAID. YOUNG MRS. JARDINE.

The WOMAN'S KINGDOM.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'SAM SLICK.'

NATURE AND HUMAN NATURE. THE OLD JUDGE; or, Life in a Colony.

WISE SAWS and MODERN TRUTHS. TRAITS OF AMERICAN HUMOUR.

THE AMERICANS at HOME.

BY DR. GEORGE MAC DONALD.

DAVID ELGINBROD. ALSO FOREBOD.

ROBERT FALCONER. SEE GIBBIE.

BY MRS. OLIPHANT.

ADAM GRAEME. LIFE of IRVING.

LADY of HOLLAND. A NOVEL in JUNE.

AGNES. PRIDE, JEALOUSY.

IT WAS A LOVER and HIS LAMB.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED.

WORKS

BY THE LATE PROFESSOR

HENRY MORLEY.

THE LIBRARY OF ENGLISH
LITERATURE.

5 vols. 7s. 6d. each.

ILLUSTRATIONS of ENGLISH RELIGION.

SKETCHES of LONGER WORKS
ENGLISH VERSE and PROSE.

ENGLISH PLAYS.

SHORTER WORKS in ENGLISH
PROSE.

SHORTER ENGLISH POEMS.

ENGLISH WRITERS. Vols. I.
to X. now ready, 5s. each.

A FIRST SKETCH of ENG-LISH LITERATURE. Thirty-first
Thousand. 7s. 6d.

The PLAYS of SHAKESPEARE.

Edited by Prof. HENRY MORLEY.
Thirteen Volumes in Box, 1l. 1s.

CASELL'S NATIONAL
LIBRARY. Edited by Prof. HENRY
MORLEY. 214 vols. now ready, 3d.
each; cloth, 6d. each.

* * A Prospectus giving particulars of these works will be sent on application.

CASELL & COMPANY, LIMITED, London;
Paris and Melbourne.

"Unqualified praise may be cordially and unhesitatingly accorded to 'Lisbeth,' in which are readily discoverable all the inventive, constructive, and literary elements that, when felicitously combined, furnish the material of which a really first-class novel may be fashioned by a master hand."

Daily Telegraph.

POPULAR EDITION, just published, price 6s.

'L I S B E T H.

By LESLIE KEITH,

Author of 'The Chilcotes,' 'In Spite of Herself,' &c.

"In all the fiction of the past year, no book more thorough and conscientious in workmanship than this has been added to the national store of fiction. Nor is there one which bears more unmistakably upon its face the signs of long travail, of patient labour, and of unswerving devotion to the canons of literary art.....A most striking and powerful piece of imaginative work, worthy of a place almost in the front rank of English fiction."

Speaker.

CASELL & COMPANY, LIMITED,
Ludgate-hill, London.

SATURDAY, MAY 19, 1894.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
HARE'S HANDBOOK TO SUSSEX	635
THE LETTERS OF BEDFORDS	636
A CATALOGUE OF ROMANCES	637
THE MEMOIRS OF MADAME CAVAILLON	638
A PLEA FOR A NATIONAL POLICY	639
NEW NOVELS (The Queen of Love; A Modern Buccaneer; No Hero, but a Man; The Foot of Destiny; Through; A King in Bohemia; For Honour and Life; Just Like a Woman)	640-641
CLASSICAL PHILOLOGY	641
STORIES OF LIFE ABROAD	642
ORIENTAL HISTORY	643
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS	644-645
PROF. HENRY MORLEY: 'ENGLISH BARRIS AND SCOTCH REVIEWERS'; ACCESS TO SCIENTIFIC JOURNALS; SOCIETY V. BOY; CHAM CHROINACHAN; LADY GRANVILLE'S LETTERS	645-647
LITERARY Gossip	647
SCIENCE—TIDAL RIVERS; A LETTER OF GALILEO; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS; Gossip	648-650
FINE ARTS—THE ROYAL ACADEMY; NOTES FROM ATHENS; THE SALONS; SALES; Gossip	650-653
MUSIC—THE WEEK; Gossip; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	654-655
DRAMA—THE WEEK; Gossip	655-656

LITERATURE

Sussex. By Augustus J. C. Hare. (George Allen.)

"It has been a great pleasure," says Mr. Hare, "to collect materials about the county of Sussex, which has always been my home," and those who have come under the spell of the "grey reaches of the Sussex downs" will thank him for sharing his pleasure with them. There is much, indeed, in this charming little volume which will delight all true lovers of Sussex, and Mr. Hare's graceful drawings may recall many favourite spots to the memory. It is true it is a guide-book, and the author's style is choked and hampered by interjected statistics, such as "2 m. to the west," "omnibus," "keys close by," or "entrance Gd." But now and then, as in his glowing narrative of Sussex's great battle, he allows himself to be carried away—and carries his readers with him, in spite of incautious references to that insufferable bore of recent historical criticism, the "palisade." We confess we wish he had thus abandoned himself to the enthusiasm of his subject more often and more wholly. We should have liked a bigger book, with more elbow-room, more research, more finality. There is a real need for it, for Horstfield's history is dreary and inaccurate, and the other books are either partial and local, like Dallaway, Tierney, Banks, and sundry special "guides," or are in the nature of matériaux pour servir, like the invaluable 'Sussex Archaeological Collections' and the writings of Mr. Blaauw and the late Mark Antony Lower. The last, though perhaps it is true that he "cannot be relied upon," deserved warmer thanks than Mr. Hare is disposed to allow. Poor Lower loved his Sussex, and in spite of his inaccuracy he did more than any one else to awaken an interest in its antiquities. The Lewes Archaeological Society, whose 'Collections' must form the basis of any scientific history of the county, was largely the fruit of his unwearied zeal and industry.

We are not sure that Mr. Hare has made quite so thorough a use of the 'Collections' as he might, and he clearly has not consulted the Burrell manuscripts in the British Museum, where he would have found some important material. One feels, indeed, throughout his interesting pages, that he is not really an antiquary; that his delight in Sussex is that of an artist and a student, keenly alive to the impressions of nature and the associations of history, but not specially trained in archaeology; that he writes about his county because he knows it well and loves it, not because he is naturally drawn to antiquities. He can discourse pleasantly and almost learnedly about the brasses of Trotton or Broadwater, the tower of Sompoting, or the carvings of Haldnaker; but we feel all the time that he is happier among the chestnuts of Cowdray (which, however, he will not find in the "Close Walks," as he thinks, which are planted with aged yews) or the fig gardens of Tarring, drinking in the memories of the past by the ruins of Bodiam or Lewes, and picturing vanished days on the lawns of old manor houses, where farmers now replace the fighting knights and their successors the hunting squires in the "Honour of the Eagle of Pevensey." Perhaps he has chosen the way which most of his readers will best like to follow. They will possibly find as much antiquarian lore as they care for, and will be ever conscious of the presence of an appreciative companion in their walks—one by whom the beauties and associations of every corner of the Sussex rapes have been beloved from childhood, and whose taste has been cultivated by the study of many cities and the works of many men.

With such a companion the pedestrian will discover new interests in his rambles, and Mr. Hare's inexhaustible repertory of old verses, proverbs, and chronicles (he must possess a delightful Sussex scrap-book) imparts a freshness to his descriptions which lifts the volume above the guide-book type. Bayham, with "its emerald lawns and grey ivied arches reflected in the bosom of its own sweet lake," gains by contrast when we remember that it was founded by the truculent Crusader—

Robert of Turnham with his fauchon
Gan to crack many a crown.

Beautiful Groombridge Place, with its terraced gardens, its peacocks, and its sleepy moat, seems a peaceful retreat enough for the Duke of Orleans, whom Sir Richard Waller of Groombridge found buried under the heaps of the slain at Agincourt and kept a prisoner for a quarter of a century; but the French prince was hardly so congenial an inhabitant of the old house as Evelyn, who found it "a pretty melancholy seat" in 1652. "Scarcely any other English park has the extreme and forest-like beauty of Buckhurst, with its grand old beeches, its deep glades, and its clear silent pools"; with its fine surviving gateway, it looks the right place for the Sackvilles, who have owned it for above six hundred years. Mr. Hare does not disdain to refer to modern fiction when it illustrates his subject. He does not forget 'Brambletye House,' or G. P. R. James's description of the siege of Goudhurst Church and the wild doings of the Darrells of Scotney; but he altogether omits 'Alicia Lorraines' and its admirable picture of the country about Chancetonbury. It is amusing to notice that a Chancellor of the Exchequer now lives at an old centre of the contraband industry, for Mr. Goschen's "Seacox Heath" was once a well-known haunt of the Goudhurst smugglers. Mr. Hare might have cited other famous smuggling places. Birling Gap was celebrated for the illicit trade, and the old manor house there, now a farm, has still its "smugglers' hole," and is reputed to be connected with the cliffs by an underground passage, not now to be traced.

A little historical research, indeed, might have added many interesting details to Mr. Hare's topography, and helped the reader to realize better what the Sussex of the Middle Ages was like, with its great forests, its iron foundries, its honours and manors, priories and granges, and its deep Wealden clay, which made John Burton ask, "Why is it that the oxen, the swine, the women, and all other animals are so long-legged in Sussex? May it be from the difficulty of pulling the feet out of so much mud?" The mud has happily been improved away on the roads, and so (unhappily) have many other antiquities of the county. But there are still plenty of remains which seem to call for more explanation than Mr. Hare accords. For example, we are told that Ashdown Forest, also called Lancaster Great Park, "once belonged to the 'Honour of the Eagle of Pevensey,'" without a word of comment. On p. 85 we read of Michelham Priory, founded by Gilbert III. de Aquila—"Lord of the Eagle" of Pevensey. Had Mr. Hare looked up the Burrell MSS. he would have found that the manor of Birling, at East Dean, also was held by service of the Honour of Aquila, and was within the liberty of the Duchy of Lancaster, which possibly explains the name Lancaster Great Park applied to Ashdown Forest. But so far as Mr. Hare's book is concerned the reader remains absolutely in the dark as to the relations of a manor to an honour, or the meaning of the "Honour of the Eagle." Nor does he say a word of the historical associations of the corner of Sussex about East Dean and Friston, which were together held in Domesday by Robert of Mortaign (variously spelt Morton, Moreton, and Moriton by Mr. Hare), who gave East Dean Church to the Abbey of Grestaign, in Normandy. This part of the county—now deserted by its squires—was once occupied by several great families, who deserved at least a passing notice. Birling Manor belonged to the Lancastrian family of Bardolf, who fought at Towton field, and were connected by marriage with Thomas Cromwell, whose daughter was lady of Birling. Friston may not (as local tradition maintains) be the "villa regia que dicitur Dene" where Aaser first met Alfred, but Mr. Hare should have mentioned that it is not absolutely certain that this Dene was the other East Dean near Chichester; and at least he might have stated that Friston Church still stands on the top of the hill. It has, indeed, recently been restored with exceptional judgment by the vicar, the Rev. W. Partridge (who has not gone the usual way of the ignorant restorers fiercely denounced by Mr. Hare), and it contains some fine Jacobean monuments of the Selwyn family, who lived for centuries at the Tudor house (with some much older remains),

Friston Place, in the valley below. We find their name and that of Gage in a report of jurors in 1579, giving the boundaries of "the borough of Burling," which "boundeth from the cliff as the Dooles lead to Westland Lane, so to the Hill, so along the upper side of the Slade Croft, so along the Linke between Mr. Gages land and Mr. Selwyns as the Dooles lead to the Borough of Jovington, and so to the Borough of Willingdon, along by the Dooles of Duddle, as the Dooles lead to the Hundred of Horne," &c. Lord Gage's land is still "along the Linke," but the Selwyns have long since departed from the countryside. Mr. Hare refers to the Sussex term Bostal for the white chalk tracks, such as the White Bostal of Firle, but he apparently has never heard of the Dooles. Yet had he questioned one of the old shepherds who roam the downs near Beachy Head (there is a one-armed veteran there who knows more of the countryside and its antiquities, from celts and other flint implements downwards, than some archaeologists) he would have found that the Dooles are still to be traced along the soft undulations of many a "front hill."

In the same neighbourhood Mr. Hare says not a word of Exceit or Essete, by the bridge over the Cuckmere, which was also held by Robert of Mortaign, and still gives its name to a prebend of Chichester. Traces of the old chapel of Exceit are yet visible near the old river. Littleington, Lullington, Burlough Castle, Folkington, are entirely omitted; yet Lullington is interesting, if not for its tiny church (really only a surviving chancel), at least for the story that when any of its few parishioners needed the parson they rang the bell to summon him over the down from Wilmington. Of Wilmington "Long Man" Mr. Hare observes that it is "scratched in the turf"; but, whatever it may have been originally, the outlines of the figure are now laid in solid white brick, thanks to the pious care of the Duke of Devonshire. And whilst on the subject of carvings in the turf, it is strange that Mr. Hare does not mention the "White Horse" on Hindover, above Frog Firle (where once was grown the biggest apple in England), overlooking Alfriston; but he has apparently forgotten the existence of the steep cliff over which Squire Harison of Sutton is related to have galloped one "fine hunting morn," and commemorated his marvellous escape by immortalizing his less fortunate horse. Doubtless the horse belongs, however, to much earlier times.

Sutton brings us to Seaford, of which (though never mentioned) it is the manor. No part of Mr. Hare's guide-book is less satisfactory than the section relating to this old Cinque Port, an "ugly, dreary little town," no doubt, but possessed not only of a delightful golf links, but of some of the most beautiful and exhilarating down walks in England. No one who knows the way to Firle Beacon, with its glorious view over the Weald, or has wandered over the links along the cliffs to Hope Gap and Crow Link, will call Seaford dreary. But Mr. Hare tells next to nothing of the history of the place; he does not even bring in "the Honour of the Eagle," which is heraldically displayed in the arms of the port. He says nothing of the traces of the old town at Chinting (now Chyngton Farm), a grange of Michelham Priory, or at "Poyning's Town," now only a name. From his pages we should never know that Charles Ellis was member for Seaford, and took his title from it, and that George Canning sat for the same constituency at the time of his death. Mr. Canning was a frequent visitor at Seaford Place, and in those days the town was far from dreary. The old government of the port by a bailiff, jurats, and freemen might surely have been described, especially as the bailiff's courthouse still stands at the bottom of Church Street. Mr. Hare, however, may be forgiven some omissions in consideration of having found room for the verses on the tomb (at Lewes) of Sir Nicholas Pelham:—

What time the French sought to have sackt Seaford
This Pelham did repel 'em back aboard.

But is it not "thought to have sackt Seaford"? "Are you from Seaford?" is a seemingly incomprehensible question put to a Sussex man who leaves the door open; certainly "this Pelham" shut it. Mr. Hare has collected a number of curious local proverbs and customs, partly from Mr. Sawyer's contributions to Notes and Queries. We are told an "inexplicable legend" that "magpies are shoed at Piddinghoe," where also "they dig for moonshine"—meaning smuggled spirits. At Alfriston they used to hang up white flowers in the "cathedral of the South Downs" whenever a virgin died in the parish, and "a few years since, as many as seventy 'virgins' garlands" hung in Alfriston Church at once—a fact which speaks well for the morality or the good nature of the neighbourhood. The world at Alfriston was clearly not over "censorious." There is a proverb,—

If Chichester Church steeple fall,
In England there's no king at all, which came true, for the steeple fell in 1861. "Adders never styngo Nor nightingales syngo" in St. Leonard's Forest, because the latter disturbed the devotions of a holy hermit, who incontinently cursed them. In the same forest, "if a man rides through the charmed precincts at night, a headless figure is apt to vault up behind him; this figure is 'Squire Paulett.'" But who Squire Paulett was Mr. Hare does not state. There St. Leonard himself fought with a mighty dragon, and lilies of the valley still mark the spots where the saint's blood dripped. Surely "spe melioris consortii" on the tomb of William Cox at Tillington does not imply "in the hope of a better consort" than the wife buried beside him. Perhaps Mr. Hare uses the word "consort" in the general sense.

But it is easy to pick holes in a work which abounds in minute details, often difficult to verify. Mr. Hare has written a pleasant little book, which Sussex folk will welcome cordially, and those who are not of Sussex will carry with them in their rambles among the downs and "under the hill." It cannot fail to make their walks more interesting and to lead them to appreciate more intelligently the varied beauties and associations of the county of which Fuller records that "many shires have done worthily, but Sussex surmounteth them all, having bred five Archbishops of Canterbury"; and further, that "Sussex aboundeth more with carpes than any other of this nation"—nor "carpes" only, though they do exceedingly abound in the priory pond at Easebourne; for who has not heard of the "four good things of Sussex": the Arundel mullet, the Chichester lobster, the "Shelsey cockle," and the "Amorley trout," commemorated by good Master Izaak?

The Letters of Thomas Lovell Beddoes.
Edited with Notes by Edmund Gosse.
(Mathews & Lane.)

Beddoes resigned his poetical aspirations comparatively early in life, and for the following reasons: "If I had possessed the conviction that I could by any means become an important or great dramatic writer, I would never have swerved from the path of reputation," but, indeed, "I am essentially unpoetical in character, habits, and ways of thinking," so "you must give me leave to persevere in my preference of Apollo's pill-box to his lyre, and should congratulate me on having chosen Göttingen, instead of Grub Street, for my abode." Many a passage, in the somewhat gloomy and egotistical collection of letters before us, betrays the lack of power for sustained effort and the morbid attitude towards life which lay at the root of Beddoes's failure.

But, as we pointed out in noticing Mr. Gosse's edition of the 'Poems' (Athenæum, December 27th, 1890), it was his egregious failure that made him interesting as a man, for, "knowing his failure to be egregious, he never lost his admiration of those who succeeded where he failed." In criticizing the works of others he always brought to bear upon them a good sense which would be remarkable in itself, but which is simply wonderful when we consider certain mental peculiarities with which it was allied." Perhaps the most striking instance of the superiority of his theories to his practice may be found in the following condemnation of that slavish dependence on admired models with which his own work is conspicuously tainted:—

"Say what you will—I am convinced the man who is to awaken the drama must be a bold trampling fellow—no creeper into worm-holes—no reviser even—however good. These reanimations are vampire cold.—Such ghosts as Marlowe [sic]—Webster etc. are better dramatists, better poets, I dare say, than any contemporary of ours—but they are ghosts—the worm is in their pages—and we want to see something that our great-grandfathers did not know. With the greatest reverence for all the antiquities of the drama I still think, that we had better beget than revive—attemper to give the literature of this age an idiosyncrasy and spirit of its own, & only raise a ghost to gaze on not to live with—just now the drama is a haunted ruin."

There is a certain amount of notable criticism in these letters, which Mr. Swinburne calls brilliant, and most of it concerns the drama. The abuse of playbills and of pauses between the acts is ingenious:—

"I am convinced that playbills for instance are very pernicious; one should never know the actors' names and private circumstances, the spectators would then be compelled to identify them with their dramatic characters, the interest wd be much purer and undivided, the illusion carried as far as it can and ought to be.....The actor on the other hand deprived of his private name and existence must feel more convinced of the reality of his 5-act life, would be liberated from the shackles of timidity & the temptations of individual vanity, w^d [grow] careless about his creditors and be unable to try & please the lady's as Mr. — with the handsome leg etc. wink to his friends in the pit etc. etc. The Greeks (from whom we can learn much if we understand their motives) were in possession of this secret, and this is the real meaning of their masks, wh. have so much bothered the critics; and those were doubly useful, they deceived to a certain degree not only the spectator, but also the actor with the semblance of an heroic and unknown person, and prevented the annoying familiarity of the people on the stage."

(At the present day it must be acknowledged that from the public the actor still attracts more attention than the play.)

"The pause between the acts—w^b the Greeks and Sh. I believe did not allow—is another dangerous innovation: the thread of events is interrupted, one talks to one's neighbour, hears news and forgets the fictitious in the real events, the state of mind produced by the opening is altered, and as soon as we are with difficulty brought back to the track over w^b the poet w^d lead us another interruption undoes all again. The actors in the meanwhile chat behind the scenes, Cordelia flirts with her pape, Arthur makes King John a pigtail, Constance comforts herself with a cup of tea, Juliet dances with the dead Mercutio and all such things occur w^b breed familiarity and carelessness and damp the excited imagination, cool the ardour of the players."

Beddoes had some excuse for being severe on his immediate contemporaries in English literature, and his scorn is often expressed with telling vigour. Concerning Goethe and Tieck he is also interesting, and his humorous descriptions of certain German professors are well done. But the whole impression of the volume is dreary and monotonous. Beddoes "did his part unsociably," and we even miss the occasional tenderness towards women and flowers which may be found in his poetry. One fancies, perhaps, that he gained some satisfaction from the medical studies into which he threw himself with a certain grim intensity, but nothing of this was imparted to his letters.

Firm friends he had the power of making and keeping. What they loved in him was his ungrudging admiration of beautiful things. "As to real Poetry," he writes,

I have oft thought,
Thou art so beautiful above all women,
I might be you; but yet 'tis happier still
To be another, to admire and love you.

Catalogue of Romanes in the Department of Manuscripts in the British Museum. By H. L. D. Ward, Senior Assistant. Vol. II. (Printed by Order of the Trustees.)

It is ten years since we noticed the first volume of this truly monumental work, but, long as the interval seems, a study of the contents of the second volume must exonerate Mr. Ward from any charge of undue delay. There is a life's labour in these volumes. Every page bears witness to minute and exhaustive research, to indefatigable collation of authorities, immense bibliographical apparatus, and well-weighed criticism supported by comprehensive evidence. It is a work involving so much patient labour, such wide-reaching comparisons, such microscopic examination of sources and derivatives, that the wonder is, not that it has taken ten years to produce, but that it has been accomplished at all, and by a single scholar. We described the general character of this class-catalogue on the appearance of the first volume, and it is only necessary to say now that all the admirable features to which we then drew attention are repeated, and if possible improved, in the new instalment. There is nothing superficial, nothing hurried or passed over, in Mr. Ward's work. Every detail confirms the impression of mature consideration, and complete familiarity with the whole range of literature bearing upon the subject, which the first volume conveyed. The colossal bibliography of romance criticism is handled with the easy and sure touch of a master, and many of the incidental essays on special groups are models of concise yet comprehensive criticism.

The mere linguistic qualifications for such a work are not the least part of its difficulty. The manuscripts described, and frequently quoted in considerable extracts by Mr. Ward, are written not only in mediæval and modern Greek, Latin, French, German, Dutch, English, Italian, Catalan, and Icelandic, but in various stages of the development of these languages; and the critical bibliography includes almost every modern European language, to say nothing of translations of numerous Oriental texts. For the present collection includes the Northern legends (such as 'Beowulf,' the 'Nibelungenlied,' and the Eddas); the large and complicated group of Eastern tales, beginning with 'Barlaam and Joseph,' and working on, through the 'Directorium,' and 'Syntipas,' to the 'Seven Sages,' 'Dolopathos,' and the 'Disciplina Clericalis'; the long series of Æsopic fables; 'Reynard the Fox'; the curious group of 'Visions of Heaven and Hell,' the 'Miracles of the Virgin,' and the 'Trois Pèlerinages.' The arrangement of the several MSS. under each of these headings could hardly be bettered; and various derivative and synoptic tables aid the student in finding his way through the labyrinth of romantic genealogy.

Mr. Ward's introductory essays, however, with their ample bibliographical references, will prove of even greater service to the student of romance literature. The volume teems with such essays, full of suggestion and ripe criticism, which relieve the necessary monotony and technical details of a descriptive catalogue of manuscripts. Among the studies of Northern legends we may cite the admirable treatise on 'Beowulf,' and the delightful essay on Danish Folkevise, or popular ballads (pp. 81-90), beginning with the tantalizing Runic fragment, Drömde mik sen dröm i nat um silki ok ærlík pæl.

Anders Sorensen Vedel, the tutor of Tycho Brahe, and translator of Saxo Grammaticus (1575), is the first great name connected with the history of Danish ballad literature, and Mr. Ward—who takes a broad and comprehensive view of the limits of a catalogue—provides a most interesting biography of this first collector of his national ballads. Vedel often visited Tycho Brahe at his famous château of Uraniborg, on the little island of Hveen in the Sound, which Frederick II. of Denmark had presented to him, and there the friends were visited by Queen Sophia, who was detained by stress of weather. In the course of conversation the astronomer told the queen of the wonderful collection Vedel had made of the ballads of which she was so fond, and her interest in the subject led to the publication in 1591 of a hundred selected ballads, printed at Vedel's own house, the Liliobjerg, at Ribe.

The Eastern legends connected with the great Sindibad cycle receive complete treatment from Mr. Ward, whose labours in this department have been mitigated by the recent researches of Mr. Clouston, Mr. Keith-Falconer, Mr. Jacobs, and others. As an instance of his method of dealing with these stories we may quote his comment on the seventh tale in the 'Directorium Humane Vitæ':—

"The 'Dog and Serpent' found its way into the Sindibad cycle; and it is, indeed, the only story that occurs in every Western version of the 'Seven Wise Masters.' Étienne de Bourbon, a Dominican of the first half of the thirteenth century, found it localized in the diocese of Lyons. He gives curious details of the pilgrimages made by mothers of sick children to the grave of St. Guinefort, a saint who turned out to be a dog martyred for saving a babe from a serpent. Amongst other superstitious rites, they passed the children through holes in the trees that grew upon the grave; just as many country people did in Hampshire and other parts of England in the days of Gilbert White. Étienne declares that he cut down the trees and burned the bones of the dog; but the pilgrimages to the grave of St. Guinefort are said still to continue. In North Wales the serpent became a wolf; and Beddgelert (grave of Gelert, on a spur of Snowdon) is said to have been named after Gelert, the hound given by King John to Llewelyn the Great. This story has long been an oral tradition, but the earliest known allusion to it is in the Warwick Roll, written and illuminated by John Rows the antiquary, before the death of Richard III. (1486). The six crests borne by King Richard are there given in colour; and the sixth is a cradle or, a greyhound argent, for 'Walys.' The Pot of Honey [the apologue in the 'Dog and Serpent' story] is best represented in modern literature in the tale about the tray of glasses which the Barber tells of his fifth Brother in the 'Thousand and One Nights.' It is more indirectly connected with the Milkmaid and her pail as told by Lafontaine and others."

In the preceding extract we have omitted the ample bibliographical references, which form so valuable a feature in the catalogue. There are numerous MSS. of the Sindibad cycle in the British Museum, wherein the moral is repeatedly enforced by precedent:

Swilk sorow has thou shewed me now that I sal neuer no wemen trow.

The researches of M. Gaston Paris and Dr. Mail have apparently led Mr. Ward to modify his view of the date of the 'Fables of Marie de France.' He had previously ('Catalogue,' vol. i. pp. 408 ff.) placed them about 1250, and accepted the assertion in the 'Couronnement de Renart' that Marie's patron "Cunte Willame" was Guillaume de Dampierre II., Count of Flanders (1244-1251). To M. Gaston Paris's arguments that Marie wrote in England, that "Willame" must have been an English noble, and that the lays were written for Henry II., and therefore before 1189, Mr. Ward allows considerable weight, although he quotes, without contesting it, Dr. Mall's opinion that the translation of the 'Purgatorium Sancti Patricii' was Mario's earliest work, and probably written not much before 1189. One would have liked to have Mr. Ward's own decision, but perhaps in an official catalogue he is wise in stating the views of the leading authorities and leaving students to weigh them for themselves. He is, however, more outspoken with regard to Mr. Joseph Jacobs's assumed identification of the literary "reis Alurez" with Alfred the Englishman, and states that no evidence has been produced to show that this Alfred (whose date has been much disputed) "ever wrote a single tale or fable." "Jacobe's theory," he adds, "belongs to what he himself styles those 'hypotheses of my own which have not yet gone through the ordeal of specialist criticism.'"

We have only space to refer to the admirable introduction to the 'Anonymus Neveleti,' and the criticism of the evidence concerning Walter the Englishman, upon which Mr. Ward concludes that "it is slightly in favour of our author's having borne the name of Walter, and perhaps, indeed, of his having been an Englishman. But it is not strong enough to overthrow the designation used by the best critics, and notably by Lessing." The essay on 'Reynard the Fox,' in eighteen pages, furnishes an excellent summary of the history of this famous cycle of tales, and no less praise is due to the introduction to the 'Voyage of St. Brendan' and the 'Miracles of the Virgin.' In conclusion, it may be pointed out that there is much in this interesting and important volume which will attract other than special students. Far from being a mere catalogue of dreary technical details, it is full of amusing extracts. The 'Visions of Heaven and Hell' are particularly pleasant reading, and there are plenty of stories like this of a monastic interpolator in Henry of Saltrey's 'St. Patrick's Purgatory':—

"He then says that, when he himself was in Ireland, he met a man, white-haired and decrepit with age, who said that he had never yet received the sacraments, and who begged him, as a Monk and Priest, to administer them to him. The confession had to be made through an interpreter. When the man had confessed all the sins he could think of, the priest asked him if he had never killed a man. Not more, he thought, than five men on the spot; but he did not know how many might not have died of the wounds he had given them. He was surprised to know that manslaughter was a sin requiring absolution; but he was quite ready to endure any penance imposed on account of it. And this (concludes the interpolator) is the nature of Irishmen. Hoc ideo proposui, ut eorum ostenderem bestialitatem."

Les Mémoires d'une Inconnue, publiés sur le Manuscrit original, 1780-1810. (Paris, Plon, Nourrit & Co.)

A SEIZURE, by order of a French court of law, of the memoirs of Madame Cavaignac, which rests upon the French law as to the rights of the family in connexion with memoirs, has attracted attention to the book, the title of which stands at the head of this notice. A lady who, we believe, was the mother of the well-known general and of his equally well-known brother, and the grandmother of the also well-known Republican deputy, has left a volume which contains some passages which are well worth attention, although as a whole the book is somewhat dull.

The "unknown" lady whose name is in every mouth, although the foundress of one of the families which (with the Carnots and the Casimir-Periers) are known as "the Republican dynasties," and are supposed to be likely to have a monopoly in the future of the Presidency of the Republic, was the wife of an Imperial functionary—an unsuccessful statesman who never attained to higher rank than that of a Privy Councillor of Naples under Murat. Her book is full of the bitterness of the discontented, and she tells every disagreeable story that she can against those who got on in the world better than she did herself. The foundation of the volume, however, is that terrible sham sentimentality of the times which fell like a pall, in the early part of the present century, upon those who had been born in the brilliant eighteenth century, and had survived the terrible day of reckoning of '93. The following passage is a specimen of both her styles:—

"Encore si elles restaient jeunes! mais quand elles cessent de l'être, quelle terrible abjection! quelle chute douloureuse! quels amers et honteux regrets! C'est une reine détronée, une couronne fêlée, non arrachée. Que j'en ai vu de malheureuses! Une surtout qui ne faisait vraiment pitié. Émigrée jeune en Angleterre, elle y avait été mariée de la main gauche au duc de Kent et renvoyée au bout de vingt-sept ans, quand, à la mort de la princesse Charlotte, le Parlement obligea tous les frères du Roi à se marier. Étrange prévoyance, en vérité, que celle de manquer de maître! Femme d'un prince donc, et fort belle, on juge si elle avait été gâtée; vieille, lorsque je l'ai connue, mais ne sachant, ne voulant pas l'être, c'était un supplice que sa vie."

Another passage which will be found of interest is the following:—

"Je rencontrais quelquefois Mme Récamier, mariée un an avant moi et d'une figure ravissante alors. Elle ne pouvait sortir à pied sans être suivie et faire émeute, ce qui semblait la contrarier beaucoup; mais, comme elle s'obstinait à garder une coiffure un peu étrange qu'elle portait seule et qui la désignait de suite, on pouvait en douter un peu. Sa conduite était irréprochable alors, et personne ne l'attaquait. On s'en dédommageait, les femmes surtout, en la disant fort bornée; ce n'est pour moi qu'un oui-dire. Le premier amant qu'on lui ait donné, à tort ou à raison, fut Lucien Bonaparte, et il ne fut pas le seul, malgré sa manie, aussi ridicule à soixante ans que peu décente à tout âge, de se mettre toujours en blanc, comme enseigne de virginité, son mari, qu'on disait être son père, n'ayant jamais vécu avec elle. Une de mes amies, qui la voyait souvent, m'en a conté de drôles de choses; mais comme elles étaient mal ensemble, sans doute elle exagérait. Entre autres histoires, en voici une. Un jour de grand bal chez elle, Mme Récamier se trouve mal, se retire, se met au lit. La porte de la chambre à coucher est ouverte; un curieux s'approche, admire cette délicieuse figure que ne gêne en rien le négligé d'une malade. Un autre survient; puis dix, puis la foule. Les derniers venus montent sur des fauteuils pour avoir leur part du spectacle, et le bon M. Récamier y fait poser des serviettes pour accorder le plaisir de ses hôtes et le soin de son mobilier."

Madame Cavaignac, although she passed her life as a hanger-on of courts, retained in after life enough of her early Jacobinism to evince a recurrent horror of crowned heads. She considers that Queen Elizabeth, although the best of them, after all is famous for nothing except having "killed her cousin," and then she gives a catalogue of all the lovers of all the queens of Spain and of those of Catherine II. of Russia, and winds up: "The Crown allows everything, covers everything, but it does not hide everything, and it is among those who wear it, men and women, that we must look for the most shameful and the most degrading vice." A very disagreeable grandmother is Madame Cavaignac, quite unworthy of notice, except that she is sometimes entertaining, and often interesting, not in herself, but on account of her able watchfulness over the many distinguished persons with whom she came in a very partial contact.

She does not like our people, though she knew them probably but little; and, writing of the Court of Naples, she says: "I saw there English women also, but they require a special mention, for they have found the secret of having neither the charm of nature and of simplicity, nor that acquired grace which sometimes does instead of it."

She is severe upon the Emperor and upon the Bonaparte family, but she is still more hostile to the Bourbons, and reminds us how the mother of the murdered prince, in whose name, after many years, vengeance was to be exacted of several leading Bonapartists, begged Napoleon for leave to live in Paris and for the increase to half a million francs a year of that pension of 300,000 fr. which the Emperor had conferred upon the Duchesse de Bourbon. Madame Cavaignac once more draws the moral hostile to all crowned heads and princes of the blood: "These people in life are called majesty or highness, and after their death there are found people who write panegyrics upon them, which many others read." No one who desires panegyrics on crowned heads need turn to Madame Cavaignac.

The Queen of Murat, generally called "Madame Murat" by our author, seems to have been the protectress of our unknown lady, but she provides a similar catalogue with regard to her to that which she bestows upon the queens of Spain, and she charges her with having caused the defection of Murat from Napoleon in 1814.

The book is not without historical interest, and indeed, in some degree, importance; but we have never read one which conveys a more unfavourable impression of the writer.

The Great Alternative: a Plea for a National Policy. By Spencer Wilkinson. (Sonnen-schein & Co.)

MR. SPENCER WILKINSON has written an extremely interesting book, and one that is valuable in so far as it will induce many people to think upon questions which are of all the most important to the empire, and upon which there is at present too little independent thought. He has not written the book which he might have written, and which we shall still expect some day from his pen.

Discussing first a certain national paralysis which seems to have fallen of late upon the United Kingdom, and helping to clear men's minds by specific treatment of the Eastern Question, of the rise of the Triple Alliance, of "Egypt," of "India," and of "The Expansion of France," Mr. Spenser Wilkinson then comes to his main chapters, which are those which suggest that those statesmen, whatever their opinions on domestic affairs, should be supported who the most clearly put forward the idea of national duty. The general purpose of the book is admirable; the historical treatment of the Eastern Question, of German unity, of the decline of Turkey, of "Egypt," and so forth, as good as might be expected from the author. But it did not fall, unfortunately, within Mr. Spenser Wilkinson's purpose in the present volume to treat of those matters on which, of all others, he would be the surest guide.

For example, when he deals with Egypt he furnishes a most carefully drawn picture, leading up to the suggestion that Egypt cannot stand alone; but there are others who might, perhaps, with equal success have drawn this picture. He does not give us that which, by his natural disposition and training, he is most able authoritatively to declare—the cost of the occupation and its future. The past and present are here; but Mr. Wilkinson has prudently refrained, not only from prophecy, but from those scientific calculations upon which prophecy must be based. To put the matter in a concrete form, no British statesman can, even on Mr. Wilkinson's principles, commit himself to the permanence of the British occupation unless he has thought out its consequences. These must involve the consideration of the risks of single-handed war with France, of war without allies with France and Russia, of war with France and Russia and Italy, and, on the other hand, the advantages of the possession of Egypt, with that of Malta, in the event of an Italian alliance. There is no man in the country who could supply with so much authority as Mr. Wilkinson the data upon which our opinion should be formed. But the formation of opinion upon the point is a necessary portion of the case; and we fear that Mr. Spenser Wilkinson will have to write another book.

One criticism of detail only shall we permit ourselves upon the interesting Egyptian chapter of which we have already written. Mr. Wilkinson says:—

"There is not a Power in Europe that would not be embarrassed by a British evacuation of Egypt; and even the French Government would be the first to urge that the British regiments should remain in the citadel of Cairo, if it were perfectly certain that French troops could by no possibility take their place."

The view of French policy which is suggested in these words is not, perhaps, exactly accurate. There is a French doctrine that is public, and a private one that lies behind, and they are exactly opposite the one to the other. It would be impossible under any circumstances for a French Government to publicly urge that British troops should remain at Cairo: but privately, while urging evacuation in public, or rather cherishing non-evacuation as a grievance, French Governments are controlled by financiers whose one wish is that we should stay at Cairo. This wish, however, is not based upon high considerations, such as those to which Mr. Wilkinson in his chapter points, but purely upon speculation as to what would be the effect of evacuation upon Egyptian funds.

In several of his chapters Mr. Wilkinson appears to suggest an alliance between ourselves and the Central Powers. We say "appears to suggest," because we believe that he has desired to keep himself clear of definite suggestions of the kind, and to keep together, in support of his general propositions, those who might differ upon such a point: those who, like many Liberal politicians, desire to keep the hands of the country free; and those who, like Col. Maurice, have been impressed by the many obvious reasons which make for such alliance. All, however, may concur in the view with which one of his very able chapters upon Germany concludes:—

"England cannot expect those continental states, whose European interests most nearly coincide with her own, to acquiesce in her primacy in extra-European affairs, except upon condition of her active support in regard to those European interests as well as of her readiness to meet their wishes, as far as may be, in regard to the regions where her navy is the preponderating force."

When he comes to his main chapters, for which he has laid in the earlier ones an excellent foundation, Mr. Wilkinson begins by asking of the British navy:—

"What is to be the measure of this force? Must it be the equal of all other navies together, or of a combination of some of them? Is there a limit to the naval force that may be required, or does the national policy involve the maintenance of an Invincible Armada? In past times it has been sufficient to keep a fleet superior to any other in the quality of its leaders and in the skill of its crews, but not so overwhelmingly strong in numbers as to exceed all other navies. For the same conditions that compel England to assert the command of the sea make her a member of the European community, which is a combination of independencies. The self-defence of England has almost always helped the self-defence of some other Power or Powers. The British navy has been at the same time the guardian of England's independence and the preserver of the equipoise between the States of Europe or between the groups into which they have been ranged. This dual character of England's action is founded in her geographical situation. The command of the sea exerted by England and the balance of power in Europe are two names for the same thing, two aspects of one activity, like the two faces of a coin."

We think that this passage and many others point more definitely than the author would admit to our taking part in the alliance of the Central Powers, and we are not, on the whole, of opinion that Mr. Wilkinson has proved the truth of a proposition, which we, however, admit that he was not engaged in proving. His position, we take it, is that he states facts, and that if those facts irresistibly point to a particular conclusion, that is no special business of his at the moment. A little further on he more sharply states the same proposition with regard to the balance of power with which the passage previously quoted concludes, and speaks of "the two functions of the navy to command the sea and to maintain the equilibrium of Europe." Were we under the belief that Mr. Wilkinson was in these chapters trying to induce us to take the action which Col. Maurice has so powerfully recommended, which will, we fancy, be the conviction of many of his readers, we should urge that he has not established the soundness of the position, as against those who would stand armed with a great navy ready to take sides, if necessary, as occasion offers or necessity demands. But, we repeat, we are convinced, after careful reading, that Mr. Wilkinson's intention was not to advocate any particular course so much as to cause his readers to think out the matter for themselves, and, above all, to support those who may set forth with definiteness and consecutiveness of ideas a distinct national policy.

The passage which follows those which we have quoted is of interest, and is true:

"The record of recent years is that of a series of challenges to England's imperial work. It is a tribute to the greatness of her power that the antagonism has been manifested as yet only in regard to subordinate enterprises and spheres of influence of minor importance. But these disputes are the symptoms of a graver conflict. At every point where French and English policy meet, they are in hostile contact, and it is impossible to review the disagreements between the two nations without perceiving that the aims of France are diametrically opposed to interests vital to Great Britain, that is to essential portions of her national purpose. Either France must abandon these aims, or there will be a war in which England at least will stake her whole existence.....The possibility, and even the probability, of a war in which England would be opposed both to France and to Russia has long been perceived. But this does not exhaust the possible combination. France has for some time persistently endeavoured to sever Italy from the Triple Alliance, and to restore that ascendancy over the foreign relations of Spain which is a tradition both of the old French monarchy and of the first Empire. It is hardly possible for Greece to avoid becoming the subordinate ally of Russia, in case Russia acquires a foothold in the Mediterranean."

There then follow passages which again point to a policy of alliance, of which the following is disputable:—

"So soon as this is believed by continental statesmen to be serious,—so soon, that is, as they can feel sure that England has abandoned her hesitation, and that she will at any cost defend herself and assert her imperial vocation and her command of the sea, the whole situation in Europe will be changed. That situation, as it has shaped itself by degrees since 1882, is the effort of some of the continental States, whose purposes are not aggressive, to secure themselves against the purposes of others, which involve the subversion of the existing European order and the reduction to a condition of dependence of two of the great Powers, and most of the small ones. The aggressive policies are those of France and of Russia."

The assumption that the policy of Italy and of Germany is not aggressive is but an assumption, and there is a good deal to be said on the other side, especially as regards Italy; and the statement that the policy of France and Russia is aggressive, although true, has to be limited by the subtraction of the fact that the aggression of France and of Russia is non-European, and not directed against Germany and Austria. To assume that Russia is aggressive towards Austria would be to assume what may be true if a long period of years is considered, whether we look back or whether we look forward into the realms of prophecy, but is not true of the period under discussion—1882-94. All these passages and many others, we repeat, will lead the hasty reader, if he sides with his author, to that definite policy of alliance with the Central Powers for which the author himself is, perhaps, not thoroughly prepared, and which it is possible that, if it were sharply put to him as his view, he might repudiate.

Returning to the balance of power in Europe, Mr. Wilkinson once more states his position:—

"A consideration, then, of the present relation of the Powers confirms the view, derived from a retrospect of their relations in the past, that the necessary design of British policy involves the maintenance of the balance of power in Europe, and that England's command of the sea rests not merely upon the development of naval force, but also upon her defence, in conjunction with other Powers, of European causes in which she and they are alike interested..... To build a fleet, however strong, is not enough, if at the same time we persist in a policy of indifference in regard to European affairs."

Mr. Wilkinson is, with justice, displeased at the spirit in which our military and naval defensive preparations, and our foreign and colonial affairs, have been conducted in the past by successive Governments. He makes a powerful attack upon that vacillation in Egyptian affairs by the Cabinet of 1880 which has been explained to have been due to internal difference of opinion; and he says of the Conservative Cabinet of 1886:

"The Cabinet introduced a shipbuilding programme, which every one at home and abroad regarded, not as the consequence of a great design, but as the result of a popular agitation unconscious of any definite political purpose. The experts upon whose judgment continental Powers relied pointed to the ill-considered distribution of the naval forces, and to the incompetent management of the army, as evidence that these preparations need not be taken too seriously. Lastly, the same Cabinet, in its negotiations regarding Newfoundland, Zanzibar and Madagascar, showed the same timidity and the same weakness as its predecessors."

Mr. Wilkinson's conclusion is:—

"For a whole generation England seems to have been unconscious of a purpose in the world. The nation has been like a drifting ship, the sport of circumstances; the very idea of a course marked out upon the chart and pursued in spite of wind or weather has passed out of the popular mind; it is as though the faculty of government had been paralysed. The institutions are all there, but there is no sign of the presence of the spirit which created them. The cumbrous mechanism of parliamentary government, the cabinet system, the public offices, are exhibited to an admiring world, like the great clock in Straßburg cathedral, as the monument of the ingenuity of a past age; but the question what the machine is for, and whether it serves its purpose, is looked upon as an audacious impertinence."

He considers that the difference of opinion between the two great parties upon Home Rule is one of which the philosopher should be impatient on the following ground:—

"The difference between the two parties is scarcely perceptible. At present the issue is Home Rule. But it is not much more than a name. The independence of Ireland is impossible; for no island can be independent unless it has the command of the sea. No one in either party objects to purely Irish affairs being settled by Irishmen. One half of us would give the Irish nearly all that their leaders ask for, and call it a final settlement, as though there were final settlements in the political world. The other half of us would grant a little less."

Mr. Wilkinson then pleads for an agreement between the parties and a national policy, for which we fear that he will plead in vain.

NEW NOVELS.

The Queen of Love. By S. Baring-Gould. 3 vols. (Methuen & Co.)

Mrs. BARING-GOULD's facility is something truly portentous. He seems to write novels almost as fast as indolent reviewers can write criticisms of them. And the wonder is that the quality of his work suffers so little from the tremendous speed at which it is turned out. Even his most perfunctory padding has more individuality about it than the pith of most average novels, while his strong situations, though often excessively artificial, are invariably illumined with the glow of a powerful and sombre imagination. 'The Queen of Love' is not the first of Mr. Baring-Gould's novels which has had to be taken literally with a good deal of salt. Here, however, the scene is no longer laid in the Essex marshes, but the salt-producing district of Cheshire, and the author displays a familiarity with that industry and the conditions under which it is carried on which he has turned to extraordinarily vivid account in three of the most striking scenes of the story. But Mr. Baring-Gould is a realist by fits and starts only. Anything more untrue to life than the dialogue of his mountebanks, his poachers, and his salt-boilers could not well be imagined. This literary idealization—which is applied indiscriminately to every personage—is undoubtedly a blemish, though it may be overlooked in view of the picturesqueness of the results attained and the originality of the characters portrayed. The heroine, who reminds us not a little of Cheap Jack Zita, is rather less striking than the average run of Mr. Baring-Gould's unconventional female types; but a good deal of humour is got out of the transplantation of this circus waif into the soil of militant Nonconformity. But why she should have been attracted by the virtuous but insipid salt-boiler Andrew instead of the chivalrous poacher Rab will remain a mystery to most readers. But it is just this element of contrariness and unexpectedness which renders Mr. Baring-Gould's books stimulating and refreshing reading.

A Modern Buccaneer. By Rolf Boldrewood. 3 vols. (Macmillan & Co.)

ROLF BOLDREWOOD's last book is scrappy in its information and desultory in its interest. It has to do with Samoa and other islands in the Pacific, and throws a little light on the manners and customs of the islanders, and more especially of the white-skinned folk who trade amongst and upon the islanders. One of these traders tells the story, in an easy-going narrative of fact or yarn, the commonplace details well relieved by exciting adventures and grim romance. Capt. Hayston is a telling figure of a free-booter who for many years reaped a rich harvest in the China and Southern seas—a handsome and fascinating man, strong and imperious, but with a cruel temper when he was roused. It is quite worth while to follow up the record of his daring exploits, whether he is a picture from life or only a well-drawn type. At any rate, the book is full of point and circumstance, and there is even a two-page island map to add to its particularity.

No Hero, but a Man. By Annie Thomas. 3 vols. (White & Co.)

NOTHING so much becomes a novelist as to devise and digest his or her plot before a story is begun, and to adhere to it without modification to the end. It is difficult to imagine that Mrs. Pender-Cudlip has observed this salutary rule in respect of 'No Hero, but a Man.' A very teasing kind of examination paper might be set on the claims of Mr. Herbert Harlby to the estate of Gunwalloe, on the manner in which he became possessed of it, on the motives of his actions and the consistency of his conduct; and one cannot feel confident that this gentleman's literary creator would be able to "floor" such a paper. Certainly her man is not a hero, and still less is he a rational or sensible being. Large allowance has to be made for the vagueness with which the story is planned and put together before the reader can begin to decide whether it is interesting or not.

The Fool of Destiny. By Colin Middleton. 3 vols. (Hurst & Blackett.)

THE mother of the "fool of destiny," whose story Mr. Middleton has written, was a bit of a fool herself. She died at his birth, after making her husband swear on her Bible that he would bring up the boy in ignorance of the fact that his father was a baronet. The baronet was still more a fool, for he did not even let the boy know that he had a father. Some of the results are awkward. The boy is a Crichton, goes to Oxford and takes honours, and evidently has the ball of life at his feet; but the one thing he lacks is the balance that his clever and distinguished father could have given him. There never was and never could be such a fool as this father, and Mr. Middleton is apologising for his creation throughout. The story, nevertheless, is fairly well constructed, and it shows some grip of character and knowledge of the world. One is interested in the young fool of destiny, and it is not until the last page of the third volume that the reader discovers whether or not his destiny makes a fool of him to the end.

Thorough. By Mary A. M. Marks. 3 vols. (Bentley & Son.)

IN the course of the last seven or eight years it has more than once fallen to our lot to congratulate Mrs. Marks in these columns on the signal ability and interest of her novels and short stories. It is, unluckily, difficult exactly to repeat this agreeable process on the present occasion. There is undoubted ability in 'Thorough,' but of sustained interest hardly a trace. From time to time the reader comes upon a grateful episodic oasis, but it is, as a rule, sandwiched between great slabs of historical narrative, and the depressing effect of the method is only enhanced by the dreariness of Mrs. Marks's theme. For 'Thorough' deals exhaustively and exhaustingly with the policy of Strafford and Cromwell in Ireland, taking as the starting-point the Deputy's famous expedition to Galway. Inasmuch as this part of Strafford's administration has proved too much for even his most ardent whitewashers to swallow, Mrs. Marks's determination to make pathetic capital out of the sufferings of the expropriated land-owners of Connaught seems to us rather gratuitous. If the book is meant to have any political significance, Mrs. Marks has devoted her energies, as the French would say, to breaking in an open door. No one wishes to defend Strafford's methods of administration nowadays; and though the cruelties and oppression practised on the Irish under him and Cromwell furnish the novelist with no lack of harrowing, and even gruesome details, the sheer monotony of this recital grows terribly wearisome. As a work of art the book is disfigured by its excessive length and its disconnected style. Mrs. Marks has evidently prepared herself for her task by a most extensive course of reading; but she has not digested her materials, and she devotes a disproportionate amount of space to dry historical details. There is practically no plot, the love interest is purely subsidiary, while the most gentle of readers will find his stock of compassion unequal to the perpetual demands which are made upon it.

A King in Bohemia. By Henry Herman. (Remington & Co.)

THE scenery of this novelette is pretty, though stagey. The South Devon coast and the Riviera are effectively sketched, and Samson, his wife and daughter, are picturesque figures. But the story is a trifle. As such it is obnoxious to small criticisms. We doubt the dialect of the Devonian hero, do not recognize his very blonde Saxon physique as typical of his county, and think he is needlessly slow-witted, even for a giant who keeps a rural alehouse. On the other hand, he is affectionate and honest, and his method of sleeping on his back in the sun, when the colossal fortune is thrust upon him, has much to recommend it. Mary, the maid of the inn, is well impressed on the imagination, so far as her purely physical charms can move it; but we blush for the inconstancy of Eynsford. The fact that his more educated ladylove was so left to herself as to say "Me!" must be his best excuse.

For Honour and Life: a Tale of the Terror. By William Westall. (Osgood, McIlvaine & Co.)

MR. WESTALL's hero is a Lancashire lad, son of a Swiss settled as a calico printer in Manchester, and destined by his parents to follow his father's calling. But any one who knows anything about Mr. Westall's books will readily guess the sequel, especially when it is taken into account that the calico printer's brothers are all soldiers, and one of them a captain in the Swiss Guard. Young Astor's prowess in an encounter with a highwayman overcomes his father's scruples, and, realizing that they cannot compete with nature, his parents consent to his exchanging the warehouse for the barrack. When it is added that the hero quits England for France in 1789 the reader will know what he has to expect. In his alert and spirited style Mr. Westall conducts us through a perfect maze of peril and terror, but always manages to inspire confidence as to the issue. Mr. Westall's apparatus is conventional, but he writes with an engaging heartiness, as becomes a narrative which is put in the mouth of such a strapping and rattling young Guardsman as Fritz Astor.

Just Like a Woman. By Mrs. Edward Kennard. (White & Co.)

IT is pleasant to think that the Duke of Bombay, the popular general who has attained his fame "by cunning and craft, and trampling on other men's reputations," is a purely ideal character. Mrs. Kennard has encased this puny soul in a body equally infirm; and Eve Carlingford may be congratulated on her escape from her engagement, though the manner of its rupture be rather farcical and the lady needlessly rude. The best part of this very slight story is a pleasant fishing scene in Norway, where the heroine discovers her true affinity in a literary native—a moral Ibsen, with the thews and presence of Balder the Beautiful.

CLASSICAL PHILOLOGY.

The Electra of Euripides. With Introduction, Notes, and Appendix by Charles Haines Keene, M.A. (Bell & Sons.)—This is an elaborate and useful edition with an apparatus criticus which approaches exhaustiveness and a very full commentary. The most valuable feature is the editor's collation of the Florentine Laurentian MS., Weil's L, which, so far as we can judge without comparing his work with the MS., seems well executed and trustworthy. In the introduction the poet is defended against the absurd attacks of Schlegel, though we are duly cautioned against disparaging Æschylus and Sophocles out of zeal for the reputation of Euripides. Possibly, if our editor had seen Dr. Verrall's 'Choephori' in time, his expression (p. xxxv) "Euripides' tragi-comedy 'Electra' might have drawn forth a few words of protest. Mr. Keene gives us a thoughtful and appreciative comparison between this play, the 'Electra' of Sophocles, and the 'Choephori.' As to the date of the production of the play, he argues forcibly in favour of Singer's view, that the year was B.C. 413. The scholarship displayed in the text and commentary cannot be pronounced of the highest order. The text might well be labelled "made in Germany," though there are occasional flashes of independence. A bad specimen is found on v. 168. The note runs "ἀγροτέρων, 'rustic.' The masculine ἀγροτήρ occurs in l. 462." Now the feminine (accusative) of ἀγροτήρ is of course ἀγρότειραν, which is read in Plutarch's quotation of the passage and by a corrector in L, and is obviously the true reading, as the required sense "rustic," which Mr. Keene gives to ἀγροτέρων, is only post-classical. Paley's text of vv. 168-70 is almost certainly right, except that he retains ἀνήρ after γαλακτοπότας, namely, ἡλυθον, ἡλίκτρα, ποτὶ σὺν ἀγρότειραν αὐλάν, ἰμολεῖ τις ἰμολεῖν γαλακτοπότας Μυκηναῖος οὐρίβας.

The corresponding verses of the antistrophe being:—

καὶ παρ' ἐμοῦ χρῆσαι πολίπηνά τε φάρμα δόναί χρῆσά τε ποτιθήματ' ἀγλαίας.
δοκεῖς τοῖσι σοῖς δακρύοις.

Mr. Keene omits the conjectural τε (v. 190), and reads in v. 191 χρῆσά τε χάρισι προθήματ' ἀγλαίας, after L, which, however, reads χάρισαι (probably an altered dittograph of χρῆσαι in the preceding verse). Now from the meanings of προθήματι it is clear that προθήματ' must be wrong. As Mr. Keene gives Dr. J. H. H. Schmidt's unscholarly suggestion περιθήματ', it ought to be pointed out that such a form is quite unwarranted according to the evidence of classical Greek. The alleged difficulties presented by v. 1, Ὁ γῆς παλαιὸν Ἄργος, Ἰνάχου βροαί, are slight in comparison with the difficulty of agreeing with Mr. Keene that ἀνθος could be applied to βροαί, and παλαιὸν τὸν ἀνθος. It is possible that κινάχου should be read, as in uncials S KI would look like OICI, one of which could easily fall out. Several of the notes seem to be designed for the use of persons who do not possess a "Liddell and Scott," e.g., those on εὐαμερίαν, v. 196; κατέχευ, v. 202; χερνίς, v. 207; στέγειν, v. 273; κάμνη, v. 955; and διὰ πυρός, v. 1182. Schenkl's miserable transposition of vv. 965, 966, is actually admitted into the text. The passage runs:—

963. OP. τί δ'; ἐκ Μυκηναῶν μῶν βοηδρόμου ὄρω;

HA. οὐκ, ἀλλὰ τὴν τεκοῦσαν ἢ μ'
ἐγείνατο.

965. OP. καλῶς ἄρ' ἄρκυν εἰς μέσση πορείε-ται.

966. HA. καὶ μὴν ὄχοις γε καὶ στολῇ λαμπρύνεται.

The transposition of the last two lines can only be excused by the supposition that Schenkl and his followers do not understand the use of the particles καὶ μὴν.....γε. One of the most subtle touches in the drama is lost by not assigning, with L, vv. 1185-1190 to Electra, but to the chorus with Kirchoff. After an outburst of pity for her mother, Electra for a moment hardens herself again, and urges in self-justification the plea of justice:—

ὦ τύχας, τὰς σὰς τύχας, μήτηρ τέκον', ἄλαστα μίλεα καὶ πέρα
παθοῦσα σὺν τέκνῳ ὕπαι.
πατὴρ δ' εἵρεσας φόνον δικάων.

The force of the preposition of κατέιδες, v. 1206, is ignored, and we are left in doubt whether Mr. Keene regards the verse as addressed to Electra or to the chorus, the latter being the case. An obviously corrupt line, v. 142, ἱαχὰν δοῦδ' ἀν μίλος Ἀῖδα, is ingeniously emended in the critical notes thus, ἱαχὰν Ἀῖδα μίλους αἰλίνου. From many good notes, that on πυρά (v. 92), meaning an altar at a tomb, may be selected for mention.

College Series of Latin Authors.—Catullus. Edited by E. T. Merrill. (Boston, U.S., Ginn & Co.)—Prof. Merrill provides a highly satisfactory text, his spelling being correct, and his adherence to the two superior MSS. called "O" and "G," or together "V," is generally as tenacious as can be expected. Our editor has collated "O" for himself, and in the critical appendix gives us all the important readings of "O," "G," and the inferior MSS., together with the attempted restorations of many obviously corrupt places. The commentary, in foot-notes, is judicious and scholarly. Several difficult passages, however, are disposed of in the arbitrary style of a teacher who wisely seeks to place something definite before students whose time is limited. He seems to care very little about conjectural emendation, generally treating the essays of Munro, Ellis, Baehrens, Schwabe, and Postgate, not to mention earlier critics, with impartial unconcern. Of course necessary and highly probable or certain corrections, such as expulsi tuum (44, 7) for "expulsus sim," protendit for "praetendit" (64, 127), are placed in the text; but as to 67, 12, the MS. nonsense is set down in the text, while on the ten emendations printed in the appendix not a word of comment is vouchsafed. Munro's astu for "istius" being omitted. This is only one instance out of several in which H. A. J. Munro's excellent criticisms of Catullus (reissued and enlarged in book form, 1878) are ignored, so that it is fair to conclude that Mr. Merrill has not had access to the volume. We have noted a few cases of infidelity to V which seem to us unfortunate; for instance, the substitution of the commonplace "ligatam" for negatam of V, 2, 13, "quod zonam soluit diu negatam"; of "ipsea" for ipsam of V, 3, 7, "mistress"; and of "nouissimo" for V's novissime, 4, 24. The variant ligatam is as old apparently as Priæian, but it is not so easy to account for its alteration to negatam as it is to explain the inverse process. As to the editor's reading and interpretation of 2, 5-8, we think Munro, though wrong, puts us on the right track. Catullus describes Lesbia's play with her pet sparrow:—

Cum desiderio meo nitenti
Carum nescio quid illic lecerit
Sic solacium sui doloris,
Credo, ut cum graui acquiescet ardo.

Our editor prints "tum g. acquiescat," and says that carum is almost colourless. Rather it gets colour from meo nitenti, and means "endearing [or "fascinating"] to me when I am with her." Then the poet adds: "And, I fancy, some solace [in opposition to the object of carari, namely, "carum nescio quid,"] not, as Prof. Merrill, to the subject of libet] to her own longing when her intense passion shall be allayed" (omitting ut); i.e., when Catullus has been absent a while. Munro is right in protesting that gravis ardo is distinct from doloris, though he forgets that ardens is used of longing for an absent lover in 64, 124, "ardenti corde furentem," which verse Mr. Merrill should have cited rather than 64, 93, as he makes gravis ardo tantamount to "love-longing." In the petulance of passion Catullus delicately suggests that Lesbia is more easily consoled for his absence than he can be for hers. We must protest strongly against the view that the phasellus of 4 was a model. A yacht of thirty or forty tons burden could easily be got up the Mincio by rowing and towing. Such a vessel with her mast and ballast out, steadied by beams or spars lashed to her sides, would not draw three feet of water. Why is silva, v. 11, "a single tree"? Surely the phasellus was not a dug-out; and if it had been, the mast gives a second tree. Munro proved that in 10, 32, pararum must be altered to paratia, yet Prof. Merrill acquiesces in Mr. Ellis's irrelevant defence of pararum. In 4, 25, sed hæc prius fuerit recalls the apparent quotation of a tragic poet by Aristophanes, 'Vespæ', 1,063, ἔπειτα ποτ' ἴδω, ἔπειτα ταῦτα εἶναι δ' οἴμαι. It is strange that no one, so far as we remember, has thought of optimissime for "opulentissime" (29, 23), which would be suggested by the unique form. There is a little trap laid for moderns in 64, 317, into which our editor has fallen after his predecessors, in leui fuerant extantia filo. Here is no "periphrastic form." The pieces of wool "had been on the smooth thread sticking out." Periphrasis would require ex instead of in. There should have been a note, after Munro, on nam, "passing from one topic to another." On 68 b, 145, we ought to be told whether miræ or noctæ is to stand, and if so what it means. The correction muda is diplomatically easy and also most appropriate, while the jingle mumuluscula is quite in Catullus's manner. The vestrae of 99, 6, where tunc would be far more forcible and intelligible, cannot be defended, as Munro thought, as a mere equivalent for tunc. The correction suggested by v. 11 to infestæ is much easier than it looks at the first glance. After in, in might be omitted; and if u were written for f (a change of which there are examples), the absurd vestrae would naturally become vestrae. Of course, the absence of any reference to Munro's views on 29 lessens the value of Prof. Merrill's remarks on the relations between Catullus and Cæsar and between Cæsar and Mamurra. However, our editor's regrettable omissions are counterbalanced by his having left out a great amount of useless or positively mischievous encumbrances which have burdened previous editions, so that the publication of his handy and well-got-up volume should be welcomed as a boon by all students of Catullus.

Dr. L. ERHARDT, of Leipzig, has published a study of the Homeric question (Die Entstehung der homerischen Gedichte) in which he seeks to explain the origin of the Iliad on somewhat novel grounds. The principle from which he starts is that at some periods of history, and especially in primitive times, the collective activity of a people is far more important than that of the individual. We recognize, for instance, in the Elizabethan poets or in the age in which our early ballads were written a certain range of inspiration and expression which is common to all the writers of the time, and may be called national. Suppose this common gift is raised to a higher pitch, and the share of the individual in the result becomes to that extent less important. This is what Dr. Erhardt holds to have been the case in the Homeric age. The legends of Troy were common property, and the national genius had already attained a highly poetical idea of them. These legends were then narrated in verse by a number of different writers or minstrels, all expressing the great poetical conception which the people at large had evolved. In this way the various parts of the Iliad were composed, no doubt for recitation, without either the immediate authors or the public feeling that the credit of the achievement was especially due to the former. The combination of the parts into the whole which we now have was the work of later ages, and was concluded only in the time of Pisistratus; but it was essentially a mechanical and subordinate work, not in any sense creative. The essential point of the theory is the assumed exaltation of the general poetic sense of a whole community, and it is this which differentiates it from other explanations of the Iliad as a congeries of separate lays. The advantages claimed for the theory are that it does away with the difficulties which (as Mr. Andrew Lang has well shown) surround the theory, at present in favour among Homeric specialists, of a great poet's epic being worked over, amplified, and modified by a number of other great poets; while it explains the contradictions and inconsistencies in detail which militate against the belief in a single author. On the other hand, Dr. Erhardt's theory is not free from difficulties, but it is stated temperately and moderately, and is backed by a minute analysis of the poem, and by comparison with other early epics, such as the 'Nibelungenlied'; and the novelty of the conception, as thus applied, should not deprive it of the right to careful and sympathetic consideration.

STORIES OF LIFE ABROAD.

Tales of Australian Early Days, by Price Warung (Sonnenschein & Co.), should never have been written; but as it has been published our advice is that it should not be read. Of what possible use can it be to take up again the unspeakable horrors of Norfolk Island or of Port Arthur? If any reader, from a love of the horrible, wishes to gloat over the miseries of criminals, he can do so in Marcus Clarke's 'His Natural Life'; or if he is desirous to study the question of "Prison Discipline," he will find it ably discussed in the 'Secrets of the Prison House,' by Major Arthur Griffiths, where every phase of it is explained, from the extreme indulgence at Elmira to the savage severities of Siberian gaoles. Mr. Price Warung's book, however, possesses this feature of interest, that it is written entirely from the prisoners' point of view. Every provocation, every mitigating circumstance, is put forward, and their atrocities are never mentioned with censure; but even a cursory perusal of these pages will cause the reflecting reader to pause before he condemns a discipline which had to deal with doubly and trebly convicted criminals, debased to a degree which can scarcely be conceived. If the punishment was brutal, the recipients were lower than brutes. The following outrage, we are told, occurred at Sydney, where prisoners were worked before second and third convictions consigned the worst of that unhappy class to Norfolk Island. It was the work of a "gentleman" convict, who, like all other prisoners, was, we imagine, innocent of the crime for which he was "sent out," and whose subsequent conduct is extolled as that of a hero. His "gentlemanlike" feelings led to the following act of revenge for a flogging:—"Blast you—yes. You cut the gentleman out of me with the cat—you die." Having stunned the overseer with a blow of a pickaxe, and fired a bullet through the palm of his hand,— "In the afternoon they pegged out overseer Franke. On an ant-hill, on a wooded gully rise, they fastened him down with tent lines. His right hand was stretched out with tightened cord again—this time to a special peg. A track of sugar was made from the orifice of the ant-bed to the hole in the band, in case the industrious little creatures should not otherwise perceive so appetizing a banquet as that shattered fragment of official humanity. Before they pegged him out they forged overseer Franke. After they pegged him out they placed some victuals and water—just outside his reach. It was Mann who suggested that last refinement. In fact it was the gentleman whom the cat had robbed of his gentlemanhood that devised the means for keeping the latter-day Tantalus busy while he lived.....Absalom West found Franke's skeleton in 1834."

Bright Celestials: the Chinaman at Home and Abroad. By John Coming Chinaman. (Fisher Unwin.)—It is difficult to understand why this book was written. It cannot have been to afford amusement, or if it were, it signally fails in accomplishing its purpose; nor, in spite of its preface, can the author, we should imagine, have seriously intended to impart information. From first to last it is a poor book. To begin, the title is a complete misnomer, and may possibly have been suggested by the line of a well-known hymn, irrespective of the meaning of the words. The men and women, such as they are, who are described in its pages, are anything but bright. The most sordid features of Chinese life are those to which prominence is given, and the careers of all the characters are eminently dismal. The story opens in the province of Fukkien. The hero and heroine are a young gambler and a girl brought up in a missionary establishment. In accordance with native custom this pair had been betrothed in their infancy; but as the young man turned out to be a frequenter of gambling houses, the missionary ladies who had temporary charge of the heroine persuaded her, in spite of her plighted troth, to jilt the hero, and to marry a young Christian preacher. From the preface we are led to believe that the book was written in the interests of missionary enterprise. But if this is the case, the missionaries may well pray to be saved from their friends. We are convinced that such a breach of faith would never have been sanctioned by, at all events, the better class of missionary ladies; and we have no hesitation in saying that if such conduct were common, it would go far to justify the popular hostility against missionary enterprise in China. In fact, the whole story is a tissue of improbabilities. The young gambler gets mixed up in a riot at a gambling house, in the course of which a man is beaten to death. To avoid arrest he takes ship to Singapore, becomes a reformed character, and eventually marries the heroine, whose preaching husband goes—with a curious want of medical judgment—to Singapore as a health resort, and there dies. The story is flimsy throughout, and is so poorly constructed that it fails to give the proper value to the scraps of information scattered, at wide intervals, through its pages.

ORIENTAL HISTORY.

History of India. For the Use of Students and Colleges. By H. G. Keene, C.I.E. 2 vols. (Allen & Co.)—There is little fault to find either with the plan or the execution of these two compact volumes, into which Mr. Keene has compressed the history of India "from the earliest times to the present day." Of all the summaries of Indian history published during this century, there are few indeed which for fulness, accuracy, clear exposition, painstaking research, and impartial handling of obscure and complicated themes, can compete, we think, with Mr. Keene's scholarly work. Marshman's history in three volumes, a model in its own way, ends with the retirement of Lord Dalhousie; and Sir W. Hunter's 'Indian Empire,' however cyclopedic, hardly comes under the head of "portable property." For the average student Mr. Keene's volumes are both handier and cheaper, while they refer him from time to time to all the best authorities for each chapter and section of the author's narrative. In this latter respect alone Mr. Keene scores heavily against Marshman, with those students at least who care to verify their author's statements, or to search the original records for themselves. On the other hand, we miss from these volumes the detailed tables of contents with the page and paragraph headings which add so largely to the usefulness of Marshman's compendium. These omissions might as well be rectified in a second edition, along with some textual errors, chiefly of the kind which the author ridicules in his preface. The student, however, will find his compensation in the numerous maps and plans which help to explain and illustrate the text. Mr. Keene is no mere follower of beaten tracks. He has succeeded in imparting an air of freshness and originality to well-worn themes, by means of long, careful, and intelligent study in many fields of Indian history, aided by the wealth of his official experiences and the easy skill of one versed in the art of exposition and expression. He is at home alike in the earlier and the later periods, in the highways and the byways of Indian history. He has rummaged in many dim nooks and corners for details which might serve to illustrate his story or bear out his estimate of particular events and persons. His comments by the way, if sometimes views or far-fetched, are generally pertinent, just, instructive, and often touched with a quietly playful humour. In his estimates of character Mr. Keene strives after an impartiality which occasionally from another standpoint may seem to "fall on the other side." He can make large allowance for adventurers like George Thomas, for great warrior-statesmen like Madhaji Sindhia, an imperial bigot like Aurangzib, or a weak-kneed ruler like Lord Auckland. But he has only faint praise, not un-mixed with censure, for the forward statesmanship of Wellesley; and his admiration of Dalhousie's genius is overclouded by his strong dislike of that great ruler's policy towards lapsed native states. It is pleasant, however, to hail our author as a sincere and weighty champion of the fair fame of Warren Hastings, that "extraordinary man" who allowed "no personal consideration to stand between him and what he conceived his duty." As Mr. Keene well says, Hastings

"had found the British empire in the East a thing of shreds and patches; he left it a harmonious whole, strong and prosperous itself, and influencing the native powers for good. And that influence he had gained without—so far as his immediate sphere went—annexing a single square mile of territory."

Mr. Keene is one of the few writers who have done adequate justice to the varied merits of another great ruler, the Marquis of Hastings. It was under that wise statesman and able administrator that the British power in India became for the first time really paramount over the whole peninsula—that the long carnival of miracle and anarchy gave place at last to the reign of civilized law and order, as enforced by a handful of foreigners from the West. Looking at what was done by Clive and others, we are not prepared to say with Mr. Keene that Lord Hastings was "the founder of the Indian Empire, which he did so much to build up." But we may fairly regard him as "the founder of national education," the frank upholder of a real British suzerainty, the stern foe to Pindari rapine and Maratha aggression, the enlightened leader in many paths of ordered freedom and social well-being. In his chapters on "The Afghanistan Blunder," "A Soldier's Rule," and "The Fall of the Company," our author ranges with equal mastery of facts and sureness of touch over a vast variety of topics requisite for his purpose. With regard to Auckland's Afghan policy the reader will find some new and interesting details, gleaned from the revised Blue-book of 1859, which contains much matter omitted or carefully curtailed in the "garbled Blue-book" of twenty years before. In spite of Mr. Keene's researches, it still remains a question how far Lord Auckland was responsible for the first Afghan war. The brave and kindly Lord Hardinge receives high praise for services often overlooked or transferred to the sole credit of Lord Dalhousie. The story of the great Mutiny, in which Mr. Keene bore no inactive part, is told with due brevity, clear insight, and much graphic power, while the changes that ensued in the machinery of Indian government are noted down and lightly discussed by a shrewd and careful observer of past and passing events. Mr. Keene deals fairly and intelligently with those vexed questions of land tenure and tenant right which John Lawrence set himself so loyally to solve in Oudh, the North-West, and the Punjab. Some years had to elapse before like guarantees were secured for the Bengal ryot and the peasants of Bombay. In the chapter on "Peace and Progress" our author sums up the moral and intellectual harvest of the twenty years that closed with the retirement of Lord Northbrook. The last chapter of this excellent book closes with a brief retrospect of British rule in India, followed by a clear and hopeful estimate of present conditions and prospective advances towards national unity and well-being.

SHOULD that good time be coming when the mass of English readers will need to be coached in the lives of Eastern sages and statesmen, poets and potentates, as thoroughly as in the contents of the "Dictionary of National Biography," the prospects of a volume such as the Oriental Biographical Dictionary (Allen & Co.) would be brighter than they appear to be at the present hour. Even had the taste of the British reading public been as habitually exercised in the direction of Oriental books as it has hitherto—especially in recent years—shown itself to be in respect of Oriental politics, Mr. H. G. Keene's new or first English edition of the late Mr. Beale's materials, put together and published some years ago in Calcutta, would assuredly have received a wider and more cordial recognition than can await it among the publications of the current season at home. The few to whom it will be really welcome will, in all probability, consist mainly of those who are acquainted with the original Indian edition, to the practical uses of which they can bear testimony from personal experience. If to the outside world it possesses but little attraction in itself, it has nevertheless a strong claim to inclusion in every well-ordered library as a book of reference for certain—it may be rare—occasions. In the advertisement to the present edition it is stated:—

"This work has been carefully revised and much amplified.....the fresh additions to Mr. Beale's matter are chiefly taken from Ibn Khallikan [spelt 'Khallikan' later on], the works of Garcin de Tassy, with occasional references to Blochmann, von Noer, and some historical books by the editor himself and other recent authors. It is still far from complete; but great pains have been taken to make it a trustworthy and useful work of reference to students of Eastern history."

The glances we have been enabled to cast over these pages have resulted in a favourable impression of the care which has been bestowed upon them; but we think it would have been well to have shown the sources of information turned to account for each particular notice. Fuller material might have been advantageously obtained by drawing upon Dr. Rieu's invaluable catalogues of Persian MSS. in the British Museum; while Jami's 'Bahariyat' tells us some things about Rudaki and Anvari which might well bear repetition. The last-named work attributes, moreover, to 'Unsari the authorship of a lost poem called 'Vamik and 'Asra,' mentioned in the 'Dictionary,' and to Dakiki the credit of contributing 8,000 verses to the 'Shah-námeh,' which sum the volume under notice reduces to 1,000. The place and date of Khakani's birth (Ganjah, A.H. 500) might have been supplied by Barbier de Meynard's 'Poésies en Perse,' a brochure which might also have suggested the acquisition of further particulars on the same poet by its reference to M. de Khanikoff's able memoir, contained in the numbers of the Journal Asiatique for August and September, 1864. May we add that, although the bare names of twenty-eight poems by Faridu'd-din 'Attar are to be found in the short biography of this writer, we miss the special exposition of any, notwithstanding that one of the number, the 'Mantiku' t-Tair, has been reproduced in its original tongue and translated by one, and commented on by another, distinguished French Orientalist? The prefatory notice invites attention to what it aptly calls "the inexhaustible subject of transliteration" in the following passage:—

"The English, as is well known, have three methods; the Haphazard (which, indeed, is no method at all), the Ollchristian, and the popularised Jonesian introduced by the Government of India under the inspiration of Sir W. W. Hunter. None of these is quite satisfactory. The French adopt a system of their own, and so do the Germans. Mr. Beale had followed an orthography, compounded of the two first-named elements, which has been conformed to the third method in printing these pages. The principle is, mainly, to accentuate the long vowels and to express the other vowels by the English sounds in 'twinned' and 'chey.' Q is always to be pronounced hard as in 'give.' For the convenience of Continental European scholars, the names have also been printed in the Persian character; and it is hoped that no practical difficulty will be experienced by those who may have occasion to use the Dictionary."

The "popularised Jonesian" method here referred to is, perhaps, the nearest approach to a possible Anglo-Oriental orthography of universal acceptance; but it is open to objection by Persian and Arabic scholars as too "Indian." To take very simple and common instances, the use of e and v in Persian, and yy in Arabic, must remain among the bigger bones of contention, unless we wholly reject the Turkish element and restrict the y to its use as a consonant. Such wholesale perversions as "Achmet" and "Mehmet" can, of course, be put aside; but "Khayyam" certainly looks better than "Khay-yam," and "Sayyad" than "Sayyad" (or "Sayyid," as once written, p. 82); and "Khair" is seldom, if ever written "Khayr." Let us hope that this whole question will shortly undergo yet another thrashing, and that the next edition of the Oriental Biographical Dictionary will be a model of correct orthography as well as of sound biography. At present it has advanced far on the right road, but why does it not add to the bare Persian character the vowel and other helpful points and signs? The mark of the tashdid, or double letter, is wanting, and the ain is not invariably distinguished from the alif, as in "Ibn Arab Shah," p. 167, for "Ibn 'Arab Shah"; "Khasha," p. 216, for "Khash'a"; and other words. "Mary" is clearly a misprint for "Marv" (p. 83).

Lists of governing dynasties, prefixed to the descriptions of their coins, are undoubtedly boons to all persons engaged in the serious perusal of numismatic catalogues; but except for such as these, or specialists, a volume entitled The Mohammedan Dynasties: Chronological and Genealogical Tables with Introductions (Constable & Co.), would, as a general rule, present but little attraction. Here, however, is excellent matter, meet for the consideration of all Oriental students. Mr. Stanley Lane-Poole, by dint of literary tact and full acquaintance with his subject, has thrown among his unavoidably dry dates and monotonous names bright excerpts of Eastern history, which not only throw a light on the periods treated, but are well worth retention in the reader's memory. His seven short pages of letterpress on the Othmanli or Ottoman Sultans of Turkey, during nearly six hundred years (i.e. from A.D. 1311 to A.D. 1893), supply an admirable specimen of instructive summary, and might be studied with advantage in the many English schools where history and geography are still secondary items in the day's programme. They are illustrated by two tables, one showing the growth, the other the decline of the Sultan's Empire. The concluding paragraph might serve as a kind of aide-memoire to politicians:—

"Turkey's most serious losses have been in Europe. Greece parted from her in 1828; the Danubian Principalities coalesced into the State of Roumania in 1866; and Serbia got rid of her Turkish garrisons in 1867. The designs of Russia, which had been checked by England and France in the Crimean War (1854-6), were again manifested in the invasion of Turkey in 1877-8; but the Great Powers did not sanction the aggrandizement of Russia. The Treaty of Berlin (1878), though it gave little to Russia, carried out the partition of Turkey in Europe which had already begun. Roumania and Serbia were created separate kingdoms, the independence of Montenegro was recognized, Greece was given Thessaly, Bosnia and Herzegovina were entrusted to Austria, and a new tributary principality of Bulgaria was established, to which Eastern Roumelia was added in 1885, whereby Turkey was virtually deprived of her last possession north of the Balkans. The Ottoman Empire in Europe is now reduced to a strip of territory south of the Balkans, corresponding to ancient Thrace, Macedonia, Epirus, and Illyria, instead of stretching almost to the gates of Vienna as it did in the great days of Sulayman."

It is not quite clear why Mr. Poole writes "Murad," and not "Muhammad," the zama in the first syllable being applicable to both names.

SEVERAL interesting points in the domain of Indian archaeology are suggested by Dr. A. F. R. Hoernle's preliminary study of the Weber MSS., reprinted from vol. lxii. part i. of the Bengal Asiatic Society's Journal. The MSS. in question are a bundle of fragments, brought to light by the Rev. F. Weber, a missionary in Ladak, and found at Kugiar in Chinese Turkistan. The first point of interest is the material, viz. paper. Till quite recently the earliest known paper MS. connected with Indian civilization was a thirteenth century MS. in the Wright collection from Nepal, now at Cambridge. It is curious to note that the paper of the present find is stated to be Nepalese. The paleographical features of the documents are traced in detail by Dr. Hoernle, and classified in relation to the "Central Asian Nagari" already established from the Kashgar MSS. at St. Petersburg, and the Bower MSS. recently published by the present editor in a sumptuous form under the auspices of the Government of India. Some of the fragments also belong to the "North-Western Gupta" form, elsewhere investigated by Dr. Hoernle. As to the subject-matter, it may suffice at present to note that of the eleven sets of fragments two at least are of literary importance. For one belongs to the astronomical literature of the later Vedic period, and is shown to have been composed between the second century B.C. and the third century A.D.; and a second is of lexicographical value. Of the remainder several belong to the literature of Tantric Buddhism. As the writing of the leaves may be placed presumably between the fourth and seventh centuries A.D., we learn once more what other indications had already led us to credit, the very considerable antiquity of this degraded form of a cult originally so simple and straightforward. The pamphlet is illustrated by admirable photographs of selected pages, and is concluded by a full and excellent lithographic table of the "Central Asian Nagari" alphabet.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

MESSRS. BLACKWOOD & SONS publish The Arabian Horse: his Country and People, a magnificent illustrated volume, fit for a gift-book, but not properly to be criticized as an art book, written by General Tweedie, formerly Consul-General at Baghdad. There is, perhaps, a little too much about the Arabs in proportion to the information (in itself considerable) about Arab horses for this book to be entirely satisfactory to horse lovers; and although some of the plates are extremely good—as, for example, a portrait of "Claverhouse," a bright bay with black points, a most characteristic Arab—yet others strike us as being less well executed, as, for instance, the frontispiece, for surely the head in the latter case is not of true Arab size and form. General Tweedie gossips very pleasantly about Arabia and all things that concern it, and his book contains an atlas marked with the names of the tribes, which will show the origin of the horses which reach us chiefly through Mesopotamia and the Gulf and Bombay.

Henry Allon, D.D., Pastor and Teacher: the Story of his Ministry, with Selected Sermons and Addresses. By the Rev. W. Hardy Harwood. (Cassell & Co.)—Mr. Harwood, who succeeded Dr. Allon at Union Chapel, Islington, relates that Henry Allon was born on October 13th, 1818, at Welton, in Yorkshire. His father was a builder, and to this trade young Allon was apprenticed at Beverley; but his talents attracted the attention of the members of the Congregationalists there, and by a unanimous vote he was selected for the ministry. After receiving his education at Chesham College in 1844, he was invited to become co-pastor with Mr. Lewis at Union Chapel; and on the death of Mr. Lewis in February, 1852, became the pastor, and so remained until his death, which took place suddenly on April 16th, 1891. Dr. Allon was a man of handsome presence, and his sermons were carefully prepared, but rather long for modern ideas. He was known to say "that no man could preach a good sermon under fifty minutes." Of wide sympathies and catholic views, he gave offence to many when he became one of the fifteen London ministers who took part in the protest against Mr. Grant's attack on Mr. Lynch's book of hymns entitled 'The Rivulet.' It is amusing now to read that Dr. Campbell in the British Banner thus described 'The Rivulet' controversy: "Nothing like it had occurred within the memory of the present generation, or perhaps since the days of the Reformation." Another instance of Dr. Allon's exercising his independence of judgment was his joining the Shakespeare Tercentenary Committee; and again, when he took the chair of the Congregational Union, "some good but narrow souls were scandalized" when he declared that "the theory of verbal inspiration was untenable, and showed how the defence of that theory was put [sic] a powerful weapon into the hands of the enemy." For many years Dr. Allon was editor of the British Quarterly Review; but perhaps next to his connexion with Union Chapel he will be longest remembered for the good service he, in conjunction with Dr. Gauntlett—who had been introduced to the church by Mr. Puttick, then secretary of the Sacred Harmonic Society—rendered in the promotion of better music in Nonconformist services. The hymn, anthem, and chant books which were then compiled became models for other chapels. These books were put to such good use at Union Chapel that the musical portion of the service at the present time is one of the best, if not the best, to be heard in any dissenting place of worship. A pleasing recognition of Dr. Allon's position among Nonconformists is recorded as taking place not long before his death. The Archbishop of Canterbury was occupying the chair at some united gathering in Lambeth Palace, when, having to leave early, he courteously invited Dr. Allon to take the vacant place. We cannot but regret that more space has not been allotted to the biography as well as to some account of the considerable home missions carried on by those associated with Union Chapel. This volume of Mr. Harwood's only devotes a little over one hundred pages to the story of Dr. Allon's ministry, the remaining two hundred being filled with extracts from sermons and addresses. The important work at Spitalfields is dismissed in a few lines. This mission has often rendered valuable service in times of epidemic, and in 1862, when the district was stricken with cholera, the most active measures were taken by the church to mitigate its virulence. Nothing daunted either the teachers in the schools or the visitors to the neighbourhood. All the work was fully continued, a part of the buildings being appropriated for dispensing medicines and advice. Should this work run to a second edition we would advise that it should undergo careful revision. Mr. Harwood would do well to remember that "a strong characteristic of Dr. Allon's literary work was his intense impatience of all that was slipshod."

Eight Hours for Work, by Mr. John Rae, published by Messrs. Macmillan & Co., is, in large part, a reprint of most excellent articles which, from time to time, have appeared in the Contemporary Review, and have been read by every one interested in labour questions. There are, however, in the present volume chapters on the connexion between hours and wages, on the eight-hour movement of 1833, and on the present proposals for legislation, which are new, and which are up to the high level of the rest of the author's work.

MESSRS. METHUEN & Co. publish, in the "Social Questions of To-day" series, The Factory System and the Factory Acts, by Mr. R. W. Cooke-Taylor, an inspector of factories of long standing, whose larger book on the factory system has been noticed by us. The present volume is interesting and valuable, historically considered, and is not intended as a guide to what may be good and what may be bad in future proposals for legislation, as such writing would be somewhat outside the author's proper sphere.

A VOLUME called Ethics of Citizenship, which reaches us from Messrs. J. MacLehose & Sons, of Glasgow, and is from the pen of Mr. MacCunn, Professor of Philosophy in University College, Liverpool, is one of those books against which nothing can be said, but favourable criticism of which is somewhat hampered by the consideration that the book, though meritorious, is a little dull. The author discourses on equality and fraternity, on the rights of man and citizenship, on majority rule, party, consistency, and democracy; but we have not found that he has taught us much that is new, or increased our ability to think for ourselves, and his volume will not replace those other more or less philosophical works in which philosophers have skirted round the fringe of politics.

WE are glad to see that Jókai's popularity in this country is growing, and that Messrs. Lawrence & Bullen have brought out a new edition of Mr. Nisbet Bain's translation of his pleasant tale Eyes like the Sea.—Messrs. Bell & Sons have reissued Dyce's scholarly editions of Akenside and Beattie.—Mr. Heinemann has brought out a cheap edition, in one volume, of The Countess Radna, by Mr. W. E. Norris.—Stephen Archer, by Dr. George Mac Donald, and A Sailor's Sweetheart, by Mr. Clark Russell, are neat half-crown reprints of Messrs. Sampson Low & Co.'s devising.

We have received the Reports of the Free Libraries at Birmingham, Ealing, Liverpool, and Wigan. At Birmingham and Ealing the tone is cheerful; but Liverpool complains of lack of funds to purchase books for the reference library. The Museum has been enriched by the collection of agates bequeathed by the late Earl of Derby. Wigan is rejoicing in the gift of De Bry's 'Voyages,' and the acquisition of several early printed books like theeditio princeps of Cato, 'Disticha de Moribus,' and Glanvilla de Proprietatibus Rerum. It may be doubted if such objects of luxury are quite in their place in a free library. Many other valuable works, better suited to such a collection, have been acquired. Mr. Folkard, the active librarian, has also sent us a Catalogue of the Books in the Reference Library, under the letter G. From Nottingham we have received Class List No. 12, Archaeology and Antiquities; from Lewisham a second supplementary catalogue of books added to the Perry Hill Branch Library.

This irrepressible Scotchman has started at Buenos Ayres a monthly magazine, the St. Andrew's Gazette, which promises to represent the thistle on the River Plate in a creditable way.

We have on our table Women of Renown, by G. Barnett Smith (W. H. Allen).—The Story of James Gilmour and the Mongol Mission, by Mrs. Bryson (S.S.U.).—Marie Charlotte Anne de Corday, by Mary Jefferson (Digby & Long).—Stories of Noble Lives, by Lucy Taylor (Nelson).—The Hippolytus of Euripides, by H. B. L. (Williams & Norgate).—The Alchemical Essence and the Chemical Element, by M. M. Pattison Muir (Longmans).—The First Book of Fractions, by E. A. Williams (Sonnenschein).—Unpopular Politics, by G. E. Turner (Stock).—Cavalry Advanced and Rear Guards, arranged by Capt. St. G. L. Steele (Gale & Polden).—Aphorisms from the Writings of Herbert Spencer, selected and arranged by J. R. Gingell (Chapman & Hall).—The Wonderful History of Virgilinus, the Sorcerer of Rome, Englished for the first time (Nutt).—A Handbook of Gold Mining, by H. Louis (Macmillan).—In the Meshes, by F. Severne (Ongood).—The Postman's and other Tales, by H. Herman (Warne).—'Tis Sixty Years Since, or the Two Lockley Halls, by H. Schütz Wilson (Kegan Paul).—Whiffs by H. Newill (Ward & Downey).—A Dead Man's Story, and other Tales, by H. Herman (Warne).—Clear as the Noon Day, by E. Penrose (Jarrold).—Prior Rukere's Rose (Griffith & Farran).—The White Canoe, by W. Trumbull (Putnam).—Flavia, by A. Welcker (Berkeley, U.S.A.).—Summer Day Secrets, by R. Y. Sturgess (Birmingham, 7, Broad Street).—A Handbook to the Psalms: Prayer-Book Version, by the Rev. E. M. Holmes (Wells Gardner).—New Testament Difficulties, Second Series, by the Rev. A. F. W. Ingram (S.P.C.K.).—The Lessons of Holy Scripture, by the Rev. J. H. Wanklyn, Vol. II. (Beunrose).—A Little Prayer Book for Use in Families (S.P.C.K.).—Theism, by the Rev. Charles Voysey (Williams & Norgate).—The Days of our Age, by the Rev. H. Jones (S.P.C.K.).—Biblical and Shakespearean Characters Compared, by the Rev. J. Bell (Simpkin).—Simple Helps for Young Communicants, by F. G. Cholmondeley, M.A. (S.P.C.K.).—Aus dem Kampf der Schwärmer gegen Luther, edited by L. Enders (Nutt).—and Bonnet, by G. Lanson (Paris, Lecène & Oudin). Among New Editions we have Law of Trustees, by R. D. Umlin (Wilson).—Easy Readings in German on Familiar Subjects, by A. R. Lochner (Rivington).—A Handy Book on the Investment of Trust Funds under the New Law, 1893, by R. D.

Umlin (Wilson).—The History of Human Marriage, by E. Westermarck (Macmillan).—Two Spheres; or, Mind versus Instinct, by T. E. S. T. (Fisher Unwin).—Prayers, New and Old, by P. E. Vizard (Williams & Norgate).—The Good News after Marcus' Telling: a Literal Translation of the Anglo-Saxon Version of St. Mark's Gospel, with Preface and Notes, by the Rev. H. O. Leonard (Clarke).—True Religion, by W. W. Mackay (Glasgow, Holmes).—Persia, by the late W. S. W. Vaux, edited by the Rev. A. H. Sayce (S.P.C.K.).—Poetical Works of Francis W. L. Adams (Griffith & Farran).—The Inner Life, by W. T. Matson (Portsmouth, Stride).—How to be Happy though Married (Fisher Unwin).—and Hours of Sunshine, by M. Barr (Hodder Brothers).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

- Theology.*
Alexander's (S. A.) Christ and Skepticism, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Butler's (W. J.) Meditations on the 119th Psalm, cr. 8vo. 2/6
Danah's (E.) The Drama of the Apocalypse, 8vo. 6/ cl.
Gough's (Rev. E. J.) The Religion of the Son of Man, 3/6 cl.
Poetry and the Drama.
Boulton's (H.) Songs Sung and Unsung, cr. 8vo. 4/ cl.
Lynch's (A.) A Koran of Love, The Caliph, and other Poems, 3mo. 2/6 cl.
Simpson's (F. M.) Drawing-Room Dialogues, illus. 6/ cl.
Tragedies of Euripides in English Verse, by A. S. Way, Vol. 1, cr. 8vo. 6/ net, cl.
History and Biography.
Allcott's (A. H.) The Decline of Hellas, a History of Greece 371-333 B.C., cr. 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Astley's (Sir J. D.) Fifty Years of my Life in the World of Sport, 8vo. 30 cl.
Derby (Earl of), Speeches and Addresses, edited by Sir T. H. Sanderson, Memoir by Locky, 2 vols. 8vo. 31/ cl.
Simcox's (E. J.) Primitive Civilizations, 8vo. 2 vols. 32/ cl.
Geography and Travel.
Boothby's (G.) On the Wallaby, or through the East and across Australia, illustrated, 8vo. 18/ cl.
Glimpses of Four Continents, by the Duchess of Buckingham and Chandos, Portraits and Illustrations, 9/ net, cl.
Life in Algiers. Three Years of a Clergyman's Life in that Diocese, 12mo. 2 cl.
Science.
Drummond's (H.) The Lowell Lectures on the Ascent of Man, large cr. 8vo. 7/6 net, cl.
Hall's (P. De H.) Diseases of the Nose and Throat, illus. 10/6
Huxley's (T. H.) Discourses, Biological and Geological, 5/ cl.
Schultz (Dr. G.) and Julius's (P.) Systematic Survey of the Organic Colouring Matters, imperial 8vo. 21/ net, cl.
Wallis's (I. W.) Manual of Hygiene, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
General Literature.
Bell's (R. S. W.) The Business of a Busy Man, cr. 8vo. 2/6
Dootor Quodlibet, a Study in Ethics, by Author of 'Chronicles of Westbury', cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Powell's (J. K.) Recollections of Old Country Life, 8vo. 10/6
Graham's (D. S.) The New Werther, or the Weakman's Wrath, a Study in Characteristic, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Hornung's (R. W.) The Boss of Tarooma, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Kipling's (R.) The Jungle Book, illustrated, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Malet's (Major J. W.) Handbook to Field Training in the Infantry, cr. 8vo. 2 cl.
Miller's (J. R.) A Help for the Common Days, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Olyphant's (Mrs.) A Son of the Soil, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Saunders's (M.) Beautiful Joe, an Autobiography, 2/6 cl.
Vaughan and Bether, a Story of Society To-day, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Watson's (H. B. M.) The Web of the Spider, 12mo. 2 bis.
Whitby's (B.) Mary Fenwick's Daughter, 3 vols. cr. 8vo. 31/6
Williams's (H.) Confessions of a Poet, cr. 8vo. 3/ cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

- Buchwald (G.) : Die Entstehung der Katechismen Luthers, 4m. 50.
Nisene (W.) : Die Distanz des Michael Attaleiates v. 1077, 2m. 60.
Fine Art.
Collection (La) Barracco, publiée par F. Bruckmann, Paris 11 and 12, 40m.
Bibliography.
Gruel (L.) : Christophe Plantin, Relieur à Anvers, 1514-1590, 1fr. 50.
History and Biography.
Dozen (O.) : La Révocation de l'Édit de Nantes à Paris, 3 vols. 20fr.
Firmen-Didot (G.) : La Captivité de Sainte-Hélène, 1fr. 50.
Monumenta Germanica Historica. Auct. Antiquissimum, Vol. 13, Casiodori Varior. rec. Th. Mommsen, 20m.
Neumann (G.) : Die Weltstellung des byzantinischen Reiches vor den Kreuz-zügen, 2m. 60.
Schnneider (Commandant) : L'Empire à Saint-Cloud, 3fr. 50.
Geography and Travel.
Babot (C.) : A travers la Russie Borsale, 4fr.
Philology.
Allorens, m. Berücksicht. von Wolframs v. Hechenbach Wilhelm kritisch hrsg. v. G. Holm, 10m.
Hauvette (A.) : Héroïque Historien des Guerres médiques, 10fr.
Levin (S.) : Versuch e. hebräischen Synonymik, Pt. 1, 1m. 30.
Robert (V.) : Édition paléographique des Fables de Phédre, 10fr.
Schack-Schackenburg (H.) : Aegyptologische Studien, Pt. 2, 5m.
Science.
Gougensheim (A.) et Glover (J.) : Atlas de Laryngologie et de Rhinologie, 50fr.

Hausser (O.) : Grundriss der Kinderheilkunde, 7m.
Holl (M.) : Die bildliche Darstellung der Lage des menschlichen Beckens, 5m.
Klebe (B.) : Die causale Behandlung der Tuberculose, 30m.
Mouat (E.) : Problèmes de Géométrie analytique, 1fr.
Villon (A. M.) : Dictionnaire de Chimie industrielle, Pt. 9, 8fr.

General Literature.

Heyse (P.) : In der Geistesstunde, 4m.
Lazare (B.) : L'Antisémitisme, 3fr. 50.
Léqueur (D.) : Histoire d'Amour, 3fr. 50.
Martineau (A.) : Madagascar en 1884, 10fr.
Polko (B.) : Klingende Geschichten, 4m.
Vauquerie (A.) : Depulse, 1fr. 50.

PROF. HENRY MORLEY.

We have had, and still have, more scholarly professors of English literature than Mr. Henry Morley, who died at Carisbrooke last Monday; but few men, if any, have in our day done so much to encourage a taste for good reading, and to make it easy for students of all ranks to gratify that taste. The popularizing of wholesome literature was the mission to which, while he was still a young man, Mr. Morley felt himself "called" as plainly and solemnly as others are "called" to the preaching of the Gospel, and there was no slackening of the religious zeal with which he followed his vocation through a third of a century.

This was not the work for which he was educated. Born in 1822, he was trained to be a doctor, and he had three or four years' practice as one before 1848, when he gave up medicine and started a school in which he introduced methods of teaching that were then novel. His plan was to cultivate the pupils' powers of observation with as little learning by rote as possible, and to teach the same lessons in the same classes to both boys and girls. Two little books, 'How to make Home Unhealthy' and 'A Defence of Ignorance,' both pungent in their satire, were the outcome of his earlier occupations; but before they were published he had become a contributor to the original Household Words, and Charles Dickens thought so well of his smart writing that in 1851 he persuaded him to settle in London and devote himself entirely to literature or journalism. His connexion with Household Words, and afterwards with All the Year Round, lasted till Dickens's death. He was also one of John Forster's assistants on the old Examiner, to the editorship of which he succeeded for a few years before that paper was sold by Albany Fonblaque to the late Mr. McCullagh Torrens. He found time, too, to write 'Palissy the Potter,' and several other biographical and chatty volumes, including 'Memoirs of Bartholomew Fair.'

All this work, however, was preliminary or incidental to the study and exposition of English literature, which began to be Mr. Morley's most serious pursuit when, in 1856, he was appointed English Lecturer, as assistant to the late Prof. Brewer, at King's College, and which engrossed his attention after 1862, when he succeeded Prof. Masson in the Chair of English Literature at University College, London. The latter post he held till 1889, and he combined with it during several years a like professorship at Queen's College, London, the English examinership at the London University, and other educational posts. His colossal compilation, 'English Writers,' of which the first volume appeared in 1864, was never completed, either on its original plan or in the altered shape that it entered upon in 1887. But of his 'First Sketch of English Literature' there have been some thirty editions since 1873, and his 'Library of English Literature,' in five large volumes, is a sort of pendant to it. His most careful work as an editor was done in his reprint, in 1868, of Steele and Addison's 'Spectator,' with painstaking notes. The editing was superficial, and from a student's point of view only now and then satisfactory, in the sixty-three volumes of 'Morley's Universal Library,' issued by Messrs. Routledge; in the two hundred or so 3d. booklets that he superintended for "Casell's National Library"; and in the "Carisbrooke Library," of which a few volumes have appeared since 1888. But these publications have been of immense value in bringing within reach of general readers a vast amount of good literature, foreign as well as English, and, as they were intended for general reading, perhaps no objection should be made to Mr. Morley's rather reckless bowdlerizing.

Nor would it be fair to blame him severely for his shortcomings as a critic and historian, though some of these are irritating enough. Mr. Morley read so much, and, as a rule, remembered so well what he read, that he may be excused for occasional forgetfulness and confusion of dates and persons. Most of his blunders were of a sort almost inevitable to a rapid thinker and writer who has not time, or considers he has no need, to refer to his note-books or consult his authorities. Most of his mistakes may be thus explained. Others are due to his neglect of sources of information opened up after he had, to his own satisfaction, mastered his subjects. He was so familiar with Chaucer, or Spenser, or Milton in the old texts that he did not concern himself much with the fresh light thrown on them by modern commentators. In the same way, having learnt as much Anglo-Saxon or Norman or Provençal as suited his purpose as a student, he ignored the researches of better linguists. All this made his work appear slipshod, and really to some extent lessened its value. It scarcely, however, detracted from his merits as a teacher. No one who was privileged to attend his classes at King's College, or in his earlier years at University College, can forget the enthusiasm, as well as the shrewdness, with which he handled his subjects, and which he had rare skill in imparting to his pupils. Of the husks and shells of literature he made light, if he did not despise them; but this was because of the readiness, and generally the thoroughness, with which he seized the kernel, and rendered it pleasant and nourishing to every listener. With dry humour and subtle wit he interpreted the utterances of English writers from Cædmon down to Wordsworth, and connected their moods with the times in which they lived in ways that more learned exponents are apt to miss. Too much lecturing, which came to be a mere repetition of former statements with the life gone out of them, told on his later work in class; but while he deteriorated as a popular professor, he developed as a popular editor. His function was to bid all who would to partake of the great feast offered by thinkers of past generations to present-day students—using the word in its broadest and, as he felt, its truest sense; and in due course the issuing of shilling volumes and threepenny booklets came to be more congenial to him than the reiteration of stereotyped lectures.

Mr. Morley's good work as a pioneer in one direction must not be forgotten. Long before university extension lectures were thought of, he made it his business, laborious and from a pecuniary point of view unprofitable, to spend more than half of every week in travelling about the country, lecturing in schools and halls and wherever he could find appreciative audiences on the themes that were dear to him. His example is now extensively followed, and perhaps improved upon, in more business-like fashion; but it was he who led the way.

Apart from, but also a part of, his merits as a professor of English literature was his abounding sympathy with all students, as judicious as it was unselfish. One of his old pupils, a specimen of many, has a grateful remembrance of the kindness with which Mr. Morley procured for him, when he was yet a tyro, admission to the columns of Household Words, and when he had become one of its regular contributors said to him, "If you take my advice you'll give up writing for Dickens. If you go on he'll spoil any talents you have by making you a mere imitator of him. Try your hand at some more independent work." The advice was taken, and when, as the result, a book was turned out in manuscript, Mr. Morley put aside his own pressing work to spend a fortnight in carefully revising every page, and suggesting alterations that contributed greatly to such success as the volume obtained.

'ENGLISH BARDS AND SCOTCH REVIEWERS.'

65, Queen's Crescent, N.W.

THERE are at least four spurious "third editions" of this satire, and probably several others. I have now before me four copies, all of which pretend to be "third edition." One has a water-mark, "G. & R. T.," but no date. This is probably the genuine third edition. My other three copies have the water-marks of 1812, 1816, and 1817. No doubt the immense demand for the satire was a great temptation to piratical publishers; and it may be doubted whether Byron himself was very much in earnest in desiring to suppress it.

The most curious point about the book, however, and one that I do not think has been noticed before, is the fact that there is a spurious first edition of it. The satire, it is well known, was first printed in 1809, though there is no date on the title-page of it. The genuine first edition, a copy of which now lies before me, was printed on thick paper, which has no water-mark on it. About two years ago I bought at Messrs. Sotheby's a copy described as the first edition, and bearing the closest possible resemblance to the genuine book. A careful examination of it, however, disclosed the fact that it had a water-mark of 1811 (or 1812, I cannot remember exactly which it was at this distance of time) on it, and had other small variations from the genuine first edition. Why, after three or four editions of the satire had been printed, it should have been thought worth while to forge a first edition I cannot tell. Collectors of first editions at that time were not sufficiently numerous to make it worth while to forge one for their especial benefit, and ordinary purchasers at that time would probably have preferred a third or fourth edition to a first. But there is no doubt about the fact, and probably some collectors of the present day, when examining their supposed first edition, will be rather disagreeably surprised on finding that it is a spurious copy. The only edition that does not seem to have been counterfeited is the second, which is, I think, rarer than the first or any other edition, excepting, of course, the fifth. BERTRAM DOBELL.

I HAVE a copy of the original third edition of above; the title-page runs thus:—

'English Bards' and 'Scotch Reviewers'; | A Satire. | By Lord Byron. |

I had rather be a kitten, and cry, mew!
Than one of these same metre ballad-mongers.

Such shameless Bards we have; and yet 'tis true,
There are as mad, abandon'd Critics too.

Third Edition. | London: | Printed for James Cawthorne, | British Library, N° 24, Cockspur Street. | 1810. | Printed by T. Collins, Harvey's Buildings, Strand, London. |

This edition consists of 1,050 lines. It contains both preface and postscript, and foot-notes galore on almost every page, both instructive and amusing.

Your correspondent J. D. C. is quite correct in his assumption that a poet contributed a passage to the first edition omitted by Byron in the third, as the following extract from the preface testifies:—

"In the first edition of this Satire, published anonymously, fourteen lines on the subject of Bowles's Poem were written and inserted at the request of an ingenious friend of mine, who has now in the press a volume of Poetry. In the present Edition they are erased and some of my own substituted in their stead; my only reason for this being that, while I conceive would operate with any other person in the same manner: a determination not to publish with my name any production which was not entirely and exclusively my own composition."

And he concludes his preface thus:—

"As to the Edinburgh Reviewers: it would indeed, require a Hercules to crush the Hydra; but if the Author succeeds in merely 'bruising one of the heads of the Serpent,' though his own hand should suffer in the encounter, he will be amply satisfied."

The postscript is of a very fiery character—as witness the opening paragraphs:—

"I have been informed since the present edition went to Press, that my trusty and well-beloved cousins, the Edinburgh Reviewers, are preparing a most vehement critique on my poor gentle war-sister Muse, whom they have already so bedeviled with their ungodly ribaldry:

Tantæne animæ coelestibus Iram!

"I suppose I must say of Jeffrey as Sir Anthony Aguecheek said: 'as I had known he was so cunning of fence, I had seen him dambled ere I had fought him.' What a pity it is that I shall be beyond the Bosphorus, before the next number has passed the Tweed. But I yet hope to light my pipe with it in Persia.

"My Northern friends have accused me with justice, of personality towards their great literary Anthropophage, Jeffrey; but what else was to be done with him and his dirty pack, who feed by 'lying and slandering,' and slake their thirst by 'evil speaking'? I have adduced facts already well known, and of Jeffrey's mind I have stated my free opinion, nor has he thence sustained any injury;—what scavenger was ever soiled by being pelted with mud? It may be said that I quit England because I have censured these 'persons of honour and wit about town,' but I am coming back again, and their vengeance will keep hot till my return. Those who know me can testify that my motives for leaving England are very different from fears, literary or personal; those who do not, may one day be convinced. Since the publication of this thing, my name has not been concealed; I have been mostly in London, ready to answer for my transgressions, and in daily expectation of sundry cartels; but, alas! 'the age of chivalry is over,' or, in the vulgar tongue, there is no spirit now-a-days."

I have omitted to state the water-mark is "E & P 1804." ROSA SPINA.

It may be of interest to J. D. C. to know that, on referring to my copy of the third edition, 1810, "printed for James Cawthorne, British Library, No. 24, Cockspur Street," I find the water-mark to be "Pine & Thomas, 1812." It bears the Collins imprint, and contains 1,050 lines only. T. F. ALBERTONI WEBB.

ACCESS TO SCIENTIFIC JOURNALS.

17, Pembroke Square, May 18, 1894.

YOUR correspondent Mr. Joseph Jacobs draws attention to the difficulty of seeing the current scientific journals at the Library of the British Museum. He makes some suggestions which are worthy of the consideration of the Trustees. It may, however, be as well to remind him, and the public generally, that the Science Library at the South Kensington Museum, though primarily for the use of professors and students in the Royal College of Science, is readily accessible by all visitors. It contains a remarkably good collection of the current scientific periodicals, both British and foreign, and these are properly displayed on the tables in the reading room.

J. H. GLADSTONE.

SOCKET o. BOT.

Trinity College Library, Dublin.

FIFTY or sixty years ago in Dublin the rhymes in question ran thus:—

Where's your money?
In my pocket.
Where's your pocket?
I forgot it.
Get you gone, you
Bilby (or, drunken) bloothead.

T. K. ABBOTT.

Henbury, Bristol, May 14, 1894.

WHEN a child I learnt this rhyme from my mother, who was a native of Northumberland, and was born in 1800. The version I was taught was as follows:—

Who comes here?
A Grenadier.
What d' you want?
A pot of beer.
Where's your money?
I've forgot.
Get along, you drunken sot.

SPENCER GEO. PERCEVAL.

My remembrance of that old nursery rhyme goes back to close upon seventy years, and the ending was always

I've forgot.
Get you gone, you drunken sot.

I must have learnt it orally, as most children do all nursery rhymes, nor do I ever recollect seeing that one in print till you gave it in your excellent journal.

A SURREY LAD.

CRAIG CHOINNACHAN.

MR. LANG'S Craig Choinnachan is better spelt Craig Choinneachan, the mossy rock (fr. coinnach, moss, or fog). The rock of lamentation, or "keening," would be Craig Chaoineidh (verbal subst. fr. cooin). But the popular interpretation may be based on some punning version dating from Montrose's time.

J. M. COLLYER.

LADY GRANVILLE'S LETTERS.

May 15, 1894.

ON my return from a tour on the Continent my attention was directed to a letter, signed Verax, which has lately appeared in your paper. It blames me severely for having published a letter written by my mother nearly eighty years ago, which gives an account of a companion of Madame de Staël. Verax also accuses my mother of gross and unwarrantable misrepresentations, and of making ignorant and reckless statements without producing anything in support of such accusations.

I published the letter because it appeared to me a curious fact that Madame de Staël should have placed her confidence in a person who had committed forgery.

That there had been an act of forgery cannot be doubted. Verax himself does not deny it, and it was vouched for by Lady Morley, who was in a position to know the truth about it, and who was the last person in the world to allege it, unless she was sure it was true.

The fact that the lady in question remained till her death in the Duc de Broglie's family and her exemplary life favour the view that with regard to the forgery there must have been extenuating circumstances. Still, as the forgery is not denied, it seems to me to be most unwise to have called the further attention of the public to the subject. I suppressed the name, and felt assured that at this long distance of time the public would not take the trouble to ascertain it. This, however, I fear may not now be the case, in consequence of Verax's injudicious, although possibly well-meant communication to you.

F. LEVERSON GOWER.

Literary Gossip.

SIR ARCHIBALD ALISON will review Lord Wolseley's 'Marlborough' for the June Blackwood. Mr. Frederick Crowest, who recently published a study of Mozart in Blackwood's Magazine, will contribute an elaborate article on Handel as a man and as a musician, in the course of which he discusses the question which has been mooted of the possible revival of Handel's operas on the modern stage. Col. Andrew Haggard, D.S.O., will have a gossip paper on moose shooting in the Canadian Far-West in the same number, which will also contain the opening chapters of Mrs. Oliphant's new serial novel.

IN the same magazine will appear a ballad of considerable length by Mr. Laird Clowes, descriptive of the incidents in the river Pei-ho in 1859, when flag-officer Tatnall, of the U.S. navy, made use of the famous expression, "Blood is thicker than water." Some hitherto unpublished facts concerning the episode have been supplied to the author by officers who were present on the occasion, the commemoration of the thirty-fifth anniversary of which happily coincides with the visit of the U.S. cruiser Chicago to the Thames, and with the public banquet to American naval officers at St. James's Hall on the 24th inst.

IN the July number of the Cornhill Magazine will appear the first of several papers entitled 'Gleams of Memory: with some reflections,' by James Payn. Unlike the author's 'Literary Recollections,' those will deal almost exclusively with matters of social life.

THE Report of the Committee of the London Library, which will be laid before the fifty-third annual general meeting of the members on June 14th, remarks that the library has made satisfactory progress during the past year. A small increase of the staff has become necessary, and the assistants hitherto employed have received an increase upon the previous rates of pay. The amount of subscriptions in arrear has been considerably diminished. 1,500*l.* of debentures has been paid off, and the liability incurred at the purchase of the freehold of the house is now reduced to 12,500*l.* The sum spent upon books (1,514*l.*) is in excess of the amount spent for the same purpose in any previous year. The number of volumes added to the library during the year by purchase and gifts is 4,065, and 90 pamphlets. Mr. Jones, who has been in the service of the library for fifty years, has retired upon a pension of 200*l.* a year.

THE following note regarding Cardinal Newman's correspondence explains itself:—

"It may interest some of your readers to know that much of his correspondence with Dr. Russell of Maynooth has been appearing in a series of articles in the Irish Monthly, edited by that gentleman's nephew, a brother of Sir Charles Russell's (Lord Russell's, I should say).—F. M. MAITLAND."

THE Scotsman announces the death of Mr. Thomas G. Stevenson, one of the last links between the publishing trade in Edinburgh of to-day and that of the earlier decades of the present century. Mr. Stevenson's father, who served his apprenticeship with Ballantyne, was brought a good deal into contact with Sir Walter Scott, and figured as "Dear Jock" in the letters of the author of 'Waverley'; and Mr. Stevenson himself was fond of relating his own personal experiences of Sir Walter. He was an authority on the subject of old Scottish literature, and in his day he published many important works of antiquarian and historical interest. His wide knowledge was scarcely less conspicuous than his painstaking and accurate habits.

AN article entitled 'On a Mission for Kossuth,' from the pen of Mr. Stillman, will appear in the June Century. It will be illustrated by a portrait and a facsimile letter.

THE proposal that the contributors to the 'Dictionary of National Biography' should entertain their publisher, Mr. George Smith, at dinner has been cordially received by the whole body of contributors, who are over two hundred in number. Of these about one-half are expected to be present at the dinner, which will take place at the Westminster Palace Hotel on Wednesday, June 6th. Those who wish to attend should secure a ticket not later than May 23rd.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON & Co. have nearly ready the first volume of the English translation, by Mr. Robert H. Sherard, of the 'Memoirs to serve for the History of Napoleon I. from 1802 to 1815' of Baron Claude F. de Meneval, Napoleon's private secretary. His grandson, the present Baron de Meneval, has edited the work, but the original MS. has been allowed to stand almost in its entirety. The first volume will be speedily followed by the second and third volumes. In the preface the author remarks that he will describe nothing of which he was not an eye-witness or the direct depository. It will contain details concerning Napoleon's childhood and early life, his private life during Meneval's time of service, his opinions on men and matters, and numerous letters from him on various subjects. Meneval also describes some of the campaigns in which he accompanied the Emperor. He gives many anecdotes concerning well-known personages, as well in the literary, artistic, and scientific world as in military and political circles. Some statements which the author makes with reference to Bourrienne's 'Memoirs' and "the manuscript which came from St. Helena in a manner unknown" are, it is said, likely to be interesting. Autograph letters, portraits, and hitherto unpublished documents will be included in the work.

IN addition to the candidates for the Adams Professorship of Arabic at Cambridge whom we have previously named, we should mention Mr. Alexander G. Ellis, M.A., of Queens' College, Cambridge, the assistant in charge of the Arabic literature in the British Museum.

THE Clarendon Press will shortly issue an annotated edition, by Prof. Buchheim, of Halm's famous drama 'Griseldis.' The introduction will contain, besides a critical analysis of the play with its Arthurian background, a short biographical and critical sketch of the author, and the version of the Griselda story as told by Boccaccio and Petrarch, together with a general account of the literary treatment of the subject from Chaucer to our own days.

THE Oriental schools of Europe are taking advantage of the railways giving them connexion with Constantinople to make visits there with their pupils. Four professors and eight students of the Oriental School of Buda-Pesth lately went to the Turkish capital. Our Oriental schools in London may do the same when they get pupils. The distance of London from Oriental sites is not very much greater than that of Paris.

THE characters of Mr. Henry Cresswell's new novel, 'A Precious Scamp,' to be published by Messrs. Hutchinson, are chosen from the world of business men and speculators. The instability of rapidly-made fortunes is its main theme, including the story of a fraud executed with curious ingenuity.

A GROUP of German and Swiss professors have issued a circular asking for subscriptions towards a Bürger monument. June 8th, 1894, will be the hundredth anniversary of the death of Gottfried August Bürger, "the great master of the popular German ballad literature." It is suggested that the monument should be erected over his grave in Göttingen. It was in Göttingen that the young student of theology was made a ballad-writer by the study of Bishop Percy's 'Reliques,' and here he wrote his 'Lenore.' The grave is now marked only by a weather-beaten column. The circular is signed, amongst others, by Schnorr von Carolsfeld and Karl Franzel, of Berlin, J. G. Fischer, of Stuttgart, Müncker, of Munich, and the Swiss literary historian D. Büchhold, of Zurich. Subscriptions will be thankfully received by the Dieterich'sche Buchhandlung at Göttingen, the house which originally published Bürger's poems.

THE decease is announced of M. Johnson, for many years the London correspondent of the Figaro.

THE Grolier Club of New York proposes to form an exhibition, the Critic says, of the first editions of one hundred of the greatest works in English literature.

IN the report of the Curators of the Bodleian the Shelley collection, given by Lady Shelley and mentioned in these columns about a year ago, fills a conspicuous place. Most of the other facts chronicled regarding the library have been already mentioned in these columns. Mr. Hussey has presented some valuable coins, and Mr. Oman has nearly finished his catalogue of Anglo-Saxon coins.

A Bullettino Senese di Storia Patria is to be issued by the Accademia dei Rozzi.

THE Amir of Afghanistan is engaged in writing his autobiography, and has already completed fifteen chapters, bringing events up to the close of the Durand Mission. The work is said to throw a curious light on the relations between Abdurrahman and the Indian newspapers at the time of his exile in Russian Turkistan.

THE Parliamentary Papers this week include Return showing the Number of Experiments performed on Living Animals in 1893 (4d.); Code of Regulations for Evening Continuation Schools, England and Wales (3d.); and Convention between Great Britain and Austria-Hungary for the Establishment of International Copyright (1d.).

SCIENCE

Civil Engineering Series.—Tidal Rivers. By W. H. Wheeler. (Longmans & Co.)

A SERIES dealing comprehensively and concisely with the principal branches of civil engineering would be valuable to engineers in practice as well as to those studying for the profession. Books, however, on bridges, tunnels, railways in mountainous districts, irrigation works, and water supply are much more needed than the subject which has been chosen for the first volume of the proposed series; for tidal rivers have been fully dealt with in tolerably recent publications, to which reference has been made by Mr. Wheeler. Moreover, in such a series non-tidal rivers and canals would have fitly been comprised in the same volume with tidal rivers, thereby devoting a single book to inland navigation; and these three subjects might have received amply adequate treatment in the 455 pages over which the present work extends.

The book is nominally divided into three parts, namely, (1) hydraulics, (2) improvement, and (3) navigation; but this judicious sequence is not adhered to in the arrangement of the chapters. The first chapter reveals great carelessness in spelling well-known names (which is continued through the book), and negligence in revising proofs. Thus we always find Whewal, Sir James Douglas, and Bouncieu for the French engineer Bouniceau, and occasionally Tellford, Humphrys, Abbott, Airey, and Scott-Russel; whilst La Mailleraye, a place on the Seine frequently referred to, has been converted into St. Mailleraye, and Capt. Eads, the American civil engineer, has been promoted to be General Eads long after his death. Confidence in the accuracy of the author and in his acquaintance with original authorities is naturally shaken by these mistakes; and, unfortunately, the existence of more serious errors is not calculated to restore it. For instance, experiments on the Seine are attributed to Mr. Franzius, the engineer of the Weser; the distance apart of the crests of the two tidal waves, on opposite sides of the earth, is stated to be 5,400 miles, whereas half the circumference of the earth is about 12,440 miles; and the width of the extensive delta of the Mississippi is said to be only two miles. Students will be puzzled by the statement, on p. 49,

"that the maximum velocity on the Elbe lies at the surface, or very near it; that the maximum velocity is directly above the bed, and the mean at four-ninths of the depth above the bed"; and persons with only slight scientific knowledge will be astonished to learn that "as the pressure of the atmosphere is decreased and the mercury rises the water in the ocean is depressed."

The book opens with a brief sketch of the development of hydraulic science and references to some of the literature on the subject. In the second chapter several well-known works are enumerated, concerning not only tidal rivers, but also canals, harbours, docks, and lighthouses; whilst the next chapter treats of the flow of water. The progress of the flood tide up a river is a complicated problem, for the tide in its gradual rise backs up the descending stream; and in order to obtain a steady influx, and to extend the tidal influence to the furthest practicable distance up a river, the channel should gradually diminish inland. The author, however, only deals with the case of steady downward flow in a uniform channel, and considers the simplest formula most applicable to tidal rivers. He overlooks the fact that the formulae drawn up by various hydraulicians are purely empirical, being based upon observations, and states as a mathematical axiom that "resistance is proportional to the square of the velocity with which the water is moving." He proceeds, on p. 48, to equate the accelerating force of gravity to the retarding forces, arriving at a formula $S \times g = R \times V^2 \times C$, which, in making the velocity vary inversely as the hydraulic radius for the same slope, is manifestly erroneous; is at variance with Chezy's formula, $V = C \sqrt{RS}$, which is given on pp. 7, 57, and 446; and is inconsistent with the self-evident propositions which he gives as deductions from his formula, such as "the greater the hydraulic mean depth, the greater the velocity." In the discussion of the variable motion of the particles of a stream, cause and effect are confused; for the whirling motion is due to irregularities in the river-bed, and not the cause of them; and pools and shoals in rivers are the result of differences in the strata forming the bed, or variations in width. Some useful particulars are given in chap. iv. of the amount of material carried along by various rivers. In the following chapter the subject of tides is considered; and Mr. Wheeler very properly contrasts the navigable condition of rivers flowing into tideless seas, such as the Nile, the Mississippi, the Danube, and others, with the Thames, the Humber, the Severn, and other tidal rivers. After a few simple definitions and general statements as to the tides, the theory of the tides is explained as follows:—

"The attractive force of the luminaries is at its maximum at the meridian or part directly under them, and diminishes to the horizon, and is less at the nadir than at the zenith. The water, therefore, being drawn up by the luminaries and pressed laterally by terrestrial gravity, assumes the form of an elliptical spheroid."

It is not explained why terrestrial gravity should only exert its attraction laterally, or why the tidal wave should appear at all at the nadir; and the paragraph indicates that the author has not mastered the equilibrium theory of the tides, in which the second tide is explained by the earth being drawn away by attraction from the waters on its far side, just as the waters on the side nearest to the attracting mass are drawn away from the earth. The author exhibits his ignorance of the elementary properties of the ellipse in the following remarkable passage:—

"The earth, with the moon, revolves round the sun in a year, and her orbit also being elliptical, is sometimes nearer to the sun, and at other periods of the year further away. The periods of perihelion, or nearness, are at the equinoxes in March and September; and she is furthest away, or in aphelion, at midsummer."

Mr. Wheeler is clearly unaware that in an elliptical orbit there can be only one point of minimum distance from the sun, at the opposite extremity of the major axis to the point of maximum distance, and that the earth is, therefore, nearest to the sun in midwinter, the actual date in 1893 being December 31st.

In the chapters on the physical conditions of tidal rivers, and on bars and littoral drift, a considerable amount of useful information has been collected from various sources, wherein Mr. Wheeler is a safer guide than in theories. The statement that, "although there may be exceptions, the material which a river has to deal with is supplied from the interior, and not from the sea," is not in accordance with facts in the case of tidal rivers. Bars at their mouth are of marine origin; and some tidal rivers, as pointed out by the author, are deflected near their outlet by drift along the coast. Moreover, in some instances, considerable quantities of material are brought into rivers by the flood tide. Mr. Wheeler, however, is anxious to prove, in his chapter on training, that training works are incapable of effecting more than a transposition of sand in an estuary, and consequently endeavours to explain away any facts unfavourable to his theory. He supports his view by stating "that training does not create material"; but, unfortunately, most tidal rivers provide ample alluvium, derived from inland or from the sea-coast, to produce large accretions in portions of an estuary sheltered by training walls or any other means; and Mr. T. Stevenson, whom he quotes in support of his opinion, expressed opposite views very strongly in an address delivered at Edinburgh in 1884, to which the author makes no allusion. In discussing the formation of bars of sand, after propounding a peculiar view as to the action of the current, Mr. Wheeler proceeds to say:—

"Bars having been once formed and subsequently maintained by the action set up by their shape, if removed by dredging, are not liable to be reformed, unless in situations where there is a strong littoral drift, and the ebb current is not sufficient to keep this out of the channel."

It is difficult to understand how a bar can be formed and maintained by the action set up by its shape, or why a bar should not, after being levelled by dredging, be formed again by the same causes which originally produced it. His objection to the "axiom that the movement of littoral drift is in the direction of the prevailing wind" is based on the ground that, on the English coasts, the drift is in the direction of the flood tide, whereas the prevailing wind throughout the country is south-west. The strongest winds, however, blowing from the sea, which really affect the littoral drift, happen to coincide in direction with the flood tide along the British coasts; whilst the author appears to entertain a highly exaggerated notion of the tidal action, in saying that

"every particle of water is set in motion from the surface to the bottom. The momentum given to such an enormous mass of material is something stupendous, and can hardly be realized, even when its effect on our shores is considered."

In chap. viii., on the principles of improvement, Mr. Wheeler prefaces quotations of the principles laid down by various authorities by a series of principles drawn up by himself, which, however, are couched in such vague terms as to be of little practical value, as, for instance, "2. That all schemes for improving or altering channels should be designed in accordance with the laws of nature as defined by science." In the chapter on training rivers a description of works on the tideless Mississippi is inserted; and the unduly long chapter on river improvement contains accounts of the works in the Danubian delta and of the Manchester Ship Canal, which, although interesting in themselves, are out of place in a book on tidal rivers, and might lead persons to imagine that the problems involved in the improvement of tidal and delta-forming rivers must be very similar. The three practical chapters on dredging, buoying and lighting, and surveying tidal rivers contain much valuable information; and the interesting little chapter on tidal models refers to a novel method of investigating the flow of currents, and the effects of training works in estuaries. The final chapter, on examples of river improvement, extending over ninety-three pages, should have been subdivided, and it ought to have proceeded the two chapters relating to navigation; whilst the chapter on surveying should have been placed earlier in the book.

In appendix ii. Mr. Wheeler has tried to supply a glossary of French technical terms relating to tidal rivers and navigation, a good idea in itself, but one which requires care and a fair knowledge of technical French. His competence for this self-imposed task may be gauged by the two following titles of French publications in his book, which might easily be multiplied, namely, 'Principles d'Hydrauliques' and 'Memoir sur la Puissance Hydraulic des fleuves a Marée.' After this we can hardly be astonished to find such words as "Bois (creek)," "Dragage," "Douce eau," "Fanal fixée," and "Oueste," which no student will ever find in any French book, and which a reference to an ordinary French dictionary would have corrected; whilst other expressions, such as "Eau fraîche," "Eau morte," "Eau vive," and "Phare flamboyant," do not bear the meanings which the author has given them. It is much to be regretted that Mr. Wheeler, from want of ordinary care, ignorance of the limits of his knowledge, and theoretical views based on insufficient data, has introduced numerous errors into his book; for the practical part of the volume, though admitting of better arrangement and less repetition, contains a good deal of valuable information, collected largely from the Proceedings of the Institution of Civil Engineers, and also from various other sources, together with the results of the author's own experience.

The publishers' part of the work has been well performed, for the print is clear and good, and the numerous woodcuts illustrating the text are most distinct. The only matter for regret is that the plans of some rivers have been divided into two, and the plan of the Mersey into three parts, which might have been avoided by merely turning the figure round in most cases, and by one or two folding plates. If the succeeding volumes announced by the publishers are carefully written in a concise and competent manner, the series will prove of great advantage to the civil engineering profession.

A LETTER OF GALILEO.

Salù.

READERS of the Athenæum may like to see the following new letter of Galileo:—

ILLUSTRIOUS SIR,—As I wrote to your Lordship in my last letter, I had sought to induce a friend of mine to undertake the instruction of the daughter of the illustrious Marquis, but finally he has written to me three times to excuse himself from accepting the offer, as you will see by the letter which I send you in order that you may make its contents known to the Marquis. I know of no one else who would be adapted; I wrote about it to Signor Guidobaldi so that he might see if there was a suitable person to be found in Urbino or elsewhere, but I fear it will be very difficult. I wish that I could be near that gentleman, as I should account it a very great good fortune to have the honour of cultivating so rare a talent; but as nothing can be done at this distance, I must content myself with my willingness to be of use. Your Lordship is eagerly expected here; I do not know for which of our sirs you make yourself so long desired, tormenting us by keeping us between hopes and fears. I beg you either to come or at least not to hold any longer in suspense your many servants and friends. Please kiss the hands of the Signori Nicchisoli and favour me again with some command. May our Lord prosper you. Your obliged servant,

GALILEO GALILEI.

Padua, 14 June, 1594.

To whom the letter was addressed I cannot say, but the Marquis whose young daughter the writer shows so charming and modest a desire to teach was the Marquis Pallavicini, who was then living at the palace near Saldò, which had been built by his father, generalissimo of the Venetian forces. The letter was found in a sack of old documents hidden away in a loft during the revolutionary era of 1796, when the palace was already in the possession of the Martinengo-Cesarecos, to whom it was sold in the middle of the seventeenth century. But the Pallavicinis left behind a great quantity of old letters. That of Galileo has been only recently discovered.

E. MARTINENGO-CESARESCO.

SOCIETIES.

ROYAL.—May 10.—Right Hon. Lord Kelvin, President, in the chair, followed by Sir J. Evans, Treasurer.—Prof. Mendeleeff (Foreign Member) and Mr. B. N. Peach were admitted into the Society.—The list of candidates recommended for election into the Society was read from the chair.—The following papers were read: 'Preliminary Report on the Results obtained with the Prismatic Cameras during the Total Eclipse of the Sun, April 16th, 1893,' by Prof. Lockyer.—'Researches on Modern Explosives: Preliminary Communication,' by Messrs. W. Macnab and E. Ristori.—'On the Leicester Earthquake of August 4th, 1893,' by Mr. C. Davison.—'The Total Solar Eclipse of April 16th, 1893: Report on Results obtained with the 8½" Spectroscopes,' by Capt. Hills.—'The Composition of Atmospheres which extinguish Flame,' by Prof. Clowes.—and 'The Stresses and Strains in Isotropic Elastic Solid Ellipsoids in Equilibrium under Bodily Forces derivable from a Potential of the Second Degree,' by Mr. C. Chree.

GEOLOGICAL.—May 2.—Dr. H. Woodward, President, in the chair.—Col. F. T. Hobson was elected a Fellow.—The following communications were read: 'Carrock Fell: a Study in the Variation of Igneous Rock-masses: Part I. The Gabbro,' by Mr. A. Harker.—'The Geology of Monte Chaberton,' by Mr. A. M. Davies and Mr. J. W. Gregory.—and 'Cone in Cone: how it occurs in the Devonian (?) Series in Pennsylvania, U.S.A., with further Details of its Structure, Varieties, &c.' by Mr. W. B. Grealey.

SOCIETY OF ANTIQUARIES.—April 24.—Anti-quary Meeting.—Mr. A. W. Franks, President, in the chair.—Rev. Dr. Sparrow Simpson and Mr. J. G. Waller were appointed scrutators of the ballot.—The following were elected members of Council and officers of the Society for the ensuing year: President, Mr. A. W. Franks; Treasurer, Dr. E. Freshfield; Director, Mr. F. G. Hilton Price; Secretary, Mr. C. H. Read; Other Members of Council, Lord Dillon, Sir E. A. H. Lechmere, Sir J. Evans, Sir O. Roberts, Rev. Canon Browne, Messrs. Alma Tadema, Brabrook, Fox, Hilton, Keyser, Leveson-Gower, Lyte, Middleton, Norman, Payne, Price, Stephenson, and Welch.—The President delivered his annual address, in which he referred in suitable terms to deceased Fellows, and passed in review the principal events connected with the Society and its administration during the past year. He also referred to the disastrous proposal for submerging the beautiful Island of Philæ and its temples by the construction of a dam across the Nile immediately below it.

May 4.—Mr. A. W. Franks, President, in the chair.—Rev. Dr. Cox exhibited four small azulejos, or Spanish-Moreco tiles. These tiles were well enamelled in various colours and of unusual and effective patterns. They were found in the debris of the once famous Cistercian abbey of Meaux, in Holderness. They are of early sixteenth century date, and could not have found their way to Yorkshire until shortly before the dissolution of the monasteries. Spanish tiles of this character have hitherto only been found in the west of England, chiefly at Bristol, with which port Spain had a considerable trade. Their appearance in Yorkshire so far inland is not a little remarkable. Dr. Cox considered that they had probably come to the monastery with Spanish wine up the small canals that the monks had cut to connect them with the river Hull. Two cases of similar tiles were kindly lent by the authorities of the South Kensington Museum to illustrate the Meaux examples. One of these cases had fine specimens from Spain, including a purely Moorish one, circa 1300. The other case had a collection from several Bristol churches, which had lately been acquired.—Mr. Copeland exhibited a number of Anglo-Saxon antiquities from Grove Ferry, Kent, which were described by Mr. Payne, who also exhibited other antiquities of the same period found at Teynham and Dover.—Mr. Hurd, through Mr. Lender, exhibited a fine and perfect Roman pig of lead found on Matlock Moor, Derbyshire.—Rev. Dr. Cox gave an account of the finding of this pig on March 24th, close to the place where one was found last century. It was very near the surface, and a large stone lay over it. Dr. Cox thought that this and others discovered in like places had been hidden by fraudulently-minded workmen. He considered that this pig afforded another proof of the correctness of the late Mr. Thompson Watkin's opinion in placing the Derbyshire station of Lutudar at Wirksworth, and not at Chesterfield. Immediately below where the pig was found was proof that it had been smelted on the spot.—Mr. Haverfield also made some remarks upon this important discovery, of which the following is an abstract:—The new-found pig of lead is inscribed with a formula, which, like all such formulae, is abbreviated. We have the names of the manufacturer or lessee and of the mine in the genitive, and we may complete it "the lead of P. Rubius Alascentus from the mine of Lutudarum." The inscription being (divested of ligatures) P. RYBBI. ARASCANTI. METALLI. LUTUDARENSIS. The last word stands for Lutudarensis, a being dropped phonetically, and is omitted, according to the common rule, for want of space. Lutudarum is the mining district which we used to call Lutudar, mentioned in the Ravenna geographer and on several pigs of lead, and lying undoubtedly somewhere in Derbyshire. The peculiarity of the Lutudarensian mines, compared with the other British lead workings, was that they were apparently worked by lessees, and not directly by the State, the owner of minerals in Roman law. To the present day the Derbyshire mining laws have peculiar features, but no explanation has ever been offered as to the difference in working under the Romans; indeed, this difference has been hitherto overlooked. The date of the pig exhibited is uncertain. The lettering is good, but not necessarily very early, and may belong to the second century, though criticism of this sort is usually unprofitable.

MICROSCOPICAL.—April 18.—Mr. A. D. Michael, President, in the chair.—Dr. W. H. Dallinger directed attention to a stereoscopic photomicrograph of Heliopelta which had been presented to the Society by Dr. W. C. Borden, of New York.—Dr. Dallinger read a short paper from Dr. H. G. Pfaff in reference to a method which he had adopted for the examination of some of the old immersion objectives.—Mr. J. W. Brown exhibited a home-made microscope.—Prof. F. J. Bell read a letter from Mr. C. J. Pound describing the laboratories of the Stock Institute of Queensland, which had recently been instituted for the purpose of investigating the nature and causes of animal diseases in that colony.—Mr. J. G. Grenfell read a paper 'On the Tracks, Threads, and Films of Oscillatoria and Dinkonia,' illustrating his subject by diagrams and specimens.—Mr. T. Comber and the President made some remarks on Mr. Grenfell's paper.

METEOROLOGICAL.—May 18.—Mr. R. Inwards, President, in the chair.—Mr. W. Ellis read a paper 'On the Relative Frequency of Different Velocities of Wind,' in which he discussed the anemometer records of the Greenwich Observatory for the five years 1888-1892, with the view of ascertaining the number of hours during which the wind blew with each of the different hourly velocities experienced during the period. The results of this discussion show that the wind blew for the greatest number of hours with the hourly velocities of ten and eleven miles.—Mr. W. Marriott gave an account of a series of observations 'On the Audibility of "Big Ben" at West Norwood,' which he had carried on for five years. The clock tower at Westminster is five and a half miles distant from the point of observation in a north-by-west direction. The observations were 96 in number, and were made at the hours of 9 A.M. and 3 P.M. The bell could be heard more frequently in the evening than in the morning, and on Sundays it was more frequently audible than on weekdays. The direction of the wind most favourable for hearing Big Ben was between west and north. The observations were also discussed in relation to temperature, moisture, cloud, and barometric pressure.—A paper by Mr. A. W. Moore was also read 'On Earth Temperatures at Cronkbourne, Isle of Man, 1880-1889.'

MATHEMATICAL.—May 10.—Prof. Greenhill, V.P., in the chair.—The following communications were made: 'On the Kinematical Discrimination of the Eucclidean and Non-Eucclidean Geometries,' by Mr. A. E. H. Love, 'Permutations on a Regular Polygon,' by Major F. A. Macmahon, 'The Stability of a Tube,' by Prof. Greenhill (Dr. J. Larmor in the chair), and 'Researches in the Calculus of Variations: Part V., The Discrimination of Maxima and Minima Values of Integrals with Arbitrary Values of the Limiting Variations; Part VI., The Theory of Discontinuous or Compounded Solutions,' by Mr. E. P. Culverwell.

PHYSICAL.—May 11.—Mr. W. Bally, V.P., in the chair.—A mathematical communication 'On Electromagnetic Induction in Plane, Cylindrical, and Spherical Current Sheets, and its Representation by Moving Trails of Images: Part I. General Equations,' by Mr. O. H. Bryan, was read by Dr. C. V. Burton, who also explained some of the parts in greater detail.—A paper 'On Dielectrics' was read by Mr. R. Appleyard.

HONORARY.—May 9.—Annual Meeting.—Sir H. W. Peck, Bart., in the chair.—Messrs. L. W. de Grave, L. London, C. D. La Touche, and E. P. Lejeune, Messrs. E. L. de Grave and J. Gilligan, and the Signet Library, Edinburgh, were elected Fellows.—The report of the Council and the President's address were read.—Sir H. Layard was re-elected President, and the Council and other officers were elected.

BRITISH ORNITHOLOGISTS' UNION.—May 9.—Annual General Meeting.—Mr. F. L. Selater in the chair.—The report of the Council gave a flourishing account of the finances, a good balance having been carried over after payment of the expenditure on the 18th for 1893. One vacancy in the Union had been occasioned by death and four by resignation since the last anniversary, and the Union was stated (then) to consist of 240 ordinary Members, besides the Honorary and Foreign Members.—There were seventeen new candidates for election.—The new Members having been balloted for, Lord Lifford was re-elected President and Mr. F. D. Godman Secretary for the ensuing year; and Lieut.-Col. L. H. Irby and Mr. W. T. Blanford were placed on the Committee in lieu of two retiring Members.—It was agreed that a new (seventh) series of the Ibis should be commenced in 1895, with the thirty-seventh volume, and that Mr. P. L. Selater and Mr. Howard Saunders should be appointed joint editors of it.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

- | | |
|--------|---|
| Mon. | Surveyors Institution, 8.—A Treaty concerning the Primary Cause of the Depression in Trade and Agriculture, Mr. T. W. Huxtable. |
| — | Aristotelian 8.—Symposium, 'The Nature and Stage of Evolution.' |
| — | Geographical, 8.—'Journey in the Madras, Southern Arabia, Mr. J. Theodore Bent.' |
| Tues. | Royal Institution, 3.—'The Modern Microscope,' Dr. W. H. Dallinger. |
| — | Statistical, 7.—'Statistics of Litterature in England and Wales since 1848,' Mr. J. Macdonell. |
| — | Civil Engineers, 8.—'Recent Types of Ferry Steamers,' Mr. A. Brown. 'The Hibernian Ferry-Boat Wreck and Repair,' Mr. C. Jones. Ballot for Members. |
| — | Society of Arts, 8.—'Decorative Art in connection with Elementary Education,' Mr. J. Inigo. |
| Wed. | Geological, 8.—'Geography of the Libyan Desert of Egypt,' Capt. H. G. Lyons. 'Geology of South-Western Africa and the occurrence of Eumecurus in South Africa,' Mr. D. D. Duggan. 'Contributions to the Geology of British East Africa. Part I. The General Geology of Mount Kenya,' Mr. J. W. Gregory. |
| — | Society of Arts, 8.—'Liquor Pools,' Mr. U. Macdonell. |
| — | Public, 8.—'The Causes of the Yag and their Relation to European Fashions of Hides and Hairs,' Mr. F. Henslow. 'The Sacred Wells of Man,' Mr. A. W. Moore. 'Maxx Iron,' Mr. G. W. W. W. |
| — | Antiquarian, 8.—'Norman Sculptured Capital from Lower Priory, Essex,' Mr. H. Allen. 'Unique Medal of Lodovico, Duke of Urbino, in connection with the order of the Garzer,' Mr. J. C. Robinson. 'Historical Notices of Robert Dillington, Bishop of Bath and Wells, the Dean of Wells.' |
| Thurs. | Royal Institution, 3.—'Egyptian Decorative Art,' Prof. W. M. Flinders Petrie. |
| — | Society of Arts, 4.—'The Commerce of Spain in Relation to the Trade of the British Empire,' Mr. C. S. Leslie. |
| — | Electrical Engineers, 8.—Discussion on 'Cost of Electrical Energy.' |
| — | Historical, 8.—'The Educational Organisation of the Middle Ages in England,' Mr. A. G. Little. |
| Fri. | United Service Institution, 3.—'Lectures from the Past for the Future,' Lieut.-Col. G. F. R. Henderson. |
| — | Architectural Association, 7. |
| — | Society of Arts, 8.—'New South Wales,' Mr. J. Inigo. |
| — | Royal Institution, 8.—'The Development of the Astronomical Telescope,' Mr. H. Grubb. |
| Sat. | Royal Institution, 2.—'The Stage and Society,' Mr. R. W. Lowe. Musical, 3.—'Recitation of Poems.' |

Strius Gossip.

THE second soirée of the Royal Society, to which ladies are invited, is announced for Wednesday, June 13th.

THE following fifteen candidates were selected on Thursday, the 10th inst., by the Council of the Royal Society, to be recommended for election into the Society:—Mr. W. Bateson, Mr. G. A. Boulenger, Dr. J. R. Bradford, Mr. H. L. Calender, Prof. W. W. Cheyne, Mr. R. E. Froude, Prof. M. J. M. Hill, Prof. J. V. Jones, Mr. A. E. H. Love, Mr. R. Lydekker, Mr. F. C. Penrose, Dr. D. H. Scott, the Rev. F. J. Smith, Mr. J. W. Swan, and Mr. V. H. Veley.

A MISSION charged with collecting natural history specimens in Greece, under the conduct of Mr. Ottomar Reiner, director of the museum at Sarajevo, in Bosnia, is now engaged in explorations which will be extended over four months.

THE June number of the Century will contain an article on Mr. Edison's kineto-phonograph, with an introduction by Mr. Thomas A. Edison.

THE late M. Tempel's second periodical comet, which was discovered by him on July 3rd, 1873, found to have a period of about 5½ years, and observed again in the autumn of 1878, but not seen at the returns due 1883 and 1889, was re-detected by Mr. Finlay at the Cape Observatory on the night of the 8th inst. Its appearance is described as circular, less than 1' in diameter, brightness that of a star of the eleventh magnitude or somewhat fainter, with central condensation, but no tail. At the present return it will be reckoned as comet c, 1894. The distance from the earth is now diminishing, but that from the sun increasing.

FINE ARTS

THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

(Second Notice.—Figure Pictures and Portraits.)

STARTING in Gallery I. to look at the remaining historical and genre pictures, which occupy more space than anything except the portraits on the walls at Burlington House, we first come upon Mr. J. W. Nicul's Last of the Florencia, 1588 (No. 5), a party of kilted Highland peasants hooting out of a furious sea a treasure chest wrecked in a vessel belonging to the Spanish Armada. The composition—a quality not so carefully studied in the Academy as it ought to be—is so good, while the expressions and attitudes are so appropriate and sincere, that the drawing deserved far more care. Much of it unfortunately is bad, and the painting tends to be dirty. The effect is too dull for out-of-doors light.—Harbour Steps (33), Mr. T. Graham's clever design, is, like too many of the contributions to this exhibition, merely a sketch for a picture, displaying commendable feeling for colour of a conventional sort, but otherwise coarsely touched, somewhat dirty in its local colours, and, where it is drawn at all—there is no drawing in the face or the draperies—so badly drawn that Mr. Graham's reputation as a draughtsman, even of the humblest sort, has yet to be made.—By the Duck Pond (36) is the uncouth title of a rough effort of Mr. H. H. La Thangue's to render the effect of sunlight on a country girl's flesh and red dress against a sheet of bright blue water. Barring its crudities of draughtsmanship and surface, it is not ineffective, so far as it goes; but, like a number of pictures of this class by artists of Mr. La Thangue's standing, the canvas employed is at least four times as big as would have perfectly well sufficed for anything which is represented, or even suggested; and in the unhappy disproportion of beauty, knowledge, and completeness to the bigness of its canvas, The Song of a Lark and the Blind Girl (504), by the same artist, is even more outrageous than 'By the Duck Pond.' The employment of these monstrous canvases seems to be the outcome of a sort of pictorial gambling. Big pictures are more likely to catch the public eye than those of reasonable size, and for the sake of being looked at the painters incur the risk of not being hung at all. The danger is, of course, considerable, but it is lessened when the work is a showy one, calculated to be seen at a distance, and the subject is fetching. The result is disastrous to art, and it becomes more so every year. It is needless to say that the remedy is in the hands of the Academicians. Mr. La Thangue has likewise contributed Some Poor People (545), which, like most pictures of its kind, is curiously unininteresting and ugly; but it is far more modest than most of its class, far superior to the mass of them in its harmonies of colour and tone, and more homogeneous.

With all its cleverness and conventional chic, the Contadina Italiana (39) of Mr. A. Salvetti is coarse and dirty in touch and colour, defects which are common in the Academy. To find an Italian "pot-boiler" of this low type in Gallery I. at Burlington House is, indeed, an unpleasant experience for the critic.—The painting in Mr. Lutyens's Vicar's Daughter (41), a life-size, whole-length damsel in a white dress, is by no means so pure and bright as it might be; on the other hand, the maiden's face is extremely sweet and natural, while the demeanour and attitude of the figure are spontaneously designed and fresh. The worst fault of the work is the treatment of the draperies, which might profitably be repainted from the ground.—The homogeneity of the next picture we have to mention, No. 49, Mr. W. Langley's group of an old woman consoling a girl weeping for the loss of her sailor lover, is a striking contrast with the brightness of No. 36 and the dinginess of Mr. Lutyens's draperies. Mr. Langley's work is, perhaps, the best example the year has produced of the School of Newlyn. It formerly included some capital young painters, the best of whom have already deserted, while some of those who were highly promising and did well for a time have incurred that sort of nemesis which overtakes all art not based on serious, earnest, and severe studies. Even Mr. Bramley, whose abilities no one will deny, has scarcely escaped a catastrophe which it will be well for Mr. Langley to contemplate. In the painting of No. 49 the influence of the lamp is ominously obvious. The stone pier is, of course, that of Newlyn, with its little beacon, and the effect of summer calm upon the lovely Gwanna Lake is well felt, while the moon and sun contend in filling the evening sky with the warmest light. The passion of the sorrowing girl is touchingly represented, sincere, and simple; the tenderness of the old woman is as pathetic as it is natural; her face, too, is well painted; the whole is homogeneous and good in colour and tone, while the design embodies the sorrowful motive of the motto, "Never morning were to evening but some heart did break."—The homely spontaneity of No. 49 is acceptable, but the artificiality of Mr. C. E. Perugini's The World Forgetting (62) is most unwelcome. This group of lovers on a bench is really too sentimental. Not even Mr. Marcus Stone is so sentimental as Mr. Perugini, whose background seems to be part of an opera scene; whose lovers are unknown out of operatic Arcadia; while in the whole of this extremely pretty picture there is not a trace of masculine spirit.—Mr. J. W. Waterhouse's Field Flowers (82) embodies most of the merits of that painter, keeping, colour, and a broad, though rather heavy touch.—Those pretty trifles, Summer Fruit (90) and Winter Berries (92), represent Mr. Marcus Stone at his weakest, and are painted like chromolithographs. If this graceful artist indulges in such facile amenities as these, what can be expected of him in A Stolen Kiss (197), where a nice young gentleman seems to be beginning a courtship by snatching a kiss from a damsel sleeping, or pretending to sleep, on a garden bench? It was only last year that, to the delight of his friends, Mr. Stone married those very foolish young persons, his models of many years. Can it be that he has found a second pair of pretty fools whose amorous career he intends to illustrate in all its tender incidents?—A clever, thinly treated, and insufficient sketch, Autumn (93) is the work of Mr. L. P. Smythe, an artist who ought to do better than paint such a group of children burning woods in a landscape so feeble that it has not even so much solidity as the Rita (100) of Mr. W. Spindler, a clever sort of Salon picture, a skilful harmony in blue, rose, and grey. We notice with pleasure that 'Rita' is placed in a frame the silver of which is in excellent keeping with the coloration of the picture it encloses. In a few other instances similar good judgment is apparent, and the painters have wisely harmonized their pictures and their frames. Nothing is commoner at the Salon than this; nothing is rarer at the Academy, or, indeed, in private English collections.

A very ambitious, highly artistic, and interesting exercise in colour and tone is Mr. J. H. Lorimer's The Eleventh Hour (104). The bride is gaunt and elderly, and the child bridesmaids are unnecessarily quaint; still, despite its crude handling and the extreme slightness of the work, the technique of this picture is not without valuable indications that Mr. Lorimer paints better than he ever did before and with a fine perception of his subject, its coloration, harmonies of tint and tone, together with truthful breadth and lighting of a choice sort. The illumination and limpidity of the picture are obviously due to nature studied with care, sympathy, and feeling. Chromatically this is a capital exercise in variously warm whites of differing tints. In these respects 'The Eleventh Hour' is one of the most interesting and instructive, as well as one of the very few original pictures in the exhibition.—Another original picture hangs near it, Mr. S. Goetze's St. Sebastian (116), two fair and stately ladies lamenting over the corpse of the martyr, which, stretched upon the funeral pyre, lies supine in the arms of one of the mourners. The pathos of the design is intense; the composition of the three figures and the landscape beyond the pyre is remarkably good; there is passion in the ladies' attitudes, expressions, and actions; and the poetry of the whole is heightened by the sympathetic expressiveness of the landscape, a vast plain, where a pallid river glimmers here and there as it winds amid cypresses and bluish mists while the twilight deepens. The worst we can say of Mr. Goetze's picture is that the half-shadows and deeper tints of the flesh are much too brown, and that the corpse of St. Sebastian might have been better drawn.—Agnes Ago (141) may be called a subject portrait of a little girl in an old-fashioned white sprigged muslin dress and a crimson petticoat, such as the artist, Mr. W. C. T. Dobson, has often affected. It is decidedly pretty and naive; the carnations are free from that brown under-tint which marred so many of the Academician's quasi-German studies from nature. Nelly (226) is confessedly a portrait by the same; it is very pretty, and the colour is pleasant, though the flesh seems to us not quite so fresh as that of 'Agnes Ago.'

Roundheads Victorious (153) is one of those quasi-military pictures in which few English painters succeed completely, and with which Mr. E. Crofts is seldom more than moderately fortunate. Nothing could be more obvious than every expression and motive in this commonplace design, although some of the faces are in an ad captandum way suitable to the subject, and the picture as a whole reminds us of a set-piece on the stage rather than of a work of art. One of the charms of military subjects as they are painted in France is the crisp firmness and exquisite precision of the delineation of details, such as costumes and weapons; but Mr. Crofts is content to draw in a slovenly way, to touch his canvases without the desired precision, and to use pigments which are at once neither clean nor clear: for instance, in this case, the brown shadows belie the truth of a snow piece. Of the exquisite precision, firmness, and purity which form the most precious feature of French art of this kind, not a few English painters of the calibre of Mr. Frith, in his 'Derby Day' and 'Ramsgate Sands,' have supplied good models to artists who, if they will not follow French types, need only go so far as the National Gallery to see what sort of execution they ought to adopt. As it is, no one seems to concern himself with painting for its own sake, or to follow the examples of Ward, Frith, and other brilliant executants. To make a dashing sketch of energetic figures and obvious incidents suffices to painters like Mr. Crofts. There are various sketches of martial subjects, such as No. 153—it will hardly do to call them pictures—in Burlington House, not one of which could, for power and completeness, be compared for a moment with those of "Military England" by Mr. Prinsep Beadle, which are now in the Fine-Art Society's gallery. The like of these are not to be found in the Academy.—If Mr. A. Hacker thinks the poor melodrama he calls the Temptation of Sir Percival (154) is a worthy illustration of the 'Morte d'Arthur,' he is most egregiously mistaken. Weak and trivial as the painting is, the design has still less animation and verve, and the whole thing is a mistake and out of harmony with the theme. Maude (396), a young woman reading, being less ambitious, is less conspicuously a failure. Its weakness and flatness need offend no one. On the other hand, Mr. Hacker's portrait of E. Osadov Ford, Esq. (440), puts the newly elected Associate in a welcome and unexpected light as a sympathetic portrait painter. The accomplished sculptor of Shelley's monument is here to the life, an animated figure so full of expression that the attenuated and rather pale coloration of the picture as such counts for little in the scale against its veracity and spirit.—Mr. Frith has depicted more brightly and crisply such small domestic incidents as Five o'Clock Tea, 1893 (209), but he has sometimes been more unfortunate.—The subject of Mr. Marks's small picture of An Odd Volume (211) is extremely trite and uninteresting, and the picture is rather flat and hard; still the colour is acceptable, and the bibliophile's face is appropriate.—Returning Fisherman's Surprise (213) is the awkward title of Mr. F. Fagerlin's careful and well-studied picture of a young fisherman looking at an unexpected baby in a cradle. The subject is not clear, but the effect is good, and the drawing of the figures is creditable.

From the purely artistic point of view, no picture in this gallery approaches the refined and exceptionally accomplished Amour Piqué (210) of M. W. A. Bouguereau. His charming boy Cupid is in the type of piquant epidémie; his flesh is exquisitely modelled and perfectly drawn. This is, in short, an instance of what art can achieve in representing the morbidity of youthful life. The playfulness of the design is quite delightful in an exhibition where, if anything is playful, it seems to be so of set purpose, and without the least spontaneity. As a specimen of academic technique combined with vivacity and grace, there is nothing left to be desired in this fine work of the distinguished Frenchman. If the carnations had been a little fuller of colour, more rosy and substantial, 'Amour Piqué' would have captivated every one.—In some respects the life-size and richly coloured portrait of a courtesan, splendidly attired, and luring an admirer to his destruction, which the Hon. John Collier has aptly named A Decoy (165), is an exceptionally clever and successful piece of melodrama and chic, thoroughly antagonistic to the fine and high art of M. Bouguereau. The rose thrown down and the leer of the woman who sweeps past the brave lying in wait are capital instances of the former of these qualities, while the latter is well illustrated by the painting of her back, bare nearly to the waist, and the gold and red of her broadened train. The life-size portrait of Prof. Burdon Sanderson (462) is by much the best of Mr. Collier's efforts in that line, although it lacks solidity. Certainly it is much better than the portrait of Dr. H. A. Morgan (877), which, in turn, surpasses the average of the artist's contributions.

Mr. F. Dicksee is far from fortunate in the selection of his subjects. Had he been wise he would have avoided a theme like that of The Magic Crystal (218). A theme upon which Rossetti, although he wrote 'Rose Mary,' did not venture, is not for Mr. Dicksee, whose attempt reminds us of Mr. H. Quilter's fate in the Dudley Gallery of this year, when he simultaneously bracketed himself with Rossetti and Browning. Such errors are the worse because Mr. Dicksee, unlike Mr. Quilter, has painted some agreeable pictures, and, if not good at self-judgment, is really a man of skill who was trained in the school of Sir Frederic Leighton. His life-size damsel in gorgeous array is seated upon a sumptuous couch, the whole being so magnificent that the pathos of the incident is destroyed, while attention is drawn from the romance of an inquiry into the future by means of an oracular sphere. She does not look as if she saw anything in the crystal or even tried to do so, but only cared to look as if she was looking. The artifice is more transparent than the sphere itself and an offence to art. There is great want of research and study, but much of the affectation of both, in the draperies of this large painting.—Mr. Swan contributes No. 222, Orpheus performing on the lyre, to the wonder and delight of the lions, leopards, and tigers whom the newly elected Associate paints with much originality and knowledge in a naturalistic manner, which seems quite out of keeping with the classic legend. The wild gestures of Orpheus (he is hardly adolescent) may be right, although they are a novelty, but he ought surely, according to the very conditions of the incident and subject, to possess the antique beauty, whereas he has only the beauty of a lithe and vigorous gipsy lad. In this respect he is out of harmony with the realistic animals. Although rather roughly painted throughout, the animals are first rate, and the coloration of the picture is of a high sort.

"For he had great possessions" (259) is Mr. Watts's masterpiece of the year. In the life-size, nearly full-length figure of a tall and stately man, handsomely attired, and standing near a window, out of which he may be supposed to be looking (we see only his shoulder and back), we evidently have the rich man of the Scriptures, overburdened by knowledge of his culpability in having anything to spare, and possibly uneasy because of the loveliness of those robes of price in tawny-poorly white, grey, and green, which give so great a charm to this study of colour in drapery. A noble sense of style inspires this picture. The painter's portrait of Sir A. Clark (251) is very fine indeed, full of thought; the reserved power of expression makes it a rare example of that art which knows where to stop. As was truly said of Woolner's portrait sculptures, it is a privilege to be painted in so fine a manner as this. No. 251 is much better than J. Passmore Edwards, Roy. (221), the expression of which is rather weak, while the forms are slightly empty, that is, empty for a portrait by Mr. Watts.—Le Roi s'amuse (306), Henry III. of France and his puppies in a basket slung about his neck, will not raise the reputation of Mr. Yeames's art. The much-rouged monarch dressed in sky blue, seated upon a very yellow sofa, does not promise much as a subject for art; but surely this could be no reason for covering a large canvas with tawdry colours and handling them in an unsympathetic, unrefined manner. The work is painty to excess as well as rather crude, and hardly more than three parts finished. A much better picture by the same Academician is the unpretending portrait of Surgeon-Lieut.-Col. R. M. Craig (188), which piece of prose is conspicuous in Gallery III., without adding much to its attractions.—A much better piece of historic anecdote is Miss J. Macgregor's Arrested (311), the single passionate figure of Fedora Alexandrovna surprised in her boudoir at midnight and made a prisoner;

she stands at a writing-table with both hands clasped together, and her set features working spasmodically, and shown very skilfully by the light of a lamp placed below them. The design and effect are so good that it is a pity the flesh is so exceedingly hot, and the shadows are too brown. Still this is incomparably the best of the lady's productions, no other of which has evinced anything like the verve and skill it possesses.—August Blue (307), a picture of boys bathing from a boat in a brilliant sunlit summer sea, which in most respects contrasts with its neighbour No. 311, is by Mr. H. S. Tuke, and, as much to the surprise of the painter as of the public, has been bought with the Chantrey Fund by the Council of the Academy. Mr. Tuke has painted his nudités with a light hand, but thinly, drawn them with tolerable correctness, but with no unusual spirit, and thus given us a whole which, as a large ad captandum sketch, would pass without challenge, but is hardly such a work as Chantrey would have spent his money upon. It is true that money has secured some less meritorious pictures than 'August Blue,' which aims at what Frederick Walker triumphed in, the representation of rosy flesh in bright sunlight as opposed to sunlit blue water. Walker, however, made his boys solid, which cannot be said of Mr. Tuke's, and he affected a sort of impasto in their carnations which Mr. Tuke has yet to attain.

Mr. Boughton's Ordeal of Purity (318) shows that he has attained to a rough and opaque impasto in flesh painting which, in a way, although it is not by any means of the best sort, is welcome. One of those damselfish who frequently sit to Mr. Boughton, in order apparently to save him the trouble of devising what may be called a design, is walking in a snowy landscape, while some less interesting characters lurk near her and amongst some trees. Not pretending to understand the subject of this picture, and not finding anything new in it or praiseworthy in its technique and details, we need only express our regret that the colour is so dirty, and add that we are tired of the cheap pathos and flimsy sentimentality it appears to aim at.—Mr. Herkomer's best picture is not that large canvas, No. 340, which, ironically we suppose, is called "All beautiful in naked purity," because it represents a life-size, whole-length nude female model standing in artificial sunlight in a landscape, of which no part is solidly painted except the very clever rebus on our right. If the model is what Mr. Herkomer calls pure, it would not do to ask what is his ideal of impurity. The landscape here is like painted glass, and the flesh of the woman, cleverly and effectively as it has been treated, is not much less transparent: it is in need of modelling, impasto of some sort, research, solid study, and sound execution. Her flesh lacks the richer roses of Titianesque under-painting and the silvery greys of nature's light reflected from the smooth, if not polished skin of a woman. Life-size nudités are often painted for the Salons, and much better than Mr. Herkomer (who, by the way, professes to teach painting in the grand manner) has attempted; it is a pity, therefore, that, if he must defy the British matron, the Professor has not cared to justify himself by depicting what is really "all beautiful in naked purity." On the other hand, we are bound to say that the figure, if not the semi-diaphanous landscape, does illustrate the artist's intention of painting with an adequate sense of style; but, even thus, he really ought to have drawn his model's legs better, and remedied the disproportions of her feet. Mrs. Grundy would not have minded this.—The Sea Maiden (370) of Mr. H. J. Draper is a capital subject for a painter of nudités in sunlight contrasting with sea-colours, as in Mr. Tuke's picture. A party of fishermen, hauling their nets inboard, and they have caught, as the Catalogue has it, "a strange-haired woman with sad singing lips," whatever they may be; at any rate, a decidedly heavy and plump damsel, who does not seem to mind being looked at by the reasonably astonished seafarers, who, having pulled her out of a sea of paint, will certainly show her about the country in a van. The maiden might well be more beautiful, while some of the charm of romance would have gone far to elevate the energetic but judicious prose of Mr. Draper, whose painting of the sea would bear greater lucidity, limpidity, and wealth of tints, to say nothing of sunlight and varied glow. It is, however, apart from all this, really a most refreshing thing to find, in a wilderness of importuneness and platitudes like the Academy, a new motive, new life, considerable vivacity, and commendable self-respect in the painting of the men's faces in 'The Sea Maiden,' varied and animated as they are, and a good deal that is worthy of praise in other parts of this picture.—Mr. H. G. Riviere almost challenged comparison with his father (which was not wise) when he set about the otherwise excellent and brilliant Argonauts and the Sirens (375). The golden skins of the rowers in the crowded galley glow in the sun, and, moved by the dulcet strains and nude charms of the sirens, they pull in disorderly fashion, while one of them is hardly restrained from plunging into the sea. On the poop their immortal chief, lyre in hand, stands erect in a well-expressed attitude, and chants aloud. The liveliness and appropriateness of the design furnish the best hopes of the future of the able young painter whose first exhibited work this is, while his comparative inexperience excuses the obvious disproportions (such as the smallness of the singer's head) of some of the figures. His feeling for light and colour evinces itself in every part of the clear, harmonious, and vivid picture, some portions of which, however, are lighter than is desirable.

NOTES FROM ATHENS.

AMONG the monuments in Greece which have suffered from the successive shocks of earthquake is the Parthenon, of which some pillars and epistylia have been somewhat severely shaken. The commission of engineers and architects appointed to inspect the ancient remains after the earthquake is of opinion that various parts of the venerable old temple must be strengthened by iron clamps. A definite resolution has not yet been adopted. Still more serious is the damage done to three well-known monuments of the Middle Ages: the Monastery of Skripu on the site of the ancient Orchomenus; that of Daphni, near Athens; and that of St. Luke, at Livadia. The injuries at the last named are principally centred on the structure, those of the Daphni Monastery in the mosaics. When the ancient church of this monastery was damaged, not very long ago, by an earthquake, the Greek Government determined to restore it, and Signor Novo, of Venice, has devoted a couple of years to it. After pulling down the old cupola and erecting a new one of the same dimensions he replaced upon it the old mosaics which had been taken to pieces, and he performed the same operation for the mosaics on the walls of the body of the church. The work was already half completed when the earthquakes began. The church, indeed, has suffered little, thanks to the fact that its walls had been secured last year by the insertion of triangular bands of iron; but the shattering of the cells which are built above the church shows that even the church itself would suffer seriously from a continuance of the shocks. So it has been determined to remove to the Central Museum at Athens such of the ancient mosaics as the Italian workmen have not yet replaced on the walls of the church. Even with regard to the mosaics already restored to their old positions, some further step will probably be taken, as the committee has expressed the opinion that, owing to its faulty construction, the church cannot, in spite of the hands of iron, be kept intact for more than half a century. SP. LAMPROS.

THE SALONS.

THE two Salons are open, and as both of them have very enthusiastic and very maladroit friends, there is much discussion regarding the relative value of the one and the other; so the compromise which some good souls desire between the rival societies remains as far from realization as ever. In truth these quarrels are negligible. With a little additional fatigue those whom art interests more than artists can quite well go and examine on both sides of the river everything that has any significance and a measure of importance. I shall do as these sages do, and, without confining myself to a useless methodical and complete account, I shall endeavour to disentangle from the six or seven thousand works enrolled in the two catalogues—those of the Champ de Mars and the Champs Élysées—enough to show the way about among this truly alarming mass of sculptures and paintings.

As was to be expected, religious paintings abound this year. Never before have we seen so many figures walking to Emmaus or on the road to Damascus; the streets are crowded with good Samaritans, while at every turn one comes upon angels or upon pilgrims, and among them are some very queer pilgrims. But in all this crowd one work has, from the opening day, made its presence felt by its unusual accent of sincerity, decision, and authority. This is La Vie de N.S. Jésus Christ, which M. James Tissot exhibits at the Champ de Mars.

In 350 aquarelles gouachées—which by their dimensions recall the engravings of those sautes de la Passion which the masters of the close of the fifteenth or the commencement of the sixteenth century multiplied in Germany on the eve of the Reformation, or better still those miniatures palpitating with life which Jehan Fouquet, for example, composed for the Book of Hours of Étienne Chevalier—M. James Tissot has undertaken to illustrate page after page, and almost, one may say, verse by verse, the narrative of the Gospels. He exhibits to-day only 260 fragments of this work, to which for several years past he has devoted his whole attention. The rest will be shown later on, but what we see now is enough to place the author in the first rank of those who have essayed the subject. In the centre of the double gallery reserved for his exhibition M. Tissot has placed a large canvas which seems to indicate the origin and the aim of the whole series, and he himself gives the significance of it in an explanatory notice. Two wretched beings, miserably clad, disfigured with all the wounds and marked with all the stains of life and poverty, are seated on a heap of déchûs amidst the ruins of a monument which recalls the courtyard of the Cour des Comptes. Some persons wish to see in this an allusion to the incidents and crimes of the Paris Commune. An instinctive complaint of weariness and an unconscious prayer have mounted to their lips, "Mon Dieu!" and Christ has come. He approaches them, Himself wounded and bleeding; He turns to them His brow crowned with thorns, His nail-pierced hands; He reveals to them the law of suffering which purifies and redeems; and the hearts of the two vagabonds are stirred by the consoling appeal of these "voix intérieures," as the picture is called.

The artist seems to have proposed to himself to bring before our eyes with the most intense reality possible, to translate with an appearance of incontestable truth, the history of Him who thus continues to answer to the plaints of the wretched. There is, in fact, a country in the world and an hour in history in which He lived on earth our human life, and other men spoke to Him, saw Him, and heard Him. This is what it was necessary to represent! Certainly, since Christianity has been in existence, and Christian art has been born, the illustration of the sacred text has been essayed thousands upon thousands of times. To begin with, the primitive Church has in a manner codified the elements of Christian iconography. "Non est imaginum structura pictorum inventio, sed Ecclesie Catholicæ probata legislatio et traditio," said the Council of Nice. But the West at an early period rejected this rule, which weighed so heavily on Byzantine art. Individualism played its part in the interpretation of the religious drama. From the thirteenth century a bishop, Guillaume Durand, of Mende, expressly recognized the freedom by the artists of our cathedrals when he wrote, quoting Horace, in his 'Rationale Divinorum Officiorum': "Diverse historie tam novi quam veteris Testamenti pro voluntate pictorum depinguntur:—

Nam pictoribus atque poetis
Quidlibet audendi semper fuit æqua potestas."

And as art gradually emancipated itself from the cloister, and artists throw themselves more boldly into the task of conquering nature, the most bold and charming anachronisms were seen to multiply in religious painting. Benozzo Gozzoli, in the frescoes of the chapel of the palace of the Medici, mingled his contemporaries with the cortege of the three Magi; Ghirlandajo at Santa Maria Novella ventured to people with modern portraits the chamber of the Virgin; Jehan Fouquet invited to the betrothal of Joseph and Mary the good citizens of Tours and the gossips of Amboise.

Certainly this realism has its charm, and these free translations of the Gospels by painters smitten with a naïve desire for truth, confusing, without a thought of evil, the new reality with the old dream, eager to introduce into their works in all its rich variety the spectacle of the world which delighted their eyes and inspired their art, have remained more living and more persuasive than those of the classical masters, more impersonal, abstract, and synthetic; but are they permissible in a century proud, as ours is, of its historic erudition, and in which the imagination, aided by archaeological science, has become habituated to resuscitating the past? M. Tissot does not think so. The Gospels, he says, have preserved in their truth and beauty the whole historical and moral drama; let us go to the country itself which was the scene of it and seek the elements of an ethnographical truth which it is within our power to revive. Nature is always the same as when she saw the marvellous history accomplished. Consult her, interrogate her at close quarters, she will yield us a little of her secret, and aid us to find again the truthful and vivid image of the life of the Saviour. This is the true realism; and as the citizen of Nuremberg, before ordering of Adam Kraft the Calvary of the cemetery of St. John, twice undertook the voyage to the Holy Land in order to measure the exact distance from the house of Pilate to Golgotha, M. Tissot assumed the pilgrim's staff. He has taken sketches by the hundred at Jerusalem, the Mount of Olives, at the gate of Kedron, at Gethsemane, at Bethany, at Samaria; he has studied the landscape, and in the features of the living sought indications to help him to revive the dead, the scene and the spectators of the drama.

The necessity of representing and of displaying persons and things with the most characteristic precision has led M. Tissot to conceive some really extraordinary portraits: Zechariah and Elizabeth, St. Joseph, so astonishingly living in his humble bonhomie, confident and naïve—St. Peter and St. James, Herod and Pontius Pilate—become so familiar to us from their strong individuality of countenance that we cannot imagine them different. Of Christ Himself one cannot say so much. Before the Divine Figure the artist seems to have hesitated. The figure he has conceived does not impose itself upon us so inevitably;

but I should have to follow in chronological order the series of these 260 illustrations and distribute them in distinct cycles—the Infancy, the Preaching, the Parables, the Passion Week, &c.—to make the reader understand how the author, keeping his eyes constantly fixed upon nature and the Gospels, has, by the intensity of his sympathy, given fresh life to a subject so often treated, and has penetrated to the living sources of feeling.

Take, for example, the Epreuve des Prétendants au Mariage de la Sainte-Vierge. They are some twenty, arranged in double file, each holding his rod in hope of its sprouting. Each head is a portrait of such naturalism and truth as to take the place of biography. This suitor is at bottom a sceptic and almost a mocker; this other, broken and blanched by years, seems to nurse, nevertheless, a faint hope in his heart. All sorts of human feelings are expressed upon the row of countenances. This assembly of suitors has been represented a thousand times over, but more often after than before the miracle. Fra Angelico himself has painted the disillusion, and even the anger, of the rejected suitors, breaking their rods in their chagrin, and going so far as to strike Joseph with their fists. The version of M. Tissot, this waiting for the miracle, this gradation of countenances from humble and pious confidence to assumed indifference, deserves to be classed among the most human and the most living.

On quitting these rooms, with eye and heart full of those sincere representations, in which everything is set down decisively and strongly, in a style free from trickery, one is little inclined to be captivated by all the mystic, sentimental, and nebulous imagery of the many pictures more or less religious in their pretensions or tendency. If I except a very good Christ at Gethsemane, by M. Dagnan-Bouveret, and two works by M. F. von Uhde at the Champ de Mars, The Pilgrims of Emmaus and a Flight into Egypt, I can really dispense, without inconvenience to any one, with saying much of the religious pictures of the year.

ANDRÉ MICHEL.

SALES.

Messrs. ROBINSON & FISHER sold on the 10th inst. the following pictures: A. Correggio Allegri, The Virgin seated, with the Infant Saviour and St. John, 108l. M. D'Alba, Translation of Our Lady of Loreto, with portraits of donors, 210l.

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods sold on the 11th inst. the following pictures: Zuccheri, Queen Elizabeth, 110l. Mariachi, Views in Venice, a pair, 110l. I. van Ostade, The Halt at the Hostelry, 215l.

The same auctioneers sold on the 16th inst. the following engravings: After Sir E. Landseer, by T. Landseer, The Stag at Bay, 31l.; The Monarch of the Glen, 58l.; The Children of the Mist, 40l.; The Deer Pass, 28l.; by S. Cousins, Bolton Abbey, 42l. After J. L. E. Meissonier, by J. Jaquet, "1806," remarque proof, 38l.; ditto, artist's proof, 26l.; by Bracquemond, La Rixe, 59l.

At an auction held in the Rue de Sèze on the 2nd inst., Guardi's Vue de Venise fetched 10,000 fr. Lépicié's La Femme du Braconnier, 9,500 fr. Daubigny's Le Bac, 30,600 fr. Fromentin's Le Siroin, 7,700 fr., and his Arabes à la Fontaine, 10,500 fr. Isabey's Cérémonie religieuse, 9,700 fr. T. Rousseau's Dessous de Bois, 48,500 fr. Zeim's Le grand Canal de Venise, 15,600 fr.

Fine-Art Society.

THE fifth season's excavations on the site of the Roman town at Silchester were resumed on April 30th, and have already brought to light several important buildings. Operations this summer are being confined to three insula between the forum and the west gate, which are traversed by the modern highway crossing the site.

On and after Monday next the Fine-Art Society will exhibit two new pictures, being "Peace, be still!" by Mr. D. A. Wehrschnidt, and "Passing to Eternity," by Mr. A. E. Einsie. The private view of these works is appointed for to-day (Saturday).

On the 21st ult. we stated that the sale of the contents of the studios and house of Mr. F. Madox-Brown, No. 1, St. Edmund's Terrace, Regent's Park, was appointed for the 30th and 31st inst. Since then the executor has decided that the days of the sale shall be the 29th, 30th, and 31st inst.

A good deal of surprise has been excited by the sale of Mr. Spurling's manuscript on the monumental heraldry of the English counties, which cost him years of labour, for 18/. His pictures fetched trifling prices.

"CLIMBING AND EXPLORATION IN THE KARAKORAM-HIMALAYAS" are illustrated in an exhibition of pictures by Mr. A. D. McCormick at Clifford's Inn Hall, 187, Fleet Street, which will be open from the 21st to the 26th inst. The private view is appointed for to-day (Saturday). "Royal Ascot," a picture by Mr. J. V. Gibson, painted for Col. North, will be on view at Mr. McLean's gallery in the Haymarket on and after Monday next.

A LECTURE on "Recent Discoveries at Koptos" will be delivered by Prof. Flinders Petrie at University College, Gower Street, on Saturday week.

We have to record the death of Mr. F. R. Wilson, architect, of Alnwick, formerly President of the Northern Architectural Association, Newcastle. Besides numerous archaeological papers written for various North-Country antiquarian societies, Mr. Wilson was the author of "A Survey of the Churches in the Archdeaconry of Lindisfarne," and other works. Some years ago he was a constant contributor to the Builder. Lately illness had confined him almost entirely to his house, Alnwick, and there he died on Sunday, May 6th, in his sixty-seventh year.

From the 20th till the 26th inst. an exhibition will remain open in the Ecole des Beaux-Arts, Paris, of the models, sketches, and drawings of Carpeaux.

It is characteristic of the present state of art knowledge and archaeological taste in France that it is being seriously debated whether the Romanesque tower of the Abbaye du Mont Saint Michel, now in a dangerous state of decay, shall be reconstructed according to the original or the Gothic type. The question is a nice one, of course, but in England, we presume, there would be one answer.

THE death of the French painter M. Charles Jacque is announced to have occurred on the 7th inst. Born in 1813, he was one of the survivors of a set of able artists. Beginning as an engraver, Jacque became, as a matter of course, a good draughtsman, because during his pupilage no one would be considered an artist at all unless he could draw with moderate skill; as an engraver he published a monograph on fowls, and appeared as an etcher at several successive Salons. As a painter Jacque won a Third-Class Medal at the Salon of 1861, a rappel in 1863, a medal in 1864, the Legion of Honour in 1867, and a Gold Medal at the Exposition Universelle, 1889. As an engraver his distinctions were of the Third Class in 1851, a rappel in 1851 and 1863, a second medal of the Third Class in 1867, and a Grand Prix in 1889. Many of his plates obtained a certain popularity in this country. — Mlle. Jonny Gerbaud, the miniaturist, is also dead.

At Epidaurus the stadium is now being excavated, and the first trenchings have brought to light several rows of marble seats in perfect preservation and resembling those of the celebrated theatre in the same place. It would seem that beneath the enormous mass of superincumbent earth and rubbish, the accumulation of many centuries, a considerable portion of the original structure has been preserved, and there are great hopes of discovering the apheia, the terma, and the stela that marked the starting-point, as also the meta and the direction followed by the racers.

At Argos the excavations of the American School have laid bare a large marble building which is believed to be the Gymnasium, as also many tombs of the Mycenaean age.

It is reported from Turkey that in the excavations at Tellou, in the province of Basorah, ninety-six tablets in good condition and an inscribed marble have been found. The only description is that the tablets are of terra-cotta. The excavations, which were begun in March, are being continued.

THE Academy Notes for 1894 (Chatto & Windus) is the twentieth member of a sequence of which the value for future use as a book of reference to the contents of the galleries at Burlington House can hardly be over-estimated. As a sort of key to the Academy of this year it is extremely handy and pleasing, while as a reminder of things good and bad it is not less edifying than amusing. The numerous illustrations are neither better nor worse than in former parts, except as to the earlier ones, which had not the advantages of modern improvements in process printing and photography. It is understood that, for example, the difference between the scratchy outlines of Mr. Boughton's "Ordeal of Purity" and the soft and full-toned reproduction of Mr. Watts's "Rich Man" (No. 259) is due to the draughtsmen, and not to the painters or the processes employed. It is a pity all the transcripts are not so good as the latter. The plans of the galleries, showing the positions of some of the principal works, are of considerable value, but it is to be regretted the choice of what are "principal works" has not been made according to a higher standard.

Among pictures recently finished by artists of note we may mention Mr. Haynes Williams's telling piece of genre called "The Governess," which depicts the garden of a mansion during a fête given in somebody's honour, or such an "at home" as brings "superior people" to visit the place. Not one of them takes notice of the "young person" who, dressed with fastidious modesty, stands in front, and would seem, to judge by the thimble, thread, and a child's cap that she holds, to be occupied with the needle rather than with society, here represented by various promenaders in the background. The damsel, who is of that plump and ripe sort Mr. Haynes Williams must know so many of, is pretty, neat, and ingenuous-looking, if not particularly beautiful nor intellectual. The effect of the light here is true and good, although the shadows, being those of open air, are rather black, yet not at all opaque. Another picture is Mr. Dendy Sadler's "A Cure for Gout," an old beau suffering the penalties of too much ease and port wine, while a comely dame sympathizes with his affliction, and obsequiously flatters him. Apart from the capital painting of all the furniture and other details, the high finish and deft precision of the dresses and anything but beautiful faces, there is humour in every part of this picture.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN. Production of Puccini's "Manon Lescaut." "Faust"; "Orfeo"; and "Cavalleria Rusticana."

SIR AUGUSTUS HARRIS pays singularly little heed to times or seasons in his operatic arrangements, and he not only commenced the so-called "grand" opera season on Whit Monday, but opened with a work by a composer utterly unknown. Until Giacomo Puccini produced his "Manon Lescaut" he was little better than a cipher even in his own country. We hear of one or two earlier works, but they certainly made no abiding impression, while on the other hand "Manon Lescaut," produced little more than a year ago, has already been performed nearly 350 times in Italy. There was some hardihood in choosing a subject that had been already treated by Auber and Massenet, and if Signor Puccini was his own librettist, as appears probable, no other name appearing on the title-page of the score, he can scarcely be complimented on this portion of his work. The book of Massenet's "Manon" is fairly coherent, despite the inevitable omission of some important features of the Abbé Prévost's story. But in the present instance, as in Boito's "Mefistofele," we have merely a series of episodes with no connecting links. Without knowing the original, it would be impossible to understand why, after Manon agrees rapturously to fly with Des Grieux at the end of the first act, she is found installed in the house of a wealthy old admirer at the beginning of the second. The reasons for her arrest are also not clearly stated, nor the cause why she is wandering in a desert place with her lover in the last act of the opera. These are serious defects at the present time, when dramatic interest and cohesiveness are looked for in opera. They may not be fatal in Italy, where song, and song only, is needful in the lyric drama, but they are prejudicial elsewhere to the success of a composer. For the rest, the lines are not remarkable for grace or poetic imagery, but they teem with fervour and passion, and are, therefore, in keeping with the music, which before everything else is distinguished by Southern warmth and vivid colouring. Next to these qualities must be placed its truly remarkable eclecticism. Puccini has been influenced slightly by Wagner, whose system of representative themes he adopts, but more in recurrence than development. From the modern French school he has taken more, the score abounding in passages for strings in octaves and double octaves, the harmonies being gently sustained by wood wind and harp. But over all there is the intensity peculiar to Italy, and certainly as much force and dramatic energy as we find in the successful works of Mascagni and Leoncavallo. Without minutely analyzing the score, we may indicate the piquant finale of the cheerful first act, Manon's brief air "O mia dimora umile," the "Madrigale," the whole of the passionate love music towards the close of the second act, the singularly clever concerted piece in the third act, when the female exiles are named one by one, and the effective reminiscences of themes in the last, as showing that Signor Puccini has something to say, and knows how to say it. The orchestration and the vocal part-writing display the hand of a musician, and sufficient has now been said to indicate that Sir Augustus Harris was perfectly justified in selecting this typical example of the new Italian school to inaugurate his present opera season. Much may be said in praise of the performance, although the principal artists are mainly new to London. The most successful was Signor Beduschi, who as Des Grieux displayed a light, but sympathetic and well-trained tenor voice and considerable dramatic capacity—at any rate, for parts of this calibre. Signorina Olga Olghina in the titular part was less impressive, her voice being rather thin, though not hard nor afflicted by tremolo. Words of commendation may be bestowed on Signor A. Pini-Corsi as Lescaut, and Signor Arimondi as Manon's rich paramour Geronte. The orchestra under Signor Seppilli was fairly equal to its work, and the chorus, consisting of more than 150 carefully selected voices, was probably the finest ever heard in Covent Garden.

Of the performances on Tuesday and Wednesday little need be said. On the former evening 'Faust' was given in French, with that charming, though perhaps not very powerful artist Mlle. Simonnet as Marguerite, M. Cossira in the titular part, M. Plançon as Mephistopheles, and Mlle. Pauline Joran as Siebel. The Valentine was a new-comer, M. Albers, who made a favourable impression, thanks mainly to a pleasing baritone voice. Gluck's 'Orfeo,' with the sisters Ravogli and Mlle. Bauermeister, and 'Cavalleria Rusticana,' with Madame Calvé, Signor de Lucia, and Signor Ancona in the leading parts, made up a somewhat over-lengthy entertainment on Wednesday.

Musical Society.

TAKING up our record of concerts, which were suspended on Whit Monday only, we may first speak of Mr. Charles Fry's recital at the Queen's Hall on Thursday last week. With the assistance of his intelligent and well-trained pupil Miss Olive Kennett selections from various plays were given with much effect, but the entertainment chiefly calls for notice in this place on account of the musical arrangements, which were excellent. A small unseen orchestra gave Dr. A. C. Mackenzie's accompaniments, arranged by Mr. Battison Haynes, to 'The Dream of Eugene Aram,' and a selection from 'Manfred,' the music, of course, being Schumann's.

SEVERAL performances of Gounod's 'Philémon et Baucis' and Leoncavallo's 'Pagliacci' were given in the concert-room of the Royal Academy of Music last week by pupils of the operatic class in connexion with the institution, under the conductorship of Mr. G. H. Betjemann. It would be invidious and even unjust to particularize concerning the youthful aspirants to honours on the lyric stage, as the casts were changed nightly, but it may be said that the rendering of both works was exceedingly creditable to all concerned, and may be regarded as the most successful achievement in respect of opera in Tenterden Street.

THE second pianoforte recital of Josef Hofmann on Saturday afternoon was even more successful than the first. Remarkably fine performances were given of Chopin's Sonata in a minor, smaller items by the same composer, and pieces by Handel, Mendelssohn, Liszt, and Rubinstein. There need be no further hesitation in pronouncing Hofmann one of the most able pianists of the time.

Yet another juvenile prodigy, Miss Maud MacCarthy, was presented to notice at the Princess's Hall on Wednesday afternoon. Her instrument is the violin, and considering her tender age, the fluency she displayed in works by Bach and De Beriot was certainly very remarkable. She must also possess an excellent musical ear, for her intonation was perfectly accurate, even in the most trying passages. Mrs. MacCarthy, a mezzo-soprano with a pleasing and well-trained voice, and Miss Isabel Hirschfeld, a capable pianist, took part in the concert.

At the Musical Exhibition in 1885 prominent attention was drawn to the performances of examples of the mediæval Flemish school by a small party of singers from Amsterdam. This à Cappella Choir, considerably augmented, has been giving a series of concerts during the past week at the St. Martin's Town Hall—pieces by Sweelinck, Joaquin des Pres, Orlando di Lasso, and several other Netherlandish masters. The voice power, beauty of phrasing, and unity of expression in the efforts of these Dutch singers made the performances very enjoyable, and testified not only to their own capacity, but to the skill of their conductor, Mynheer Daniel de Lange.

An appeal has been issued at Hamburg for the erection of a monument in honour of Hans von Bülow. The appeal has been signed by a number of influential names, including those of Prof. Helmholtz, J. Joachim, A. Menzel, F. Spielhagen, K. Groth, P. Heyse, F. Lenbach, and J. Brahms.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

- | | |
|--------|--|
| Mon. | Musical Union, 3, St. James's Hall |
| — | Miss Grainger Kerr's Concert, 3, Queen's Hall |
| — | Mr. Rudolph Leman's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Halfway Hall |
| — | Concert in Aid of the Orphan Asylum of Musicians, 3.30, Princess's Hall |
| — | Musical Artists' Society, 9, St. Martin's Town Hall |
| — | Mr. Noel Johnson's Chamber Concert, 5, Queen's Hall |
| — | Haydn Party Memorial Concert, 8, Queen's Hall |
| — | Royal Opera, 8.30, Covent Garden |
| Tues. | Herbert Phillips's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall |
| — | Mr. Charles Phillips's Concert, 1, Princess's Hall |
| — | Mr. Foxwell's Lovable Thomas Performance, 3, Queen's Hall |
| — | Wagner in Memoriam Concert, 8, Queen's Hall |
| — | Royal Opera, 'Philémon et Baucis' and 'Cavalleria Rusticana,' 8.30, Covent Garden |
| — | Miss Kathleen Thomas's Violon Recital, 8.30, Queen's Hall |
| — | Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch's Concert, 8.30, Jewland, West Dulwich |
| Wed. | Mr. Hinder's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Princess's Hall |
| — | Miss Maudie Vorse and Miss Marie's Pianoforte and Violon Recital, 3, St. James's Hall |
| — | Strolling Players' Concert in Aid of the Hospital for Women and Children, 8.30, Queen's Hall |
| — | Royal Opera, Covent Garden |
| Thurs. | Mr. Steadman's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall |
| — | Philharmonic Concert, 8, Queen's Hall |
| — | Performance of 'Curlew' by Students of the Guildhall School of Music, 2, Trinity Lane, Theatre |
| Fri. | Miss Cowen's Recital, 3, Halfway Hall |
| — | Mr. Woodrow's Chamber Concert, 3, Princess's Hall |
| — | Mr. Cecil Sharp's Wagner Lecture, 3, Hampstead Conservatoire |
| — | Rev. E. H. Moberley's Concert, 8.30, St. James's Hall |
| — | Orchestral Club Concert, 8.30, St. Martin's Town Hall |
| — | Royal Opera, Covent Garden |
| Sat. | Madame Krger-Mies's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Princess's Hall |
| — | Mr. Kahn's Jubilee Concert, 3, Queen's Hall |
| — | Concert for the Benefit of Mr. Wyre, 3, Crystal Palace |
| — | Mr. Tivadar Kuchar's Concert, 3, St. James's Hall |
| — | Mr. Frederick Protherton's Swedish Concert, 8, Queen's Hall |
| — | Royal Opera, Covent Garden |

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

PRINCESS'S THEATRE.—'Jean Mayeux,' a Mimo-drama in Three Acts. By Blanchard de la Breteche.
ADELPHI.—'Revival of 'The Two Orphans.'
OPERA COMIQUE.—'A Society Butterfly,' a Play in Four Acts. By Robert Buchanan and H. Murray.

In some respects the so-called mimo-drama at the Princess's Theatre is a novelty. In all respects it is a mistake. The sorrows, half real, half fantastic, of Pierrot, are suited to pantomimic presentation. They may be, and have been, rendered touching, but underneath all is that sense of unreality and unworldliness which is requisite to reconcile us to a story in dumb show. Quite otherwise is it when a commonplace story of suffering and crime is presented by mutes. One demands, Wherefore mutes? Why should not the familiar scenes be illustrated by the familiar words? It is merely grotesque when a festive or bacchanalian tune is played by the orchestra and a supposed singer sits opening his mouth as though the sounds proceeded from him. Upon the musical value of this we are not prepared in this column to speak. This even we do not conjecture to be large. From the dramatic standpoint, the whole is a somewhat sorry jest. An actor may possibly learn from the gestures of a cripple who is supposed to perform prodigies of valour the value of these in expressing emotion or passion. Honestly, however, we hold that the most obvious and judicious lesson is what to avoid. When, which was not always or even often the case, the pantomime was comprehensible, it was generally wrong. It was, moreover, repeated almost ad nauseam. A man, a cripple, in love with a woman, sees her choose another, with whom she walks off the stage. He shows mortification and rage by crawling behind bushes to spy upon her, by rushing to the wings to shake his fist at her, and by gesticulating in the manner of all others which an actor should avoid. Let M. Vallot, by whom the central figure is played, try once the effect of accompanying his proceedings by any words except inarticulate or semi-articulate curses, and he will learn how exaggerated and untrue is what he does.

The play is hewn out of 'Les Deux Orphelines' of MM. Dennery and Cormon, the scenes taken being those which show the imprisonment of Louise in the garret of La Frochard. A disastrous third act is added. In this the cripple, who has on behalf of the woman he adores risen to heroism, conquering his fear of his huge, handsome bully of a brother, becomes a cowardly and vindictive assassin, slaying the girl he has previously saved, and then committing suicide. The result of these and similar alterations is that the piece has not a spark of pathos, and is in its main course wearisome. The only approach to a redeeming feature is the presentation of life in a quignette with a dance of gigolettes. It may show how much the question of art has been studied that in this scene the hero gives an exhibition of conjuring.

At the time when this spectacle was dragging along, Oxenford's version of the play of Dennery and Cormon was extorting at the Adelphi a full tribute of tears. Miss Marion Terry played beautifully and touchingly the character of Louise, in which, however, she has previously been seen. Mr. Cartwright was Pierre, and Miss Dolores Drummond, La Frochard; Mr. William Rignold resumed after twenty years his original character of Jacques.

The effects upon which the management of the Opéra Comique counted in producing 'A Society Butterfly' are said to have miscarried, and the play suffered from the mishap. It is, at least, certain that when in a tableau Mrs. Langtry appeared as Godiva, an impression was pretty generally current that she was personating Lady Macbeth. It seems clear that Messrs. Buchanan and Murray aimed at supplying an English equivalent for 'Froufrou.' They complicated matters, however, by introducing the theory, nowadays more talked about than accepted, that social and moral obligations are alike for both sexes. Whether under more favourable conditions the play would have succeeded remains doubtful. The stars, however, in the shape of the principal performers and the stage carpenters, fought against it. The play began and ended at too late an hour, an all but unpardonable offence on a first night; and the fireworks, so to speak, did not go off. The audience, or a portion of it, we are told, went off instead, and the portion that remained howled hideously. Opinions upon play and acting cannot easily be passed under such conditions, and it seems scarcely probable that the piece will challenge a second judgment.

Dramatic Gossip.

THE patronage of sport, in spite of the uncomfortable spectacles and hideous noises of our streets, is not sufficiently great to secure the success of the prize-fighting drama at Drury Lane, which was last week withdrawn. In their own interests managers will do well to learn that competition with the music-hall may be carried too far.

MR. CARR's season at the Comedy will come to an end on the 15th of June, and the following day Mr. Willard, fresh from American triumphs, will appear in 'The Middleman.' Mr. Carr will reopen the house in the autumn, when his company will be strengthened by the accession of Mr. Fred Terry. A new play by Mr. Grundy is promised.

MISS LOIR FULLER since her return from the Folies-Bergères has appeared at the Strand, Terry's, and Trafalgar Square theatres, giving at each what in theatrical language is called a "turn." This is, of course, a fresh inroad upon the music-halls.

'CORSEDADE' is the title of a drama by Mr. Henry Hoyt, which will shortly be given by Miss Olga Brandon at the Prince of Wales's. Mr. Henry Neville and Mr. Charles Glenney will take part in the performance.

MR. COMYNS CARR's adaptation of 'Nerves' has been given during the week at the Parkhurst Theatre, at which also 'A Quarrel,' a one-act comedieta by Mr. Wotton, has been produced.

'THE MAN IN THE STREET' is the title of a one-act piece by Mr. Louis N. Parker, which now prefaces at the Avenue the performance of Mr. Shaw's whimsicality 'Arms and the Man.' The central character in this is well conceived and admirably rendered by Mr. Welch, and the play, though sombre, is fairly ingenious.

SIGNORA DUNE has reappeared as Cyprienne des Prunelles in the 'Divorcées' of MM. Sardou and de Najac. Her performance has all its former delicacy, refinement, and charm, and exercises its old influence over the audience. Anything more exquisite and inspired in comedy is not to be conceived. The personality of the actress and the perfection of the method are alike irresistible, and the performance, though it can scarcely be regarded as an interpretation of MM. Sardou and de Najac, is matchless in beauty.

EARLY in June Mr. Thursday will produce at a London theatre at an afternoon performance a four-act play of serious interest by Messrs. John Gray and André Raffalovich. The interpreters will, it is expected, include Miss Olga Brandon, Mrs. Theodore Wright, and Messrs. Abington, Julian Cross, and Thursday.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—R. T.—T. D.—G. H.—F. T. T.—G. G.—received.

L. G.—You should send such a question to Notes and Queries.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION BY POST.

To all parts of the United Kingdom.

For Twelve Months...	15	4
For Six Months...	7	8
For all Countries within the Postal Union.
For Twelve Months...	18	0
For Six Months...	9	0

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

REMINISCENCES OF AN INDIAN POLICE OFFICIAL.

By T. C. ARTHUR.

Fully Illustrated. Demy 8vo. cloth, 16s.
[Immediately.]

FEDERAL BRITAIN; or, Unity and

Federation of the Empire. By F. P. DE LABILLIÈRE, Fellow of the Royal Colonial Institute, and Author of 'The Early History of the Colony of Victoria.' With Chapter on 'Imperial Defence' by Sir George S. Clarke, K.C. M.G. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Just ready.]

Professor Sir J. E. SAKLEY says:—"Incomparably the greatest question which we can discuss."

DANTE G. ROSSETTI and the PRE-RAPHAELITE MOVEMENT. By ESTHER WOOD. With 8 Photogravure Reproductions of Rossetti's Paintings. 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d. "Regarded as an appreciation of the wider significance of the Pre-Raphaelite movement, and a critical account of Rossetti's art and poetry, her book is a fresh and luminous contribution to the literature of the subject. The photogravures of Rossetti's pictures in themselves make the book one to be coveted by all who are interested in art."—Times.

"The best book yet written on Rossetti and the Pre-Raphaelites."—Daily News.

AMONG THE MOORS. Sketches of

Oriental Life. By G. MONTAUD. Author of 'In Egypt,' &c. Superbly Illustrated. Royal 8vo. cloth, 16s. LARGE-PAPER EDITION, strictly limited to 100 Copies, each numbered and signed by the Author, printed on Japanese Vellum, THREE GUINEAS each, net.

"What he saw in Morocco gave rich material in the way of incident and colouring both for pencil and pen."—Times. "A series of infinitely more vivid and brilliant pictures of Morocco than are to be found in sober and solid works on that dilapidated and crumbling bulwark of Islam."—Scotsman.

A TRUTHFUL WOMAN in

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA. By KATH SANBORN. Author of 'Adopting an Abandoned Farm.' Small crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. [Ready.]

THE MODERN REGIME. By H. A.

TAINE, D.C.L. Osen., Author of 'A History of English Literature,' 'Notes on England,' &c. Vol. II. just ready. Translated by JOHN DURAND. Demy 8vo. cloth, 16s.

PERSEPHONE, and other Poems.

By K. MCCOSH CLARK, Author of 'A Southern Cross Fairy Tale.' Dedicated by permission to H.M.H. the Duchess of York. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. [Next week.]

FRA PAOLO SARPI: the Greatest of the Venetians. By the Rev. ALEXANDER ROBERTSON, D.D., Author of 'Count Campeggio and Catholic Reform in Italy.' With Illustrations and Facsimile Letter. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

CARTIER to FRONTENAC: a Study of Geographical Discovery in the Interior of North America in its Historical Relations, 1534-1700. By JUSTIN WINSON. Illustrated with Maps, Plans, &c. 8vo. cloth, 12s.

"One of those painstaking books wherein nothing is advanced without what the French call preuves in support."—Daily News.

NEW NOVELS AND STORIES.

SARAH: a Survival. By SYDNEY CHRISTIAN, Author of 'Lydia.' 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, 12s.

THE STORY OF MY TWO WIVES.

By ONE OF THEIR HUSBANDS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

A BAIREUTH PILGRIMAGE. By

EDITH E. CUTHELL. 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, 12s. [Next week.]

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION IN ONE VOLUME.

THE EMIGRANT SHIP. By W. CLARK RUSSELL, Author of 'The Wreck of the Grosvenor,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

PREACHERS OF THE AGE SERIES. TWO NEW VOLUMES.

Uniform crown 8vo. vols., with Photogravure Portraits, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each.

By the Rev. E. J. GOUGH, M.A., of Dundee.—THE RELIGION OF THE SON OF MAN.

By the Rev. J. MORLAIS JONES, of Lewisham.—A CUP OF COLD WATER.

"Mr. Morlais Jones has the fervour of the best Welsh eloquence. His book is well worthy to take its place with the best of the list."—British Weekly.

London:

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

At all Libraries and Booksellers',

POLAR GLEAMS.

An Account of a Voyage in the Yacht "Blencathra" through the Kara Sea to the Yenesei River.

By HELEN PEEL.

With a Preface by the MARQUESS OF DUFFERIN and AVA;

And Contributions by Capt. JOSEPH WIGGINS and FREDERICK G. JACKSON.

With numerous Full-Page Illustrations.

Demy 8vo. cloth, 15s.

NEW STORY OF IRISH LIFE.

MISTHER O'RYAN.

AN INCIDENT IN THE HISTORY OF A NATION.

By EDWARD McNULTY.

Small 8vo. elegantly bound, 3s. 6d.

[Uniform with 'Stephen Remarz.']

Ready immediately at all Libraries and Booksellers',

THE BRITISH MISSION TO UGANDA IN 1893.

By the late Sir GERALD PORTAL, K.C.M.G.,
British Commissioner.

Edited by RENNELL RODD, C.M.G.

With an Introduction by Lord CROMER, G.C.M.G., and Forty Illustrations.

Demy 8vo. 21s.

NEW EDITION OF MR. MILNER'S IMPORTANT WORK.

ENGLAND IN EGYPT.

By ALFRED MILNER,

Formerly Under-Secretary for Finance in Egypt, now Chairman of the Board of Inland Revenue in London.

Fifth and Cheaper Edition, with a New Prefatory
Chapter on Egypt in 1894.

Large crown 8vo. with Map, cloth, 7s. 6d.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION nearly ready,

RIDING RECOLLECTIONS AND TURF STORIES.

By HENRY CUSTANCE.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

London:

EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street, W.C.,
Publisher to the India Office.

CLARENDON PRESS LIST.

Will be published on May 21, in 2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth, 32s.

An ESSAY CONCERNING HUMAN UNDERSTANDING. By JOHN LOCKE. Collated and Annotated, with Prolegomena, Biographical, Critical, and Historical, by A. CAMPBELL FRASER, Hon. D.O.L. LL.D.

Also, by the SAME AUTHOR.

BERKELEY.—The WORKS of GEORGE BERKELEY, D.D., formerly Bishop of Cloyne; including many of his Writings hitherto Unpublished. With Prefaces, Annotations, and an Account of his Life and Philosophy. 4 vols. 8vo. 2*l.* 18s.

The LIFE, LETTERS, &c., separately, 16s.

BERKELEY.—SELECTIONS. With Introduction and Notes. For the Use of Students in the Universities. Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo. 8s. 6*d.*

Will be published on May 22, crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. net.

STUDIES in FORESTRY; being a Short Course of Lectures on the Principles of Sylviculture delivered at the Botanic Gardens, Oxford, during the Hilary and Michaelmas Terms, 1893. By JOHN NISBET, D.Oec., of the Indian Forest Service.

Just published, crown 8vo. cloth, with numerous Illustrations, 10s. 6*d.* net.

ALTERNATING GENERATIONS. A Biological Study of Oak Galls and Gall Flies. By HERMAN ADLER, M.S., Schleswig. Translated and Edited by CHARLES R. STRATON, F.R.C.S. Edin., F.E.S.

Just published, Second Edition, demy 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6*d.*

ELEMENTS of PROJECTIVE GEOMETRY. By LUIGI CREMONA, LL.D. Edin., &c., Professor of Mathematics in the University of Rome. Translated by CHARLES LEUDESORF, M.A., Fellow of Pembroke College, Oxford.

Just published, Second Edition, Revised, crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6*d.*

An INTRODUCTION to the MATHEMATICAL THEORY of ELECTRICITY and MAGNETISM. By W. T. A. EMTAGE, M.A., Pembroke College, Professor of Physics, University College, Nottingham, late Examiner in the School of Natural Science, Oxford.

HISTORY of the NEW WORLD CALLED AMERICA. By E. J. PAYNE, M.A. Vol. I. 8vo. 18s. [Vol. II. in the press.

VOYAGES of the ELIZABETHAN SEAMEN to AMERICA. Edited by E. J. PAYNE, M.A. First Series. HAWKINS, FROBISHER, DRAKE. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 5s.

A HISTORY of FRANCE. With numerous Maps, Plans, and Tables. By G. W. KITCHIN, D.D. In 3 vols. crown 8vo. each 10s. 6*d.*

Vol. I., to 1453. Third Edition.

Vol. II., 1453-1621. Second Edition.

Vol. III., 1624-1793. Second Edition.

Published to-day, in 2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth, 36s.

EDMUND LUDLOW, The MEMOIRS of, Lieutenant-General of the Horse in the Army of the Commonwealth of England, 1625-1672. Edited, with Appendices of Letters and Illustrative Documents, by C. H. FIRTH, M.A.

* * Three Hundred Numbered Copies only are printed, on Large Paper.

Nearly ready, small 4to. gilt top, half-vellum, 21s. net.

LATIN PROSE VERSIONS.

A Collection of Translations into Latin by Thirty well-known Scholars, including the ARCHBISHOP of CANTERBURY.

Professor ROBINSON ELLIS.

Professor BUTCHER.

Professor GOODHART.

Professor MARGOLIOUTH.

Professor POSTGATE.

Dr. J. S. REID.

A. SIDGWICK, Esq.

Dr. SANDYS.

Dr. EVELYN ABBOTT.

Rev. Dr. WILLIAM HAIG BROWN.

Rev. Dr. W. W. MERRY.

Very Rev. E. C. WICKHAM.

Sir WILLIAM D. GEDDES, LL.D.

The late Professor J. CONINGTON.

The late Professor H. NETTLESHIP.

The late Professor T. S. EVANS.

&c. &c.

Edited by GEORGE G. RAMSAY, M.A. LL.D.

Just published, demy 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6*d.*

INFAMIA: its Place in Roman Public and Private Law. By A. H. J. GREENIDGE, M.A., Hertford College.

Just published, demy 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6*d.*

A TREATISE on the FOREIGN POWERS and JURISDICTION of the BRITISH CROWN. By WILLIAM EDWARD HALL, M.A., Barrister-at-Law.

This book raises several questions of importance with regard to protectorates, &c., which have not hitherto received sufficient attention, and is exceedingly important in connexion with the recent adjourned debate in the House of Commons with respect to Uganda.

Just published, demy 8vo. cloth, 14s.

The PRINCIPLES of MORALS. By THOMAS FOWLER, D.D., President of Corpus Christi College, and sometime Wykeham Professor of Logic in the University of Oxford; and JOHN MATTHIAS WILSON, B.D., late President of Corpus Christi College, and sometime Whyte's Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of Oxford.

The HISTORY of SICILY from the EARLIEST TIMES. By E. A. FREEMAN, D.C.L. Vols. I. and II. 8vo. 2*l.* 2s.

Vol. III. The Athenian and Carthaginian Invasions. 1*l.* 4s.

HISTORY of the NORMAN CONQUEST of ENGLAND: its Causes and Results. By the SAME AUTHOR. In 6 vols. 8vo. 5*l.* 9s. 6*d.*

The REIGN of WILLIAM RUFUS and the ACCESSION of HENRY the FIRST. By the SAME AUTHOR. 2 vols. 8vo. 1*l.* 16s.

A SHORT HISTORY of the NORMAN CONQUEST of ENGLAND. Third Edition. By the SAME AUTHOR. Extra fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6*d.*

FULL CLARENDON PRESS CATALOGUES WILL BE SENT POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

London: HENRY FROWDE, Clarendon Press Warehouse, Amen Corner, E.C.

PROFESSOR HENRY MORLEY'S WRITINGS.

MORLEY'S UNIVERSAL LIBRARY.

65 Volumes, in crown 8vo. cloth, cut or uncut edges, price 1s. 6d. each;

Parchment back, gilt top, uncut edges, price 2s. each.
MORLEY'S UNIVERSAL LIBRARY.

63 Books in 31 Volumes, price 2s. 6d. each.

Sets of 21 Volumes, cloth, gilt tops, price 3s. 12s. 6d.;
and in Oak Bookcases, price 4s. 10s.

MORLEY'S CARISBROOKE LIBRARY.

In 14 Volumes, formerly published at 2s. 6d. each, now being issued in cloth binding, price 2s. each.

1. THE TALE of a TUB, and other Works of JONATHAN SWIFT.
2. TALES of the SEVEN DEADLY SINS, being the Confessio Amantis, by JOHN GOWER.
3. DEFOE: his Earlier Life and Works.
4. EARLY PROSE ROMANCES.
5. MILTON'S PROSE WORKS.
6. PARODIES and BURLESQUES.
7. TASSO'S JERUSALEM DELIVERED.
8. STOW'S LONDON under ELIZABETH; being the Survey of London.
9. MASQUES and ENTERTAINMENTS, by BEN JONSON.
10. IRELAND under ELIZABETH and JAMES.
11. GULLIVER'S TRAVELS, and other Pieces, by JONATHAN SWIFT.
12. MEMOIRS of EDWARD GIBBON, Written by HIMSELF.
13. MACHIAVELLI'S HISTORY of FLORENCE.
14. CHARACTER WRITINGS of the SEVENTEENTH CENTURY.

MORLEY'S COMPANION POETS.

Printed with red lines, size 6 in. by 3½ in., cloth binding,
price 1s. each.

1. AYTOUN'S LAYS of the SCOTTISH CAVALIERS.
2. A BUNDLE of BALLADS.
3. GEORGE WITHER'S POEMS.
4. HAY'S PIKE COUNTY BALLADS.
Sir W. SCOTT'S BATTLE of WATERLOO.
5. SOUTHEY'S RODERICK.
6. DRYDEN'S FABLES: Tales in Verse
from Chaucer and Boccaccio.
7. PLAYFUL POEMS. Chaucer Modernized.
Burns, Hood, &c.
8. CRABBE'S TALES.
9. CAMPBELL'S PLEASURES of HOPE and GERTRUDE of WYOMING.

MORLEY'S BOOKS AND PAPERS, 1850-1866.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 4s. each.

1. EARLY PAPERS.
2. JOURNAL of a LONDON PLAYGOER.
3. MEMOIRS of BARTHOLOMEW FAIR.
4. FAIRY TALES. Fifth Edition. Illustrated by C. H. Bennett.

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, LIMITED,
London, Manchester, and New York.

FOR PUBLICATION by SUBSCRIPTION, The
DIES IRE and its TRANSLATION, with a Collection of above
20 Versions. Price 7s. 6d. - Subscribers' Names to the Author, Mr
C. F. WALKER, Longford, Co. Wick.

Now ready, No. 3, price 1s.
THE SCIENTIFIC ROLL. Climate Baric
(Condition: To be completed in 16 Nos. Conducted by ALEXANDER
RAMSAY. A few of Nos. 1 to 4 still in print, price 1s. each.
London: W. Mitchell, Leonard & Co., Printers and Publishers, 10 and 12, Riepland-road.

LE CORRESPONDANT.
Revue Périodique paraissant le 10 et le 25 de chaque mois.
10 MAI 1894.

1. Nos FAUSSES RÉPUBLIQUES. I. ...
2. VIREUX SOUVENIRS du PRINCE de JOINVILLE. Th. Fremont.
3. PALESTINE. A propos de son Troisième Centenaire. Michel Hébert.
4. Le MOUVEMENT RÉVOLUTIONNAIRE en ITALIE. II. Ch.
Joseph Grégoire.
5. TROP VENGES. I. Séverine C. de Daulny, 2^e Honneur.
6. DEUX FORTAINS de FEMME. Napoléon des Tulleries. L. de Lamoignon de Lamoignon.
7. L'INSTRUCTION NÉCESSAIRE. I. Desfontaines.
8. Une HÉROÏNE. Le Chevalier de Haussay. Cte G. de Castellan.
9. REVUE LITTÉRAIRE de l'ÉTRANGER. Allouagne.
10. REVUE des SCIENCES. Henri de Parville.
11. CHRONIQUE POLITIQUE. Louis Jourlet.

Prix de l'abonnement: Paris, Départements et Étranger, un an, 35 fr.; six mois, 18 fr. Les abonnements partent du 1^{er} de chaque mois. On s'abonne à Paris, aux Bureaux du Correspondant, rue de l'Abbaye, 14, dans tous les bureaux de poste et chez tous les libraires des Départements, ou en adressant directement un mandat-poste à M. Jules Gervais, gérant du Correspondant, 14, rue de l'Abbaye.
London: 10, King William-street, Strand, Charing Cross.

W. H. ALLEN & CO'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, One Shilling.

THIRTEENTH YEAR OF ISSUE, Revised and Enlarged.

LONDON IN 1894.

Illustrated by Twenty Bird's-Eye Views of the Principal Streets, also by a large General Map of London.

Originally Compiled by HERBERT FRY,
Editor of the 'Royal Guide to the London Charities.' 'Handbook to Normandy,' 'The Road to Paris,' &c.

TWELFTH YEAR, 1894. One Shilling. 300 Illustrations.

ACADEMY SKETCHES.

A Volume of Sketches of Paintings, Water Colours, &c., in the Royal Academy, the New Gallery, the Water-Colour Societies, and other Exhibitions.

EDITED by HENRY BLACKBURN.

2 vols. demy 8vo. 2s.

HISTORY of CABINETS. From the Union with Scotland to the Acquisition of Canada and Bengal. By W. M. TORRENS. (This day)

Just published, crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

LEADERS of MODERN INDUSTRY.

Biographical Sketches. By G. HARRIS SMITH, Author of 'Women of Great Britain.' &c.

"Reading this book would serve as a useful corrective to the impression of day who are inclined to underestimate the labours of those pioneers who in days gone by established England's commercial and manufacturing supremacy." - Daily Telegraph.

Crown 8vo. profusely illustrated, 7s. 6d.

The ART of ILLUSTRATION. A

Popular Treatise on Drawing for the Press. Description of Processes, &c. By HENRY BLACKBURN, Editor of 'Academy Notes,' &c. (Just ready)

London: W. H. ALLEN & Co., LIMITED,
13, Waterloo-place.

Ready next week, demy 8vo. 460 pp. cloth, price 7s. 6d.

HADDEN'S HANDBOOK:

TO THE

LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACT, 1894.

Being a Complete and Practical Guide to the above Act and its Incorporated Enactments,
